Court. Is there any body here knows it to be Mr. Holt's ſhed?—It was Mr. Holt's ſhed, he built it.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for fourteen years.

He was humbly recommended to mercy by the Jury and proſecutor, on account of his general good character, and being a very old man.

Court. What is his age?—Sixty-five, I lived twenty-ſeven years with her Royal Highneſs the Princeſs Dowager of Wales.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

478. PA-

478. PATRICK EAGAN otherwiſe M'GRATH was indicted for that he, well knowing that one Chriſtopher Dalton, deceaſed, had ſerved our Lord the King, on board the Naiad, and that certain wages and pay were due to him for ſuch ſervice, on the 2d of October laſt, did appear in his proper perſon, before the Worſhipful Andrew Coltee Ducarell, Doctor of Laws, then ſurrogate, &c. and did then and there produce and exhibit a certain paper, partly printed and partly written, with a certain mark thereto ſubſcribed, purporting to be the laſt will and teſtament of the ſaid Chriſtopher Dalton, bearing date the 5th of February 1784, and that he, on the ſame day, unlawfully, wilfully, knowingly, and feloniouſly, did take a falſe oath, to the purport and effect following, that is to ſay, that that paper contained the laſt will and teſtament of the ſaid Chriſtopher Dalton, and that he was the executor therein named, the ſaid Andrew Coltee Ducarell then having ſufficient power and authority to adminiſter ſuch oath, with intent to obtain probate of the ſaid will, in order to receive payment of the ſaid wages and pay, againſt the form of the ſtatute.

A ſecond count in like manner, only charging him, that he ſuppoſing ſuch wages and pay were due, &c.

(Mr. Fielding opened the indictment and Mr. Baldwin the caſe.)

GEORGE PLAYER ſworn.

Examined by Mr. Silveſter.

I am a clerk to the Navy Office, theſe are the Naiad's pay books.

Is there the name of Chriſtopher Dalton on thoſe books?—Yes, I find ſuch a name.

Were there any wages due to him at the time of his deceaſe?—Yes Sir, eight pounds ten ſhillings.

When does it appear by theſe books that he died?—The 26th of December 1783.

Have you ſuch a name as Patrick Eagan?—Yes, he was rated able part of the time, and foremaſt man all the time.

Was he on board at the time when this other man died?——He appears to have been on board from the 4th of March 1783, till the 2d of June 1784, when he was paid off.

Have you any ſuch name as William Barnaby, and John Stephens?——Here is no ſuch name as Barnaby, here is John Stevens.

Mr. Baldwin. Theſe are the witneſſes to the will.

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Council. Is that book kept in your department, in the Navy Office?—Yes.

SAMUEL HAWKINS ſworn.

I produce the original will, as tendered by the priſoner at the bar; I produce the act of Court, of Doctor Ducarell, as to the oath being taken.

Mr. Peatt. Who are you?——I am a clerk of the Prerogative Office, I only attend with that will from the office.

Mr. Peatt. I beg leave to ſubmit to your Lordſhip, that this will cannot properly be read here, it has not yet been proved.

Court. No, it has not.

JOSEPH SPECK ſworn.

I am in the office of Meſſ. French and Abbot, proctors.

Do you know the priſoner?—I do.

Do you remember the priſoner coming to the office of French and Abbot?——Yes, in the month of October laſt, I do not exactly know the day.

Did he produce that paper?—He did.

What was the purpoſe of his application?——In order to obtain the probate of the will.

Was that the will that he wanted to have the probate of?——It is.

What ſteps did you take to obtain it?——I immediately wrote the jurata upon it, I took him before Doctor Ducarell, where the uſual oath was adminiſtered, and he was ſworn as the ſole executor therein named.

Court. You was preſent when he was ſworn?——I was.

And

And heard the oath adminiſtered?——I did.

Did you put this indorſement on it?——Yes, the indorſement is, that he proved the will, by the name of Patrick M'Grath, that is the name mentioned in the will; the indorſement is Patrick M'Grath, before me Andrew Coltee Ducarell.

Did you make this indorſement by order of the priſoner?——I did, and that he died in December laſt.

When did he prove that?—The 2d of October, 1784.

What is the date of the will?—The 5th of February, 1784.

Mr. Peatt. You are ſure that is your hand writing?——Yes, I ſaw the oath adminiſtered.

Did you ever ſee the priſoner before?—Never but that time.

How long might he be with you?——A quarter of an hour in the whole I ſuppoſe.

Mr. Baldwin. What is the form of the oath?——The executor laying his hand on the Bible, ſwears that is the laſt will and teſtament of ſuch a one, and that he is the ſole executor therein named.

Court. Write me down the words of the oath, as the Doctor mentions it, I only want it for the Jury.

(The will read, ſigned Chriſtopher Dalton, his mark, dated the 5th of February 1784, appointing his beloved kinſman, Patrick M'Grath, ſole executor, in the preſence of William Barnaby and John Stephens.)

JOHN GILES ſworn.

Examined by Mr. Silveſter.

I am a Navy agent, I know the priſoner, I remember his applying to me ſome time laſt October, to receive the wages of Chriſtopher Dalton, deceaſed, late belonging to his Majeſty's ſhip the Naiade, accordingly I applied for the wages at the pay office in Broad-ſtreet, which I received, which I have ſince accounted to his order, not to himſelf; the probate was ſent to me from French and Abbot, of Doctors-Commons.

Did he afterwards come to you in conſequence of that probate?——This order I received from him, by which I received the money at the office.

The order read, ſigned Patrick M'Grath, directed to the Honourable the Treaſurer, or Paymaſter, of his Majeſty's Navy, dated the 3d of October, 1784.

"Mr. Treaſurer, pleaſe to pay to Mr. "Giles the wages due to Mr. Chriſtopher "Dalton, for which this ſhall be your au- "thority; Patrick M'Grath.

Mr. Giles. I ſaw the priſoner two or three times after that; after I had paid the money, I did not ſee the priſoner for two months after; about three months after I had received the money, I was informed by a Mr Lock, that he had been applied to by a woman to adminiſter to Chriſtopher Dalton, in conſequence of which he went to have the books ſearched at the Navy-office, and found the money had been paid to me; I carried the book to Mr. Lock, and upon looking at the will, we found it was dated two or three months after the man's death, that led us to ſuſpect it was a forgery; four or five days after, I heard that Mr. M'Grath was at Graveſend, and ſometime after M'Grath came in, ſays he Mr. Giles, I find you have got ſome more money, for I ſent to tell him I had, and I then told him that another perſon had been applying for the wages of Dalton, and that his (the priſoner's) claim was rather doubtfull and I did not think it was juſt; however, ſays I, if you will take a ſtep with me to Mr. Lock, a navy agent, to whom a perſon has been applying about it, we will ſettle it; he rather declined it, and ſaid, he would call tomorrow, I told him it would not detain us any time, he went out with me, and upon the Hill, he ſaid, he could not go any further, he was obliged to go down to the river ſide, or he ſhould loſe half a guinea, I told him I had ſome buſineſs that way; he ran into a public houſe and ſeemed in confuſion, he did not ſtay a minute, I enquired for a conſtable, and

I went

I went after him, and when I brought the conſtable up, off the priſoner ſet, I could not ſee him, and a perſon that ſaw him, ſaid, I believe the perſon that you want is gone under a gate-way; I ſays to him, why are you in ſuch confuſion, why do you not ſtop, I do not recollect what he ſaid, he was in ſuch confuſion; he went before me, and juſt at the bottom of the lane, there was a woman with a ſtall, and he turned in there to the gate, and there I loſt him; about two or three hours after that, he wrote me a few lines, making an apology for his going ſo quick, that he had ſome goods to take on board a ſhip, and he would call again in two or three days; he did not call again, I went to the Rotation-office, and gave information; I was relating the circumſtance to ſeveral of my acquaintance, and among the reſt was one Mr. Hunt, a publican, at Deptford, he ſaid, he knew the man, and I deſired he would charge a conſtable with him, and he was brought to London, and I ſaw him again in a public houſe in London; when I ſaw him, he ſaid, he wanted to ſpeak to me in private, but I would not; then he whiſpered me, and ſaid, he ſuppoſed if I was paid the money again, that I received for him, all would be quiet, and I would let him go, and he offered to give me his penſion ticket.

Mr. Peatt. Who wrote that order for the money at the Pay-office?—My clerk.

Who ſigned it?——The priſoner.

Was you preſent when he ſigned his name to it?—I do not recollect that I was.

Was the body of it wrote by your clerk in his preſence?——I do not think I was preſent.

What name did he give himſelf?——M'Grath, I never knew him by any other name.

JAMES MACKINTOSH ſworn.

Examined by Mr. Fielding.

I know the hand writing of the priſoner; (looks at the order) this is the hand writing of the priſoner, I ſaw him write it, I ſaw Mr. Giles's clerk write the order, and he deſired me to witneſs it; I ſaw the priſoner write Patrick M'Grath.

Court. He goes by the name of Patrick Eagan, in the navy-books?—Yes.

Lieutenant DESCHAMP ſworn.

I was on board the Naiad, I remember the priſoner by the name of Patrick Eagan.

Do you remember Dalton?——Perfectly well.

When did he die?——I do not recollect the time he died, it was in 1783.

Are you ſure of that?—I am ſure it was in the year 1783, it was at the Cape of Good Hope, at an iſland called Robin-iſland, we came home from Madraſs.

Had you any ſuch man as Barnaby on board?—I do not recollect we had.

When did you arrive in England?—We were paid off the 2d of June 1784, I do not recollect the day of the month we arrived.

Mr. Baldwin to Mr. Player. Did the priſoner at the bar receive his own wages?——Yes, in the name of Eagan.

Mr. Peatt to Deſchamps. You do not recollect Barnaby?——No.

When perſons die, or are transferred from one ſhip to another, their names are not returned to the Navy board, does it therefore appear in the books of the Navy office?—It appears in the ſhip's books, they are returned every ſix months.

Therefore the name of Barnaby might be in one ſet of books, and not in another.

Court. Is not it a book for the whole time?—Yes.

Mr. Peatt. Does it ſometimes happen, that a ſeaman's will is executed at one time and dated at another?—I never knew ſuch a thing.

But a will may be made out a week or two before it is dated?—I do not recollect any thing of the kind, but it cannot be dated after the man's death.

How does it appear when a man is dead upon the books?—Two D's and the time mentioned.

Is it never ſo returned when a perſon is alive?——Never to my knowledge.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

At the time I was in the American ſervice, I was taken by the General Mootray privateer, and brought to Charles Town, South Carolina; I was confined in a priſon and ironed, and ſooner than I would bear that, I entered into the American ſervice; I went out and took a prize, then I abſconded their ſervice, and went in the name which I uſed formerly to go by, of my couſin M'Grath; I reſided at New York till I came home to England, ſix or ſeven years, I was generally known by that name, therefore the deceaſed made his will to me in that name, I had not ſeen him till I came to London, at the beginning of the war; then we were in the Bedford, then in the Waſp ſloop, and when he was dying on board of ſhip, he deſired I would not let it be known I was any relation to him; the will was made at the Cape of Good Hope, I being on board of the ſhip at the ſame time, Lieutenant Deſchamp knows I never was on ſhore, on the iſland where the will was made; the neglect in the date in the will of the deceaſed, was by ſome perſon that was on ſhore, who miſtook the date, it was brought me on board by one Iſaacſon, who was my meſſmate; when the deceaſed went on ſhore, he ſhook hands with me as he went down the ſide of the ſhip, and ſaid, he would make his will in my favour, and ſaid, he was ſorry he had not made it before; the will was brought to me by one Glaſs Iſaacſon, whom Lieutenant Deſchamps knows; the cheſts were ſtove, and I had no cheſt to put the will in, I told Iſaacſon to put it in his cheſt, which he did, he kept it till we came to England; when I came to Deptford I was a little in liquor, I did not mind will or money, or any thing elſe, and he went to Oſſend or ſome where, and kept the will in his poſſeſſion, upon this, when he returned, he returned me the will, then I applied to Mr. Giles, to know whether he dealt in any ſuch affairs; he had the will in his poſſeſſion two or three months before he paid the money, one time he gave me five ſhillings, and half a crown another, till I gave this order to my landlady that I uſed to reſide with; ſome time after I came to Mr. Giles, I ſaid, Sir, is not the Superb's money payable now? no, ſays he, there is no account of the Admiral coming home; when he made me this reply I went, and came again in a ſhort time, and aſked him whether there was no money for me; he ſaid, I have ſome for you, and I want to ſpeak to you; I told him I was going out in a Weſt Indiaman, and had a boat loaded, and muſt go down; he went with me down towards Thames-ſtreet, and went to the door, and knocked at the door; I ſaid, I muſt go down, and would ſend up a note about any thing he had for me; I gave Giles a letter of attorney to receive this money, and to pay it to one Kernan.

ROBERT DAVIS ſworn.

Mr. Peatt. Did you at any time belong to the ſhip Inflexible?—Yes.

Was you at the Cape of Good Hope the ſame time that the Naiad was?—Yes.

The ſhip's company frequently mixed on ſhore?—Yes, at Penguin Iſland.

Did you at any time ſee any thing paſs reſpecting the priſoner on board his own ſhip?—Yes, our ſhip uſed to attend the ſick on ſhore, ſo I went on ſhore one day, and I ſaw one Chriſtopher Dalton pull a paper from under his head, and he ſaid to a man, one Glaſs Iſaacſon, give this to M'Grath, on board his own ſhip; and we went to the ſhore and carried Glaſs Iſaacſon in our boat, and put him on board the Naiad, and the priſoner came upon deck, and he aſked me down to dinner with him, and while we were at dinner this Dutchman came down and ſpoke to the priſoner, and told him he had a paper for him, and he deſired him to give it him, and I ſaw him give him a paper, and he told him that was the will of Mr. Dalton that was on ſhore, who ſent it to him.

Did you take that paper into your hand, or look at it at all?—No, I did not, it would be of no uſe, I cannot read; and the priſoner told his meſſmate to put it into his cheſt, it might be of ſervice to him another time.

There

There were on ſhore upon this iſland the crews of ſeveral ſhips?—Yes, there were ſeven or eight ſail.

Was it poſſible for a perſon from one ſhip to witneſs a will at another?——I think ſo.

Did they mix promiſcuouſly together?—Yes, the crews of ſeveral ſhips were together all day.

I ſuppoſe they drank together and eat together?—They did.

Did you within your own experience ever ſee a will witneſſed by two perſons, one belonging to one ſhip and another to another?—I do not know that I have.

Mr. Baldwin. Have you known the priſoner any time?—Yes, I knew him and Dalton both in New York.

What time was this?—It is five or ſix years ago now, as near as I can tell, it was in the ſummer time.

How long was it before Dalton died?—I believe it was four years before he died, that was when I firſt knew him.

When you went to the ſhip who did you aſk for?—I aſked for M'Grath, he anſwered me by that name.

Mr. Peatt. I underſtand him that he knew him four years before he died.

Mr. Baldwin. Where was this paper given to you?—At the Cape of Good Hope, between the 11th of December and the 8th of March.

What did you mean to tell me that it was ſummer time?—I thought you aſked me what time of year it was that I knew him.

I aſked you what time it was this tranſaction had paſſed that you have been relating?—It was between December and March.

How long was it before his death that that paper was ſent from him to the ſhip?—I cannot ſay, I do not know when he died, or whether he is dead yet or no.

Did he go by the name of M'Grath?—He anſwered me by that name.

Court. How came you to call him M'Grath?—I cannot tell whether he went by the name of M'Grath, but I knew him by that name that he went by in New York.

Mr. Peatt. He went by the name of M'Grath in New York conſtantly?—He did.

Mr. Peatt to Lieutenant Deſchamps. You remember the priſoner at the bar of courſe, Sir, on board this ſhip?—Perfectly well; he always behaved himſelf remarkably well, he was beloved by the ſhip's company, a man that was very attentive to his duty, and I had a high opinion of him, I would have truſted him with any thing.

THOMAS MORRIS ſworn.

I am a peruke-maker, I have known him nine months, I know nothing but that he always was a very good ſpirited man, and very honeſt.

THOMAS MACMAHON ſworn.

I am a hair-merchant, I have known him ſeven or eight months, he had a very good character indeed, very honeſt and very juſt, and liked by every body.

Dr. GRAHAM ſworn.

Was you on board the Naiade, at the time the priſoner was?—I was, he was very attentive as far as ever I knew.

Did he behave well in the ſtation of a ſeaman?—Very well.

Had he the reputation of honeſty?—I never heard any thing againſt his character.

Mr. Peatt. My Lord, I have omitted a material queſtion, which the witneſs Davis can perhaps anſwer; it is ſtated in my inſtructions, that the priſoner and the deceaſed were ſiſter's children. Do you know whether the priſoner was nearly related to the deceaſed?—I always heard ſo.

Was it underſtood ſo at New York?—It was.

Jury to Doctor Graham. What time did he come away from the Cape?——He died on Friday the 17th of December, 1783, on the ſame night he was landed from the ſhip.

Mr. Peatt. Was he landed in the morning or the evening?—He died a few hours after after he was landed; he was landed I think about four or five in the evening, and he died that night.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

479. THOMAS SAMBRIDGE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the firſt day of July, 1782, one gelding of a black colour, price 15l. the property of John Tie.

JOHN TIE ſworn.

I live in the pariſh of St. Mary-le-bon, near the end of Paddington-ſtreet, I deal in ſtarch and hair powder; I loſt my black gelding in the year 1782, the priſoner had it of me; I had a farm at Northaw, and he had a country houſe there; he came to me and ſaid, Mr. Tie, I ſhould be obliged to you to lend me your little horſe for my clerk to ride to town on, I will take care of it; accordingly I lent it him, and I never received the horſe from him ſince, I have ſeen the horſe ſince.

Court. When did you ſee him again? —I ſuppoſe I might ſee him two or three times in the courſe of a month; it certainly was within the week, for he frequently uſed to come to my houſe almoſt every day when he was in the country.

Did you aſk him for your horſe?—— I did, and he ſaid he had not done with him, he would ſend him home; I ſaid, very well, only take care of him; ſome time after that he abſconded from the place, and there was a ſettlement of ſome money between us, he owed me ſome.

What did he abſcond for? — I do not know, I ſuppoſe it was for debt; but juſt before he went away, I met a gentleman upon the horſe, a perſon I had not lent the horſe to by any means; I aſked him how he came by the horſe? his name is Edward Bates; I told him it was my horſe: he ſaid that Mr. Sambridge had given him the horſe; I ſaid, I thought it was very odd he ſhould give away my horſe, I thought he uſed me very ill; I called on Mr. Bates, he ſaid, he would ſatisfy me; I called, and there were two or three people that ſatisfied me the horſe was given to Mr. Bates; I ſaid, I will be obliged to you to keep this horſe a little longer, till I ſee and ſettle with Mr. Sambridge, for at that time he had a cognovit againſt me; therefore I begged Mr. Bates to keep the horſe a day or two; them Mr. Bates gave me the horſe again; he run away, I found the horſe ſhut up, and I never ſaw him till about three weeks ago, when I was at Mr. Brown's ſale, in Hockley in the Hole, and I heard a man was ſtopped about a watch; they ſaid it was a little man, an attorney, and his name was Sambridge; ſays I, then that is the man that ſtole my horſe.

Court. Did the Magiſtrate commit him? —No he did not indeed; he was then in cuſtody; I told the Magiſtrates, and they laid a detainer; I went to the Grand Jury, and told them the caſe, and one of the Magiſtrates drew up a bill, and I carried it in; and I told the Grand Jury, I hoped they would not do him any hurt; I only ſay this, I never ſold the horſe to any man whatever.

Court. He certainly ought to anſwer for the horſe, beyond all doubt.

Proſecutor. I have the horſe now, I never will part with it.

Court. Gentlemen of the Jury, if Mr. Tie had brought an action of trover againſt Mr. Sambridge, and this evidence had had been given, it would have been very good evidence for him to have recovered the horſe.

NOT GUILTY.

Priſoner. I had the horſe nine months cloſe to Mr. Tie's houſe.

Court. It would have been as honeſt of you to have returned it.

Priſoner. I lent the proſecutor twenty guineas, and had only one guinea, this poney and one cow for my twenty guineas, I can can have no intereſt now the Jury have acquitted me; I was detained in cuſtody merely through Mr. Tie.

Mr. Silveſter. I hope your Lordſhip will grant us a copy of the indictment.

Court. The proſecutor has miſtaken his road; but I do not think he has done it through any thing like oppreſſion.

Priſoner. My Lord, I can prove that, if it is neceſſary here.

Court. I ſhall not grant a copy of the indictment.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

480. WILLIAM ROBINSON was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Mary Richards, ſpinſter, on the King's highway, on the 22d of March laſt, and putting her in fear and danger of her life, and feloniouſly taking from her perſon and againſt her will, one cloth cloak, value 2s. the property of Elizabeth Webb.

The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of the priſoner.

MARY RICHARDS ſworn.

I live in James-court, Old-ſtreet; I am a ſervant, I was robbed on the 22d of laſt month, about eight at night, in Old-ſtreet; I had been towards the church, and was coming home from there, and as I was coming along, that there man ſtood and catched me in his arms, and took my cloak, and put it under his arm and ran away, and I run and cried ſtop thief.

Did he ſpeak to you?—No.

Had he any thing in his hand?—Nothing that I ſaw.

How old are you?—Turned of fifteen; I never ſaw him before to my knowledge; I was near the lamps, it was moon-light, he was taken directly, he ran down White-croſs ſtreet, and was taken in that ſtreet; I [illegible] the gentleman's name that [illegible] here; I was juſt out of [illegible] taken; the conſtable has my cloak; it was the cloak of Elizabeth Webb.

JOSEPH HAWES ſworn.

I am the officer that took charge of the man; the cloak was then delivered to me; I did not take him.

THOMAS HUDSON ſworn.

I heard the cry of ſtop thief, I was walking up White-croſs-ſtreet, I croſſed the way, and the priſoner jumped right againſt me; I immediately ſtopped him, and juſt before I laid hold of him, I ſaw him drop the cloak.

(The cloak depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I had been after a place, and coming down Old-ſtreet I paſſed this young woman, ſeveral people were coming, I heard the cry of ſtop thief, and was ſtopped by the butcher; another gentlemen came up to the young woman, and ſays, here is your cloak.

Court. What are you?—I am a gentleman's ſervant; I believe I have people to ſpeak for me, they have been here three days.

The priſoner called one witneſs who gave him a very good character.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing, but not of putting in fear.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

481. MARY PILE (the female highwayman) was indicted for that ſhe, about the hour of five in the night, on the 22d of January laſt, being in the dwelling-houſe of William Webb, 29s. 6d. in monies numbered, the monies of Abraham Abbott, in the ſaid dwelling-houſe, feloniouſly ously did steal, and being so as aforesaid in the dwelling-house, and having committed the said felony about the same hour, the said dwelling-house feloniously did break, to get out of the same.

ABRAHAM ABBOT sworn.

I lodge at the Plough, Mile-end.

Who keeps the Plough?——William Webb.

When did you lose your money?—The night of the 22d of January, a person slept with me, and in the morning when I arose, I missed my property out of the right-hand pocket of my breeches.

Who slept with you?—It relates upon the person now at the bar.

Who was it?—Mary Pile, so called; she was in bed before me, about an hour and half, or nearly two hours.

What did you lodge together?—Yes.

How long had you lodged together?——She only lodged with me that one night; in the course of the night she was up three times; first of all she pretended to be after the pot, and as such I handed it to her, she went to bed again, and in about two or three hours after she pretended to have drank rather too much; I used some vile words, I wanted to know the reason of being out of bed, as such the person got into bed again, I went to sleep; in the morning when I awoke, I found my door open, and my bed-fellow gone; I did not think I was robbed, for I always told Mrs. Webb, where I lodged, that if she was straitened for beds, she might put a decent person into my bed: I got up in the morning as usual, between eight and nine, I went to the pump, as I usually do, and washed myself, I put my hand into my pocket to shift my money as was usual, and it was gone; I went to look for my money, I came to Mrs. Webb, says I, pray what gentleman was that you put into my bed last night; she said he seemed to be a very good kind of a gentleman; still it passed on for half an hour or more; I took my pocket-book out of my pocket, and I had some papers of value to me and none to nobody else, but they were gone; I cannot say which way she went out of the house; but I am informed she got out and left the door open; I am sure I had the money when I went to bed.

Court. Does this woman that keeps your house put women into bed to you?—She did so; I told her she might put any gentleman that was decent.

This was not a gentleman, you know? That was not under my discretion, I did not know that.

How was she dressed?—Being in bed, I only passed by her, I took no notice at all of her clothes, I saw it was a person that seemed to be smartly dressed.

Was it the dress of a woman, or a man?——A man.

MARY HART sworn.

She came into our house about seven o'clock on Saturday night.

Who came?——The prisoner at the bar, in man's apparel, we thought it had been a young gentleman; she called for three pennyworth of rum and water, then she had a glass of shrub at the bar, and after that a pint of porter and some bread and cheese; mean time she asked me if she could sleep there; I said we had no bed; she said she came from Colchester; I told her we had only half a gentleman's bed; she said she should be glad if my mistress could let her sleep there, for she was going down into Kent; her father kept the Five Bells in Kent; so my mistress said she might sleep in this man's bed; she asked me which was the gentleman that was to sleep with her; I told her that gentleman that was walking to and fro, in the snuff-colour; she asked me his business; I said he belonged to the sea; she said was he a man of any property; I said I believed he was, he always behaved so; she said what time could I get up in the morning, I should like to start about four; I told her if she would lay till about six, I would call her: she got up as nigh as I can guess about five; I heard her go down, she went down stairs, and left the front door open, open, and let herſelf out; I immediately got up and went down ſtairs, and the door was open, and ſhe was gone.

JAMES GLENTON ſworn.

I apprehended the priſoner from the deſcription I had, I found the priſoner, ſhe had been to enquire for lodgings at two different places, I found her at the blind beggar, at Bethnal green turnpike, laſt Saturday night, between ten and eleven; I found this black handkerchief in her pocket and this key, I ſearched her otherwiſe, and ſhe had no money that I could find, but ſixpence and ſome half pence.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I know nothing about it, I never ſaw the man till they took me up to the houſe.

Court to Mary Hart. Are you quite ſure this is the perſon?——Yes, Sir, very ſure.

Court to Abbott. What do you ſay?——I am ſure of my loſs, but as to the perſon, ſhe was in bed in her ſhirt, I do not know her perſon.

Hart. I took particular notice.

Jury to Abbott. Had you any connection with her?——I maintained the idea of her, as I would of a man, and naturally as ſhe got cloſe to me, I kept hitching further from her.

Court to Priſoner. Have you any perſon to appear for you?—No, my Lord.

What account do you give of yourſelf?——I put the clothes on the Saturday that they took me up, I was a little in liquor.

Where do you come from?—I belong to a place called Howe, in Kent.

Court to Conſtable. What is your place?——The hamlet of Mile End, Old Town.

Court to Priſoner. How came you into that quarter where you was taken?——I was a little in liquor, and ſo I went to bed there, I have nobody to give any account here, I ſent for no friends.

Hart. The door I found open, I faſtened them myſelf, with two bolts and a ſpring lock, I went to bed about half after ten, or nigh eleven; there is nobody in the houſe but our own people, nobody got up that morning I am ſure of that; I am ſure ſhe was the firſt that went out that morning.

Jury. Did ſhe agree to lay till ſix?——She aſked me whether ſhe could get out at four, I ſaid, I would call her at ſix; ſhe aſked me to ſhew her my door, and I did; ſhe never knocked at my door.

Did ſhe pay for what ſhe had over-night?—Yes, ſhe paid ſixpence for her bed.

GUILTY.

Of ſtealing, but not of breaking and entering.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

482. JOSEPH STORER was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Thomas Wallis, about the hour of two in the night, on the 26th of February laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, four ſilver ſaucepans, value 12l. one ſilver diſh, value 6l. a ſilver quart mug, value 4l. a ſilver waiter, value 3l. two ſilver tumblers, value 4l. two ſauce-boats, value 4l. 10s. three ſalts, value 40s. four ſalt ladles, value 6s. one ſoup ſpoon, value 25s. one gravy ſpoon, value 15s. one table ſpoon, value 10s. one ſilver ſkewer, value 10s. and one ſilver marrow ſcoop, value 10s. the property of the ſaid Thomas Wallis.

THOMAS WALLIS ſworn.

I live in Monkwell-ſtreet, on the 27th of February, my houſe was broke open, the houſe was ſecured in every part of it, the evening of the 26th; I make a practice of examining it myſelf; I went to bed about eleven, I am always laſt up, we have a light to the ſtair-caſe, and I ſaw through that window the next morning, that ſomething was the matter; I then went into the kitchen, and my ſervant told me I had been robbed; in the kitchen we have a cloſet, which has a ſink and ciſtern in it, I perceived the lead light of that cloſet was taken out; I then went to the kitchen window and looked through it, and ſaw a ladder, like a lamp-lighters ladder, was left ſtanding on the duſt bin, which reached up to a window; the kitchen is up one pair of ſtairs, it was a lamp-lighter's ladder, it had not been there before; in looking further out of the kitchen window, I ſaw upon a little ledge, under the kitchen window, the iron bar laying which the light had been tied to; I then ſaw we had been robbed of a great quantity of plate, ſome of the plate ſtood upon a ſhelf in this cloſet, in the kitchen, it was kept for common uſe; and out of the dining room, a great many articles were loſt, and my ſervant told me there was a bit of candle and a glove left on the dreſſer in the kitchen; my maid gave me a glove, which, ſhe ſaid, was found in the kitchen the next morning after the robbery.

Court. Was any of your plate recovered?——None at all.

How did the ſuſpicion fall on the priſoner?——From the circumſtance of the robbery, it appeared that it muſt be done by ſome perſon well acquainted with the houſe; in the manner of getting into my next door neighbour's yard, as the readieſt acceſs to my yard; the priſoner was my apprentice, he ſerved ſeven years with me, he had been gone from me, and laſt ſummer I took him into my houſe to work for me, he left my ſervice about the 18th of December.

Court. State more particularly, but confining yourſelf to what you know of your own knowledge, what led you to ſuſpect the priſoner, and how the priſoner came to be taken up for the robbery?——I ſuſpected him for ſeveral reaſons, it appeared it muſt be done by ſomebody well acquainted with the houſe, for I had a very ſharp dog, and it muſt be ſomebody that knew the dog; upon that ſuſpicion I had him taken up.

Was he ſearched then?—Yes.

What was found upon him?——There was a right-hand glove found upon him in his pocket, which correſponded with the left hand glove that was found in my houſe; I ſaw the left hand glove in the kitchen, my maid ſervant gave it me.

When did ſhe give it you?——On Sunday.

Was any thing elſe found upon him that led to a ſuſpicion?—Nothing elſe.

What did he ſay for himſelf on his examination?—He denied all knowledge of the matter.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Counſel. How long after was he apprehended?—On the Tueſday fortnight following.

In the intermediate ſpace of time, had you cauſed any body elſe to be apprehended for this offence?—Not to my knowledge.

Do you know a man of the name of Dean?—Yes, he worked journeyman with me at the ſame time.

Was Dean never taken up?——Not to my knowledge, I never heard it, nor of his being examined.

Had you a journeyman of the name of Bird?—Yes, he is not with me now.

What is become of Bird?——I really do not know, he is out of employ; I diſcharged him about that time.

Did not you diſcharge him from ſome ſuſpicion of his being concerned in this buſineſs?—No.

Had he any hand in procuring the priſoner to be apprehended?—Oh yes! I told him, and another man, that if they would apprehend him, I would give them five guineas.

Was you preſent when the glove was found?—Yes, I was at the office when it was found.

The Remainder of this Trial in the next Part will be publiſhed in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 6th of APRIL 1785, and the following Days;
Being the FOURTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER IV. PART VI.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)
And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and
S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

MDCCLXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of Joſeph Storer.

I believe you cauſed his mother's lodgings to be ſearched, his own lodgings, and the lodgings of a perſon of the name of Davis?—We did not ſearch her lodgings, I wiſh we had; we were not five minutes in her houſe, I went there with one of the perſons from the Public-office.

Have the gloves which were produced at Bow-ſtreet, been inſpected by any glover?—I do not know that they have.

Then you do not know that any body ſkilled in that branch of buſineſs, has ſaid, that they are the ſame leather?——No, I do not.

JANE MERRITT ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. Wallis, when I firſt came down in the morning, I found the door open, and the property gone from the ſhelf over the ſink, where the light was taken down, I obſerved there was a ladder, placed on the duſt bin, which would reach that window; on the ſide board there was more plate, and there laid a glove on the ſhelf, over the ſink, where that property was taken from, and a few matches; I gave the glove to my maſter, in the courſe of an hour, or an hour and a half, that was the ſame glove that I found, I am ſure.

How long was it before that, that you ſaw the priſoner?—I cannot tell.

Proſecutor. That glove has been in my poſſeſſion ever ſince.

WILLIAM MILTON ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner taking obſervation of Mr. Wallis's houſe, I live at No. 9, in Monkwell-ſtreet, it was on Friday the 11th of March.

What did you ſee him do?——He put his head into the door, and went down to what they call Meeting-houſe-court, he came from Cripplegate way, and made a full ſtop at Mr. Wallis's; he looked into the paſſage, and went up Meeting-houſe-court; when he was up the court, he got up ſome ſteps, and pointed with his hand, over the back part of the veſtry part, and ſmiled to two men that were with him; then when they ſaw me, they all made believe to make water; in a quarter of an hour he was gone out of ſight, I went back immediately, I ſaw nobody come out, and on the Tueſday following he came in a hackney hackney coach to Mr. Wallis's door, and I went down, and ſaw that was the ſame perſon that I ſaw; I reckon it to be about five or ſix o'clock in the evening, he got out of the coach, and went into Mr. Wallis's houſe, he was then taken up.

Jury. Pray what time was it, that you ſaw him go up Meeting-houſe-court?——Between five and ſix.

JOHN LARKIN ſworn.

On the 15th of March laſt, I was ſent for by the proſecutor, to take charge of the priſoner, and I took him up to Bow-ſtreet, and I ſearched him before the Magiſtrate, and I found in his right hand pocket a leather glove, and a letter which I was ordered to deliver to the Court, there was a pair of gloves, and a ſingle glove, they have been in my poſſeſſion ever ſince.

(The glove handed to the Court and Jury.)

Court. Is this glove the ſame that the maid delivered to you?—Yes.

Priſoner. I leave it entirely to my council.

Court to Proſecutor. Did you communicate your ſuſpicions to Bird, amongſt other people?—Yes.

You offered a reward of money, if he appprehended the priſoner?—Yes.

Was it to be paid on producing the perſon of the priſoner?—I paid him the money immediately.

Had there been any diſagreement between Bird and the priſoner?——There might, for what I know.

Have you any reaſon to believe that there was, or that there was not?—I did not believe that there was.

Have you ever heard him ſpeak of the priſoner, in terms of diſlike or ſuſpicion, I do not aſk what he ſaid, but generally?—I do not recollect.

What ſort of a man is Bird, as to his general character?—I looked upon him to be an honeſt ſober man.

What did you part with him for?——I had no ſuſpicion of his diſhoneſty.

What family has he?—I believe he is a ſingle man.

The priſoner called three witneſſes who all gave him a very good character.

Court to Priſoner. Can you give me any account of this odd glove, that was found in your pocket?—I found that odd glove.

Court to Proſecutor. How could they get to the wall of your yard?——By croſſing one yard from the meeting houſe veſtry, which is pretty high, he could get upon the veſtry without a ladder.

Merritt. I was in the cloſet the night before, there was no glove there the night before, that I am ſure of.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

483. JAMES BOSTON (a black) was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of James Danvers, about the hour of eight in the night, on the 5th of March laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, thirty pounds weight of indigo, value 5l. his property.

(The witneſſes examined apart.)

JAMES DANVERS ſworn.

On Saturday the 5th of March, I went to the next houſe about ſix, all was ſafe then, then about a quarter before eight, I heard my own bell ring, and I ſaw the ſervant come into the houſe, I looked out at a neighbour's window, and preſently after I ſaw the priſoner in my parlour, he then made a motion to the maid; there was a candle in the room, I ſaw him then get out of my parlour window into my yard, my neighbour's window looks into my yard, and the parlour windows look into the yard, and not into the ſtreet; I ſaw the maid take away the candle; he then went into the yard, and wrenched the flap of a cellar window window open, in which was the indigo that he ſtole; he was in the cellar for near three quarters of an hour, I ſaw him come out of the cellar afterwards, with a bundle in his hand; he went out of the yard into the parlour again, and went out of the ſtreet door; I heard him put the flap down, he ſtepped in at the parlour window, he was taken that night with the property upon him, he was taken in the ſtreet, in St. Mary Axe, immediately after; he had thirty-ſix pounds weight of indigo, and a bag, and a handkerchief, and his apron, and one thing or another; there is a drawing iron, which I found, and I ſaw the mark of the drawing iron, it is like a hammer at the end.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. So you went out to give this poor black fellow, an opportunity of coming in?—Yes.

You underſtood he was coming to commit felony?—No Sir, I did not underſtand any ſuch thing.

For what purpoſe did you underſtand he was to come?—I underſtood he was to come to fetch a bundle.

Was not the bundle your property?——I could not tell, I was told by the maid ſervant, that it was a bundle, and it would not hurt me, nor any body about me.

Why did you watch him?——Becauſe I had loſt ſeveral things.

Was not the maid directed to let him in if he ſhould come?—She was.

In order that you might watch him, and that you might ſee him commit the felony, is that ſo Maſter Danvers, nay out with it man?—Yes, Sir, ſo it was.

So this poor black fellow was to take this bundle, and his maſter to look on for three quarters of an hour, is that what you mean to ſtate to the Jury?—It is.

Much to your honour Mr. Danvers! now, Mr. Danvers, how near is this window that you was looking out at?—As near as I am to Mr. Under-Sheriff.

Did you call out to the man that you ſaw endangering his life?—No.

Did not you call and deſire him to ſtop?—No.

Did not you tell him he would be hanged?—No.

You looked on, is not that you conſent?—Yes.

How long has this Jezebel of yours lived with you?——I ſuppoſe ſhe has lived with me ſix months.

The man has nothing to do in the houſe of a night?—No Sir, nothing at all.

If ſhe had not let him in he could not have come there?—No.

If ſhe had not taken the light out of the parlour, and left him to his free will, he could not have done it?—Certainly not.

And all that ſhe did by your direction, before you went out?—Yes.

And you went out to leave the coaſt clear?—I did.

We may aſk after this, whether we live in a Chriſtian land! what are you?——A warehouſe-keeper.

Has this cellar any communication with your dwelling houſe?—Yes.

How?—You cannot go into the warehouſe without you go into the dwelling houſe, unleſs it is in the day time; there is a gate in the day time.

When you are in the dwelling houſe can you get into the cellar without going out into the yard?——No.

Does anybody live in the cellar?—No.

Court. Then there is an end of the burglary.

Court. Is the cellar under the ſame roof as your houſe?—Upon my word I do not know.

Do you give that anſwer upon your oath?——It is, it is, I believe.

Do you venture to ſwear it is? Yes, I think it is.

Do you ſwear poſitively the cellar is under the ſame roof as the houſe?

Mr. Garrow. Now I intreat your lordſhip not to let him go out of court till I call witneſſes to contradict him.

Proſecutor. I do not know what you mean by the ſame roof.

Court. Why it is very intelligible; explain your difficulty why you do not underſtand what I mean, when every body elſe ſe underſtands?—I would not willingly my Lord, ſay any thing that is wrong.

Court. I cannot tell that, we ſhall judge of that?—There is a wall runs between part of the houſe.

I aſk you once more, is your cellar under the ſame roof as your houſe?——Upon my word I do not know whether it is or not rightly.

How long have you lived in the houſe?—Three years.

Let me inform you of this, that a witneſs may commit a perjury in ſwearing they do not know that which they do and muſt know, as well as in ſwearing they do know what they do not, and may be convicted of that?——I do not know what to anſwer.

Anſwer the truth, Sir?—I would wiſh to anſwer the truth.

And the ſooner you anſwer it the more it will be for your credit.

Mr. Garrow. Stand up Mr. Danvers, let us ſee you, I inſiſt upon it.

Court. I aſk you once more, whether this building in which your cellar is, is or is not under the ſame roof with your dwelling-houſe?—I believe it is not, I am not certain, becauſe I do not know; the roof of the warehouſes are higher than the roof of the houſe, they are not all one roof, the roof of one touches the wall of the yard.

How came you poſitively to ſwear it was under the ſame roof?——Becauſe I thought it was, before I recollected.

Mr. Garrow. He has ſaid he has lived there three years, has not he lived there twenty years?—I was there with my father many years, but I have had the warehouſe three years.

ANN STOCKWELL ſworn.

The firſt time the priſoner ſaid anything to me, he ſaid, Mrs. Stockwell, do you think fifteen or ſixteen ſhillings will hurt you; no, ſays I, not a guinea neither, but what do you mean; then ſays he, keep a ſtill tongue in your head, I will often put five or ſix ſhillings in your hand; he ſaid ſomething to that purpoſe, keep a ſtill tongue in your head, or be private; he ſaid no more to me till the 4th of March; then I went to the yard, on the 1ſt of March, and I told this converſation to my maſter; then the priſoner ſaid to me on the 4th of March, where is your maſter? I told him in the warehouſe; and he ſaid he had a parcel down there, that he wanted to take away, and could not get it away; he ſaid he would take it away in a minute; I deſired him not to take it away then, as I expected my maſter in; I ſaid, James do not take it away, he ſaid the people over the way could ſee him; the pot-boy came in, and ended all diſputes; but I ſhould have told you, he ſaid he would give me half a guinea, if I would let him in as the morrow night, the 5th of March; he was not a yearly ſervant; he ſaid, when all the family were gone to Bethnal-green, he would be ſure to come, about eight; on the 5th of March he came to light a candle, and he ſaid I will give you half a guinea, do you think they will be ſafe; moſt likely they will, ſays I, James; he put his hand into his pocket, and offered me the money, that was about the time the candles were lighted up, near to ſeven, he ſaid about eight they would be ſafe; I told my maſter this: he held up his finger, and ſaid, my dear, you do not deceive me, do you? I ſaid no, James; he ſaid, is he in the houſe? I ſaid no; ſays he, I am affraid of nothing but theſe windows, and I went and held up the candle, and my maſter, and other witneſſes ſaw him in the parlour; ſays he, go up ſtairs and ſtay till you hear the door bang, then come down and chain the door; he was in the yard near an hour, then he came up and called Nanny; I heard ſomething drop, I took a bit of indigo, I picked it up and gave it to him, and he dropped it again, and I took it up again? I told my maſter of this, and he gave me orders to let him in.

Did you or your maſter go down to the cellar to ſee what this bundle was?——I told my maſter, and he ſaid it was impoſſible to find it, there were ſo many things

Mr. Garrow. So you gave this poor fellow reason to believe that you had no objection to his taking anything belonging to your master?——No I did not, I told him the family would be all out.

Then when the poor fellow was just in and said now my dear, do not deceive me, you then coaxed him in?—No I did not.

But you told him no James, and that I should think from a pretty white woman would operate as coaxing, to a black man?—I should think not.

What was the prisoner to do?—Whatever he pleased.

What did you think he was to do;——I thought he came upon dishonest terms.

Then your master knew this?—He said it would not hurt my master, or anybody else.

Did you suppose it was something of the poor fellow's own, or something of his master's?——I did not know what it was, there is other peoples property in the warehouse.

Did you suppose it was something intrusted to your master's care?—I did.

So you represented to your master?——Yes.

And your master's directions were to let him in, and he would watch him?—Yes, I held the candle up that he might see him, I did not see what he did, I went up stairs as he bid me.

Is your master a single man?—No, Sir, he is father of many children.

Court. The yard lays between your master's house and the cellar?——The warehouse joins to the cellar, there is a wall that parts the dwelling house.

Is there any room from the dwelling house to the warehouse?——None that I know of, the way into it is another way.

JOHN CLARK sworn.

The Friday night that Mr. Danvers mentioned this circumstance to me, I watched in the street, I saw the prisoner go into Mr. Danvers's street door, and I saw him come out in about three quarters of an hour, I took him, he had a quantity of indigo, which was in this bag; I watched by Mr. Danvers's desire; the indigo was in his shirt, his breeches, and his coat pockets, and some in a handkerchief, it is the same indigo, I have had it in my possession ever since.

WILLIAM SARGESSON sworn.

Deposed to the same effect as the last witness.

(The indigo opened.)

Mr. Danvers, I cannot see it by this light, but I knew it before my Lord Mayor.

Are yours the only warehouses for indigo?—No Sir, but in that place there are no warehouses but what I have the key of.

ELIZABETH ANDREWS sworn.

I live in St. Mary-Axe, the next door but one, our windows look into the prosecutor's yard; on the 5th of March the prisoner came down the yard; he was so much loaded he was obliged to rest his bundle on the sill of the window.

Mr. Garrow. My Lord, I have a few observations to offer, by which I trust to convince your Lordship that there has been no felony committed by this prisoner; as to the burglary; your Lordship has delivered me from that, and the crime must be therefore that of larceny. The books lay down this principle, that it must be a fraudulent or felonious taking and carrying away by any person of the goods of another; when they say that there shall be a fraudulent or felonious taking, it is to be observed, that all felony includes a trespass: if the party be guilty of no trespass in taking the goods, he cannot be guilty of a felony in carrying them away: I take the liberty in order to apply the law to this case, shortly to state the law; this man does not against the will of the proprietor break into the premises, he does not commit any trespass whatever; but by the express direction and permission, and by the planning of the prosecutor, ſecutor, he has compleat dominion of the goods. I am diſpoſed in this part of the caſe, to admit, without riſk, that the Jury muſt find that he carried away the indigo; but, if I have laid down the principle of the law right, the felony cannot have been committed? has there been a treſpaſs? how has that treſpaſs been committed? this proſecutor planning in this manner with this woman, has acted a very ſtrange part, to ſay no more of it: they watch him, they do not appriſe him, they do not tell him he ſhall be hanged, but they ſuffer him to compleat the offence by carrying away the goods. There is a caſe, namely, that of Macdaniel and others, argued upon a ſpecial verdict by all the Judges, which is preciſely this caſe: that Salmon one of the parties to the confederacy, went out upon the Deptford road, and it was contrived by theſe parties that Salmon ſhould be robbed by one of the parties for the reward: Salmon was robbed by one of the parties, the queſtion was this, whether there could be a felony in taking from the perſon of Salmon his property, becauſe it was manifeſt that it could not be againſt the will of Salmon that it was taken away, becauſe he (though not as between him and the robber, but as between him and others) had previouſly agreed that he ſhould be robbed of his property: the Judges held, and they held wiſely, and they held ſoundly, that no felony could be committed againſt the property of a man in ſuch circumſtances, becauſe it is ridiculous to common ſenſe, to ſay that any thing is taken in violence: Now what in God's name, and the name of common ſenſe, doth this differ from Mr. Danvers's caſe? I may take Mrs. Stockwell into the confederacy; for what purpoſe was this? not for the purpoſe of the reward to be ſure, but for ſome other purpoſe, theſe two parties have planned, that in a particular way, and by a particular mode, this man ſhould be let into the poſſeſſion of the property of Mr. Danvers, and he carries away: Can you ſay that there was a felonious taking againſt the will of the proprietor, he not only aſſenting to it, but ordering the man to be let in? as to the priſoner Salmon, there was a queſtion there, whether he himſelf might not be guilty of the taking his own goods, and they were of opinion that that priſoner could not be guilty of that indictment, and on the other hand, if he did part with his money and goods in conſequence of that agreement, it cannot be ſaid that in legal conſtruction he was robbed at all, ſince it is of the eſſence of a robbery and larceny, that the goods ſhould be taken againſt the will of the owner: now my Lord, only permit me to conclude with ſaying, is your Lordſhip founded in this caſe to ſay, that the goods were taken againſt the will of the owner, Mr. Danvers?

Court to Ann Stockwell. The priſoner did not inform you what it was he was to take away?——No, he did not, he ſaid, it was ſomething that would not hurt my maſter or any body elſe, that he wanted to take it away, and he had had it along while.

You told your maſter exactly the converſation?—Yes.

How did he get into the cellar?——I do not know, there was a piece of the flap broke off.

Proſecutor. There was this drawing iron, the flap was faſtened by two bolts, I believe one of the men faſtened it when I ſtood by.

Did you direct it to be any way differently faſtened from what it was?—No, Sir, I did not know till then, that he could get in there, he put this iron in between the kirb and the flap, and ſo puſhed it into the cellar, it was laid on the floor.

When you heard that this man was to come for a bundle, why did not you look in the cellar to ſee if there was a bundle?——I did look in ſeveral of the warehouſes, but I ſaw no bundle, but the warehouſes are ſo large: I thought he might have ſecreted it in ſome hiding hole under the ſtairs, ſhe did not tell me where the bundle was, I did not know it was down in the cellar.

Court to Mr. Garrow. I have looked at the caſe you mentioned: I ſhall in this caſe leave leave it to the Jury, whether upon the evidence they are of opinion that this indigo was taken by the will of Mr. Danvers or not, directing them if they think it was by his will to acquit the priſoner: becauſe it does not appear that Mr. Danvers had any diſtinct knowledge, what ſort of fact was to be committed, but he waited to ſee the event what he ſhould take; therefore, I think it remains in that degree of uncertainty; I think it is fit it ſhould go to the Jury.

Mr. Garrow. My Lord, I am very willing the caſe ſhould be left to any Jury, I have a great number of witneſſes to this poor fellow's character.

JOHN WILTSHIRE ſworn.

I live at College-hill, I am a carpenter; the priſoner has lodged in my houſe three years and a quarter, he had a very great character as ever I heard, and he always behaved well in my apartment; I have entruſted him with the key of my houſe, he never kept bad hours.

The priſoner called ſix more witneſſes, all of whom gave him an exceeding good character for induſtry, civility, ſobriety, and honeſty, one of them had known him fifteen years.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

484. WILLIAM otherwiſe THOMAS ROBERTS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 4th day of April, one linen tea cloth, value 5s. the property of James Dawſon, Eſq;

The priſoner was ſeen taking the cloth.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

485. MARY LANGFORD was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 24th day of March laſt, two linen ſhirts, value 2s. one handkerchief, value 1s. and one man's linen jacket, value 2s. the property of Joſeph Maw.

The priſoner was taken coming out of the houſe with the things in her apron.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped and confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

486. JOHN MOONEY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 28th day of March laſt, thirty-two pounds weight of ſoap, value 12s. and one wooden tub, value 4d. the property of Francis Jones the elder.

GUILTY

Whipped, and confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

487. MARY SIMMS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 2d day of March, one pewter pint pot, value 8d. the property of Samuel Price.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped and confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

488. WILLIAM EDWARDS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 1ſt day on of March last, four quart pewter pots, value 5s. the property of Robert Towers.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the second London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

489. MARY M'DERMOT was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 8th day of March last, one pewter quart pot, value 1s. the property of Henry Wells.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped, and confined six months in the House of Correction.

Tried by the second London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

490. ROBERT MAXFIELD was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 15th day of March last, three pewter pint pots, value 3s. the property of George Smith.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the second London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

491. JOHN LESBY was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 17th day of March last, two pair of iron hooks, called can hooks, value 5s. and two pieces of hempen rope, value 1s. the property of James Pearce and others.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the second London Jury before Mr. Justice NARES.

---

492. GEORGE COUSINS was led to the bar, when the Clerk of the Arraigns read as follows:—Middlesex, to wit. Wednesday the 6th day of April, before the Right Honourable Richard Clark, Lord Mayor of the City of London, &c. &c. Richard Akerman, Gentleman, keeper of his Majesty's gaol of Newgate, brings into the Court here the body of George Cousins, and whereas the said George Cousins hath voluntarily confessed, he is the man known by the name of George, otherwise Teapot, who, by the suggestion of the Attorney General, on the 18th of January, in the 22d year of his present Majesty's reign, at the parish of Bingwood, was in due manner charged before Henry Compton, Esq. then one of the Justices, by the information of six credible persons on oath, that he and several other persons, being armed with offensive weapons, were assembled together at Burley, to rescue, and were aiding and assisting in rescuing, and taking away unaccustomed goods; that it was returned to Lord Sidney, who did, on the 14th of February following, lay the same before his Majesty in his Privy Council, and his Majesty did thereupon order inquire, and command you the said George Cousins, therein called a person known by the name of Teapot, to surrender yourself within forty days, whereupon the said Attorney General prays that the said Court here would proceed to award execution against him the said George Cousins, according to the directions of the said statute.

Court to Prisoner. Do you understand what was read to you, Cousins?

Prisoner. No, my Lord.

Court. I will tell you in a few words what it is, you are charged with being the person, against whom information was laid before Mr. Compton, a Justice of the peace, by six persons, by the name of George, otherwise Teapot, for being present, aiding, and assisting, in the rescue of unaccustomed goods, and that information was afterwards certified to the secretary of state, and was by him laid before his Majesty in Council, and thereupon an order of Council was made and duly publiſhed, and proclamation had, requiring you, by the name of George, otherwiſe Teapot, labourer, to ſurrender yourſelf within a certain time, in order that you might be tried for that offence, and you have not ſurrendered yourſelf accordingly, and that therefore you ſtand attainted of felony: therefore the queſtion is, whether you do or do not admit, that you are the perſon deſcribed in that information, and in that order of Council, and whether you do or do not controvert the truth, of there having been ſuch an information made, and that information having been certified, and ſuch an order of Council obtained againſt you, and whether you can ſhew that you have ſurrendered.

Priſoner. I am the perſon they take me to be, but I was not there, I have not ſurrendered.

Mr. Shelton. Do you deny the ſeveral facts ſtated in the ſuggeſtion?

Priſoner. Yes.

Mr. Silveſter. Take notice that you are to be tried next ſeſſion.

Court. That you may not be deceived, I think it right to apprize you, that when you come to be tried on this ſuggeſtion, the queſtion will not be whether you was there, but the only queſtion will be, whether you are the perſon known by the name of George, otherwiſe Teapot, labourer, and whether they did inform againſt you, and make ſuch order againſt you in the Privy Council; therefore you muſt not go away with a notion, that you are to be tried on this ſuggeſtion, or for having been there at the time, for that is not the queſtion.

The priſoner then withdrew.

---

493. WILLIAM HOLMES was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 7th day of April laſt, one quart pewter pot, value 2s. the property of Mary Bates.

And CORNELIUS BANFIELD was indicted for feloniouſly receiving the ſame, knowing it to have been ſtolen.

The priſoner Holmes came into the houſe, and went away ſoon after, and they miſſed their pot, he confeſſed taking the pot, but there was no evidence againſt Banfield for receiving.

WILLIAM HOLMES, GUILTY.

To be privately whipped.

CORNELIUS BANFIELD, NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

494. JAMES PENNELL was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Joſeph Fielder and Thomas Burton, between the hours of eight and nine in the night, on the firſt day of April laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, one piece of blue and white ſtriped ſilk ribbon, of the length of fourteen yards and an half, value 10s. 6d. the property of the ſaid Joſeph and Thomas.

JOSEPH FIELDER ſworn.

I live at Temple Bar, I am a haberdaſher, and partner with Thomas Burton; on the 1ſt of April, between eight and nine in the evening, I was alarmed by the ribbon being drawn through the hole made in the frame of the window, to faſten the ſhutter: there was room to put through an inſtrument, the ribbon was afterwards found on the priſoner, upon this roller, by one John Hobbs.

(The ribbon produced and depoſed to.)

JOHN HOBBS ſworn.

I was going up Fleet ſtreet, on the 1ſt of April, and I ſaw the priſoner doing ſomething at Mr. Fielder's window, and he had got part of the ribbon out of the window, wound round his hand, the other part was in the window; he directly ran off as hard as he could, and the reſt of it followed him through the window, I ſuppoſe as much much as five or ſix yards; I ſaid to him where are you going with the ribbon, ſays he, God bleſs me, maſter, a boy gave me the ribbon, you may have it, I do not want it; I took him back to the ſhop.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. Deſcribe how this hole was?——There is a hole in the frame of the window, through which a ſcrew goes every evening, and the ribbon was put againſt this hole, and there was ſome paper in every hole, to prevent any thing going through; the paper was puſhed out, and the ribbons drawn through the hole.

Is it your uſual practice to put paper to prevent any thing being drawn through?—Yes.

Do you happen to know if it was ſo filled that night, did you ſee it ſo filled?—I will not pretend to ſay for that night, but I in general put in the paper myſelf.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I picked up the ribbon.

Court. What are you?—I live at home with my father, I am nineteen.

What is he?—A broker.

The priſoner called ſix witneſſes who gave him a very good character.

Court to Jury. The breaking is not proved, as it is not proved that this hole was actually ſtopped at that time.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing, but not of the burglary.

He was recommended by the Jury, on account of his youth; and one of his witneſſes offering to take him home, and ſee him put into employ; he was ordered to be privately whipped and diſcharged.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

394. GEORGE MORLEY was indicted for eſcaping from the hulks on the 28th day of June 1783

WILLIAM GREGG ſworn.

I have known the priſoner four years, I knew him on board the Juſtitia, he eſcaped the firſt time; I knew him there the ſecond time, he eſcaped the ſecond time, the 28th of June 1783.

JOHN FLETCHER ſworn.

I took charge of the priſoner, I ſaw him in the counter.

Court. Is there any body that ſaw him at large?—None here.

Are you ſure that was the man that was delivered to you?—Yes.

(The record of his former conviction read and examined by the Court.)

Priſoner. I cannot diſown the charge of being guilty, the reaſon of my making my eſcape, was the ill treatment I received after my firſt eſcape.

Court. What ill uſuage did you receive?——I was run over acroſs my loins, I am lame, I was always ſtruck without a cauſe, when I tried to do the utmoſt of my endeavour, and I hope the merciful Jury will take it into conſideration, and ſend me to any other place: the allowance is but two pints of barley water, from three in the morning, till ſix in the afternoon, and there is half a brown loaf, and half an ox cheek for ſix hearty young men, and the ballaſt that I heaved up, weighs a ton weight, and is fit for a horſe to do, and I am entirely a cripple now, and an object; I have twenty people to prove that there are a pair of irons for me to wear, and nobody elſe, and the expreſſion came from Mr. Marſhall's maid, that I ſhould not live a month when I returned; if I had money I could ſend for the people.

Court. If you had any complaint to make for being ill treated, there is a regular courſe for you to take, it is no excuſe for eſcaping.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Juſtice. NARES.

496. JAMES CLARK otherwise HOSIER was indicted for feloniously ſtealing, on the 18th day of March, laſt, one ſilver watch, value 40s. one ſteel watch chain, value 5s. one ſeal, value 2s. one other ſeal, value 2s. the property of John Meredith.

JOHN MEREDITH ſworn.

On Tueſday the 8th of March, I loſt a ſilver watch; I was going from College-hill to the London tavern, where I live, between nine and ten going paſt the Manſion-houſe-gate I ſaw a number of people at the gate, I could not croſs for carriages; a chair was coming the oppoſite way, I let it come by me, and I perceived two men coming paſt the chair, I thought they were going on the ſame way that the chair was; and when they came oppoſite me they ſtopped, and ſtood both up before me; they ſtopped, and I endeavoured to go on; they went before me, and I could not paſs them; ſome ſtoppage enſued, and there was a pulling and jolting about, and in that time I found my watch jerking two or three times in my fob, and the inſtant I put my hand towards my fob, I ſeized the priſoner by the arm, and I ſaw my watch chain hanging from his hand.

Where was his hand?—His hand was very near to me, very near my fob, he had got my watch out; I immediately ſeized him by the collar, I gave the alarm of pick-pocket and thief; then the priſoner ſaid, he is going to rob me, he is going to rob me of ſomething of that ſort; and two or three people got between me and the priſoner, to wrench my hand away from his collar; I was ſtruck upon the face, and bit upon the left ſhoulder by ſomebody, I cannot ſay who; the mark was there for a fortnight afterwards; at that interval I loſt my hat, and likewiſe my pocket handkerchief; I ſecured the priſoner, I never looſed him till he was taken into cuſtody.

Jury. Did you ſee enough of the chain and ſeals to be ſure it was your watch?—I am ſure of it.

WILLIAM FORSYTH ſworn.

I was within nine or ten yards of the priſoner; I ſaw the proſecutor have hold of him, and I took him into the Manſion-houſe, before Mr. Muller the City Marſhal, who found a watch upon him, but not the proſecutor's, he was taken to the Compter.

WILLIAM GOFF ſworn.

I alſo helped to ſecure the priſoner.

Court to Forſyth. Had the watch that was found on him a chain to it?—I think it had a ribbon or ſtring, I cannot ſay which.

WILLIAM MILLER ſworn.

I had this watch delivered to me, it had a yellow ſtring, with two gold ſeals, one remarkable ſmall one, and a very beautiful curious ſeal.

(The watch produced.)

Priſoner. I was wounded in the action of Inigo Jones, here is a penſion ſigned by the Lord Mayor; I brought home above one hundred pounds, and went into partnerſhip with my ſiſter; I have been in town five years.

The priſoner called five witneſſes to his character, two of whom ſaid he lodged in Grub-ſtreet with his wife, and was in partnerſhip with his ſiſter at Chatham.

Mr. Miller. When I aſked him for an account of himſelf, he told me he was a journeyman to Mr. Wright, a butcher, in St. James's market, and had been ſo a long time.

Priſoner. I ſaid I ſerved my time there.

GUILTY.

Tranſported to Africa for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

497. THOMAS BROWN was indicted for feloniouſly returning from tranſportation, portation, and being at large on the 14th of March laſt, before the expiration of the term of ſeven years, without any lawful cauſe, againſt the ſtatute.

Mr. Garrow Counſel for the Proſecution opened the caſe.

Mr. Silveſter Counſel for the Priſoner objected to his being tried now, having been tried for the ſame offence at a late ſeſſion, and acquitted.

The Court obſerved that he muſt of courſe remain after acquittal under his original ſentence of tranſportation, which ought to have taken place.

The record of the priſoner's trial and conviction read by Thomas Shelton, Eſq; clerk of the arraigns, and examined by Mr. Silveſter.

THOMAS FLETCHER ſworn.

I am one of the headboroughs of St. Paul's, Shadwell; I apprehended the priſoner, he was tried in Court and acquitted, on promiſe of going abroad immediately.

Mr. Silveſter. You know the reward? —Yes.

JAMES IVES ſworn.

I know the priſoner, I did not poſitively know him before the 14th of March laſt, I then ſaw him at large in St. Saviour's pariſh.

MARMADUKE GUEST ſworn.

I am one of the officers, I never ſaw the priſoner before I found him at large in St. Saviour's pariſh.

JOHN OWEN ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. Akerman, I know the priſoner, I knew him in June, 1783, he was tried here for ſtealing a great coat, the property of one Sewell, and received ſentence of tranſportation.

Was he delivered to be tranſported, purſuant to his ſentence?—Yes.

What ſhip was he put on board of?—— I believe he was delivered on board the Swift, under Mr. Moore.

Are you ſure that was the man that was tried here?——Yes.

Mr. Silveſter. You are one of Mr. Akerman's ſervants, I take it?—Yes.

You have a great number of men there? ——Yes.

Is there any thing particular to make you remember this man more than anybody elſe?—No more than having him under my care.

What did that man tell you that fetched you in to-day?—He told me I was wanted; when I deliver anybody on board of ſhip, I always make a remark.

(Looks at a book.)

Do you know every man that has been in your cuſtody?——I know beſt part of them.

Did you go with all of them on board? ——I did.

How many were there?—Eighty ſeven.

Should you know every man of that eighty-ſeven?——I believe I have pretty well told the beſt part of them.

You remember this man being tried for this matter laſt December ſeſſions?—Yes.

And the Jury acquitted him?—Yes.

Court to Priſoner. Why are you found at large, after the warning you have had?— I applied to go to ſea immediately, I applied to one Mr. Blackerar, who was to get me a ſhip to go to ſea.

Mr. BLAKERAR ſworn.

The priſoner applied to me to get him a birth to go to the Eaſt-Indies; he applied to me through one Chambers that works for me; I have a great many acquaintance, particularly one Mr. Wright, and he would have got a birth, if the ſhip's huſband had not in a very unprecedented manner appointed another perſon as a butcher: Mr. Wright is not here now, he was here on Friday, and was obliged to go to Gravesend.

GUILTY, Death.

He was humbly recommended to mercy by the Jury.

Court. Add my recommendation to it.

Tried by the second London Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

498. JOHN HENRY PALMER and MARY JONES were indicted for that they, on the 1st day of July, in the 23d year of his present Majesty's reign, at the Inner Temple, in London, falsly and feloniously did make, forge, counterfeit, and cause and procure to be made, forged, and counterfeited, and willingly aid and assist in the false making, forging, and counterfeiting a certain deed, with the name Richard Bulkeley and Edward Jones thereto subscribed, purporting to be an indenture of apprenticeship from Edward Jones, aged fourteen years, son of Roderick Jones, clerk, deceased, dated 23d June, 1783, for the term of seven years, with intention to defraud James Cecil, Earl of Salisbury, Samuel Lord Bishop of Gloucester, Nathaniel Newnham, Esq; Alexander Hood, Esq; Richard Cust, Doctor in Divinity, ——— Dampier, Doctor in Divinity, then being the stewards of the feast of the sons of the clergy, against the statute.

A second Count, For uttering and publishing the same knowing it to be forged, with the like intention.

A third Count, For forging and counterfeiting the same deed with intention to defraud the said Nathaniel Newnham.

A fourth Count, For uttering the same with the like intention.

A fifth Count, For forging the same with intention to defraud the said Alexander Hood.

A sixth Count, For uttering the same with the like intention.

A seventh Count, For forging the same with intention to defraud John Bacon.

An eighth Count, For uttering the same with the like intention.

A ninth Count, For that they having in their custody the said deed, did falsely make, forge and counterfeit upon the back of the said deed, a certain receipt for money, with the name Richard Bulkeley thereto subscribed, purporting to be a receipt from the said Nathaniel Newnham, then secretary of the said stewards of the feast of the sons of the clergy, for the sum of twenty pounds, being the consideration money mentioned in the said deed, and witnessed by Thomas Lloyd and Samuel Morgan, with intention to defraud the said stewards.

A tenth Count, For uttering the same knowing it to be forged with the like intention.

An eleventh Count, For forging said receipt with intent to defraud Nathaniel Newnham.

A twelfth Count, For uttering the same with the like intention.

A thirteenth Count, For forging the said receipt with intent to defraud the said Alexander Hood.

A fourteenth Count, For uttering the same with the like intention.

A fifteenth Count, For forging the said receipt with intent to defraud the said John Bacon.

A sixteenth Count, For uttering the same with the like intention, against the statute.

(The case opened by Mr. Silvester.)

Mr. Knowles Counsel for the Prisoner Palmer.

Mr. Fielding Counsel for the Prisoner Jones.

WILLIAM SHRIGLEY sworn.

Mr. Silvester. What are you?—I am clerk of the first fruits office; this is an indenture of apprenticeship; it was presented at the office, either by Mrs. Jones, or Mr. Palmer; they came together sometime the last day of June, or the beginning of July, I cannot tell the time of the day.

Did

Did you ſee them?——Yes.

Did they apply to you?——Yes.

What was their buſineſs?—To preſent theſe indentures, I ſuppoſe.

Did they preſent theſe indentures?——They did, I know nothing further, this is at the back of the indenture as I received it, I do not know whether they received the money.

Do not you know who received it?——I do not.

Do not you know what was done in conſequence of that?—I do not know, I only know that they preſented it; after they are paid, Mr. Bacon takes them and gives a draft on his banker.

Do you know whether that was done in this caſe?—It certainly was done but I cannot ſay to whom.

Do they leave it without the money?—Sometimes they do, and ſometimes they do not.

Court. Did they come together always?—They generally did, they came two or three times, I cannot ſay the day they came.

Look at that draft, perhaps you can tell whether that draft was given, when that was brought?—No, I cannot, it is Mr. Bacon's hand writing.

Court. What was their buſineſs at the office?—Mrs. Jones came firſt alone with a petition, ſhe repreſented her caſe to Mr. Bacon in my hearing, to obtain one of the ſtewards ſignatures, for a certain ſum of money for an apprentice, Mr. Bacon immediately from the recommendation of Dr. Hand, whoſe ſignature is on the petition, recommended her to Admiral Hood; I believe he wrote a note to the Admiral, for the purpoſe of obtaining the petition.

Did ſhe repreſent that ſhe wanted it for a child of her own or any other child?—For a child of her own.

How ſoon afterwards did you ſee Palmer?—He did not come till after the petition was ſigned, I believe they came together, and got a blank indenture.

How long was it before they preſented the indenture in the ſtate it now is?——It was but a very little time, they have been together two or three times; I believe in conſequence of Mr. Bacon's recommendation, there was a petition ſigned by Admiral Hood, but I cannot ſpeak to his hand writing; the petition had the name of Admiral Hood to it.

What was Mr. Bacon at that time?—He was Sub-treaſurer to the Lord Mayor, Alderman Newnham, he is always ſecretary; theſe are the papers.

Mr. SHEPHERD ſworn.

Is this Admiral Hood's hand writing?—It is.

Mr. Silveſter. Put in the indenture.

Mr. Knowles. No, not the indenture, as this is laid in the indictment to be a forged indenture, I ſubmit to your Lordſhip, that they have no right to produce this indenture as evidence, till they have proved it to be a forged indenture.

Court. They have intitled themſelves to read it, as ſoon as they have proved that it was produced by the priſoners; as an act from the priſoners, it certainly is to be read in evidence againſt them, if it does not come out as one of the circumſtances of the charge, it will go for nothing.

(The indenture read and examined by the Court.)

(Dated 23d of June, 1783.)

"This indenture witneſſes, that Edward "Jones doth put himſelf apprentice to "Richard Bulkeley, of Pool, &c.

(The receipt read.)

Signed, Richard Bulkeley, witneſſed Thomas Lloyd, Samuel Morgan.

JOHN ALTON ſworn.

Who were the ſtewards for the year 1783?—The Earl of Saliſbury, the Biſhop of Glouceſter, the Lord Mayor, Admiral Hood, Dr. Cuſt, and Dr. Dampier.

THOMAS LLOYD ſworn.

I know the priſoner Palmer.

Look

Look at that deed?——This is my ſignature.

Did you ſee the name of Bulkeley to it?—No, I put my name to it as a witneſs.

Who ſigned it beſides yourſelf, here is the name of Samuel Morgan?—I happened to be at Mr. Palmer's, and he aſked me if I would put my name to this indenture.

When was that?—It might be about Auguſt was a twelvemonth, or September, 1783, I took no note of it.

Was it the day that that bore date, Sir, do you recollect was it the 23d of June?—I believe ſo, upon my word, it was not filled up in my preſence, it was brought to me ready filled up, I believe the name of Buckeley was ſubſcribed to it; I did not ſee him ſign it, but I know Mr. Buckeley very well, he was of Poole, and he was formerly of Montgomery.

Do you know how he ſpelt his name?—No, I never took notice.

Look at the back of that indenture?——This is my ſigning to the receipt, I know Mrs. Jones had a ſon of the name of Edward Jones, and knowing Mr. Buckeley I ſigned it, I thought it was a common indenture.

What was obtained by this?——I heard twenty pounds was obtained; I happened to be about a year and a half ago, at Mr. Palmer's, and Mrs. Jones was telling me that ſhe was then getting a ſum of money for a poor clergyman in Wales, in Montgomeryſhire; I aſked her who it was, I knew a Mr. Rowland ſome years ago, and I think that to be the name, he had three ſons, I ſaid, I think you are doing a very good thing.

Mr. Fielding. This is all leading to anther buſineſs.

Mr. Silveſter. What do you know of this ſum of money, which was to be received under this indenture which you witneſſed?—I know nothing at all about it.

What connection had that ſtory with this tranſaction?—None at all, only that I thought you aſked me about Mr. Rowland's money.

Then you do not know what became of that indenture after you had ſigned it?—No, not any thing at all about it.

Then you of your own knowledge do not know, whether any thing was received upon that indenture or not?——No, Sir, indeed.

Mr. Knowles. You are now talking of buſineſs that you ſuppoſe paſſed in 1783?—Yes.

You ſay you ſuppoſe you ſigned this indenture about Auguſt or September?——I ſuppoſe ſo.

The only reaſon you have to ſuppoſe that you ſigned this indenture or any indenture at this time, was that you ſee the date, now you have no other recollection of it?—No, only it muſt be at that time, I was at the houſe of the priſoner for two or three months.

Did not you know a Mr. Morgan at that time?—No, not by the name of Morgan.

Priſoner Palmer. What, not Mr. Morgan of Wales, a luſty man, recollect yourſelf?——O yes! there was a Mr. Morgan that uſed to come there.

Priſoner. Where did you witneſs that indenture?——In your office.

Are you ſure of that?——I think ſo.

Think ſo! but are you ſure of it?—Sure, no, I would not ſay, but to the beſt of my knowledge I witneſſed it there.

Court. What way of life have you been in?—I was a Captain in the Montgomery militia.

What was you bred to?—To the law.

Did you practiſe?——No, Sir, I only happened to be two or three years, I did not know enough of it.

No, I think not indeed, if you did not know that you was not to ſign your name to a deed you never ſaw executed.

RICHARD BUCKELEY ſworn.

Where do you live?——At at place called Welch Poole.

Did you live there in 1783?—Yes.

Is there any other perſon of your name there?——No, Sir, I believe not.

What

What are you?——I am in different branches of buſineſs woollen and linen drapery and hoſiery.

Is that your hand writing?—No.

Had you any apprentice of the name of Jones?—No.

Was there any perſon in the year 1783, of your name or like it in ſound, at Poole?—No, Sir.

(The petition read.)

Mr. Fielding. Poole I underſtand to be a pretty large place?——Moderate.

Do you find yourſelf prepared to ſay, that there is no perſon there of the name of Bulkeley beſides yourſelf?——There is not.

I take it for granted, that in Poole, as in other places, there are a great many travelling men, carrying on their buſineſs as you do, travelling in carts?——No, I think not.

You cannot ſay there was no ſuch man?——I do not ſay that ſuch a thing might not have happened.

All you can ſay is, that there is no perſon of the ſame name that you know off, keeping an open ſhop with the name written over the door?——Yes, there is no perſon of my name, but myſelf.

But whether there are perſons of your name that have come there occaſionally, you cannot ſay?—No.

How do you ſpell your name?—Buckley.

Mr. Knowles. If any perſon in the year 1783, had come to the town of Poole, and kept houſe there but for a week perhaps, with goods ſmuggled ſuppoſe, muſt you neceſſarily have known it?——No, Sir.

Have you made uſe of all poſſible endeavours to know whether there is or not?—I believe they have been made.

Have you ſearched the rates to learn whether any perſon of that name or of that occupation lived there near that time?——Yes, we have.

This being near Wales, are there not people frequently coming travelling through Wales?——Yes, from different parts of England there are.

The Rev. LEWIS ROWLAND ſworn.

I am a clergyman, reſident near Poole, within two miles and three quarters; I know of no mercer, or any perſon of the name of Buckley, I never head of any perſon of that name, reſiding at any time in Poole; I have looked at the poor rates, which are made out monthly.

Mr. Fielding. We muſt not hear of that.

Court. You live in the neighbourhood, and you have not heard of any other perſon of the name of Buckley but this gentleman?——No.

Do you know Mr. Buckley's hand writing?—No, I cannot ſay I do.

THOMAS MORRIS ſworn.

What office had you at Poole, in the year 1783?—I was overſeer of the poor.

Was there any perſon of the name of Buckley there, a mercer?——I know this gentleman, I know no other, he ſpells his name Buckley, I do not think that is his hand writing.

Have you ſeen him write?——I think I have.

Is it ſpelt like it?—No.

Is there any perſon of that name?—No, there is not, I brought the poor rate up with me, there is no ſuch a name in it, it is but a ſmall town.

BENJAMIN DAWSON ſworn.

How long have you known Palmer?—About eight months.

Have you often had an opportunity of ſeeing him write?—Yes.

Whoſe hand writing do you take that to be?——I ſhould ſuppoſe it to be Mr. Palmer's, the receipt particularly, I believe it is the whole of it.

Mr. Knowles. Mr. Dawſon, pray who are you?——I am clerk with Meſſrs. Summer and Campbell, of Dock-head, diſtillers.

How long have you lived with Mr. Palmer any where?—Never.

Have you been very intimate with him?—Not particularly intimate, I have aſſiſted him in his buſineſs, but if we may judge of one man's hand by another, I think it is, I believe it is.

Are you as certain of one part of that as the other?——I would not ſwear it is Mr. Palmer's hand writing, I believe it is.

(The order for the payment read, ſigned Alexander Hood.)

"I agree to allow twenty pounds for "the within mentioned purpoſes upon pro- "per indentures being filed up and exe- "cuted to the Treaſurer of the Sons of the "Clergy."

Priſoner Palmer. Did you ever ſee me write?——Yes.

And you are poſitive that is my hand?——I believe it is, I cannot point blank ſwear it is your hand; one morning we were together ſettling Mr. Campbell's accounts.

Priſoner. My Lord, I went there occaſionally in the counting-houſe, and he was behind the counter, he never ſaw me write, he has ſeen my writing in books.

Mr. Knowles to Shrigley. You have heard the names of thoſe gentlemen that are mentioned, as ſtewards of the feaſt of the Sons of the Clergy?—I have.

Is any part of this money, part of their own fortune?—No.

This money then I underſtand to be raiſed by voluntary contributions?—Yes.

Under what circumſtances are the officers authoriſed to diſtribute that money?—There is a ſecretary appointed, Mr. Bacon is the ſecretary, he divides the whole ſum equally among the ſtewards, each ſteward has his portion, and I believe it is well known they have a right to give to whom they pleaſe, I always underſtood that it is a ſufficient ſanction for the payment of the money.

You do not conceive that any of theſe gentlemen, who have a ſhare of the ſum collected, have a right to apply it to their own perſonal neceſſities or pleaſures?—No.

Mr. Knowles. My Lord, I conceive, admitting every fact on this caſe, that this amounts to no more than a fraud, and that it cannot reach that accumulation of guilt which we call forgery: to ſupport this objection, my reaſons are theſe: that the legiſlature has from time to time, found it neceſſary to guard the property of men from thoſe tricks they cannot very well in common prudence foreſee; but I believe from the language, that the legiſlature has ſhewn in the preamble to thoſe acts, which they have given us as the rules of our conduct, it will always be underſtood, that this fraud is to be committed on ſome perſon in his own perſonal individual property, and not to be extended to that fraud which ſhould induce him to part with the money of others; for which he was not in point of law to account: great is the difference to ſociety, whether a charity is barely miſapplied, or whether a perſon in poſſeſſion of an ample fortune is to be totally deprived of that in an inſtant, by the wicked artifices of any man whatever: the extreme caution that government has taken to prevent frauds of this kind, certainly ariſes from the great facility with which theſe things are done, and the very ample miſchief which they occaſion; but ſurely my Lord, the mere miſapplication of a charity is not that miſchief; the very firſt ſtatue of the 5th of Elizabeth, Chap. 14th which made the forging of a deed, upon ſecond conviction, a capital offence, in the preamble, ſays, "it is to the great injury, wrong, hurt, diſheriſon, and utter damage;" So that unleſs ſome ſtatute is produced to me, that makes the legiſlature alter its language, I have a right to ſay that theſe priſoners are not the guilty perſons, againſt whom the law meant to wreak its vengeance: another ſtatute was made, which is the 2d of George the Second, Chap 25. and there the preamble ſays, that "this evil ought to be checked by further puniſhment (namely, by making forgery capital in the firſt inſtance) becauſe it conveys ſuch infinite prejudice to trade and credit;" ſurely theſe are not words ſufficiently explicit in an act by which men are to ſquare their conduct; ſurely the legiſlature did did not mean to hold out death, as the penalty of getting by trick, that money which was intended to be given to more worthy objects.

Mr.

Mr. Fielding. The legiſlature has guarded the property of corporations.

Mr. Knowles. My Lord, I think upon theſe grounds, and the obſervation of my learned friend, that the legiſlature has guarded the property of corporations, that if they chuſe ſo to ſhelter themſelves againſt ſuch kind of frauds from all people, they may by applying to the legiſlature, receive that additional ſecurity, which if they are aggrieved, will make the puniſhment to be the lives of the offenders: but, certainly where theſe perſons are not anſwerable over to thoſe who have given them the money, as is the caſe here, no ruin, no prejudice can poſſibly accrue to them: for thoſe reaſons added to this, that it has been the intereſt of the wiſeſt of all conſtitutions, and ought to be the intereſt of every one, that thoſe acts of their's, which are to affect the lives and liberties of their ſubjects, ſhould be as plain as poſſible; therefore, ſurely, this will not be extended to thoſe who might have received further ſecurity, this will not be extended to thoſe who have neglected receiving that further ſecurity, and are not in their own perſons any ways damaged or prejudiced.

Court. The objection has been very ingeniouſly put, but I do not think it proper to give ſo much countenance to it, as to call on the other ſide to anſwer it. God forbid that funds for public charities ſhould not have the ſame ſecurity that every man's private purſe has; they are the abſolute owners of this money, it is their property, it is put into their hands upon a truſt, as between the ſubſcribers and them, and the ſubſcribers might call upon them if they were to ſink the money in their pockets, if it were poſſible they could act ſo mean a part; but, as againſt all the world except the ſubſcribers, it is unqueſtionably their money, and there is no difference between this caſe and the caſe of a corporation, but that where there is a corporation, the money then becomes the money of that corporation; where there is no corporation, it is the property of thoſe individuals, which, if it had been incorporated would have compoſed that corporation: the ſtatutes that have been quoted, recites the miſchiefs that have ariſen in ſome caſes to their diſheriſon, and that it has a tendency to prejudice trade and credit; but that was never meant to confine the operation of the offence to caſes where judgment of actual diſheriſon was the conſequence; or that it ſhould be abſolutely neceſſary, that it ſhould be a caſe where trade is affected, or where general credit is affected; enough to ſatisfy the preamble is the definition of forgery; that is the thing we are to go by; and that is the falſe making an inſtrument which purports upon the face of it to be good and valid, for the purpoſes for which it was created, with a deſign to defraud any perſon; for it is not poſſible in this caſe, but there was a deſign to defraud theſe truſtees, the individual truſtee, the ſub-treaſurer, who if he paid it, would be anſwerable; this ſignature of Alexander Hood, would be no ſanction to Mr. Bacon to pay this money on a falſe deed; I am clearly certain in point of law he would be anſwerable: this is therefore plainly a caſe, in which this forgery has been made to defraud every perſon that are parties in the tranſaction, and I conclude as I began, God forbid, that the immenſe funds that are raiſed in ſuch a country as this for public charities, ſhould not in the hands of thoſe that have the care of them, receive the ſame protection that the private purſe of every individual has!

Court to Palmer. Mr. Palmer, this is the time for you to make your defence, and I call upon you?——I beg leave to refer it to my ſiſter priſoner, to make her defence firſt.

Court. Well, I will indulge you in that: Mary Jones, what have you to ſay for yourſelf.

Priſoner Jones. My Lord, as a clergyman's widow in diſtreſs, I apprehended I had a right to apprentice out my child, which I did——

Mr. Fielding. As Council for Mrs. Jones, I object to her being called upon to make her defence firſt, before Mr. Palmer has made his defence.

PRI-

PRISONER PALMER's DEFENCE.

May it pleaſe your Lordſhip, and you, gentlemen of the Jury, the indenture in queſtion came to me ſigned with the name of Bulkeley; previous to that indenture being ſigned, I had ſeen the petition ſigned by very reſpectable characters, unqueſtionable characters; I could have no doubt that there was any thing amiſs in the indenture, nor is it yet proved I preſume, becauſe that there was a man of the name of Bulkeley I well knew; I knew a gentleman of that name that came frequently to viſit Mrs. Jones; I underſtood from him that he was to take her ſon apprentice; I remarked one day, that after the name Bulkeley was ſigned, that the indenture lacked the neceſſary appendages of witneſſes; accordingly Mr. Lloyd one of the ſubſcribing witneſſes who knew the ſignature (as he ſaid) being there, I did aſk him to ſign it; it is very uſual, I appeal to the Jury, for bills to come frequently from the country without neceſſary indorſements; any indifferent clerk or other perſon may put an indorſement on that bill, yet though it is an abſolute forgery, it is not with intent to defraud; and I did not think myſelf any ways culpable or criminal in aſking a perſon to ſign an indenture, who had acknowledged that he well knew the name of Buckley. As to having uttered the indenture, I deny that; I never did, and I am pretty poſitive that Mrs. Jones never did: I wiſh to aſk Mr. Shrigley, whether at the diſtance of two years back he can identify my perſon, or that of Mrs. Jones's; or what particularly ſtruck him that he ſhould recollect our perſons after two years.

Court to Shrigley. The priſoners deſire to know what reaſon you have to take notice of them?—There was a leading circumſtance that led me to it, and which in fact led me to a diſcovery of the forgery: upon a ſubſequent forgery in the name of Rowland, there was a great deal of ſtir, and in ſeeking about it we found that Mr. Palmer was a principal mediator, and I recollected him to be the ſame man that came on that buſineſs.

Priſoner Jones. You did not ſee me with Mr. Palmer?—No.

Court to Palmer. Do you withdraw yourſelf entirely from all concern with it; or was you yourſelf impoſed on?—I ſay, I was myſelf impoſed on; I will appeal to the gentlemen of the Jury, whether any of the gentlemen would not have done the ſame as I did: I did not utter that indenture.

Court. Can you ſhew by witneſſes in what manner, and by what way, that indenture was brought to you?—What I did was merely out of friendſhip and humanity to Mrs. Jones; at her deſire I did aſſiſt her in going to Mr. Bacon's office, Mr. Bacon did ſend it back to Mr. Hood; it was recommended by Dr. Hand, of Cripplegate, and ſigned by the two church-wardens: I do acknowledge that I did fill up the indenture; and likewiſe, that I ſaw it with the name of Bulkeley to it, at Vauxhall; that was where Mr. Lloyd witneſſed it.

Court. You bring yourſelf a good way into it by acknowledging ſo much; do you give the Jury any account of who that Bulkeley was?—I only knew Mr. Bulkeley as I did Mr. Lloyd, through Mrs. Jones.

Mr. Knowles. My Lord, Mr. Palmer kept an office of Univerſal intelligence, and in procuring of ſervants, which was within that line.

SARAH DUNELL ſworn.

I was a ſervant with Mr. Palmer in 1780, at No. 5, White's-row, Vauxhall; there was a gentleman that often came there, and Mr. Palmer and Mrs. Jones called him Mr. Buckley, he often came there with handkerchiefs and pieces of waiſtcoats: there was a boy that had red hair, and I often heard Mrs. Jones ſay, ſhe was going to bind him apprentice to this Mr. Buckley, that was her ſon. I did not know where this Mr. Buckley lived.

The Remainder of this Trial in the next Part, which will be publiſhed in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 6th of APRIL 1785, and the following Days;

Being the FOURTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER IV. PART VII.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE NINE-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of J. H. Palmer and M. Jones.

Do you remember any tranſactions between Mr. Buckley and any perſon at Mr. Palmer's houſe?—I know Mrs. Jones and Mr. Palmer were talking of putting their ſon apprentice, and I ſaw a young lad with red hair.

What buſineſs was Palmer?—He lived in Broad-ſtreet, and kept an office; he then lived there retired from buſineſs, for the benefit of his creditors.

What kind of office was this?—It was an office for all intelligence.

Mr. Knowles. I ſuppoſe there were a great many people always at this office?—A great many.

Court. Did you live with him at the office?—Yes, I did.

Mr. Silveſter. Where was this office?——In Broad-ſtreet he kept an office, and afterwards he went to live at White's-Row, Vauxhall.

—Of what did his family conſiſt?—Only Mrs. Jones, himſelf, and a ſervant.

Court. What did his family conſiſt of in town?—Only me and himſelf; I lived as his ſervant in Broad-ſtreet.

What was become of Mrs. Jones then?—I do not know.

How long had he lived in White's-row?—About five or ſix months.

He left the office for debt, and lived in White's-row about ſix months?—Yes.

Priſoner Palmer. Pleaſe to aſk her whether ſhe ſaw Mr. Buckley ſign the Indenture?——I remember him coming there many times, but I do not remember him ſigning any paper.

Court to Mary Jones. Now what have you to ſay for yourſelf?——I know no more but there was a man of the name of Buckley.

Court. But you know you have taken upon yourſelf to produce an indenture, by which your ſon was bound to a man of the name of Bulkley, living at Poole, in Montgomeryſhire?—He certainly was there at that time when he was bound.

Mr. Fielding. My Lord, I ſubmit on the part of Mrs. Jones, that no witneſs through this whole evidence affects her, as having any concern with this inſtrument.

Court. She uttered it, whether ſhe knew it is another thing.

Court to Mrs. Jones. I underſtand this application for the apprentice fee was for your own ſon; you ought to have known whether whether you had bound him apprentice to anybody, and whom?—I did not know he was obliged to reſide conſtantly in Poole.

Can you prove that the tranſaction was a real one, that there was a matter for your ſon, and that your ſon was really intended to be bound apprentice, and that this is not all a fiction?—The woman has proved that there was ſuch a man.

Court. Have you any witneſſes for her?—No, my Lord.

The Jury withdrew for a ſhort time, and returned with a verdict.

JOHN HENRY PALMER GUILTY of the whole indictment, Death.

MARY JONES GUILTY of uttering the indenture knowing it to be forged, Death.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

499. JOHN HUGHES was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting James Browning on the King's highway, on the 28th of February laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon, and againſt his will, one pound and an half of thread, value 19s. 6d. twelve pieces of Holland tape, value 6s. ſixty pieces of Dutch tape, value 2l. 19s. nine pieces of fine bobbin, value 2s. 3d. the property of Ambroſe Laufere.

JAMES BROWNING ſworn.

On the 28th of February, between ſeven and eight at night, I was going up Fleet-ſtreet, and this man followed me, I had a paper parcel, in which was thread, tape, and gloves, when I croſſed the way he croſſed after me, I had ſome ſuſpicion of him, and I croſſed again, and he attempted to follow me, then I croſſed again, and he ſtopped me, and aſked me which was the White Horſe; it was the priſoner that followed me from Fleet Market; then there was another with him, and they made believe as if they were drunk, they ſtopped my mouth for ten minutes together, that I could not cry out; it might not be ſo long as ten minutes, they held their hands over my mouth.

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Council. What is your name?——James Browning.

Some perſon overtook you in Fleet Market?——No, it was juſt by Fleet Market.

Did you ever ſee that perſon before?—No, I ſaw him ſtanding there I took no notice, I went on, he followed me.

Did he offer you any money for your bundle?——No.

Had not you a long converſation with him?——No.

Did he ever offer you any money?—No, no converſation of that ſort.

At Temple-bar you ſay you was ſtopped?—Sir, he met me by the paſtry-cook's at Temple-bar, it was between ſeven and eight, at the paſtry-cook's I viewed his face.

Are you ſhort-ſighted?—I can ſee very clear, Sir, thank God.

What converſation have you had with Sir Sampſon's men?——None.

Why did not you call out?——I did, as ſoon as I could; and the people went over, I did not call out at firſt, becauſe I could not, and after they left me, I could not catch them.

Were not their hands hollow over your mouth?——No, their hands were cloſe to my mouth: I am ſure it is the man, becauſe he ſtopp d me at the paſtry-cook's ſo long a time, I viewed him there.

Did the priſoner deſire the magiſtrate might have him examined in a different coat?——No, I did not hear him ſay ſuch a thing.

Was you aſked before the Magiſtrate what coat he had on?——No.

Did the priſoner deſire the Magiſtrate to aſk you that?——Yes, but I ſaid I would not ſwear to his clothes, only to his face; no money was offered or held out to me.

JOHN TATE ſworn.

I ſent a parcel by the lad of thread and tapes. This is a memorandum of the ſeveral things, I ſet them down laſt Saturday, I took this memorandum from the invoice, I am very ſure that all the things I put in there there were in that parcel, they are the things mentioned in the indictment; I sent him about seven, it was near nine when he came home, he brought a man with him, I do not know the man, but he seeing the boy in great confusion, came to tell that he was robbed; the boy was very much frightened for fear his master should be angry.

Had the boy ever lost any thing before?——No.

How came he to be so much frightened?——I should think it was natural, he said he was followed by a man from Fleet Market, and robbed under Temple-bar; the prisoner was taken up about five weeks after, at the White Horse alehouse, the things were never got again.

Mr. Peatt. How long have you known that boy?——Not quite three months.

Was it his custom to loiter on the way, when he was sent of an errand?——Not to my knowledge, I never went with him.

Would you trust him with a sum of money?——Yes.

JOHN ATKINS sworn.

I only know of the lad's coming to give information against the prisoner, it was on Monday morning, there were several people shewn him, and he did not know any of them, till last Sunday we apprehended this man, with two more, and this lad found him out.

What did you apprehend the prisoner for?——On suspicion of this robbery, from the description of the boy; there were two seals, a chain and key, without a watch, found upon the prisoner; and this stick, and other things and duplicates which were returned to him.

Mr. Peatt. Who was with you?——Shallard, King, and Carpmeal; Jealous was in the coach, we had it to the door, we came out and left Hughes behind.

Who did you bring out with you?——One Short a house-breaker, I did not immediately recollect Hughes, and I went and fetched the prisoner.

What is the reward in case this man is convicted?——You know the reward.

How much is the reward?——Forty pounds, you know.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I never saw the boy before I saw him at the office, I work hard for my living.

The prisoner called five witnesses who all gave him a very good character.

Jury to Prosecutor. How long has the boy lived in his place?——Four or five months, I have no doubt of the boy's honesty and care in my mind.

GUILTY, Death.

He was humbly recommended to mercy by the Prosecutor.

Tried by the first London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

500. UZIEL BARRAH was indicted for feloniously receiving on the 6th day of March last, one silver tankard, value 15l. one silver milk-pan, value 15s. one silver candlestick, value 40s. one silver pint mug, value 3l. four silver butter boats, value 8l. a silver caudle cup, value 30s. a pair of silver sugar-tongs, value 8s. ten silver tea-spoons, value 30s. a silver tea-strainer, value 3s. a silver desert spoon, value 8s. one silver castor, value 3s. the property of Robert Snow, of which William Harding has at this present session been convicted of feloniously and burglariously stealing; knowing the same to be stolen.

The Case was opened by Mr. Knowles.

The Record of the conviction of William Harding read and examined by Mr. Silvester, one of the Prisoner's Councel.

JACOB AARON sworn.

Do you know William Harding?—Yes.

You are the prisoner's servant?—Yes, I am.

When

When did you ſee Harding at your maſter's houſe?——On Sunday morning the 6th of March.

What time did he come?——About ſeven in the morning.

Was it that Harding who was at this bar a little while ago?——It was.

Who was with him?——Bill Steward.

Have you ſeen this man before at your houſe?——I have ſeen Bill Steward, but never before Bill Harding; Bill Harding and Bill Steward came together, and about ten minutes afterwards Bill Harding's wife came, what they call his wife; and I was called up ſtairs to my miſtreſs.

Was your maſter there?—No.

Mr. Silveſter. Do not tell us any thing that happened, except he was preſent?—Then I can ſay nothing at all.

Mr. Knowles. Had the woman any thing particular in her appearance at the time ſhe came?——Yes, like a bundle under her petticoats.

ABRAHAM NATHAN ſworn.

You was the priſoner's ſervant?—Yes.

Do you remember Bill Harding and Bill Steward being at the houſe at any time?——Yes, on Sunday morning the 6th of March, I went on an errand for my maſter, when I came back I was going up ſtairs to deliver my meſſage.

Mr. Silveſter. Was your maſter there when you came back?——No.

Mr. Silveſter. Then do not tell us what paſſed when your maſter was not there.

Mr. Knowles. Was your maſter at home when Harding and Steward came there?—My maſter came in while I was below.

Was Steward and Harding there then?—Yes, I went up ſtairs and Steward gave me half a crown.

Where was your maſter?——He was in the kitchen, fronting them, ſtanding by the fire.

Who was there beſides?——I ſaw nobody elſe there; in my maſter's preſence Steward gave me half a crown, and my maſter came down ſtairs, with a bag in his hand, and he ſpoke ſharp to me, and aſked me for a bit of ſtring, I had none at hand, and I gave him my garter.

Where was that bag put?——In a place in the parlour, which was called the plant.

In what place was this plant?——In the wainſcot.

Was it viſible to anybody as a cupboard, or was it a ſecret place?—A ſecret place.

How did the wainſcot open?——There was a little hole at the bottom of it, and one could put in a gimblet, or the point of a knife, and it lifted up, and drew out.

Was there any hinge to it?——No; I went up to the officers at Bow-ſtreet, and gave information.

Was you with the officers, when the houſe was ſearched?—No, Sir, I was not.

Court. Do you know what was in it?——I heard the rattling of the ſound of plate, I did not ſee it, becauſe it was ſhut too.

Did you know the bag when you ſaw it?——I cannot ſay I knew it, it was a ſmall ſized bag.

Did you ever know what was in it?——It was the ſame bag that was put in, I am ſure of that.

Mr. Silveſter. Why Nathan, you did not ſee the bag brought in?—Where.

Why do not you know where, into the Synagogue?——I ſaw my maſter put it in, I could not ſwear to the bag, I ſaw my maſter put a bag in, and I heard the plate rattle, I know it was the ſame bag.

You was examined I believe by a learned friend of mine, that is not here preſent, and you admitted you had perjured yourſelf, over and over again; did not you give a different account before Sir Sampſon?——No, Sir, I do not know I gave him a different account.

Did not you vary your account before Sir Sampſon?——No.

What did you ſwear before Sir Sampſon?——I ſaid then what I ſay now, no further than about what happened at Kingſton.

You lived with the priſoner?——I lived with Mr. Barrah three years and a half;

Steward was no friend of mine, he gave me half-a-crown for a preſent.

Where was your maſter gone when you came home?——I do not know, I was in about ten minutes or a quarter of an hour before he came in.

You ſaw nothing paſs between Harding and your maſter?——No, Sir, I never ſaw Harding before, nor I did not know him then.

MOSES MORANT ſworn.

You are the officer that called at Barrah's houſe?——Yes, Sir, it was on Sunday morning, a little before ten, on the 6th of March, I went there on the information of Abraham Nathan, he came up to Sir Sampſon's, and ſaid he believed there was a quantity of plate in Mr. Barrah's houſe, he ſaid it was in the wainſcot, and that I was very near the plant when I was there before, he did not ſay whether it was in a bag or not, and he deſcribed to me a little hole over the black part of the wainſcot, at the bottom he ſaid, if I found that little hole, that part of the wainſcot opened; I went, and Mr. Clark, and two or three more officers, to Mr. Barrah's, both Mr. Barrah and his wife were at home, we told them we came to ſearch the houſe on information, we were there before eleven the ſame morning; they both ſaid there was nothing in the houſe, and that Mr. Clark was very welcome to ſearch, he ſaid there were a few pounds of butter, and that was all they had; they deſired that Mr. Clark would ſearch the houſe, and he turned round to me, and ſaid no, that is the man that is to ſearch it, and Shallard went down into the parlour, and there was a place in the floor, I opened it, it turned up, and I put my arm in as far as I could reach, and Barrah himſelf went with me, and he ſaid here is nothing indeed, I have nothing in the houſe; we found nothing in that hole, I then began to look on the wainſcot, and it was very dark, and Shallard went to get a candle, and looked about, I then ſaw the hole in the middle of the wainſcot, under the cupboard, near the floor, under the ſkirting board; I then took my knife, and ſtuck the top of my knife into the hole, and it ſlid up, and lifted out at the bottom; I roſe up upon my feet, and I found this bag of plate, and thirty-ſix ſkins for buck ſkin breeches, and three bundles of linen, two tied in a handkerchief, and one in a table cloth, I aſked Barrah if he knew any thing of the things in that hole, and his anſwer was, cannot you let them alone; beſides theſe things there was a jack for breaking open doors, and ſome pick lock keys.

Mr. Knowles. Was that bag tied up with any thing?——It was tied up with a piece of black ribbon, which is here now; I ſaid to Barrah, who brought theſe things to your houſe? he told me he would tell me, if he could be admitted an evidence, I ſaid do you know who the thieves are? he ſaid he would tell, if he could be admitted an evidence, I told him to go to Mr. Clark; Shallard went and fetched Clark down ſtairs, and Clark ſays, what do you think of this Mr. Barrah, and he wanted to be admitted an evidence, and Clark ſaid he would have nothing to do with him.

Mr. Silveſter. That information you had from that little Jew boy?—Yes.

What had you ſaid to Barrah, when you came there?—I aſked him if he knew who the thieves were.

And it would be better for him?—No, I ſaid nothing that it would be better for him, I do not know that there was any private converſation between Clarke and him, Macmanus was with him, he is here.

——— SHALLARD ſworn.

On Sunday the 6th of March, I went to Barrah's houſe, and we ſearched the houſe, and found this plate concealed inſide the wainſcot, I was with him when he found the things; Barrah wanted to be an evidence.

What was the bag tied with?—A black ribbon.

Mr. Garrow one of Priſoner's Council. Would your Lordſhip aſk Nathan, whether he has not perjured himſelf.

Court. No.

Mr.

Mr. Garrow. May not I aſk him, whether he has confeſſed that he has perjured himſelf?

Court. No, you may prove it, but not aſk it of himſelf.

Court to Nathan. Do you know the black ribbon?—This bit of black ribbon, is like the bit, I took it for a garter.

JOHN WADDINGTON ſworn.

(Depoſed to the tankard.)

I know it by the ſize; I have lived with Mr. Snow eleven years, I have uſed it all that time, I know the candleſtick, and I have a deſert ſpoon, the fellow of this one that is here, all the plate is Mr. Snow's.

Mr. Garrow. You was here at the time that Harding was tried?——Yes.

Did you hear the Jew boy examined?—Yes, I heard ſomebody ſay ſomething about him.

Do you remember an enquiry of this ſort about him, whether he had confeſſed in the courſe of the preceding week, that he had perjured himſelf?—I remember ſome gentleman ſaying ſomething to him.

But you do not remember what it was?——I do not remember anything about it, I remember hearing you make a noiſe about the affair, my intention was to know the plate.

After you was examined, you remember the Jew boy was called and examined?—Yes.

Now you remember ſomebody made a noiſe at him, about being perjured?——I remember a noiſe, but I do not remember what about.

MARY ROBINSON ſworn.

I know that tea ſpoon by a cruſh, it is Mr. Snow's property, and this milk pan, and ladle I know, and this ſpoon, this muffineer, and this deſert ſpoon.

Mr. Garrow. You was in Court at the time the Jew boy was examined, on the former trial?—Yes.

Do you remember my queſtioning him, about what had paſſed at Kingſton?—No, I do not remember anything that paſſed at Kingſton.

Do you remember my queſtioning that boy, whether he had confeſſed any thing at Kingſton?——I remember he ſaid he was ſorry for what he had ſaid at Sir Sampſon's office, that is all I recollect about it.

Do you remember my aſking him in this way, are you the ſame Nathan that I croſs examined at Kingſton?—Yes.

You do not know whether he ſaid it was falſe or not?—No, I do not.

Court. Mr Barrah, if you wiſh to ſtate anything, you muſt do it yourſelf.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

My Lord, and Gentlemen of the Jury, I was not in the houſe, and I knew nothing of this tranſaction, I have witneſſes to the proof of it, I was in the ſtreet when theſe gentlemen came, if I had known any thing of this tranſaction, I had time to have gone about my buſineſs, I have witneſſes to prove I was not in the houſe, and knew nothing of the matter.

Court to Morant. What time did the information come to the office?——Between nine and ten, I went in about a quarter of an hour after, the priſoner lives near three miles, he lives in Dukes-ſtreet, Dukes-Place, one man was left below with the priſoner.

Court to Nathan. What time did you ſet out from Mr. Barrah's, to go to the office?——About eight or a little after, I ſaid I was gone to the ſtable to the horſe, I go there every morning, and noon, and afternoon, if I cleaned the horſe in the morning, I uſed to ſtay an hour, or an hour and a half, or two hours.

Mr. Silveſter. Do you know a man of the name of Fernandy?—Yes.

Had you any converſation with him?—He offered me twenty pounds, and Mr. Barrah offered me ten guineas to contradict it.

Did you offer to go out of the way for fifty pounds?—No, Sir, I did not.

ELI-

ELIZABETH BAYLEY ſworn.

I was at Mr. Barrah's houſe on Sunday morning the 6th of March, when ſome things were found, Mr. Barrah was not at home, he came in about half an hour after the young men were gone, I am ſure he was not at home when the young men were in the houſe; I was ſervant to Mr. Barrah at the time.

Mr. Knowles. What time did theſe young men come in?—Between ſeven and eight.

Do you know what they left there?—— I believe it might be ſome plate.

Do not you know it was?——I was not in the houſe, I was in the room before they went up ſtairs, and I went up ſtairs with them, I am ſure my maſter was not at home, he could not come up ſtairs without I ſaw him, nobody can go up ſtairs without going by the kitchen, they were all in the two pair of ſtairs, in the front room the bed chamber; I remember Aaron being there, all theſe were in the kitchen afterwards; I have lived with Mr. Barrah about a twelvemonth, I had no application to come here, Mr. Barrah did not apply to me, but I thought it my duty to come.

Did not you communicate to your miſtreſs, that you knew this when you heard your maſter was in trouble?——Certainly Sir, I ſaid, I would prove as far as I knew.

Court. Do you know Bill Harding and Bill Steward?——I believe I ſhould know their names, I have heard that one of theſe has been been tried ſince, I was not here then, they might ſtay three quarters of an hour, my miſtreſs carried it down, it was in a bag, my miſtreſs tied up that bag, my miſtreſs would tie it up with a bit of black ribbon.

Where did you find that bit of black ribbon?—I got it off my leg, it was a garter of my own; I did not ſee Nathan there then, he was in the houſe that morning, but not while the young men were there. ſh would not leave the things out.

Where do you think ſhe went?—I cannot tell whether the things were there afterwards, my maſter knew nothing of it.

ABRAHAM FERNANDEZ ſworn.

I knew Nathan, one day coming with Mr. Mendez Dacoſta, in Devonſhire-ſquare, I ſaw this young lad in the place, called Woolpack-alley, I knew him before, he told me, ſays he, Sir, I ſhall be able to come to your ſchool to your tuition in a few weeks, I ſhall come conſtant; he ſaid, it was in his power to do his maſter good or bad, at the Old Bailey, he ſaid, his maſter was out and came in again when the goods were found; h e ſaid, it was concerning ſome plate; he told me to intercede with his miſtreſs, if ſhe could but let him have a trifle, I believe about twenty pounds, or elſe he ſaid, he ſhould ſwear poſitively to his maſter buying ſome plate; I never was at this place before now.

What are you?—I belong to the Hebrew College; this boy was learning to write.

MARY COLE ſworn.

I live in Gravel-lane, Houndſditch, I do not know any thing about the plate, any further than three or four days after the boy did what he did to his maſter, I was going through Whitechapel, there I ſaw Mr. Nathans, I had a little talk with him, he ſtopped me and aſked me how I did, I aſked him how he could have the face to aſk any body how they did, after he had done ſuch an imprudent thing; the man had before told me, that this maſter was not in the houſe; and he ſaid, he was ſorry for what he had done, but he ſaid he could avoid ſwearing to it at the Old Bailey, and if his miſtreſs would give him a ſum of money he would go out of the way, and not appear againſt his maſter at the Seſſions.

She did not ſend him any money in conſequence?—No, he ſaid, his maſter was not in the houſe at the time the man brought the plate there, he ſaid, his miſtreſs brought the bag upon the ſtairs and gave it to him, and he put it into a hole.

I ſuppoſe you do not know what a plant is?—No, I have not ſeen the boy ſince.

Court. Then the boy told you how this happened?—Yes, he told me his miſtreſs brought brought the bag on the ſtairs, and gave it to him, and he put it in the hole.

Who did you firſt tell this converſation to?—To Mrs. Barrah, I went and told her.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for fourteen years to Africa.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

501. RICHARD TRUMAN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 1ſt day of April laſt, twelve pounds weight of moiſt ſugar, the property of Thomas Hibberd, Edward Fewer, and George Hibberd.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped and confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

502. SAMUEL BLACKMORE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 28th day of March laſt, one ſilver milk ewer, value 10s. the property of John Corkhill.

JOHN CORKHILL ſworn.

I live in Hanover-court, Grub-ſtreet; on Monday the 28th of March, I loſt a ſilver ewer: I did not miſs it that night, I ſaw it afterwards at Mr. Clegg's, a pawnbroker, on Wedneſday; my name was on it, I. C. C. I have had it ſeven years, I can ſwear to it.

CATHERINE CORKHILL ſworn.

I am wife of the laſt witneſs, I ſaw my ewer on Eaſter Monday, about ſix o'clock, I put it in a corner cup-board, where I always put it, which was unlocked and had a button on it, and about nine on Tueſday morning, I miſſed it; I found it at Mr. Clegg's on the 29th; nobody was in my place the evening I loſt it, beſides the priſoner and another young man, he had lodged with me a fortnight before, he came that night about eight o'clock, and ſaid, he had been making holiday, he ſat down by the fire, I went up ſtairs, and when I came down he was gone out; the other young man was there before he came, and after he went away.

The pawnbroker's ſervant produced the milk ewer which he received in pledge that evening from the priſoner (depoſed to) the pawnbroker's man knew the priſoner before.

Priſoner. I know nothing of it.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

503. RICHARD MULLINEAUX and WILLIAM RICHARDS were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 24th day of March laſt, ſixty-eight pounds weight of raiſins, value 40s. and threeruſh baſkets, value 3d. being on a certain wharf, near the navigable river of Thames.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

504. JAMES ROBERTS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 2d day of April, one linen handkerchief, value 1s. the property of George Gordon.

The priſoner was a little boy, and was ſeen picking the proſecutor's pocket by Samuel Green, the priſoner was ſoon after joined by a man, who eſcaped.

Court to Priſoner. Who was this man? —I had no man with me.

GUILTY.

Sentence reſpited.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

505. WILLIAM DENMAN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 5th day of March laſt, one laced hammer cloth, value 5l. the property of Jeremiah Crutchley, Eſq; privily in his ſtable.

GILES HATT ſworn.

I am coachman to the proſecutor; on the 4th day of March, I was waiting to put to, and I left the door of my coach-houſe unlocked, the next morning I miſſed my hammer cloth, which was in the coach-houſe; I never ſaw the priſoner till he was at the office.

JOHN SAYER ſworn.

On the 5th of March, I took the priſoner in St. Paul's Church-yard, between twelve and one, I took him to a public houſe, he went willingly, and he flung down the hammer cloth and ran away, I purſued him and took him: there was another man with him, and he ſaid before the Juſtice, he had it from him.

(The hammer cloth depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

On Saturday the 5th of March, in the forenoon, a man came up to my lodgings, and enquired for a porter, he had a bag in his hand, which was open at one end; he ſaid, he wanted a porter to carry it to the Swan with Two Necks, in Lad-lane: I went with him and was ſtopped; I looked round for the man and he was gone, I thought it was a ſnare laid for me: I met the man afterwards, and I had not power to ſpeak to him.

MARGARET COOPER ſworn.

On Saturday morning the 5th of March, between ten and eleven a man came to the priſoner with a black coat and round hat, and a bundle under his arm: I am a mantua-maker, I was at work, the priſoner lodges with me; the man aſked for a porter, I called William, and the priſoner went to the door: the priſoner uſed to carry home my huſband's work: my huſband is a ſhoemaker, I did live in Ryde's-court: I live at the top of Hedge-lane now, the priſoner has lodged with me two years.

ELIZABETH HEATH ſworn.

I live in New-ſtreet, Fetter-lane, I have known the priſoner between ſix and ſeven years, I work at my needle; I was at Mrs. Cooper's houſe at the time he was called down, I went there with ſome needle work, and I ſaw the man ſtand at the door, he came and aſked if there was a porter lodged there, and ſhe ſaid, yes, and ſhe called him down, and he went to the man: the man had a bundle under his arm.

NICHOLAS THOMPSON ſworn.

I am a ſworn appraiſer, houſe-broker, and undertaker, I have known the priſoner between two and three years, and employed him as a porter; he behaved honeſt.

Hatt. My Lord, this Mrs. Heath is the priſoner's ſiſter, ſhe came to my maſter's the next morning to beg favour.

Court to Heath. Is the priſoner your brother?—Brother in law.

Did you go to the proſecutor's?—No.

Are you ſure of that?—Yes; I met the coachman on the road, but I did not go to his houſe, he told me he had been for the hammer cloth, and the Juſtice would not let him have it.

How came he to know you?——I have ſeen the carriage before at the houſe, I have lived in families, and it is common to ſay, there goes ſuch an one's carriage.

Hatt. I ſaw this woman at my maſter's door, talking to the footman.

Heath. I was in that ſtreet that morning, ing, I was by the door, upon the ſtep of the door, I was not in the houſe.

Was you ever there before?——Never, but once, I went there after a place: I went into th ſtreet thinking to ſee ſome of the ſervants, if they would tell me any thing about it; I went into Piccadilly to No. 13, I was up that ſtreet.

Coachman. She was at the door with a child in her arms, and was there over night.

Court. Was you there over night?—Yes.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

505. THOMAS STRUTT was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 28th day of March laſt, one leather pocket book, value 6d. the property of a perſon unknown.

THOMAS SMART ſworn.

I was ſtanding in St. Paul's Church-yard, whilſt the Lord Mayor was paſſing in the ſtate coach, and I ſaw the priſoner and another run againſt a ſeafaring man, and the priſoner with one hand opened his pocket, and took out a black leather pocket book, and put it into his boſom; I ran after him, and at the corner of the Old Change, I caught hold of the ſkirts of his coat, and he threw down the pocket book, I ſtoop'd to pick it up, and he jumped out of my hands, the owner of the pocket book came after me, and I gave it him, I did not aſk him his name: the priſoner got away for that time: I ſaw the priſoner again on the Wedneſday following, I was at home in the Old Change, and Deputy Clements ſent for me: I am ſure the priſoner is the ſame man.

Priſoner. I am not the perſon.

ROBERT SEABROOK ſworn.

I was ſtanding at the top of Cheapſide, and I ſaw the priſoner pick a gentleman's pocket of a black leather pocket book, he got off then, but I ſaw him the next day and gave information, and he was taken, I have no doubt of his perſon.

THOMAS WARREN ſworn.

I was doing duty in Cheapſide, and I was informed of the priſoner having taken a pocket book the day before, and I ſaw him attempting to pick pockets and huſtling, I took three old handkerchiefs from him.

Priſoner. Thoſe three old handkerchiefs were my own, I know nothing of the pocket book, I have had people here all the week.

GUILTY

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

507. PETER DOYLE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 21ſt day of March laſt, one iron twivel with a wooden handle, value 5s. and one piece of iron with a wooden handle, called a key, value 5s. the goods and chattles of the Governor and Company of the New River brought from Chadwell and Amwell to London.

Priſoner. I borrowed the things to do a temporary job, and when I came to Fleet-Market, I bethought myſelf I had done a wrong thing, and I was going back with them: I had no tools, and I did not intend to keep them; the job was for one Kennedy in Fleet Market; I have a character, he is here every day all laſt week.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

508. JOSEPH WELDIN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 17th day day of March laſt, one pewter quart pot, value 20d. the property of Ebenezer Brown.

The Proſecutor was called on his recognizance and not appearing the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

---

509. JOHN HALE was indicted for falſly and feloniouſly making, forging, and counterfeiting, on the 28th of February laſt, a certain deed with a certain mark thereunto ſubſcribed, purporting to be the mark of one Thomas Mark, and to be a letter of attorney, and to be ſealed and delivered by the ſaid Thomas Mark, with intent to defraud Robert Raſhleigh and Co.

A ſecond count, For uttering the ſame with the like intention.

Vernon Lee, was called on his ſubpœna, and there being no other evidence, the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

510. WILLIAM THORLEY was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting John Newens, on the King's-highway, on the 28th day of March laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon and againſt his will, one ſilver watch, value 50s. his property.

There being no evidence to affect the priſoner, he was not put on his defence.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

511. JOHN WEBB was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 11th day of December laſt three buſhels of coals, value 3s. one trivet, value 10d. one hanging iron, value 6d. five pounds weight of tallow candles, value 3s. two linen glaſs cloths, value 1s. and two linen knife cloths, value 6d. the property of Thomas Iſherwood, Eſq;

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

512. JOHN LEAF was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 23d day of March laſt, ſeven ounces weight of bohea tea, value 2s. the property of the United Company of Merchants trading to the Eaſt Indies.

RICHARD NOBLE ſworn.

I am an officer ſtationed at Fenchurch-ſtreet tea-warehouſe; the priſoner and Henry Holding came into into the yard with one of the elders, and Holding deſired me to go with the priſoner to the warehouſe-keeper, and when we came in Holding ſaid the priſoner had ſome tea, and he took it out of the priſoner's left hand coat pocket, it was what we call congou tea, it was weighed, I have had it ever ſince.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. How long have you known Holding?—I have been in the warehouſe ten years, he was there then.

Do you know any thing of his character?—Nothing at all.

How long have you known the priſoner?——I have known him ſince he has been in the warehouſe; I have heard that the priſoner was ſubject to fits, ſince he was elected and brought before Mr. Stockdale the warehouſe-keeper; he looked like a man then that did not know what he had done, I heard a day or two after that he had had a fit juſt before this happened.

HENRY

HENRY HOLDING ſworn.

I brought the priſoner to the laſt witneſs on the 23d of March, as I was croſſing through one of the rooms, where we lay down the teas for inſpection among the brokers, I ſaw the priſoner take the tea out of a cheſt, and put it into his pocket in a ſmall bag, he told me he was going to get ſome nails; his buſineſs was to go and fetch the nails and return without going up one of the allies where theſe cheſts were laid open for ſhew; I immediately told him he had been doing that which was very wrong, and inſiſted upon ſeeing what he had in his pocket, I found it was tea, and I took him down to Mr. Stockdale; I never heard the priſoner was guilty of any thing of the kind before; he has been in the warehouſe about ſeven or eight months; I am credibly informed he is ſubject to fits, but my buſineſs lays in another part of the warehouſe.

Mr. Garrow. What reward do the company give for the detection of theſe ſort of pilferers?——I do not know, I never received any.

Do not they give a guinea?——It is ſo ſtuck up on the ſtair-caſe.

How long have you been in the warehouſe?—Upwards of ſix years.

Was there any thing remarkable that made you leave the keys?—No.

You was a tobacco merchant?—No, Sir, I dealt in it in the retail way, I never hawked it about, I have a hundred cuſtomers now that deal with me.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I do not know any thing about the bag, or putting tea into it, or whether he took it from me I cannot ſay, I was in a fit juſt at the time, and after that I cannot pretend to ſay that I remember five minutes that are paſt.

DAVID ROBERTS ſworn.

I live in the Hay-market, I am a tavern-keeper, I have known the priſoner about eleven years, he is a very honeſt man, he uſed the blue poſts in Maiden-lane, which I kept formerly, and many reſpectable people came there; he is ſubject to fits, but I never ſaw him in any.

Court. From your own obſervation, what is his capacity now?—I believe very weak in his head, very weak indeed.

RICHARD MARTIN ſworn.

I live at Lambeth; I have known the priſoner about nine months; I have lived in the pariſh ſeven years, I never heard the leaſt thing againſt him; I was coming with him about five or ſix months ſince, and juſt as he came to the Dog and Duck he dropped down in a fit; he ſeemed to be almoſt ſtrangled all of a ſudden, it held him about a quarter of an hour, and his head appeared very wild, and very diſordered after for ſome time.

JOSEPH SHOVE ſworn.

I have known him ſixteen years, he is a very honeſt man, but ſubject to fits.

Court. Do you mean that fits have diſturbed his capacity and underſtanding?—I think ſo, ſtupified quite.

You look upon him now to be a weak man?——Very weak Sir, I always did.

JOHN FOREMAN ſworn.

I have known the priſoner twelve years, he is a very honeſt man, his general ſtate of intellect is quite weak, he has not known what he has done for two or three hours together.

PETER CAPPER ſworn.

I have known him upwards of five years, I have often ſeen him in fits, I ſaw him in that fit which Mr. Martin ſpoke of; he always bore a very honeſt character; his head, after ſome fits, continues very bad for three, four, or ſeveral hours; the general ſtate of his head is weak.

JOHN ARNOLD ſworn.

I have known him about eight or nine years, his general character was that of a very honeſt man; I have had an opportu-hity of judging of his head; when I firſt knew him I thought he was in a ſtate of intoxication frequently; but I have ſeen him early in the morning, and walked with him to town in the month of January, before it was light, and he talked then in a rambling way; I think him a man weak in his head, and diſordered in his mind.

JAMES WORCESTER ſworn.

I work in the warehouſe with the priſoner; I was at work on the day the tea was found; I ſaw him about an hour and a quarter, as near as I can judge, I went to him, and ſhook hands with him; he was leaning upon a cheſt; I ſaid, how do you do Leaf? his eyes were fixed, never a word; how do you do old boy? ſays I; never a word; I went and told a man there that he was certainly mad, and the man ſaid he had ſpoken to him, and he gave him no anſwer: I have ſeen him in fits twice, and held him up; the laſt I ſaw him in, was at Fenchurch-ſtreet, juſt by the warehouſe; I am very ſure he is not in his ſenſes at times.

WILLIAM CHAMBERLAIN ſworn.

I remember this tranſaction, the priſoner appears to me not to be right in his head, he has a ſtupidity about him at times.

Court to Noble. Had you any converſation with the priſoner when you went with him to the warehouſe-keeper?——Not a word.

Did the warehouſe-keeper ſay any thing to him?——No farther than he turned the bag out, and he aſked him if it was a bag for the purpoſe; and the priſoner told him no, it was a bag that he brought his bread and cheeſe in.

Jury. Did there appear to be any crumbs in the bag, as if bread and cheeſe had been in it?——I did not obſerve.

Court. Did the warehouſe-keeper aſk him how he came to take the tea?——He aſked him what buſineſs he had in the warehouſe? and he ſaid he was going for nails; he gave his anſwer with a good deal of heſitation.

Did he appear to you to know what he ſaid?——Upon my word I really think he did.

Jury. Turn it out in your hat, and ſee if there are any crumbs of bread and cheeſe in it?——If there were any they might be left behind on the paper, the tea has been weighed in a ſcale once or twice.

(The tea was turned out, but there appeared no crumbs.)

Court. Do you know whether that bag really belonged to him or not?——No I do not.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

513. JOHN THOMAS WILKINSON was indicted for indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 4th day of December, four pieces of baize flannel of the length of 184 yards, value 10l. the property of John Bracken and John Wilkinſon.

THOMAS CURETON ſworn.

I am porter to Meſſrs. Bracken and Wilkinſon, in Packer's-court, Coleman-ſtreet; on the 4th of December I was to carry four pieces of flannel to High Holborn, Bloomſbury-ſquare; I ſet off about five, and at a quarter after five I reached the pitching-block in Holborn, the corner of Bartlet's-buildings, about five minutes after the priſoner came and pitched this box, there was a little bit of paper parcel at the top of the box; he ſaid nothing to me nor I to him; preſently a gentleman came out of a lottery-office two doors from the pitching block, with a ruffled ſhirt and a two curled wig, and a pen ſtuck in his ear, he had a letter in his hand, and aſked the priſoner to take the letter, and the gentleman ſaid he would give him ſix pence, and bid him come into the lottery-office; the priſoner gave me charge of his box and my my own alſo, and ſaid when he returned he would give me ſomething to drink, a glaſs of gin or a pint of purl, or ſomething of that, he ſaid he ſhould ſpend the money; he returned in three minutes, and he went into the lottery-office, and returned with ſix-pence in his hand, and he ſaid now be ſo good as to go and order a pint of purl with a pennyworth of gin in it, for us to drink, for it is a very cold night, as you have taken care of the things; I was gone about five minutes, and when I came back I found the priſoner and my load gone, and this box which the priſoner pitched left; I took an officer immediately into the lottery-office to take this man into cuſtody, thinking he might have connections with the priſoner, and there was not ſuch a perſon there; I then returned to my maſter's houſe, and went up to Sir Sampſon Wright's and opened the box in the preſence of Sir Sampſon, it contained nothing but brick-bats and ſtones; in the paper parcel there was a piece of woollen rag, and a child's old bedgown and bits of blanket; I never got my flannel again; I ſaw the priſoner again about two months after, I ſaw him at the bar at Guildhall, charged with ſome other offence, I went to look at him in the Compter, and I ſaid I knew him.

Mr. Garrow, Councel for Proſecution. Look at the man, be extremely cautious?—I have not the leaſt doubt, I could not reſt till I had told it; my heart is quite eaſy that he is the man.

To Proſecutor. How long had you an opportunity of ſeeing this man at the time you loſt your load?—It was full ten minutes, the gentleman from the lottery-office did not come for ſome minutes after we ſtood there.

Are the brick-bats there?——No, Sir, they tired me to carry them, and I did not like to carry them any longer: the flannel I loſt was my maſter's property.

Priſoner. I am come here with a reſolution to ſpeak the truth, and nothing but the truth; I am a man that is low in circumſtances, nevertheleſs I have no manner of doubt but you, my Lord, and the gentlemen of the Jury will ſee equal juſtice done by me, as if I was a man of property; if I ſhall deny any queſtion that ſhall be demanded of me, them, my Lord, and gentlemen look upon me in a bad light.

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Councel. You ſaid you was gone for this beer and gin about five minutes?—Yes.

Then upon the whole you was only in company for five minutes?—No.

The priſoner did not ſay much to you?—No; he was dreſſed in a brown great coat, and a white apron.

When you ſaw the priſoner at the Poultery Compter, did not you ſay you was ſorry for what you had done, and that you was convinced he was not the man?—No, I told him I believed he was the man that robbed me.

Did not you ſay that now you ſaw him by day light, you was convinced he was not the perſon?—The priſoner ſaid, how can you ſay ſuch a thing, I was bad with a canker in my mouth, and he brought out a ſheet of paper, and there was his name upon it.

Did not you ſay at the time you ſtood with him at the Poultry Compter that now you ſaw him by day-light you was convinced he was not the perſon, or words to that purpoſe?—I told him I was ſure he was the man.

Was you examined upon oath by the Magiſtrate?——I was.

You are quite clear of that?—Yes.

Did not you ſwear you did not recollect him?—I wiſhed to have a little more recollection.

Did you at any time during the examination ſay he was not the man?——I did not.

Did you ſay before the Magiſtrate he was not the man?——No, Sir.

Recollect yourſelf, my friend, come remember what you are about, and pay ſome more attention than you did to your maſter's goods?—Before Alderman Boydel I told him I did not believe he was rightly the man, but I wiſhed to have a little more conſideration.

PRI-

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was called before the Alderman on Tueſday the 2d day of March, it was the 1ſt day of March he came into the lodge, and called for a pint of beer, and let ſome few words drop concerning me; about half an hour after five the ſame evening, the proſecutor and that gentleman came and ſent for me to the lodge, then he aſked me if I knew him, I told him to my knowledge I never ſaw him before; he told me, on the 4th of December he pitched a parcel there, and I was the man that took it; I told him he was miſtaken; he told me the whole ſtory, and ſaid he would ſwear to it; I told him it was a very critical point where life was concerned; the next morning, about half an hour after nine, the proſecutor came to the place, and called me, and ſaid he was ſorry for what he ſaid over night; but when he came to look at me again I was not the man; he ſaid it was very hard upon him, for his maſter threatened to arreſt him for the property loſt; I told the Alderman that I was a very remarkable man, and if the man could ſwear to me he might; the Alderman ſaid that was very fair, and aſked him if he could ſwear to me; no ſuch thing; I was diſcharged, but remanded till I got people to my character; I was ordered up on Saturday without a hearing, then on the Monday I got my friends to appear, then I was ordered into cuſtody; then the proſecutor ſaid he would ſwear I was the man that left the box there, but that he would not ſwear I was the man that took his bundle.

JOSEPH HEMMINGS ſworn.

I am a watch and clock-maker, I have known the priſoner between four and five years, he is an honeſt, induſtrious, hard-working man; I have employed him, he always behaved well.

Court. How long has he had that impediment or difficulty in ſpeaking?—It has been coming on for years; it has been very bad for the laſt twelve months.

Was his difficulty in ſpeaking before Chriſtmas as bad as now?—Not quite ſo bad.

Was it ſo bad as to be noticed?—Very much ſo.

The priſoner called two more witneſſes who gave him a good character.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

514. WILLIAM GIBBONS was indicted for that he, on the 8th day of March laſt, feloniouſly did convey and cauſe to be conveyed into the priſon of Tothill-fields Bridewell, one large ſtick with an iron ſocket, and one large rope fitted to the ſame, being an inſtrument proper to facilitate the eſcape of priſoners, and did deliver and cauſe to be delivered, the ſame to one William Stewart, being then a perſon committed to the ſaid priſon, and detained there for felony and burglary, without the conſent and privity of Alexander Fenwick the governor and keeper of the ſaid priſon; with intent to aid and aſſiſt the ſaid William Steward to make his eſcape out of the ſaid priſon.

The caſe was opened by Mr. Silveſter, of Counſel for the proſecution.

The witneſſes examined ſeparately at the requeſt of Mr. Peatt, Counſel for the priſoner.

ALEXANDER FENWICK ſworn.

I am keeper of Tothill-fields Bridewell, I have a warrant under the hand writing of Sir Sampſon Wright, for the commitment of William Stewart; there was no other in that warrant but Stewart.

(The warrant read ſigned Sampſon Wright.)

"Weſtminſter to wit. To the governor "of Tothill-fields. Receive the body of "William Stewart, herewith ſent you, "brought before me by Patrick M'Manus, "charged on the oaths of John Wadding-

"ton

" ton, and Patrick M'Manus, on ſuſpicion " of burglariouſly breaking the dwelling- " houſe of Robert Snow, and him ſafely " keep in your ſaid cuſtody for further ex- " amination on Wedneſday next, or untill " he is diſcharged, and for ſo doing this " ſhall be your ſufficient warrant."

Court. What, is it on ſuſpicion of burglary? the words of the act of Parliament are, " detained in any gaol for treaſon, or felony, expreſſed in the warrant of commitment."

Mr. Silveſter, Counſel for the Proſecution. My Lord, there is another caſe before you, reſerved upon this very point; the caſe before was not mentioning felony, it was the caſe of the King and Richard Walker; and there was a caſe came before all the Judges, about twelve years ago, where upon an indictment of this nature, under the ſtatute of the 16th of George II. for conveying in ſeveral things for an eſcape, it was not expreſſed in the warrant that it was for felony, and the Judges were all of opinion that it was not within the act of Parliament, and the priſoner was diſcharged; I took the objection myſelf, it was a woman that eſcaped out of the Poultry Compter.

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Counſel. I was firſt going to make the objection myſelf, when your Lordſhip ſpoke; I believe the caſe is very plain, if your Lordſhip will have the goodneſs to reverſe the caſe, if the facts are ſufficient againſt the priſoner.

Mr. Silveſter. The caſe that is reſerved is, a man was conveying a man to gaol, and they got out a knife, and cut him acroſs the face, and attempted to cut his throat, it was tried at Maidſtone, and the man was convicted, but it ſtruck Mr. Juſtice Gould, as it has your Lordſhip, and he reſerved the caſe.

Mr. Fenwick. My Lord, this rope and iron were found hanging down in the priſon, I was within a yard of the perſon that found it: I ſaw that found on the ſide of the wall withinſide of the priſon, joining my apartment; I haſtened by the back of the priſon to ſeek for Stewart, thinking I ſhould find the priſoner Stewart, I went to the field called Dr. Fordyce's field, at the back of the priſon, and I found this end of the rope there, the boy that ſtood before me, ſaid, I ſaw the man that goes about with bull dogs here about ſeven, and another ſaid, that muſt be Gibbons; a handkerchief was found the next morning, the irons were found in the priſon, cut off at top, and the other brought back by two people.

Who found that iron in the priſon?—My turnkey, he is not here; I ſaw the priſoner on the Wedneſday afternoon, he came down with another man, the eſcape was on the Tueſday.

Mr. Peatt. You did not find thoſe irons yourſelf?—No.

Nor you did not ſee any perſon make uſe of that rope and ſtick?——No.

Is that rope and ſtick in the ſame ſtate in which it was found?—Yes, the priſoner was ſtopped by my turnkey; when we taxed the priſoner, he ſaid, it was very unlikely he ſhould be the perſon that ſhould affiſt Stewart out, and then come down there afterwards.

THOMAS PEARCE ſworn.

I keep a public houſe about ten yards from the gaol, I ſaw the priſoner on Tueſday the 8th of March, about half an hour after two go into the gaol, and come out about five.

Who was in the gaol then?—I cannot tell, I heard about half after ſeven, Stewart eſcaped, I happened to be at that time at Dr. Fordyce's gardens with their people, I ran into the garden ground, the north-weſt part of the goal, and this part was hung down into the gaol, and the other part was hanging into the garden ground, this handkerchief.

Is that a thoroughfare?—No, it is a private garden, this knife was found on the priſoner when he was taken into cuſtody.

Mr. Fenwick. I ſaw the handkerchief picked up, and ſomebody ſaid it was Stewart's.

When the priſoner was taken up, did he say who he was in company with?——No.

Mr. Peatt. In whose poſſeſſion has that rope been?——Mine.

WILLIAM BRIANT ſworn.

I am a turnkey, I ſaw the priſoner come in the gaol on the 8th of March, between two and three, he was walking with Stewart to and fro, I do not know what time he went out, he did not ſpeak to me, he ſpoke to Harry Wright who is not here, I found the rope hanging down the wall.

ROBERT PASSFIELD ſworn.

I live with Mr. Price, I know the priſoner, I ſaw him walk out of the gaol about five, and go the outſide of the gaol towards Collins's, after that I ſaw him very near ſeven o'clock, in Dr. Fordyce's field over the corner upon the bank.

How near did you ſee him from the wall of the priſon?——About a hundred yards from where the priſoner got out, there is no foot way there, I did not know what he was about; I am ſure that was the man, I am poſitive of it, I knew him two years ago, he goes out with bull-dogs.

Mr. Peatt. What account did you give of this buſineſs before Sir Sampſon Wright at the firſt hearing?——Quite the ſame I do now.

You are ſure of that?——Yes.

Did you tell Sir Sampſon, that you was not ſure as to the perſon of the priſoner?—I ſaid, I was ſure that was the man.

Mr. Peatt. You are quite ſure you did not expreſs any doubt before Sir Sampſon Wright, as to the priſoner's perſon?—Yes.

Recollect yourſelf?——Yes, I am ſure I ſaid, that is the perſon I ſaw in Dr. Fordyce's field.

And during the whole examination you expreſſed no doubt?——I ſaid that was the man.

Did you ſay you thought he was the man, or that you believed he was the man?——I ſaid, I believed he was the man.

Court. It is reduced into writing here. (Reads) "The ſaid Robert ſays, that on "Tueſday laſt, between four and five in "the afternoon, he ſaw the priſoner walk-"ing on the outſide of the priſon, between "ſix and ſeven, he ſaw the ſaid Gibbons "again ſtanding ſtill in the corner of For-"dyce's field, in which there is no tho-"roughfare."

Mr. Peatt. There is no foot-path where he ſtood?——I have been partly all over it, and there is no foot-path in it.

What was you doing in the field?——I was rummaging ſtraw in the next field.

Are there not path ways among the flower beds?—Not where that man ſtood.

Mr. Pearce. Where the boy ſtood, and where the priſoner was, there was neither path nor road.

Mr. Peatt. Have you ſeen other people there at different times?—No, only them that belong to it.

Court to Fenwick. He had eſcaped at ſeven or a quarter paſt ſeven?—Yes.

Mr. Peatt. Had you any reaſon for knowing it was that time?——I think it muſt be about that time.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I went into this gaol, on Tueſday to ſee one William Brown, and likewiſe I had a meſſage to deliver from a publican in Swallow-ſtreet, about a man that was quartered there, and hitting a man over the head with a quart pot, and I went there to ſee if I could get the man out, I went in the gaol, and as ſoon as I got in the gaol, Wright ſtopped me for aſſiſting Steward, then he ſent for the boy, and he ſaid I was the perſon, he thought he ſaw me about there, and in the morning before Juſtice Gilbert he ſaid, I believe it is, I think it is; ſays the Juſtice, you muſt be ſure, no, ſays he.

THOMAS PRYER ſworn.

On the 8th of March, I went to ſee the priſoner's brother to drink a diſh of tea; about ſix in the evening, he aſked me to take a walk to ſee the houſe he was building, and when I came down there, he miſſed ſomething, and he deſired I would take care

eye of his house. I ſtaid there about two hours, the priſoner came there to ſee for his brother, and they aſked him to go to a chair club.

What time did the priſoner come there?—About twilight, I believe, as near as I can gueſs it was between ſix and ſeven; the priſoner ſtaid there three quarters of an hour, as near as I can recollect.

Where was this houſe?—In Margaret-ſtreet, down the back of High-ſtreet, Mary-le-bon; I ſuppoſe a mile and an half, or near two miles from Tothill-fields.

Mr. Silveſter. How came you to recollect?—My brother informed me he was taken in cuſtody, and deſired I would ſpeak what I knew.

Did you attend before the Magiſtrate?—Yes.

Was you examined?—Yes.

Did you tell him the ſame ſtory?—Yes, before Sir Sampſon, and before Mr. Addington.

What makes you recollect the hour?—I cannot tell what makes me recollect the hour, but I am poſitive of it, it was twilight.

Whether it was near ſix or ſeven you cannot tell?—It was half paſt five when we came to the priſoner's brother, and I ſuppoſe it might be three quarters of an hour after that I ſaw the priſoner.

How long did he ſtay there?—As near as I can tell three quarters of an hour; I had no watch nor clock, I only recollect the day from the circumſtance I am called here upon.

Was it the 5th or the 6th?—It was the 8th, I recollect by the ticket, I read it, as near as I can recollect it was, 'deſire the favour of your company to come and ſpend the evening at a public-houſe in Swallow-ſtreet,' I do not remember the ſign.

When were they to meet at this club?—The ſame evening, I believe.

What, do not you know?—I am ſure the ſame evening, I will not be poſitive to the ſign, but it might be the crown.

Court. The priſoner came to enquire whether his brother was at home; did the brother go with you to ſee the building?—Yes, and he went away directly; he deſired I would look at the place, and ſee how far he had got.

Then you ſtaid very near two hours at the building?—He deſired I would ſtay there till he came back.

What time did the brother come back?—Not above a quarter of an hour after the priſoner went away.

What time did the priſoner go away?—As near as I can recollect it was between ſeven and eight, he had been with me all that time.

What could induce you to ſtay two hours there, when one hour of that muſt be quite dark?—There was a fire to ſit by.

There were none of the workmen there?—No, I was never long acquainted with the priſoner, his brother is ſomething in the coach way.

What was he building this houſe for himſelf?—Yes, I believe the priſoner is ſomething in the ſame branch, but I do not know.

Priſoner. I am a coach-maker.

The priſoner called four witneſſes, who gave him a good character.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

511. PATRICK BURGESS otherwiſe EDWARD WHEELER was indicted for feloniouſly uttering and publiſhing as true, on the 11th of January, a certain falſe, forged, and counterfeited power in writing, with the name William Place thereto ſubſcribed, purporting to be ſigned by him, a ſeaman, on board the Termagant, and to be a power by the ſame William Place, from the 24th of December, 1780, to the 1ſt day of January, 1781, for the payment of certain prize-money then ſuppoſed to be due to the ſaid William Place, for for ſervices done by him on board the ſame ſhip, in order to receive certain prize money then ſuppoſed to be due to him, knowing the ſame to be forged, with intention to defraud Robert Raſhleigh and Co.

The Caſe opened by Mr. Silveſter.

HENRY THOMPSON ſworn.

I am clerk to Meſſrs. Raſhleigh and Co. the priſoner came to our houſe on Tueſday the 11th of January laſt, about three in the afternoon, he came into the compting-houſe, and on ſeeing me he was coming up, I called out to him if he was coming for prize-money, he was too late that day, I was particularly buſy in counting dollars, and I did not wiſh him to come near me, he ſaid he had an order, or a power, I cannot ſay which, to receive prize-money, and he ſeemed to be going out, when Mr. Turner, one of the partners called to ſee his authority, upon which he gave him the order; Mr. Turner ſaid he believed it was a forgery, and deſired me to call Mr. Raſhleigh, who immediately came out of the other compting-houſe.

—— TURNER ſworn.

I received this paper from the priſoner, I examined the prize liſt, there was no money due to this man of the name of Place, it appeared that the fourth payment was made, and the mark of William Place put as a receipt at the time of payment.

Thompſon. I paid Place two pounds ſix ſhillings the laſt payment, he made his mark.

Mr. Turner. I called Mr. Raſhleigh, and ſaid I ſuſpected it was a forgery.

Mr. Keys, Priſoner's Councel, to Mr. Thompſon. Did you pay Place any money before?—He had been paid two or three times.

Then you cannot ſay that he cannot write, all that you know is, that he made his mark?——Yes.

ROBERT RASHLEIGH ſworn.

I was called into the compting-houſe and informed that a perſon was preſent to receive prize-money, and they ſuppoſed there was a forgery; I went into the compting-houſe to ſee, and ſaw the priſoner, and ſhewed him this paper, and aſked him how he came by it, as it was dated Plymouth; he told me he received it in a letter from Plymouth; I aſked him where the letter was; he told me at his lodgings; I aſked where his lodgings were; he told me at the White Lyon in St. Catherine's, I think that was the anſwer he gave; I then left him in the compting-houſe, and went for a conſtable, the conſtable came, and I charged him with the priſoner, on a ſuſpicion of forgery, in uttering this note: I deſired the conſtable to go with him to his lodgings; and if they found the letter there and the matter clear, I had no objection to the priſoner's being releaſed, becauſe I thought it would be a proof that he had come by it honeſtly; on the ſame day, and nearly at the ſame time I referred to ſome letters I had received from Mr. Nicholls, the Mayor of Plymouth, to compare it with the will.

Was the priſoner preſent?—I think he was.

Mr. Keys. He did not know what you did.

Court. Did he know you was comparing the hands?—I cannot ſay; here is the power of attorney, William Place has here put his mark, Mr. Thompſon paid him.

Mr. Keys. I believe you aſked the priſoner how he came by this after that?—Yes.

Court. Did he come back again after he had been to ſearch?—He was carried to the Compter immediately.

Had you any converſation with the priſoner after?—Yes, I had.

I believe in that converſation you required him to tell the truth, how he came by this order to receive the money?—I did, and his account of it was that he received it from one Joſeph Eagan, at a public-houſe, a little above that houſe; Eagan was ſent for upon that, and taken into cuſtody, but he was afterwards diſcharged for want of ſufficient

ſufficient proof; the priſoner ſaid there was another man that would prove it; he ſaid, he had been a taylor, he ſaid Eagan had drawn it; the priſoner had before received money on powers of attorney; and I aſked him where theſe powers were; he ſaid they were altogether at his lodgings; the priſoner is a taylor or ſlopman, he had often been at our houſe before, and had always ſigned his mark.

Mr. Keys. Did he ſay Eagan owed him any money?—No, the priſoner made this kind of declaration, with the view of turning King's evidence.

WILLIAM PRICE ſworn.

I was on board the Termagant till ſhe was paid off, from the time ſhe was put in commiſſion; I know William Place, to my knowledge he could not write, I always ſaw him make his mark, I have wrote letters for him, the ſhip has been paid off two years, but whether he has learned to write ſince, I do not know.

Mr. Silveſter to Mr. Thompſon. How long before this had you paid Place?—— The 27th of September.

JOHN PAGE ſworn.

I knew Mr. Nicholls, the Mayor of Plymouth, for fifteen years, I have ſeen him write conſtantly.

Is that his hand writing?——It differs very much from his uſual mode of writing.

Do you believe it is, or it is not his hand writing?——I believe it is not.

(Read, and the indictment examined by Mr. Keys)

Signed William Place, "Plymouth, January the 2d, 1785, Pleaſe to pay the prize money due to me, (or ms.)

Mr. Keys. It is clearly ms. here, for his Majeſty's ſhip Termagant, wiſch, (for which) this ſhall be your diſcharge, William Place.

Court. It is a fair ſimile.

Mr. Keys. I think it is hardly ſo much, my Lord; there is to be ſure a tolerable imitation.

Mr. Silveſter. The Jury will judge of that.

Priſoner. I deſire to have my witneſſes called; I have nothing particular to ſay.

The priſoner called twelve witneſſes who all gave him a very good character; and one of them ſaw Eagan deliver him a ſtamped paper in part of payment for clothes.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

512. GEORGE REYNOLDS (a child of ten years old) was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Henry Skinner on the King's highway on the 14th day of March laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon, and againſt his will, twenty-four pair of cotton ſtockings, value 3l. and ſix pair of brown cotton ſtockings, value 20s. the property of Robert Cox.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

513. JOHN HARFORD was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 6th day of March laſt, one plate of glaſs, in a wooden frame, covered with hair ſhag, value 18s. the property of Penelopy Cholmondeley; and one great coat, value 5s. the property of John Thomas.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

514. JOHN BARLOW was indicted for that he feloniously did receive, harbour, and maintain one Edward Payne, knowing him to have committed a felony, of which at the sessions held in January last, he was tried and convicted.

The Indictment opened by Mr. Garrow, and the Case by Mr. Silvester.

The Record produced and read by Thomas Shelton, Esq; Clerk of the Arraigns.

ROBERT TAYLOR, Esq; sworn.

I was one of the owners of the ship Elbe, I went to the prisoner's house; I had an information that Payne, who has since been convicted and executed, was concealed there; I went on the 31st of October, it was some time after the robbery; the prisoner's house is down an alley in Half-moon-alley, an obscure place; after rummaging every room in the house, he told me I was a day behind the fair, or a day too late, for he was gone one hundred miles out of town.

What was the amount of the robbery?—Twenty-seven or twenty-eight hundred pounds, about two thousand five hundred pounds in dollars.

Mr. Scott, one of the Prisoner's Council. Who was it that made the first application that you received respecting Mr. Barlow?—I believe it was Mr. Samuel, the proprietor of the watches; I went myself the first morning.

Did you acquaint Mr. Barlow what your business was?—There was myself, Mr. Samuel and his son, and they had two or three constables; I went to find Payne, at the first sight I had no idea of Mr. Barlow having any of my property; I sent a message by my servant, and he came to me.

When you sent your servant, did you send word what business you wanted him upon;—I believe I did not, but my man knew the business; Mr. Barlow came the same morning voluntarily; I asked him to refund the money, he said he had none; I went then to Sir Sampson's immediately; and I believe he was sent for to Sir Sampson's; I believe he came there voluntarily, there was no warrant.

What was desired of him at Sir Sampson's?—He was questioned relative to the property, why he did not give up the property; he was required to give up eighty pounds.

Was he told if he would admit having the money in his possession that he would be discharged?——He denied having it, as far as I recollect; I recollect the circumstance of the girl charging him with the delivery of the money, so much in cash, so much in bank notes, tied up in a particular manner; it was upon his examination before Sir Sampson; the girl's name is Mary Ann Garrett; he admitted receiving the gold, and as many of the bank notes as he returned; he had returned forty-four guineas, and some bank notes before this, and said he did not know the contents of this; it was tied up with a bit of string, and he knew nothing of the contents of that parcel.

CHARLES GOLDSMITH sworn.

I have known the prisoner twelve months last January, intimately as brothers almost; I knew Edward Payne as well as I know Barlow, I was at Barlow's house every day in October last; I always understood this Payne was a thief, that he got his living by robbing on the water; I have frequently been in his company half an hour, and he used to say, I must go to work to night, that was, I must go a thieving; he used to say, I have appointed so and so, I did not know the persons, but after I heard of the robbery of the ship Elbe, when I heard it I said to my wife, damn it, I will lay a guinea that Payne is in that robbery; I instantly went and found Payne, smoking his pipe by the side of the fire; when I went in nobody was in the room but Payne, and when I read the advertisement to Payne, he trembled very much at it, and was agitated very much: I saw Barlow in the entry, and said to him, I really believe Payne is is in this robbery which is in the paper, for he trembles ſo, you would be amazed at it; Barlow ſaid, what robbery; then I went in and read the ſame advertiſement to Payne and him, then I went away, and in the afternoon I came to the window again, we happened to have ſome oyſters for ſupper, and Payne, and Barlow, and my brother and me joined together, we had half a buſhel; I ſtaid there till eleven, then went home; as ſoon as I was up in the morning Payne was there, and the next morning alſo; I ſuſpected he lay there, but I did not know it at that time; the very next day I came down to the door, there was Payne with Mr. Barlow's red coat on, and a hat, I will ſwear to the coat; then I ſaid to Payne, why Barlow's coat fits you like a ſmock frock, it touches your heels; there was a fight at Iſlington, and I ſaid Payne will you go and ſee the fight; and Barlow ſaid no, there will be too many eyes there, that was the day before he went off: I ſaw ſome gentlemen come after Payne, and when they aſked for him, I heard Barlow ſay, you are come too late for the fair, I went with Barlow to ſee if Payne had got off ſafe, or if not, Barlow ſaid, he would tell him to get off directly; there were three or four of us went; ſays he, he is not affraid of little ſpider, but he is afraid of Dolfin; ſays he, he ſays he is not afraid of tranſportation, he is only afraid of being hanged; he could not bear to be hanged.

Was that before Payne went off?—Yes, more than twenty times before Payne went off.

Who was this ſpider?——I believe May Cooke.

Mr. Fielding, another Council for the priſoner. You have known the man at the bar eighteen months?——Yes.

Habits of intimacy all the time?——No, there has been ſome coolneſs between us ſince Payne's affair, I never was out with Payne but once.

What robbery did you commit then?—You do not underſtand me ſo; I never was out with him but once to ſpend the afternoon.

But you knew him for eighteen months, and always ſuſpected him for a thief.—No, no, you run on too faſt for me; I ſuſpected him to be a thief a conſiderable time before this.

How came it you did not inform ſome Magiſtrate that he was at this houſe of Barlow's?—I had ſomething elſe to do, I have four children to work for.

You made one of the party at oyſters, now how came you to ſup with him?—I ſupped with Mr. Barlow.

How long was it before you became acquainted with Mr. Taylor?——Laſt Friday.

How came he to find you out?—Aſk him, you ſhall not have it from me, I do not know.

How did he find you out?——Aſk him, I will not tell you, for I do not know, I was informed he ſent a man to enquire for me.

What did Mr. Taylor ſay to you when he firſt met you?—I poſitively cannot tell you the words, he aſked me my name, and I have had a ſubpœna ſerved upon me; it was nothing but what I expected, when I heard that the man had robbed the man of eighty, and ſtripped him in gaol, what could I expect.

What are you, and where do you live?——By my hands.

To what uſe do you apply theſe hands to?——To making chairs, and mending them; I live in Long-alley, Moorfields.

Have you been at work yeſterday, or the day before?——No.

What have you had from Mr. Taylor?——I have not ſeen the colour of Mr. Taylor's money yet.

You ſay you ſaw Payne at Barlow's houſe through the window?—Yes.

But at that lucky juncture when you got this glimpſe of him, anybody elſe might have had the ſame glimpſe?—Yes.

MARY ANN GARRODD ſworn.

Mr. Garrow. You had the misfortune to live with Payne?——I never lived with him, I kept company with him.

Did

Did you ſee Payne and the priſoner together at any time after that?——Yes, the day after the robbery, I ſaw Payne at the priſoner's houſe with me.

What paſſed between Payne and you?—I took the paper and ſhewed it to him, and he read it, he took very little notice to me about it, the priſoner adviſed me to take an empty room, or a ready furniſhed room, and he directed me to Butler's-alley, and I could not get one, we continued at Mr. Barlow's while I was ſeeking for a lodging; I think he was there three days, he was there in the back room, and locked up; ſometimes they put him in the neceſſary, when any of Barlow's girls were coming, he was put in a place of concealment; there was one girl he was affraid of, for Barlow ſaid, ſhe was a bad ſort of a body, and had lived in a bad place; on the Thurſday following this robbery, Payne brought me four guineas, and three ten and one twenty-pound note, on the Thurſday night following, and on the Friday night following he brought me forty guineas, and ſix tens and one twenty more, and he bid me take care of them, and not let Barlow know any thing of them, and he bid me good night; he went away, I ſaw no more of him till Thurſday, then he ſtaid at Barlow's till the laſt of his going off; I laid with him, therefore I know he was there; Payne was to come to dinner, but he did not, and Barlow's ſiſter came in about one o'clock, and ſhe ſaid, Poll, Ned is taken, ſhe ſaid to me, you will be ſurely hanged or tranſported for life; I went to my room and fetched theſe guineas and notes away, and I came to Barlow's and ſaid, what ſhall I do! ſays I, what ſhall I do! ſays he, ſuppoſe we put the notes into the tea kettle, no, ſays I, that will ſpoil them; this was the Sunday evening, and he put the guineas in the drawer, and ſaid, gold cannot be ſworn to; on the Monday morning I gave him theſe eleven notes, and I went to Edmonton, and his ſiſter came down, and ſaid, Ned is not taken; and I came to Barlow's houſe, ſays I, come Jack, give me my money and my papers, and I will go home, ſo he gave me the money in a ſtocking, ſays I, where are my papers, he ſaid you muſt ſtay for them till eight o'clock, and then he gave me four notes inſtead of eleven, and I came back immediately; he ſaid hold your tongue, I will go and ſeek for them, and he came back, and ſaid, he could not get them till five in the morning; ſays I, Payne will be here in the morning, and he will murder me; the next morning Payne came to this man's houſe, and Barlow came to me, and ſaid, I have got Ned.

Mr. Fielding. How long from that time was it before Payne went to Lynn, in Yorkſhire?——Upon my word I cannot juſtly ſay.

Priſoner. This woman aſked me to lend her a guinea, ſo ſhe is perſuaded to do this, I am as innocent as a child.

The priſoner called nine witneſſes who all gave him a good character.

GUILTY.

To be fined 1s. and impriſoned one year in Newgate.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

MIS-

MISDEMEANORS.

515. JOHN FOSTER was indicted for that he, together with one Henry Sterne, not in custody, did obtain from one William Hart, the sum of 50l. three per cents. then of the value of 28l. 8s. 9d. to procure for him a tide-waiter's place, at the Custom-house, and fraudulently and deceitfully did pretend that the said Henry Sterne was a man of strict honour and integrity, and was head writer to the Duke of Richmond, and had the disposal of places as a perquisite to him, with intent to defraud the said William.

GUILTY, Sentence respited.

516. WILLIAM JAMES was indicted for obtaining the sum of four guineas by false pretences, from George Downing.

NOT GUILTY.

Those two tried by the first London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

The Sessions being ended, the Court proceeded to pass Judgment as follows.

Received Sentence of Death 24. (viz.)

William Higson (executed the Monday following for murder,) James Haywood, William Harding, James Jones, Richard Clarke, Thomas Scott, Patrick Daly, Henry Wood, Sarah Whitehead, Margaret Gardener, Stephen Langdon, George Pidgeon, George Ward, Thomas Conner, George Morley, Thomas Bateman, otherwise Porker, Thomas Brown, John Thompson, otherwise Wrinkle, Patrick Eagan, otherwise Macgrath, John Henry Palmer, Mary Jones, James Hughes.

Received sentence of transportation for fourteen years, 2, (viz.)

Samuel Holt, and Uziel Barrah.

Received sentence of transportation for seven years, 14, (viz.)

William Young, (to Africa,) Peter Oberg, Ann Fowles; James Bryan Cullen, George Wilkinson, (both to Africa,) Thomas Simms, Francis Cook, Abraham Slater, John Etherton, George Gillin, William Robinson, Mary Pile, John Clark, otherwise Hosier, (to Africa,) Samuel Blackmore, Thomas Strutt.

To be imprisoned in the House of Correction, twelve months, 12.

Mary Butler, John Jones, Elizabeth Stanley, William Cheshire, Solomon Leach, Henry James, Daniel Huggins, John Cox, William Anderson, Thomas Sams, William Baker, William Bolton.

To be imprisoned six months in the House of Correction, 9.

James Price, Elizabeth Jones, John Traynor, Joseph Manning, George Chandler, Mary Lightfoot, John Mooney, Mary Simms, Mary M'Dermot, Richard Truman.

To be imprisoned one month, 1.

Sarah Davis.

To be publickly whipped, 20.

James Price, John Jones, Joseph Manning, John Hill, Thomas Samms, Samuel Toome, Henry James, Daniel Huggins, Joseph Bolus, John Bandebus, John Cox, William Holmes, James Pennel, William Baker, William Bolton, William Brown, William otherwise Thomas Roberts, Robert Maxfield, John Lesby, Peter Doyle.

John Carter, convicted at a former Sessions ordered to be transported for seven years from the time of his conviction.

 The next Sessions will begin on Wednesday the 11th of May at the Old Bailey.

HODGSON,

PROFESSOR of SHORT-HAND, and

SHORT-HAND WRITER to the OLD-BAILEY,

At No. 35, CHANCERY-LANE,

Respectfully thanks the Gentlemen of the learned Professions, and others, for their flattering Partiality to his Compendious SYSTEM of SHORT-HAND, which is Taught, as usual, in FOUR LESSONS ONLY, at 10s. 6d. each.

Trials, Arguments, &c. taken with Precision and Care, and expeditiously transcribed, on reasonable Terms.

A new Impression of his Second Edition of Short-hand, Price 2s. 6d. to be had as above; also of BLADON, Paternoster-row, and CLARKE, Portugal-street.

In the Press, and speedily will be published, Price only 2s. 6d. A Collection of CHARACTERS, Arbitrary and Symbolical, for the Benefit of SHORT-HAND WRITERS and adapted to every System; with a comparative Table of Short-hand Alphabets, by E. HODGSON.

N. B. The Table may then be had separate, Price 6d.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 11th of MAY, 1785, and the following Days;

Being the FIFTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER V. PART I.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

MDCCLXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

BEFORE the Right Honourable RICHARD CLARK, LORD MAYOR of the City of London; the Honourable JOHN WILLES, Eſq. one of the Juſtices of his Majeſty's Court of King's Bench; the Honourable Sir RICHARD PERRYN, Knt. one of the Barons of his Majeſty's Court of Exchequer; the Honourable JAMES ADAIR, Serjeant at Law, Recorder of the ſaid City; JOHN WILLIAM ROSE, Eſq; and others his Majeſty's Juſtices of Oyer and Terminer of the City of London, and Juſtices of Gaol Delivery of Newgate, holden for the ſaid City and County of Middleſex.

London Jury.
Thomas Lee
Thomas Hill
Henry Jenkins
Robert Barron
William Key
Samuel Moore
James Looker
Thomas Davis
Wm. Stadden Blake
Eleazer Chater
James Goodſon
John Bowley.

Firſt Middleſex Jury.
Dodd Cooke
William Clarke
John Hawkins
John Short
John Wilton
Alexander Mackey
William Long
Joſeph Sewell
William Danſell
Paul Richardſon
John Young
William Morſe.

Second Middleſex Jury.
James Wilkinſon
Jonas Rowley
John Sherwood
James Chapman
William Goddard
Joſeph Parry
William Sturch
David Moody
William Richardſon
William Sommerwell
James Sanger
James Donne.

---

522. JOHN IVEMAY, JOHN HONEY, and SAMUEL YELDHAM, were indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Edward Gray, Eſq; on the King's highway, on the 21ſt of April laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon, and againſt his will, one ſilver watch, value 20s. one ſteel chain, value 1s. one compaſs ſeal, ſet in metal, value 1s.

1s. one ſteel ſeal, with a cypher engraved thereon, value 1s. and 4s. in monies numbered his property.

The Caſe opened by Mr. Silveſter.

EDWARD GRAY, Eſq; ſworn.

I was coming to town about half after ſeven, in my carriage, from Hillingdon, near Uxbridge; when I came upon Ealing common about twenty minutes after ſeven, to the ſix mile ſtone, the carriage was ſtopped by one man, whom I apprehend to be Yeldham; then Ivemay and Honey came, one on the right hand, and the other on the left, Honey came on the right hand, and Ivemay on the left; the horſes heads were towards London, when I firſt ſaw Ivemay he was on the foot-path, then he drew a handkerchief over his face; Mr. Hammond was with me; I did not ſee Ivemay when he firſt came to the carriage, but he aſked for our monies, watches, and purſes; Mr. Hammond put his hand in his pocket and gave Ivemay ſome money; Honey being on my ſide, I put my hand in my pocket and gave him four ſhillings.

Was it day-light, Sir?—It was as light as it is now, except the ſun.

Had Honey any diſguiſe over his face?—Yes, over part of his face; Honey ſtood on tip-toe on the foot-path to look into the carriage, and I obſerved his perſon, his face was towards me, he then had a diſguiſe over part of his face; he ſays to Mr. Hammond, your watch; ſays Mr. Hammond I have never a watch; ſays he, I ſaw you put the ſeals into your pocket, therefore you have a watch; ſays I, no, I do not believe he has a watch, I have one, you may take mine. I am apt to be robbed, and therefore I bought a watch on purpoſe; it was a ſilver watch, and there was a ſteel chain, and a compaſs ſeal. I ſaw Honey's face, his handkerchief was not quite over his mouth, I ſaw the bottom part of his mouth very ſtrongly; I knew them both again the next morning, I might not have known them two or three months hence, but I have not the leaſt doubt now, I wiſh I had for their ſakes; I cannot ſwear to Yeldham.

THOMAS HAMMOND ſworn.

I was ſtopped, I know Ivemay and Honey; Ivemay aſked me for my money, I gave it him; he aſked me for my watch, I told him I had none; he ſaid, I ſaw you put the ſeals in your pocket; then your purſe; I have none; your pocket-book; I have none. Then Mr. Gray gave him his watch; he then ſaid to Mr. Gray, have you given my partner your money; he ſaid he had; then they ſhut the door, and wiſhed us a good night; they were both of them dreſſed in green; their perſons are ſo very clear to me, that I am very ſure theſe are the two young men, I cannot ſay I know Yeldham: they had both handkerchiefs, I ſaw only their chin.

Court. Did you make obſervation of the other part of their face?——I could not ſee that, but I took obſervation of their whole dreſs, it was green.

WILLIAM CHARLTON ſworn.

I live at Acton; I know nothing of the robbery, only the apprehending of John Ivemay, at the Cock and Crown at Acton, as near as I can gueſs, I believe about half an hour after eight, on the 21ſt of April; I ſearched him, and found upon him a towel, a handkerchief, a pocket-book, a halfpenny, a key, and ſome papers, and I believe about nine or ten ſhillings in ſilver, and half-a-guinea.

Court. How came you to ſuſpect him?——I was ſent for to go to the Cock and Crown: he ſaid he knew nothing at all about it, I detained him.

CHRISTOPHER COXFORD ſworn.

I live at Acton; on the 21ſt of April I was at home all day; about four, or a little after four, I ſaw them three gentlemen walk by oppoſite our houſe, they ſeemed to be in liquor, and were playing and talking as they went along, and about ſix, I obſerved two of them come back again oppoſite my houſe, the tall one, that is Ivemay, may, and this man that ſtands on this ſide, that is Yeldham; I am very ſure theſe are the three men that I ſaw at four o'clock; I ſaw Yeldham walk back the town way, then I ſaw the tall one, Ivemay, run after him, and talk to him; at laſt the little one ſeemed to be rather in a paſſion, and would go to town; then the other man reaſoned with him, and they went down to Ealing common together; and about eight there was a piece of work about a man being taken up, and I went down, and I looked at the man, ſays I this man has got two more with him ſomewhere, for I ſaw them twice this afternoon; we went and ſearched every where, and we met three of Sir Sampſon's men, and the next morning we brought Ivemay to Sir Sampſon's, I had no doubt the next morning but theſe two men which I ſaw, were the ſame I ſaw the afternoon before; they went towards the Cock and Crown.

Jury. What coloured clothes had Ivemay and Honey on?——They had both green coats, and black breeches and ſilk ſtockings: I had ſo much time to obſerve them becauſe I was bled at twelve o'clock, as I was not well, and ſo I did not work for fear of ſetting my arm a bleeding.

EDMUND FRANKLIN ſworn.

A young man and me had been to Ealing, coming back acroſs the field, I ſtopped in the field, and I heard a gentleman halloo, ſtop them, they are highwaymen; I thought it was only a joke, preſently Honey and Yeldham came over the ſtile into the field where I was, they looked very hard at me, and ſeemed very much frightened; the chaiſe ſtood in the road while the two men paſſed me in the field; I ſaw the three priſoners together in Acton about ſeven o'clock, but as the priſoners were on foot, I did not think it was them, two went one way, and one the other way.

JAMES COMYNS ſworn.

I was with the laſt witneſs at Ealing, we had been at work, we were coming home, and getting over the ſtile, the priſoner Honey and Yeldham were coming over the ſtile, and Mr. Taylor hallooing, ſtop them, ſtop them, they are highwaymen; I ſtood ſtill, and Ivemay fell down, and the priſoner Yeldham ſaid, if any man offered to ſtop him there was death for them.

Did he produce any thing?——No, his hand was in his pocket; Ivemay was about twenty yards behind, and he did not chuſe to come that way, and he ran off the other way; I am ſure theſe are the two men.

——— SHALLARD ſworn.

I belong to the Office in Bow-ſtreet, we went after the priſoners, me and Townſend, and two more, and a gentleman that was robbed, on another robbery; we took Honey and Yeldam, and I put my hand in Honey's pocket and took out this piſtol, and this watch from his breeches fob; I ſtopped them at Hyde-Park corner, they were coming into London.

(The watch ſhewn to the proſecutor.)

This is my watch, I do not know the maker's name, but I can ſwear to the watch, becauſe here is ſome of the enamel off at the figure ſix; theſe ſeals have been mine for ſome years, one of them has my cypher.

Court to Shallard. Is the watch in the ſame condition now?——Yes.

JOHN TOWNSEND ſworn.

I went with Shallard, information came down to Bow-ſtreet; and me and Shallard, and ſome more of us went in a coach, and juſt at Hyde-Park corner I was talking to the turnpike man, and I heard a gentleman ſay, theſe are the men that robbed me; I took Yeldham, and in his right hand coat pocket I found this piſtol loaded with a ball; I ſearched him further, and found twenty-four ſhillings in ſilver; I believe the piſtols are fellows.

Priſoner Ivemay. I leave it to my counſel.

Priſoner Honey. I reſt intirely on your Lordſhip's mercy.

GOVERNOR

GOVERNOR PINFOLD ſworn.

The priſoner Samuel Yeldham lived with me ſome time, about four years ago, he behaved remarkable well for fidelity and honeſty.

REGINALD POOLE CARY Eſq; ſworn.

The priſoner Yeldham was my ſervant ſix months, he quitted my ſervice the firſt of February laſt; during the time he lived with me, he was perfectly honeſt and ſober in every reſpect, I never had any reaſon to find fault with him, and it was owing to him alone that I diſcovered ſome diſorderly proceedings in my own houſe, he of his own accord gave me information.

The priſoner Yeldham called three witneſſes who all gave him a very good character.

The priſoner Ivemay called three witneſſes to his character.

ALL THREE GUILTY Death.

Priſoner Honey. Mr. Gray, for God's ſake recommend us to mercy.

The Proſecutor humbly recommended the Priſoners to his Majeſty's mercy.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

581. PETER SHAW was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 4th day of April laſt, one gold watch chain, value 50s. the property of Edwin Francis Stanhope, Eſq; in his dwelling houſe.

A ſecond Count, For feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 9th of April laſt, two gold ſnuff-boxes, value 40l. one enamelled watch, value 5l., 5s. one gold diſh, value 4l. one ſilver watch, value 40s. one other watch with the inſide caſe made of metal, and the outſide caſe made of ſhagreen, value 20s. one other metal watch in a ſhagreen caſe, value 30s. one other metal watch in a ſhagreen caſe, value 30s. one other metal watch in a ſhagreen caſe, value 30s. and one caſe of inſtruments mounted with ſilver in a black ſhagreen caſe, value 40s. the property of the ſaid Edwin Francis Stanhope, Eſq; in his dwelling houſe.

HENRY BAKER ſworn.

I am a ſilverſmith, in King's-ſtreet, Weſtminſter; I know the priſoner very well, he applied to me to diſpoſe of ſome property on the 4th of April, it was a gold watch chain, this is what I bought of him, at the rate of three pounds ten ſhilling an ounce, I believe it came to near three pounds.

Court. How much did you give him for it?——Above fifty ſhillings, he applied to me afterwards, on Wedneſday the 6th with ſome gold and ſilver coins, and I ſuſpected him, and I gave information to Mr. R. Abington, a Juſtice of peace, in King's-ſtreet, Weſtminſter; he was apprehended in conſequence of that information on Saturday the 9th, he was then I believe ſervant to Mr. Stanhope, he was apprehended in Tothill-ſtreet, at the ſign of the Angel.

Was any thing found upon him?——A key, a few halfpence, and a watch.

Court. Did you know this man before?——Yes.

How long before?—About two months.

Had he before brought any thing to ſell at your ſhop?——Nothing of any conſequence, I did not know he was in ſervice at that time, he told me the chain was left him by his father.

EDWIN FRANCIS STANHOPE, Eſq; ſworn.

This chain is my property.

When had you laſt ſeen it, Sir?——I cannot ſay.

How long had he been in your ſervice?——About a fortnight, this chain lay in a little box, made on purpoſe to hold various things of that ſort, in a receſs within my bureau in the upper drawer in my dreſſing room.

Who had the key?——I had the key, which he ſaid, he took once, I can ſwear to this chain by a very particular mark, it was a watch-chain of my wife's, and I made it for myself, it is much ſhorter than any other of the kind, I have no doubt of its being mine, it is gold.

Was your bureau kept conſtantly locked?—Generally, I did not miſs this chain till it was brought to me.

Can you ſay whether you had ſeen this chain after he came into your ſervice?—I believe I have ſeen it in that place where it lay, but had not taken it out.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. Had not you a good character with this man, Sir?—An extraordinary good one, better than I ever had before, from a Mr. Moore, whom I believe to be a very reſpectable gentleman, though I do not know him.

PATRICK M'MANUS ſworn.

The things that are in here, I got at the priſoner's lodgings, where his wife lived.

How do you know they were his lodgings?——His wife was in the room, and ſome of the things were found upon her, which Mr. Stanhope owned afterwards; and theſe things were in a cheſt in the room, and when the priſoner came home I found the key in his pocket which opened it, I unlocked the cheſt with the key, this was on the 9th at night; I ſuppoſe we had been three quarters of an hour in the houſe, before the priſoner came home. (Three gold ſnuff boxes, and a gold diſh depoſed to.) Theſe things lay on a bureau in the room, but not in the bureau, theſe watches were all found in his cheſt, and all going. (A caſe of inſtruments depoſed to.) I took the priſoner into cuſtody he ſigned a confeſſion.

Court. Were any promiſes made him?

Sir Sampſon. There was not the leaſt promiſe made in the world, nor any threats.

Court. Swear.

Sir SAMPSON WRIGHT ſworn.

Was that confeſſion made before you?—Yes.

Was it free and voluntary?—Yes.

No promiſes or threats?—Not the leaſt in the world.

When was it?——It was on Sunday morning the 10th of April, it is nothing more than the examination that we are directed by the ſtatute to take.

(Read.)

"Signed Peter Shaw. The examination "of Peter Shaw, &c. taken before me Sir "Sampſon Wright, Knt. one of his Ma- "jeſty's Juſtices, this 10th day of April, "1785, who confeſſes that on Sunday the "3d day of this inſtant April, he this ex- "aminant, ſtole out of the book-caſe "in the dreſſing room, the medals and "coins now produced and ſeveral others, "and the gold watch chain which he ſold "to Mr. Baker, at two different times, that "for the firſt quantity he received twenty- "pounds, and for the ſecond quantity he "received ten pounds and one ſhilling; and "that he ſtole out of the book-caſe while it "was on fire two gold watches, and the "ſeals, rings, and medals now produced."

Priſoner. I have nothing more to ſay than what I have ſaid, I ſubmit to your Lordſhip's mercy.

Mr. Garrow. I cannot carry his character any further than what Mr. Stanhope has ſaid of him, but here is a gentleman who has the goodneſs to ſpeak for him.

RICHARD BURKE, Eſq; ſworn.

The priſoner lived five or ſix months with my brother Mr. Edmund Burke, I did not lay in the houſe, but I dined and ſupped there almoſt every day; he was a remarkable good ſervant, and attentive, I had no reaſon to doubt his honeſty then.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

519. GEORGE PARTRIDGE and MARY GREENWOOD were indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Adam Mills on the King's-highway, on the 9th of April laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from from his perſon and againſt his will, one cotton gown, value 10s. one pair of cotton ſtockings, value 1s. a linen handkerchief value 1s. the property of the ſaid Adam.

ADAM MILLS ſworn.

On the ninth of April laſt, at paſt eleven at night, I was going towards Biſhop Bonner's, at Bethnal Green where I live, and by Shoreditch church, I met two women, they aſked me to give them ſomething to drink, with perſuaſion, I ſaid, I would, and I went with them to a private houſe in Kingſland-road, I gave them a ſhilling, one went out to fetch the liquor as I ſuppoſed, and returned in about ten minutes, and ſaid, there was ſomebody at the door, ſhe would ſee who it was, upon that ſhe went to the door with a candle, and the candle was knocked out, and in came three or four more, I dare ſay by the ſound, there was ſix or ſeven.

Were they all women that came in, or men?——I am ſure I heard three men's voices, they came round me, with their hands on my pocket, and took from me a ten pound bank note, I believe the number on the bank-note was 4,400, and ſeven guineas in gold, and ſome ſilver, about fifteen ſhillings, but I cannot be ſure to the quantity of ſilver, and a bad ſixpence.

Court. What are you?——I am a publican; I had advertiſed that very week a premium for any body that had intereſt to procure a place in the Cuſtom-houſe, that day I was to lodge half of thirty guineas in Henry Gill's, Eſq; hands belonging to the long room at the Cuſtom-houſe, and to depoſit the other fifteen guineas, when I was appointed; they came all round me, and took this from me; I run after the people and took one woman, and was taking her to the watch-houſe, when this man and woman came after me, and ſaid, I was no conſtable, and I ſhould not take her to the watch houſe; I received a violent blow on the ſide, and on that I let the woman go that I had, I had a bundle under my left arm, which contained a gown, the pattern of this which I produce, a pair of ſtockings and a linen handkerchief, they took the woman from me, and after about twenty yards this man and two women returned, and ſaid, d—mn your eyes, you bloody b—gg—r! if you do not give us this bundle, we will cut your bloody melt out; I then received a hard blow on my knee, which has been very black, I then let the bundle go, and another woman run away with it, it was a ſtar-light and moon-light night; I had never ſeen the priſoner Partridge before, as ſoon as the bundle was gone I held the priſoner Partridge by the collar of his ſhirt, and ſome people came round, and they were taken to the watch-houſe, and the woman came to the door, and the conſtable ſtopt her, I went with another, and in an alley in Kingſland-road, called Blunderbuſs-court, we found the things.

Court. Did you recover your money?——There was a bad ſixpence found on the table under the pan, and I believe it to be the ſame, but I cannot ſwear; the bank-note was never found.

Was you ſober?——I had only drank three pints of porter ſince eight o'clock.

Was you perfectly ſober?——As much as I am now.

SAMUEL HARPER ſworn.

The two priſoners were brought to me by the proſecutor, who ſaid he had been robbed of eighteen pounds and a bundle; he ſaid, the priſoner Partridge took the bundle from under his arm, I went to the room of another perſon, and the bundle was in her room, they all live in one court.

What was that girl's name?—Upon my word I forget, her name was Rachel, he poſitively ſaid, they pulled the bundle from under his arm, and uſed him very ill beſides.

PRISONER PARTRIDGE'S DEFENCE.

I was ſitting in my room, I went out, and the proſecutor had hold of this woman, I ſaid to the woman, if you are innocent go to the watch-houſe, I walked after, and in in about five minutes the man gave charge of me.

ELIZABETH EAST ſworn.

I live in Blunderbuſs-court, Kingſland-road, I rent a room there, the priſoner Partridge lives in the ſame place where I live, I have known him a twelvemonth, the other priſoner lives with him, there were two young women that lodged in the room over my head, and this young man came up with them, not the priſoner at the bar, I heard a gentleman ſlip, and I ſaw a gentleman with his breeches unbuttoned before, and his ſhirt hanging out, which made me take the more notice of him, he had no bundle, I was mending my huſband's ſhirt for him to go to work in, I heard the girls go down ſtairs, the man works with his father at times, but he has been very ill for three months.

Jury to Proſecutor. Did the woman aid and aſſiſt the man in taking the bundle from you?—Yes, and made uſe of worſe imprecations than the man did.

BOTH GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron PERRYN.

---

520. WILLIAM M'GINNIS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 3d day of May, one metal watch in a ſhagreen caſe, value 40s. a ſteel chain, value 6d. a ſeal, value 2d. a key, value 1d. the property of William Barrow, privily from his perſon.

WILLIAM BARROW ſworn.

On Thurſday the 3d of this month, I loſt my watch, between two and three in the afternoon, in Barbican; I was juſt come from the yard at Langhorn's, where the balloon was, I got into a croud, and was hurried along, and a perſon ſaid, a boy has got your watch, and he is here; I looked round; ſays he, that is the boy; he dropped the watch, and I took it off the ground myſelf; he ſecured the boy, he ſaid the boy had the watch in his hand; I looked, and the boy dropped the watch at his feet; the priſoner was then cloſe beſide me, I thought I ſaw the watch in his hand.

Are you ſure you did?—I did, and he dropped it immediately.

Could you be ſure it dropped from the priſoner's hand?—Yes, he was cloſe behind me, I ſaw the watch drop, and I was afraid it would be broke; I got it again, I took it up myſelf.

Did you feel him take it?—No, it is my watch.

(The watch produced by John Fletcher the Conſtable.)

It has been in my poſſeſſion ever ſince; he was taken into cuſtody, he denied knowing any thing of it.

Are you quite ſure it was his hand you ſaw it drop from?—I am very clear in it.

ROBERT LEE ſworn.

I was in Barbican on this day, I ſaw the proſecutor in a great mob, and I looked amongſt them, and I ſaw the lad at the bar take a watch out of this gentleman's pocket; I ſeized him, and told the proſecutor of it; the priſoner dropped the watch, which the proſecutor picked up.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was going through Barbican, and there was a great mob of people; I went to ſee the balloon, like others, and got into the crowd; and this gentleman came and ſaid I had the watch; immediately my foot ſlipped, and I fell down, and the gentleman picked up the watch before me, and ſaid I took it.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing, but not privately.

Tranſported for fourteen years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

521. ABRA-

521. ABRAHAM GODIN, alias GORDON, THOMAS GOLDFINCH, and SAMUEL ROBERTS, were indicted for that they, on the 15th of April laſt, about the hour of ten in the night, in the pariſh of St. Mary, Stratford, Bow, ſix pieces of cotton cloth called callico, containing 168 yards, value 16l. 16s. the property of Richard Adams and Samuel Lay, then laid and expoſed to be bleached in their ground uſed by them, feloniouſly did ſteal, take, and carry away.

JOHN KIRMON ſworn.

I am watchman to the bleaching-grounds belonging to Mr. Richard Adams and Samuel Lay, I went round the grounds once or twice, and about ten at night I went round again, and I miſſed what we call a whole length of printed Britiſh callico; a length is ſix pieces: when I went round the firſt and ſecond time they were all there, and they were there much about ten; and the third time I went round they were gone; when I found the piece gone, I alarmed the yard watchman, and he alarmed my maſter and the reſt, and they went in purſuit of them; my maſters are quakers; I then came back to the field, for fear they ſhould take more; and the next morning the piece of callico was brought to my maſter's houſe.

JOSEPH BRIGG ſworn.

I am the yard watchman, I alarmed my maſters, and they alarmed the ſervants about the place, we went in purſuit, and took the priſoner Roberts at a place called White-poſt-lane, about half a mile from the bleaching ground, between the hours of two and three, there were two more with him; we were laying in wait for them; I picked up this bundle, and brought it into my maſter's ground, it contained one piece, it is here.

THOMAS CROP ſworn.

I lay in wait till between two and three, and the priſoner Abraham Gordon, Thomas Goldfinch, and Samuel Roberts came; Gordon came over the ſtile firſt, Roberts next; they had each a bundle on their heads, they diſcovered us, and threw their bundles down. It was getting towards morning, I could diſtinguiſh their faces; I knew one of them before; Gordon had worked in the trade; Gordon and Goldfinch ran up Marſh-lane, and eſcaped for that time, Roberts took over the Marſh, he jumped into a ditch, and I ſecured him; the pieces were wet from the bleaching-ground; they were afterwards opened in my preſence, and they contained two pieces, in a blue apron, two pieces in a brown bag, and one piece in a reddiſh handkerchief, and another piece in a black handkerchief; Gordon had the bag, Goldfinch had the blue apron, and Roberts had the two handkerchiefs, one of the handkerchiefs was found afterwards; I took Roberts, and the others were taken from the information of Roberts; Gordon had worked at our ground, but not then.

Court. Are you ſure of the priſoners? ——Yes.

JOHN THORNTON ſworn.

I laid in wait for theſe men; my maſters are callico-printers, this is their bleaching-ground; I ſaw Gordon firſt come over the ſtile, Goldfinch next, and then Roberts, they had bundles on their heads, when they came within twenty yards they obſerved us, they pitched their bundles and ran off; I could ſwear to Gordon nine yards off; I have no doubt of their being the perſons, all three; I picked up the bundles, and carried them home in this apron to Meſſrs Adams and Co. there was a piece in each handkerchief; I'll ſwear to the piece, I marked them with a private mark, the initials of my name.

Were there goods of this ſort loſt or miſſed from the bleaching-grounds on this night.

Yes, Sir, there were; they were all wet and dirty when I found them, here is a mark 3338.

WILLIAM BARRINGEN ſworn.

Here is the Exciſe-Office book, here is the correſponding mark on the piece; there are ſix different numbers on the ſix different pieces of each, they are running numbers, here is 3365, 3416, 3368.

Mr. Baron Perryn. Theſe numbers you have ſpoken of, and which are inſerted in that book, might not they apply to other pieces of cloth, as well as thoſe?—No, Sir, we have officers that ſurvey this work, and no others.

Court to Kirmon. Theſe are the very ſort of callicoes?——The very ſame.

PRISONER ROBERTS's DEFENCE.

I have nothing to ſay.

Priſoner Gordon. I know nothing of it, I was taken out of bed the next morning as innocent as a child.

Priſoner Goldfinch. I am quite innocent.

ALL THREE GUILTY, Death.

N. B. The Court afterwards mitigated their puniſhment to tranſportation for fourteen years. See Stat. 18 Geo. II. c. 27.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

522. JOSEPH THOMPSON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 11th of December laſt, three buſhels of coals, value 3s. one iron trevet, value 10d. one hanging iron, value 6d. five pounds weight of tallow candles, value 3s. two linen glaſs cloths, value one ſhilling, two linen knife cloths, value 6d. the property of Thomas Iſherwood, Eſq.

And SARAH TONKS was indicted for feloniouſly receiving the ſame, knowing them to be ſtolen.

The Indictment opened by Mr. Garrow, and the Caſe by Mr. Silveſter.

JANE MACKALL ſworn.

(Examined by Mr. Garrow.)

I am at preſent in the Hoſpital with a lame foot, I did formerly live at Highgate, at Mr. Ray's academy; I know the two priſoners, I know the priſoner Sarah Tonks uſed to go down on the Sunday morning when Mr. Iſherwood was gone to church, and bring up the coals covered under cabbage-leaves, and the other priſoner he gave her a trevet, an iron hanger, and ſome candles; I cannot ſay particularly the quantity, becauſe ſhe had candles all the winter, ſhe never bought any, but I have ſeen a quantity, to the amount together of about four or five pounds.

Court. Who took the candles?—This woman.

Who gave them to her?—Sarah Slim.

What did the priſoner Thompſon do?—He gave her empty bottles to ſell; Thompſon gave a trevet and a holder to one Webb. Thompſon was a ſervant in the houſe at that time, he was footman; the priſoner Tonks lived with a lady a little way off; he took it out of Mr. Iſherwood's houſe, and carried it over to Sarah Tonks; I ſaw him take it out, it hung up in the back kitchen, I was at Mrs. Tonks's, and the priſoner came before me, and laid down the trevet and the iron holder, by the fire ſide.

Court. How ſoon after was it you ſaw it at Tonks's?—I followed him up.

Did he know you was preſent when it was taken?——Yes, he took it before me, and he laid it down in my preſence; Mrs. Tonks was not at home; Mrs. Tonks deſired me to bring it away four or five days before, but I would not; ſhe ſaid that the ſervant had promiſed to give it her.

What capacity was you in at that time?——My maſter brought me a letter to go to St. Thomas's Hoſpital, and, as I was out of place, I was at Tonks's houſe.

Mr. Knowles, Priſoner's Councel. Pray, this priſoner made a charge againſt you formerly, did he not?——Not that I know of.

Was not you taken up upon that charge?——Yes, Sir, but I went home.

Was not there an advertiſement againſt you in the public papers for a robbery?—I do not know that there was.

Was not you taken up in conſequence of ſome charge againſt you?——I was.

Was that before or after theſe things were ſtolen?——It was after.

Did

Did you ever mention any thing of this matter before you was taken up to Mr. Isherwood?——No, I never did.

Why not, you knew it very well?——Yes, I did.

Then do not you look upon yourself a great deal worse than him?——I cannot say I am in the right of it; I told Mrs. Tonks many a time, that I would tell.

What was you charged with taking?—A great many things.

Were not there three black stuff petticoats?——No.

Was there not a green petticoat?—No.

Had not some of those petticoats the misfortune to be on your person at the time they were discovered?

Mr. Garrow. That is not a competent question.

Mr. Knowles. Did not you give up some of these things that were charged with being stolen?

Mr. Garrow. I must stop this.

Court. You cannot certainly go into the particulars of another robbery.

Mr. Knowles. A little after you were so taken up on this business, you thought proper to write a letter to Mr. Isherwood?——Yes, I did.

THOMAS ISHERWOOD, Esq; sworn.

I live at Highgate, the prisoner Thompson was my footman.

What property did you lose?——I lost an iron trevet and an hanging iron, I lost coals and candles, and other things, as I have been told by the girl; I have seen what is supposed to be my property, but I cannot swear to it; I cannot swear to the glass cloths, nor the knife cloths.

JOHN WEBB sworn.

I live at Highgate; I know the two prisoners, but I know no harm of them; I know Thompson by working for Mr. Isherwood.

Do you know of any property of Mr. Isherwood's being taken last sessions?—No, I do not; I was here last sessions, and tried for it myself, and acquitted; I never received any thing from him.

Mr. Knowles. You were at Mr. Isherwood's house after this robbery was supposed to be committed?——Yes.

Have not you said that you saw this hanging iron and trevet, after the time it was said to be stolen?——Yes, and I did not see the things after this man had quitted the place.

JOSEPH BURGESS sworn.

I live at Highgate; I know nothing but about a few cinders.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I leave it to my Counsel, I never gave any thing away in my life.

PRISONER TONKS's DEFENCE.

I leave it to my Counsel.

JOHN BRIDGE sworn.

I have known Thompson about a year and ten months, he deserves a good character; he lived under butler with me at Sir John Taylor's, that was the winter before last; he had a very good character from Sir Edward Dearing, to Sir John Taylor; he was always a good servant; I suppose the young man had a thousand or two thousand pounds worth in his possession every day.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

523. MARY CHAMBERS was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 4th of March last, twenty shillings in monies numbered, the monies of Thomas Miller.

MARY MILLER sworn.

On the 1st of March the prisoner came to my house, the Wheat-Sheaf, in Drury-lane, and ordered two pots of beer and change for a guinea, in two clean pots, and and not ſeeing the woman's face, I aſked her what ſhe wanted, ſhe ſaid, two pots of beer and change for a guinea, to Mr Cobham's, a cuſtomer of ours in Stewart's-rents; I gave the boy the change, and in about five minutes the boy brought me a counterfeit guinea, I ſent by the boy twenty one ſhillings, and ſixpenny worth of halfpence, I never ſaw the priſoner before, I am ſure ſhe is the ſame perſon that made application for the beer, and the change.

(The guinea handed up.)

Mr. Garrow Priſoner's Council. Mrs. Miller, you ſaid, you did not ſee the woman's face?——Not the firſt time, I aſked her twice over what ſhe wanted, but I ſaw her face perfectly well the ſecond time of aſking, ſhe had a bonnet on, I never ſaw her before, I cannot be poſitive to her cloak, but I think it was a light coloured one.

This woman was committed for fraud at firſt, and afterwards for felony, and has now ſurrendered?—Yes.

BENJAMIN HALLOWELL ſworn.

Court. How old are you?—Turned of fourteen; I am ſervant to Mr. Miller I go out with beer; on Tueſday the fourth of March, the priſoner came and ordered two pots of beer and change for a guinea, I heard her and ſaw her, I was to carry two pots of beer to Mr. Cobham's, in Stewart's Rents; the priſoner had left the houſe before, and at the top of Stewart's-rents, ſhe met me and took the two pots of beer, and the change from me.

Are you ſure it is the ſame perſon that is now at the bar that received the change, and the beer from you?——Yes.

Had you ever ſeen her before?—Never.

What time was it?—Between nine and ten at night.

Was it a dark or a light night?—It was quite dark.

Was it light enough for you to diſtinguiſh the features of the priſoner at the bar ſo as to know her again?——Yes, Sir, it was.

Did ſhe give you that guinea?——Yes, I took the guinea to the lamp afterwards, I hallooed out ſtop that woman! and ſhe ſtopped herſelf; I then ſaid, either give me another guinea or give me the ſilver back; ſays ſhe, are you ſure it is me, yes, ſays I, I am; then ſays ſhe, I will go to your maſter, inſtead of which ſhe run away; the girl from the Horſe and Groom, a public houſe, came and told us where ſhe lived, and I went to the houſe in Wild-ſtreet, No. 5, where I found her; ſhe then took and clapped her foot againſt the door, and ſaid, can you ſwear to my dreſs, ſhe had a bonnet and a long dark Bath cloak on, I am ſure; with that ſhe brought out a red cloak, which ſhe has on now, ſhe was got into the houſe, and had a young child in her arms.

Court. Then ſhe had no cloak on at the time of this converſation?——No, none at all, but when I ſaid her dreſs was a brown one, ſhe brought out a red one, ſhe was brought up to our houſe, and my miſtreſs ſent for a runner, and ſhe was committed.

Are you ſure the priſoner at the bar was the perſon with whom you had all theſe tranſactions?—It is the perſon, Sir, I am quite confident.

Mr. Garrow. Boy, do you know what an oath is?—Sir, I never took but two or three.

Do you know what an oath means?——No, Sir.

Do you know the nature of an oath?—I ſuppoſe, if ſo be you tell a lie in what you are ſaying, you can think of going no where but to hell.

Were this woman's apartments ſearched?—Yes, they were the next morning.

Was her perſon ſearched?—Yes.

What money was found on her?—None, but her huſband came with her half way up Poppin's-court?

What money was found upon her?—A ſixpence, and two or three halfpence.

Do you remember her telling you her name was Chambers, and that ſhe lived at No. 5?—No.

Did

Did not you ſay to her at firſt, you did not know it was her?—No.

Have you never ſaid ſo?—No.

No brown cloak was found, was it dark brown?—Yes.

Very dark?——Yes.

As dark as your own coat?—Yes.

You obſerved the cloak particularly?—Yes, I was ſtanding at the window of the bar, and her ſide was towards me.

WILLIAM BAILEY ſworn.

I was ſtanding at the bar window when the priſoner came to order the beer; I live within three doors, I generally go there, I ſaw her order two pots of beer to Mr. Cobham's, and change for a guinea, I am ſure it was the ſame lady.

What was her dreſs?—She had a brown or drab colour cloth coat, and a bonnet.

Mr. Garrow. They are very diſtinguiſhable colours?——People give them names according to their own fancy.

Court. Had you ever ſeen the priſoner at the bar before?—No, I never did.

Mr. Garrow. Do you call that coat you have on a brown one?—I call it a drab colour, ſome people call it a brown.

Do you call the boy's coat a drab?—It is all fancy.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I never was in the woman's houſe in all my life, I know nobody in Stewart's-rents, I do not know the ſign, I never had a brown cloak on in my life; I was going down Stewart's-rents, that boy was crying out ſtop, miſtreſs! I turned back, and ſaid, do you want me, he ſaid, no, he did not what he wanted, it was very froſty; he ſaid, a woman had taken change for a guinea, there was immediately a mob of people; I ſaid how could you be ſo fooliſh? I hope you do not think it was me, ſays he, I do not know whether it is or no; I ſaid, to the woman at the Horſe and Groom, ſays I, my name is Chambers, I live at No. 5, in Wild-ſtreet; I went home and told my huſband the circumſtance, preſently there came a knock at the door, the boy came in, and ſaid, I was the woman, he ſaid, the woman had a long brown cloak, I immediately ſhewed him this cloak that I have on, I have witneſſes to prove that I went out with this cloak, and came in with this cloak; I went to Mrs. Miller's houſe, ſhe doubled her hand, and ſaid, give me a guinea you wretch, or elſe I will proſecute you; and a conſtable was called, and the runner ſaid to me, you bitch, have you one pocket or two? they ſearched me, and found ſixpence and ſome halfpence; immediately my huſband came in, they ſeized him, ſearched him, and took us both to the round houſe in Covent Garden, there we were till the next morning, and the Juſtice diſcharged my huſband; then Mr. Miller came and ſwore that piece of money was delivered him by the boy, and that it had never been out of his poſſeſſion, now Mrs. Miller had this piece in her pocket, turned out her money, and he damned her, and ſaid, why did not ſhe keep it by itſelf.

(The piece of money produced.)

Proſecutrix. It has been in my bureau.

Boy. It is the ſame piece I delivered to Mrs. Miller.

Mrs. Miller. I put it in my pocket among my ſilver, I never keep my gold and ſilver together, it never has been out of my poſſeſſion and my huſband's.

Did your huſband ever carry it to Bow-ſtreet?—He did not, he was with me.

When had your huſband it?——Out of my hand into his, to give it to the Juſtice, in my ſight.

SARAH COLE ſworn.

I live at No. 15, in Wych-ſtreet, I know the priſoner; on the evening of the 4th of March, I ſaw her at my own houſe, ſhe came in about five, and drank tea with me, and ſtaid till about ſeven or ſometime after, ſhe had on a black crape gown, a ſcarlet cloak with brown ſkin, a white apron, and a black bonnet, that is the ſame cloak ſhe has has on now, I am ſure ſhe had no brown Bath cloak on; I have known her for fourteen years, I never heard nor ſaw any thing amiſs of her in my life.

ANN BROOKES ſworn.

I live in Little Wild-ſtreet, within four doors of the priſoner, I then lived in the ſame houſe, I ſaw her when ſhe went out, ſhe deſired me to take care of the place whilſt ſhe was gone, that ſhe ſhould not be long; I ſtaid there till ſhe came in, ſhe had a red cloak with a brown ſkin, and a black gown, it is the very ſame cloak ſhe has on now, I was there when the boy came to the houſe, that is the cloak ſhe produced, ſhe has not a brown cloak to my knowledge, I have known her about a twelvemonth, ſhe has a very good character.

MARGARET JONES ſworn.

I have known the priſoner about ten or eleven years, a very good character, always behaved very honeſtly and truly, I ſaw her the latter end of February, and the beginning of March, ſhe wore a red cloak or a black ſilk one, I never knew her wear a brown Bath cloak in my life.

CHARLOTTE BATES ſworn.

I was coming out of a houſe where I lodge in Stewart's-rents, I obſerved Mr. Miller's boy come down the rents, with two pots of beer in his hands, and he called out ſtop that woman, I ſaw that woman before with a red cloak with a black ſkin, and a black bonnet; ſhe ſaid, my dear, do you call me, he ſaid, yes, you are the woman that has given me the bad guinea, and the woman ſaid, are you ſure it is me, yes, ſay he, I think it is you, you are ſomething like the woman that came in and ordered two pots of beer; ſhe then immediately ſaid, ſhe would ſuffer herſelf to be ſearched, ſhe was ſtopped at the Horſe and Groom, at the corner; ſhe ſaid, I will go in and be ſearched, for I have no ſuch change as change for a guinea; ſhe ſaid, ſhe had been out to tea that afternoon, ſhe ſaid, I live at No. 5, in Little Wild-ſtreet, and ſhe was afterwards found at the houſe, ſhe ſaid, her name was Chambers; I am ſure ſhe was in a red cloak, and the reſt of her dreſs as I have deſcribed it.

Jury. Was you in Court when the priſoner gave her defence?—No, Sir, I have been called in ſince.

Mr. Garrow. Did you know the priſoner before?——No.

DIANA COTTON ſworn.

I have known her ten years, her character has been exceeding good, I have truſted her with a hundred pounds in books and other value, when I have been going out of town, and I would if ſhe was acquitted this minute.

The priſoner called another witneſs who gave her a very good character.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron PERRYN.

---

524. JOSEPH BROWN was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Elizabeth Goddin, about the hour of eight in the night on the 12th of April laſt, and feloniouſly ſtealing therein, one pair of ſilver candleſticks, value 3l. three ſilver ſpoons, value 30s. two forks, value 20s. ten tea ſpoons, value 20s. one ſilver ſtrainer, value 2s. one glaſs bottle of Madeira wine, value 3s. one other glaſs bottle of wine, value 2s. five linen handkerchiefs, 2s. two black ſilk cloaks, value 6s. three pair of ſilk ſtockings, value 3s. five pair of cotton ſtockings, value 3s. one tin canniſter, value 3d. and one ounce weight of green tea, value 12d. her property.

(The witneſſes examined apart at the Priſoner's requeſt.)

REBECCA

REBECCA WALLIS ſworn.

I live with Mrs. Goddin, at Hampton and in town alſo, and have done ſo upwards of fourteen years, Mrs. Goddin and her family left her houſe for the winter ſeaſon, on Wedneſday the 22d of December, 1784, and on the alarm of a robbery at the next door, I went there on the 21ſt of January, 1785; I then put the witneſs Thomas Cox, into the houſe, to lay in the houſe, and take care of it; I did not go down again as every thing remained quiet, till Tueſday the 12th of April, when I heard that the houſe was broke open; Mrs. Goddin uſed to return to Hampton in April, and leave it in December.

THOMAS COX ſworn.

I am a day labouring lad, my father and mother live oppoſite to this houſe, I never was employed there before; Mrs. Wallis, when ſhe came down to the houſe, deſired me to go and ſleep in the houſe, till they came to take care of it.

Court. Did you lay by yourſelf?——I had a little dog that laid with me, I laid below ſtairs in the kitchen, and I was going home to bed on the 12th of April as uſual, it muſt be between eight and nine, it was mooniſh light.

Court. Was there any remains of daylight?——No; there is a gate to the garden, about ten or a dozen yards from the houſe, it is a ſpring lock, I had the key with me, when I came there I found it bolted within ſide; then I went over directly to my father's houſe, and told him the gate was bolted, and he ſaid, are you ſure of that? I ſaid, yes; then he ſaid, ſtop a bit, I will get a lanthorn and go with you, ſo he went with me and took a lanthorn, and I got over the wall by the gate, and unbolted the garden gate, and let my father who had the lanthorn, and the dog in; the dog went directly into the ſhrubbery, where two men lay, and he began barking at them.

What kind of dog was it?——A little tarrier, I ran directly after the dog, and ſaw two men get up from the ſhrubbery and run away, and I run after them, and they jumped over Buſhy Park wall, that adjoins to the garden; I jumped over after them, and the priſoner was the perſon I took, the other man ſtruck me twice, and then run away; I took the priſoner into the firſt public houſe I came to, my father came to my aſſiſtance, and he and I ſecured the priſoner; we took him to the ſign of the Maidenhead, and there I left him with my father, till I fetched the conſtable, I came to the houſe in about twenty minutes afterwards, and it was all torn to pieces, all the drawers were opened, two windows were broke open, and they had ſhoved the bars out of two windows, and had wrenched one off; and the door was unlocked, the kitchen is a little under ground; I found every thing broke open except one door, I could not tell what was ſtole out of the houſe, till Mrs. Wallis came down; the priſoner was ſearched at the Maidenhead as ſoon as the conſtable came, but nothing of Madam Goddin's property was found upon him, at the public houſe he had a ſilver ſpoon found upon him, but that did not belong to Madam Goddin.

When you firſt diſcovered them, were they laying down or ſtanding up?—Laying down on their bellies, I think they muſt be in the houſe as ſoon as it was duſk, by the damage that was done to the houſe; the man at the public houſe went with me directly, and I ſhewed him where he threw ſome things from him, when I had hold of him in the park, he ſtruck me once over my face, and he went to ſtrike me again, and it fell out of his hand; we took two candles with us into Buſhy Park, and there we found this piſtol.

Was it charged?——No, it is the piſtol he ſtruck me with, and there were theſe two black cloaks, and three pair of ſtockings along with it, and theſe picklock keys, and a tea canniſter, and this handkerchief.

(The two black ſilk cloaks depoſed to by Mrs. Wallis, as the property of Mrs. Goddin.)

Mrs. Wallis. I made them, they are about ſix ſhillings value, this canniſter was left left in the closet with the plate that was stole, it is of no value, there is about an ounce of tea in it; here are three pair of silk stockings, value three shillings, and these five pair of cotton stockings are valued two shillings, they are all marked E. G. these three handkerchiefs were found, they are Mrs. Goddin's; the other things have never been heard of since.

Prisoner. Ask him how far it was from the gate to the trees, when he says, he saw me lay down?—It may be pretty near thirty yards, but I did not see him till the dog ran.

How near was you when he got up?—About fourteen yards.

THOMAS KIMBERS sworn.

I am master of the Maidenhead, I found all these things, I was present when they were all picked up.

JOSEPH STOKES sworn.

I was constable, and searched the prisoner, I only found a knife and a spoon about him, he made no confession before the Justice, after he was committed, he desired the Justice to ask Thomas Cox, whether he saw him have any thing, and the Justice told him that did not signify, as they went both over together, and they fell both on their bellies, and they were both up together, the other got away because he had got nobody to stop him.

When the other man ran away, did you observe he had any thing with him?—The way that he ran along we found a bottle of wine.

Court to Rebecca Wallis. An account of this robbery was brought to Mrs. Goddin in town?—Yes, about nine, I went down immediately, when I first came in, I went into the parlour which we call the bow-parlour, the outside shutters of the bow-parlour were broke open, and the bar forced out, I missed nothing out of that parlour; the breakfast closet was left open with china in it, and the other closet they burst open; I missed out of that closet one pair of old fashioned upright silver candlesticks, I valued them only at three guineas, but they may be worth double; I missed three large table spoons, two forks, and ten tea spoons, and a silver strainer.

These together are vastly above the value of forty shillings?——Yes, I was never in the house, nor anybody since we left it; they broke every lock in the house except one, and that they attempted in two places.

How long do you suppose they must be in the house?—I should suppose not much less than an hour.

Prisoner. Ask the witness how far the park was from the house where he took me?—I took him about five yards from the wall, and he dragged me twenty or twenty-five yards, he flung the pistol about thirty yards.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was going over to Kingston, when this man came up to me and his father, and knocked me down.

Court to Cox. You are sure that is the same man that you saw there?—Yes.

Prisoner. It was almost a quarter of a mile from the house when he took me.

Kimbers. The first thing I took up was a bottle of wine, within two yards of the wall, and the other things were dropped within twenty yards.

JOHN COX sworn.

(By desire of the Prisoner.)

After you got in, did you see any man in the garden?—No, my Lord, only my son ran after somebody, and I heard the dog bark, my son got over the wall of the park, and I followed as fast as I could; I got over the wall and I came to him, I ran pretty near three score yards before I came to him, they were both a fighting and scuffling together.

Court to Cox. Your father seems to think it was further.

Cox. I cannot be a judge of the ground.

John Cox. I cannot be exact, I saw the prisoner.

Cox. The man was never out of my sight, only the length of the wall.

Prisoner. I was going home when the man pursued me and caught me.

Was the other man out of ſight when you took hold of him?——The other man ſtarted up as ſoon as I came up the place was was within a few yards of the foot path.

GUILTY of ſtealing goods in the dwelling-houſe, to the amount of above 40s. Death.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

525. JOSEPH STURMEY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 10th of April laſt, one linen ſhirt, value 2s. 6d. one linen ſtock, value 6d. one ſilk handkerchief, value 6d. one linen handkerchief, value 6d. one white quilted waiſtcoat, value 5s. one printed linen ſhawl, value 6d. one pair of worſted ſtockings, value 6d. one pair of leather ſhoes, value 1s. ſeven guineas and a half guinea, and two crown pieces, the property of Edward Stillard, in his dwelling houſe.

EDWARD STILLARD ſworn.

I am a packer, I live in Lime-ſtreet, No. 52; on the 10th of April laſt, the priſoner, who had lived with me three weeks and two days, as a ſervant, and whom I meant to make an apprentice, to learn him my buſineſs, from the recommendation I had of him, went away on Sunday, and on the Monday morning I found he did not come, at which I was very much aſtoniſhed he did not return; on Monday at two o'clock I had occaſion to go to the box where I had put ſome gold; this box is about ſeven foot high, upon a high ſhelf, I kept writings and parchments in it, and I miſſed ſome money from a little box which was within-ſide that larger box; there were ſeven guineas and a half, and two crown pieces; I found a piece of the box broke, it flew open when I took hold of it; I had locked it myſelf; the little box was not locked, but the great one was: the priſoner was taken in the country, with a parcel of linen found upon him.

JOHN POCOCK ſworn.

I keep a ſhop in the Fleet Market, I took the priſoner into my employ, I recommended him to my brother; I went in purſuit of the boy; the boy always told me he was a Shrewſbury lad, and immediately purſued him to Shrewſbury; when I came to Birmingham, I enquired of all the coaches, and I found him at a place called Biſſon, and I found theſe bundles upon him which are in court; he was walking; the boy ſaid nothing then, but afterwards he told me, the money he had laid out in Holborn.

Did you make him any promiſes, if he told you the truth?——None at all, never, there was a gentleman with me in the chaiſe; and when we put him in the chaiſe he had a guinea and eighteen-pence, and ſix-pence in half-pence; he ſaid he had laid out five guineas in Holborn, in buying clothes of a ſaleſman, part of which he had on, and ſome in the country: I aſked him what became of the money he had taken out of the box; then he told me, as I have told you.

JOSEPH THOMPSON ſworn.

This is the bundle of clothes he bought, and ſome of the things of the proſecutor's.

Pocock. When I overtook the priſoner, he had two ſeparate bundles: I think they were ſeparate as they are now.

(The Proſecutor depoſed to the handkerchief.)

I know it by the long time I have had it.

Was it torn ſo then?——No, it was whole then: I know it by the pattern and ſize.

(A ſhirt, and an India handkerchief, with a hole, and marked with an S, near that hole, a ſtock and waiſtcoat, and a child's ſhawl depoſed to.)

I ſaw this in the drawer on Sunday morning.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I found the linen among my own linen, in the ſame room.

The Priſoner called one witneſs to his character.

GUILTY Death.

He was humbly recommended to mercy by the Jury, on account of his youth, being only fourteen.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

526. THOMAS BAKER HOPKINS was indicted for feloniouſly returning from tranſportation, and being found at large on the 18th of April laſt.

(The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of the priſoner.)

The Caſe opened by Mr. Silveſter.

JOSEPH HILL ſworn.

I am clerk to Mr. Partis, ſolicitor to the Poſt-office; this is a copy of the record of the priſoner's conviction, in the year 1782, which I examined with the original record, and it is a true copy; this is Mr. Shelton's hand-writing.

(The record read and examined by the indictment.)

——— LEE ſworn.

I remember the priſoner; I lived ten years with Mr. Akerman; he was tried for robbing the mail upon Finchley Common; he was reſpited for the humanity he ſhewed the boy; he received ſentence in September, 1782, of tranſportation for ſeven years.

Priſoner. Was you preſent when I was convicted for this?——No, I was not, but I know he was convicted, becauſe I frequently locked him in the cells; he was delivered on board the Cenſor hulk on the 11th of January, 1783; I went down with him.

Court. It muſt be proved that the priſoner at the bar was the man that was convicted of this: how many more received the ſame ſentence?——A great many more.

How came you to recollect that?——It was long vacation, and it is the uſual time they receive them.

JOHN LUCY ſworn.

I am a conſtable.

Was you in Court in the year 1782?——No, I was not, I apprehended the priſoner the 18th of April laſt, in Brick-lane, Old-ſtreet; I have known him ſome years.

Priſoner. In what ſituation did you find my apartment when you apprehended me?——He was in bed then, it was between nine and ten; it was a ſcene of induſtry, and there was the appearance of two trades going on.

HENRY LOGAN ſworn.

I had the direction of one of the hulks. I know the priſoner very well, he was in my cuſtody four months, from thence he was put on board the Swift, bound to Africa: I was not on board when he was brought, it appeared by the ſhip's book that he was on board the Cenſor the 12th of January, 1783.

Priſoner. Who delivered me to the Cenſor?——I was not on board the hulk when you came; I ſaw him on board the Swift.

Priſoner. I wiſh to call Mr. Pitt, and Mr. Owen.

JOHN OWEN ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. Akerman; I delivered the priſoner on board, with Mr. Pitt and ſome ſoldiers; but Mr. Lee was not there; but the priſoner is the man, it is impoſſible for a fellow ſervant of mine to be on board a brig with me, without my ſeeing him; he was not on board, Mr. Pitt knows the ſame.

Mr. Silveſter. Lee and you are no longer fellow ſervants?——No.

How many boats full had you?——One barge; every one of us, excepting one who ſtaid to mind the gaol, accompanied him him to the waterſide, that one is dead; Lee went down with us to the waterſide, and only Pitt and me went down to the hulks, beſides ſoldiers; we went with eighty.

Was you preſent at his trial?——Yes, it was for robbing the mail, I cannot recollect the poſtboy's name.

Was you preſent when he received ſentence?——I was.

ROBERT MATTHEWS ſworn.

I have known him three years and an half; when the man came from on board the ſhip, he came to me; he has behaved very well; I employed him to learn my branch of buſineſs, which is in the watch way; he was with me ſix or ſeven months after I learnt him his buſineſs; here are my maſters to prove that he has worked for them ſiever nce.

JOHN DALTON ſworn.

I am a watch-maker; the priſoner has worked for me twelve months; a very induſtrious man, I never ſent to him in my life that I found him out; and I always could depend on my work according to his promiſe.

JOHN LUCAS ſworn.

I am a watch-movement maker; about this time twelvemonth his wife came in to aſk for work at our houſe, and I gave him twelve or eighteen ſhillings worth of work, I always had the work when I ſent for it; I never ſaw him but once before, the woman always came.

ADAM MARTIN ſworn.

I am a mathematical inſtrument maker; I have known the priſoner upwards of fifteen months, and he has had ten or twenty pounds worth of work in his room; he was ſober and induſtrious.

WILLIAM WOODCHAFE ſworn.

He worked for me ſeven years before the unhappy affair; he ſent for me after he was liberated, to know if I would have any thing to do with him; I heard that he worked very honeſt and induſtrious in the watch making branch; I ſent him a parcel of work, which he had in his room at the time he was taken; I went into his room, and I never ſaw ſuch a ſcene of induſtry in my life: I have that opinion of him, that if he was liberated, I would take him into my employ, as before; he was my foreman.

JOSEPH BUTLER ſworn.

About twelve months ago the priſoner came to me, and aſked me for a little work; I ſaid, I am very ſorry to ſee you now, but I will give you all my out-door work, and he has worked for me this twelvemonth, and he behaved very honeſt and juſt.

EDWARD BLUNT ſworn.

I am a watch-maker; I have known the priſoner better than a twelve-month, a very hard-working induſtrious man; I have been frequently in his room.

ELIZABETH WEBB ſworn.

I have known him five months, he lived at my houſe; I never ſaw anything but honeſty and induſtry.

Court to Priſoner. Do you call anybody elſe?——Nobody elſe, my Lord; I return you many thanks for hearing theſe; I beg to ſpeak before you deliver the charge. I own myſelf, my Lord, to be the perſon that was found at large; but through a good character, I hope you will take it into conſideration, and ſhew me mercy: ſince I have made my eſcape, I applied to a friend, Mr. Matthews, and learned the buſineſs, and in the courſe of ſeven weeks I found I could earn a living; he recommended me to Mr. Dalton; when the watch buſineſs was ſlack, I applied to Mr. Woodchafe, and I did at different times work at this buſineſs alſo; and through the mercy and favour that I hope the divine goodneſs will lead you to ſhew to me, I truſt I ſhall find favour.

GUILTY, Death.

Jury. We humbly recommend him to mercy in the ſtrongeſt manner that can be.

Mr. Recorder to Priſoner. In ſtrict law you are guilty, but your conduct has been ſo different from that of others, that I ſhall particularly mention your caſe to the King.

Priſoner.

Prisoner. My Lord, I have been in my room for eight or ten months, and never been out of doors.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

527. BERWICK MAYTON was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 30th of April last, twelve pair of thread stockings, value 35s. the property of James Gillet, privily in his shop.

MARY GILLET sworn.

I am wife of James Gillet, we then lived at No. 174, in Oxford-street, but since removed to No. 44, on the 30th of last month, the prisoner, and another young man came into the shop, I never saw them before; the other young man asked for some ribbed cotton stockings; I shewed them some at four shillings and six-pence a pair, they were too dear; he desired I would shew him some lower; the compter was taken down, there was only a sham compter, because the compter was carried to the other shop, we were moving; I went behind this compter to reach another paper, and when I came back the other young man that was with the prisoner bought a pair, and gave me half a guinea to change; while I was giving change, I heard a rustling among the papers, near the place where the prisoner was sitting upon a chair, and a small parcel tumbled down, which my own little boy picked up; I gave the other young man the change; I observed the prisoner had a great coat thrown across his arm, and I observed it stood out a great deal further than it would do unless something was concealed there; I stooped down to give this man change, and I saw the end of the paper, I immediately went up to him, and took from him this parcel of stockings from under his great coat.

WILLIAM BOWLER sworn.

I produce the bundle of stockings the prosecutrix gave to me, after she had taken the man in the shop; I live within a few doors of her; they have been in my possession ever since, they are now in the same state they were.

Prosecutrix. I know them by a private mark; the prisoner begged me to forgive him, and offered me his watch and money, money I saw none, but his watch he pulled out in his hand.

Mr. Peatt, Prisoner's Council. Did you say to the constable you saw him take the bundle?——No.

Are you sure of that?——I am sure of it.

Is that the only constable that was concerned?——The only one.

The MAID SERVANT sworn.

I saw my mistress take the goods from under his coat, I was in the shop at the time; my mistress said, you villain, what do you buy one pair, and steal a dozen! then I came out with the child in my arms.

Did you see the prisoner at the bar take them and put them under his coat?—No.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

When I went into the shop, I had another young man with me, I saw him go by from a public house in Holborn; I used to buy stockings at this shop, and I recommended him there, he went with me and bought a pair, and he paid for them; there was a parcel, a great quantity of them lay on the counter; I knocked down two or three, and I was picking up one, and my great coat, which I had on my arm, slipped over it. She says I offered her money, but I would see her choaked before I would have given her any thing for any such thing.

The prisoner called three witnesses, who gave him a good character.

Court. What was the value of these stockings?—Thirty-six shillings.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron PERRYN.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 11th of MAY, 1785, and the following Days;
Being the FIFTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER V. - PART II.

LONDON:
Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)
And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and
S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.
M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

533. VERNON LEY and ROBERT JACKSON were indicted for that they ſuppoſing one Benjamin Bell had lately ſerved our Lord the King, as a ſeaman on board the Carysfort, and that certain prize-money was due to him for ſuch ſervice, on the 18th of April laſt, feloniouſly did forge and counterfeit a certain letter of attorney to him the ſaid Robert Jackſon, purporting to be ſigned, ſealed, and delivered by him, the ſaid Benjamin Bell, in order to receive certain prize-money, then ſuppoſed to be due to him the ſaid Benjamin, for, and on account of his ſervice ſuppoſed to have been done on board the ſaid ſhip.

A ſecond count, For uttering the ſame, with intent to defraud Iſaac Clementſon and Samuel Denton.

(The Indictment opened by Mr. James, and the Caſe by Mr. Silveſter.)

WILLIAM HODGSON ſworn.

I produce the books of the Carysfort.

Was there a man of the name of Benjamin Bell, on board that ſhip?——There was.

Of what date is the entry with reſpect to Bell, in that ſhip?——The 1ſt of November, 1777; this is the original entry; here he is diſcharged, the 16th of February, 1780, then he went to Rocheſter Hoſpital, and his wages were paid to his widow and adminiſtratrix, on the 10th of January, 1781.

RICHARD LLOYD ſworn.

Have you there the books of the Rocheſter Hoſpital?——Yes, here is an entry reſpecting the name of Benjamin Bell, of the Carysfort; I bring this book from the ſick and hurt office, I am one of the clerks; Bell came to the Hoſpital the 13th of January, 1780, he died the 15th of February, the ſame year.

Hodgſon. From the muſter-book he was ſent ſick, the 13th of January, 1780.

Mr. Garrow. To what period does that firſt book that you produce come down?—The 30th of April, 1780.

Have you any more books here?—Yes.

Are you able to ſtate from any ſearch you have made, or any books you are able to produce, that a Benjamin Bell was not on board from February, 1780, can you bring it down to December laſt?—I cannot pretend to ſay now what time the ſhip was paid off.

So that there might have been two or three Benjamin Bell's for what you know, to the time the ſhip was paid off?—I cannot not ſay, I have no other account than to April, 1780.

CATHERINE M'CARTHY ſworn.

I was at the King's Arms, Tower-hill, the 18th of April, the priſoners Ley and Jackſon were in company with me, it was between three and four in the afternoon, and Jackſon aſked Lee for that power he had given him of Benjamin Bell's, he ſaid he could not be any longer without it; Ley told him he had loſt the power, with ſeveral other papers he had in his pocket, one night when he was drunk, and he ſaid he would make him out one as good as the one he had loſt; and he ſent Jackſon to the Red Lyon in Wellcloſe-ſquare to fetch a blank power of attorney of his that lay there; Jackſon came back, and brought it with him; then he took him to this publican's where I was with him; then he took out his own pen and ink out of his pocket, and he took this power that Jackſon had brought him, and laid it down, and he began to write in it, and dated it the ſame date with the one he had loſt, and after he had done writing, he aſked for the landlady's ink-ſtand, and ſhe brought it, and he wrote ſomething with the ink of that, at the bottom of the paper, and he aſked her for a wafer, and he put a wafer on it for a ſeal, and held it in his hands, that the heat of his hands might dry it, and was drying it for a quarter of an hour or more.

Did he ſay what he ſent for the landlady's pen and ink for?——Yes, he ſaid he ſent for it that it might not appear of the ſame colour; Jackſon ſaid to him, that he would not go with a paper that my Lord Mayor's name was not to it; then Ley ſaid he Lord Mayor wrote different kinds of hands, and he had done it ſeveral times; he ſaid you blockead, you fooliſh man, I will have the landlady's ink to make it appear another colour; he ſaid, you blockhead, there is not the leaſt danger to you, for he writes a different hand, and I have often done it; then he put a wafer to it, and dryed it with his own hands, and ſent Jackſon away with it; I do not know where Jackſon went with it; he ſaid he was going to Mr. Clementſon's office,

Who ſaid that?—Vernon Ley; then a little time after Ley ſays to me, you ſtop a little, I want to go down to the ſtationer's to fetch ſome writing paper; ſo I ſtopped there not long, and I went to the Nag's head after Mr. Ley, and he tapped me on the ſhoulders, juſt ſo, do you want me Kit? ſays he; yes, ſays I; where have you ſent Jackſon, ſhew me; ſo he took me up a court, and ſaid, you take no notice, there is the lamp over the door where he is; I was deſirous to know where he had ſent Jackſon, becauſe he owed me ſome money; then I went to Mr. Clementſon's, and aſked if that was a houſe where they paid money for ſhips; I told them I wanted a young man that came in there.

When they were making out the power of attorney, did they ſay what ſhip it was for?——Yes, Sir, the Carlos, I think.

What was the man's name?——Benjamin Bell; then I came after to look for Mr. Ley, to let him know that Jackſon was taken, and and I could not find him; then I came to the Compter, and I ſaw Jackſon was taken; and Ley ſaid to me the next day, do not you open your mouth Kit to any one, what has happened, for I have two men that will prove the power, and I will fetch them to Guildhall by twelve o'clock.

Mr. Keys, Priſoner Ley's Council. Mrs. M'Carthy, how long have you known Jackſon?——I have known him for four years.

Are you his wife?—No, I am not.

But I believe you are very intimately acquainted with him?——I have been before now.

Do you apprehend that the evidence you are now giving, is in favour of Jackſon?——No, I think it no more in favour of Jackſon than Ley.

Have you ſworn the ſame you ſwear now, before the Lord Mayor?—Yes, I am ſure I have.

Nothing

Nothing more or less?—No.

Did not you say then, that all you saw was Ley writing a paper, but you did not know what paper it was?—No.

Remember you are upon your oath, was not it at the Globe, on Tower-hill, that you was?—No, I was at the King's Arms, next the Sick and Wounded office, they first met at the Globe, in Crutched Fryers.

At what o'clock was it that you first came to the King's Arms?—I cannot say.

Mr. Garrow, Prisoner Jackson's Counsel. What did Jackson say to Ley?—He came to Ley, and asked Ley for the power, and said, he could do no longer without Benjamin Bell's power, Jackson had given it to Ley; he said, it did not signify to keep him any longer in agitation, for that he was drunk one night, and had lost that power, and some papers, and he would make him another as good; when Jackson objected to it, says Ley, you blockhead, I have done it several times.

Mr. Keys. I submit to your Lordship, that this woman is an accomplice; admitting her evidence to be true, she clearly was there from the first moment that that application was made, if she speaks truth, there was a power of attorney forged in her presence, with my Lord Mayor's name, and Bell's mark put to it.

Mr. Keys. Had this money been obtained by Jackson, you was to have had part of it?—No, I want no money, nor I got no money, I expected no part of it.

HANNAH WILTSHIRE sworn.

I keep the King's Arms, Tower-hill, I have seen the prisoner Ley several times, I do not remember his being at my house on the 18th of April; I remember seeing him in the presence of Mrs. M'Carthy, there was another man in the box I believe; I cannot tell the day, or the day of the month, it may be about three weeks or a month ago; Ley was writing, he sat on the left hand side of the box, Mrs. M'Carthy and the other man, sat on the other side of the box; I took him some-thing to drink, I saw nothing else, I believe it was the prisoner Jackson.

Did you see from what he was writing?—No, I did not.

Did you go there more than once?—No.

Did they make application to you for anything?—Nothing at all, I cannot say whether they had a pen and ink with them, or whether they borrowed one at the bar.

Court. Do you recollect whether they borrowed a pen and ink of you?—I cannot say either one way or the other, or anything about it, I heard no conversation, I recollect nothing but that he was writing.

ISAAC CLEMENTSON sworn.

I am a Navy agent, in partnership with Samuel Denton, on the 18th of April, Robert Jackson came twice in the morning to enquire if a Mr. Ley had been to receive Benjamin Bell's prize money, we told him no, then he came a second time, then we were displeased with him, (The Prisoner Ley desired Catherine M'Carthy might be put out of Court.) The third time he came it was about three, and he brought this power of attorney for the prize money of Benjamin Bell, it did not appear to be the Lord Mayor's writing, and I compared another with it, and I detained him in the house till I went to ask his Lordship, if it was his writing: then Jackson said, the power was very good, and he knew the Lord Mayor signed it, and he could fetch the attorney that filled it up, I told him I had reason to doubt it was not the Lord Mayor's hand, and if I permitted him to go away, I should not see him again; I took him to the Lord Mayor, then the Lord Mayor said, it was not his hand writing, and I detained him; I marked it, I am sure it is the same power I received from Jackson; I saw Ley before the Lord Mayor, he was only taken up upon Jackson's information.

Is there any other man intitled to prize money on board that ship by the name of Benjamin Bell?—There is only one of the name, this is the prize list from the time that that ſhip was paid off (The power of attorney read.) Jackſon told me the Lord Mayor had ſigned it; and offered freely to go with me before my Lord Mayor.

Priſoner Ley. Did you ever ſee me at your houſe?—I do not recollect I ever did.

Did not Jackſon acknowledge that he had given me a power of attorney, that had been ſigned by the Lord Mayor?—There had been a power originally ſigned by the Lord Mayor, he did mention that there was a power of attorney originally ſigned according to that date.

Did he ſay, he had given that to Ley to come to your houſe to receive the money?—Firſt it was an application of Jackſon's, to know whether Ley had received the money.

Mr. Silveſter. When were theſe prizes taken?——In December, 1777, and in April, 1778, no later than that.

Court. After Jackſon came the third time, do you recollect any perſon coming to your houſe to enquire for him?—Mrs. M'Carthy came, and was talking about Bell's prize money, and I aſked her in.

——— EVANS ſworn.

I am clerk to the Lord Mayor, I am very well acquainted with his Lordſhip's writing; but this has not the moſt diſtant ſimilitude.

Court. Is it the cuſtom of the Lord Mayor's office to keep an account of the inſtruments which are executed by the Lord Mayor?——It is.

Can you aſcertain by the examination, whether there was ever any power of attorney in the name of Benjamin Bell, executed by the Lord Mayor?——I have not ſearched above three weeks or a month, I have one book here, from the 3d of December, to the firſt of January; I have ſearched the whole of this book, I have none here earlier than that.

How far back would it be poſſible to ſearch that?——We make entries of all, that would take a conſiderable time; Jackſon and Ley both ſaid, that the real power was of that date.

Did he ſay what he had done with it after he had filled it up?—Jackſon ſaid, that he gave a ſhilling to pay the fee upon the execution of this power of attorney.

(The power of attorney read, and examined by Mr. Garrow.)

Court to Evans. What are the letters J. E. upon the ſeal?—The clerk generally puts his name on the ſeal, by way of mark.

Court to Clementſon. You ſaid, that Jackſon ſaid, that that power was a very good one, and that he knew the Lord Mayor had ſigned it?——Yes.

Will you endeavour to recollect, whether afterwards, he ſaid, it was a good power?—Afterwards, when they came to be examined before the Lord Mayor, he ſaid, there had been an original one executed by the Lord Mayor, and that Mr. Ley had loſt it, and had made them out that.

But at firſt, he ſaid, it was a good one executed by the Lord Mayor?—Yes.

PRISONER LEY's DEFENCE.

I was not with them at the public houſe on the 18th of April, I never was there then; that power that was produced to me at the Lord Mayor's, I acknowledged I filled it up; and on Wedneſday, Jackſon and this man that called himſelf Benjamin Bell, I did not know him, gave me the power to receive the money, I gave it back to Jackſon again, on Monday the 18th of April, and I was taken up on Wedneſday; if I had been guilty I had time enough to eſcape, the power was given to me to aſk for the money; I never went to Mr. Clementſon for it; I never was at the public houſe with M'Carthy but once, when I met them on the hill, they are man and wife together.

Priſoner Ley to M'Carthy. I ſhould be glad to know whether ſhe can read or write, or how ſhe knows that to be the power I filled up on the 18th of April.

Court. She has ſworn that you filled up a blank power, in the name of Benjamin Bell, and gave it to Jackſon.

Court to M'Carthy. Do you know this paper by ſight?——I cannot ſay, I cannot ſwear to this paper alone, but ſuch another paper as this was, in ſuch another way as this, that is all I can ſay.

Winſpear. It was about three weeks or a month ago, I cannot ſwear it was the 18th of April, or any particular day.

Were you examined before the Lord Mayor?—No.

WILLIAM CREE ſworn.

I am a ſeafaring man.

How long have you known Catherine M'Carthy?—For theſe ſeveral years ſince 1782; ſhe came on board the ſhip Artois along with a marine, which lay at the Nore, then ſhe left the marine, and went along with Robert Earle; that was the priſoner Jackſon, his name was Robert Earle on the ſhip's books, I cannot tell how long he and ſhe were connected together.

ELIZABETH PALMER ſworn.

I know the priſoner Jackſon, he went by the name of Robert Parry at our houſe, and Mrs. M'Carthy went as his wife, in the year 1783, near nine months.

What was her character?——I believe ſhe was a very honeſt woman.

SOPHIA BAKER ſworn.

I lodge in Smithfield, I am backwards and forwards at preſent to my huſband, who is in priſon here for debt, I know the priſoner Ley, I never ſaw the other priſoner to my knowledge but now, and at Guildhall, I remember on the 18th of April laſt, about ten in the afternoon, I ſaw Ley at the Globe in Crutched Fryers, I remained with him till between three and four, he went with me from the Globe to my huſband's plantiff, to try to make his affairs up, that was between three and four, we did not part till nigh ſix; we went down to the lower part of Wapping, I was not out of his company that day, from ten in the morning till ſix in the evening.

Mr. Silveſter. What day of the week was that?—On Monday, I went to this public houſe, and waited till he filled up a power for a ſailor, and wrote a note.

Do you know the King's Arms public houſe on Tower-hill?—No, Sir, I know the Nag's Head, I do not know the King's Arms; I was at chapel along with my huſband the Sunday before.

Did you ſtay from ten o'clock all that time in the houſe?—Yes.

Who is the landlady?—A fat luſty gentlewoman, ſhe was in and out of the parlour, I ſuppoſe ſhe might ſee us together.

What did you do all that time?—I do not know, there were ſeveral people there, I was obliged to ſtay as he was ſo good as to ſay he would go along with me; I left it about three and went over Tower-wharf, and went to Wapping; I was examined before my Lord Mayor.

Court. Did you know the Globe before?——No.

Do you know the King's Arms?—No.

How do you know it was not the King's Arms?——The landlady was a ſhortiſh luſty woman.

Should you know her again?—Yes.

Court to Winſpear. Stand up, look at that lady, is that the landlady?—It is not like the gentlewoman, ſhe is quite an elderly woman.

How was this man employed?—Several people came in and ſhook hands with him, and I ſaw him writing a power for a ſeaman, ſometimes he came in and went out.

Did he put his hand in his pocket, or give it to any body, when he had filled it up?——I do not know, I heard ſomebody call him out to the door, he did not ſtay long out with the gentlewoman M'Carthy; I ſaw him give ſomething to the other man.

Priſoner Jackſon. I wiſh to aſk this woman, if I did not go to No. 1, Lower Gun-alley, to enquire for Mr. Ley, the Friday before the Monday, and ſhe aſked me what I wanted, and I told her he had a power of attorney of mine, and he was playing tricks; I went to this gentlewoman, in Gun-alley?——I do not recollect him.

JULIANA

JULIANA DOYLE ſworn.

I came to the Globe one day, a little after theſe two gentlemen were taken into cuſtody, and I ſaw this Mrs. M'Carthy, I aſked her how ſhe did, and ſhe ſaid ſhe was very much in trouble, for her huſband was in gaol, about a power of attorney; ſhe ſaid he did not ſign it, but he filled it up.

JOHN TOBIT ſworn.

I have known him fourteen years, I live upon my means; he bears a very good character.

ARCHIBALD OSLAND ſworn.

I have known Ley ſeven years, he has a good character; he lodged at my houſe a good while.

NOAH LEE ſworn.

I am no relation of his; I have known him ten years, and upwards, his general character is a very good one; he lodged twelve months with me.

ELIZABETH ARMSTRONG ſworn.

I have known him thirteen years, he has a very good character as far as ever I heard.

ARCHIBALD MOFFATT ſworn.

I never heard any thing bad of him in my life.

BARTHOLOMEW DAWSON ſworn.

I have known him two months, I come to ſpeak ſomething I heard M'Carthy ſpeak about three weeks or a month ago; I had a little buſineſs at the Globe, on Tower-hill, and I happening to be ſitting in the room where Mr. Ley was, this woman happened to come into the room, I ſaid I believe you are a townſwoman of mine; the next day coming down Holborn, I met the woman which I believe was the day Mr. Ley was taken up, ſhe began to cry, and begged me to ſtop; I gave her a dram at the wine vaults oppoſite St. Andrew's church; I came to the Globe, and the firſt news I heard was, that Ley was a priſoner; the day following I met the ſame woman in Broad Saint Giles's; I aſked her if ſhe had ſeen Mr. Ley ſince, O yes, ſays ſhe, I have ſeen him, I have him faſt; he thought to hang my huſband, by Jeſus I will hang him; ſays I, don't hang anybody wrongfully; clapping her hands, "right or wrong I will be recompenced."

Was anybody elſe preſent at this time?——There was a gentleman in company whoſe name is Warren, he withdrew.

What are you?——I am a clothes dealer, I live in Maddox-ſtreet, St. George's.

Is Warren here?——Yes.

——— WARREN ſworn.

Do you know the laſt witneſs?—I ſaw him about a fortnight or three weeks ago in St. Giles's; Mrs. M'Carthy and he ſtopped and ſpoke together, I heard nothing that paſſed at all.

Did they ſeem earneſt in diſcourſe?——I walked on and took no particular notice.

Mr. Silveſter to Warren. Did Dawſon tell you any converſation he had?——No, never a word, I never ſtopped.

Court to M'Carthy. Do you know that witneſs Dawſon?——Yes, I have ſeen the gentleman once.

Is it true that that converſation paſſed between him and you, that he has ſtated?—The day I came to look for Ley, I let him know that Jackſon was taken; ſays I, Jackſon is taken, but we have Ley taken.

Did you ſay that Ley thought to hang Jackſon?——I did not ſay no ſuch thing, I would not ſay no ſuch thing, I would not ſpeak more in favour of one than the other.

Do you know Juliana Doyle?——Yes.

Did you ever tell her that Ley filled up the power, and that he had never ſigned it?—Upon my oath, I never did, I ſaid they were in for an innocent cauſe, I would not let her know.

PRISONER JACKSON'S DEFENCE.

About a week before Chriſtmas I became acquainted with a man by the name of Benjamin Bell, in Briſtol; we came to London in the ſame week that Chriſtmas was; I bore his expences, he had no money, money, he ſaid he had prize-money coming from the Carysfort; when we came to London, I applied to this Mr. Ley, he ſaid there was wages due, and I went into a ſtationer's ſhop and bought a power, and he filled it up; and he ſaw me give this Benjamin Bell one ſhilling, to get it ſworn before my Lord Mayor: about twelve the next day this Bell called with the power, and I believe it was ſigned by the Lord Mayor; then I remitted him fourteen ſhillings; then I made this power over, with an order, on ſtampt paper, for Ley to take the money for Bell due to me, I applied ſeveral times after, till the 18th of April, then he told me he had loſt the power he had; then he aſked me into the Nag's Head, and wrote a letter to Mr. Curtis, of Wellcloſe-ſquare, there I got a blank power, very well ſays Ley, that is what I want; Ley aſked me and Mrs. M'Carthy to this houſe, next the ſick and hurt office; I went to aſk Mr. Clementſon whether Ley had received any money for the Carysfort: I thought he was playing tricks with me, before I came back to the public houſe where Mrs. M'Carthy was, he had a power made and filled up; ſays he, now you may go and get the money; ſays I, did not you tell me you loſt it; it is no matter, ſays he, get your money upon it; then I went to Mr. Clementſon's, and he ſtopped me.

PRISONER LEY's DEFENCE.

I acknowledge that I filled up a power for him on the 28th of December, and that he gave the man a ſhilling, and that he came to me on Wedneſday the 29th, and aſked me two or three times about the power, and I delivered to him the ſame power.

Court to Jackſon. Who did you go to for a blank power?——To one Curtis in Wellcloſe-ſquare.

Have you ever ſent to him to come here?—No, I did not.

Court to Clementſon. Have you ever made an enquiry into that fact?——No, I never was requeſted to do it.

Where does he live?——In Wellcloſe-ſquare, at the ſign of the Red Lion.

Court to Ley. Did Jackſon in your preſence before the Lord Mayor tell this ſtory about going to Curtis's for the blank power?——I do not recollect that he did.

Jackſon. I did, my Lord Mayor knows I did, did not I Sir?

Evans. Yes, he certainly did.

Ley. I recollect now, I underſtand you properly, I was then writing a petition for a man to Sir Charles Middleton to be ſuperannuated, then I deſired Mr. Jackſon to go to Mr. Curtis's for a power, but that was a woman whoſe huſband was in Newgate.

Court to Ley. Who did you fill up that power of attorney for?——I never filled it up, I gave it to Sophia Baker's huſband; here are the people belonging to Newgate knows there is ſuch a perſon there, and that the propoſition was made.

The priſoner Jackſon called twelve witneſſes who all gave him a very good character.

The Jury withdrew ſome time, and returned with a verdict

VERNON LEY, NOT GUILTY.
ROBERT JACKSON, GUILTY Death.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

534. FRANCIS METCALFE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 5th of April laſt, ſixty pair of leather gloves, value 3l. the property of Edward Penny, in his dwelling houſe.

CHARLES SHIPLEY ſworn.

I live in the Old Change; my father is a hair-dreſſer; about a quarter paſt eight, I was ſhutting up ſhop, and a little boy came and ſaid ſome people are robbing Mr. Penny, I went to the back door that comes into the Old Change, and found the priſoner coming ing out he had his apron tied up, and a bundle in his apron, he puſhed me right in the kennel, and run immediately into Cheapſide, and he got out of my ſight; this was a quarter paſt eight, on the 5th of April, it was not light, but I ſaw his face, I was cloſe by the door when he came out, I knew him before, and knew his name, he went to St. Ann's ſchool.

How long after this was it that he was taken?——It might be a fortnight, I told this perſon his name, and every thing; about twenty minutes paſt eight I went into Noble-ſtreet, and I told it to another witneſs that is here.

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Council. It was a quarter paſt eight?——Yes.

You ſaw his face?——Yes, and I will ſwear to it.

Was you at any time fetched to Wood-ſtreet Compter?——Yes.

And there Clarke and you ſtood at the two gates, and Clarke pointed out the priſoner to you?—No, he did not.

He did not point or look?——I went and looked through the gate, and picked him out.

He was not pointed out to you by any perſon?——No, he was not, I went and pointed to him.

I ſuppoſe you was very intimate formerly, did not you and the priſoner quarrel once about a girl?——No, never in my life.

WILLIAM EDWARDS ſworn.

I am a ſhopman to Mr. Penny; theſe gloves were in the ſhop, they were by the back door which was left open.

SAMUEL REDGATE ſworn.

About twenty minutes after eight, on the 5th of April, I ſaw the priſoner coming by with a parcel under his left arm, that anſwered the deſcription of what Mr. Penny had loſt, the bundle was ſomething white in the front; he was coming towards Cheapſide way; he was dreſſed in a light drab coat, his coat was cloſed on the right ſide; he juſt turned his head and looked at me; I ſaw no apron at all, I ſaw his bundle, I knew him before, I have known him a good while, I knew him when he came into St. Ann's ſchool, I am ſure it was him.

Mr. Peatt. How far was you from the priſoner when he came out?——He juſt made way, and I made way for him, the bundle was under his left arm, I was not a yard from him, and his coat was cloſed on the right hand ſide.

Did you follow after the priſoner?—No.

Was you intimate with the priſoner, did you ever drink with him at any public houſe?——Never.

Nor never had any quarrel with him?—No, Sir, not that I know of.

Had the priſoner a green apron, or a red apron?—I did not ſee any apron.

Had he any thing in an apron that you recollect?—All that I ſaw was under his arm.

JOHN ASKEW ſworn.

Do you know the nature of an oath?—Yes.

What is the puniſhment if you ſhould tell a lie?——I ſhall go to a dark dungeon where there is fire and brimſtone.

Do you know that you are liable to be puniſhed by law?——Yes. I ſaw the priſoner ſtand with four more, and go into the houſe, and come out with a ſack in his hand; he went in at the private door of the Old Change, he had ſomething in a white apron, but I cannot ſwear what was in it; he went away acroſs Cheapſide, he came back, and he went in a ſecond time, and ſtaid in about a minute and a half, when he came out he had ſomething in his apron, and I ran to Charles Shipley and told him, and he went after him a little way, but he got into Cheapſide, and he could not purſue him; I have ſeen the priſoner before at St. Ann's ſchool, I am ſure it was him, there was a great light, I could ſee his face very well.

Mr. Peatt. Did you know any of the perſons that were with him?——No.

Have you ſeen any of them ſince?—— No,

Did they ſeem to be young or old?—— Young fellows; he had nothing on his back or under his arm, he had a light coloured coat, a drab coloured coat, and a red ſhag waiſtcoat.

WILLIAM FORSYTH ſworn.

I had information that the priſoner had robbed this gentleman's ſhop of a quantity of gloves; me and my brother officer went in purſuit of him ſeveral times, at laſt we found him in Alderſgate-ſtreet, and took him into cuſtody; he had nothing upon him; I told him what I took him up for, and he denied it, nothing was found.

Court to Edwards. How came you to take notice of this particular parcel of gloves?——Becauſe they were to be called for the next day; they were in a paper, tied round with one ſtring; they were a pretty large ſize, about twenty inches long, and ſix or ſeven inches deep: I heard of the alarm about half an hour after I put the things by, then I found that parcel was miſſing; I found Shipley at the door, when I came down he told me there had been ſomebody in the houſe, and he ſuppoſed they had taken ſomething out.

Did he tell you this ſomebody was?—— No, he did not know then, but this lad Aſkew told him afterwards that it was Metcalf who went to ſchool with him.

Mr. Peatt, to Mr. Penny. Do you ſend your goods to the waggon by your own ſervants?——Yes, this parcel was looked out by a gentleman of Chicheſter.

Shipley. My Lord, I told him then that I did know, I will take my oath that I did.

Priſoner. My Lord, when Mr. Clarke and that gentleman took me up, they ſaid they would tell me by and by what it was for, when I came to the Compter, they ſaid I ſhould know by and by, they went and fetched that gentleman in green, and I was called out ſeperately by myſelf.

Forſyth. It is no ſuch thing, I was preſent when this man pointed to the priſoner, that is the man ſays he, I will be on my oath.

JOHN BURTON ſworn.

I am a taylor, I have know the priſoner about twelve years, I never knew ill of him nor ever heard any.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing to the value of 39*s.*

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

535. EDWARD JOHNSON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 28th of April laſt, fifty nine yards and a half of green ſilk, called Perſian, value 50s. the property of John Geib, privately in his ſhop.

JOHN GEIB ſworn.

I am a mathematical inſtrument maker, I uſe green ſilk in my buſineſs, in the inſide of my inſtruments, for my Piano fortes.

Do you keep an open ſhop?——No, I work for Mr. Longman and Co. Cheapſide.

Then you do not ſell green ſilk?—— No, Sir.

Then you never ſell green ſilk in your ſhop, or any thing of that ſort?——I ſell none at all.

How did you loſe it?——I do not know, it was ſtole away privately from me, on the 29th of April, I had fifty-nine yards and a half.

JOHN COOPER ſworn.

I am a pawnbroker, on the 28th of April the priſoner brought this piece of green Perſian to my ſhop, and wanted to pledge it, I think it was between ſeven and eight, he wanted ſeven ſhillings upon it, I did not know him; I am ſure the priſoner is the man, I ſtopped him, and took him to the office in Bow-ſtreet, and it was a late hour hour to ſend him to priſon, and the next morning he was had up for further examination; before I went to the office in Bow-ſtreet, I made enquiry of ſeveral ſilk mercers, and aſked them if they knew the number on the roll, at laſt I learned that the priſoner had worked for Mr. Flight, organ-builder, and there I heard he worked for Mr. Geib, and he told me one Johnſon worked at his other ſhop, he told me he had not loſt any ſilk; he ſaid, I will ſhew you our's, and on looking round he could not find his ſilk.

(The ſilk depoſed to.)

Proſecutor. I know it by the mark on the roll, and by a piece of the ſame ſort I have in the houſe; the priſoner had worked for me three days.

CHARLES DRAKE ſworn.

We ſerve Longman and Broadrip with this ſilk that the proſecutor owns, it is the laſt piece we ſold them, it was No. 29,999, this is a piece on the ſame ſtick that we ſerved Longman and Broadrip with; I have every reaſon to ſuppoſe it to be the ſame ſilk, but I cannot ſay.

Court to Geib. Did you receive that ſilk from Longman and Broadrip?—Yes.

Do they furniſh you with materials for making inſtruments?——Yes.

Then you are paid only for the workmanſhip?—Yes.

They ſent in this piece of ſilk?—Yes.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I lived in his ſhop in Holborn, and coming up Fleet Market, I picked up this ſilk, and took it to the pawnbroker's, and to another man, and borrowed ſeven ſhillings upon it.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing, but not privately.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

536. WILLIAM SEDDON and JOHN FENNEL were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 28th of April laſt, two hundred and forty halfpence, value 10s. and one hempen ſack, value 6d. the property of John Lucas.

JOHN LUCAS ſworn.

I am a farmer, at Bow's farm, Edmonton; on the 18th of April, I ſent my cart to town with faggots, the common price for them is twenty-four ſhillings per hundred, I ſent three quarters of a hundred.

THOMAS GRAHAM ſworn.

I am carman, on the 20th of April, I carried three quarters of a hundred of faggots, I ſold them to the baker's the corner of Saffron-hill, facing Chick-lane; I ſold them at the rate of twenty-ſix ſhillings per hundred, they were very good faggots, I was paid ten ſhillings in halfpence, and the reſt in ſilver, nine ſhillings and ſixpence; I put the halfpence in my coat pocket firſt, then they were ſo heavy they tore my pocket, I put them into my ſack, it was about eleven or a quarter after when I put them into my ſack; I miſſed them when I came to Hatton Wall, facing the George-yard, I miſſed ſack and all; I ſaw two men ſtanding cloſe by, and I put the ſack and halfpence into the cart, I ſaw them jogg one another, and give one another a twink, and I was dubrus of them directly; I was obliged to enquire after my dung, I left a woman in care of my team of horſes, while I went after it, as ſoon as I came back the woman that I left to take care of the cart, hallooed out to me, and ſaid, farmer, have not you had your cart robbed; I ſearched about for theſe two men at ſeveral places, and I came back again to my team, and the woman ſaid, farmer, the young man that ſaw them take out the bag as well as I did, he knows perfectly where one of them quarters; and I afterwards got a conſtable, and took up the two priſoners.

——— RAWLINSON ſworn.

I am a conſtable, I was applied to, to take take the prisoners, I cannot tell the day of the month, but I am sure it was within this fortnight, I did not make any memorandom of it; I went to a suspicious house, known by the sign of the Coach and Horses, in Turnmill-street, they were not not there, but just gone; I went up Turnmill-street, and saw the two prisoners walking together, a woman whose name is Newton, told me positively they were the men that took the bag out of the cart; I told the prisoners they must go with me before the Magistrate; I found upon Fennel eight shillings and eight pence farthing in halfpence, I found no bag or anything of that sort, the money was all taken from John Fennel.

Prisoners. It was only seven shillings and seven pence three farthings, all in halfpence, that was all.

ANN NEWTON sworn.

I sell fruit the corner of Hatton-garden, Hatton-wall.

Did you undertake to take care of this man's cart while he went to enquire about some dung?—He came to me between eleand twelve, and he says to me, good woman, will you give an eye to my horses a bit, I said, yes, my barrow was about twelve yards off, presently after the two prisoners came up and stuck themselves against the wall, and the tall one says to the other, damn your eyes! did not you see whereabouts he threw it, then the other said, he did not, and he swore another oath, damn your eyes! come round, and I will shew you; I was then about eight or nine yards off, with that they went round the end of the cart, and stuck themselves against the wall; somebody came to me for apples or nuts, and the tall one stepped up on the wheel of the cart while I was serving the fruit, and he took a bag out, but what was in it I cannot say, I saw him take the bag out, and the tall one came up to me, and said, old mother, for God's sake take no notice of us; I saw the bag under the short man's arm at the time, and they run away, a young man that was standing in his cart just by, said to me, Newton, there is a robbery committed; that young man is not here, his name is Rush, then the farmer came out of the George yard, and immediately we told him.

Prisoner. If you was to inspect into that woman's character you would not believe what she says; ask her if she knows Mr. Williams?——Yes.

Did not he attend at the time we were committed, and tell her she deserved more to be taken up than us; and did not he say, you know very well I could take you up directly?—You hold your tongue a minute, you see I took a ready furnished room, and while I was sitting with my fruit a woman stole the sheets and a silk handkerchief.

PRISONER FENNEL's DEFENCE.

When I was taken I had halfpence, I was going to buy myself a coat or a jacket, and I asked this young man to with me; I had saved these halfpence up, some were very good and some very indifferent.

PRISONER SEDDON's DEFENCE.

I know Fennel, and coming down Chick-lane, I saw him at a public house door, I went into Cold Bath-fields and met him again, he asked me to go with him, and he would treat me with a pint of beer, I went with him, and we had three or four pints, he asked me to go to Rosemary-lane, to buy him a coat, I told him I would, and at Clerkenwell-green we were taken, I know no more of it than a child unborn.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Justice WILLES.

---

537. WILLIAM POULTERS was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 29th of April last, at the parish of St Botolph without Aldgate, one gold ring, value 6s. the property of John Morgan, privily in his shop.

JOHN

JOHN MORGAN ſworn.

I am a pawnbroker.

Court. You keep an open ſhop for the ſale of goods?——Yes.

Was this ring what you had a right to ſell?——Yes, on the 29th of April, this priſoner and another came into my ſhop, and aſked to look at ſome rings, he wanted to buy a ring, I ſhewed ſome rings, I weighed him one, and delivered it to him, as a purchaſe, I ſaw him take it, I valued five ſhillings, but they have valued it at ſix-ſhillings, it was a penny weight, and half-penny, and three grains, he took it up and run away with it; the other young man ſtood by the ſhop window, it was ſeven o'clock in the afternoon, I am ſure that was the man; I jumped over the counter and ran after him, and laid hold of him and brought him back, I never ſaw the ring ſince.

Court. Then you delivered the ring to him?—I delivered the ring to him for ſale, and I expected him to pay for it.

Mr. Brown, Priſoner's Counſel. Was not he intoxicated?——He might, I did not perceive it.

Priſoner. I am innocent.

ROBERT GRAY ſworn.

I have known the priſoner twenty years, he was apprentice to my father, and his father was unfortunately drowned, and my father took him and kept him, and when he had been two or three years took him apprentice, my father was a mariner, and at my father's deceaſe, he was bound over to me, he ſerved duly and truly; I could mention a variety of inſtances of his honeſty, I have ſeveral times laid down on my bed fatigued, and money has dropped out of my pocket, he has ſeveral times found halfpence, ſixpences, and ſhillings, and always gave them to me, he went from me at the age of twenty, this was at the beginning of the war, he is now about eight or nine and twenty, he has been on board of a man of war almoſt all the war, and had a good character.

The priſoner called five more witneſſes who all gave him a very good character.

Court. Is he a married or a ſingle man? Married.

What family has he?--He has a family coming on very ſtrong.

Court. This man has a very good character, he has a wife and ſome children, and more coming, burn him in the hand and diſcharge him directly.

GUILTY.

Branded.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

538. WILLIAM TATUM was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 28th of April laſt, one pair of iron tongs, value 1s. one iron fire ſhovel, value 1s. one iron poker, value 1s. one iron fender, value 1s. one pair of blankets, value 10s. three flat irons, value 1s. one tin japanned bread baſket, value 6d. one pair of bellows, value 1s. a ſet of glaſs crewets, value 1s. one pair of ſteel ſnuffers and ſtand, value 1s. one ſilver tea ſpoon, value 1s. and one hearth bruſh, value 6d. the property of John Downham.

JOHN DOWNHAM ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. George Bond, in the Temple, at his chambers, I had been ill for a long time, and on that account I have been in the country, I was gone three weeks, I left during this time, the priſoner in my houſe as a lodger, I live at No. 8, in Little Shire-lane, the priſoner has lodged with me between two and three years; I have a wife but no family; I returned to town the 29th or 30th of April, when I came to town my wife miſſed a few things, ſhe was with me in the country, and the priſoner had left his lodgings, and we ſuſpected him, I afterwards ſaw at Mr. Cooper's in Wych-ſtreet, a ſpoon and ſeveral other things; on Wedneſday the 4th of May, the priſoner was taken up, and he confeſſed,

Were there any promiſes or threats made to him?——I think there was.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Counſel. The priſoner lodged with you three or four years?——Yes.

He lodged with you at the time that he was a very honeſt clerk to me, though I did not know he was here till I ſaw him?——Yes.

The ſtate of his health had been very deplorable, that theſe things have been pledged and redeemed occaſionally, as his wants called upon him?—I believe they have.

When he was preſſed for bread and for medicines, then they went again?—Yes.

What was his character for honeſty?—I never ſuſpected him of any one thing, I believe he muſt be tempted by extreme want and inconvenience.

JOHN COOPER ſworn.

I produce a fire ſhovel, tongs, and poker, which I took in the 6th of April, I have a great number of things in my poſſeſſion.

Where did you get them?—I took them of the priſoner for two ſhillings and eight pence.

Had he pledged anything with you before?——Very frequently, I have known him for upwards of two years, and he always had a very good appearance.

Mr. Garrow. Mr. Cooper, you are a pawnbroker, in the neighbourhood of the Temple?—In Wych-ſtreet.

One of thoſe good friends of our's that live in that neighbourhood, you have known this poor fellow pledging things for neceſſaries; I take it for granted, that as a pawnbroker you do not know his merits?—I believe not.

WILLIAM JORDAN ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. Cooper, I produce the things mentioned in the indictment.

State the articles?—Theſe are the tickets, I took in the following articles, a pair of blankets, a fender, two ewers with plated tops, one pair of ſnuffers, and a flat iron; I took them of the priſoner at ſeveral times, and ſome part of them, I think I may venture to ſay, I have had twenty times in and out.

How long has he continued to do that?—The things were all pledged between the 16th and 28th of April, ſome of them I remember to have had ever ſince I lived with Mr. Cooper, within theſe ſix months.

Court. Look out the Act for pawning things without the conſent of the owner.

Mr. Garrow. Do you know enough of this poor fellow to know what the ſtate of his health was?—No, Sir.

(The things produced and depoſed to.)

Court. In whoſe name did he pledge them in?—In his own name.

Mr. Garrow to Proſecutor. Were theſe things in the apartment occupied by the priſoner?—No, they were not, they were in a cloſet adjoining his room.

And truſted to his care while you was out of town?—Yes.

(The ſhovel, poker, and tongs depoſed to.)

Mr. Garrow. How do you know them?—By two or three ſcratches that look like bruiſes.

I dare ſay mine are ſcratched much in the ſame way.

Priſoner. I have nothing to ſay.

BENJAMIN HUNTER, Eſq; ſworn.

I brought this man up from the country about ſix wears ago, when firſt I was called to the bar, he lived with me two years, I parted with him with very great reluctance to ſettle his father's accounts; he lived with his father ſometime, he has been out of my ſervice four years, but he has been in ſome degree the object of my attention, having brought him firſt up to town, I was naturally deſirous his intereſt ſhould be promoted; he lived with Mr. Tancred, and lodged with the proſecutor, and I always underſtood he lived with the greateſt ſobriety; ſince this buſineſs happened, I underſtand he is in an extreme bad ſtate of health; and if he is acquitted in this inſtance, I certainly ſhall do every thing in my power to put him into ſuch a ſituation, that he ſhall not be tempted to do any thing of the kind again.

Mr.

Mr. Garrow. My Lord, I think it more important to this young man, that his character ſhould be cleared, than that he ſhould be barely acquitted: by an act of the 13th of George II. chap. 24. there is a ſpecific penalty impoſed on perſons who ſhall pawn the goods of others, without the conſent of the proprietor: that is clearly the caſe of the priſoner; he, without the conſent of the proprietor, pawned the goods: the Act of Parliament has provided the penalty of twenty ſhillings, and certainly as the legiſlature annexed that penalty to the offence, it ſhewed at that time it was not to be conſidered as a felony; I ſhall ſubmit therefore to your Lordſhip, in point of law, he cannot be convicted on this indictment.

Court. This is a queſtion in ſome meaſure to be left to the Jury, with direction in point of law; it has very frequently occurred to my own mind, what difficulties muſt ariſe from the Act of Parliament which I have now before me, upon that particular kind of felony, of which we have a great many inſtances here; and I take it, (for otherwiſe it ſeems extremely difficult, if not impoſſible, to reconcile the law) I take the diſtinction to be this, that where things are taken with a felonious intention, and afterwards pawned, then the circumſtance of pawning does not make the act leſs penal, it remains a felony, and requires no Act of Parliament to make it ſo; it is one way of diſpoſing of ſtolen property; but where there is no offence but that of pawning without the conſent of the owner, with an intention of reſtoring the property, it ſeems to me that if any offence can be within this Act of Parliament, it muſt be that offence; therefore I ſhall leave it to the Jury, to declare whether they believe that he intended to ſteal theſe things, and convert them to his own uſe; in that caſe I ſhould be of opinion, that it would be a felony, and in the other, not a felony; for it would be a very ſtrange conſtruction that that which was meant to be the ſubject of this Act of Parliament was a felony; and it has been univerſally held that all Acts of Parliament inflicting leſſer penalties, repeal greater ones.

Mr. Hunter. During the time theſe things were firſt pawned, his father died, and he was intitled to have ſome part of the property, that is a fact within my own knowledge; and he was in expectation of ſome money, by which he could redeem thoſe things.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

539. The ſaid WILLIAM TATUM was again indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 2d of March laſt, at Lincoln's-Inn, twenty-five printed books, value 38s. the property of Darcy Tancreed, Eſq.

DARCY TANCREED, Eſq. ſworn.

I miſſed theſe books about two months ago, or rather better; I advertiſed them twice in the daily papers, but I heard nothing of them, till Mr. Downham, the priſoner's landlord came to me.

Mr. Garrow. Do not tell us any thing he ſaid to you.——He came to me after he had taken up the priſoner, I went immediately to Juſtice Walker's, where the priſoner was taken, and I ſpoke to the priſoner, and aſked him, have you done any thing with any of my books? he was very much confuſed, and muttered ſomething, I thought it was no, but I was not ſure; I told him, if he had got them he had better be candid and open, and perhaps he might expect mercy.

Court. After that declaration, the law will not permit us to hear what he ſaid: in conſequence of that did you ever find any of your books again?——Yes, I found them again at the pawn-broker's in Wych-ſtreet.

What did you find there?——I found all the number mentioned in the indictment, I think it was eighteen, but I am not ſure; I found found ſeveral books, many of which I had not miſſed: I knew them all.

How did you know them?——Many of them I had wrote the price in which I had given for them; my book-caſe was open, and the key in it; I always let the clerks go and read there when they have nothing elſe to do; the priſoner was my clerk a year and a half; I had not the leaſt ſuſpicion of him.

Did he live with you at this time?——No, I parted with him the 26th of March, which is about three weeks.

Mr. Garrow. This poor fellow lived with you one year and an half?——Yes, thereabouts.

You had advertiſed your books without ſucceſs?——Yes.

And would never have learned any thing of them without his information?——No, I had not the leaſt cauſe of ſuſpicion before this unhappy affair.

Mr. Cowper gave you no manner of information?—No, Sir.

WILLIAM JORDAN ſworn.

Theſe books I received of the priſoner, on the 4th of April, I delivered him four of theſe volumes on that day, and he brought another volume on the ſame day.

When had they firſt been pledged with you?——I cannot tell.

Had they been pledged more than once with you?—I believe they have.

How long had they been away?—About two or three hours; there are other books that I cannot ſpeak to, becauſe they have been pledged with Mr. Cowper before I lived with him.

Mr. Garrow. Theſe were an incompleat ſet, were not they?—Yes.

Not in a ſtate fit for ſale?—No.

How long have you been a pawn-broker?—Eight years.

Upon your oath do not you know that an incompleat ſet of books is much more fit for pledging than for ſale?—I do not pretend to ſay it, I do not know the value of books.

Court. It is a matter of inference; he is not bound to ſpeak his opinion.

Mr. Garrow. I do it merely for the credit of the witneſs.

Court. I do not think it goes to his credit.

—— MILLER ſworn.

I have taken books of the priſoner ſeveral times, I have not ſeen this parcel of books, (looks at them) I believe there is one book which I ſhould know, here is one book with two others, which was pledged the 12th of March laſt, which I have taken of him before ſeveral times; I have left the buſineſs, only I was requeſted to attend here; I cannot identify them, they have been mixed.

(The five volumes, and one volume depoſed to by Mr. Tancred.)

Theſe are the five firſt volumes of the Harleian Miſcellanies, I never had the three laſt volumes; I had them of ſome relation, and here are their names in them; he left my ſervice the 26th of March; he called in once or twice afterwards, but I was there; I advertiſed theſe things, I think about a month before, he had no opportunity of taking theſe books after he left my ſervice; and I do not think he could have brought them back without my knowledge.

What was the ſtate of his health?—I only know from hearſay; I hear it is very deplorable indeed.

Mr. Garrow. I will aſk you, from my knowledge of your character, do you believe he was prompted to do this from neceſſity?—Upon my word, I think he could not do ſuch a thing without it was from diſeaſe and neceſſity.

Court. You have given a very good natured anſwer to the queſtion; but I am bound in juſtice to aſk you another queſtion, how could this man be reduced to ſuch diſtreſs, while he remained in your ſervice? I am ſure, my Lord, I do not know w[illegible] his diſtreſs was, I have heard nothing but about his health.

Was it a ſort of diſeaſe, an extremity of diſorder, that does exhauſt a man's money? —I obſerved he was in great pain when he walked.

Mr. Garrow. One can rather hint at the diſorder than talk of it; but I will aſk Mr. Downham?——I really believe he was in a moſt unhappy ſtate, from a certain diſeaſe.

GUILTY.

To be burnt in the hand and diſcharged.

Court to Priſoner. In conſideration of your former good conduct, and the diſtreſſed ſituation you have been in, theſe gentlemen have all of them very humanely intereſted themſelves in your behalf, and they ſay they have an opportunity of ſending you abroad, if your health was properly reſtored, which I think in point of juſtice you ſhould; but you cannot be ſent in the ſtate you are in, and confinement in priſon would be fatal to your health; therefore I will order you to be burnt in the hand for this offence, in confidence from theſe gentlemen, that when you are better, you ſhall be ſent out of the kingdom.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

539. HUMPHRY INGRAM was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Gibſon Lucas on the 9th of April laſt, on the King's highway, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon, and againſt his will, one ſilver watch, value 40s. one ſteel chain, value 12d. a baſe metal ſwivel ſeal, value 1d. a piece of baſe metal watch key, value one half-penny, the property of the ſaid Gibſon, privily from his perſon.

GIBSON LUCAS ſworn.

On the 9th of April laſt I loſt my watch, between twelve and one at noon, between the Turk's Head bagnio and Northumberland-houſe, juſt facing Johnſon's-court in the Strand; I was coming with a chair on my head, when I was paſſing Johnſon's-court, I was puſhed about for a conſiderable time by ſeveral men, it was the time the man was ſtanding in the pilory; a man was coming paſt with a load upon his head, and they puſhed me againſt this man, and I thought I felt my watch ſlip out of my pocket; I immediately put my hand down and miſſed my watch; I ſaw it in the priſoner's hand, I am ſure of that; I then quitted my chair and got hold of one of his arms, I immediately ſaw a watch in another man's hand, I did not ſee him give it to the other man, but I ſaw it firſt in the priſoner's hand; I immediately ſeized the watch in the other man's hand, and in ſtruggling broke the chain, he had the watch, and I had the chain; then I got hold of that man, and held him faſt; and I immediately ſaw the priſoner, and ſaid, he was the man; he was juſt ſtanding by me, he was then in the cuſtody of one Bruce, but I did not know it till afterwards, I am ſure the priſoner was the man, I am very poſitive of it; he was taken into cuſtody, and was committed; it began in huſtling me about; I was afraid they would puſh me down with my chair.

Court. Was this ſhoving ariſing from the great croud and concourſe of people, or on purpoſe?——It appeared to me to be on purpoſe.

Was there any thing like a blow ſtruck, before the watch was taken?——Not before the watch was taken, I do not remember there was any violent blow, only puſhing and huſtling from one to another.

What it that kind of huſtling that ariſes from a croud; or did any particular perſon appear to be puſhing you?——I cannot ſay that I took any particular notice of what any one man did more than another.

WILLIAM RHODES ſworn.

I am an officer of the pariſh of St. Martin's, I was there on my duty; I heard a great great ruſh; I went out to ſee what was the matter and I found the proſecutor had loſt his watch, they was ſtruggling for the watch, Sir Robert Taylor was at a window at the Stationer's, he beckoned to me, I took him in cuſtody after the affray was over.

JOHN DRUCE ſworn.

On the 9th of April, I was ſtanding at Charing Croſs, looking at the man in the pilory, and the proſecutor was coming by with a chair on his head, and another man with a box on his head, they were intangled together looking down, I ſaw the priſoner's left elbow againſt the proſecutor's right-ſide, and I ſaw him take the watch out of his pocket and convey it to the other perſon, I never took my eyes off the perſon till I overtook him.

Did you obſerve a moment or two before the taking of the watch any conduct in the priſoner and the people about there?—There were a great many people round about.

Did you obſerve any particular violence uſed to Lucas?—No more than they were at his right-ſide, I did not ſee any blow given, I ſaw no particular ill-uſage, I never had my eye off the priſoner after he took it.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I have nothing to ſay, I have no friend in the world, this ſoldier ſaid when he was at the Juſtice's, that he was cloſe to the gentleman, but did not ſee my hands there, I was ſearched, I had a knife and three halfpence in my pocket.

Jury. How do you get your bread?——I ſell things with a jack-aſs.

GUILTY.

Of ſtealing, but not privately.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

541. ELIZABETH SCOTT was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 4th of May, twenty-four linen handkerchiefs, value 13s. and eight cotton handkerchiefs, value 8s. the property of Robert Salter, privily in his ſhop.

(The witneſſes examined apart.)

ELIZABETH SALTER ſworn.

I live in King ſtreet, Tower Hill, my huſband's name is Robert, he keeps the houſe and a hoſier's ſhop; on Wedneſday morning the 4th of this month I loſt the things mentioned in the indictment, value 1l. 1s. that is not the full value, it is under prime coſt; it was between eleven and twelve in the forenoon, ſhe ſtood very near the ſhop window, I was ſtanding in the parlour and I obſerved this woman in the ſhop, I did not ſee her come into the ſhop, there is a glaſs door between the ſhop and the parlour, and I ſaw the priſoner through the door that was open; I went into the ſhop and aſked her what ſhe wanted, ſhe aſked for purple ſtockings with pink clocks, I told her we had no ſuch thing, and ſhe went out, I thought ſhe looked like a ſuſpicious perſon, I went and looked at the bottom of the counter which is a ſmall diſtance, and I obſerved theſe handkerchiefs gone, they lay before that at the bottom of the counter, they were all tied up together in brown paper.

Did you yourſelf ſee her at that part of the counter?—I did not, when I obſerved the handkerchiefs were gone, I called to my maid and told her to run after the priſoner, the girl went after her and brought her back; I accuſed her with ſtealing them and ſhe ſaid ſhe had not, and I lifted up her cloak on the inſide and heard the handkerchiefs drop from under her cloak, they were in a bundle and I ſaw them juſt as they had been in the ſhop.

When had you laſt examined the bundle?—Not very lately, I ſtood very cloſe to the priſoner, I cannot ſay the number of handkerchiefs that were in the bundle, but I can ſay with preciſion they were linen and cotton, the cotton are marked with with A. N. my husband's writing, and the linen are marked A. B. and A. O. which are my hand writing.

ANN THOMPSON sworn.

I went after the prisoner to bring her back, between eleven and twelve, I was with my mistress in the parlour, I saw the prisoner in the shop, I followed her, she had a cloak on, she was walking about a dozen yards from the shop, she was not running; I told her my mistress wanted to speak to her, for she had the stockings, she then came back, and my mistress taxed her with having taken something, and she denied it; I heard the handkerchiefs drop, and saw them on the floor, I am very sure they dropped at that time; I saw the bundle afterwards, there were linen and cotton handkerchiefs in it.

(The handkerchiefs deposed to by the prosecutrix.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

The young woman came after me and told me her mistress wanted me, and I went back, and she said, young woman, you have robbed me, I said, no; as I was speaking, the bundle that stood behind me fell off the counter upon the ground, a gentleman pushed it off; I never saw any bundle of handkerchiefs or any thing of the kind.

Court to Mrs. Salter. At the time you examined her, was she very near the counter?—She was.

Was she so near that a parcel might fall off the counter?——No, Sir.

Could you mistake that?——No, Sir, because she stood with her left side to the counter, and the bundle fell from the right side.

Was there any gentleman in the shop at this time?——Yes, Sir, there was a young man a neighbour, that I called in from over the way, my husband was just gone out.

Was that gentleman in the shop when that bundle dropped?—He came over before the woman came back.

Was there any body near the counter, that could move any thing at this time?—No.

The prisoner called one witness, who gave her a very good character.

GUILTY.

Of stealing to the value of 4s. 10d.

To be privately whipped and imprisoned twelve months in the House of Correction.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

542. CHARLES SMITH, MICHAEL MANEVIL, and PETER MUMFORD were indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 6th of May, one ticking matrass, value 12d. one wooden chest, value 6s. one pillow, value 1s. a great coat, value 5s. two blankets, value 5s. sixteen linen shirts, value 30s. four pair of silk stockings, value 6s. six pair of thread stockings, value 6s. one pair of worsted, value 1s. two cloth coats, value 4s. two cotton waistcoats, value 3s. two velveret waistcoats, value 3s. three pair of trowsers, value 4s. one pair of drawers, value 6d. three silk handkerchiefs, value 6s. two linen ditto value 6d. one pair of shoes, value 4s. two pair of metal buckles, value 6d. two bibles, value 4s. one clothes brush, value 6d. two half crowns, value 5s. and three shillings in monies numbered, the property of Oswald Ray.

(The witnesses examined apart at the Prisoner's request.)

OSWALD RAY sworn.

I wanted to go to sea, and I went to the Royal Exchange to try to get a master, and I met with the prisoners Manevil and Smith, at the Exchange, so we talked a little about going to sea, and they walked with me, and sat down in the Irish walk, and I told Smith my design, then I went with Smith through the Royal Exchange, and and Smith told me he would look out for ſome Captains that he knew, but he ſaw none, and he told me if I would give a ſhilling to the clerk at Lloyd's Coffee-houſe, he would look one out for me, and we went below where the walks are for the Captains of the ſhips, at the Exchange; and when it came near dinner time, they went to dinner, and when the priſoner Smith and Mumford returned, the priſoner Smith told me they had got a birth for me to go up the Straits, at a guinea per month; that Smith was to be ſecond mate, and I was to be an ordinary ſeaman, this was the firſt day we met, that was on Wedneſday: on the Friday following which was the 6th of May, we met again, and we went to the Victualling office, to conſider how we could bring my cheſt from Wapping; the ſhip lay off Tower-wharf: I aſked if it was poſſible to go on board, and Smith told me yes, and on Friday night about nine, Smith came down to my lodgings at Wapping, with Mumford who appeared like a porter; I had every thing ready, and I put in my cheſt, the various things mentioned in the indictment; Smith and Mumford were to take my cheſt, and I was to carry my bedding and the mattraſs on my ſhoulders, and Smith and Mumford took the cheſt, one had hold of each handle, and we left Manevil and Mumford with my box, whilſt Smith and me went to fetch Smith's box from a houſe near Saint Catharine's ſtairs, Smith went into the houſe, and he came out and ſaid the landlord was away and had the key of the ſtore-houſe with him and he could not get it, and Smith and I ſtood at the door ſome time; then he went in again and did not return: I waited ſome time and went in and enquired for him, and he was not there, and I never ſaw him after; and I went and looked for the cheſt where we had left it at the Victualling Office, but I could not find it there, nor Manevil nor Mumford in whoſe care I left it; I ſearched for the cheſt, but never found it after, nor never heard of it till Mr. Matthews came and told me of it; in conſequence of which I went to the juſtice's with Matthews, and the priſoners were apprehended; I never ſaw the priſoners before this time; I was perfectly a ſtranger here.

JAMES MATTHEWS ſworn.

I am one of the beadles of Whitechapel; about half paſt ten on Friday laſt, the 6th of this month, the watchmen brought in Mumford and Manevil into our watch-houſe, with a cheſt and a mattraſs; I aſked them where they got it from, Manevil ſaid it came from on board the Betſey, Captain Williams, and he was ſo lame that he could not proceed on his voyage; I aſked him, if it was his cheſt, and he ſaid yes? I aſked him for the key, he ſaid he had left it on board; I ſaid that was ſurpriſing; I aſked him what it contained, he ſaid it contained a pillow, two Scotch blankets and a bed, and two pair of ſhoes, and ſome things; I detained them, and the next day they were taken before the Magiſtrate, and Smith came to give them a character, and Smith ſwore before the Magiſtrate, that the cheſt and contents were Manevil's, and ſigned his hand to the paper, and directly as Maneval ſaw him ſign the paper, he gave an item, and Smith was ordered out; then Manevil confeſſed how they came by the cheſt; and I went in conſequence to the proſecutor, in Wapping, in Milk-alley, he was in a very deplorable ſituation, having loſt his all; I took him to Mr. Staples's, and the proſecutor deſcribed the property; then the three priſoners were all detained, the cheſt is in court, it has been in my poſſeſſion ever ſince ſealed up.

The Remainder of this Trial in the next Part, which will be publiſhed in a few Days.

ERRATA.—No. V. Part I. page 684, line 7, for John Willes, read Edward Willes.—Page 690, laſt line but two, for fourteeen years, read ſeven.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 11th of MAY, 1785, and the following Days;

Being the FIFTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER V. PART III.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of Charles Smith, Michael Manevel, and Peter Mumford.

Court. Are there any examinations returned?——Here is a confeſſion of Manevel's.

Mathews. I ſaw Smith ſign a paper to his worſhip, but I believe it was erroneous, I believe it is not here.

Court. If there was any evidence given in writing, I cannot receive your evidence; is there anybody here belonging to Juſtice Staples, that ſaw this ſigned?—No, I did not ſee it.

Court. Then the confeſſion is out of the caſe.

(The things depoſed to.)

The linen marked Oſwald Ray; here are two bibles, my father's name is on them.

JOHN PURDIE ſworn.

I ſtopped two of theſe priſoners, Manevel and Mumford, in Ayliffe-ſtreet, Goodman's-fields, with this property; one had the cheſt, and the other the mattraſs; I carried them to the watch-houſe, and aſked them where they brought it from, they ſaid from New Crane; I aſked them from where, they ſaid from on board the Betſy, a ſhip lying at New Crane.

Court. Was you preſent at the examination before the Juſtice?——Yes.

Was what paſſed before the Juſtice taken down in writing?—Yes.

Court. Then I will hear no more about it.

WILLIAM RIPPON ſworn.

I am a patrol, the watchman ſtopped theſe men, and he called me to aid and aſſiſt him, they ſaid they brought it from New Crane, from on board a ſhip the Betſy, and we aſked them for the key, they ſaid they had left it on board the ſhip, we took them to the watch-houſe, and they were committed.

PRISONER SMITH's DEFENCE.

I have nothing to ſay, I aſſiſted to carry the cheſt on board the ſhip, to go to ſea; I had no inclination to take it, but I left it in theſe two people's charge.

ELIZABETH EVATT ſworn.

I have known Smith ever ſince the 10th of January laſt, he lodged with me, I always found him a good character.

ELE-

ELEANOR EVATT ſworn.

I am daughter to the laſt witneſs, I have known Smith above a twelvemonth, his general character was a very honeſt, ſober, young man; I never heard anything to the contrary.

PRISONER MANEVEL's DEFENCE.

On Friday night Mumford and me went to Tower-hill, and he left me to go to fetch his cheſt up, and I was not well able to walk; it was near nine o'clock; and they brought the cheſt, and Smith ſet down the cheſt to go for more things, they ſtaid ſo long, that I was afraid ſome accident would happen to the cheſt, and for fear of that I told Mumford it was beſt to take it to Red Lyon Court, and leave it there till morning, then we would go down and tell them where it was, and in going along the watchman took us up; he aſked us what it was, I did not know what to ſay, I was frightened; I ſaid it was mine, I was afraid of any accident coming to the cheſt.

ELIZABETH EVATT ſworn.

I have known this priſoner Manevel three years and an half, he ſailed with my ſon, he is a good ſober honeſt lad, I never found him to the contrary; I truſted him with all I had.

ELEANOR EVATT ſworn.

I have known him as long as my mother, I never heard any thing but that he was a very ſober honeſt young man.

PRISONER MUMFORD's DEFENCE.

I have nothing to ſay, only that Smith aſked me to go down and help him down with the cheſt; I have the ſame two witneſſes.

Elizabeth Evatt. The priſoner Mumford is a weaver, he works very hard for his living, he lives in my houſe.

Eleanor Evatt. I know no further of him than living in my mother's houſe; I never heard any harm of him, I know all his friends.

Jury. We wiſh to aſk whether this man was to be paid as a porter for aſſiſting Smith in carrying theſe things away?

Mumford. He told me he would give me two ſhillings.

Ray. Smith told me he would take a porter from the ſtreet, and give him half a crown, which I gave him for that purpoſe.

Jury. Was you fetched as a porter, or did you fall into their company by accident?—I was at work, and they aſked me to go out, they came home to my lodgings.

Priſoner Smith. We all lodge together.

ALL THREE GUILTY.

Each Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron PERRYN.

---

543. ANN DAVIS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 1ſt of May, one ſilver table ſpoon, value 3s. one tea-ſpoon, value 18d. one ſilver crewet top, value 3s. and one ſilk cloak, value 20s. the property of Elizabeth Thornton, ſpinſter.

ELIZABETH THORNTON ſworn.

I keep a houſe in the pariſh of Saint George, Hanover-ſquare, I loſt the things mentioned in the indictment, the beginning of May, I loſt them out of my own houſe; I am a millener, I keep ſix young ladies, that are employed in the buſineſs; they were for the uſe of the family; the priſoner came to be hired by me the 26th of April, in the capacity of a cook, I took her, and had a character with her; when I went after her character, I was not ſatisfied with it, but I was without a ſervant; I told her if ſhe behaved well for a few days, I would pay her as a chare-woman; and ſhe was in ſervice as a chare-woman; I loſt the ſpoon the 1ſt of May, it was a Sunday, when I miſſed the things ſhe ſaid do you think I have got them? I ſaid I did not know, I did not think ſhe had; ſhe then ſaid ſhe would go away; I ſaid, why will will you go? she then set down and gave me some indifferent language, and said she would do nothing more till she had her wages; I paid her her wages, five shillings for three days, and she went away in the afternoon; going out, I missed my cloak; and the young people looked in their boxes, and I looked every where but could not find it; I searched for the cloak; in the evening I got a search warrant, and found out her lodgings in Mary-le-bon-court, with Mr. William New, she was out, but came home soon after, and we searched her and found a tea-spoon in her pocket.

——— NEW sworn.

I have the spoon, which she was conveying to another young woman in the public house, and I took it from both their hands.

(The spoon deposed to.)

Here is the fellow to it.

Court. Hand it up, it is pretty difficult to swear to this spoon, there is no mark nor any thing.

Prisoner. That spoon was my own spoon.

ABRAHAM BARRIER sworn.

I am the constable that took her with a warrant, she would not be searched, and behaved very rough, and struck me; I took her into a public house where we were waiting for her; as soon as the spoon was found, I thought it better to take her to the office; there I searched her, and found this table spoon, and this top; we were forced to wrench it from her by main force. (The table spoon deposed to.) She said that I had them in my pocket, and put them into her's; she threw the duplicate out of the window, and I went to the pawn broker's, and he readily delivered it up.

JOHN CROUCH sworn.

I am a pawn-broker in Berwick-street, I never saw the prisoner before she came to me on the Monday morning between ten and eleven, she brought with her a black mode cloak, which she pawned for half-a-guinea; I gave her half-a-guinea upon it, it is my writing, I am sure of the woman.

(The cloak deposed to.)

Prisoner. I have no friends but God Almighty, and the gentlemen of the Jury; I never was tried, I have no witnesses, I have not six-pence to send for a person; as to that lady, I would not put my life in her hands, she is a very bad person.

GUILTY.

To be confined to hard labour twelve months in the House of Correction.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. Justice WILLES.

---

544. WORLEY WALMSLAY was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 25th day of April last, one deal box, value 1s. two shirts, value 5s. two handkerchiefs, value 2s. two linen neck handkerchiefs, value 2s. a pair of worsted stockings, value 1s. one dimity waistcoat, value 2s. one cotton waistcoat, value 2s. the property of Richard Taylor the younger; two half-crowns, value 5s. one shilling, one six-pence, and three copper halfpence, the property of John Brown.

RICHARD TAYLOR sworn.

How old are you?——Fourteen, I live with Mr. Mackintosh, No. 285, in Holborn, he is a linen draper, I am not apprentice, I am shop-boy, and sleep there; I keep my clothes in a deal box, I sent down a deal box with my linen to be washed to my father at Hanwell, in Middlesex; there were in this deal box, two linen shirts, two pocket handkerchiefs, and two neck handkerchiefs, and the other things mentioned in the indictment, I sent them down on the Tuesday before the Friday that they were taken, I believe it was the 25th of April, I sent by Thomas Webb, who who was to take care of them to Hanwell, in a cart, he is a common carrier, my box was tied with a cord, I ſometimes ſent them weekly, and ſometimes every fortnight.

Mr. Keys, Priſoner's Council. What became of the box after it went from you, you do not know?——No.

Nor what was in it when it was taken you do not know?—No.

THOMAS WEBB ſworn.

I am a carrier from the Nag's Head, James-ſtreet, Covent Garden, to Colnbrook, I carried the box down to Colnbrook, and brought it back again, the box was corded and directed for Mr. Richard Taylor, at the Nag's Head, Covent Garden; it was taken away in the yard of the Nag's head, I was talking to a man, who is one of the witneſſes, in the ſtreet, and I met the priſoner with the box under his arm, I came in a little after ſix in the evening, and in leſs than a quarter of an hour, I met the priſoner with the box, I ſaid, you have got my box, and he ran away; he ran up Hart-ſtreet with the box in his arm, I ſaid to this man that I was talking with, that man has got my box; then the priſoner dropped the box and I took it up, and the next witneſs took him.

(The things depoſed to.)

Mr. Keys. Whoſe property are theſe things.

Proſecutor. The money that was found in the box was ſent from my aunt, I have a letter.

How do you know theſe things are yours, becauſe there may be other ſhirts of the ſame ſize, as well as the handkerchiefs and ſtockings?——I can ſwear I ſent theſe ſhirts down, one of them if not both are marked.

Court. Do you believe that you ſent down theſe things to be waſhed?—Yes.

Is that the box you ſent them down in?—Yes.

Webb. I carried the box to the Nag's Head.

WILLIAM MATHEWS ſworn.

I was converſing with Webb, when the cart ſtood at the door.

Court. Did any thing happen?—Webb met the man with a box, he ſaid, that is the man that has got my box, he was running, I ſaw him drop the box, I found it againſt my legs; I run after the priſoner, in about two minutes I overtook him, he ran I ſuppoſe two hundred yards, he ſaid, he knew nothing of it, he was committed.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was very much in liquor coming down Hart-ſtreet, and this box lay, and I picked it up; and I ſaid, if this is your box take it.

The Priſoner called three witneſſes who all gave him a very good character, and ſaid he had a wife and three children.

GUILTY.

He was humbly recommended to mercy on account of his wife and family.

Burnt in the hand and diſcharged.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

545. ELIZABETH SILBY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 2d of May, eighteen pair of cotton ſtockings, value 30s. the property of Henry Thwaits and James Gibſon.

WILLIAM BRADLEY ſworn.

How old are you?——Fourteen, I am apprentice to the proſecutors, they are linen drapers and hoſiers, they are in partnerſhip together, their ſhop is the corner of Lombard-court, Weſt-ſtreet, Seven Dials; I ſaw the priſoner coming down ſtairs, I detected her at the ſtreet door with theſe ſtockings upon her, that was the 2d of May, ſhe had them under her arm, I do not remember having ſeen her in the ſhop, I was ſtanding at the houſe door, and I ſaw her coming down ſtairs from the parlour, I knew nothing of the priſoner before; the things are the property of the proſecutors, they have the ſhop marks, they have been in my cuſtody ever ſince, they are now in the ſame condition they were; one of the papers is marked B. A. and the other is marked No. 21. B. A. and my maſter's ſhop mark; No. 21, is the mark of the invoice of the perſon of whom he purchaſed them; I ſtopped her and aſked her where ſhe had been, ſhe ſaid, ſhe had been to ſpeak to Mrs. Ellis, I knew there was no ſuch perſon in the houſe, therefore I ſtopped her, and found the ſtockings under her arm; I called for aſſiſtance, and ſhe was taken before the Magiſtrates in Litchfield-ſtreet.

WILLIAM HART ſworn.

I was called to the aſſiſtance of the laſt witneſs, I know theſe ſtockings to be the property of the proſecutors, I took them up ſtairs in the morning, and laid them in the cloſet in the dining room, I am ſure and certain ſhe took them.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was very much in liquor, and the conſtable ſaid, you have ſomething under your arm, I ſaid, it is more than I know off; I muſt leave my caſe to the bleſſing of God Almighty, and the Gentlemen of the Court.

Hart. I believe ſhe was in liquor.

Court. Being in liquor is no excuſe, it generally ſhews the intention of the party.

Jury. Was the priſoner on the outſide of the door in the ſtreet, when you took the ſtockings from her?——Yes.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped and diſcharged.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron PERRYN.

---

546. MARTIN HARRISON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 21ſt of April laſt, one bolſter, value 4s. one linen bolſter cover, value 12d. two linen ſheets, value 8s. two blankets, value 6s. a looking-glaſs in a mahogany frame, value 2s. a tea kettle, value 18d. a pair of bellows, value 6d. a pair of tongs, value 12d. one copper frying pan, value 6d. the property of John Citizen, being in a certain lodging room let by contract by the ſaid John to the ſaid Martin, and to be uſed with the ſame lodging.

JOHN CITIZEN ſworn.

The priſoner lodged in my houſe ten weeks, in a ready furniſhed lodging, I loſt the things mentioned in the indictment, on the 21ſt of April, when I came from reſt in the morning, and the priſoner went out, I went out I found my houſe was robbed and he never returned, and I heard him tell his wife he would be back in one hour, and after that he never came back all the day; his wife was confined in her room, and I thought ſome of my things that were taken away were lodged in it, therefore I wiſhed to ſee the inner part of his room, and my wife went to the door, and deſired his wife to open the door, ſhe ſaid, ſhe could not, for her huſband had they key; when my wife miſſed the things, I got a warrant to act as the law would direct me, the priſoner was taken at nine at night, I was preſent, he was taken in Cherry-tree-alley, Golden-lane; and he run acroſs the ſtreet, to a place called Hartſhorn-court, I never got any of my things again, the ſheets were found at a pawnbroker's, at one Mr. Weſt's.

JOHN MORRETT ſworn.

On the 15th of March, the priſoner brought this ſheet to pawn for half a crown; I know him, I know of nothing elſe, he had the blanket in and out every day for ſometime, and other things, I am ſure of the man.

(The ſheet depoſed to.)

Court. What did he ſay for himſelf?—He ſaid before the Juſtice he had pawned them them through neceſſity, and ſome things at a friend's houſe, and he ſaid, he took them for the relief of his friend.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

The ſheet the pawnbroker has now, was paid for, it was fetched out to return to Mr. Citizen, and they detained it, I own to the things being pawned through diſtreſs, and hardneſs of the winter, I am an ivory-turner by trade; with reſpect to the robbery, there are them that have been once or twice and more before your Lordſhip; with reſpect to their being robbed it is no wonder, there is a ſtring to pull at the door to let people in any hour of the night; I pawned the things with intent to bring them back.

Proſecutor. I am upon my oath to ſpeak the truth, and I will ſpeak the truth, I ſhould be the ſtupideſt man living, having property, to leave my houſe ſo unſafe, I did not, I have a lock and bolt, the ſtring was through neceſſity in the day time; the houſe was ſecured that night, I can aſſure your honour.

The priſoner called four witneſſes who all gave him a very good character.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

547. MARY MORRIS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 14th of April laſt, two piſtols value 4s. one tea-cheſt, value 1s. one pair of ſtays, value 1s. and one linen ſhift, value 1s. the property of John Davidſon.

JOHN DAVIDSON ſworn.

My room was broke open, and I was informed it was the priſoner; I can ſwear to the piſtols, I had not had them above four hours, I had not taken them home from Tower-hill, I keep a ſtall, I had them to clean; the tea-cheſt I can ſafely ſwear to, the ſheet I cannot ſwear to, and I do not know the ſhift; I ſaw ſome picklock keys taken from the priſoner, the things that are found were not in the cloſet.

SARAH KENDALL ſworn.

I am thirteen.

Do you know the nature of an oath?—No.

What will become of you if you tell ſtories?—When I die, I ſhall go to hell.

Do you know if you ſwear falſe, that you will go to hell too?——Yes. I live at No. 6, St. Catherine's-lane, three doors from the proſecutor's houſe, the ſame ſide of the way; I was looking over the hatch between two and three, and the priſoner came down the ſteps, and ſhe had a very great bundle in her apron, I am ſure to the woman, her apron was done round the bundle; ſhe had a cloak on, and ſhe was trying to hide it, and ſhe walked away quickly, ſhe went up the lane juſt by St. Catherine ſtairs.

How long might you ſee her altogether? About five minutes.

What did you do when you ſaw this?—I looked over the hatch and juſt after that I heard a woman that lived in the row ſay, that Mr. Davidſon's room was broke open, and about ten minutes or rather better, I ſaw the priſoner, I knew her immediately, and I ſaw her drop a tea-cheſt, and I looked at her very hard, and ſhe aſked me what I wanted, and I ſaid, nothing, and a man in a blue coat picked up the tea-cheſt, and bid her walk along; then ſhe went up ſome turning, and I could not find her, then I came home, when the man picked up the tea-cheſt he gave it her, and ſhe put it in her lap; the tea-cheſt had four braſs corners; after that I went with Mr. Davidſon, and met the woman in Roſemary-lane; and ſhe dropped the ſleeve of a child's ſhift, and another woman that was with her, picked it up; Mr. Davidſon owned them, and then the woman got a little further, and ſhe chucked them all down and run away, I ſaw all the things all together chucked down, and I ſaw the ſhifts

ſhifts, and a pair of ſtays; the other things were underneath as I could not diſtinguiſh them, I do not know who picked them up.

JOHN CHIVERS ſworn.

I am an officer, I was upon duty on Thurſday about five, I was as far from the priſoner as I am now, I was called to take the priſoner into cuſtody, and I ſaw the things upon the ground in Roſemary-lane, there are two piſtols, a tea-cheſt, a pair of ſtays, and a ſhift.

(The things produced and depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was coming up St. Catherines, and I met with a woman I knew very well, ſhe aſked me where I was going, ſhe deſired me to take hold of theſe things, and meet her at the Crooked Billet; I went up there, and the proſecutrix met me, I told her where I got the things, and they would not let me go to the woman.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped and impriſoned two years in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

549. LUCY BRAND alias WOOD was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 9th of May, one piece of ſilver coin, called half a crown, and five ſhillings and ſixpence, the monies of Dennis Minors, privily from his perſon.

DENNIS MINORS ſworn.

I was looking for a job of work, coming through a place, the woman at the bar and another woman was with her, this woman was drunk, and the other woman begged me to help her up ſtairs to her own room, it was in Whitechapel, I do not know the name of the ſtreet; I helped her up ſtairs, ſhe then aſked me to give her a drink, I gave her three-pence halfpenny for a pot of beer, and while the beer was gone for, I felt her take out my purſe, and ſhe cut the bottom out of it; ſhe took one end of my purſe out of my pocket, ſhe ſtrove to do it unknown to me; I was going and ſhe came to my ſide, and took the purſe out of my pocket, I followed her into the ſtreet and charged a conſtable with her; I had five and ſixpence in ſilver, and half a crown; ſhe cut the purſe?

Did you find it afterwards?—Yes.

Why did not you hinder her from doing this?——I did not feel her, ſhe run out and I followed her at the ſame time, I am ſure of the woman, I am but a poor labouring man, ſhe did not leave me two pence for my lodging, and I hope the Gentlemen will look upon me.

BENJAMIN NASH ſworn.

Laſt Monday at noon time, I was going by George-yard, and I heard a number of people, and I went and found the priſoner in an empty room, I ſays to her knowing her before, Luce, where is the money, you have the money; I could not find any at all but a few halfpence, ſhe was locked up, ſays they, now ſhe has a ſhilling in her hand; I then ſearched her again, and then found a ſhilling and a ſixpence in her hand, and then I found four ſhillings and ſixpence more concealed.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I met this man, and he followed me up ſtairs, he was in liquor, and we was all almoſt in liquor, my huſband wanted ſome money to drink, and I concealed it, I put the money in the tail of my ſhift.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped and impriſoned one year.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

550. GEORGE

549. GEORGE BAPTIST and JAMES SEWELL were indicted for feloniously ſtealing on the 5th of November, 1783, 200lb. weight of lead, value 20s. the property of certain perſons whoſe names are as yet unknown.

The Caſe opened by Mr. Silveſter.

JOHN NORTH ſworn.

I keep a clothes ſhop.

Do you deal in lead?—Yes.

Did you buy any lead of Baptiſt and Sewell in November, 1783?——Yes, I think I did; I think I bought as much as came to 20s. of Sewell and Baptiſt, and one Atkins, and Collins, and one or two more; I think it came to 20s. the lead was very old, and much decayed.

Could you form any opinion to what it had been applied?——It had the appearance of old decayed ſheet lead.

THOMAS COLLINS called.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. By the evidence of this man, I am told he is an accomplice.

Court. Did theſe three men come together?—Yes, I think they did.

Will you ſwear they did?——To the beſt of my knowledge they did; the firſt that came was Sewell, he brought Atkinſon, and another or two; they told me they had a little old lead to diſpoſe of, and if I choſe to buy it, I ſhould have the preference; they ſaid it was perfectly ſafe, they had an order from the gentleman to remove it, and ſell it.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

550. GEORGE BAPTIST and JOHN PAUL were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 20th of February, 1783, 110lb. weight of lead, value 20s. the property of perſons whoſe names are as yet unknown.

JOHN NORTH ſworn.

What paſſed when you bought this parcel of lead, who was preſent?——Collins and Baptiſt, and I think Paul was preſent; I believe Paul brought it, nothing particular paſſed, but weighing the lead, and paying for it, I paid about twelve or fifteen ſhillings.

What weight had you?——I do not recollect, it was all at a penny a pound, it was exceedingly old, and periſhed throughout.

What kind of lead was it?—It had the appearance of old decayed ſheet lead, it was in ſmall pieces, beat up, I ſold it again without rolling it out.

Did you hear from either Baptiſt or Paul or from Collins, in the preſence of either of them, where this lead came from?—No, Sir, that I did not.

Did not you think it very odd where this lead came from?——It was very dirty and very old, it was dry to be ſure.

Court. How can you carry this matter any further.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

551. JAMES FITZPATRICK was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 27th of April laſt, one waiſtcoat, value 6d. one linen waiſtcoat, value 6d. one linen ſhirt, value 9d. one bedgown, value 1s. two ſtone baſons, value 2d. a candleſtick, value 8d. and one clothes-bruſh, value 6d. the property of Samuel Cliſſon.

SAMUEL CLISSON ſworn.

I loſt the things mentioned in the indictment, I was out at the time of the robbery, I returned between three and four in the afternoon, it was on Wedneſdy, I believe the 27th of April, the prisoner was in my room, with the constable, my wife had got the property from him before I came.

HANNAH CLISSON sworn.

On the 27th of April I lost the things mentioned in the indictment; they stood in the room between the wall and the bedside in the same room we live in; I saw the prisoner's head in my room, and took him there; I found the things at the passage door; I saw the things in the room at one o'clock.

(The things deposed to.)

ANN FREEBORN sworn.

I go to chair-making, I live at next door, I was coming by, and a little girl was crying at the door, she said the man frightened her; I said, sit down, and if anybody comes call your mammy; I went into my own house, and presently I heard Mrs. Cliffon very loud, saying, you rogue, you villain, what do you come to rob such a poor woman as I; and I went out, and I saw Mrs. Cliffon holding the prisoner, and picking up a bundle in the passage; I am sure of the man.

SUSANNAH AVIS sworn.

I am no trade at all, I live next door to Mrs. Cliffon, I came in the mean time, as she was taking the basons out of the man's pocket; I know the prisoner to be the man, there was a candlestick and clothes-brush, and a bundle of clothes laying in the passage where she was.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

Last Tuesday, three women, and that man, and another man, came down to New Prison to me, as they understood I had a little prize-money due, and told me, if I could advance them a little money, they would not prosecute me; I told them I had no money, I said it was a bad place for you to come into a gaol, and I saw them safe out of the gate.

Court to Prosecutrix. Is this true?—I went to look at the prisoner, but this story is not true; I did not ask him for any money.

Mrs. Cliffon. We went on purpose to learn his right name, and he offered to give me money, and I told him I did not want money, as poor as I was; he offered me 6d. when I took him, and his waistcoat, and I would not have it.

Freeborn. I was with them, there was no money asked; Mrs. Cliffon said she did not want any bribe.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

552. CHARLES LUNDMAN was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 25th of April last, one silver watch, value 30s. a steel chain, value 6d. a seal set in silver, value 6d. one metal watch-key, value 1d. the property of Erick Bergstrom.

ERICK BERGSTROM sworn.

I lost the things mentioned in the indictment; I took in the prisoner out of charity, he lived with me as a servant, he went away one afternoon without asking for wages, or saying any thing, and my wife going up found the drawers open, and the things gone; this was on the Monday, and on the Tuesday the boy was brought back, he was afterwards taken into custody by another witness; when the prisoner was brought home, he said here is the thief, you may do with me what you please; I never threatened nor promised him, he took out the key with his own hand, and produced it to the constable, and the watch in the same way; the constable has had the watch ever since, it is my watch, I have wore it six or seven years myself, I know the watch by the seal, it has a head on one side, ſide, and a ſteel chain, I have ſeen that watch in the drawer ſeveral times; the watch was produced by the boy.

JOHN BERGSTROM ſworn.

I am the proſecutor's ſon, on the 25th of April, between four and five in the afternoon I came home from on board of ſhip, I ſet myſelf down in the bar, and I heard my mother ſtamping on the ſtairs, and ſhe called me, and ſaid ſhe was robbed; I went up along with her, and ſaw her open the drawer, and I looked in and ſaw the watch was gone; I know the watch had been in the drawer a long time, I know it had been kept there, and other watches beſides; I cannot tell when I laſt ſaw it there, I would not on any conſideration ſwear to it: I was preſent when the priſoner was brought in, and the priſoner ſaid, here comes the thief; then the watch was taken out of his pocket by the conſtable; I ſaw the key taken from him, I remember the key very well, and I verily believe it to be the key that opens the drawer up ſtairs.

THOMAS TAYLOR ſworn.

I am a conſtable, on the 28th of April laſt, between twelve and one, I charged the priſoner with robbing the proſecutor, he was taken by another young man, and brought in a coach, and I found upon him a watch and key, the watch was delivered to me, nothing was ſaid to him before this, the watch was delivered to me by Mrs. Bergſtrom, he ſaid the watch was their property; I believe the key will open the door.

DANIEL BERGSTROM ſworn.

I uſed to wear a watch which was kept in the room where my father and mother lay; I have many a time ſeen it in that drawer, I wore it the Sunday before it was miſſed, my mother gave it me to wear, ſhe ſaid I ſhould have it, I returned it to her at night, and ſhe put it by in the drawer; I ſhould know the watch again among a thouſand.

(Depoſes to the watch.)

I wore it above a twelve month, it has the ſame chain and ſeal, the ſeal is a man's head upon it; I gave that notice to the pawn-broker, when he took it, there is a little bird upon a little branch on the other ſide of the ſeal: when the priſoner firſt came in, ſays I, here is Lundman, aye, ſays he, here is the thief.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I have nothing to ſay; I have no witneſſes.

GUILTY.

Recommended to mercy on account of his youth.

Court to Proſecutor. Have you loſt any other property?

Proſecutor. I would wiſh to recommend him to mercy.

While this boy was with you, did you loſe any other property to any other amount?——I did, but have not put it in.

To what amount might you loſe property?——I loſt ſome money, my wife told me of ſeven guineas and a half in gold, and a guinea in ſilver; when I have any money to ſpare I give it my wife, and ſhe puts it in a drawer; but nevertheleſs, my Lord, I wiſh to recommend him to mercy, he has no friends here in this part.

Court. What country is the boy?——A Swede.

Court. Do you underſtand Engliſh, my boy?——Yes.

Has he anybody that would take him to his own country?——I cannot ſay, I will never have him in my houſe any more; there was a captain of a Swediſh ſhip at our houſe the other day, and he ſaid he would take him, he ſaid his name was Andrew Buer.

Court. I will reſpite his judgment at preſent; I dare ſay the Swediſh Ambaſſador will take care he ſhall be ſent to his own country, if that captain will not take him?——His father is a comptroller in the navy at Sweden.

What

What is the number of your houſe?—— No. 33, Wellcloſe-ſquare; the name of the captain is Andrew Buer; the father does not wiſh to have him home again.

Privately whipped and delivered.

N. B. On the application of the conſtable in this laſt trial, who was a houſekeeper in Wellcloſe-ſquare, for his expences, the Court wiſhed it to be generally underſtood that all witneſſes that attend are not neceſſarily to be allowed for their attendance, but only thoſe poor perſons that loſe their time, and daily labour; and that where a great number of witneſſes, and conſtables, for inſtance, were bound over, ſuch would not, in future, be allowed their expences. Mr. Alderman Watſon obſerving, that himſelf, and the Jury, and every man that attended there, on the buſineſs of the ſeſſions, were taken from their employments; but in doing what they could to protect ſociety, their reward was with themſelves.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

552. ELEANOR M'CABE and ANN GEORGE were indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting John Harris, in the dwelling-houſe of William Calloway, on the 1ſt of May, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon, and againſt his will ſix copper half-pence, value 3d. and three ſhillings, in monies numbered, his property.

JOHN HARRIS ſworn.

I went to the opening of a new public-houſe, and we ſtaid rather longer there than I uſually do, we ſtaid till a little after two the next morning; we drank a good deal of porter, coming along, this priſoner M'Cabe picked me up, I had no deſign to go along with her, but through her perſuaſions, went home with her; ſhe carried me to a houſe in Croſs-lane, St. Gile's, I found her wanting to pick my pocket, and I was coming away from the place accordingly; ſhe found ſhe could not do it alone, and ſhe directly called two to her aſſiſtance, and ſhe gave me a puſh, and I fell down upon the bed; one of thoſe that came in to her aſſiſtance is the priſoner Ann George.

Can you ſwear that?—I would not wiſh to ſwear that; I cannot ſwear to thoſe two that ſhe called; when they came into the door, ſhe puſhed me down on the bed; I called out directly to the watch; I was in great fear, and ſhe clapped both her hands upon my mouth, I ſtrove to get her hand from my pockets, and the other hand that ſhe had at my mouth, I could not get her hand away, ſhe bit my cheek; one of the others took my money, while M'Cabe held me down; as ſoon as ſhe let go my mouth, I directly cried out watch! murder! accordingly the watchman came, and I gave him charge of the priſoner M'Cabe, and I never left hold of her; my calling watch ſo violently, ſomebody elſe called watch, which I think to be the priſoner George; M'Cabe was taken into cuſtody; I know nothing of my own knowledge againſt Ann George; I was much in liquor, but I loſt three ſhillings and ſome half-pence.

When had you felt in your pocket before?——When I went in with M'Cabe, I put my hand in my pocket, and took my money out, and looked at it, and ſaw three ſhillings and ſome half-pence: ſhe was not ſearched till Monday.

Court. Whoſe houſe was this in?—I do not know indeed.

JOHN DALY ſworn.

I am a watchman, I heard the cry of watch.

What houſe was it in;——I cannot tell, I was only ſupernumerary that night, I do not know the owner of the houſe; I found two girls in the room when I went in, and three men; the priſoner M'Cabe was there, and the priſoner Ann George met me juſt at the end of the paſſage, at the foot of the ſtairs, and cried out watch; ſhe ſaid they were were uſed ill by a man that was in the room, and begged of me to come to their aſſiſtance.

Court. Are you ſure ſhe ſaid ſo?——Yes.

Repeat her words as near as you can?——Watch! watch! ſays ſhe, we are ill uſed by a man in the room, come to our aſſiſtance.

When you came into the room, what did the man charge them with?——He charged them with robbing him, and uſing him in that ſituation that he was in.

What ſituation did you find him in?——He was in a very ſhocking ſituation; he was almoſt torn to pieces, and there was blood all round his lips.

Was there any mark of being bit?——No, there did not appear any ſign of biting, the blood came from round his mouth, whether it came out of his mouth, or whether he was ſcratched in the mouth I cannot ſay; I did not ſee any wound in his face; they ſaid to me that he wanted to uſe them ill, and wanted to have to ſay to them. I took the priſoner to the watch-houſe, the other woman made her eſcape.

Did he tell you what money he had loſt?——Yes, he ſaid it was four ſhillings.

Are you ſure of that?——Yes.

Did he tell you of anything elſe he had loſt?——No.

Do not you know whoſe houſe this was?——No.

Court to Proſecutor. How came you to ſay that night that you had loſt four ſhillings?—— I was not ſenſible of what I had loſt, but I recollected that I had three ſhillings and ſome half-pence, which I could ſwear to; there might be more, by what I had ſpent in the courſe of the evening, I think there muſt be that in my pocket.

Who gave the inſtructions for the indictment?——The witſnes which I have here, going from the place with me, ſaid the priſoners told him whoſe houſe it was, but I did not hear them.

Court to watchman. Did you hear the priſoner ſay whoſe houſe it was?——I did, but I did not take notice; the priſoner told at the Juſtice's whoſe houſe it was.

Is there anybody here that was preſent at thetime?——No.

What Juſtice was it?—Juſtice Walker.

PRISONER M'CABE's DEFENCE.

On Saturday night was a week I was ſtanding at my own door, and this man came up to me, he was very ſolid and ſober, ſeemingly to me, it was about two o'clock, he aſked me to drink, I ſaid I did not want anything to drink; and at the watch-houſe the man ſaid I robbed him of four ſhillings and ſix-pence, on Monday he ſaid I knocked him down upon the bed; this young woman was ſtopped coming to bring me my bed-gown at the watch-houſe.

PRISONER GEORGE'S DEFENCE.

I have nothing to ſay.

Court to watchman. Did you obſerve whether this woman had her clothes torn?——M'Cabe had; I aſked the man how ſhe came to have her clothes torn, and he ſaid it was becauſe ſhe wanted to run away after they had got his money.

Court to Jury. It is perhaps not neceſſary now to ſtate the particular place where the robbery was committed, but wherever the party drawing the indictment, does charge the place, the proof muſt correſpond with it; and here there is no evidence whoſe dwelling-houſe this robbery was committed in.

ELEANOR M'CABE GUILTY of ſtealing.
Tranſported to Africa for ſeven years.

ANN GEORGE GUILTY of ſtealing.
Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

554. MARY WOOD was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 19th of March laſt, one ſilk and cotton ſtriped waiſtcoat with ſilver baſket buttons, value 20s. four linen linen ſhirts, value 10s. four pair of nankeen breeches, value 20s. a white waiſtcoat, value 5s. two pair of drawers, value 2s. one pair of black ſilk breeches, value 12s. a pair of white cotton ſtockings, value 3s. the property of Charles Price, in his dwelling houſe.

CHARLES PRICE ſworn.

I loſt the things at different times out of my chambers in Barnard's Inn, they were left in my cuſtody for my brother, to take care of, the priſoner attended my chambers as laundreſs.

What were the value of the things?—The making alone of the whole of the things coſt twenty-four pounds, they were loſt at different times, from the 1ſt of February to the latter end of March; my brother is an attorney, I am in the law myſelf, clerk to my brother; the firſt thing I found was at Mr. Cottrell's, a Pawnbroker, in Shoe-lane, I have not found anything elſe to produce.

——— BLADON ſworn.

I am a journeyman to Mr. Cottrell, a pawnbroker; here is a marcella waiſtcoat, value 6s. a pair of nankeen breeches, and a pair of drawers which I took in of the priſoner; I am ſure of the priſoner, ſhe came in frequently, and uſed to redeem them again.

(The things depoſed to.)

Price. I cannot poſitively ſwear to any of the things.

Court. Then there is an end to the buſineſs.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. Baron PERRYN.

---

555. NICHOLAS RILEY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 18th of April laſt, one wooden trunk covered with ſkin, the property of Eleanor Blexley, widow.

ELEANOR BLEXLEY ſworn.

I live the corner of London-ſtreet, Mark-lane.

On the 18th of April laſt, did you loſe a trunk?——Yes, a wooden trunk covered with ſkin, it was loſt from under a gateway, which belongs to me.

A WITNESS ſworn.

I was coming down London-ſtreet, and I ſaw the priſoner with the trunk on his ſhoulders I purſued and took him, and brought him to the ſhop, the boy ſaid, he had loſt a trunk.

MICHAEL WARREN ſworn.

I produce the trunk, I had it from Mrs. Blexley in the ſhop, when ſhe charged the priſoner with taking it, it was as near nine as I can recollect, I believe it was Tueſday the 18th of April.

THOMAS PLAYFAIR ſworn.

I was at work in the proſecutrix's ſhop, and as I made it myſelf, I am ſure it was the proſecutrix's property.

JOSEPH ——— ſworn.

I am a hair dreſſer, I have been backwards and forwards ſeveral times to the proſecutrix's houſe, and ſeeing the priſoner come with a trunk on his head, I had a ſuſpicion he had taken it, and I run down into the gateway to ſee if the trunks were there, and I found one was gone, I hallooed out ſtop thief! and I ſaw that gentleman and another lay hold of him, and bring him back to Mrs. Blexley's houſe; the priſoner had the trunk on his ſhoulders.

Priſoner. It was on my head, Sir.

I aſked him where he was going, he ſaid, to Mincing-lane; I ſaid, you are going the wrong way.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was looking for work, and coming round where this gentlewoman lived, two women with red trunks, they aſked me if I was

I was a porter, I ſaid, I was, and they told me to carry that trunk to Mincing-lane; as I went on I heard them mention ſomething of the Graveſend boat, I thought they were behind me, and they came and took me; I directly told them how I came by it, and the perſon that I received it from was not to be found.

Court. Did he give the ſame account when he was brought back to the ſhop?—Yes, he ſaid, a woman offered him ſixpence to carry it into Mincing-lane; he ſaid, on my calling out ſtop thief! he thought the women were behind him in the room of me.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. Baron PERRYN.

---

556. SAMUEL CROSS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 6th of May, one iron bar, value 2s. the property of Stephen Roberts, affixed to his dwelling houſe.

A ſecond Count, for ſtealing an iron padlock, value 6d. the property of the ſaid Stephen.

STEPHEN ROBERTS ſworn.

I live in Baſing-lane, I loſt an iron bar, weighing 20lb. worth about a penny a pound, it had been on the cellar window all the time, I had had poſſeſſion of the window almoſt a twelvemonth, it was fixed by a ſtaple.

WILLIAM BLACKBURNE ſworn.

I am a porter, on the 6th of May, I was taking my rounds between five and ſix in the morning, and ſaw the priſoner in Bow lane, ſtanding cloſe up againſt a door which comes into Baſing lane, and I met the priſoner again a little before ſix with a bar, ſays I, friend where are you going with that bar? ſays he, it is not your bar, what is that to you, no, nor ſays I, I am afraid it is not yours, and I ſtopped him; he threw down the bar and ran forty or fifty yards, and a man met him and took him (The bar depoſed to.) I cannot ſwear to the padlock.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I bought that a year and half ago, of one Captain Forty, I have no witneſſes.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

557. ELEANOR BUTLER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 18th of April laſt, ten ſmall chip boxes containing four ounces in weight of ſalt of lemons, value 4s. two bottles of eſſence of bergamot, value 1s. the property of John Price.

JOHN PRICE ſworn.

I am a perfumer, the priſoner was ſervant at my houſe in April laſt, ſhe behaved very well indeed, I loſt ten chip boxes with ſalt of lemons in them, ſhe was a ſervant of all work, it was to take ſtains out of linen.

Did you allow her them to uſe?—No, I loſt ten boxes of it, the value is about four ſhillings, that is the intrinſic value, the boxes were found at an acquaintance of her's who is a ſervant at the George and Vulture; I allowed her to uſe as much as ſhe could in my houſe, I took her to be very honeſt, and I apprehend ſtill, that ſhe did not conſider the conſequence, I look upon it that ſhe meant to give them.

Court. Do you think that ſhe meant to ſteal them?—No, ſhe did not, I hope.

What do you ſay as to the bergamot?—I took her to be an honeſt girl.

Do not you apprehend this to be a miſtake of the poor girl's, did ſhe make any money of this buſineſs?—I believe not.

She

She has been in gaol ever ſince the 18th of April now?—Yes.

And you had a very good opinion of her honeſty?——Yes.

And ſhe behaved very well for nine months?——She did.

You are a very religious honeſt man I apprehend?—I wiſh I was more ſo, I endeavour to be as religious as I can.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

558. THOMAS HANCOCK was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Charles Burney, Doctor of Muſic, about the hour of three in the night, on the 13th of March laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, one ſilk purſe, value 12d. and one hundred guineas, value 105l. his property.

The Caſe opened by Mr. Silveſter.

Dr. CHARLES BURNEY ſworn.

I live in St. Martin's-ſtreet, Leiceſter-fields; the priſoner was my livery ſervant, he had lived with me a year and a half, I had diſmiſſed him about five weeks before the robbery was committed, beſides this purſe, there was a good deal of looſe money in the drawer, and money taken out of Mrs. Burney's bureau in the parlour, there was a hundred guineas in one purſe, in my bureau on the ground floor; I heard a noiſe, I did not get up firſt, my ſervant who was in my ſtudy was alarmed by a table being overſet, and I heard the noiſe of a tray falling down, this was between ſix and ſeven.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Counſel. At what time did you hear this noiſe, Sir?——Between ſix and ſeven.

Did you part with the priſoner on any ſuſpicion of his honeſty?—No.

RICHARD ANGLE ſworn.

I am ſervant to Dr. Burney, between ſix and ſeven in the morning, I came into my maſter's ſtudy, as I always do in a morning; whilſt I was there opening the ſhutters, I heard a great noiſe, and I went to go down ſtairs, and I ſaw a table that ſtood at the bottom of the ſtairs thrown down, and the great kitchen poker laying along ſide of it, and a ſilver tea-pot and a ſilver ſalt cellar laying down altogether; when I ſaw that I ran up ſtairs directly to call my fellow ſervants, I begged them to come down, I ran down again, I ſaw a candle burning in the back parlour, and a poker jammed into the back parlour door, I ran up again; there is a door that goes out of the parlour into another room, this other room they had been endeavouring to break open, and they had left the poker in the door; then we went into the kitchen and we found the ſaſh window open.

Where did this communicate to?—Into a little area, the bar appeared as if nothing had been done to it; then a gentleman came over, and looking over the rails, ſays he, there is an iron bar ſawn in two, and we found it was ſo, and there were two coat buttons laying in the area, the ſame time the bar was cut in three or four places; it was very eaſy to take that bar up and lay it down the ſame, the buttons were yellow; I had not been in that area the day before, it is not an area we go into frequently; I think I have ſeen thoſe buttons before, upon the coat of a young man that lived there before, that was Thomas Hancock.

Mr. Garrow. So you think you have ſeen theſe buttons before?—Yes.

What ſort of buttons were they?—Yellow.

Are they very much like your's?--No.

Were they plain yellow buttons?—Yes.

Such as every body wears, that wears yellow buttons?——Yes.

So I thought; how did the people get out of the houſe?—At the ſtreet door, Sir, they left it open.

RICHARD

RICHARD BURNEY ſworn.

I was alarmed by my father's ſervant, I went down ſtairs directly, and ſaw the table that was at the bottom of the ſtairs, in the paſſage thrown down, with a ſilver tea-pot and ſalt-cellar, and a large kitchen poker, which ſeemed to be juſt thrown down; I ſaw a lighted candle in the back parlour, and in another parlour there was a poker forced into the door; I went into the parlour, and I ſaw about 40l. laying on the table, ſeeming to be divided equally.

The bar communicated with the area, I underſtand? —— Yes, the ſaſh was lifted up.

Mr. Garrow. Do you know, Sir, whether that ſaſh was faſtened over night.

Mr. Silveſter to Angel. Was that ſaſh ſhut down when you went to bed?—Yes, but not faſtened; there are iron bars go acroſs the ſhutters, but there were no faſtenings on one end, the ſhutters were not faſtened only ſhut?

THOMAS SPILLING ſworn.

I am a ſmith, I know Dr. Burney's houſe, and know this bar; I was ſent for that morning.

Did you make any obſervations how it was cut?——I obſerved this bar was cut at three or four ſeparate times, and within-ſide to the beſt of my knowledge, becauſe every time it was cut it was ruſty, becauſe the ſnow laid upon the ground; there is a difference between cutting a thing up-handed and down-handed; and when I got it home I examined it, and to the beſt of my knowledge it was cut withinſide.

Mr. Garrow. Are you much employed in cutting bars that are fixed?——Very ſeldom.

One of your reaſons for thinking it was cut withinſide was, that it was cut ſlanting?—Yes.

Do you mean to ſwear that to the beſt of your knowledge, as a man of knowledge and experience, it is impoſſible from the outſide to cut it in that way?——I think it is.

Is not it neceſſary to cut it ſlanting, if it is to be laid on again?—It was cut cloſe to the wall on the right hand.

Did you ever cut through an iron bar with the aſſiſtance of aqua fortis?—No.

Suppoſe a man was to take a ſharp inſtrument to cut iron, and in order to make way, was to put aqua fortis?—— It was cut with a ſaw.

Over-handed or under-handed?—Under-handed.

This is a bar over the area?—Yes.

How wide is the open of the area to the ſtreet?——It may be a yard and quarter or half from the wall to the kirb ſtone of the area.

How many bars are there over that?—— That I never counted, I do not know; they run acroſs the area.

Then what may be the length of the opening?——About three yards long, or may be not ſo much.

What diſtance diſtance may the bars be aſunder?—About four o five inches may be not three, I did not meaſure.

Were there more bars than one cut through?——No, it was cut as nigh as could be to the houſe, within four or five or ſix inches of the wall of the houſe, I think it was ſlanted from the wall, I would not be too poſitive, I did not take much notice.

Which was the freſheſt part, the upper or the under?——The top part; the firſt part was ruſty, the other was leſs ruſty, and the other was quite clear; that appeared to me to have been done that morning.

Could you form any probable gueſs how long before the other might have been done? ——I could not; my judgment is it might be cut the night before, it had not the appearance of being cut ſome weeks longer, but a day or two longer.

JOHN WEATHERMAN ſworn.

I live at Haſtings in Suſſex, the priſoner was brought to me 21ſt of March, I believe he came down to Haſtings in the coach on the 20th, and the next day he was apprehended, he was brought to me by two ſoldiers.

Was he examined in your preſence?—— Yes.

What was found upon him?——Two parcels of money; the first was fifteen guineas in a purse, which appeared to me to be the foot of a silk stocking, I searched again, and in a little while after I found twenty-four guineas in another purse, which I should not have seen, but for a boy, who said he had dropped something green in his pocket; I had no conversation with him where he was going.

(The money produced.)

Mr. Garrow. Let it lay on the table, if it is evidence, it lays there.

Doctor Burney. This man had several times asked me for money; he had been in my house but three weeks before he asked for money, he had money several different times during the time he lived with me, and when he quitted my service he had but 43s. to receive.

(The buttons produced.)

These are the buttons, one is broke in the shank; I was present at the prisoner's first examination, nothing particular passed at that time, but the circumstance of the money being found upon him.

Did he give any account how he came by so much money?——He said he had saved it in his different services; he was asked, if he had ever shewn this money, or told anybody he had such a sum of money; he said no.

Did anything else pass?——I do not recollect anything; he said he was going to France, in expectation of getting a place at France, through my son-in-law's interest, but he had no letters of recommendation from me.

Mr. Garrow. You have in fact a son-in-law in France?—Yes.

Court to Jury. Gentlemen, I need not call the prisoner on his defence.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

559. JOHN JENNINGS was indicted for feloniously breaking and entering the dwelling house of John Squires about the hour of four in the afternoon, on the 9th day of May, Rebecca, his wife, and Mary, wife of Michael Gillingham, and Mary Lawrence, spinster, being therein, and feloniously stealing therein nineteen linen shirts, value 15l. five linen shifts, value 15s. nine pair of cotton stockings, value 12s. one pair of silk stockings, value 3s. a corded dimity waistcoat, value 7s. a Marseilles waistcoat, value 2s. seven linen handkerchiefs, value 7s. a callico bedgown value 12d. and a linen stock, value 6d. the property of the said Michael Gillingham.

MARY GILLINGHAM sworn.

I lodge at John Squires's in Mary-lebon lane; on Monday afternoon I was down stairs with my landlady Rebecca Squires, and the milk-woman came to the door, I went up stairs to get a pot for some milk, and I met the prisoner upon the second pair of stairs with a basket and my linen in it; I never saw him before; when I went up stairs I found my room door open, which I had locked about three quarters of an hour before; I had the key in my pocket, I went to the window and missed my linen, I saw him go out of the street door with it; and what he did not think proper to take away with him he threw in the middle of the room, I called out stop thief, and he was pursued immediately, and taken in a house just by, I saw him there; the things were mine, they have been in my possession ever since.

Court. The man could get into the door of the house, could not he?—Yes, it is a lodging house, and the door was open.

MARY TURNER sworn.

I was sitting upon the stairs a little past four, and the prisoner ran through our passage with a basket under his arm; and he said he wanted to go to our necessary, and having some little pigs in the yard, I thought thought he was going to put them into his baſket, he dropped the baſket, and jumped upon the pig-ſty, and got over the next neighbour's wall towards the proſecutor's, and I picked up the baſket; the mob came in, and took him away, and then they brought him back again, and ſaid is this the man; he ſaid he was not; I ſaid I can ſwear to you; the people went round after him over our pig-ſty; the things the proſecutor found at my houſe are the ſame things that were dropped by the priſoner.

Priſoner. How came you ſo particularly to recollect the hour?—As near as we could recollect to the time, it might not be to a minute.

WILLIAM WARD ſworn.

I was at work in my maſter's yard in Mary-le-bon lane, I heard the cry of ſtop thief, and I ran out of the yard and purſued him directly, I went down and met the priſoner, and he ſaid to me, Peter, that is as much as to ſay, let me go; I took him directly, I found him on the proſecutor's back ſtairs, coming out of the back kitchen.

Priſoner. When this laſt witneſs took me out of the houſe, all the people ſaid I was not the man, and he let me go directly.

He was juſt by the ſhop, and I knew he could not get away, therefore I looſed him.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was informed there was a relation of mine that lived at No. 40, in Mary-le-bon lane, one Black, a ſhoe-maker; I went there, and they ſaid it was No. 42, and I went there, and aſked a perſon, and they ſaid he was in the kitchen, and I went down and there was nobody there; a young man met me, and ſaid are you the man? I ſaid what man; why, ſays he, the thief; come with me; ſo when we came out, the people ſaid that is not the man. I know nothing of the matter, I am very innocent.

Ward. I collared him till we came cloſe to the ſhop door.

Priſoner. I have no friends nearer than Brentford, I lodge there; I am a ſhoe-maker, I have lived there a good while.

Mrs. Gillingham. The lock ſeemed to me to be picked; I am poſitively ſure it was locked, I tried it before I went down ſtairs; which I generally do. The priſoner was ſearched, and nothing found upon him; but about five minutes before he was taken to the Rotation-office, he aſked leave to go backwards, at the watch-houſe, and he went.

Priſoner. Nothing was found about me.

Court. Who do you work with at Brentford?—With my father, who is a houſe-keeper there, he works for the people round about; he keeps no ſhop; he is a ſhoe-maker, he works for ſeveral people at the Princeſs Amelia. I came to London to try to get better work; I went to ſeek for a relation, who I thought would recommend me.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing, but not of breaking and entering.

Whipped, and confined twelve months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

560. JOHN TURNER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 16th of April laſt, one live cock, price 2s. and four live hens, price 8s. the property of Samuel Greenhill.

SAMUEL GREENHILL ſworn.

I loſt the fowls from my hen-houſe, mine is a cloſe yard, the entrance to it is through a five bar-gate, on the Tueſday morning following, I went there, but I cannot ſwear poſitively to the time.

GEORGE CLERK ſworn.

I know I marked two of theſe hens, which were ſtolen about three weeks or a month month before they were ſtolen that they might be known again, they were game hens, I marked two ſiſter hens, on the left eye, over the left noſtril, and on the left foot. I cut a piece out the ſame time; I cut the comb and the gills of the cock.

Where were theſe fowls found?——In Edgeware road, there were three live fowls and two dead, they are the ſame that was found upon the priſoner, he was taken the 16th of April.

THOMAS ROBERTS ſworn.

I was with the laſt witneſs, the priſoner ſaid firſt of all, he had been to Harrow to fetch them, and ſet out at three o'clock, and he mentioned a name which we had never heard of, then he did not know the name, and at Litchfield-ſtreet he told the gentleman he brought them from Beacon's-field.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

Between Harrow and London, I overtook a man with two bags upon his ſhoulders, he ſaid, he was going to town, and we would walk together, he ſaid, he had fowls in his bags, I aſked him what he aſked for them, and I gave him fifteen pence for them.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped and confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

561. ROBERT IRVIN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 28th of April laſt, one cloth jacket, value 12s. the property of Hannah Edwards, widow, privily in her ſhop.

HANNAH EDWARDS ſworn.

I keep a ſlop-ſhop in Wapping, on the 8th of April, the priſoner came to my ſhop about eleven; I was in the room behind the ſhop, I ſaw him go out, he did not come for anything, I ſuſpected him and followed him up the ſtreet a good way, he kept running on and I followed him; when he got three or four hundred yards he looked back, and ſaw me following him, then he took out a jacket, and I ſaw him throw it out, and he run away; I cried ſtop thief! I ſaw him ſtopped, he was never out of my ſight, I have had the jacket ever ſince.

(The jacket produced and depoſed to.)

Priſoner. Was there any other perſon in the ſhop with me?——Nobody elſe.

WILLIAM SELLOR ſwornn.

I heard the cry of ſtop thief! I ran out and ſeized the priſoner, I took him becauſe he was the only man that was running, the priſoner took hold of the cart wheels, when I held him by the collar, he begged of me to let him go, I would not, I did not ſee Mrs. Edwards; immediately when I ſtopped the man, he told me the perſon chucked it to him, out of the ſhop, and that he caught it; ſays I, what a lucky chuck it was!

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was coming by, and a ſailor was ſtanding at this woman's door, and he cried out to me, did I want a jacket, and he threw it to me, and I took it and run on, and the proſecutrix come after me, and ſaid, I had ſtole a waiſtcoat.

GUILTY.

Of ſtealing to the value of 4s. 10d.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 11th of MAY, 1785, and the following Days;
Being the FIFTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER V. PART IV.

LONDON:
Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)
And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and
S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.
M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

562. ANN CALLAGHAN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 22d of March laſt, two diamond rings ſet in gold, value 30s. one gold ſleeve button ſet with ſtones, value 18d. two hundred china beads, value 3s. one ſhirt, value 3s. a ſtock, value 6d. two caſe handle knives, value 6d. one fork, value 3d. the property of Moſes Aboah Fonſeca.

MOSES ABOAH FONSECA ſworn.

I live in Crutched Friars, in March laſt my wife loſt two diamond rings, and the things mentioned in the indictment; I ſaw the priſoner and the things at the Juſtice's, I knew them immediately, I can ſwear to to them all.

Priſoner. Was not there another ſervant in the houſe beſides me?——Yes, another woman, but ſhe is gone; there were ſome white beads among thoſe things I miſſed, therefore I can ſafely ſwear to them.

RACHAEL FONSECA ſworn.

I miſſed the two diamond rings, on Tueſday the 22d of March, out of my drawers in my bed-chamber, I left the priſoner in that room alone to clean it, my drawers were not locked at all; I miſſed the rings on Monday after this Tueſday, which was Eaſter Monday, I aſked the priſoner for them, ſhe ſaid, ſhe knew nothing of them, I miſſed a gold ſleeve button a fortnight after ſhe came into the houſe, after the beads were miſſing and a ſhirt, I ſaw this property at the Juſtice's, I knew the knives and fork becauſe they anſwered to mine, the ſhirt I knew by the mark, and I knew the buttons; I took the priſoner up on ſuſpicion, I had a character with her from one that lived with me eight years, and that had lived next door to her at Green-bank, Wapping, ſhe came to me as a married woman.

Mr. Keys, Priſoner's Council. Who did ſhe ſay was her huſband?——One Callaghan, but I never ſaw him.

How long was ſhe your ſervant?—Between three and four months.

WILLIAM PACKER ſworn.

I am headborough of St. John's, Wapping; three weeks to day the proſecutor brought me a ſearch warrant to go to Green-bank, Wapping, to Mrs. Murphy's houſe; I went up one pair of ſtairs, and the firſt thing I ſaw, was a box that was locked, the priſoner was in cuſtody when I went there.

Did you know from the priſoner whether that was her lodging?——Yes, ſhe gave me a direction where ſhe lived, I found all the the things mentioned in the indictment, and I have had them in my cuſtody ever ſince.

Did the priſoner ſay more than that ſhe lived there?——No, there was no more aſked her, becauſe we wanted the name of the houſe where ſhe lived.

Did ſhe only mention the name of the houſe where ſhe lived?——No.

Did ſhe mention which was her room?——No.

To whom did you apply to get to that room?—To Mrs. Murphy the landlady. ſhe is bound over, but I have been after her theſe two days, but ſhe will not come.

(The rings and other things depoſed to.)

Mr. Keys. You know nothing whoſe lodgings theſe were, only what you heard from Mrs. Murphy?——No.

Was the room door locked or open?—It was open.

Packer. The priſoner directed me to the houſe, and we aſked her who kept the houſe where ſhe lodged on Greenbank, and ſhe directed us to Murphy.

(Catherine Murphy called upon her recognizance and did not appear.)

Jury. What was in the room?—There were very few things, there was a bed without any covering, and only this one box.

JANE GALE ſworn.

The priſoner lodged next door to me, before ſhe came to Mrs. Fonſeca, ſhe was a coal-heaver's wife, I recommended her to Mr. Fonſeca.

Do you know in what part of the houſe ſhe lived?——In the one pair of ſtairs.

Had ſhe any other part of the houſe beſides?——No more.

What was her character?——So far as I ſaw, a pretty behaved woman: ſhe was ill uſed by her huſband, and I aſked her if ſhe would go to place, and I believed her to be an honeſt woman.

Did you ever ſee her in her lodging, after ſhe went?——She came down and ſtaid four nights with her huſband, and I perſuaded her to go back to her place again; her miſtreſs gave her leave to ſtay one night, and ſhe ſtaid four; I ſaw her the Sunday before ſhe was taken up for the fact at my houſe, ſhe was in her lodgings, I ſaw her come out, but it is a place I never go in, I only ſaw her come out of the houſe, not out of any particular room.

Priſoner. I could ſpeak in my own defence, if I was where I could get juſtice, but I leave it entirely to the mercy of your Lordſhip; I lived with this gentlewoman as a juſt and honeſt ſervant, I worked hard with her, and two nights before I went to ſervice, I ſlept with this gentlewoman here, it was a houſe of common lodgers, I being a ſtranger knew nothing of it, he aſked me where I lived before I went there, I ſaid, I lodged at Green-bank, Wapping; he had no directions from me to go to ſearch for any goods, I never had a farthing for my wages, I had not a gown till one was lent me to come here before before your Majeſty.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped and impriſoned two years in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

563. JAMES WILLIAMS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 6th of April laſt, one linen ſhirt, value 5s. one linen ſhift, value 2s. a lawn apron, value 5s. three pair of cotton ſtockings, value 3s. one dimity waiſtcoat, value 1s. a pair of ſilk and worſted ſtockings, value 1s. a checque apron, value 1s. a pair of leather ſhoes, value 3s. and a pair of callimanco pumps, value 2s. the property of William Lamborn.

WILLIAM LAMBORN ſworn.

I live in the Borough, on the 6th of April, I loſt the things mentioned in the indictment.

JAMES WILTSHIRE ſworn.

I am a conſtable, on the 6th of April, I had the priſoner in charge for another offence, and he had theſe things under his arm, I took

I took him in Roſemary-lane, they were the things in the indictment.

(The things depoſed to by Mrs. Lamborn.)

SARAH ARCHER ſworn.

There was a robbery committed in this room; the perſon muſt have got in at the window, the window was open, there appeared the foot ſteps of a man, but who took them I do not know.

Priſoner. The captain of a Weſt-India ſhip ſent me on ſhore with ſome letters for ſome paſſengers, I delivered them in the Minories, and as I was returning a Portugueſe man ſtopped me, and put a parcel into my hand, then he took me to the conſtable, and ſaid that I took that parcel from him.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years to Africa.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron PERRYN.

---

564. GEORGE MAY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 29th day of April laſt, one muſlin gown, value 10s. one cotton gown, value 10s. the property of John Jones; and one cotton gown, value 10s. the property of Eſther Clark.

John Jones depoſed the things were hanging up to dry, and when he returned, he was informed the things were taken.

JOHN SEARS ſworn.

I belong to the Governor of Tothil-fields Bridewell; I met the priſoner and two other men that were with him in St. Martin's court; I ſaw a bundle under one of the other men's coats; I turned back the coat of the priſoner, and aſked him what he had in that bundle; he immediately ruſhed out of my hands, and ran about one hundred yards; I ran after him, and caught him, and a man that was with me caught hold of the bundle.

(The things depoſed to.)

WILLIAM PICKERING ſworn.

I am conſtable of the pariſh of Saint James's, we were out the 29th of April, it was ſearch night; going through the broad part of St. Martin's court, I was alarmed with the cry of ſtop thief; I immediately made towards that part, and ſaw the priſoner runing very faſt, with a bundle under his arm; I ſeized the bundle, and Sears ſecured the priſoner.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

Coming along King-ſtreet, Weſtminſter, about ten o'clock, juſt at the bottom of Gardener's lane there was a coach coming by, and the door came open and the bundle rolled out, and I took it up.

GUILTY

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron PERRYN.

---

565. JOHN DORRINGTON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 9th day of May, one cotton gown, value 10s. one pair of men's velveret breeches, value 5s. the property of George Creſwell.

Mrs. CRESWELL ſworn.

My huſband went out about five o'clock in the morning to work, and put the key underneath the door, and the priſoner got the key and opened the door, I was in bed, his back was towards me, but I am poſitive to him, becauſe he was not out of the houſe before he was taken; I ſaw him going out of the room with the breeches and gown; I did not ſee him take the gown, but I ſaw him take the breeches, and he was ſtopped by my landlady on the ſtairs; I cried out ſtop thief as ſoon as he was gone,

it

it was about half an hour paſt eight in the morning.

MARTHA DUWALL ſworn.

I am the landlady, my huſband was juſt come home to breakfaſt, and I ran out and met the priſoner upon the lower pair of ſtairs, about three ſteps from the paſſage, he went by me, I laid hold of his arm, as I knew the gown which was under his left arm, and the breeches, and my huſband came to my aſſiſtance, and we took him and another gentleman handed him away to the watch-houſe.

(The gown and breeches depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I came from on board a brigg, and I went into this houſe, and they took me for the ſame perſon, I never had any thing in my hand.

Proſecutrix. I am ſure that is the man.

Mrs. Duwall. This is the man; I aſked him what was the matter; he ſaid the woman is ſcreaming after her gown, and he ſaid here it is.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

566. PHILLIS MARTIN and CATHERINE CURTIS were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 14th day of April laſt, twelve yards of woollen baize, value 10s. the property of David Payton.

DAVID PAYTON ſworn.

I am a linen-draper in Oxford-ſtreet, on the 14th of February I loſt the things mentioned in the indictment, they were on the outſide of my ſhop, on the ſhow-board, cloſe to the window, I ſaw it about two hours before.

REBECCA KING ſworn.

I live four doors from the proſecutor; I am ſervant to a linen-draper, I ſaw a perſon take from the proſecutor's door a piece of flannel, but whether bought or ſtolen I know not; I cannot ſwear to either of the priſoners.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

567. The ſaid PHILLIS MARTIN and CATHERINE CURTIS were again indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 15th day of April, one piece of linen cloth, containing forty-three yards, value 40s. the property of David Payton.

DAVID PAYTON ſworn.

On the 15th of April, between four and five in the in the afternoon, I loſt a piece of linen cloth, about forty-four or forty-five yards, from my ſhow-board, it was worth about 2l. I was in the ſhop at the time; I did not ſee it taken; a man came in, and aſked me if I had not loſt ſuch a piece of linen; I told him I could not ſay, I looked, and found I had loſt ſuch a piece; he told me he had the people in cuſtody, if I would come and aſcertain the piece of cloth, if it was mine he would deliver them up to the Juſtice; he went away, and I was going after him, but before I got there, he and the two women were coming with the piece of linen in their hands.

(Depoſed to.)

The mark is 80 yards, it was made by the people of the Stamp-office; I have cut off ſo much, that reduced it to this quantity; the priſoners are the two women that were brought over.

THOMAS JENKINS ſworn.

I am a porter to a coal-merchant in Swallow-ſtreet, I live within a hundred yards of the proſecutor, I was ſtanding at my maſter's door, and I ſaw the priſoner Martin coming with the cloth under her cloth cloak; the other priſoner was a yard or two before her; it hung down below her cloak, ſo low, I thought they did not come decently by it; ſhe dropped the piece down to her foot, and the other priſoner took it up, and threw it into her apron again; they walked about the ſpace of a dozen yards, and I tapped the priſoner Martin on the ſhoulder, and ſaid that does not belong to you; I think ſhe ſaid good man let me go, that is nothing to you; with that I called to my fellow ſervant over againſt me, and ſent him to the proſecutor's, I thought it belonged to him; I ſecured the priſoner Martin, the other did not offer to go away.

Court to Proſecutor. Was this piece rolled up on your ſhow-board?—As much as it appears in Court.

PRISONER MARTIN's DEFENCE.

I was coming home from work, and I met a woman I had not ſeen for a twelvemonth, or better, that I uſed to work for, and ſhe ſaid ſhe had juſt received it from a waggon from Northampton, and ſhe begged me to hold it while ſhe went to the Ship in Swallow-ſtreet, for ſhe had more things there; I was going to carry it down to the Ship, when that good man ſtopped me.

Court to Jenkins. Is this in the road to the Ship?—Yes.

Did ſhe ſay any thing of this when you took her?—No.

Payton. I do not recollect that ſhe ſaid any thing.

PRISONER CURTIS's DEFENCE.

I had been to Mary-le-bon lane after a place, and coming down Swallow-ſtreet, I ſaw the piece delivered to this woman; I never ſaw her before.

The priſoner Curtis called two witneſſes to her character.

The priſoner Martin called one witneſs to her character.

PHILLIS MARTIN GUILTY.

To be impriſoned ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

CATHERINE CURTIS NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

568. WILLIAM LAWLER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 15th of April laſt, one hammer cloth, value 20s. the property of Miſs Mary Ann Chaſe.

JOHN BRENCHLEY ſworn.

I am coachman to Miſs Chaſe; the coach ſtood in Nailor's-yard, Silver-ſtreet; my miſtreſs lives at Richmond, but ſhe has a bit of a lodging in town; and when we are in town the coach ſtands there; the hammer-cloth was in the coach-houſe, the coach-houſe was not locked; I miſſed it in the morning as ſoon as I came to the ſtables, this was the third night we had been in town, I drove my miſtreſs to the play that evening.

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Council. How do you know this is the property of your miſtreſs?—Here are three letters upon it.

DENNIS HERRING ſworn.

I am a watchman in Whitcomb-ſtreet, Leiceſter-fields, on the 15th of April at half an hour after three in the morning, this man, on whom I found the property, came by my box, and I ſtopped him, and he had this bundle, and there were two coach glaſſes wrapped up with it.

(The hammer-cloth depoſed to, marked M. A. C.)

Mr. Peatt. What time did you deſcribe this to have happened before the Magiſtrate?—At half after three.

Are

Are you ſure you ſaid that only, and not any other time?——The ſame words I ſaid before.

Did not you ſay it was five o'clock when you took him into cuſtody?—No.

You are quite clear in that?—Yes.

To coachman. How do you know that hammer-cloth?—By the letters I will ſwear to it.

JAMES COCKLAN ſworn.

I am a watchman, I watch with Herring, he was on one ſide of the ſtreet, and I on the other; when the priſoner was ſtopped, I was not very far off; the other witneſs called to me directly; it was half after three, I went with the conſtable of the night to ſeveral ſtable-yards, and to Mr. Hatchet, the coachmaker in Long-Acre, he made the cloth, and ſent for Miſs Chaſe, and ſhe owned the cloth.

Herring. When I laid hold of him firſt I aſked him what he had got? he would not tell me, till I went rather hard on him, then he offered me a guinea to let him go.

Did he ſhew you a guinea?—Yes.

Did he ſay he picked it up then?—No, I directly called for Cocklan.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I am a porter, and work at Covent-Garden, I am always obliged to get up at four o'clock; I was going through Leiceſter-fields, I ſaw ſomething at a diſtance on the coach-ſtand, it appeared white, it lay up againſt the rails, it was this cloth and a pair of glaſſes laying wrapped up in it, the glaſſes were againſt the rails, and the cloth rather under it; I took up the bundle and came back to that watchman to give them in charge of him.

Herring. He gave me no charge of them.

Court to Herring. Where was you at the time you ſtopped him?—Coming out of the George yard.

Priſoner. That man has perjured himſelf, and it is a ſin.

The priſoner called one witneſs to his character.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

569. WILLIAM WILMOT was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 25th day of April laſt, one three pint tin japan mug, value 1s. one pint tin japan teapot, value 6d. one tin japan tea caniſter, value 6d. a flour-box, value 6d. and one japan waiter, value 6d. the property of William Lock.

WILLIAM LOCK ſworn.

I am a japanner in Silver-ſtreet, Clerkenwell; the priſoner was my porter four or five years; during the time he lived with me, I miſſed ſeveral articles from my ſhop, many of which I have not found; I miſſed theſe things mentioned in the indictment in the courſe of laſt year.

Mr. Wybourne, Council for the Priſoner. How long did the priſoner live with you?——Between four and five years.

In what capacity?——As a porter.

During that time in courſe he had ſeveral articles of value under his care?—Certainly he had; he uſed to take bills and receipts, he has taken a great deal of money.

Did you diſmiſs him from your ſervice?——I did, before I went into the country.

How long is it ſince you miſſed theſe things?—In the courſe of laſt year, four or five months ago.

Did you ever tax the priſoner with them?——No.

The priſoner has left you five weeks?—Yes, thereabouts.

When was he apprehended?——About three weeks ago.

Court.

Court. Had you intruſted the priſoner to carry theſe things home to the ſeveral perſons to whom they might be ſent to be japanned by you?—I never intruſted him to carry them home, becauſe they were never booked down to anybody, and what went with them I cannot tell.

THOMAS LEE ſworn.

I am a headborough, I went to the lodgings of the priſoner on the 25th of April, as near as I can gueſs, with a warrant from Mr. Girdler, in ſearch of the priſoner; I did not at firſt find him at his lodgings; I ſat down with his wife, and had ſome little diſcourſe, while Mr. Lock availed himſelf of the opportunity of looking round the apartment, there I found a tea-pot, a tea-caniſter, a flour-box, and a waiter.

Court. Theſe things were not in the lodging concealed?—No, they were hung up as their own furniture.

(Theſe things depoſed to.)

Proſecutor. The waiter and mug were japanned at my houſe; if I had ſeen the waiter at the Weſt Indies I could have known it; I had given no directions for any other man to carry them out of my ſhop.

Court. Had not you ſold the priſoner that waiter?—No, nor never intruſted him to carry it out.

Mr. Wybourne. Do you recollect ever japanning any article for the priſoner himſelf?—No never, I think not.

What particular mark is there on that waiter?—None, I know it by the work.

You will preſume to ſwear that is the waiter belonging to you?—Yes.

Court. Is there any thing particular in the painting that waiter not to be found in other ſhops?—This is a roſe and a bird, and roſe-buds and ſtrawberries.

Are not theſe the common ornaments on things of that ſort?—They are often done, but we know it by the work.

Does the man that you employ to paint for you paint for any other japanners beſides yourſelf?—Not that I know of, he works for me conſtantly.

WILLIAM TARBUT ſworn.

I can only ſpeak to the jug, and that is only belief.

Priſoner. That canniſter and jug I bought of one Mr. Davidſon in the Borough.

WILLIAM DAVIDSON ſworn.

I know the priſoner, he is a ſervant of mine till he was taken into cuſtody about theſe things.

Did the priſoner at any time purchaſe any articles of you belonging to your trade?—He bought this tea-pot, and a quarter of a pound caniſter; this is the caniſter, I know nothing of the waiter.

Look at it again, is there any thing uncommon or particular about it in the make or the japanning?—It is what we call an old faſhioned one, that is all that is particular in it, it ſeems as if it had been twice japanned; the priſoner behaved himſelf as an upright man, for anything that I knew or ever heard he was a diligent honeſt man.

Croſs-examined by Mr. James. You being a japanner as well as the priſoner, is it your opinion that a perſon of the trade can ſufficiently judge of articles of this kind to ſpeak to them again?—Not unleſs there is a mark made on them before; I before made a remark on this, not underſtanding the conſequences but by their being in my poſſeſſion, ſo long, I knew the marks on them, this jug I have had in my ſhop a long time, and the handle is not in the right place now.

Now as to the other articles, is there any particular mark upon them?—It is rather uncommon for tea-pots to be made like this; they are all made of common tin; I never had any thing of the kind came under my care finiſhed in this manner.

Court. Is there any letter or mark of the price on the tea-pot?—No, I know it by the workmanſhip, but the jug has a mark of 2s. 9d. put on by myſelf.

Mr.

Mr. James. I will give every thing up except the waiter.

—— SEAGRAVE ſworn.

I knew the priſoner ſeveral years, he has an exceeding good character from the people in the trade as far as I know, and I know moſt of them; I ſaw the proſecutor about the latter end of April.

Did the priſoner then live with him?—Not the laſt time I ſaw him, he was then ſervant to Mr. Daviſon.

Relate the converſation that paſſed between the proſecutor and you at that time?—I had been intimate with Mr. Daviſon ſometime, and ſince he has been in the japanning buſineſs, I have employed him; I had employed Mr. Lock for theſe eight years, I now employ Mr. Daviſon being a neighbour, doing the work as well and cheaper, and being ſo handy; Lock came to me and aſked me if he had loſt my favours, I told him I believed he had; ſays he, I find he has got my man Wilmot, I ſaid, yes, he has; ſays he, he is a very bad fellow, he made him out a thief.

Did Mr. Lock appear to you to be in a paſſion when he ſpoke of the priſoner?—Yes, and a great one, and ſaid he would puniſh him to the utmoſt.

Mr. James. Where was this?——He had then ſearched the lodging of the priſoner, it cannot be more than a fortnight ago, it was either the latter end of April, or the beginning of May.

JOHN ROWE ſworn.

I know the priſoner very well, ever ſince he was porter to Mr. Lock, he was always a very aſſiduous man in Mr. Lock's ſervice, and always did his buſineſs very well according to what I can judge of him, very induſtrious and careful of the things he took and fetched.

Court. What is your opinion of his honeſty?——I never heard anything againſt him in my life, I looked upon him as an honeſt ſervant.

MARY ATKINS ſworn.

I worked for Mr. Lock above a twelvemonth, while the priſoner worked for him; I work now for Mr. Daviſon, I never heard anything bad or diſhoneſt of him.

JOHN LINGBURGE ſworn.

I have known the priſoner about two months, I made this teapot for my maſter, Mr. Daviſon, in his ſhop.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron PERRYN.

---

570. ELIZABETH SMITH was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 3d of May, one pair of ſilver ſhoe buckles, value 6s. the property of Elizabeth Silk.

ELIZABETH SILK ſworn.

The priſoner was my weekly ſervant at two ſhillings and ſixpence per week, my ſilver buckles were in my ſiſter's place, and I loſt them from the cupboard; ſhe was taken up and brought to our houſe, ſhe owned that ſhe took them, and pledged them for ſix ſhillings, I ſaw the things at the Juſtice's, the priſoner was there then, what ſhe ſaid was taken down in writing.

Court. Then I will hear nothing of it unleſs the writing is produced.

JOHN GLEUN ſworn.

I am a pawnbroker, in Spital-fields, I received the buckles from a woman that is in Court; I lent her ſix ſhillings upon them, the conſtable came afterwards to my ſhop. (The buckles depoſed to.) One of the tongues is broke, and there is a flaw in one of them.

ELIZABELH WILLIAMS ſworn.

The priſoner applied to me to go of an errand to pawn a pair of buckles for a young man ſhe lived with, I went and brought her the money, I knew the priſoner ſoner about two years ago, but I have not ſeen her for upwards of two years.

BENJAMIN NASH ſworn.

I apprehended the priſoner, and the proſecutor ſaid, ſhe was the perſon that took the buckles, I then aſked the priſoner what was become of the buckles, ſhe ſaid, that ſhe did not pawn them, but one Williams pawned them, and aſked me to ſee for Williams, I went to the pawnbroker's, and there I found the buckles.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped and impriſoned ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron PERRYN.

---

571. MARY PIERSON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 7th day of May, one diamond pin, value 20s. the property of Henry James Pye, Eſq.

Mrs. PYE ſworn.

This diamond pin is my property, I miſſed it on Saturday morning, I know nothing of the priſoner, the pawnbroker brought it me.

HENRY MARK ſworn.

I am a pawnbroker, in Hyde-ſtreet, St. Giles's; this bit of paper contains the addreſs, which the priſoner gave to me, where ſhe lived; ſhe came to my ſhop, and offered a diamond pin for ſale, I was not at home when ſhe came, I came in directly, ſhe was in the ſhop; this was laſt Wedneſday, the addreſs was Mary Jones, ſervant to Mrs. Ring, No. 23, or 25, New Compton-ſtreet; I aſked her whoſe property it was, ſhe ſaid a gentlewoman died and left it her, I aſked her the lady's name that left it her, ſhe told me her name was Mrs. Robſon, of Cockſpur-ſtreet; I told her I would go and enquire, whether it was her property or not according to her addreſs, ſhe ſaid, I might go, for ſhe was going to Paddington, and would call as ſhe came back; I told her it was juſt by, I would go in a minute, ſhe perſiſted very much to get the pin and go, I told her to go and ſit herſelf down in the parlour, till I came back again, I ſhould ſoon be back; ſhe ſtill perſiſted to go, I told her to be quiet or I ſhould get a conſtable and carry her before a Juſtice; then ſhe told me ſhe would tell me the whole truth, that one Mrs. Parry, No. 7, New Palace Yard, gave it her to pawn or ſell, I aſked her how ſhe came to give me firſt one direction and then another, ſhe ſaid, Mrs. Parry told her to ſay ſo; I ſaid, I will go with you to Mrs. Parry, we went there, ſays ſhe, I do not think this is the houſe, ſays I, I think it is very odd you ſhould not know the houſe, ſhe ſaid, ſhe met a woman in Parliament-ſtreet, and ſhe told me ſhe lived here, but it may very likely be Old Palace-yard, I went there with her and there ſhe began to run away, I ran after her, and laid hold of her arm, I took her before a Juſtice, the clerk aſked her name, ſhe ſaid Mary Jones, ſhe acknowledged that ſhe found this pin in Mrs. Pye's houſe, in ſweeping the room.

Was there any thing ſaid to induce her or frighten her at the Juſtice's?——Nothing at all in my hearing, Mr. and Mrs. Pye were ſent for and ſwore to the property; at firſt the priſoner ſaid it is my property, I do not know the value of it, ſhe ſaid, the money was better to her than the pin, ſhe aſked no price at all; it is the cuſtom of our ſhop, firſt to agree for an article in order to get the addreſs to know whether they come honeſtly by them.

(The pin ſhewn to Mrs. Pye and depoſed to.)

Priſoner. I entirely throw myſelf upon the mercy of the Court, I am hardly ſixteen.

EDWARD WEBSTER ſworn.

I have known the priſoner from a child, her father and mother, and all her family; and and it afflicts me to ſee them in the ſituation they are; I believe them to be the honeſteſt and beſt people that can be, and what has induced her to take this ſtep, I cannot ſay: ſhe has been decently and pleaſantly educated.

What has been her general character?—One of the beſt girls till this time.

Mr. Garrow. There are twenty people more that know her character that will ſpeak for her.

GUILTY.

Fined 1s. and diſcharged.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron PERRYN.

---

572. JOHN SHERGOLD and MARY JOHNSON alias SHERGOLD were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 31ſt day of March laſt, three linen ſhirts, value 9s. one dimity waiſtcoat, value 1s. the property of David Shey.

DAVID SHEY ſworn.

David Shey who is my name ſake, lived at my houſe, he is a ſeaman, and he left ſome cloaths at my houſe; I miſſed three ſhirts and a waiſtcoat out of his cheſt, it was in my chamber, the cheſt was locked, I miſſed them the 3d or 4th of April, I will not ſwear to either, but it was the firſt week of either; when I opened the cheſt, it was locked the ſame as when I left it, he had been gone three months, and I opened it to air the clothes, I knew theſe things were miſſing by the inventory, there were ſeven ſhirts; the priſoners can give you a better account than I can; they came to me as man and wife to lodge, in Leather-lane, on the 14th of March, they lodged in the room where the cheſt was; I ſaw theſe things at the Juſtice's.

WILLIAM GOODMAN ſworn.

I live with Mr. Dry, pawnbroker, at Deptford, I had theſe things from one Sarah Burgeſs, who uſed to bring things to our ſhop to pawn for Mrs. Johnſon, I always underſtood her to be Mrs. Johnſon, on the 31ſt of March, ſhe brought theſe things to pawn (Theſe ſhirts depoſed.) two marked D. S. and one L. W. which belonged to Lara Wright another ſeaman, the value of the two ſhirts is ſeven-ſhillings.

Shey. When I miſſed them, I had nobody lodged in the houſe, and I wrote to Mr. Shergold, who was gone away, I ſaid, get the ſhirts.

Did not you promiſe them not to proſecute them?—I promiſed till I got ſight of them.

Court to Jury. He got them again by promiſing the man not to hurt him.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

573. WILLIAM DEADROSS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 25th of April laſt, one feather bed, value 3s. and one blanket, value 2s. the property of John Maſon.

(The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of the priſoner.)

JOHN MASON ſworn.

I live at Camberwell, I loſt the things mentioned in the indictment from Hoxton, in the pariſh of St. Leonard, Shoreditch; I firſt was ſhewn the property by the beadle who is not here, at the Three Jolly Butchers, I cannot ſwear to the bed by any particular mark, it was a ſmall ſtriped bed, I had not ſeen it for ſix or ſeven months.

BENJAMIN HARPUR ſworn.

I am a watchman, about two in the morning I was with the patrole, we heard the ſound of a chiſſel and mallet or ſomebody breaking in, we went into the field near Mr. Maſon's houſe, and there I ſaw the the priſoner coming in the field, and another was with him, the other run off; I took the priſoner down to the watch-houſe, and came and ſearched this field, and there we found a feather bed, bolſter, and blanket, nine pair of boys ſhoes, and one hat, and two handkerchiefs, and an iron crow, and the patrol found one boot, we brought the things away from the field among us; the officer William Hawes has the property.

Did you leave any body to watch the property?——No.

Court. Gentlemen of the Jury, there is no evidence certainly.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

574. The ſaid WILLIAM DEADROSS was again indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 25th day of April laſt, one man's leather boot, two linen handkerchiefs, and one pair of ſhoes, the property of Bartholomew Roſelotty.

There being no more evidence the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

575. GEORGE HOOKER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 8th day of April laſt, one pair of ſheets, value 10s. the property of Elizabeth Clarke, widow.

And EDWARD WRIGHT was indicted for feloniouſly receiving the ſame knowing them to be ſtolen.

(The witneſſes examined apart at the priſoners requeſt.)

ELIZABETH CLARKE ſworn.

I hung a pair of ſheets on a horſe by the fire in a little parlour behind the ſhop, on the 8th of April, about two in the afternoon, and I put them in the ſhop whilſt I dined, horſe and all; Mr. Stapleton came in and told me he ſaw ſomebody go out with them, I went with him to his houſe where the priſoners were, with the ſheets.

JOHN STAPLETON ſworn.

On the 8th of April, about three in the afternoon, I had been for a pint of beer, coming home, I ſaw two young men paſs me, which I had a ſuſpicion of; I went after them, and when I came to the bottom of the Court, there was only one, I came up the court again, and I ſaw one of them coming down the court again, I ſaw the priſoner Hooker going into Mrs. Clark's, and bring out the ſheets, I was at a one pair of ſtairs window watching them; I purſued the priſoner and overtook him in Fleet-ſtreet, he had the ſheets, and gave them to the other priſoner Wright who was in Fleet-ſtreet.

Was Wright the ſame perſon you ſaw with him before?—I cannot ſay, when he gave the ſheets to Wright, I was about a yard and half off; the inſtant he gave the ſheets to Wright, I ſeized Wright on the ſhoulder, and he threw the ſheets into my arm, he had not time to do anything with them.

What did Wright ſay?——He ſaid, he picked them up, he knew nothing of the matter, he was quite innocent of it; he ſaid, he did not know the other young man.

Did he throw the ſheets to him, or convey them to him with an intention to conceal them?—I was at his heel at the time he did not conceal them.

Do you know whether Hooker ſaw you before he gave the things to Wright?—— do not think he did, when I ſeized Wright Hooker ſtepped into the middle of the ſtreet

WILLIAM PARKER ſworn.

On Friday the 8th of April, one of the priſoners at the bar went through our paſſage, which is the Three Tuns; he ſeemed to have a bundle, Stapleton was after him; I followed him, and I believe Stapleton pleton called ſtop thief! I ſaw Mr. Stapleton take the bundle from Wright and I purſued Hooker and took him.

Did Stapleton cry ſtop thief! before the bundle was handed to Wright or after?—I think it was before.

(The things produced and depoſed to.)

PRISONER WRIGHT's DEFENCE.

Somebody ſhoved the bundle at me, which knocked me up againſt the wall, there was a bundle, I ſtopped to examine it, and to my ſurpriſe there was a cry of ſtop thief; to prevent trouble I was proceeding on, and two men came and laid hold of me, and I went with them, the priſoner Hooker never ſaw me before; pleaſe to obſerve, my Lord, there is a reward offered in that pariſh of ten pounds.

Court. That is only for ſtreet robbery, and houſe breaking.

Priſoner Hooker. I have nothing to ſay.

The priſoner Hooker called one witneſs to his character.

GEORGE HOOKER, GUILTY.

To be privately whipped and diſcharged.

EDWARD WRIGHT, NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

576. JOHN MOORE, JOHN HAZLE, and JOHN JEFFERIES were indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of John Selwin about the hour of two in the night, on the 5th of May, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, 30lb. weight of flour, value 3s. 6d. his property.

(The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Council.)

JOHN SELWIN ſworn.

I am a baker, I live in Oxford Market, was called up at two o'clock, and was informed a man had ſtole ſome flour, I got up and opened the bake-houſe door, and he told me the men were down ſtairs he believed; I went down ſtairs, and he was in the warehouſe, that was John Jefferies, I aſked him his buſineſs, he ſaid, he had been locked out, and he aſked my man to let him come in, and the other two who were my men, were in the bake-houſe, they lodge in my houſe, one has lived with me a year and three quarters, and the other nine or ten months.

JOHN QUICK ſworn.

I am a watchman, on the 5th of this month, as I was crying the hour of two, as I was going to ring Mr. Selwin's bell, which I uſually do to call the men up, I ſaw the priſoner Jefferies with a bag in his right hand, and the door which is a lowiſh door in his left hand; ſeeing them up I did not ring the bell, he pulled the door rather too with his left hand, the other witneſs was a little before me, and I told him I ſaw a man that uſed to go by the nick name of Bricklane Jack; he and the ſerjeant went and looked round the market, and under a baſket in the paſſage in the market, we found this bag of flour, which I believe to be the ſame.

Did you ſee that bag of flour left there by any of the priſoners?——No.

Is it here?——Yes, it has been in my poſſeſſion ever ſince, it is now in the ſame ſtate it was.

Are you ſure it is the ſame bag the priſoner Jefferies had in his hand?——To the beſt of my knowledge, I cannot poſitively ſwear down right that it is.

Court to Proſecutor. Is there any mark on the bag?—No, there is not.

There is no mark on the flour?——No.

Quick. Before the Magiſtrate he ſaid, it was a bag he had made and bought the cloth; after that, he ſaid, he had it made out of a towel or two, and he never had any but once before, and he ſold that to a pyeman for for one ſhilling and ſixpence.

Mr. Peatt to Proſecutor. Do you know what ſtock of flour you had in the houſe? ——No, it is impoſſible.

NATHANIEL JEWEN ſworn.

I am a watchman, on the 4th of May, about ten I came and ſhut up the market-houſe, I came and ſet myſelf cloſe by the the fire about half paſt ten, and I ſaw the priſoner Jefferies ſtanding againſt a table, he aſked me to drink, and I drank with him, and I went and walked round the market; and at eleven he came to me and ſaid, I wiſh you will be ſo kind to let me hide ſome flour in the market under one of the baſkets or boards, and I told this to the ſerjeant of the night.

Court. Gentlemen, there is no ground to put them on their defence.

ALL THREE NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron PERRYN.

---

577. THOMAS PHILLIPS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 5th day of May, one iron plough-ſhare, value 5s. one coulter, value 1s. two iron chains, value 2s. one bolt, value 1d. four harrow-lines, value 1d. two plough hammers, value 2d. and one iron cock, value 1d. the property of Thomas Porter.

The priſoner was taken by the watchman, with the things.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

571. ANN PRICE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 9th day of April laſt, three gowns, value 24s. and ſeven cotton gowns, value 5l. one bed gown, value 2s. a jam, value 3d. a ſkirt, value 3d. the property of John Wright, in his dwelling houſe.

ANN WRIGHT ſworn.

On the 9th of April the priſoner lodged in the houſe, and I heard a noiſe in the part where ſhe was, it was about ten at night; I found the priſoner up ſtairs, I called her back, and ſhe would not come back, I ſaw her throw ſomething out of her hand, and put out the candle.

Did you ſee her throw it away before the candle was put out?—Yes, I called out for aſſiſtance and a light, becauſe I had no light with me; a light was brought me by another lodger, ſhe flung away a little jam and ſkirt, this was all that was done this evening, ſhe told me the things that were taken, and gave me ſome duplicates; I took her down ſtairs, ſhe denied it at firſt, and after a while ſhe confeſſed ſhe had taken more things, then ſhe ſaid, if I would not hurt her, I ſhould have half a crown a week, I ſaid, I would not do it; ſhe confeſſed ſeveral articles particularly one, I made her no promiſes.

JOHN MASSETER ſworn.

I keep a pawnbroker's ſhop, the corner of Bett's-ſtreet, Ratcliff-highway, I have frequently ſeen the priſoner in my ſhop, this gown was pawned by her, in the name of Ann Davis; I lent her ſix ſhillings upon it, it may be worth twelve.

Are you ſure that was the woman?—Abſtracted from her confeſſion, I would not ſwear it, for we have ſo many of the name of Davis; I have ſeen the priſoner two or three times at my ſhop, but what articles ſhe brought I cannot tell.

(The gown depoſed to.)

Priſoner. I have here a witneſs that my proſecutor told me ſhe would forgive me, I have two fatherleſs children, my huſband is at New York; I never was guilty of any thing before.

ELIZABETH DURANT ſworn.

On the 9th of April, I was over the way having a penny worth of beer, on the 9th of April, I laid in the ſame room with the priſoner, I went out and Mrs. Wright had loſt a great deal of property; ſhe deſired me to carry a meſſage to the priſoner, that if ſhe could get her property again, ſhe would not hurt her; the priſoner was up ſtairs waſhing her hands, and aſked me what I would have her do; I told her that as Mrs. Wright had promiſed ſhe would not hurt her, I would adviſe her to give up the property, upon which ſhe gave me up two duplicates, and I carried them to Mrs. Wright.

Court to Mrs. Wright. Did you ſend this woman up with ſuch a meſſage?——No! no! I never ſent her with any ſuch meſſage; I look upon it they were both confederates together; but I have no proof of it.

Priſoner. I aſk no favour, I am very ready to ſubmit.

LUCRETIA PAINTER ſworn.

I brought the proſecutrix a bundle, the bundle was picked up when I carried the candle, I went down ſtairs with the woman, I never heard any promiſes made.

Court to Proſecutrix. What is the value of the jam and the ſkirt?——Sixpence.

GUILTY, 6d.

To be privately whipped and diſcharged.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

579. JOHN ELLIS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 23d of April laſt, one loaf of ſugar, weight twenty pounds, value 10s. the property of James Douglaſs.

MARTHA DOUGLASS ſworn.

I keep a chandler's ſhop, I loſt this loaf of ſugar, on the 23d of April, it weighed twenty-two pounds three quarters; I know the priſoner, I ſaw him go out of my ſhop, was in the yard trundling my mop, and I heard the bell ring, I ran into the ſhop and the priſoner was running out, and ſomebody came and brought the priſoner and the loaf of ſugar, I immediately knew it was the man I ſaw go out.

DAVID TODD ſworn.

I ſaw this loaf on the 23d of April, it is now in the ſame condition; I was at my houſe a quarter paſt four, I heard a little alarm, and I ſaw the proſecutrix much affected, and I followed the man by the information of a boy, and ſecured him; I ſaid, my friend, you have ſome property that is not your's, no, ſays he, I have a loaf of ſugar to carry to a man on Saffron-hill; the priſoner was walking hard, but not running, I ſaid, you have ſtole it, and then he put down the loaf of ſugar, and ſaid I might have it, and I took him to Mrs. Douglaſs's.

——— SIMPSON ſworn.

I joined in purſuit with this man, and came up firſt (The ſugar depoſed to, marked No. 24.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

A man wanted me to carry it, he gave me ſixpence, he was miſſed directly as they cried out ſtop thief.

Court. Was the man lame or diſabled to carry the ſugar himſelf.

Priſoner. Yes, he was lame of one leg.

Proſecutrix. I had not ſeen the man's face, but I can ſwear to the colour of his coat, and his lank hair.

Priſoner. I have been at ſea, and received one hundred pounds, when I came home; I am an ivory turner, and worked with Mr. Aldufs, in Kingſland-road, ever ſince laſt Whitſuntide, he is lame in bed, he has hurt his leg, and cannot get up.

The priſoner called two witneſſes to his character.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron PERRYN.

580. JAMES

580. JAMES THOMAS and JOHN BRADY were indicted for feloniously ſtealing on the 18th of April laſt, two half-peck loaves, value 2s. 4d. the property of Joſeph Atkins.

The proſecutor being a ſervant, and the property not being his, the priſoners were

BOTH ACQUITTED.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

581. ROBERT TAPLEY was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Joſeph Redhall, about the hour of two in the night, on the 11th of April laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein twenty iron ſtrait nailing tools, value 20s. his property.

JOSEPH REDHALL ſworn.

I have a ſhop underneath my dwelling houſe, which was broke open ſome time in night of the 11th of April laſt; I came home about eleven, and ſaw the door was faſtened with a padlock; I aroſe on Tueſday morning at five, I did not ſee the ſhop ſo ſoon as Thornberry.

THOMAS THORNBERRY ſworn.

I work in this ſhop, I hire a place and work for myſelf; I went to Redhall for the key of the ſhop this Tueſday morning about five, it was light then, I found the ſtaple torn out of the under hatch of the door, I looked to ſee if any of our anvils were gone, and I obſerved nothing gone till another man obſerved the tools were gone; the proſecutor came into the ſhop about ſeven.

Redhall. I miſſed my tools, twenty or more, I ſaw them at the Juſtice's, I found one of the tools at one William Glover's, an old iron ſhop in Drury-lane.

EDWARD LUCAS ſworn.

I am a conſtable, on Saturday the 24th of April ſeveral conſtables had been ſearching about in the pariſh, and as I was coming home along with another officer, at the corner of High Holborn, between one and two in the morning, I ſaw three men ſtanding at the corner of Mr. Mackey's ſhop, a linen-draper; I aſked them what they were doing there, and knowing the priſoner, I caught hold of him, and Taylor who was with me caught hold of the other, the other run away; in ſearching the priſoner, I run my hand down the outſide of his coat, and I ſaid this man has got an iron crow, and in ſearching him, I took this tool out of his left hand coat pocket.

Proſecutor. This is the tool I ſaw at the Juſtice's, and I knew it to be mine; I make them all myſelf, I never put any particular mark to know them by.

What is the value of that?——One ſhilling.

GUILTY 10d.

But not of the burglary.

To be impriſoned twelve months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice WILLES.

---

582. WILLIAM HAYWARD was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 14th day of April laſt, nine pair of worſtead ſtockings, value 16s. and twenty pair of cotton ſtockings, value 30s. the property of William Wilſon.

The proſecutor not appearing the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

---

583. WILLIAM HITLEY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 5th day of May, one ſilk handkerchief, value 1s. the property of William Saville.

The proſecutor not appearing the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

---

584. ROBERT ABERG and JOHN ATKINSON were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 4th day of May, one iron hold-faſt, value 6d. one iron augur, with a wooden handle, value 6d. the property of Samuel Cowley, and one hammer, value 6d. and two augurs, value 18d. the property of John Lucas.

John and Thomas Davis called but did not appear.

BOTH ACQUITTED.

Theſe three tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

585. AMBROSE WARD was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 8th day of May, one wooden trunk covered with ſkin, value 3s. and three pair of ſilk ſtockings, value 15s. the property of John Bigg.

JOHN BIGG ſworn.

I had my trunk cut from my poſt chaiſe, coming from Kingſton about half paſt eight, in St. Paul's Church-yard; and the priſoner was afterwards brought by another perſon, the trunk was faſtened on with cords, which appeared to have been cut.

WILLIAM BEATHER ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner with a trunk, there was a cry of ſtop thief, and he threw down the trunk.

Mr. Peatt Priſoner's Counſel. Could you diſtinguiſh the priſoner?—Yes, it was not dark, he had a white waiſtcoat, and a brown coat.

Was there another perſon taken up with a white waiſtcoat on?—I do not know, I do not believe there was.

Did the priſoner walk or run?—He walked.

He did not ſeem very much frightened at the outcry?—No.

JOHN CANNADINE ſworn.

About twenty minutes before nine, I heard a great ſhouting, and ſaw the priſoner on the ſouth ſide of St. Paul's Church-yard, with a trunk in his hand, and the poſt-boy in poſſeſſion of him.

Mr. Peatt. Was any other perſon taken up on ſuſpicion of being the perſon that took this trunk?—No other.

Are you ſure of that?—As ſure as I am of dying.

Did you ever ſee the priſoner before?—I think I have, I am not poſitive.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I never was near the trunk, my witneſſes are gone.

Court to Proſecutor. Was the trunk that was brought back with the priſoner the ſame that was on your chaiſe?—It was.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

586. WILLIAM BURN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 28th day of April laſt one ſilk handkerchief, value 3s. the property of James Robinſon.

George Looſmore ſaw the priſoner take the handkerchief out of the proſecutor's pocket.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

587. THOMAS CROFT was indicted for feloniously ſtealing on the 25th of April laſt, one half-crown, value 2s. 6d. fourteen ſhillings, four ſix-pences, and two hundred and fifty-two half-pence, value 10s. 6d. the monies of William Read.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron PERRYN.

---

588. WILLIAM MURPHY and WILLIAM PYKE were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 29th day of April laſt, one pound and one half-pound of American leaf tobacco, value 2s. 9d. the property of Thomas Hunter.

BOTH GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

589. JOHN RILEY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 9th day of April laſt, two pounds weight of tobacco, value 2s. the property of our Sovereign Lord the King.

A ſecond Count, For ſtealing two pounds weight of Tobacco, the property of a perſon unknown.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

590. SARAH SHEELY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 4th day of February, one linen ſheet, value 4s. and one other linen ſheet, value 4s. the property of Thomas Patch.

CHRISTIAN PATCH ſworn.

The priſoner was my ſervant, ſhe came the evening before the robbery, and next morning ſhe did the buſineſs of the houſe; ſhe took the keys to make four beds, and took a ſheet off each bed, two of which I found at the pawnbrokers.

William Burkett, the pawn-broker, produced two ſheets which were pawned by the priſoner, and depoſed to by the proſecutor's wife.

Priſoner. I know nothing of them.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped and confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron PERRYN.

---

591. ELIZABETH FORD was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 4th of April laſt, twenty-three pounds weight of braſs chain, value 50s. the property of William Wood.

WILLIAM WOOD ſworn.

I live in Noble-ſtreet, Foſter-lane; I am a wire-worker; on the 4th of April, about nine at night, I went into my ſhop, and I ſaw my window ſtripped of all the braſs chain I had in the window in my ſhop, there was nobody in the ſhop, I was in the adjoining room where we always ſit; it was braſs chain for ſcale-makers; the next morning I went round to my cuſtomers to give notice, if any came to ſtop it, I heard nothing of it till Friday, I heard it had been at Mr. Goodman's on Snow-hill, and I found it on the Saturday at Mr. Porter's, he aſked me if it was mine, and I ſaid it was; they told me the perſon who brought it was to be there on the Monday; I went, and ſaw the priſoner; ſhe ſaid ſhe had the chain of a young man; the chain is of my manufacturing, by my people, I am quite ſure of it.

THO-

THOMAS EMERY ſworn.

I produce the chain.

JOHN PORTER ſworn.

On the 9th of April laſt, about ſix in the evening, one Saunders brought this braſs chain to me, and aſked me if I wanted any; I aſked to look at it, I ſent for Mr. Wood, and appointed him to come on the Monday; Saunders came, and the priſoner came with him; ſhe ſaid ſhe had the chain of a young man for debt for rent; I aſked her how long ſhe had had it; ſhe ſaid three weeks; I told her if ſhe could not give a better account of it, I ſhould ſend for a conſtable; ſhe was taken before an Alderman, and committed to priſon.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. How long did ſhe lay in cuſtody before ſhe was fully committed?—About a month.

For what was ſhe committed at laſt?—For having that chain in her cuſtody, knowing it to be ſtolen; the reaſon was becauſe ſhe did not bring bail that was approved of.

(The commitment produced.)

Mr. Garrow. Are you a dealer in this article?—Yes.

Is there any thing peculiar in this chain by which it is diſtinguiſhable?——No, I could not ſwear to it, it is not my manufactory, if it was it would be different.

Proſecutor. It is my chain, I know it by the make; it is my work and my young man's; it is in many pieces.

Court. What quantity do you make of this?—To a large amount.

How long has that workman made for you?—Several years.

That which was in your ſhop window, did it differ from any other which he has made?—No; it is not in a ſtate for ſale.

How long will it remain bright after it is made?—Half a year.

If you was to put any other in a damp place, would it not appear as dull as that?—Yes, and a great deal duller.

Mr. Garrow to conſtable. Did the priſoner tell you ſhe could tell you where the man lived that gave it her?—Yes; we went, and ſhe wanted to go with me to a houſe in Golden-lane to enquire for him, and a woman ſaid he was gone from there on the Saturday.

THOMAS SAUNDERS ſworn.

The priſoner brought this chain to me, ſhe ſaid ſhe lived in Golden-lane, I told her I would ſhew it to a perſon, ſhe came again, ſhe wanted two ſhillings and two pence a pound for it, I told her it was not honeſtly come by, and ſhe went down with my wife, ſhe made no objection of going, ſhe ſeemed to wonder at it; it ſeems ſuch a perſon as ſhe deſcribed had been there, and had left his apartment. I am in the beam ſcale making way; I cannot ſay I am a judge of ſuch ſort of things.

THOMAS HUGHES ſworn.

I know this chain to be Mr. Wood's property, I made the principal part of it, I know the work of it, I have made a great quantity for Mr. Wood, here is ſome that I made a twelve-month ago, when I was apprentice; I can tell that it was in the ſhop at four the evening before, that very ſame; that chain has been in the ſhop above a twelve-month; nobody would buy it, and therefore it was uſeleſs: it is too wide for the ſcale-makers, they always found fault with it; and Mr. Wood and me have often had words about it; I made it in a hurry; I can ſwear to this particular chain, that it was in the ſhop at that time.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I am entirely innocent of it.

WILLIAM ASTILL ſworn.

I live in Butcher-row, I am ſcale-maker to his Majeſty.

Mr. Garrow. Of courſe, Sir, you know ſomething about chains for ſcales?—Undoubtedly.

Look at that, and ſee whether any perſon can with ſafety venture to ſwear that is his property, or whether any workman can ſwear that is his work?—I employ ſix people ple at this time, and I cannot see any difference between one person's work and another's, it is quite a common pattern, we put these to counter scales for grocers for large weights; I firmly believe that no man can safely swear to the making of this chain; I have cut up a great many thousand yards.

If it was badly made you would find fault with it?—Yes, we always look at it to see if it is well made.

Jury. Have you chain-makers in your own house, or do you buy of six different people?—We employ them out of doors, they are called garret-masters, they are not made in our house; there is nothing made in any scale-makers in London.

But you are not a chain maker yourself?—No, I am a scale maker, not a chain maker; this is a chain often used to scales, I believe.

You formerly dealt with Mr. Wood?—I have several times, and do now.

Wood. You have not had anything of me these two years?

Astill. Yes, I have.

Wood. Not to my knowledge.

The prisoner called one witness to her character.

Mr. Garrow. My Lord, I shall not call any more witnesses.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

592. JOSEPH FENNEL was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 18th of April last, one linen handkerchief, value 10d. the property of Robert Morris, Esq.

ROBERT MORRIS sworn.

I am a barrister, walking through Fleet-street, on Monday the 18th of April last, I felt somebody touch my coat pocket, on the left side, I put my hand upon it, and found my handkerchief was gone, at the same time I saw the prisoner about three yards from me running away, I ran after him, and he seeing that, put his hand under his coat, and threw from him a handkerchief, which I picked up immediately, and continued to run after him; the prisoner turned down Water-lane, and went to stand up against the side of a house, when I took him into custody, he said he was coming up Water-lane, and not going down it; I am quite certain of his person, for I never lost sight of him; the handkerchief he threw down, and which I picked up, was mine; it was marked with the two first letters of my name; I am pretty sure I had my handkerchief a very little before in my pocket.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was coming up Water-lane, on an errand from my aunt, I stopped to make water, and this gentleman seized hold of me, saying I had picked his pocket.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

The next Part will be published in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 11th of MAY, 1785, and the following Days;

Being the FIFTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER V. PART V.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chantery Lane, and S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE NINE-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

593. WILLIAM DAWSON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing eight ounces of hyſon tea, the property of the Eaſt-India Company.

John Affleck, a labourer in the Eaſt-India warehouſe, ſaw the priſoner take the tea out of the cheſt, and put it in a bag, and put it into his waiſtcoat pocket.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

594. ELIZABETH NORTHAM was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 9th of May, one piece of plain muſlin, value 3l. one piece of worked muſlin, value 3l. a flowered muſlin apron, value 5s. the property of John Leake.

JOHN LEAKE ſworn.

On Monday laſt I loſt all the property mentioned in the indictment, about two in the day, the priſoner was brought into my back ſhop for me to ſearch her; I drew her cloak on one ſide and ſhe had a piece of muſlin under her arm, it was plain muſlin, I imagine there was about five or ſix yards; it was a remarkable wide muſlin; it was my property, I know it by the ſhop mark at the end of it, D. A. it is my writing.

Court. When you ſend goods out of your ſhop do you ever ſend them with the marks on them?—Yes, if we ſend the ends on; I never had but two pieces of ſuch muſlin in my life, it is a very uncommon muſlin, I had them about three weeks or a month: I aſked her if ſhe had any thing more about her, ſhe declared ſhe had not; I put my hand on her pocket on the other ſide of her petticoat, and felt ſomething rather bulky, and I deſired ſhe would take every thing out of her pocket; ſhe did ſo, and pulled out an apron belonging to me, it was a flowered muſlin apron.

Court. What did the piece of plain muſlin coſt you?—I have under valued it, it coſt me fifteen ſhillings a yard; the apron is worth ſix or ſeven ſhillings; there was no mark upon it, we have been ſo much engaged lately we have not had time to mark our goods: I did not miſs it till it was taken out of the priſoner's pocket; in conſequence of that I ſent for a conſtable, and he ſecured her; ſhe declared ſhe had nothing more about her, but he found a piece of tambour muſlin upon her, which I knew

I knew by the marks: I ſaw the things within forty-eight hours before.

KNIGHT BOWMAN ſworn.

I am a journeyman to Mr. Leake; this woman came into my maſter's ſhop on Monday laſt, and aſked to look at ſome printed cottons; it was about two o'clock; ſhe ſaid it was for a bed-gown; ſhe then went up to the counter, and laid her cloak over ſeveral of the things that were on the counter, I ſaw her do that.

In what manner?—She ſpread it a little over the things with her hands under it; I then ſhewed her ſeveral printed cottons, I ſuſpected the woman as ſoon as ſhe came into the ſhop; I believe ſhe had one hand on the counter, I did not ſee how the other hand was employed, but her cloak was covered over it; I then ſhewed her ſeveral cottons, which rather hid her ſtill more.

Did not ſhe move her cloak before you ſerved her?—Very little; I ſerved her, ſhe appeared to be very difficult, and upon turning my head ſeveral times, I once thought I ſaw her pick ſomething from the ground, not for a certainty, but it appeared ſo to me, I ſaw her near the ground, putting ſomething in her pocket, but I was not certain whether ſhe took it from the ground or not; I then obſerved a finer piece of muſlin lay by the ſide of her.

Was that the muſlin that was miſſing afterwards?—Yes, that was the plain muſlin; on turning my head to look for ſome more printed cottons, I ſoon miſſed this piece of muſlin, and ſoon after that ſhe bought one yard of the printed cottons; ſhe appeared to ſtoop before I miſſed the muſlin.

Might ſhe have taken the muſlin at that time?—She might, I miſſed it juſt after; ſhe bought one yard, I obſerved to her it was not a ſufficient quantity for a bed-gown; ſhe then ſaid, that was quite a ſufficient quantity for her purpoſe; ſhe would buy it for a frock, and if I would give her a pattern of one that was on the counter, ſhe would ſhew it to a perſon; I accordingly gave her a pattern; ſhe paid for the cotton, and went out of the ſhop; I immediately got over the counter and followed her, as ſoon as ſhe had got ſeven or eight yards, and brought her back to my maſter, and informed him, then the conſtable was ſent for; but before that my maſter began to examine her in my preſence, and he threw open her cloak, and found the muſlin under her arm, and all paſſed as he has deſcribed.

Were theſe things on the counter too?—I cannot anſwer only for the plain muſlin.

Did the plain muſlin and the fine muſlin lay together in the ſhop?—I am ſure they did not, I ſaw the plain muſlin before me; it was covered a little with her apron; I ſtood ſhewing her more cottons, but ſhe covered ſeveral worked muſlin with the cottons, but the plain muſlin lay alone, I ſuppoſe it might be a yard from it.

Can you ſwear with certainty that the piece of worked muſlin and the plain muſlin were in the ſhop?—I can ſwear that the plain muſlin was in the ſhop.

Priſoner. I leave myſelf to the mercy of the Court.

JOHN STAPLETON ſworn.

I am the conſtable, I took this piece of worked muſlin from the priſoner, the plain muſlin was taken before I came; I took nothing elſe, I ſaw nothing elſe taken from her; I have had the cuſtody of theſe things, they were given to me in the back ſhop.

The priſoner called one witneſs, who gave her a good character.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing, but not privately.

To be confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

595. JOHN RAMSHAW was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 9th of April laſt, one piece of callico containing twenty twenty one yards, value 2l. 2s. the property of Samuel Swann, and William Oddy.

SAMUEL SWANN ſworn.

I live in Friday-ſtreet, on the 9th of April near eight o'clock, there was a pack laying in the ſtreet at the door, and ſoon after, I ſaw my porter running after a man, that man had nothing that I ſaw, he was taken in about five minutes and brought back; we immediately opened the pack and miſſed one piece, I have not the invoice with me; the ſheeting was cut.

Mr. Knowles, Priſoner's Counſel. You have not the invoice here?——No.

Where is your houſe ſituate?——The corner of Friday-ſtreet, fronting into Watling-ſtreet, there are two doors.

What time was this?—It was between ſeven and eight.

I imagine from the knowledge I have of the ſtate of the atmoſphere at that time, that it muſt be then pretty dark?—It was not dark.

This perſon was forty yards from you?——About forty.

Do you mean to ſwear that it was not duſk?——Yes.

JOHN BOOTH ſworn.

I am porter to Meſſrs. Swann and Oddy, the piece was ſtolen out from ſome goods of my maſter's, when I returned back, the priſoner and another man were pulling the piece out of the pack.

Can you ſwear he took any of them out?—No, I cannot, I was coming home, they ſaw me and they ſet out, I ſet out after them, and called out ſtop thief! a man took the priſoner till I came up and brought him back.

Did you ſee anything in either of their hands or poſſeſſion?——No, only pulling out of the wrapper.

Did you ſee anything dropped in the ſtreet?——No, the priſoner ſaid, there was a fire, and he was going to look at it.

NATHANIEL ALEXANDER ſworn.

I took the priſoner into cuſtody, I know nothing of the fact, I found nothing upon him, he made no confeſſion in my hearing.

Court to Proſecutor. You know only from the invoice what number of pieces this pack contained?——No.

You have not the witneſs here who packed it?——No.

Court to Jury. Gentlemen, there is no evidence to put the priſoner on his defence, here is no legal evidence in this caſe, that anything has been ſtolen at all.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

596. MATHEW DALEY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 23d of April laſt, one man's drab coloured cloth coat, value 18d. the property of Joſeph Faſſinage.

MARY JONES ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner take the coat from my maſter's door, this day three weeks, between three and four in the afternoon; I took the coat from the priſoner immediately, he laid hold of the coat, I ſtruggled with him to get the coat from him; the priſoner was ſtanding ſtill, I laid hold of him, and found my maſter's property upon him, I ſtruggled with him, becauſe I had a ſuſpicion he had got the coat; another man come to my aſſiſtance.

SAMUEL SINGLETON ſworn.

I ſaw the ſtruggle between the witneſs and the priſoner, ſhe was pulling at the coat.

Court to Mrs. Jones. You ſwear that you never ſaw the coat in his poſſeſſion?—I did not ſee him take it or drop it, but I took him on ſuſpicion becauſe the property was dropt at his feet; when I took up the coat, he immediately pulled at the coat again, he wanted to get away from me.

Then how came you to ſay, that he laid hold of the coat?——No.

Then

Then he never had hold of the coat at all?—I never ſaw him have hold of the coat.

Singleton. I was about twenty yards off, and I ſaw the man and the woman pulling againſt one another with the coat, ſhe was pulling it away from him.

Do you mean to ſay that he ever had a hand upon the coat?——Certainly he had, I ſaw his hand upon it, I took charge of the priſoner, this is the ſame coat.

(The coat depoſed to by the proſecutor.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I came in and ſtopped at a yard near this houſe, and ſtanding at the corner a man ruſhed by me, and turned me quite round, and he threw ſomething in at the door, and he cut me over my head.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

597. THOMAS FIELD was indicted for that he, on the 28th day of March laſt, had in his cuſtody, a certain piece of parchment, called a bill of Middleſex, and on which ſaid piece of parchment, in purſuance of the ſtatute, there had been made a certain ſtamp fixed to the ſaid piece of parchment, whereby certain duties of ſixpence, ſixpence, ſixpence and ſixpence were denoted to have been duly paid to our Lord the King, and that he the ſaid Thomas on the ſaid 28th day of March, unlawfully, fraudulently, and felonioufly, did get off the ſaid ſtamp, with intent to uſe the ſame for another bill of Middleſex, the ſaid duties being then due to our Lord the King, with intent to defraud our ſaid Lord the King.

A ſecond count, For taking off the ſtamps from a certain writ called a latitat with the like intention.

GEORGE FRYER ſworn.

I am a ſtationer, in Chancery-lane, I know the priſoner; on Eaſter Monday or Tueſday laſt, the priſoner came to me with two bills of Middleſex, and one latitat; I ſuſpected him from his coming before, but having none of thoſe ſtamps in the houſe, and the Stamp-office being ſhut up, I bought them of him: theſe are the three writs, about a week after he came again, on a Saturday night with a treble ſixpence, that was a real ſtamp, I was very buſy, then I told him to come on the Monday morning, and I then aſked him how he came by thoſe that he had before, he ſaid, he had them from the Stamp-office, I told him he muſt go with me to the office, he ſeemed to be very ready to go, but whilſt I went to get my hat, he ſet off down Cary-ſtreet, I called ſtop him, and I took him before the commiſſioners.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. You have produced theſe three pieces of parchment as the writs you purchaſed of the priſoner?——Yes.

On what day did you purchaſe them?—On the Eaſter Monday or Tueſday, he came again on the Saturday week after that.

Where did you put them?—I put them in ſeparate places, that we have for different kinds of writs.

In an open drawer?—Yes.

How many people are employed in your ſhop?—Two or three.

Are you a writing ſtationer?——Yes.

Then occaſionally you have a great reſort to your ſhop, for the purpoſe of buying writs, bringing writing to be copied, and perſons bringing it home when it is done? Yes, but this was holiday time, and we had very little buſineſs to do.

Theſe things were put in the open drawer?——Yes.

To which all the perſons in your ſhop have acceſs?—Yes.

THOMAS SEABROOK ſworn.

I am meſſenger to the Stamp-office, Mr. Fryer brought the priſoner to the office, on the 1ſt of April, I took him to Bow-ſtreet, and the Juſtice deſired one of the conſtables to go with me to the priſoner's lodgings, and in ſearching his lodgings we found theſe writs.

Are there any ſtamps on them?——Only one, they are in the ſame ſituation as I found them in.

Court. What ſtamps do you ſay have been taken off that writ?——Two of half a crown value.

Mr. Garrow. My Lord, I ſubmit that is not the charge in the indictment.

Mr. Silveſter. The charge in the indictment is, that this man has taken off a ſtamp, which bore the impreſſion of four ſixpences, having been paid to Government; I produce a writ in which it appears, that not only theſe four have been taken off, but likewiſe a fifth ſtamp, I do not charge him with the laſt.

Mr. Garrow. My learned friend has ſtated half the charge, and ſuppreſſed the other half, and it is this, that this man having in his poſſeſſion a certain proceſs which had iſſued out out of the King's Court, and on which four ſixpenny ſtamps were paid, and denoted to be paid; he unlawfully got off the ſaid ſtamp from the ſaid proceſs, with intent to uſe the ſaid ſtamp upon a certain other proceſs: is that the caſe here? this witneſs tells your Lordſhip, that there is now due and payable five and not four ſixpenny duties on this, and that upon this, which the witneſs has ſaid to be duly executed, there were originally five, and that thoſe five were taken off; ſurely this is not the offence ſtated in the indictment.

Court. I think this objection is taken up a little haſtily, without conſidering fully either the act of parliament or the evidence. What is the evidence? the charge is, that he took off a ſtamp denoting four ſixpenny duties from a certain writ, with intent to place the ſaid ſtamp on another writ: the evidence is, that there appeared to be taken off from a writ, a ſtamp denoting that four ſixpenny duties had been paid, and alſo another ſtamp denoting that another ſixpenny duty had been paid; there is produced a writ on which there is a ſtamp denoting that four ſixpenny duties have been paid, and another ſtamp denoting that one ſixpenny duty had been paid, they may prove that he took off four; there are two ſtamps diſtinct and ſeparate, why may they not prove that he took off one, without taking off the other; to this I agree, that under this indictment which ſtates that he took off four ſixpences, they could not prove five ſixpences, but they have proved a ſtamp, denoting five ſixpences had been made and taken off.

Mr. Garrow. My Lord, my objection is this, that the charge in the indictment is not only the getting off the ſtamps, but there is an intent which the act of parliament makes the capital part of the charge, that is the intent to put it on to another proceſs.

Court. At preſent there is no variance between the evidence and the indictment.

Mr. Silveſter to Mr. Seabrook. Does that appear to have been uſed?

Mr. Garrow. I object to that queſtion.

(The writ read.)

SAMUEL HIGGINS ſworn.

I live in Newport-Market, I know the priſoner, I was ſerved with a copy of a writ by the priſoner. (The copy read, indorſed R. Morgan.)

——— MAJOR, ſworn.

I am his Majeſty's engraver, and chief engraver to the Stamp-Office; theſe ſtamps have been taken from other parchments and put on theſe: in the proceſs of ſtamping theſe, the parchment has a hole cut thro' it, and they put this red on the parchment, with a particular paſte that is made on purpoſe for the office, and there is a particular foil put through, and then it is ſtamped ſo that the lead takes the part of the impreſſion; after that it is impoſſible to take that off, and put it on ſo ſtrong again.

Does the mark of the lead correſpond with the reſt?—No, it does not; this writ was ſtamped at the office.

GEORGE HARRIS ſworn.

What are the ſtamps uſed on the bills of Middleſex?—We have two dies, one with four six-pences, and the other with one six-pence, which was laid on in 1783; we stamp none under five now, and that is done by two separate stamps, the four six-pences is in one, and the other has one six-pence; if the impreſſion is made upon the writ it will appear on the parchment.

Look at that writ and copy?—We make a hole, then we put on the ſcutcheon, then it is punched, then leaded, then ſtamped, and then cyphered on the other ſide.

Mr. Garrow to Mr. Harris. Have you looked at that parchment which is ſaid to be a bill of Middleſex, iſſued againſt Higgins?—I did.

Are you able to ſwear that that piece of parchment has been legally and properly ſtamped at his Majeſty's ſtamp-office?—No, I cannot ſwear that.

How many years have you been in the Stamp-office?—Pretty near forty; I am ſupervisor, I ſuperintend everything of that ſort; I am converſant with the buſineſs, I have gone through all the duties.

Mr. Major. It may have been legally ſtamped, and I rather think it has, but it is ſo tumbled and creaſed.

Mr. Seabrook. It was very plain when I firſt took it before the Juſtice.

Mr. Silveſter. Theſe three writs were ſold by the priſoner to Mr. Fryer, now it is proved theſe were taken off ſome writs, but he had in his cuſtody a writ, a copy of which he ſerved on a defendant, and there is found in his cuſtody three writs, with ſtamps appearing to be taken off from other writs.

Mr. Garrow. Before the priſoner is called upon for his defence, I take the liberty of ſubmitting to the Court ſeveral objections which occur to my mind, to ſhew that the priſoner cannot poſſibly be convicted; firſt it is ſtated that the priſoner had in his poſſeſſion a proceſs of our Lord the King, &c. which appeared to have been before then duly iſſued againſt ——— Higgins and Richard Roe; I ſubmit there is no evidence to call on the priſoner for his defence, to ſhew that he had in his poſſeſſion ſuch a writ; ſuch a writ is indeed produced to the Jury, but in a ſtate in which it is impoſſible it could have iſſued out of the court of our Lord the King, it is not proved to be duly ſtamped, ſo as to be ſigned; another objection is this, that it is ſtated to be a thing not deſcribed in the act of parliament.

Court to Mr. Silveſter. There is no averment in the indictment, that ſuch a writ had been duly iſſued, but that he had in his cuſtody a certain piece of parchment which purported to have then been duly iſſued againſt them; it is not averred that it did duly iſſue.

Mr. Garrow. It is proved that a piece of parchment was in his cuſtody, on which was written that, which if it had been duly iſſued, would have been a bill of Middleſex; it is averred, that it did duly iſſue; my objection is that it does not purport ſo to have iſſued; my learned friend attempted to call a witneſs to prove that it had duly iſſued, but it muſt have been duly ſigned, it is proved by thoſe who have been forty years in the buſineſs, that this never had been legally ſtamped, conſequently it never had been legally iſſued; I ſay, this thing, as deſcribed by the indictment, has a deſcription not named in the act of parliament, for it is called a proceſs; I am aware there is a ſweeping clauſe, "all other proceſſes iſſuing out of the court of our Lord the King." I have another objection which I think will be perfectly ſufficient for this purpoſe.

Court. There is no ſuch word as proceſs in the act of parliament.

Mr. Garrow. I have another objection: by this act of parliament there are two or three offences created, and the offence in this indictment is not one of them; it ſays firſt, if any perſon ſhall write or ingroſs, &c. upon any thing which has already been uſed, it is not that; or ſhall fraudulently eraſe or ſcrape out any name or names of any perſon or perſons, or any ſum, date, or other thing written in ſuch writ, &c. it is not that; or if any perſon ſhall fraudulently cut, tear, or get off, any mark or ſtamp from from any piece of vellum or parchment, paper, playing cards, &c. with intent to uſe ſuch ſtamp or mark, in reſpect of which any ſuch duty is payable; (which is, they ſay, the duty laſt enumerated) now the Court will look to the ſeveral things that the legiſlature meant to provide for; the Court will not take any collateral part of the act of parliament, and apply it to a new caſe, then comes the clauſe to prevent the transferring of ſtamps from one to the other, you will not extend the act of parliament, being a very penal one.

Court. I certainly will not extend it; the act of parliament certainly refers to all the things beforementioned.

Court to Mr. Silveſter. I wiſh you would conſider how far the intent that is ſpecified by the act can be extended; the act had in contemplation miſchiefs which had happened in practice before that time, and one was, that old deeds had been eraſed; another miſchief was with reſpect to proceſſes, here they would eraſe the names of one perſon, or put in new names, or take off the ſtamp, and put it on another piece of parchment, and then ſerve that writ; that was uſing it for the ſame purpoſe; it does not ſay as in the caſe of the receipt-tax, whoſoever ſhall utter or expoſe to ſale, or take off the ſtamp, to defraud his Majeſty.

Mr. Silveſter. He ſells it as a writ, he therefore does uſe a falſe ſtamp; and he was paid for them as good ſtamps.

Mr. Garrow. I beg leave to ſuppoſe it was taken off for the purpoſe of a muſeum; ſuppoſe an antiquarian was to wiſh to have a collection of ſtamps, and takes one off from an old proceſs; and afterwards ſells his collection, is that a uſing?

The priſoner called ſix witneſſes, who gave him an exceeding good character.

The learned Judge ſummed up the evidence, and left it to the Jury, whether they were ſatisfied, that the bill of Middleſex againſt Higgins was ever ſtamped; and if it was, that the priſoner ever took off that ſtamp; and, if he did, whether he did it with intention to uſe it on a bill of Middleſex or Latitat; and, if they found the priſoner guilty, he deſired them to ſtate whether they were ſatisfied that the priſoner took the ſtamp off, and ſold it with intention that it ſhould be uſed, whether by himſelf or others, for one of thoſe purpoſes deſcribed in the indictment; and if they were of that opinion, he deſired they would ſay ſo, beſides finding the priſoner guilty.

The Jury withdrew ſome time, and returned with a verdict

GUILTY

Of taking a ſtamp from a certain inſtrument, and of affixing it to another, with an intent that it ſhould be uſed by others.

Court to Jury. Do you find that he had an intent on of uſing them himſelf? ——No, my Lord, we conceive he could not poſſibly have that intention, becauſe he ſold them to the ſtationer.

Court to Jury. I will read the verdict to you. The Jury find that the priſoner took off the ſtamp from the bill of Middleſex, mentioned in the indictment, and affixed it on a piece of parchment, purporting to be the form of another proceſs of the ſame kind, which he ſold with others to Fryer, with intent that the ſame ſhould be uſed by ſuch perſons as ſhould purchaſe the ſame; but not with intent of uſing it himſelf.

Jury. My Lord, that is clearly our idea.

Court. Judgment muſt be arreſted on this verdict.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

598. SARAH WILSON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 27th day of April laſt, one wainſcot table, value 6d. one one flock bolster, value 3d. two blankets, value 6d. one rug, value 1s. three knives, value 3d. three forks, value 3d. and one leg of beef, value 1d. the property of John Barry.

ISAAC PAGE sworn.

I am headborough of Norton Falgate, I was fetched by the profecutor, to go to his room which had been broke open, and I found the goods in Mr. Lee's houfe, I took the prifoner.

THOMAS LEE fworn.

I faw the prifoner and another woman come by with a table and bolfter, fhe afked me to buy them, and fhe faid, if I would not buy them, fhe would not leave them, for her mother was going to the hofpital, and they were felling the things by degrees.

THOMAS BARRY fworn.

My wife and I went out between two and three, and when we came home, the door was open, I miffed the things mentioned in the indictment, I found a table and bolfter again, at the witnefs Lee's apartment.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

A woman afked me to fell a table for her in Angel-alley, and the gentleman I carried it to, refufed to take it in, and I left it in that empty apartment, which I thought was the room I was to carry it to.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped and imprifoned fix months in the Houfe of Correction.

Tried by the firft Middlefex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

599. MARY ALLEN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 13th day of May, one guinea, ſeven ſhillings, and two ſixpences, the money of Abraham Dry.

And JOHN FENNELL * was indicted for receiving, relieving, aſſiſting, comforting, and maintaining, the ſaid Mary againſt his Majeſty's peace.

ABRAHAM DRY fworn.

On the 13th of May, I loſt my money about three in the afternoon, in Blackboy-alley, I was in there along with that young woman, and ſhe robbed me of a little green purſe, and one guinea, ſeven ſhillings, and two ſixpences, I tried to get my purſe out of her hand, and ſhe cried out murder! and that other fellow, and two or three more came in.

Had ſhe got the purſe compleatly from you before they came in?—LAYS, I had not it in my poſſeſſion then; I am ſure the prifoner Fennell was one of thoſe that came to her aſſiſtance; afterwards I took him, and he ſaid, blaſt you! if I had a knife, I would cut your bloody fingers off; there were one or two more, and three or four women, I am quite clear of the prifoner; my purſe was never found again, I believe ſhe was not ſearched.

Prifoner Fennell. When did you firſt ſee me?—The firſt I ſaw of him was coming to her aſſiſtance in the room.

JAMES MACKLIN fworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. Thomas Wright, I was in my buſineſs between three and four laſt Monday in the afternoon, I heard murder in the alley, and I jumped up to the window, and I ſaw the prifoner Fennell and the profecutor together, they were at the door, the outſide, where I underſtood he was robbed; after he diſengaged himſelf he ran by our window, and I heard him utter theſe words, damn his bloody eyes! if I had a knife, I would cut his bloody fingers off.

Prifoner Fennell. Could you put your

* See Trial 536 of this Seſſion.

head out of the window to ſee me?—I am ſure it was him and nobody elſe.

WILLIAM WATERFIELD ſworn.

I am likewiſe one of Mr. Wright's ſervants, I ſaw the proſecutor taking hold of this man by the collar, ſaying, you are the man that aſſiſted the girl in robbing me; I am ſure it was the priſoner Fennell; with that the priſoner ſays looſe me, blaſt your eyes looſe me! he ſtooped down and took up a ſtone, blaſt your eyes! ſays he, if you do not looſe me, I will cut your bloody hand off, and he hit him over the arm; after that as he paſſed by the window, he ſaid, blaſt my eyes! if I had a knife, I would have cut his bloody fingers off.

JONATHAN DEAL ſworn.

I belong to the exciſe, I was at Mr. Wright's, I went and looked out, and the priſoner Allen was crying out murder! and there were ſeveral women round her, and the priſoner Fennell ſtood I ſuppoſe about twenty or thirty yards from the proſecutor and ſwore an oath, if he had a knife he would cut his bloody fingers off; I am ſure it was the priſoner.

PRISONER FENNELL's DEFENCE.

I never ſaw anything at all of the robbery, I know nothing of it, only going down the place, and the people ſwore to me.

PRISONER ALLEN's DEFENCE.

The proſecutor ſent to me to day, that he would make it up for two guineas.

Proſecutor. I never made them any ſuch offer.

MARY ALLEN, GUILTY.

To be privately whipped and impriſoned twelve months in the Houſe of Correction.

JOHN FENNELL, GUILTY.

To be branded, and impriſoned twelve months in Newgate.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

600. GEORGE COSSANS otherwiſe GEORGE otherwiſe called TEAPOT, was indicted for that he together with Peter Warren, and John Nickland, and divers other perſons, to the number of ten and more, on the 9th day of January, in the twenty third year of his Majeſty's reign with force and arms, at the pariſh of Ringwood, in the county of Southampton, being armed with offenſive weapons, to wit, divers large ſticks, bludgeons, clubs, and large whips, unlawfully riotouſly, routouſly, and feloniouſly did aſſemble themſelves together, in order to be aiding and aſſiſting in reſcuing and taking away from John Mitchell, John Smart, Thomas Lear, and Nicholas Summons, a large quantity of tea and geneva, that is to ſay 10Colb. weight of tea, and an hundred gallons of foreign geneva, being uncuſtomed goods, and goods liable to pay duties which had not been paid or ſecured, after ſeizure of ſuch goods, and the ſaid John Mitchell, John Smart, Thomas Lear and Nicholas Simmons being ſuch officers as aforeſaid, againſt the form of the ſtatute.

A ſecond count, For that the others did ſo aſſemble, and aid, and aſſiſt, certain perſons whoſe names are at preſent unknown in taking away a large quantity of tea, and foreign geneva.

A third count, Charges that the ſaid officers did duly ſeize the ſaid tea and geneva being uncuſtomed goods, and goods liable to pay duties, &c. and that the priſoner made an aſſault being armed as before mentioned, and did aid and aſſiſt, the other perſons, &c.

(This priſoner having been brought up laſt ſeſſion (Vide Seſſions Paper) on the ſuggeſtion of Mr. Attorney General who now ſaid, he ſhould try him on the indictment only, the Court ordered a Noli Proſequi to be entered on the ſuggeſtion.)

Council for the Crown.

Mr. Attorney General	Mr. Wilſon
Mr. Solicitor General	and
Mr. Serjeant Walker	Mr. Silveſter.

Coun-

Council for the Priſoner.
Mr. Fielding | Mr. Garrow.

Mr. Silveſter opened the Indictment.

Mr. Fielding. Pleaſe to let the witneſſes withdraw before Mr. Attorney General opens the caſe.

(The witneſſes withdrew.)

Mr. Attorney General. May it pleaſe your Lordſhip, and you Gentlemen of the Jury. Gentlemen, this is an indictment againſt the priſoner, under an act of parliament that paſſed in the nineteenth year of the reign of the late King, and it is for an offence of which, if the priſoner is guilty, the legiſlature have very properly thought that he deſerves a capital puniſhment, and with reſpect to that I believe when you come to hear the motives on which the act of parliament paſſed, you will be of opinion it was a very proper act; and certain I am, that if the priſoner is guilty of the fact imputed to him, it is a fact, which from the circumſtances of the preſent times, not only calls, but loudly calls for a very ſevere and ſtrict exemplary puniſhment: the grounds on which that act of parliament paſſed, and the reaſons that induced the legiſlature more ſtrictly to inforce the laws againſt perſons committing the crimes attributed to the priſoner at the bar, if ever they did exiſt, exiſt in their full force now. The act begins with reciting that whereas diſſolute perſons have aſſociated themſelves, and entered into confederacies to ſupport one another, and have appeared in great gangs in ſeveral parts of the kingdom, carrying fire arms and other offenſive weapons, &c. and whereas, ſeveral officers of the Cuſtoms and Exciſe, and their aſſiſtants, have been wounded, maimed, and ſome of them killed in the execution of their office, to the utter ſubverſion of all civil authority; it is therefore enacted that if any perſons to the number of three or more, armed with fire arms or other offenſive weapons ſhall be aſſembled in order to be aiding and aſſiſting, in the illegal exportation of goods to be exported, or in the running, landing, or carrying away prohibited or unaccuſtomed goods liable to pay any duty, which has not been paid, or ſecured from any of his Majeſty's officers, ſuch perſons ſhall be guilty of felony, without the benefit of clergy. Gentlemen, it is for the offence contained in this act of parliament, that is, for being ſo aſſembled for the purpoſe of landing, running, and carrying away, and alſo for reſcuing goods of this ſort after ſeizure, that the priſoner is now indicted, Gentlemen, I ſhould have taken no notice of another part of the act of parliament, or why the priſoner was called upon to anſwer for another offence, if the learned Gentleman had not mentioned it, but the act goes on, and declares, that if an information ſhall be exhibited againſt any perſon guilty of any of the offences in this act, and that ſhall be tranſmitted to one of the ſecretaries of ſtate, and proclamation inſerted in the Gazette for ſuch perſon to take his trial, if within forty days after proclamation he ſhall not ſurrender, then he ſhall be guilty of felony, in the ſame manner as if he had not been guilty of any offence whatever. Gentlemen, the priſoner at the bar after this offence was imputed to him, was called upon by a proclamation to ſurrender; he did not ſurrender, and it was not till a very few months ago that he was apprehended; no matter for what cauſe; being apprehended, he appeared to be the ſame man, he was committed upon, and he might have been tried upon that; but the learned gentleman ſays, I know I could not have convicted him upon that; how the learned Gentleman comes to be ſo well informed, I do not know; he will tell you if he pleaſes any reaſons he may have for thinking the priſoner could not have been convicted under that proclamation: this I know, that the reaſon of that proclamation is this, that if perſons guilty of thoſe violent offences ſhall withdraw themſelves from Juſtice, and then retun into this country, that they ſhall shall be liable to be tried in this way, by shewing that they did not surrender; but whatsoever the learned gentleman may suppose, respecting me, if I did not believe the man guilty of the offence, I would scorn to prosecute him by that prosecution; and now, though it was in my power to prosecute him under that proclamation, I did not think my duty required it: but I assume no merit to myself on the occasion. Gentlemen, having before you now all the evidence that there could be on that original information, you will think with me that I do much better to prosecute him, as if he had not absconded. The offence I have stated to you from the act of parliament, whether the prisoner falls within that act, you, under the directions you will receive from the Court, are to decide: the learned Judge will state to you his opinion of the act of parliament; you will hear that, and then you will judge of the facts, and if you think those facts warranted, you will pronounce the prisoner Guilty. The prisoner is, I believe, originally a native of Hampshire, at least he has lived in that country for some years; and, until this offence was committed, I believe was continually there. On the 9th of January, 1783, one Thomas Lear, who is an officer in the excise, received information, that there was a great quantity of smuggled goods lodged in a house at Burley in Southampton, where they went and seized fifty bags of tea, and forty casks of Geneva; soon after a waggon belonging to one Shelly was coming by, and they desired he would permit them to take it to Ringwood; time enough had elapsed between the seizure and the time of conveying it to Ringwood, for a very considerable number of persons, of whom the prisoner is one, between thirty and forty, or some such number, that had concealed themselves behind the road to obstruct those by whom this seizure was to be conveyed to the Excise-Office; it will appear in the course of the trial, that some of them had the knowledge that the soldiers had no ammunition; and I believe the prisoner was bold enough, because he knew that fact, to take the part he did in this present business: as they were going along the road there rushed out from a wood not above three or four hundred yards from the place where the seizure was made, several persons, some of them with large sticks; and the prisoner was the most active man, crying out to the rest, damn it, come on, they shall not have a bit of tea; upon which they drove the officers away, and drove off the waggon full speed. Gentlemen, you will find these persons were as good as their words, for they got off the tea, drove it off, and no more was heard of that: this was not sufficient, which I should have thought might have satisfied these gentlemen, but they were determined to be guilty of another fact, which was one of the reasons that this act of parliament passed, which states that the officers were frequently maimed, and their lives sometimes taken away; the soldiers, as I understand, were young recruits, and they tempted them with an offer of some liquor, not to do their duty; the officers began to see that the smugglers and the soldiers were upon such terms on the road, that they thought it their best way to make off as fast as they could; accordingly all the officers endeavoured to make the best of their way; but when the smugglers found the officers were frightened and running off, they followed them, and beat them in such a manner that one of them was left almost dead. Gentlemen, this is the offence charged against the prisoner: it is necessary there should be three persons, or more, with fire-arms or other offensive weapons, that they should be assembled for the purpose either for the forcibly landing prohibited goods, or rescuing goods prohibited from the persons who by law were authorized to seize them; if they were so assembled with that view, they are guilty under this act of parliament, whether they do any thing or not; but in the present case there cannot be any doubt that the prisoner was one of those that assembled with that intent, the fact will leave no doubt of his guilt in that respect; the only question then will be whether ther there were three perſons or more in company aſſembled with the ſame common intent, or armed with fire-arms, or other offenſive weapons. My Lord, will ſtate the law, I take the liberty of ſtating, that if the perſons ſo aſſembled had with them, or about them, thoſe things which were uſed, as probably and poſſibly they might be uſed, by them as weapons of offence, that is ſufficient, and then the priſoner is guilty under this act of parliament, although the weapon is not ſtrictly and properly ſpeaking a fire-arm, for what is an offenſive weapon is to depend as well on the uſe of the inſtrument; I may make uſe of a thing as an offenſive weapon, that is not in its nature intended as ſuch; but I ſubmit with great confidence to my Lord's direction, that if it appears to you that the priſoner and his comrades had at this time thoſe things which they uſed as offenſive weapons, as for inſtance, if I was to ſnatch that candleſtick, and go about with it to knock down exciſe officers, I ſubmit it would be an offenſive weapon; and under that direction, I am confident you will convict the priſoner; but if there ſhould be any doubt in point of law; if my Lord ſhould have any doubts, and you ſhould entertain doubts likewiſe, I am ſure, in that caſe, you will not be at all averſe to ſtate what facts you find, and leave the determination of the law to all the Judges of England. Theſe things are in your power; it is in your power generally to acquit; and in your power generally to convict: but, if you ſhould have any doubts, though I do not know that any will ariſe, I am ſure you will not be averſe to finding the priſoner guilty on the facts, as they appear to you, ſtating thoſe facts, that they may be reſerved for the opinion of the Judges: but if you find the priſoner is not guilty, it will be equally your duty to ſay ſo.

Mr. Fielding My Lord, I hope Mr. Attorney-General will ſatisfy the Jury, that the matter of the ſuggeſtion he mentioned is quite foreign to this inquiry, for I could have given a moſt ſatisfactory anſwer to that ſuggeſtion, and therefore this caſe is not to derive any aſſiſtance from that.

Court. Certainly not.

JOHN MITCHELL ſworn.

(Examined by Mr. Solicitor-General.)

I am an officer of exciſe, I remember a ſeizure at Ringwood, the 9th of January, 1783, there was between forty and fifty bags of tea, and between thirty and forty caſks of liquor, belonging to one Jonathan Coffin.

How many officers were there all together?——About ſix.

After you had made this ſeizure, what did you do?——We employed a waggon to carry the goods to Ringwood after we had ſeized it, and in going along from Burley to Ringwood, we were moleſted by a ſet of men, and they reſcued the waggon, and the goods that were in it from us, and drove it away; we were about three or four hundred yards from Burley, there were about ten or twelve perſons that ſtopped, that came as we apprehended, from behind the buſhes; I ſaw them come down to the waggon, they were on horſeback, they were on the left ſide as we were going to Ringwood.

Where did you firſt ſee them?—When they came down immediately, to take the waggon from us.

Was there a perſon of the name of Early there?—Yes.

What did he do?—He aſſiſted with the reſt in reſcuing the waggon; after we had ſeized the goods and got them into the waggon, we came to Caſſin's houſe, down a little hill, about three or four hundred yards; then Early rode by the waggon and came to me, he met me and ſpoke to me, he went by me, and preſently returned back, and I ſaw the other perſons come up, as I apprehended, from behind ſome buſhes, then he ſaid, damn your eyes, come out.

Was the priſoner one of theſe perſons?——Yes.

Had thoſe perſons, or any, and which of them, any thing in their hands?——Several of them had ſomething in their hands.

What were they?——Sticks, ſuch ſticks as ſmugglers generally ride with, rather larger than riding ſticks in general, larger than walking ſticks a great deal, but I never meaſured any of them, and I cannot tell you particularly as to the ſize, they are ſuch ſticks as a perſon would walk with to defend themſelves.

What next happened?——They then went to beat the horſes that were in the waggon, in order to drive it away from us, then they endeavoured to keep us back, and they ſtood before us, and would not let us go by; the ſticks that I ſaw, I ſaw them beat the horſes with, and drive the waggon.

Did they make any uſe of their ſticks with reſpect to you or the other officers?——Not juſt at that time, they drove them on.

Did they at any time make uſe of thoſe ſticks as againſt you or the other officers, deſcribe what paſſed after that?——They kept us back from purſuing the waggon, and in turning for us to go forward, there was one of them ſtruck the collector.

Mr. Fielding. What were the goods gone at this time?——They were gone on the road.

How far were they gone?—I ſuppoſe at that time that they ſtruck the collector they were gone a quarter of a mile.

Court. I think under this indictment after the offence is compleat we cannot hear what was done.

Mr. Solicitor General. What did they do at the time that the waggon was ſtopped?—Advancing the ſticks and keeping us back.

Court. Then they ſtopped you from coming up ſome of them holding up their ſticks?—Yes.

Mr. Solicitor. Where was the priſoner at that time?——He was amongſt them.

What had the priſoner in his hand at this time?——I cannot be certain.

Had he any thing in his hand?——I cannot ſay, I did not obſerve.

Where were thoſe perſons placed at the time they made the reſcue?——They were at the left of us when they came to the waggon; they ſeemed to come acroſs on the waggon at once, I never ſaw anything of them before.

Did you hear the priſoner at the bar ſay anything?——No, I do not remember I ever did.

Was anything ſaid by any of theſe perſons?—There was a cry (we were all in confuſion) damn me, keep back, but who ſpoke I am not able to ſay.

What was ſaid by any of them, when the priſoner was among them?—I do not remember hearing any of them ſpeak but Early, and that was when the waggon was gone on.

Court. Did Early call out to anybody?——He did after he paſſed by me when he came down the hill again, I heard him plainly and diſtinctly ſay, damn your eyes come out, on ſaying theſe words, ſome ruſhed out from behind the buſhes.

Was the priſoner one of thoſe?—I was at that time in confuſion, I ſaw the priſoner there.

Mr. Fielding. I underſtand that at this place they were on horſeback, of courſe ſome breadth of road was neceſſary to admit them?—It was a common, what we call a heath, where there is furz buſhes and trees.

Whether the priſoner was an accidental paſſenger there or not you cannot ſay, you heard him ſay nothing, you ſaw him do nothing?——I cannot take upon myſelf to aſſert, how he came there, or for what purpoſe he came there, only that he was there; I ſaw him but once, which was when the waggon was driving away, after that I apprehended he went away with the waggon, but whether he did I do not know; he went that way with the waggon.

You ſaw him among that number, but you ſay that he did nothing, that he ſaid nothing, that you do not know whether he had a ſtick in his hand or not, and that he went went away, and you saw nothing more?—Yes.

Mr. Attorney General. Did the waggon turn off quick or slow?——As fast as it could.

Did he follow the waggon?—He went on with it.

Which way was it he came?——From one side of the road.

Did he go with the rest after the waggon?——Yes, there were such a number of people, some went with it, and some staid to keep us back, there were more than twenty or thirty; I only came here to tell the truth, and what I know of the fact: I shall say no more one way than the other.

Court. When you first saw the prisoner he was with the rest?—He was.

When you last saw him, was he with those that went away with the waggon?—Yes, as far as I saw them.

This was within three or four hundred yards of Burley?——It is called Burley, it is a long straggling village, four miles round.

Were there any people whom curiosity brought upon this occasion?——If I must tell that, I believe there were, for there were a good many at the house; for in such a place as that, as soon as the officers go to seize goods, the country people do assemble.

I will ask you freely, you seem to speak fairly, could you from any act of the prisoner's, discern whether he was among those people who came with the rest, to see what was going forward; or whether he was one of those that came to rescue the goods?——He was with them that rescued them; but with what purpose he came there, I cannot say, I never saw anything of him, till Mr. Early spoke; where they came from I did not immediately see, there were some bushes or trees, that took away my sight, whether they been concealed or whether they were coming up at that juncture I cannot say.

Court. Were they upon the Ringwood road when you first saw them?——There are a number of roads upon the heath, but whether they were on the road I cannot say.

Is there any made road in this place?—There was a road where we were with the waggon, and they were to the left of that, and they crossed towards the waggon.

Did the people that so crossed towards the waggon, come up in a compleat body, or did all the other people come with them?——It appeared to me they came all in a body.

Was the prisoner one of those that so came up?—He came up with them.

Did you give information before the Justice of peace?—Yes.

JOHN SMART sworn.

I am an officer of excise, I remember being at Coffin's house, in January, 1783.

Mr. Wilson. Was you present when a seizure was made there?——Yes, I carried it to Ringwood in a waggon, I went two or three hundred yards.

What happened then?——There were people came and rescued it, and said, we should not have it.

Look at the prisoner at the bar, was he one of them?—He was one of the people that was there.

Where did these people that came up there come from?——Out of some bushy bye place.

Were they on horseback or on foot?—On horseback in general.

Did they meet you or overtake you from the road?——They came out of the road most of them, the left hand of the road.

Who was the first person that you saw?——One John Early was the first.

Did you hear him say anything?—Yes.

Before the others came?——Yes.

What was it?——He met the waggon, and came past us, he then came back again, and said, damn you, come on.

Do you know who he spoke to?——He hallooed out as he rode along, Damn you come on; then many came round us, they came

came out from among the bushes, and almost every where from every quarter.

Was the prisoner among those that came at that time?—Yes.

Was he on foot or on horseback?—He was on horseback.

Had those people or any of them anything in their hands?——Three or four had sticks, and I saw one with a whip, I could distinguish properly.

What was it that they did when they came up after Early had said, damn you come on?——Some of them fell a beating the horses, and drove the waggon away, and there was a great noise and confusion just at that time, I was on horse back, and so were the rest of the officers.

Why did not you follow the waggon then?—They prevented us.

In what manner was it that they prevented you?—They said, damn you, keep back, keep back; and we were apprehensive that we should be beat or hurt.

Why so?—Because one or two of them had sticks, and held them up, and said keep back, keep back.

Was it in consequence of this, that you did keep back, and did not follow the waggon?——Yes.

Do you know what number there might be of them?——I cannot say exactly, there were thirty or forty, as far as I know.

Do you know whether the prisoner had or had not anything in his hand?—I cannot say whether he had anything or no.

Did you hear him say anything?—No, Sir, I do not recollect I did.

Did you see him do anything?——He was riding backwards and forwards with the rest, and there was a great confusion.

What do you mean by riding backwards and forwards?——They kept in general riding backwards and forwards, and there was a great shouting and noise, they rode athwart and across the common, at first I did not take particular notice which way they rode, some of them took the waggon and horses, and drove it on.

What became of the prisoner at the bar?——The waggon then kept driving on by those people beating the horses, and he went away with it, as I believe, I never saw him afterwards, I am not clear that he went with the waggon, but he went away, and I saw no more of him that day.

Mr. Garrow. Mr. Smart, this was a considerable seizure?—Yes.

Did it draw any of the people of Burley about you to see what was the matter?—Yes.

There were a great many people there besides smugglers?—I do not know that.

THOMAS LEAR sworn.

(Examined by Mr. Serjeant Walker.)

You was present on the 9th day of January, 1783, at the making of a seizure?——Yes.

Give an account of what you first knew of it?——Soon after we seized the goods, about forty yards off we put them in a waggon, to carry them to Ringwood, the waggon was driving on the road to go to Ringwood, there was Mr. Boyd the collector, and several other officers; then we met John Early, and he passed on to the house where the goods were seized, then he returned again, and he called out, come on my lads, and immediately rushed out a parcel of men from the bushes, I cannot tell just their number, they were all on horseback.

Was the prisoner one of them?——The prisoner was one of them.

Immediately when they rushed out what did they do?——They came to the horses, some riding a gallop, others walking a trot, and all manners; I do not remember what they said, they began beating the horses that were in the waggon; I saw one Jumper strike Mr. Boyd the collector, that was after the waggon was at some distance; I imagine we were about forty yards from the waggon.

Were you in pursuit of them?—In sight of them, there were a number of men, smugglers, between me and the waggon.

Was

Was the prisoner there?——He was among the number.

Were the smugglers all quiet?——They were all swearing and making a noise.

What a very great noise?——A very great noise.

What did they do to the people that were following?—I saw one knock down one of the soldiers.

How far was you from the waggon then?—About ten yards.

Court. Was the prisoner there then?—The prisoner was there then.

What did they knock him down with?—A great club hedge-stake.

Had they any sticks or whips in their hands?—Yes.

Who had the prisoner in his hand?—It was either a stick or a whip, I cannot tell which.

Had he anything in his hand?——He had something; they brandished their sticks to keep me back, I imagine.

Was the prisoner among them?—Yes.

How many might there be of those people that came in that manner?—There were ten and upwards.

How many might there be in all?——There were seventy or eighty, or more of them in all; we followed them forty or fifty yards, and they drove down the road to the right.

Where was the prisoner?——He was among them.

What did he do?——I never saw him do anything; I never saw him after Boyd was struck, but he was there at that time.

Mr. Fielding. We have heard this man did nothing at all, he happened to be there?—No, he had something in his hand, the party who stood there all drank together.

If you cannot tell whether it was a stick or whip, of course you cannot tell what sort of stick it was?—It appeared to be largish, but I was in so much fright that I cannot recollect what sort of a one it was.

Mr. Garrow. His fear magnified it?—I did not see him strike any person.

Did he brandish a stick?——He did nothing more.

Did he do that?—Yes.

What time did you see him do that?—Just as I got off the waggon, then I saw him brandish something like a stick or whip, I was then about ten yards behind him.

NICHOLAS SIMMONS sworn.

(Examined by Mr. Silvester.)

I was in company with the other officer, at a seizure of these teas and geneva.

What was the first thing you saw?——I was the last that came from the house with the officer; before I came to the waggon the smugglers had possession of the waggon, and before I saw the prisoner; I cannot take upon me to say that he had anything in his hand; I saw him do nothing, but he was sitting on horseback, some persons ordered the soldiers to fire, and immediately I saw him turn his horse, and go the road the waggon went; I saw no more of him.

Mr. Garrow. All that you saw him do was what I or anybody else would have done, that were drawn by curiosity, namely, to ride away when we heard an order for firing?—Yes.

Mr. Solicitor General. My Lord, I presume it will hardly be necessary for either of us to trouble your Lordship, on the law upon the present state of the evidence.

Court. You will judge of that for your client.

Mr. Fielding. Under the present state of the evidence, I feel myself perfectly confident that the Jury will acquit the prisoner at the bar, and I am convinced of your humanity, Mr. Attorney-General, that you will not agravate the law, as it now stands; the act of parliament says, if they assemble with fire arms, or other offensive weapons; surely it does require consideration upon this subject, whether you will will call a common riding ſtick or whip, an offenſive weapon? firſt of all they mention fire-arms, I ſhould conceive the moſt reaſonable conſtruction is this, if they are fire-arms, or other offenſive weapons, ſuch as cutlaſſes, &c. but they never meant to extend it to ſticks or whips.

Court. It is impoſſible for the law to draw a preciſe line which will hold in all caſes, as to what ſhall or ſhall not be called an offenſive weapon; it muſt greatly depend on the circumſtances of the caſe, for it would be going a great deal too far to ſay that nothing but guns, piſtols and daggers, and inſtruments of war ſhould be conſidered offenſive weapons; bludgeons properly ſo called, clubs, and many others that might be deſcribed, all theſe are clearly upon the face of them offenſive weapons: In ſhort, anything that is not in common uſe for any other purpoſe but a weapon, is clearly an offenſive weapon; but there may be pokers, ſhovels, tongs, very large knotty ſticks, which under particular circumſtances may be offenſive weapons; for inſtance, if twenty people, every one armed with a large kitchen poker, were to come and commit an offence of this kind: loaded whips, larger than thoſe that people ordinarily ride with, very large walking ſticks—but it becomes a queſtion of facts for the Jury; for that which may be offenſive at one time, and under one circumſtance, may not be ſo at another; and the Jury muſt judge; a common walking ſtick may be an offenſive weapon in ſome caſes, therefore, it is a queſtion for the Jury, whether the man had it to walk with, or to attack others. I hold it to be indiſpenſably neceſſary that the individual who is tried ſhould be himſelf armed with ſome offenſive weapons, for I do not think it will ſatisfy the words of the act of parliament that he comes in concert; there muſt be at leaſt three armed, and one of them the priſoner; and three of theſe witneſſes have not been able to ſay whether he had anything in his hand; and as to the fourth witneſs, we cannot lay much ſtreſs upon his word large, becauſe he cannot tell whether it was a ſtick or a whip.

Mr. Garrow. I am going to ſtate a deciſion of this Court, and I ſhould not have done it in ſuch a caſe as this, if I had not done ſo before, but, in the laſt caſe of this kind, I had nothing more to do than to hand up to the Court the opinion delivered by themſelves in the preceding caſe.* Mr. Juſtice Gould tried two caſes; in the laſt caſe the evidence was, that perſons were aſſembled, armed with very large ſticks, with forks or prongs to them: a witneſs ſaid the priſoner had a large ſtick, but that their countrymen in the county of Devon did walk with ſuch ſticks; the Judges held that it would be a moſt groſs conſtruction of the act of parliament, to ſay that that which the evidences for the crown endeavoured ſeveral times in their evidence to call a bludgeon, that it would be a very groſs conſtruction of the act of parliament, to ſay that that ſtick which is equivocal in its uſe, and is a ſtick for defence, ſhould be converted inſtantly into a weapon deſcribed by this act of parliament, and they laid conſiderable ſtreſs on the words of the act of parliament, which ſay, fire-arms, or other offenſive weapons; the Court held, that the act of parliament muſt have meant ſome weapons as offenſive, and they held that there muſt be a premeditated aſſembling and arming; perfectly clear it is that the perſon who is tried muſt be ſo armed, and, muſt be ſo armed with that intent; otherwiſe he cannot come there on the common purpoſe: in the other caſes the Court unanimouſly held twice, that ſticks deſcribed to be large ones, and with forks of wood to them; the Judges would not hold them to be offenſive weapons, and they would not let them go to the Jury.

Court. I have ſome doubt whether the law abſolutely put a negative upon anything being an offenſive weapon, which may be

* This was the Volume of Seſſions-Papers in Alderman Peckham's Mayoralty.

uſed

uſed to injure man, even if it be in common uſe, as I have cited in the caſe of an iron poker, if I were to draw any line at all, which I do not mean to do, I ſhould ſay, that to be an offenſive weapon, it muſt be a weapon which may injure the life or limb of man.

Mr. Attorney-General. My Lord, I hope I never ſhall feel a deſire that this man may ſuffer, or that that man may ſuffer; I want to have it aſcertained what this offence is; the different conſtructions are at preſent ſo vague and indeterminate; I ſubmit, my Lord, the queſtion to be left to the Jury is, whether this perſon was together with three others, he being one, armed at that time with a weapon, either with a ſtick or whip, of ſome ſort, brought by him for effectuating that purpoſe for which they were ſo aſſembled; the queſtion is whether, from the evidence of the manner in which he uſed it, the Jury are ſatisfied that this was an inſtrument in his hands uſed for that purpoſe.

Court. I have no ſort of objection upon it, for I think it would be of extremely dangerous conſequence, it would be inſnaring people as well as leſſening the effect of the law, that people ſhould go away with an idea that nothing but a gun or a ſword is an offenſive weapon; it will be the province of the Jury ultimately to decide whether the priſoner is guilty, when I have ſummed up the evidence with ſome obſervations on the nature of the charge. Gentlemen of the Jury, it has been truly ſtated to you, that the offences deſcribed in this act of parliament are of a very dangerous public tendency, and wherever they have been committed, and can be clearly proved, it is a duty to ſee that the law is properly carried into execution. but no conſiderations, of public policy or of the dangerous tendency of particular offences ought at all to operate in leſſening the degree of certainty, in order to bring home the offence to the perſon charged with it; for the heavier the offence and the more certain the puniſhment, the ſtronger ought to be the evidence to affect the party with its conſequences. (Here the learned Judge ſummed up the evidence, and added:) it is clear under this act of Parliament the mere act of reſcuing is not the offence, but it is the aſſembling for doing an illegal act; therefore the firſt queſtion is, whether the perſons who reſcued theſe goods met the waggon accidentally, or whether you are ſatisfied that they were perſons who had aſſembled together, and had armed themſelves in ſomeway or other for the expreſs purpoſe: it is certain in point of fact, that the priſoner was amongſt them.

The Jury deliberated a minute or two, and gave a verdict,

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before MR. RECORDER.

---

601. SARAH KIRKHAM was indicted, for that on the 23d day of February laſt, Michael Johnſon otherwiſe M'Mahon was in due form of law convicted of forgery, and received ſentence of death: and that ſhe the ſaid Sarah Kirkham, on the 13th day of April laſt, unlawfully did take and convey into the gaol of Newgate, a certain ſaw, without the privity of Mr. Akerman, the keeper of the ſaid gaol, with intent to deliver it to the ſaid Michael Johnſon, that he might by means of the ſaid ſaw make his eſcape and go at large from and out of the ſaid gaol, the ſaid ſaw being an inſtrument proper to facilitate the eſcape of priſoners.

A ſecond count, For conveying a certain other ſaw with intent to deliver it to a certain perſon unknown, that the ſaid Michel Johnſon might eſcape.

The priſoner pleaded GUILTY.

Court to Priſoner. In conſideration of ſome compaſſionable circumſtances mentioned

May, and putting him in fear, and taking from him one shilling, his monies, &c.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron PERRYN.

---

602. PERRY LEVY was indicted for feloniously assaulting John Boudmead, on the King's highway, on the 10th day of

OPINION of the TWELVE JUDGES,

On the reserved Cases of Jonathan Hickman and James Dyers; and on the reserved Case of Richard Ilsley, DELIVERED BY MR. JUSTICE WILLES.

JONATHAN HICKMAN and James Dyers, you were indicted and found guilty of stealing lead from Hendon Church, the lead was laid in the first place to be the property of the vicar, Mr. Carrington Garrick; in the next place it was laid to be the property of the churchwardens, and thirdly of the inhabitants and parishoners: the lead being affixed to the freehold, it was conceived that the property was not in any of the persons mentioned in the indictment, and it was left for the opinion of the Judges: by the act of parliament the words are general, that if "any person shall steal rip, cut, or break, "any lead from any dwelling house or any "other building whatever affixed thereto, "that they shall be deemed guilty of fe-"lony." Upon consideration the Judges were of opinion, that the church came under the description of "any other building "whatever;" therefore, the only doubt in your case was, whether the lead belonged to the vicar, or the church-wardens, or the inhabitants and parishoners; but the Judges were of opinion, that wherever the property was, under the act of parliament, the stealing from any building was a felony, and that it being said to be stolen off the church of Hendon, was a sufficient description, of sufficient certainty; and that the property was immaterial; and that the conviction was proper on the first count.

As to Richard Ilsley, his case is exactly the same in point of law as the former, and therefore his conviction is legal.

JONATHAN HICKMAN and JAMES DYERS

To be publickly whipped and imprisoned two months in the House of Correction.

RICHARD ILSLEY,

To be whipped and imprisoned eighteen months in the House of Correction.

MIS.

MISDEMEANORS.

604. JOHN THOMAS WILLIAMS was indicted for that he, on the 26th day of February laſt, unlawfully, knowingly, and deſignedly, did produce to one William Cheek, a certain wooden caſe directed to William Waller, and falſly pretend to him that the ſaid caſe did then contain four glaſſes, and came from Leghorn, and that he brought it from Captain Jones, of Deptford, and that it was for the Honourable Captain Waller; by which ſaid falſe colours and pretences, he did then obtain from the ſaid William Cheek twenty-four ſhillings his monies.

WILLIAM CHEEK ſworn.

I am book keeper, at the King's Arms Inn, in Leadenhall-ſtreet; the priſoner came to me the 26th of February laſt, and brought this note (The note read) "On "board the ſhip the Mary, Captain Jones, "directed to the honourable Captain Wal-"ler, from Leghorn, a large caſe contain-"ing four glaſſes, freight 22s. waterage "from Deptford 2s. received the contents "being for freight, for the uſe of the own-"ers of the ſhip Mary. Signed William "Jones." He came firſt with the note and aſked whether I would pay for it provided he brought it, he ſaid the Captain would not ſend it unleſs I paid for it, and he went and brought the caſe, and put it into the warehouſe; it was directed for the the Honourable Captain Waller, at John Lewes's, Eſq; Colcheſter; when he firſt brought the caſe to me, I looked at the direction, and I very readily paid him twenty-four ſhillings, he ſaid it contained glaſſes, he did not ſay what glaſſes, I did not refer to the note, he aſked directly for a receipt for the caſe, which I gave him.

What did the priſoner ſay about the contents of that note?——Nothing further reſpecting the the note, than the requeſting the money.

When he gave you the note, what did he ſay it was?——He ſaid it was a note for a caſe of glaſs.

Did he ſay whether that note contained an account of what the caſe contained?—He told me it did, when he brought the caſe again, he ſaid that was the caſe.

Did he ſay where he brought it from?—He did not, I looked at the direction, and paid him the money directly, I believe he was not in the houſe a minute, he went away; on the Monday following, the 28th I was ſent for to the Saracen's Head, he was there, and afterwards he was taken to the King's Arms, and a caſe was opened, and there was rubbiſh and dirt in it, he ſaid he knew nothing about it, I aſked him why the glaſs was not in, he ſaid, he could not tell, he went to the Saracen's Head with the conſtable, and two other boxes were opened there, and they contained nothing but rubbiſh and dirt, and he was taken to the Compter.

Did he ſay who had ſent him?——He could not tell.

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Council. Did you make any enquiry after this Captain?—I had no occaſion.

Was you preſent when this man was examined before the Lord Mayor?—Yes.

Was there any doubt as to the identity of his perſon there?——Not to my knowledge; I heard ſome perſon ſay in the yard, you have made a miſtake, you have not put in the glaſs, he ſaid I have not.

MATHEW ELSWORTH ſworn.

On the 26th of February, I was in the warehouſe, the priſoner brought this caſe to me in the warehouſe, ſays he, take care of it porter, for it is glaſs; I immediately called called down the book keeper, and he was paid twenty-four ſhillings; the priſoner is the ſame man, I am ſure of that; I went to him in the Saracen's Head yard, ſays I, Sir, did not you bring a caſe to our yard, which contained glaſs, yes, ſays he; ſays I, will you go with me, ſays he, I will; I brought him to the King's Arms yard, the caſe was brought out, and he ſaw the contents of it, he ſaid, he was employed by a man, but he did not know him.

Mr. Peatt. Was you before the Lord Mayor when this man was examined?——Yes, I was.

Was there any difficulty about his identity?——I did not hear any, I was not called up.

Did Cheek the book-keeper make any doubt?——Not that I heard.

WILLIAM GOVIN ſworn.

On the 28th of February, I was ſent for to take charge of this man, as ſoon as I came up, I ſaw them open this caſe, and there was nothing but rubbiſh and ſtones in it; and I found this ſeal, and ſome ſealing wax in his pocket.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

My Lord, and Gentlemen, I have ſerved his Majeſty many years, I have always obtained a good character from thoſe I had the honour of ſerving; I was employed as a porter, and got up about half paſt five to provide for my family, I got no work, and I came home and breakfaſted with my family; I went down to the waterſide, and I was accoſted by a perſon, who by his appearance ſeemed to be a gentleman; he aſked me if I wanted employ, I told him I did, he told me to follow him, I went with him to the City of Briſtol, at Irongate; he aſked me if I could read, I told him yes, he gave me this bill of parcels and deſired me to go the Saracen's Head, and enquire for the waggon, I went there but they told me to go to the King's Arms, and there I ſaw the proſecutor, I delivered the bill of parcels to him, I told him it was my orders to aſk whether it went out there; I ſaid, Sir, I was deſired to aſk you to pay the freight, I went back and told the perſon that employed me, and he told me to follow him; I went with him to Tower-wharf again, and in the Train-houſe there was another man, he aſked me to carry that caſe on my head without turning it, I found I could carry it, he ſent another man along with me, I returned the money to the man that employed me; he paid me two ſhillings for my trouble, and he gave the other man that went with me one.

Court. Have you any witneſſes from the public-houſe to prove that?——I have two witneſſes.

The priſoner called three witneſſes who all gave him a good character.

GUILTY.

Fined 1s. and impriſoned twelve months in Newgate.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

605. JOHN SMITH was indicted for that he, on the 4th of November laſt three pieces of printed callico, value 5l. the property of Meeſon Schooley, lately before feloniouſly ſtolen, unlawfully did receive and have, knowing them to have been ſtolen.

The Caſe opened by Mr. Garrow.

THOMAS FLINT ſworn.

I live in Gracechurch-ſtreet, I am a haberdaſher; on the 4th of November a young man that lived with me at that time, brought me ſome goods, and I looked at them; his name is Pearce; I went to the public-houſe where Pearce directed me, but before I went to the public-houſe the goods had been at my houſe a day or two, during which time ſomebody had ſent two or three times for the money; I gave for anſwer that I ſuſpected they were not come honeſtly by; when I came to the public-houſe, I ſaw the priſoner there; I told the priſoner that that I would be glad to know before I paid him for the goods, how he came by them; the young man ſhewed me the priſoner; the young man told me the price; I mentioned to the priſoner the price that had been aſked of me for the calicoes, which was a guinea a-piece; I recollect that I told him there was a gentlewoman, a country ſhop-keeper, that is now waiting at our houſe, and ſhe ſaid ſhe ſhould like to have chintzes at the price; he ſaid he bought the goods of a ſailor, going to France; he did not know him; they were prohibited going in there: I told him to go before an Alderman.

Court. They were called chintzes?——Yes, chintz patches, they were Engliſh manufactory; the priſoner ſaid he came very honeſtly by them, he was willing to go before the Alderman; the Alderman ordered me to appear there that day ſe'nnight, and the priſoner with me; I attended on the Thurſday, the priſoner did not attend; the chintzes were claimed by Mr. Schooley, as his property: the priſoner lives in Crucifix-lane, Bermondſey-ſtreet; I went there with a ſearch-warrant, to a houſe which I was informed was his.

Mr. Silveſter, Priſoner's Council. Theſe were chintz patterns, were not they?——Yes.

Pearce is not here?—No.

When you came to Smith to the public-houſe where were the chintzes then?—At my houſe, I did not carry them there.

MEESON SCHOOLEY ſworn.

I am a linen-draper in Coventry-ſtreet; I had three pieces of what we call chintz; they are foreign calicoes, printed here in imitation of the chintz patterns; they were my property, I am certain of it; they are my own patterns, nobody elſe prints them but myſelf, they are only ſold in my own houſe, they are not delivered to the trade; I had goods of that ſort in November; I did not find I had loſt them till I was informed; they coſt me ſix pounds.

Mr. Silveſter. Have they been in your poſſeſſion ever ſince?—No.

Where have they been?——Mr. Flint left them at Mr. Harriſon's, I know they are the ſame, there is no mark, but nobody elſe can have them but myſelf.

You did not know you had loſt any of thoſe?——No, Sir, nor when I ſearched, I did not then find them miſſing.

Theſe things are ſold in your ſhop to any lady that chuſes to purchaſe them?—Yes.

How many pieces have you ſold of this pattern?—An hundred.

How long have theſe been out of your poſſeſſion?—I cannot tell.

Court. Have you at any time been able to aſcertain whether there were any or what number of pieces miſſing?—No, Sir.

JOHN SEALY ſworn.

Court. We cannot convict on his ſingle teſtimony; now as to the fact of their being ſtolen, there is not a ſingle tittle of evidence.

Mr. Garrow. It is not my duty to preſs the caſe.

Mr. Fielding. The queſtion is as to the propriety of examining him at all.

Court. You muſt lay a ground for examining him.

Mr. Garrow. Do you know of any callicoes having been delivered to Smith the defendant?—I know nothing of them.

Have you ever had any converſation with Smith the defendant about three pieces of callico?——No, none at all.

Mr. Garrow. I beg leave to ſay, for the ſake of Mr. Schooley, that this man has made an ample confeſſion.

Court. There is no doubt but it is a very proper proſecution.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

606. SAMUEL REYNOLDS was indicted for that he, on the 30th of July twenty-twenty-two ells and an half of ſilk, value 3l. 6s. the property of William Griffin, George Hubert, and John Griffin, by a certain perſon unknown feloniouſly ſtolen, unlawfully did receive and have, knowing the ſame to be ſtolen, againſt his Majeſty's peace.

The witneſſes examined apart at the deſire of the priſoners.

The indictment opened by Mr. Fielding.

DANIEL FORME ſworn.

I live in Great Eagle-ſtreet, Spitalfields, I had ſome ſilk intruſted to me by Meſſrs. Griffin, Hubert, and Griffin; I know not what became of it; my houſe was broke open between the 13th and 14th of June laſt, by breaking through the partition of an empty houſe; and there were ſome hand-bills printed of the robery.

Should you know the ſilk again?——I will not ſay.

How much was you intruſted with?—Made and unmade 130 ells, what was not wrought was taken away in the round, as it was in the manner of weaving, there were about forty-ſix ells which were made.

What ſort of ſilk was it?——Black mode.

In what condition was this ſilk when you firſt had it?—Fit to be wove.

Jury. Was not this ſilk a warp ready for weaving?——Yes.

Mr. Silveſter, Priſoner's Councel. Then this is what would be diſtinguiſhed in your line of buſineſs as ſilk warp?—Yes, Sir.

THOMAS EMERY ſworn.

I was there with Mr. Forme, I remember this ſilk, there was about 139 ells, it was then in my loom, in a proper form as it ought to be: I left it on the 12th of June, on the 14th I went to go go to work in the morning at ſix, and my work was all taken away, made and unmade.

Was there any mark about this ſilk that you can ſpeak with certainty to it again?—I ſaw it again at the dreſſer's, at Mr. Williams's, it was carried there to be dreſſed, the very day after thankſgiving day, that was the 30th of July; I can ſay it was the very work that I manufactured myſelf, it was together.

Mr. Garrow. How is it that you know it again, my friend?——By a mark that I put.

JOSEPH GUY ſworn.

I am ſhopman to Mr. Wilkins, I produce the ſilk; Mr. Reynolds brought this to our houſe to dreſs; it has been in my cuſtody, I did not receive it from him at the door.

ABRAHAM NETTLEFORE ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. Williams; I know the priſoner; on Monday the 30th of July, he came to my maſter's houſe, he ſaid he brought ſome pieces to dreſs, he bid me aſk when he could have them, and he laid them acroſs my arm; he brought them in a bag like a ſatchel, it was brown, the piece was a warp of three quarters mode, he folded it up, my maſter's brother told him he might have them on Monday; I took them up ſtairs, and laid them on the pleating board.

What became of that ſilk then?—George Kelly received it from me.

Mr. Silveſter. Does Reynolds frequently come to your maſter with ſilk?——Yes.

He was perfectly well known to your maſter?—Yes.

What is he?——A weaver, I believe.

You took no notice of the pieces that he brought?——Only that there were ſix pieces.

But you ſhould not know them again?——No Sir, I ſhould not.

How ſoon did Kelly come in?—He was in the room when I took them in.

Court to Jury. Gentlemen, there is no evidence to convict the defendant of being the receiver of theſe goods; the proſecutors will do in any future proſecution as they ſhall be adviſed.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

607. CHARLES

607. CHARLES SMITH, SOLOMON DIAS, EDWARD GRISWELL, and RICHARD DIAS were indicted for that they, together with one JAMES KEY, unlawfully did conspire to charge Richard Burridge with 1l. 15s. for rent for a shop, and distraining his goods, to wit, five hundred bound books, and other goods.

The Indictment opened by Mr. James, and the Case by Mr. Silvester.

RICHARD BURRIDGE sworn.

I am a bookseller, and dealer in bread, I rent a shop, which I took by a written agreement, between one of the defendants and me; I took it in August, 1782; I only rented the shop, I continued to occupy it as a shop, and he rented the house; on the 5th of January I went out after sunset, I had had a person came and enquired if Mr. Keys was at home, and I said I did not know such a person, neither had I ever heard of this Keys's name before; when I came home there was the defendant Griswell in possession; he said to me when I came in, is your name Burridge; I said, something like it; he said, he was in possession for rent due to James Keys, my landlord, and he said that Soloman Dias was the person that had sent him, and he pulled a writing out of his pocket, and read the name Solomon Dias, to distress upon me for a quarter's rent, due at Christmas last; he would not let me have it; I told him, that person was not my landlord; I went out that evening to speak to a friend or two, I returned again the same evening, I desired my friend to take notice that there was no inventory fixed up, and I asked two or three questions, one I asked was, what time Griswell came into possession; he said, about five that day; he said, this Mr. Solomon Dias was a Sheriff's officer, who lives in Dove-court, in the Old Jewry; in the course of that evening he began to sell my bread; I saw him selling my bread.

Mr. Garrow, Prisoner's Council. That is not to the charge.—He told me he was to see that nothing was moved off the premises. This agreement is a true copy of Mr. Smith's, there is his own hand writing for it.

Mr. Silvester. How many people came there?—I saw Mr. Griswell upon the premises; I spoke to him that night, but the next morning I saw Griswell there again, I did not see Mr. Smith upon my premises; but on Monday the 3d of January, Mr. Smith, and the Jew Keys, and another Jew also apparently, met me at the door in the street, and this Keys demanded my rent; I did not then know his name, I told him I did not owe him any; I says to Smith, I will pay you immediately; says Smith, I have let the house to this gentleman Keys; he was very mean in appearance, I assure you; they went over the way to the Golden Lion, and I went after them, and I tendered my rent to Mr. Smith, and not thinking myself safe, I returned a second time, and tendered my rent to Mr. Smith before a witness, which is here; the same day Mr. Smith came down stairs and shut the street door, I opened it, he returned and attempted to shut the door again, and said the house was his, and the door was his, and should be shut; and I told him the door was mine, and it should be kept open; he pushed me several times, and then he swore that the Jew should sweat me in a day or two.

What rent did they pretend was due from you to Keys?—One pound fifteen shillings.

Mr. Garrow Was you tried and convicted here?—I was tried in that other place.

What fine did the Court impose upon you?—A shilling.

Court. Gentlemen, there is no pretence for any indictment for conspiracy, he might have tried it by replevin or illegal distress.

ALL FOUR NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

The Seſſions being ended, the Court proceeded to paſs Sentence of Death, on the following Eleven Capital Convicts, viz.

Joſeph Sturmey, John Ivemay, John Honey, Samuel Yeldham, Peter Shaw, George Partridge, Mary Greenwood, Joſeph Brown, Thomas Baker Hopkins, otherwiſe Thomas Baker, Berwick Mayton, and Robert Jackſon; and thus particularly addreſſed Peter Shaw, "The crime of which "you have been convicted, is attended with "another, upon which though not directly charged in the indictment, the Court "cannot ſhut their eyes; from the evidence that has been in your caſe, there "is to much reaſon to fear, that the crime "you have been juſtly convicted of by the "law, was accompanied by another of infinitely greater malignity, and that in "order to poſſeſs yourſelf of that part of "your maſter's property, which you had "ſtolen, you did an act or contributed towards it, which tended to deprive him "of the greater part of his property, without benefit to you, and what is of much "more importance, to endanger the lives of "himſelf and his family; that offence of "the moſt atrocious nature, when committed by any perſon towards another, "is greatly aggravated by the ſituation in "which you ſtood, that of a ſervant, who "had obtained the good opinion and confidence of the family, and whoſe duty it "was to protect the lives and property of "that family from others, rather than to "deſtroy it yourſelf: under circumſtances "ſuch as theſe, the juſtice of your ſovereign forbids us to expect, that mercy "can be extended to you, and therefore it "doubly becomes you in particular to employ the little time you have left, in endeavouring to obtain that mercy hereafter, which juſtice and even humanity "muſt refuſe you here."

To be tranſported for fourteen years. 3.

Abraham Godin alias Gordon, Thomas Goldfinch, Samuel Roberts.

The following priſoners received ſentence of tranſportation to Africa for ſeven years. 2.

Eleanor M'Cabe, James Williams.

To be tranſported for ſeven years to ſuch place as his Majeſty ſhall appoint, 18.

William M'Ginnis, Francis Medcalf, Edward Johnſon, Humphry Ingram, Cha. Smith, Michael Manevil, Peter Mumford, Ann George, Ambroſe Ward, Nicholas Riley, Robert Irvin, George May, John Dorrington, William Lawler, James Fitzpatrick, Thomas Philips, John Ellis, Joſeph Fennell.

To be confined to hard labour two years in the Houſe of Correction, 2.

Ann Callaghan, Mary Morris.

To be confined to hard labour twelve months in the Houſe of Correction, 8.

Elizabeth Scott, Ann Davis, John Jennings, Lucy Brand otherwiſe Wood, Robert Tapley, Mary Allen, John Fennel, John Thomas Williams (in Newgate.)

To be confined to hard labour ſix months in the Houſe of Correction, 6.

Sarah Shelly, John Turner, Philip Martin, Elizabeth Smith, Elizabeth Northam, Sarah Wilſon.

To be branded, 4.

William Polters, William Tatham, Worſley Walmſlay, John Fennel.

To be Whipped, 8

Samuel Croſs, John Jennings, John Turner, William Burne, George Hooker, William Murphy, William Pike, William Dawſon.

Fined 1s, 1.

Mary Pearſon.

The following priſoners who had been ordered to be tranſported to parts beyond the ſeas, were brought to the bar and informed, their place of deſtination was Africa.

Luke Rogers, Andrew Simms, Alexander M'Donald, Robert Freeman, Dennis Hayes, Edward Humphreys, and George Franciſco.

And the following priſoners were alſo put to the bar, and informed that the place of their deſtination was changed from America to Africa.

James Gardner, William Cole, James Jackſon, Robert Nunn, John Richardſon, John Romain, Edward Jones, and Samuel Richardſon.

John Foſter, whoſe ſentence was reſpited laſt Seſſion, was fined 1s. and ordered to be impriſoned twelve months in Newgate from the time of his conviction.

 The next Seſſions will begin on Wedneſday the 29th of June at the Old Bailey.

HODGSON,

PROFESSOR of SHORT-HAND, and

SHORT-HAND WRITER to the OLD-BAILEY,

At No. 35, CHANCERY-LANE,

Reſpectfully thanks the Gentlemen of the learned Profeſſions, and others, for their flattering Partiality to his Compendious SYSTEM of SHORT-HAND, which is Taught, as uſual, in FOUR LESSONS ONLY, at 10s. 6d. each.

Trials, Arguments, &c. taken with Preciſion and Care, and expeditiouſly tranſcribed, on reaſonable Terms.

A new Impreſſion of his Second Edition of Short-hand, Price 2s. 6d. to be had as above; alſo of BLADON, Paternoſter-row, and CLARKE, Portugal-ſtreet.

In the Preſs, and ſpeedily will be publiſhed, Price only 2s. 6d. A Collection of CHARACTERS, Arbitrary and Symbolical, for the Benefit of SHORT-HAND WRITERS and adapted to every Syſtem; with a comparative Table of Short-hand-Alphabets, by E. HODGSON.

N. B. The Table may then be had ſeparate, Price 6d.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 29th of JUNE, 1785, and the following Days;
Being the SIXTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER VI. PART I.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)
And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and
S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.
M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

BEFORE the Right Honourable RICHARD CLARK, LORD MAYOR of the City of London; the Honourable FRANCIS BULLER one of the Juſtices of his Majeſty's Court of King's Bench; the Honourable JOHN HEATH, one of the Juſtices of his Majeſty's Court of Common Pleas; the Honourable JAMES ADAIR, Serjeant at Law, Recorder of the ſaid City; JOHN WILLIAM ROSE, Eſq; and others his Majeſty's Juſtices of Oyer and Terminer of the City of London, and Juſtices of Gaol Delivery of Newgate, holden for the ſaid City and County of Middleſex.

London Jury.	First Middleſex Jury.	Second Middleſex Jury.
John Bailey	* Samuel Elliott	John Devall
John Johnſon	Joſeph Babb	James Jackſon.
Samuel Ferne	Thomas Price	William Yelverton
Ebenezer Clarke	Francis Thompſon	Iſaac Smith
John Swift	William Berry	Murdo Mackenzie
Robert Scratton	Thomas Brown	John Mandell
John Jones	William Jacobs	William Howes
Joſeph Lewis	† Edward Orgill	Jonathan Pratt
John Raymond	James Bell	Jacob Worthy
Thomas Garner	Ambroſe Watſon	William Manby
John Egerton	John Quick	William Turner
Thomas Warwick	James Bailey	John Barham.

* Thomas Brown ſerved ſometime in the room of Samuel Elliott.
† John Hooker ſerved ſometime in the room of Edward Orgill.
Joſeph Greenhill ſerved ſometime on the ſecond Middleſex Jury.

---

608. RICHARD JACOBS was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Edward Thompſon, about the hour of eight in the night, on the 10th day of March, 1784; and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, one ſilver milk pot, value 36s. two ſilver ſalts, value 30s. one ſilver pepper caſtor, value 10s. one pair of ſilver tea tongs, value 5s. five ſilver tea ſpoons

ſpoons, value 50s. ſix ſilver tea ſpoons, value 15s. one watch with the inſide caſe made of gold, and the outſide caſe made of green ſhagreen, value 50l. one pair of ſtone ſhoe buckles ſet in ſilver, value 30s. one pair of ſteel ſhoe buckles, value 3s. one ſilver purſe, value 2s. one crown piece, value 5s. two half crowns, value 5s. and one ſilver three-pence, value 3d. his property.

EDWARD THOMPSON ſworn.

I live at Iſlington, in a houſe of my own, which was broke open on the 10th of March, 1784, I was not at home when the robbery was committed; I have got ſome of the things again, which are here, the two initial letters of my name, and a creſt are upon them, they are all marked, and from thoſe marks I am ſure they are my property; I was within a little of home when the thieves went away, about a hundred yards from the door, I had been ſmoaking a pipe at a houſe in the Upper Street, I heard of the robbery at paſt ſeven o'clock.

In what part of your houſe were theſe things kept?——In different parts of the houſe, ſome were in the beaufet in the back parlour, we generally carry them up of a night, we make uſe of part of them every day.

Can you ſay you ſaw any of them that day?—They are brought down every day; my wife and my maid were in the houſe at the time the robbery was committed, no part of the houſe was broke.

ELIZABETH THOMPSON ſworn.

I am wife of the laſt witneſs, I was at home in the fore parlour, there was a gentle knock at the door, and before the door was opened they ſaid there was a letter, the door was opened, and in ruſhed four or five, I do not know how many men into the paſſage, four came into the room firſt, two ſtaid in the parlour with me, and two went up ſtairs; and they ſtole the things mentioned; then I ſaw them take this ſalt cellar, they went into the back parlour, to the cupboard, and took this milk pot, the ſpoons, and tongs.

Jury. Did you ſee the priſoner at the bar?—I think I do remember his face, but he was in the room but a very little time, he was one of them that went up ſtairs, I am as ſure as I can be to the beſt of my knowledge, I cannot ſay any further; I had an opportunity of obſerving the faces of thoſe that were in the room with me, but the priſoner went up ſtairs, I could not know them that went up ſtairs.

Court. Then you cannot ſpeak to the perſon of the priſoner?——No, I cannot, I ſaw them take theſe ſpoons, and the milk pot, I am ſure all this plate was in the houſe at the time they entered it, and there was a watch hanging by the chimney ſide, that was gone.

What is the value of that plate?——I do not know the value, let anybody value it.

What is the value of the watch?—Ten guineas, I believe.

ANN MARTIN ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. Thompſon, I was there on the 10th of March, 1784; a quarter paſt ſeven in the evening, there was a ſmall knock at the door, I was in the fore parlour with my miſtreſs, my miſtreſs ſaid, ſomebody knocks at the door, I went to the door, and before I opened it, I called who is there, and a man ſaid he had a letter of importance, which letter I have now in my pocket. (Produced, being a ſheet of blank paper addreſſed to Miſs Young, Iſlington.) With that I opened the door, and a man preſented the letter, I had a candle in my hand when I ſaw the direction I told him it was not for us or anybody in the houſe, and he did not give me the letter into my hand, but they all ruſhed in; and to the beſt of my knowledge, I always thought there were ſix, but it appeared by evidence upon the laſt trial there were but five; when they entered the paſſage, I ſhrieked out Lord Jeſus! we ſhall all be killed, and one of the men ſeized me by the throat, I cannot ſay who he was, whilſt

I was

I was leaning my back against the passage, I begged of them to let me go into the parlour; one of them had hold of one arm, and the other of the other, and they led me into the fore parlour, and my mistress shrieked out, and one of them had gags, and swore he would gag us; another man, a tall one, who has turned evidence, had a cutlass, and said he would cut her down; I saw more than four in the room, two of them left the room, and those that were left in the room, one had a pistol, and the other a cutlass; we heard the others up stairs in the rooms, pulling the drawers about; some time after that, a short man came down in fustian breeches and jacket, he was pock-fretted; he could not open the desk immediately, and he took the tongs and wrenched it, but what he took out I did not then know; this was in the back parlour.

Did you see the prisoner there?—I saw that man to the best of my knowledge among them in the parlour, for he struck me when I came here to-day, I have not seen him since; it strikes me he is the man that had the gags in his hands.

Do you imagine he is one of the men that stood in the parlour all the time?—No, he was not, I am perfectly sure of that, I should have known them three seven years after, I have not such a perfect knowledge of him, I have no great doubt of it.

Have you any?——I cannot directly say to the face of the man, but he is remarkably like the man in his make about the shoulders, I think he is the man that had the gags; I have not so striking a likeness of him as I have of the other three: the plate was always kept in a little round basket, what we used at dinner, and the child had got some of the plate out, and was playing with the basket; there was one salt-seller, and two spoons, and the old pepper-caster, the rest were in the back parlour of the beaufet.

JOHN SAYER sworn.

On the 10th of March, 1784, M'Donald, and I, and Grubb, and Young, were coming along Broad St. Giles's, at the end of Drury-lane, four or five men passed me. I was before M'Donald and Young, I passed them, and looked back to see if they offered to stop them, but they did not, by the lights of the tallow-chandlers shop I saw a bundle in the prisoner's right hand, I did not know him before, I immediately turned back and caught hold of him, I asked him what he had got there, he immediately swung it round to Ganby who was convicted before for this robbery; I catched hold of Ganby, but Jacobs had the plate in his possession still, he was taken and searched, as the others will tell you, Young had the plate, and he gave it the prosecutor; I saw the plate, but I did not mark it; Ganby had nothing but a pair of steel buckles, while we went to tell the prosecutor, and shew him this watch, which was likewise in the bundle which the prisoner had; the prisoner got out of the watch-house.

What time was it?—About nine o'clock.

Prisoner. I have nothing to say, my Lord, I understand these people will swear anything, they are swearing for the reward.

CHARLES YOUNG sworn.

About nine, in Drury-lane, the prisoner and three others were walking and talking, Sayer laid hold of Ganby, and took the plate out of the prisoner's hand, we put him in the watch-house that night, and took him before a magistrate, and while we went to Islington to acquaint Mr. Thompson, he broke out; this is the same plate, I marked it with a Y, and the mark is here now.

What is the value of that plate that lay there?—Twenty pounds.

DENNIS M'DONALD sworn.

I was with the rest of them, on the 10th of March, 1784, about nine in the evening we met the prisoner, and three men with a bundle; I took hold of the prisoner's coat, and he struck me; I went to search the prisoner's lodgings, and here is a check of his wearing apparel, and a ring; I am threaten-threatened to have an action brought againſt me for the things.

Court. You may be very eaſy about ſuch actions as theſe; I have tried one or two of them at Weſtminſter, but they generally receive the fate they deſerve.

Priſoner. I have witneſſes to my character.

The witneſſes called, but none appeared.

GUILTY Death.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

609. GEORGE OLIVE was indicted for that he, about the hour of ſeven in the afternoon of the 9th of April laſt, at the pariſh of St. James's, Weſtminſter, a certain houſe of one Joſeph Parſloe, there ſituate, feloniouſly, voluntarily, and maliciouſly did ſet fire to, and the ſame houſe then and there by ſuch firing feloniouſly and maliciouſly did burn and conſume, againſt the ſtatute and againſt the King's peace.

A ſecond count, Charging it to be a houſe belonging to William Pultney, Eſq.

A third count, For that he, a certain houſe of Joſeph Parſloe, unlawfully and maliciouſly and feloniouſly did ſet fire to, againſt the ſtatute, and againſt the peace.

The Indictment was opened by Mr. Knowles; and the Caſe by Mr. Silveſter, as follows:

May it pleaſe your Lordſhip, and you Gentlemen of the Jury, the priſoner at the bar was ſervant to Mr. Parſloe, who kept a ſubſcription-houſe in St. James's-ſtreet; and this is a caſe which muſt from the nature of it depend on circumſtances; it is neceſſary I ſhould lay all the circumſtances before you, that you may be enabled to judge whether they are ſufficient to convince you in your minds of the guilt of the priſoner at the bar. On Friday the 8th of April, the day before the fire, Mr. Parſloe had been bottling ſome wine, and he finiſhed it about nine; he ordered his porter to remove the ſtraw, and take it to a back part of the houſe, every thing was perfectly ſafe at that time; about ten, a ſervant was ordered to go down into the cellar for ſome beer, and he went without a candle, and at that time there was no light; ſome time afterwards he went down again for ſome more beer, without a candle; and then every thing was ſafe; the boy deſired the porter to lend him a candle to go and draw ſome beer for himſelf; ſays he I chooſe to have my beer cold; he took a candle, and went down into the cellar, and returned a few minutes after, and being aſked for the candle, he ſaid he had dropped it; the ſervants thought nothing then, but in a few minutes after they were alarmed with the ſmell of fire, and they found that ſome ſtraw had been ſet on fire, not in the beer cellar; and that ſome corks that were upon ſome prickles for bottles were conſumed: however, this was ſoon put out with ſome water; and the boy on going to bed was very inquiſitive among the ſervants, whether ſuppoſing his maſter's houſe had been burnt, it would have ruined him or not; ſays he, I ſuppoſe if it was burnt down, then he would be ruined, and then he muſt turn me over, he would have no buſineſs for me; that night they ſat up, but no more alarm happened; the next day in the afternoon, about ſix, or a quarter before, a Miſs Wheeler, the daughter of Mrs. Parſloe, and a Mrs. Murrel, another daughter, had been up ſtairs; for as this is a houſe in the public way, their apartments were up ſtairs; the laſt perſon that went up ſtairs was Mrs. Murrel; ſhe came down from her own room, and went into her ſiſter's room, for the purpoſe of ſhutting the windows; that was the room where the fire began; ſhe ſaid, ſhe would not ſhut the windows, and ſhe came down without a candle, and every thing was ſafe at that time; the boy at this time was very particular in his enquiries, whether all the family were at tea, and whether the ladies were at tea; they ſaid yes; and while the waiter was going to clean ſome glaſſes, he obſerved the boy with a candle; he aſked him to lend it him; ſays the boy no, I cannot lend you the candle, but I will ſtand by you and light you; while he was in the act of cleaning the glaſſes, and this boy holding the candle, the bell rang, the waiter left the boy in this cloſet with a candle, and went into his maſter's room with a decanter which was called for; there are two ſtair-caſes to this houſe, and this boy ſtood at the glaſs-cloſet, near the two pair of ſtairs; the waiter having got the decanter carried it up the great ſtair-caſe, and when he got up the one pair of ſtairs, he met this boy coming down the two pair of ſtairs great ſtair-caſe without a candle; he was coming down in a great hurry, and went into the hall; in a very few minutes afterwards a cracking was heard in the room upſtairs, Miſs Wheeler's room, which had been left perfectly ſafe a few minutes before; the ſervants ſaid, what is that cracking, the boy immediately ſaid, there is a fire in my maſter's houſe? the fire was exceeding rapid, and the houſe was intirely conſumed. Gentlemen, theſe are the facts to bring this charge home to the priſoner; the magiſtrate thought proper to commit him, and you are to judge from thoſe circumſtances, and ſome others, of the guilt or innocence of the priſoner. Offences of this kind muſt always from the nature of the caſe depend upon circumſtances, becauſe if perſons are wicked enough to ſet fire to the houſe of another, they always do it with that degree of caution, not that they ſhall be ſeen in the very act; but if theſe circumſtances, when put together, are ſtrong enough to convince you that this boy was the perpetrator of the offence, you will ſay ſo; if not, I am ſure from the knowledge I have of you, you will do your duty in acquitting him.

JOSEPH PARSLOE ſworn.

I keep a tavern in St. James's-ſtreet, the boy was apprentice to our cook.

How old is he?—Sixteen or ſeventeen.

Priſoner. I am fifteen.

Proſecutor. On the Friday I was bottling ſome wine by the cellar, and there were ſome prickles ſtood there, and I ordered the porter to take them away, they were full of ſtraw, and I told the boy to light him, that was about eight; they were carried away, and the priſoner lighted the porter up the garden with them; I then went up ſtairs to clean myſelf, and about ten I had ſome bread and cheeſe, and about half after ten one of the maid ſervants came up, and ſaid the cellar was on fire; upon that we all came down ſtairs, and there were ſome people came, and I went down to the door that led to the cellar, and we kept the door faſt for fear it ſhould get a head, and the people went into the ſtreet and threw ſome water, and put the fire out, the fire was near to the cellar door.

[The plan of the houſe and cellar ſhewn to the Court.]

Court. Was this fire within the houſe?——Yes, by the paſſage leading to the cellar door.

What was on fire there?——There was corks in a baſket, and ſeveral bottles broke, and a paper bag; it was put out, and I and one of my daughters ſat up till four in the morning.

Court. Suppoſe nobody had ſeen this, were thoſe corks near any combuſtible matter, or any part of the houſe?—It was quite cloſe to the wall.

What was the wall built of?——Brick and plaiſter; there was a ſhelf which was ſtanding over the prickles.

What was the floor?——It was a ſtone floor.

Then there was no likelihood of this communicating to the houſe?——Yes, my Lord, there was an oil caſk ſtood very near it, with thirty-ſix gallons of oil in it.

How near?—At a very little diſtance.

What do you call a very little diſtance?—About three yards.

How long had it been there?——About two days; I ſtaid up till about four in the morning, and every thing was perfect ſafe.

Mr. Silveſter. After the ſtraw and the hamper had been removed, had any body any occaſion to go into that place?—No, it was ſhut up, nobody had any buſineſs there, they could go to it two or three ways.

Was the way to it through the beer cellar?——No, Sir.

Which way were they to get to it then? Look at this plan.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. He can ſtate the fact without the plan; I know nothing of the authenticity of the plan.

Court. There is no occaſion to look at the plan.

Mr. Silveſter. Could they go to this place from the beer cellar?—Yes, on the Saturday I was drinking tea, between ſix and ſeven, and one of my daughters ſaid, I think I ſmell a ſmell of fire now, no ſays my wife, there is nothing but what happened laſt night; I opened my door and ſaw my houſe all in flames, in conſequence of which my houſe was burnt down to the ground.

Jury. Had you any words with the boy?—He ran away from me three times, he never made any complaint; I had no ſuſpicion of the boy, till I was informed by ſome of the ſervants, and I took him to the watch-houſe.

Mr. Garrow. I believe after the boy was taken up and ſent to the watch-houſe you was ſo good to ſend him ſome money?—I believe I ſent him a ſhilling.

There were many applications made to him whilſt he was in cuſtody, to confeſs that he ſet the houſe on fire?——Only myſelf, I went to him, and preſſed him a good deal; but he always ſaid he did not.

As to the ſituation of this place, it is a ſtrong arch, I take it for granted?—No, it is not an arch.

It is bricked then?——Yes.

It was at the diſtance of three or four yards from this oil?—Three yards.

Mr. Silveſter. I am deſired to aſk a fact, was this boy taken up by you before?——He had run away three times.

Had you chaſtiſed him, or puniſhed him in any way?—No, never, Sir, only told him to be a good boy.

WILLIAM WYNNE ſworn.

I was porter to the proſecutor; on the Friday before the fire my maſter had been unpacking four prickles of wine, I was told to take the ſtraw and the prickles up to the bottle-houſe, at the end of the garden, at a diſtance from the dwelling houſe, and the priſoner lighted me with a candle, and we returned back into the ſervants hall together with the candle; the priſoner went up into the kitchen, and I ſet in the ſervants hall till I was called to draw beer for my maſter's ſupper, which was about three quarters of an hour after, I had no candle with me, I drew it in the dark, and I did not obſerve any ſmoke or fire at all, I then went down into the ſervants hall again, a little while after the kitchen maid came down, and aſked me to draw her ſome table beer, I went and drew ſome, then I did not obſerve any ſmoke or fire, I had no candle then; ſhe took up the beer for her fellow ſervants ſupper, a little while after the priſoner came and aſked me to lend him my candle, to go and draw ſome table beer, I told him I had but a ſhort piece of a candle which was for the waiters to eat their ſuppers by; I lent him the candle and he took an ale-houſe pint pot to draw ſome beer, when he came back he had the candleſtick, but no candle in it; I aſked him what he had done with the candle, and he told me he had dropped it, it was a ſhort piece, hardly ſo long as my finger: the prickles were in a paſſage adjoining to the wine cellar, and to the beer cellar; about a quarter of an hour after this I was alarmed, the houſe-maid came down into the ſervants hall, and ſaid the wine cellar was on fire, I went to the door, and when I opened the door to go into the table beer cellar, I ſaw no fire there, it was in a paſſage that went into the ſmall beer cellar; there was a bag of corks at the top of a parcel of bottles that were empty and clean, to be filled with wine.

Mr.

Mr. Garrow. Had you aſſiſted your maſter in bottling wine that day?—No.

Had he a light?——He always has.

Had he more candles than one?—I cannot ſay.

You do not know where they were placed?——I do not.

What ſort of candleſtick did you lend the boy?—A tall iron one, with a ſpring to puſh it up.

Was the candle found?——We never looked for it, we could not go into the table beer cellar.

You was very much with this boy?—Yes, he was always a decent, ſolid, well behaved boy, I never ſaw no other but a very good character.

You never did find it at any other time?—No.

WILLIAM TAYLOR ſworn.

I went to bed between one and two, I got up at four, the priſoner ſlept with me; when I was getting into bed, he aſked me, in caſe this houſe was burnt down, whether he ſhould have had his diſcharge, or be turned over to any other maſter; I made anſwer, I did not know Mr. Parſloe's circumſtances, but I believed he would have been turned over to ſome other maſter.

Mr. Garrow. I take it for granted, you did not think this any way remarkable?——Not at all.

Natural enough for a poor boy juſt entering into his apprenticeſhip, to aſk what ſhould become of him if his maſter's houſe was burnt down?—Yes, Sir.

You knew this boy, what was his character?—I never ſaw anything vicious or bad about the boy, he was a decent, orderly, well behaved boy, always behaved well.

You do not recollect the exact expreſſions he uſed?—No, theſe are the higheſt.

Becauſe I obſerve there is a little difference between what you ſtate now; and what you ſtated before the Magiſtrate, you there ſaid, you told him no; now I aſk, whether at this diſtance of time, as you conſidered it a natural converſation, you recollect the exact words?—I really think I ſaid he would be turned over, but I cannot be ſure.

SARAH WHEELER ſworn.

I am daughter to Mr. Parſloe, the fire began in my ſiſter's bed-chamber, I ſlept in the front of the houſe.

How high?—Two pair of ſtairs backwards.

I underſtand there are back ſtairs, and fore ſtairs?—Yes, two pair of ſtairs.

Do the back ſtairs go up all the way to the front, or do you ſtop half way?—You may ſtop half way, there is a landing place up one pair of ſtairs which communicates to ſome rooms.

What hour was you laſt in your ſiſter's room?——I was not there at all, I was in the front of the houſe with my ſiſter, and we were called down to tea.

Court. How far was where you were from the bed chamber where the fire broke out?——Quite on the other ſide of the houſe.

In going down ſtairs did you paſs by your ſiſter's bed-chamber?——I did not, I went down ſtairs and every thing was ſafe, I had neither fire nor candle, the fire broke out about ten minutes after.

Mr. Garrow. I believe you had been to the play with your ſiſter that night?—Another ſiſter of mine was at the play-houſe.

Had you been aſſiſting that ſiſter to dreſs?—No, Sir.

Is ſhe here?——No.

Was ſhe examined before the Magiſtrate?—Yes, Sir.

How long had your ſiſter been gone to the play-houſe?—Sometime.

Is not there another ſiſter of your's, that was examined before the Magiſtrate?—Yes, Sir, Catherine Wheeler.

Do you know from any circumſtance whatever, that that ſiſter, Miſs Catherine Wheeler, had been in the room where the fire broke out, five minutes before the fire broke out?—No, Sir.

Court.

Court. Might she have gone up stairs again by another stair-case without your knowing it?——No, Sir, she was in the parlour the whole time.

You say your sister Catherine went down half an hour before you?—Yes.

In that half hour might not your sister have gone up stairs, and have come down again into the parlour?——I am sure she did not.

Why?—Because she has said so, and we must have seen her, it was very warm, and the doors were all open.

Mr. Garrow. You cannot affect to swear that she could not by possibility have been in that room without your knowledge?—Only by what she said.

How long was it after you went down to tea, which was half an hour after, that Miss Catherine Wheeler went down before the alarm of fire was given?—About ten minutes.

Mr. Silvester. During that ten minutes had your sister been out of the parlour?—No, Sir.

Prosecutor. My daughter was in the parlour at tea, I was with her all the time.

Mr. Garrow. Did not she dress to go to the house?—No, she went to the house to dress.

Was your sister before the Magistrate?——Yes.

Mrs. MURRELL sworn.

I was up two pair of stairs with my sisters, I was at work in the front bow room, where my sisters usually sit.

Which of them went down first?—My sister Elizabeth, and my sister Catherine, who are both in Ireland at this time, went down half an hour before I left the room. I came out of own room, which is over the room where the fire began backwards, I found my sister Sarah standing looking out of the window of the bow room.

Was there any fire or candle there?—Never any fire there till they go to bed.

Did you go to your sister's bed chamber? Not at that time, I sat down with her and folded up my work, I am very timorous going about the house it is a large awkward house, I am afraid of thieves, and I asked her to go with me, and she said she would not, I went up stairs, I went into my own room, I had been up very late with my father and I thought I would go to bed then, I thought again I would not, I would go down to tea first, so I put my room to rights, I usually lock my door, I turned down my bed, and came down the stair-case, and at the bottom of the stair-case is my sister's room door, which stood wide open, and the windows up to the top, close to the back stair-case.

Where does that stair-case lead to?——It leads to the ground floor to the parlour, where we drank tea; there is a little closet, there is a landing place and a window, but no communication: observing my sister's door open, and the windows open, I went into her room, and I put my head out of the window, and I thought the weather was more foggy than usual; I thought I would shut the window, but I did not as my sister is very fond of air; and I went down stairs.

Was it perfectly safe?—It was.

Court. How long was this before the alarm of fire?——I suppose not above ten minutes, or a quarter of an hour.

Mr. Garrow. The family usually sit and drink tea, and have their meals in that parlour?—Yes.

Which is close to the foot of the back stairs?——Yes.

HANNAH HOBCRAFT sworn.

I am a house maid to Mr. Parsloe; on the Saturday evening about half after six, I saw the prisoner, he asked me if his master and mistress were at tea, I said, yes, I believed they were, I asked him the reason why he asked me that question, he said, he wanted to go to see his mother unknown to his master, he did not ask after any other of the family to the best of my knowledge; the alarm of fire was in half an hour after; after he asked me that question, I did not see him for a quarter of an hour, when the alarm of fire was, he was in the servants hall, hall, I do not know whether he had been out to his mother or not, he went out when the alarm of fire was, he went out to the garden, and came in again and ſet down for the ſpace of a minute, I do not know anything that he did in the garden, this room of Miſs Wheeler's looked towards the garden, there were ſome words paſſed between my fellow ſervant and him, but I cannot ſay what they were, he got up rather in a hurry and run towards the garden door the ſecond time and went out, I aſked him where he was going to in that hurry, he ſaid, there was a houſe on fire, I aſked him what houſe, and he ſaid our houſe.

Where was he ſtanding when he ſaid that?—He was out of the door about three or four ſteps.

Could he ſee this fire at the door?—Yes, he could.

Mr. Garrow. Was there any dog in the garden?——Yes, there was.

Whoſe buſineſs was it to feed that dog?——It was uſually the porter's, but this boy uſed to ſerve him at times.

Was the time you have been ſpeaking of, a uſual time to give the dog meat?—At times after dinner he uſed to go to feed the dog, he was in his working dreſs, he could not go up the garden without being ſeen if any one was looking out at the window.

His mother I believe is dead ſince he was committed?—Yes, I believe ſhe is.

She uſed to waſh for him?—I believe ſhe did, he was not waſhed in the houſe, the boy uſed to go to his mother to carry his linen.

Mr. Silveſter. How ſoon after he came in was the alarm of fire?——The ſpace of one minute.

Who gave the alarm?—I do not know, the alarm of fire was given by him I believe, the firſt alarm that I heard.

JAMES DAWKINS ſworn.

I am a waiter at this houſe, on Saturday evening about a quarter paſt ſix, as I was ſtanding in the paſſage leading to Mr. Parſloe's ſitting room, the priſoner came by me to the larder with a lighted candle, the glaſs cloſet is cloſe to the larder, where I was ſtanding between the back ſtairs and the hall ſtairs, and on his return I aſked him to lend me the candle, he told me he could not ſpare it, but he was not in a hurry, he would ſtop and light me, I aſked him whether he was in a hurry, he ſaid, he was not, he ſtopped there ſome minutes, I took away my glaſſes, and left him there; I do not know which way he went, it might be twenty minutes after that, that I ſaw him coming down the beſt ſtair caſe from the firſt landing without either candle or candleſtick.

How ſoon after you ſaw him was the alarm of fire?—I believe twenty-five minutes or half an hour, as near as I can ſay, where I left him was between the back ſtairs and the ſervants hall, I ſaw him afterwards coming down the great ſtairs, I do not know where he came from, he had no buſineſs that way; from the time that I ſaw him in the paſſage, to the time I ſaw him coming down the great ſtairs, was twenty-five minutes.

How long was it between your ſeeing him without a candle, and the alarm of fire?——Five or ten minutes.

Did you ſay anything to him?——Yes.

Court. When you firſt ſaw him with the candle, he was about his neceſſary buſineſs?——I believe he was, he had buſineſs in the larder, but he might have fetched anything without a candle.

Why, you wanted a candle yourſelf?—I could not ſee to wipe the glaſſes ſo clean.

Why, then it was neceſſary for him to have a candle?——When I met him, I aſked him where he had been, and he made no reply.

Mr. Garrow. What occaſioned you to leave off wiping your glaſſes?——To carry them into their proper place, then I carried a bottle of wine into the colonel's room, I went only once into the proſecutor's parlour; the larder and the glaſs cloſet, and the ſtairs, are cloſe by the parlour, you muſt go by all them to go to it, room,

when the parlour door is open you may see the two ſtairs, in ſome ſituations of that room, there are frequent occaſions for the ſervants and others to go into that parlour.

The fire was very rapid?——Yes.

Court. When he was coming down the beſt ſtair-caſe, might he poſſibly be coming down from the parlour?——I met him on the one pair of ſtairs, on my left hand; you might go from the parlour door, but it was uſual for the ſervants to go on the back ſtairs.

The parlour is on the ground floor?—Yes.

JOSIAH DAVIS ſworn.

I am a waiter at this houſe, I was ill at the time in bed, which was at the top of the houſe, not the front of the houſe, there is a room between my room and the front up three pair of ſtairs; I heard nothing particular before the fire, nothing alarming; about five minutes before I heard the fire, I heard a perſon come along the paſſage from the place where they perceived the fire came, they went along the paſſage into the front room, and returned, and to my ear down the beſt ſtair-caſe; I could not ſee, I was on the bed, the alarm of fire to me was about five minutes after, the cracking of fire alarmed me firſt, I liſtened to it about half a minute, and I reſted myſelf on my pillow, and ſaw the ſmoke coming up, I went and looked down the ſtair-caſe, but I could not ſee down for ſmoke, I cannot ſay what room it came from.

Mr. Garrow. Have you ever given any particular deſcription of the ſound of that foot?—I thought it was a woman's ſtep, I could not particularly tell, it was not ſo heavy as a man's; I have deſcribed it to be the ſound of a woman's, or ſome other perſon not ſo heavy as a man; I had been in bed eight or nine days, from an accident; the priſoner knew I was ill, and knew where I lay, my room door was wide open.

How long have you lived at the houſe?—Almoſt three years, I have obſerved the boy's character and conduct; I never knew any blemiſh of his character, I had never any doubt of him before, I thought him an orderly well-behaved boy.

Jury. Did the boy ever bring you up any thing during your illneſs?—I do not recollect he did.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

All I have to ſay is, I am innocent of the matter.

Court to Priſoner. Have you any deſire to explain any part of your conduct.

Mr. Garrow. My Lord, the boy has been ever ſince his confinement, very ill of a dangerous putrid fever, and therefore I think I ought to prevent his ſaying anything for himſelf, conſidering his ſtate of intellects.

JAMES RIDGEWAY ſworn.

I am a bookſeller, oppoſite Sackville-ſtreet; I have known the priſoner the laſt twelve months.

What has been his general character?—An attentive good boy; I have frequently heard him ſay that he had been ſent of meſſages, on account of Miſs Wheeler, that he deſpaired of learning his buſineſs, and wiſhed to leave his maſter.

EDWARD WYNNE ſworn.

I was a porter at the houſe; the general character that ever I heard and ſaw of the boy was a downwright good ſteady boy.

FRANCIS BEVILL ſworn.

I was porter one year and nine months, the boy's general character is as good a boy as ever came into a houſe, and minded his buſineſs as well as ever I ſaw, I nver ſaw any thing vicious about him.

——— VERRIER ſworn.

I was the cook; the boy was two years and a half under my immediate protection, he deserved a very good character; very honest, nothing malicious, or wicked.

The Jury retired for sometime, and returned with a verdict

GUILTY Death.

The prisoner was humbly recommended to mercy by the Prosecutor and Jury on account of his youth.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Justice HEATH.

---

610. WILLIAM NOBLE, and WILLIAM COOK were indicted for feloniously stealing on the 18th day of May last, one silk gown, value 20s. one wooden trunk covered with leather, value 3s. the property of Sir Henry Thomas Gott, Knt.

SIR HENRY THOMAS GOTT sworn.

I sent a trunk directed to Sir Hugh Palliser, by my own carriage, and by my own servant, who is not here, from Bucks to London.

——— EKER sworn.

I am the Greenwich coachman, I took the trunk at Charing-Cross, and tied it behind the coach, and drove it to Greenwich; it was directed to Sir Hugh Palliser; I delivered it to Bright the hostler.

——— WRIGHT sworn.

Where did you get the things first?——At Garden-stairs, Greenwich, I was waterman; the two prisoners came down and called oars, and the two prisoners brought the trunk into the boat, and desired me to row them up to London as fast as I could, for they were going to the Liverpool stage; and they said, if I rowed hard they would give me something more for my fare; they thought I did not row fast enough; I put them on shore at Ratcliff-cross, and they took the trunk with them, and put it into a coach.

(The trunk deposed to by Wright.)

It never went out of my sight.

What became of it afterwards?—It was carried up to the office directly the alarm was made of stop thieves; as soon as I heard that I took hold of Mr. Noble by the collar; Master, says I, you have stolen this trunk; he had got up to the coach, and was putting it into a hackney coach, there was but one on the stand, at the same time the people came running up the street, and made the alarm of stop thieves; he was taken directly.

Prosecutor. I nailed the direction on myself, and the direction was torn off.

Coachman. This is the same trunk I received, I know it by the mark; I cannot say I know either of the prisoners, I did not see either of them that day, it was the Wednesday after Whitsuntide, I left the box at Greenwich with the house-keeper Thomas Bright, he was to carry it to Sir Hugh's.

Mr. Garrow, Prisoners Council. Can you read?—No.

CHARLES BOWEN sworn.

I was at Greenwich, at Garden-stairs, and I saw two men come down with a trunk, I never saw them before, I know them now extremely well.

Do you see them any where?——Not without they are any where nigh hand.

Look about and see if you see them?—I cannot see them.

Are you short sighted?—No, my Lord.

And you cannot see them any where in Court?——No.

Look about?——I believe that is one.

Do you see the other?——Oh! that is the other; he was in an old green coloured coat.

Are you sure these are the men?—These are the two men I am positive of it.

Did you take any notice of the trunk?——Yes, a kind of an old hair trunk, or leather.

Was it smooth leather or hairy?——I had not so quick a sight of it as to know whether it was all hairy or no.

Look at the trunk?—Here is my mark, that I marked upon it in the office before Juſtice Green and Juſtice Staples.

Court. That is after they were taken, where were they when you firſt ſaw them with the trunk?——The firſt I ſaw of them was at Garden-ſtairs, they put into the boat immediately, and went towards London.

JOSEPH MOTT ſworn.

I was ſtanding at Garden ſtairs head, and the priſoners came down with the trunk and took a pair of oars, and went towards London.

What ſort of trunk was it?——It was leathered over and laſhed with a cord, there were no directions when I ſaw it, but there had been a piece of twine where there had been a direction tore off, by the account the people gave, it was the ſame, we got ſight of them as they were croſſing the water, and we juſt got on ſhore at Ratcliff-croſs, as one end of the trunk was in a coach, and the waterman had hold of the other.

THOMAS BRIGHT ſworn.

I am the hoſtler at Greenwich, this man gave me that trunk, I ſaid to that priſoner Noble, be ſo kind to lend me a hand up with this trunk, and the other priſoner was within-ſide of the bar, and I took the trunk out, and he helped me out with it, and I took it and went away; I took it I belive it might be a dozen yards, I ſet it down at a ſhoe-maker's ſhop, I left it there and ran down for a barrow, when I came with the barrow the trunk was gone.

Whoſe care did you leave it in?——Nobody's at all, I left it up againſt the houſe.

PRISONER NOBLE's DEFENCE.

This trunk was in the highwway, I was going to take it to the Cuſtom-houſe.

Mr. Garrow. Did they give this account when they were taken up?——Yes; Mr. Noble ſaid that immediately when he was taken up.

The priſoner Noble called two witneſſes who gave him a good character.

The priſoner Cook called three witneſſes who gave him a very good character.

BOTH GUILTY.

Each tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

611. JOHN REBOULT alias PRESCOTT was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Edward Henry Jump on the King's highway, on the 2d of May laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon, and againſt his will, one gold watch, value 10l. 10s. two ſtone ſeals ſet in gold, value 3l. 3s. one gold hook, value 5s. one ſilver tooth-pick caſe, value 5s. two guineas, value 2l. 2s. and three half guineas, value 1l. 11s. 6d. his property.

EDWARD JUMP ſworn.

I was robbed on Monday the 2d of May, about half after three in the afternoon, I was going down to Enfield from London, I was ſtopped in a lane at the back of Hornſey wood, I believe it is called Hornſey-lane, by three men, the man at the bar is one.

Can you ſwear to him poſitively?——I did and do.

Be cautious?—I am very cautious, I am ſure it is him, it was about half after three on Monday, it was a very bad road, and I was walking my horſe down hill, and about twenty yards before me I ſaw three men in ſailors apparel, I did not conceive them to be footpads, but rather thought them to be three men loitering about, I did not ſuſpect being ſtopped at that time of the day, when they came near to my horſe's head the priſoner who was in the middle, gave the others a ſhove with his elbow, as I thought for me to go through them, which I en-

I endeavoured to do, and they every one ſprang upon me, one on each ſide of me, and the other at my mare's head; I aſked them what they wanted: the priſoner firſt ſaid, damn your blood, give us your watch and money; upon which he immediately laid hold of the chain of my watch, and attempted to pull it out of my pocket, which broke the chain; not finding it poſſible to get my watch out of my pocket, he immediately ripped my breeches open.

Did he draw a knife?—The left-hand man held a cutlaſs to my head, and the priſoner immediately took the watch out of my pocket, and I gave him my purſe; on the other ſide the man with the cutlaſs put his hand into my pocket, and took out a large tooth-pick caſe, for which I begged very hard, as I had had it many years, but he ſwore at me, and would not return it: before they had got twenty paces from me, they turned round again, ſwearing they would murder me if I did not go along, upon which I was determined to purſue them, I met a ſoldier, and he went back with me; when we got to the top of the hill, we ſaw them croſſing the field.

At what diſtanee?——About one hundred yards from the lane, the man immediately got over the gate, and purſued them, and I went to have leaped the gate after them, but he thought it was rather wrong to do that, and I rode on as hard as I could ride, at Newington-green I met a gentleman, with his ſervant, and we both rode after them; I went to Sir Sampſon Wright's office, where I gave intelligence: they were not taken up till the Friday week afterwards; it was on a Monday that I was robbed, I ſaw them on that day fortnight; the priſoner was with two more.

Have you any doubt of the other two men?——I am very well aſſured they were not with him at the time I was robbed.

How many minutes did the robbery laſt?—I do not ſuppoſe it was five minutes; I took particular notice of them, though I had not an idea of what they were going to do.

Priſoner. There is no occaſion for me to aſk any queſtions, as the gentleman is ſo poſitive that I am the perſon, there is no room to aſk any queſtions.

Proſecutor. I loſt a gold watch, valued at ten guineas, and the other things in the indictment.

WILLIAM PLEASE ſworn.

I am a weaver, I know nothing of the robbery: I have a houſe at Horneſey, and in going down with my wife, we met three men, of which the priſoner was one; this was the 13th of May, they ſuffered us to paſs, and when we had paſſed them I met Mr. Wilmot, who had likewiſe paſſed them, by ſome ſuſpicions I had, we went in purſuit, and took them, when we rode up to them, they turned round, and aſked us what we wanted, and the priſoner pulled out a piſtol, and held it ſo, under his thigh, and I immediately pointed mine at him; upon which he threw it into the water, and we found a piſtol and cutlaſs in the water.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I am as innocent as the child unborn; though the gentleman has ſwore ſo poſitively to me, I leave myſelf to the mercy of this Court: I did not expect my trial ſo ſoon, my witneſſes are not here.

GUILTY Death.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

Mr. Pleaſe. My Lord, I beg leave to mention, that at Sir Sampſon Wright's the keeper of the gaol of Berkſhire told us that this man had broken out of Berkſhire gaol, with others, and that this man had prevented the others from hurting him, and had ſaved his life: I thought proper to mention this.

612. THO

612. THOMAS BAILEY was indicted for burglariously and feloniously breaking and entering the dwelling house of Henry Bates, Esq; about the hour of two in the night, on the 29th day of May last, and burglariously stealing therein fifteen silver table spoons, value 6l. twelve silver desert spoons, value 30s. two silver gravy spoons, value 30s. one metal candlestick plated with silver, value 2s. one metal dish cross plated with silver, value 2s. nine desert knives with bone handles, value 4s. nine desert forks with bone handles, value 4s. one mahogany case, value 2s. one silver tea spoon, value 1s. his property.

HENRY BATES sworn.

On the 29th of May early in the morning, about six or seven Mrs. Ellrson, my mother-in-law, knocked at my door and informed me the house had been broke open in the night and robbed of divers things; I have a catalogue of the things that were lost, (describes them) I missed the things on the 29th in the morning, I saw them since at the magistrate's, M. Justice Abington's, Westminster, there is my cypher and crest on the candlestick and spoon, I swore to them before the magistrate. (The things produced and deposed to.) The prisoner was my footman for three months, and he behaved extremely well, I had an extraordinary character with him, he had left me about three or four months.

SARAH ELLISON sworn.

I live in this family, the prosecutor is my son-in-law; on Sunday morning the 29th, I was coming down stairs a little after five in the morning, it could not be later than half past five, and I found the wind blew very strong up the stair-case, from which I imagined there must be doors or windows open, as I came to the first floor I saw the back door of the dining room on a jar, on opening that door I found the sash up to the top, this dining room is on the one pair of stairs.

Court. Is there any possibility of getting to the window but by a ladder?—I looked over the bannisters and saw the back yard door wide open, upon that, I imagined somebody had broke into the house, I went and called the house maid, the spoons were kept on a side-board in the knife case in the fore parlour, which is on the ground floor, it shuts with a pulley; we then went into the garden, and looking up to the window, which I saw open up stairs, there was a ladder fixed against it, our own ladder, all the things mentioned in the indictment were missing from the side-board; I saw the things a very little while before, but I cannot recollect whether I saw them the day before, I saw them at the justices, and I knew them to be the prosecutor's property.

(The things deposed to.)

HANNAH JONES sworn.

On the 28th day of May I lived with Mr. Bates, I was there on the Saturday night, on Sunday morning the things were missing, I was the last up in the house, I went to my mistress between twelve and one, which was the usual time, and she asked me if every thing was safe, I said yes, she told me to put the shutters to, and I went down stairs and put every thing safe, I shut up the sash window of the back dining room about nine the night before.

Are you sure the sash was down before you put the shutters to?—Yes, there was no fastening at all upon it, it was only down; then I put to the shutter, there are no others windows of this room, all the other windows were shut up, I cannot say that I shut them all up, but I saw them all shut up at the lower part of the house, I saw the doors all fastened, and the door of the back yard was locked that night and bolted; but I cannot speak to the upper part of the house, these things were kept on the side board in the fore parlour.

When did you see them last?—I cannot tell in particular, I saw them very lately so far as my knowledge, I think they they are my master's property, I cannot judge of the mark because I am no scholar. Were there any such things in the house?——Yes.

Mr. Bates. This individual candlestick was in that room that night, it formed a kind of ornament upon an India cabinet, and used to be kept there in general.

WILLIAM PHILIPS sworn.

I am footman to Mr. Bates, on Saturday the 28th of May, I went out with a great many messages; I went to bed between ten and eleven, I went out into the yard, about half after eleven, I pulled the spring lock and put the key in my pocket, when I returned I unlocked the door, and shut it again, and double locked it and bolted it, the front door was double locked, it has a little chain; between five and six I was called out of bed, and informed the house had been robbed; I saw the sash thrown entirely up, I went into the back yard, and saw a ladder which we usually have in the back yard, I went into the parlour, and observed that the spoons were all gone out of the two cases, and one of the cases gone, the day preceding I had seen all the spoons, they were usually kept in the front parlour, I missed them from thence.

(Deposed to.)

JOSEPH ELLIOTT sworn.

I am one of the patrol belonging to St. John's, Westminster; on the 29th of May on Sunday morning about a quarter before two, my partner Thomas Birket and I, saw a man coming along Tothill-fields, at the distance of forty or fifty yards, I imagine this is about three quarters of a mile from the prosecutor's house, he was alone, he was going towards the willow walk, Chelsea, that is from Mr. Bates's house; I gave my partner a nudge and set off after him, and got near him before he discovered me, as soon as he discovered me, says he, which is the way to Chelsea, says I, what have you got there, says he, what I have got is my own, he had this dish cross under his left arm, so I pulled my pistol out, says I, if you move or stir I will give you the contents, with that I caught hold of him by the collar, he made no resistance, just then my partner came up, and we brought him to Mr. Carey's door; and I said to my partner, let us search him, for I thought the cross under his coat was a pistol; says he, I will not be searched, with that my partner put his hand into his right hand coat pocket, and I put my hand into the other pocket, he began struggling, and jumped out of our hands, and Birket in taking the spoons out of his pocket, tore away a part of his coat, I saw him take out the spoons, but I cannot be sure to the number; he was then going to leap across a ditch, which is twenty or thirty yards off, and I caught hold of him by the coat, and pulled him down in the ditch, and got upon him with my knees, and hallooed out murder! two or three different times; Mrs. Carey was looking out of the window, and my partner having the property in his possession, I said, here is a man coming up the road, take care and keep what you have; then Mrs. Carey called Mr. Carey, and he came and assisted me to secure him, and we took him to the watch-house; I never lost sight of him till he was committed, I am sure the prisoner is the man.

Court. Are you sure as to the time?—It was as near as possible a quarter before two.

THOMAS BIRKETT sworn.

I assisted in taking the prisoner, we saw the cross under his coat, which we took to be a pistol; he refused to be searched, we searched him, and took out a quantity of spoons, I cannot say how many, and we found all but these which was picked up afterwards by Mr. Carey.

What time was it?——About two on Sunday morning, these are the same things, we put a seal on them directly; the prisoner is the man, he was never out of my sight.

JOB

JOB CAREY sworn.

I live in Tothill-fields, I keep the Three Ditch Casters; between one and two my wife was walking in our room, and I was asleep, and she came to the bed side and waked me, and told me the patrol wanted help to take a thief; I jumped out of bed and opened the chamber door, and ran down naked as I was; I opened the street door, and I saw a man standing on a box, which I have by my door for company to set on and drink in, that was Birkett, and I said to him, what is the matter? says he, Mr. Carey, run for God's sake! for we have got a thief, and we cannot manage him; says I, where are they, says he, they are run out into the fields, I went and when I run about nineteen or twenty yards from our door there is a ditch, when I came to the ditch side, I saw two men in ditch tussling, that was the prisoner at the bar, and the patrol Elliott.

Jury. Had the prisoner any arms?—No, I jumped in upon them, and assisted to secure the prisoner, and Elliott tied his hands, then I took him by the two legs into my arms, and these two things shook out of some of his cloaths; I saw three or four of these spoons taken from him.

Prisoner. I have nothing to say, I have nobody to my character.

GUILTY, Death.

He was humbly recommended to mercy by the Prosecutor.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

613. JAMES JONES was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 18th of May last, one linen handkerchief, value 1s. the property of Hugh Glenny.

HUGH GLENNY sworn.

Opposite St. Andrew's church, Holborn, I was told my handkerchief was gone, I looked and found I had lost it, I had seen it not two minutes before, and had it in my hand; the handkerchief was found in his apron, I took it from him.

——— CAMPBELL sworn.

I saw the prisoner pick the prosecutor's pocket, there were six of them, they came up and walked up very orderly in pairs, and I saw that boy take the handkerchief.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was going up Holborn, and there were two young men picked a gentleman's pocket, and chucked it into my apron.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

614. JOHN MORLAND was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 26th day of May last, one silk handkerchief, value 3s. the property of Noah Le Crass, Esq;

NOAH LE CRASS Esq; sworn.

I perceived somebody rub against my right hand coat pocket, upon which I put my hand into my pocket, and found my handkerchief was gone; upon which I turned and found that boy close to me, he was on the right side of me, from which I lost my handkerchief; I taxed him with my handkerchief, I looked under his coat, and there was my handkerchief, it is a silk handkerchief.

(The handkerchief produced by the constable and deposed to marked N. L. C.)

WILLIAM WISEMAN sworn.

I am a fishmonger, I was going through Grocer's-alley home, and in Dove-court, I saw the prisoner run down the alley against the wall, and the prosecutor said, you have got my handkerchief, he denied it, I saw the gentleman take it out of his bosom, bosom, then I collared him, and carried him to the Compter, I gave the handkerchief to the constable, and I saw the mark before it was given to him.

JOHN MAJOR sworn.

I am constable of Portsoken ward, this handkerchief was delivered to me, I have had it in my care ever since.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was going down to my mother's, and there were two boys after that gentleman, and as I was coming through Grocer's-alley, the two boys picked his pocket, and I went up to tell the gentleman, and the gentleman took hold of me.

Court to Prosecutor. Were there any other boys near?—Yes, there were, but this boy was close to my pocket.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. ROSS.

---

615. THOMAS SAWYER was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 1st of June last, six pounds weight of Tobacco, value 2s. the property of our sovereign Lord the King.

And RICHARD WHITE was indicted for feloniously receiving the same, knowing it to be stolen.

(The case opened by Mr. Shepherd.)

SAMUEL WARD sworn.

I am a noon tender of the port of London to attend two hours on the keys and take all charges, during the tide waiters and weighers absence, I was upon duty on the 1st of June, at Ralph's key, at the tobacco scale; I saw the prisoner White several times without the scale, attending that day, the prisoner Sawyer was employed at work that day as a cooper, and I saw Sawyer have some tobacco in his bib, and I saw his pockets stick out very much, I followed him to the Dice, a publick house where White was sitting in a box, and I saw him take out this tobacco out of his pocket and out of his bib, and tie it up in this cloth and give it to White, it has been in my custody ever since, only one night it was left at the Poultry Compter, with the keeper.

Court. If he is not here you cannot identify the tobacco?——White weighed the tobacco by a little pair of steel-yards, then he put it down on the ground, then I said to White, hand me that tobacco.

Court. You heard no conversation pass then between White and Sawyer?—No, my Lord, I saw him give it him, White threw it over the settle to me, and said damn you, if you will have it, take it; I took it up, I directly took him to the Compter, Sawyer made out of the public house, I have seen him on the keys for this year and half.

Prisoner Sawyer. He went into the house with me, I asked him to go and drink a glass with me.

JOHN SANDGRAVE sworn.

I am an extra weigher, I was there on the first of June, I saw the two prisoners at the Dice house on that day, I saw Mr. Sawyer on the key, at work at the tobacco scale, I cannot say I took any particular notice of him at the public house, I saw nothing pass between the two prisoners, I saw such a bundle as this on the table at the public house, I followed Mr. Ward in, I saw him look at the table, and there was some such bundle as this, I cannot speak to the bundle particularly; I did not hear any words pass between them, but I saw White chuck it over the settle to Mr. Ward.

SHADRACK BLANN sworn.

I am an extra weigher, I was upon duty on refuge, at the Dice key, on the first of June, I saw Mr. White there, and I saw Sawyer at the Dice, on Dice key; Ward sent me for a constable, but I could not find find one, and I assisted Ward to take White to the Compter.

EDWARD DAINTREE sworn.

I am one of the constables of the key, damaged tobacco is put into tar and water and soaked, and carried to be burnt; that is the practice of it, it should be so, that is our instructions.

Court to Jury. Gentlemen here is no property proved at all.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Court to Prisoner. Now you have both escaped, it should be known in future in and about the keys, that it is a very bad practice to take this damaged tobacco in this manner.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. Justice HEATH.

---

616. MICHAEL ROCHFORD was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 20th of May last, one muslin handkerchief, value 2s. the property of Benjamin John Roberts, Esq.

BENJAMIN JOHN ROBERTS sworn.

I am a reduced Captain of the army, I lost my handkerchief about the 20th of last month, near the corner of Shoe-lane, before dinner, I do not know exactly the time of the day; I saw it in the hands of the prisoner immediately after I lost it, he turned round, and a boy ran from a silversmith's shop, and told me my pocket was picked; the prisoner ran, I ran after him, he took the handkerchief from out of his breeches, and pushed it to a girl, it dropped on the ground, the prisoner pretended to be drunk; a number of respectable people were by and extorted a promise from me, that I would prosecute him; it was a muslin handkerchief.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I picked up this handkerchief.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. Justice BULLER.

---

617. WILLIAM SPARKS was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 18th day of June, 12lb. weight of tobacco, value 9s. the property of persons unknown.

NICHOLAS BUNTON sworn.

I am a watchman, I stopped a man with this bundle; I asked him what he had; it was half past eleven; he would not resolve me, but said I might see if I would, accordingly I took him with the bundle under his arm, to the watch-house; he never made any resistance against me; I never saw him before.

RICHARD BRINKWORTH sworn.

The watchman brought this man in with this tobacco; I asked him how he came by it; he said he was hired by a person at St. Mary at Hill to carry it to his house; the tobacco was wet, it appeared to have been taken out of the tar: I found there was such a man as the prisoner described, but his wife said he was gone abroad.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

The person that hired me his name is Mordecai Hendricks.

The prisoner called one witness, who gave him a good character.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. Justice BULLER.

618. THO-

618. JAMES OATES was indicted for feloniously ſtealing on the 23d of May, forty-eight glaſs quart bottles, value 10s. the property of John Carbonell, Charles Moody, and Thomas Walker:

And THOMAS LOWTHER was indicted for feloniously receiving the ſame knowing them to be ſtolen.

THOMAS WALKER ſworn.

I am a wine-merchant, partner with John Carbonell and Charles Moody, in King-ſtreet, Golden-ſquare; the priſoner Oates was a porter, with three more, his buſineſs was chiefly to go out with a horſe and cart; we have for this laſt twelve months paſt had a great decreaſe in our bottles, when we took ſtock, we had 3000 dozen of empty bottles; they decreaſed very rapidly.

EADES SUMMERS ſworn.

I am cellar-man to the proſecutor; I know nothing of the loſs of the bottles. On the 27th of May, I was called upon by Juſtice Hyde's men to ſearch ſome ſuſpicious bottles, and in Lowther's houſe we found theſe two bottles, which I challenged as being marked exactly like ours, with an A. I think they were in the cellar, as far as there is a poſſibility of ſwearing to a mark, I can ſwear to this.

Mr. Keys, Priſoner's Council. Is it poſſible at all to ſwear to them?——I do not know there is any other mark that is the ſame, it is an A.

Will you venture to ſwear that that bottle was ever in your houſe?——I can ſwear no more than to the mark.

I believe Lowther is a dealer in bottles?——He keeps a bottle ſhop.

Court. How long have you uſed that mark?—About two years.

Jury. Is there any other mark?—There is no other mark.

——— JENNIWAY ſworn.

I recollect the priſoner Oates, I have ſeen him in my own ſhop, I live in No. 8, Charles-court, St. James's ſquare, I recollect he brought me a few bottles, ſome time paſt.

When was that?——To the beſt of my recollection, it was about five or ſix months ago, I bought a few of him, my huſband is a broker.

Who did he uſe to come in company with?—By himſelf.

Mr. Peatt, Council for the Priſoner Oates. Do you know anything of this fact?—No, Sir.

GEORGE HUGHES ſworn.

Do you know Oates?——Yes.

Mr. Keys. I believe you are an accomplice?——Yes, as I was coming from the Prince of Wales's one day with the priſoner who was a cargman, he ſtopped the cart on the way, and ſaid take this prickle, and carry it to that court, and ſet it down at Jenniway's door, and do not mention a word, ſo I did.

Court. Whoſe bottles were theſe?—We had carried ſome full bottles to the Prince of Wales's, they were my maſter's bottles.

Mr. Keys. Did you look at them?—No, I did not pack them up.

Proſecutor. The Prince of Wales's bottles are not marked, it is only his Majeſty's bottles that are marked.

PRISONER OATES's DEFENCE.

Pleaſe you my Lord, that is wrong, I went home with the firſt load myſelf, and when I came back I miſſed two of the prickles, but I believe George and another had taken them away.

(The proſecutor wiſhed to call another witneſs, but Mr. Peatt objected to calling any more witneſſes after the proſecution for the Crown was cloſed, and the priſoner put on his defence.)

The priſoner Oates called three witneſſes who gave him a good character.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

The next Part will be publiſhed in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commission of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the City of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middlesex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wednesday the 29th of JUNE, 1785, and the following Days;

Being the SIXTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER VI. PART II.

LONDON: Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLEY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noster Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE PROCEEDINGS UPON THE KING's Commission of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the City of LONDON, &c.

619. THOMAS SMITH and HUGH NANGLE were indicted for feloniously assaulting Christian Davis, spinster, on the King's highway, on the 13th of June, and putting her in corporal fear and danger of her life, and feloniously taking from her person, and against her will, two linen handkerchiefs, value 6d. one pen-knife with two blades, value 6d. one stone handkerchief-pin set in base metal washed with silver, value 6d. one silk housewife, value 2d. one small linen bag, value 1d. one box, value 1d. and six copper halfpence, value 3d. her property.

The prosecutrix not appearing, the prisoners were

BOTH ACQUITTED.

620. CATHERINE MOLLEY was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 6th of May last one looking-glass in a wooden frame, value 5s. four pictures painted upon canvas, value 8s. five china coffee cups, value 2s. one china pint mug, value 1s. one japan box and stand, value 1s. and one glass case in a mahogany frame, value 1s. the property of John Thorne.

JOHN THORNE sworn.

I lost the things mentioned in the indictment, I do not know when they were taken, it is about six weeks since I missed them; the prisoner was my servant, she left me to go to lay in; she took lodgings for that purpose in York Buildings; she used to come and use me very ill, called me old rogue, scoundrel, and villain, because I would not take her in again I suppose. I had only bid her go about her business; I have lived in that house going on sixty years; I had a warrant for her to take her up, to make her give bail for her better behaviour for the future.

Mr. Garrow, Prisoner's Counsel. I fancy I shall make an end of this business, by a word or two with this old gentleman; you thought it was a good thing to get her bailed, when you had her?—I had nothing but honour and honesty in me.

That is certain, my old buck!—She had left my service about a year and a quarter.

How many of your apprentices boarded and lodged with her by your desire?—There was one, and I gave a bond to his relations that he should be at liberty at five years.

That is, in defiance of law, and in spite of the indentures, you gave them up in five years; did not this young man, your apprentice live with her?—He did live with her, he cohabited with her.

Is not she a married woman?—I do not know that.

What do you believe?—He lay out of my my house, and lay with her; no more of my apprentices went there; here is one that went backward and forward.

So that a year and a half after you took her up for stealing these things; was you there when they were found?—The constable told me they were in a public room.

——— DUPREE sworn.

I am servant to Mr. Thorne, I have been out of my time between three and four years; I saw the looking-glass, the pictures, and the china; I knew them to be Mr. Thorne's property, because the pictures had hung all my apprenticeship in my room.

Do you know who took them away?—No.

Mr. Garrow. What sort of pictures were these?—Old pictures.

What might be the value of them for another purpose but keeping out the wind?—I do not know; I had been at this woman's house to get the apprentice to work, he used to board and lodge there.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I have witnesses where I bought some of these things, and he has had my sheets and blankets, and some of my blankets remained upon the apprentice's bed.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Justice BULLER.

---

621. FRANCES ANDERSON was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 10th of June, one gold watch, value 10l. one gold chain, value 5l. one cornelian stone seal set in gold, value 10s. one topas seal set in gold, value 5s. one steel hook, value 1d. the property of John Hill,

JOHN HILL sworn.

I am a housekeeper in Margaret-street, St. Mary-le-bon parish.

What is the prisoner at the bar?—A woman of the town.

Where did you meet with her?—In Bond-street, I believe it was the 10th of this month, between eleven and twelve at night; I went with her to a house in Oxford-buildings, and coming out of the house she took hold of my arm, and walked with me into Oxford-street, then the patrol came up and laid hold of her, he called her a brimstone, and swore she should go with him.

Had you been drinking?—Not too much.

How much had you drank?—I believe I had drank part of a bottle of wine, on returning we came back to the house again, and the patrol would not let her go in, he said I might go in; her reply was, that she would not quit me; I wanted to know the hour of the night, and looking for my watch, and not finding it, I said I missed it; I had no sooner pronounced the words, I had missed it, then I saw it in the prisoner's hand, and the patrol seized it; I have some doubt remaining with me of the prisoner positively meaning to keep the watch.

Mr. Peatt, Prisoner's Council. I will ask you one question; did the prisoner immediately upon your speaking of the watch, say here it is, or to that purpose; did she conceal the watch?—No.

Court. Then it is too much to say this is a felonious taking.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Justice HEATH.

---

622. ROGER M'GUIRE was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 18th day of May last, twenty callico shirts, value 30s. and two pair of boots, value 4s. the property of Nathaniel Wright,

JONATHAN THOMAS sworn.

I am a glover and breeches-maker; on the the 18th of May twenty callico shirts were left at my house by a strange boy, as nigh as I can recollect about six in the evening, he said they came from one William in the city; he took away the bag in which they were; the night following the prisoner came, and I asked if he sent any callico shirts the evening before; he said yes; and he desired I would dispose of the shirts, which he had bought at a sale at Margate, at the Custom-house, for he had not time; he changed his name from Roger to William by his mistress's desire; I knew then he was in Mr. Wright's service: I said I would do what was in my power; but I said, could I be safe to sell them as they were smuggled, and he said yes, for they were marked with the Custom-house mark; the next day I took four of the shirts to Mr. Boozey, whom I went to measure for a pair of breeches; and he bought one for seven shillings; I went from there to Mr. French, and he bought three for seventeen shillings, and some to other people; Mr. French came and asked me if I knew who I had them of and I said yes; and he said the things were stolen, and he shewed me the advertisement; then I knew it was the same things, and I went with Mr. French to Mr. Wright's, who owned the property, and the prisoner was taken into custody; there was also four pair of boots; I was to dispose of the boots too; I had no suspicion of him. In consequence of my going to Mr. Wright's the discovery was made; he was in Mr. Wright's service when he was taken into custody; nineteen of the shirts are in Mr. French's custody, and the boots too.

VIOLETTA FRENCH sworn.

Mr. Thomas came to my house to offer the shirts, and would be obliged to me to dispose of some, my husband shewed them to me, and he said seven shillings a piece; I thought some were very coarse; I offered him sixteen shillings for them; my husband paid him seventeen shillings for three of the shirts; and he brought a pair of boots, but he took them back; I bought another fine shirt of him; after dinner I saw the advertisement, and shewed it to my husband, and he went to Mr. Thomas's and to Mr. Wright's house; these are the first seven that were left in our house, and the rest of the property.

JONATHAN BROCKLEBANK sworn.

I produce twelve shirts which I had at Mr. Thomas's house; I believe Mrs. Thomas gave them me; Mr. Thomas and Mrs. French were present; they have been in Mrs. French's possession; I delivered them to her at the Justice's; they are the same I had of Thomas French; I delivered him the same I received at the office, there were some old boots, which were delivered to Mr. Wright, and a pair of new ones.

JOHN COULDER sworn.

William the prisoner came and called me, and told me he had a job for me, there was a direction on the bundle, I went and left the bundle at Eleanor Thomas's, which I am sure I received of the prisoner, and she desired me to carry them to her brother.

THOMAS BOOZEY sworn.

This is the shirt I bought of Mr. Thomas, I am sure it is the same.

(The shirts produced and deposed to.)

Brocklebank. I had the boots from Mr. Thomas, they were carried to the Rotation-office, and delivered to Mrs. French.

(The things deposed to by the prosecutor.)

The prisoner confessed the fact, no promise was made him.

The prisoner called six witnesses who all gave him a good character.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

623. ANN BARRETT was indicted for ſtealing one pint pewter pot, value 8d. the property of Robert Davis.

ROBERT DAVIS ſworn.

I ſaw a pint pot of mine in the priſoner's pocket; Ann Davis took it out.

ANN DAVIS ſworn.

I took a pint pot out of the priſoner's pocket belonging to Mr. Davis; ſhe ſaid, oh! Mrs. Davis do not ſay ſo, when I found it; ſhe often came to our houſe.

(The pot depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was very much in liquor.

The priſoner called two witneſſes to her character.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped and impriſoned ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

624. WILLIAM HASKINS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 7th day of May laſt, one pair of linen ſheets, value 2s. 6d. one blanket, value 1s. one coverlid, value 1s. one bolſter, value 1s. the property of Edward Hale, being in a certain lodging room, in a certain houſe of one John Ramſbotham, let by contract to him.

MARY HALE ſworn.

Theſe are houſes in truſt for my uſe, Mr. John Ramſbotham is my truſtee; I let the priſoner a lodging in a lower room by the week, with goods in it; I miſſed the things in the indictment, I went there a fortnight after, about the 7th or 8th of May for rent, and I looked about and miſſed the things; I aſked him about them, and he ſaid, he would get them in again in a week or ten days; he ſaid, his wife had pawned them, and he promiſed to give me ſome rent in the morning.

Did you tell him, if he would get the things again you would not proſecute him? —Yes, but that was after he ſaid he pawned the things, it was when the conſtable was there, he locked up the door, and went off afterwards; my firſt huſband bought the furniture.

JOHN NEWMAN ſworn.

I apprehended the priſoner, he was talking with Mrs. Hale, and ſhe agreed to give the priſoner a fortnight to get them again.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I had been down to Graveſend for nine days, and when I came home the back window was broke open, ſometime after that I found the ſtreet door open, I know nothing of the things going; then ſhe came and aſked me for money, and threatened to charge me, I told her to give me time, and ſhe gave me a fortnight, and in nine days ſhe put me in gaol.

The priſoner called one witneſs to his character.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

625. JOHN DELL was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the firſt day of July, twenty-ſix ſheep ſkins tanned, value 15s. one cow hide, value 15s. the property of James Vaughan, and one man's linen frock, value 2s. the property of Henry Sead.

JOHN SUFFRIEN ſworn.

I was conſtable of the night, in the morning of the 1ſt of July, about half an hour after four, the watchman called to me, and I came up juſt when the watchman had ſtopped the priſoner, he had a large raw hide, and twenty-six skins in a bundle, I have had them ever since; he said, when I asked him if he came by them honestly, you may guess that to my sorrow, but when he came to the Compter, he confessed every thing, and how he stole them; I understand he wanted to turn evidence, and I told him it would be best for him to make a full discovery.

TIMOTHY JONES sworn.

I am watchman, I saw the prisoner coming up with a bag on his shoulder; I asked him what they were, he made no answer, then he dropped the bag.

JOHN BOOTH sworn.

I am foreman to Mr. Vaughan, he is a tanner in the Grainge; when I got up in the morning I missed twenty-six sheep skins and one cow hide, it was on the 1st of July; by missing them I went round to search, and I met Mr. Suffrien, and I knew the goods by the feel, these are eleven skins in the rough, they are pressed before they go into that state, the rest were half dressed, they are much thinner by our method, and no other person makes use of our press, it is computed to be more than forty horses can draw, and it is all worked by two men and a boy; I cannot know the raw hide, but one was missing.

JOHN METER sworn.

I worked these fifteen skins, I know my own work, and there is none in the shed but mine.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

A man gave me them to carry over the water, his name is William Hall, he is somewhere in Barnaby-street.

Suffrien. There is such a man, the prisoner said so at the time.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

626. JOHN BROWN was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 1st day of July, one linen handkerchief, value 9d. the property of William Forrester.

(William Forrester called on his recognizance, and did not appear.)

WILLIAM TABERNACLE sworn.

I followed the prisoner, and I saw him pick the prosecutor's pocket of a handkerchief; I stopped him, and took the handkerchief from him and gave it to the constable.

WILLIAM WARREN sworn.

I produce the handkerchief marked W. F.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was coming up Holborn, I had been drinking.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

---

627. WILLIAM HAYWARD was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 26th day of May last, one linen handkerchief, value 10d. the property of a person unknown.

GABRIEL JOHNSON sworn.

The 26th of last May, the day the children walked to St. Paul's; I saw the prisoner in company with three more, follow a gentleman, and at the corner of St. Paul's, I saw him put his hand into a gentleman's pocket, and take a handkerchief; I went to the prisoner, and told the gentleman, he said, he lived at No. 11, Clifford's Inn, he was an attorney.

JOHN CLARKE sworn.

I took the prisoner.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

There was a great mob of people together, and that gentleman laid hold of me, but the gentleman that lost his handkerchief, ſaid, I was not the perſon, and he would not appear againſt me.

The priſoner called four witneſſes who gave him a very good character.

Court to Johnſon. You ſaw him come you ſay with three more?——I am perfectly clear that he was the perſon, I have no doubt, I took the handkerchief out of his hand.

Priſoner. I never had the handkerchief in my hand.

GUILTY.

He was recommended by the Jury.

Whipped.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

628. HARRIOT KIRBY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 19th day of February laſt, one ſilk gown and coat, value 10s. one other gown, value 5s. one pair of ſtays, value 15s. one ſtriped petticoat, value 1s. one ſilk cloak, value 3s. one ſilk bonnet, value 2s. one pair of gloves, value 1s. one muſlin apron, value 2s. one other muſlin apron, value 1s. one other apron, value 2s. one other apron, value 6d. three ſhifts, value 2s. ſix tea ſpoons, value 10s. one linen ſheet, value 3s. one handkerchief, value 1s. one other handkerchief, value 6d. and two ſhillings in monies numbered, the property of James Tomlinſon, in the dwelling houſe of Mary Barrett.

MARY TOMLINSON ſworn.

I did live at the time of this robbery, at No. 39, Greek-ſtreet, St. Ann's, in the dwelling houſe of Mary Barrett, my huſband's Chriſtian name is James, I loſt all the things mentioned in the indictment, which were worth more than they are there valued; they were taken out of the houſe on the 21ſt of February, between ſeven and eight in the morning, I had ſome of them the night before, and the priſoner folded them up, and the reſt were all in the back parlour: I am ſure the ſtriped petticoat was there the night before, and the ſpoons and my cloak, I miſſed nothing elſe at that time, the priſoner left me to fetch ſome wood to light the fire, and did not return; ſhe was a nurſe to me; after ſhe had been gone half an hour my huſband got up, and the firſt things we miſſed, were the ſpoons, and then we ſaw one drawer open, and nothing in it, and we looked further, and found all the things gone that are ſpecified.

JAMES THOMLINSON ſworn.

The tea ſpoons, and the petticoat, and the cloak, I know were in the houſe the night before, I firſt miſſed the ſpoon, and then the other things, then I went to all the pawnbrokers in the neighbourhood, and I found a white marſeilles petticoat at the houſe of Mr. Fair, ſome of the other things I have had ſince, they were found at Mr. Morris's.

——— MORRIS ſworn.

I produce a gown and coat, I received them the 28th of February, I am not poſitive to the priſoner, I have not ſeen the perſon from that day to this to my knowledge; I gave her a duplicate, it was in the name of Collins, I have got nothing elſe.

JAMES COLLINS ſworn.

I produce a white marſeilles quilted petticoat, which I received the 19th February from the priſoner, it was pawned with me for ſix ſhillings.

Another pawnbroker produced a flannel coat pawned by the priſoner the 13th of April.

(The things depoſed to.)

Proſecutrix. The apron the priſoner had before her was mine, and my ſhift was found in her room, I cannot get any account of the tea ſpoons, ſhe ſaid, ſhe pledged them in the Strand, for half a guinea.

Court. What did you ſay to her?—She begged begged first of me for mercy, I told her if she would let me know where there was any of my property, if it lay in my power I would.

Court. Then say nothing about it.

Prisoner. I have nothing to say in my defence, but I beg for mercy, my witnesses are not here now.

GUILTY, 39s.

To be confined to hard labour three years in the House of Correction.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Justice BULLER.

---

629. ANN BROOKS was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 15th day of June, two linen sheets, value 3s. two linen shirts, value 2s. two linen shifts, value 18d. two cloth aprons, value 12d. two check aprons, value 12d. one lawn handkerchief, value 6d. two ditto, value 6d. one neckcloth, value 2d. one frock, value 6d. two children's linen pin cloths, value 6d. a child's clout, value 3d. a child's shirt, value 2d. a child's gown, value 6d. a man's cloth coat, value 4s. a woman's cloth cloak, value 6d. a woman's bed gown, value 3d. the property of Francis Hunt.

SARAH GREEN sworn.

I am next door neighbour to the prosecutor, I stood at my door, and I saw the prisoner on the 15th of June, come out of the prosecutor's house with a bundle in her hand, and a red cloak spread over it; I looked after her, and when she got to the end of the alley, she turned to her left hand towards Whitechapel, and the prosecutor's wife came, and said, she was robbed, and her door broke open; and the prisoner was pursued and brought back with the property in her lap, by Samuel Clements; I am positive it is the same woman I saw come out of the house.

SAMUEL CLEMENTS sworn.

I pursued and brought back the prisoner by the description of the last witness, with the property in her apron; when I overtook her, I asked her what she had in her apron, she said it was nothing to me, and she would not tell me.

Prisoner. When he took me, I told him a woman gave them to me to carry to the Minories, for a pot of beer.

Court to Clements. Is that so?——No,

PATIENCE HUNT sworn.

I went out and locked the kitchen door, and took the key; these things were then in the kitchen, I found the door opened when I returned, I am sure of the coat, for my husband had never another.

Prisoner. I had only lain in a fortnight.

GUILTY.

To be confined to hard labour one year in the House of Correction.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Justice HEATH.

---

630. JOSEPH BOSSEY was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 19th day of June last, two coach door glasses, value 20s. two cloth coach seats, value 20s. one hammer cloth, value 3s. and one coach carpet, value 12d. the property of Thomas Bettesworth.

——— DEACON sworn.

I am coachman to Mr. Bettesworth, in Black Horse-yard, Osborn-place; on Saturday se'nnight between twelve and one my coach was waiting at Vauxhall for some company, and me and my fellow servant went in to get a little refreshment we were not in above twenty minutes, and my fellow servant went out, and said, the carriage is gone; I ran out, I thought somebody had drove it away, I could not find anything of it, at last it was found the Black Dog gateway, St. Giles's, the prisoner was stopped with the glasses.

JOHN LOW sworn.

I stopped the prisoner with the glasses under his arm, at half after three in the morning.

(Produced and deposed to.)

Coachman. I know these glasses by a particular place like a hair, I have tried them to the places, and they fit.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I went out early to look for work, and a man that looked like a tradesman asked me to carry these things; I did not conceal them, I said where I got them.

Coachman. He would have been evidence against two others, but the Justice would not let him.

Watchman. I saw no man with the prisoner.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Justice BULLER.

---

631. RICHARD MYER and FRANCIS OSLAN otherwise COLSON were indicted for feloniously stealing on the 16th day of May last, one sack, value 4s. and four bushels of malt, value 20s. the property of John Lake.

SAMUEL HARRABANE sworn.

I am master of a brig at St. Catherines; on the 16th of May I received some malt from Mr. Lake, it was taken in for seventy quarters, I never saw it measured. I went away about six, and returned about ten, I left my son there.

JOHN PERRY sworn.

I am master of a vessel; I saw the sack taken after it was put into a wherry, and the prisoner Colson rowed away directly; I knew the brig belonging to the last witness, and this wherry was close to it when I saw it; he rowed to a place called the Dutch Cater, in St. Catherines; I immediately went there, and two men had got a rope round, and were hauling it up; as soon as they saw me, they undid the rope again, and the prisoner Colson rowed away; the sack was taken to a justice; I will not say I saw the other prisoner have any hand in it.

SAMUEL DAVIS sworn.

I am a ship agent and notary, I am agent for an hundred of these different kind of craft; I came home to dinner at three, and after dinner I went into Mr. Nurenberg's warehouse, between four and five, the back part of which faces the water, and I saw the prisoner Colson, whom I have known this four or five years, his employment is a waterman that plies of a night not of a day; I saw the prisoner Myer, who is the mate of the brig, and was on board the brig, and left in care of it; he appeared to be scraping up some of the corn into the sack, and Colson and him lifted the sack upon deck; I saw the sack, but could not see the letters; I saw them put it into the boat; I called to Captain Perry, who was on board his vessel, and called him on shore before ever the sack was delivered from the barge into the boat, I saw the boat go to the back-door of the Dutch Cators, and I saw a rope fixed on to the mouth of the sack, to get it up, when the man saw me he stepped from the platform, and desired the man to row along; I produce the sack, it was in my possession till it was landed; I delivered it to Justice Davis, and Captain Perry had it from the Justice. (The sack produced.) It belongs to Mr. Dixon.

PRISONER MYER's DEFENCE.

About two o'clock a person asked me to take the sack from James Conyer's, and he would come for it in two hours.

PRISONER COLSON's DEFENCE.

On Whitſun-Monday, between four and five, a young man came to me and ſaid, go down to the brig and fetch a ſack, I did ſo.

Davis. He caſt the rope off, I told him to ſtop, he did not ſay anything particular beſides; but corn is never worked without the proper legal meter; Myer never went out of the barge.

The priſoner Myer called the proſecutor to his character, who ſaid he had known him ten years, and never knew any harm of him before.

The priſoner called four witneſſes, who gave him a good character.

BOTH GUILTY.

Each Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

---

632. JOSEPH GWYNN and BENJAMIN GODDARD were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 10th day of June, ſeven yards of printed cotton, value 10s. the property of Griffith Humphreys.

The witneſſes examined apart at the deſire of the priſoners.

GRIFFITH HUMPHREYS ſworn.

I keep a ſhop in Shoreditch, I had ſome coals came in, and I left a little girl to take care of the ſhop while I went with the men, and in a few minutes I heard her cry out that goods were taken out of the ſhop; I ran after the thieves as ſhe directed, but ſaw nothing of them; I never got any of the property, I did not ſee the priſoners.

REBECCA JEWAN ſworn.

Court. How old are you?—Going on fourteen; I was putting ſome prints on the rails, I took particular notice of a flowered cotton which I miſſed, it was ſeven yards, my maſter meaſured it a day or two before; I was ſtanding by the window, and the piece of cotton lay before me, as ſoon as I miſſed it I told my maſter; I ſaw nobody come into the ſhop; I never ſaw the cotton ſince.

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Council. Did you tell the yards as he meaſured them, or did he tell you it meaſured ſo much?—He told me ſo.

PETER TOVEY ſworn.

On the 10th of June, between eight and nine, I was going to Shoreditch, and I ſaw the priſoner Goddard come out of Mr. Humphrey's ſhop, with ſomething under his coat; I cannot tell what it was; I purſued him to the end of Plumb-pudding-row, and he took it out of his coat, and put it into his apron, I loſt him after; it appeared to be linen: I ſaw him and the other priſoner in about an hour after; and I and another took them both; he had nothing with him then.

Mr. Peatt. Had you ever ſeen either of the priſoners before, to your knowledge?—Never.

There were a great many people about?—Yes.

GEORGE FERRY ſworn.

About half after eight I ſaw the priſoner Goddard come out of the ſhop with ſomething under his coat.

SAMUEL HARPER ſworn.

I took the priſoners by the deſcription of Berry.

PRISONER GODDARD's DEFENCE.

I am very innocent, I never was in any trouble.

The priſoner Goddard called two witneſſes who gave him a good character.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

633. ABR

633. ABRAHAM HARLEY was indicted for burglariously and feloniously breaking and entering the dwelling house of William Bernardieu, about the hour of two in the night, on the 18th day of May last, and burglariously stealing therein one wooden cask, containing three gallons of rum, value 20s. one other cask containing four gallons of raſberry geneva, value 18s. and four gallons of peppermint, value 16s. his property.

WILLIAM BERNARDIEU ſworn.

On the 18th of May laſt, I went into my cellar, and I found a hole cut in the brick-work in the wall, two feet one inch one way, and three feet ſix inches another way, there was a frame in that brick-work, which was taken out entirely, I ſaw the place the day before, between one and two, it was very ſafe; then I went and looked into the cellar where I keep my liquors, and I miſſed the things mentioned in the indictment: I ſaw the caſk firſt in cuſtody of the conſtable, there was the names of Thorp and Thornton on it, and about three gallons of rum in it and a pint, it was the wall of the back yard; my ground is encloſed with a wooden fence, and there is a paſſage goes through.

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Council. You ſay about half paſt two, Sir?—Yes.

It was quite light then?—No, Sir.

If anybody had been there could you have diſtinguiſhed them?—In the yard I could, every door and part was faſtened the night before.

That paſſage is a common thoroughfare?—Yes.

GEORGE FERRY ſworn.

I am ſervant to one Mr. Pointer in Shoreditch, about half after five the 18th of May, I ſaw this young man and another, the priſoner had a keg on his head, the other parted from him; when I went to him he put the caſk on the ground and ran away: it has been in my poſſeſſion ever ſince.

(Depoſed to.)

JOHN GREENWOOD ſworn.

On Wedneſday the 18th of May, I got up at four in the morning, and about five I ſaw the priſoner running very faſt, and I heard ſomebody call out ſtop thief, I caught the priſoner, he ſaid for God's ſake let me go; I ſecured him.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

They ſcratched the caſk at the Juſtice's, to know it again.

Court to Proſecutor. Is your cellar under lock and key?—Yes.

The priſoner called five witneſſes, who gave him a good character.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing, but not of the burglary.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

634. THOMAS CHUTE BROWN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 4th day of June laſt, one cloth livery waiſtcoat trimmed with gold lace, value 20s. and one man's hat trimmed with gold lace, value 10s. the property of our Lord the King.

JAMES BILLING ſworn.

I am one of the King's coachmen, on the 4th of June I was out of town, I only prove the property.

AGNES M'DONALD ſworn.

I aſſiſted the houſehold that day, being a buſy day; I aſſiſted at the ſuttling-houſe, St. James's, and I perceived the priſoner coming down ſtairs, I thought he was a ſtrange man, and ſeemed to have rather a bulk about his breaſt; I was ſpeaking to ſome of the ſerjeants; and I ſpoke to the priſoner, he ſaid he was going out; I deſired to ſpeak to him firſt; and I took him into into the house and unbuttoned his coat, and found the waistcoat on one side, and the hat on the other; there are only bed-chambers up stairs, the gentlewoman and her two daughters live there.

(The things deposed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

It is the first crime I ever committed, I was so much in liquor, I did not know what I did.

Court to M'Donald. Was the man in liquor?—He was in liquor, he seemed to be in liquor, and he told me yesterday that a woman directed him up stairs, he begged to get off when I charged him with the things.

CHARLES MONITER sworn.

I am a serjeant in the thirty-sixth regiment of foot, the regiment is at Madrass, in the East-Indies; the prisoner is a recruit of mine, he was enlisted twelve days or a fortnight before this affair happened; he behaved himself remarkably well, I never saw anything amiss in the young fellow before, he behaved very well, every thing becoming a soldier, the recruits will not go to the East-Indies till next Christmas.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped and discharged.

Court to the Serjeant. Will you take this man again?—Yes, my Lord, I will take him with me.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

635. WILLIAM WARRICK was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 27th day of May last, 200lb. weight of rags, value 30s. the property of Henry Fourdrinier, William Bloxham, and Joseph Walker.

HENRY FOURDRINIER sworn.

I am partner with William Bloxham, and Joseph Walker, we purchase great quantities of rags, and sell them out in the wholesale way, our warehouse is in Sherbone-lane.

WILLIAM ANDERSON sworn.

I let the prosecutor a warehouse in Anchor-ally, Three Crane wharf, for putting rags in; on the 27th of May, in the afternoon between four and five, I came to my house at the bottom of Anchor-alley, I looked up the alley, and I saw my warehouse door open, I saw three men come out of it, the two first with a bag of rags, the third was the prisoner, he had nothing upon him, but locked the door and put the key in his pocket; I immediately followed and called to him to know where he had got that key, and who sent him for rags, he called back, and said, Mr. Swain had sent him for the rags; Mr. Swain is the prosecutor's clerk, and takes care of the rags, I desired him to shew me the key, and he would not, I overtook him and apprehended him, and took him to the prosecutor's house, but in going I had my eye upon two men that carried the bags all the way, and I saw them go up a narrow passage and throw them down, they are here, I put a mark upon them.

Court to Prosecutor. Did you know the prisoner before?—Yes.

What is he?——He is a labouring man, and has done business for us frequently, I never intrusted him with the key, Mr. Anderson kept the key; when I saw the prisoner at the Compter, I believe somebody told him it would be better for him to confess.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I had been at the wharf, and two men were before me about fifty yards, and Mr. Anderson was fifty yards behind me; he called me to give him the key, I told him I had no key, if I had I should give it it to Mr. Swain, he searched me, I had no key.

JOHN GOAD sworn.

I am a porter at the Three Cranes, I work for Mr. Wilson, on the 27th of May, I saw two men with these two bags of rags on their backs, and the prisoner was just coming down stairs locking the warehouse door, Mr. Anderson called to him for the key, he said, he would not shew it him, nor would not shew it anybody but Mr. Swain; Mr. Anderson passed me insisting on seeing the key, I went up the alley, and there stood the two bags of rags, and Mr. Anderson gave me charge of him.

Jury. Did you see these men come out of the warehouse with the bags, before the prisoner locked the door?——I did not.

How far were they from the warehouse?——About thirty yards.

Prisoner. I never had any key to lock the door.

Jury. Did you see a key?——No, the door was open, and I saw him put it too.

Can you swear to the property?—It is impossible.

GUILTY.

To be whipped, and imprisoned six months in Newgate.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. Justice HEATH.

---

636. JOHN BROWN otherwise AUSTIN alias ASTILL was indicted for burglariously and feloniously breaking and entering the dwelling house of Thomas Knott, about the hour of three in the night, on the 10th day of January last, and burglariously stealing therein, three hundred yards of silk lace, called blond lace, value 30l. three hundred yards of other lace, value 30l. five hundred yards of thread lace, value 5l. one hundred pieces of ribbon, value 15l. one hundred yards of mode, value 5l. forty-eight pair of stockings, value 3l. twenty-four pair of thread stockings, value 3l. 12s. and sixty pair of gloves, value 3l. his property.

The Case opened by Mr. Knowles.

DAVID WILLIAMS sworn.

I am servant to Mr. Knott, I remember the house being broke open, I slept in the house that night, it was on Monday the 10th of January, or Tuesday the 11th of January, at three in the morning; I fastened the lower part of the house doors and windows, when I got up in the morning, the street door was drawn too, and another little door, I am sure they were shut over night, the window was broke in the morning but safe at night, I found two large crows, and some candles, and matches, and tinder, on the counter in the shop, and a gimblet.

Mr. Garrow, Prisoner's Council. You did not fasten that window yourself?—No.

You do not know whether it was fast?—No, the maid fastened that, the goods taken were to the value of six or seven hundred pounds.

MOSES EMANUEL sworn.

I know the prosecutor.

Do you know the prisoner?——No, my wife saw him.

SARAH EMANUEL sworn.

I know the prisoner, I saw him the 11th of January, in Mr. Levy's room, he was sitting on the bed side, he was doing nothing, he was playing with Mr. Levy's little girl.

What was there in the room particular?——Some lace and ribbons.

What conversation passed?—There was a dispute about the lace and the ribbons, between Waters, Summers, Lucas, and this gentleman.

What gentleman?—The prisoner, this gentleman had very little to do with it, he said, it was agreeable to let them go at two shillings and three pence a dozen, that was about the ribbon.

Were the ribbons diſpoſed of there?——Yes, at Mr. Levy's.

Who was in company?—Lucas, Waters, and Summers, and theſe men were in the room; they were convicted a ſeſſions or two ago.

Was there any converſation where it came from or anything of the priſoner?—Yes, Waters ſaid, it came from Covent-Garden.

Did the priſoner contradict that?—No.

Court. How much did they ſell Levy in the whole?——The ribbons came to ſix pounds nineteen ſhillings, and the lace to forty guineas.

Mr. Garrow. How much of this bargain had you?—Nothing.

I believe you was to have half?—No, I had no half.

You was to have had?——You are welcome to ſay what you pleaſe, you are welcome to ſcold.

Was not the original bargain that you was to have half of theſe?—Yes.

So Lewis bilked you?—I do not underſtand that word.

They cheated you of your bargain?——I did not know any of their bargain, when I knew how they were got, I did not want half.

So Waters told this young man, that the things came from Covent Garden?—They ſaid that the buſineſs ſhould be done quick, on account of it's being ſo near Bow-ſtreet.

MOSES LEVY ſworn.

Do you know the priſoner?——I cannot poſitively ſay, I ſaw a man that looked very much like him, it is ſix months ago, I have ſeen ſo many thouſands of people, it is impoſſible for me to ſwear poſitively to him.

Court to Mrs. Emanuel. What time of the day was it you ſaw him at Levy's?—It was in the afternoon.

What time?—Between twelve and one.

JUDITH LEVY ſworn.

I cannot ſwear to the priſoner, I aſſure you, I never ſaw the man before with my eyes, and I never ſaw him ſince, I told Sir Sampſon Wright the ſame, I do not really think he is the man.

Mr. Garrow. Had you a longer opportunity of obſerving the man that did come than Mrs. Emanuel?—I was up and down in the place, I was there before ſhe came, and I really believe this is not the man.

PATRICK M'MANUS ſworn.

I apprehended the priſoner, we had been after him very often, and I took him into cuſtody, the property has never been produced, Levy produced the property before.

Court to Jury. Gentlemen, there is no caſe at all made out againſt the priſoner.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

637. ALEXANDER DILLYON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 18th of May laſt, one iron anvil, value 20s. the property of Edward Smith.

EDWARD SMITH ſworn.

I live in Clerkenwell, I loſt an iron anvil the 18th of May laſt, out of the ſhop that I work in, it was taken away in the night, it was paſt nine when I was in the ſhop, I locked up the doors and it was gone, in the morning I found it.

——— WILMOT ſworn.

The priſoner ordered this anvil to be brought to my maſter's, Thomas Marſh, No. 2, King-ſtreet, for ſale; on the 25th of May the priſoner offered it for ſale, it was not ſold, I ſtopped it, I knew it to be ſtolen, for I appraiſed the priſoner into the ſhop; the priſoner ſaid, he ſold it for himſelf, and then I took him to the conſtable.

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Council. Did he ſay anything to you about a man having employed employed him about this anvil?——He might ſay ſomething.

But did he?——Yes.

What was that?——He ſaid a man gave him that anvil to part with, it has never been out of my cuſtody, but ſince I have had it here it has been in the cuſtody of others at the public houſe.

WILLIAM HICKMAN ſworn.

My maſter Thomas Smith called me from work, to go into Black-horſe-court, Fleet-ſtreet, No. 10, up one pair of ſtairs, that there was the anvil I miſſed from the ſhop; I went there and the priſoner opened the door, and he and another man helped me with the anvil, and he and another man came along with me.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was going to Wapping, and met a young man, and we went to a public houſe, he ſaid, he had ſomething that would ſuit me in my way; I aſked him what it was, he ſaid; it was an anvil, I told him I was not in buſineſs for myſelf, he aſked me to ſell it for him, and ſo he ſent me to Black-horſe-court; I went there, and there was the anvil, and I went to that man's maſter to ſell it, and they ſtopped me, and aſked me whether it was mine, and I ſaid it was, becauſe it was in my charge; I did not ſtay till the man came, which I told them would be there at ſeven o'clock, and the man made off.

SARAH SMITH ſworn.

Do you know anything about a man's calling reſpecting this anvil?—Yes, a man aſked me if I knew Dillyon, I told him I did, by calling at my father's, and he ſaid, he had brought that anvil for Dillyon to keep it till he called; Dillyon did call, the man in the evening called about four or five for the money, I do not know the man, he called after the priſoner was taken up, I told him he was taken up, he ſaid, he knew where it was, he would go to the priſoner, I never ſaw him afterwards; I have known the priſoner theſe two years, he is a very honeſt young man, and attentive to his buſineſs, I never heard anything againſt him, he kept very good hours.

The priſoner called three more witneſſes who all gave him a very good character.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

638. DAVID BRANDON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 24th day of May laſt, 500lb. weight of lead, value 3l. belonging to Chamberlain Birch, then and there fixed to a certain building of the ſaid Chamberlain againſt the ſtatute.

CHAMBERLAIN BIRCH ſworn.

I live at Stamford-hill, in the pariſh of St. John Hackney, I loſt a quantity of lead, in May about the 16th, it was firſt miſſed, on about the 19th there was a ſecond quantity miſſed, and about the 22d a third quantity, I then agreed to give one of my men a guinea, and my neighbour ſet ſome of his men to watch.

CHARLES WARRINGTON ſworn.

I am ſervant to the proſecutor, I was ſet up to watch, my maſter being ſo often robbed, and another man with me, at ten we went into the barn, about half paſt eleven ſomebody came at top and began taking off the tiles, and threw a piece down, then the watch came paſt twelve, he ſtood ſtill a good while, then he went to work again, and coming down I went and took him, two pieces of lead laid juſt by, which he had upon his ſhoulders, that he threw down; I ſtopped him, and clapped a piſtol to him, ſays he, I am taken I ſee, I wiſh you had ſhot me dead.

Who was the man?—The priſoner, he never got away from me till I put him into the cage.

How much lead had he got?——Five ſcore pounds at that time.

(The lead produced.)

Priſontr.

Prisoner. I am a farmer's man, I have been out of work and had no money, a large dog came rushing through, and to get out of the way of the dog I got upon the barn, there might be twenty people there, I have no witnesses.

Jury. Did you see anybody upon the premises?—I heard him go up, I saw him throw down one piece, and when he came with the second he went away.

GUILTY.

To be whipped and confined six months in the House of Correction.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. Justice BULLER.

---

639. WILLIAM SEDDON was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 23d of June, one linen cap, value 4s. one linen housewife, value 2d. one silk handkerchief, value 5s. one linen handkerchief, value 2d. and two shillings in monies numbered, the property of Hannah Barker.

Hannah Barker and another witness called on their recognizances, and they not appearing the prisoner was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. Justice HEATH.

---

640. CORNELIUS MARNEY was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 13th of June, ten iron bars, value 10s. belonging to Henry Dagge, Esq; then and there fixed to a certain building of the said Henry, against the statute.

THOMAS SAUSUM sworn.

I know the prisoner, I am watchman at Mr. Dagge's cow-house, the 12th of this month I found a bag of iron bars laid after ten o'clock under the house, I let it lay, expecting the person to come for it; I watched and saw the prisoner come, that is the man, he went under the cow-house, at two in the morning he took it upon his shoulders; I clapped him upon the shoulder, and asked him if he was come for his bag, he said aye; he could give no account at all; I took him in to custody.

JOHN EDMONDS sworn.

I am smith to Mr. Dagge, I made these bars, and know they are his; I placed these bars in the green-house copper hole, I tried them there, and they fitted, they are the same I placed; and here are two or three of the bars particularly marked, I can swear to them: I saw them there about a fortnight or three weeks before.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I went out to look for a day's work, and I thought it too early, and seeing this shed just by the foot-way, I went in to lay down for an hour or two, and in this shed there was some hay, and I thought to lay down in the hay, and this gentleman desired me not to stir, I said no, I shall not stir, I am going to lay down: but I am as innocent of the fact as a child unborn.

Court to Jury. Gentlemen, this indictment is founded on a statute for stealing a quantity of iron fixed to a dwelling-house, now the fact that is proved is, that it was not fixed to the dwelling-house, but fixed to the cow-house, and afterwards found in the cow-house, and though it is very probable the prisoner was the person who did wrench them: it would have been an offence at common law, but upon this evidence as applied to this indictment you must acquit the prisoner.

NOT GUILTY.

Court. Let him be detained till the gaol delivery.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. Justice HEATH.

641. JAME

641. JAMES MOFFATT was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 24th day of June, one ſilver watch, value 40s. and one pair of ſilver ſhoe buckles, value 10s. the property of Edward Cox, in the dwelling-houſe of Thomas Simpſon.

EDWARD COX ſworn.

I am lately come from ſea; on Friday night laſt I loſt my watch and buckles at my lodgings in Cable-ſtreet; I loſt them between ſeven and eight, it was a ſilver watch.

What was it worth?——It coſt me three pounds, the buckles had ſilver tongues and chapes, they coſt 30s. I was ſitting on the ſtair-caſe reſting myſelf, I was not in liquor, nor in ſleep; the priſoner aſked me for a quartern of gin, and I immediately went into my room, I found my door ſhut, and the priſoner immediately ran down ſtairs, he did not ſpeak to me; I found my cheſt broke open; the priſoner had been a ſhip-mate of mine, he had been in my room ſeveral times before, I let him lay with me the night before, we have been pretty much together for this week, ſince I firſt ſaw him in London, I had not ſeen him years before; I ſaw him the next day and took him into cuſtody, he was talking with a girl to make up matters to go to ſleep with her; and he gave me two falls, he had like to have got away from me; on the Sunday morning I aſked him for my property, he ſaid if he had thirty pounds, he would give it me, then he told me he had ſold my buckles for fourteen ſhillings, and pawned my watch for fifteen ſhillings.

HENRY BAKER ſworn.

I have the buckles, the priſoner came into my maſter's ſhop on Monday night, between eight and nine, he told me he had a pair of buckles to ſell, I took them of him and knocked out the wire, I told him they came to fourteen ſhillings and ſixpence, I gave him the money for them.

SARAH BURGESS ſworn.

This man came to my houſe between eleven and twelve, with a young woman I knew very well, he aſked me to lend him five ſhillings, I did not know him; he ſaid he would leave his watch till morning; I did not know it was ſtolen; then he came in the morning and told me to go and pawn the watch for ten ſhillings, he gave five ſhillings, and I gave him five, the next morning when they told me about it, I delivered ten ſhillings to fetch it out of pawn, the officer is not here.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I have nothing to ſay.

Court to Sarah Burgeſs. What is the value of the watch?——He valued it at two pounds.

Court to Proſecutor. Did you ever borrow things of each other?——No never, I never lent him any thing, but I have paid money for him, and given him victuals.

GUILTY 39s.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

642. JANE CURFEY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 6th day of June, one pair of linen ſheets, value 6s. two linen bed curtains, value 5s. the property of Matthew Heſley, being in a certain lodging room let by him to her, to be uſed with the ſaid lodgings, againſt the ſtatute.

MATTHEW HESLEY ſworn.

My wife let the lodgings to the priſoner, ſhe came to me as a married woman, but when ſhe came to the rotation office ſhe denied her marriage, I miſſed the ſheet and curtains, I did not ſee them for three weeks before I miſſed them, I found them afterwards at the pawnbroker's.

JOHN EDWARDS ſworn.

I am a pawn-broker, on the 26th of May laſt the priſoner pawned a pair of ſheets with me, I am poſitive to her.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

The proſecutor's wife gave me leave ſeveral times to pawn the ſheets, as ſhe knew I was in diſtreſs; ſhe knew they were pawned, but I had words with her, then ſhe took me up, I had not left the lodgings.

Proſecutor. My wife is ſick in bed, I do not know that ſhe gave her leave, the priſoner never mentioned a word of it.

Edwards. She has pawned them with me frequently.

GUILTY

To be privately whipped and impriſoned ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

---

643. RICHARD WARD was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 25th day of May, one flannel dreſſing jacket, value 5s. one cotton quilted jacket, value 10s. one waiſtcoat, value 2s. one other waiſtcoat, value 5s. one pair of ſhoe buckles, value 12s. one pair of knee buckles, value 3s. the property of Benjamin Barnet, Eſquire.

WILLIAM ROCHELL ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. Barnet, he loſt the things mentioned in the indictment, on the 25th of May between eleven and twelve, I ſaw them that morning, I had them in my hand in the dreſſing-room joining to the road, the wearing apparel was found directly after on the road, except the buckles, ſome of the things were found under the window.

ROBERT MARSH ſworn.

A little after eleven on Wedneſday the 25th of May I was going to Hampſtead Heath, towards the Spaniards; juſt before the wall of the proſecutor's houſe I ſaw the priſoner getting out of the window, when he ſaw me he dropped ſome of the things, I cried out ſtop thief, ſome people came out of the Spaniards, I purſued him to Kentiſh Town, and he was taken laying under ſome pales of a gentleman's yard; I took him into cuſtody, the priſoner is the perſon I ſaw getting out of the window.

SEBASTIAN THOMAS ſworn.

I live at the Spaniards, I heard the cry of ſtop thief on this day, and I ſaw the priſoner run by, the laſt witneſs was after him, I ran, but I loſt ſight of him; Mr. Marſh was coming home, near Mr. Barnet's window I ſaw his dreſſing jacket and things lay, I called to the ſervants, and one of them came and took them, they were about a foot and an half from the window; in about ten minutes they brought back the priſoner, I knew him directly, I am ſure he is the man.

GEORGE MARTIN ſworn.

I picked up a pair of buckles in Mr. Wolfin's yard, Kentiſh Town, between three and four in the afternoon; I purſued the priſoner, and held him, I ſaw him put his hand into his pocket.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

Sir, I am a lath render. I ſaw that man crying out ſtop thief, I went to ſee if there was a thief, and they knocked me down; he ſaid he loſt ſight of me, and he ſaid to the old gentleman, do not bother me, whether it is him or no, I will ſwear to him.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

644. THOMAS BREASE was indicted for feloniouſly breaking and entering

ing the dwelling house of Richard Plaistow, about the hour of eight in the afternoon, on the 12th of May last, no person being therein, and feloniously stealing therein one patent stove, value 30s. and two china pedestals and vases, value 2s. and two images, value 2s. and one kitchen fender, value 5s. his property.

And ELIZABETH TIMERTH was indicted for feloniously receiving two china images, value 2s. being part of the same goods, knowing them to be stolen.

(The witnesses examined apart.)

JOHN CAMMELL sworn.

What is the prosecutor?——General Plaistow. I was charged with the care of the General's house; I saw the thieves go in and come out; I believe I was the last person that left the house, I am not sure, I double locked the door.

Were there any children in the house?—No, the door was double locked the day before, I believe nobody was that day in the house but the thieves; on the Wednesday night I saw the prisoner Brease, and a chimney-sweeper go in without anything; the house has been inhabited by the General some time since, but there has been an addition lately, and some things were there, they were General Plaistow's: about half after eight, or within a few minutes, I saw a fellow with a porter's knot on his back, at opposite the General's door; then the prisoner came up soon after, and they walked into the house as regular as if they had a key, in three minutes they came out, and seized the prisoner with a grate on his back; I do not know the name of them, I believe they are called patent stoves; I found this pick-lock key on the prisoner, which opens the door; the next day at the prisoner's lodgings, we found two china images at the lodging of the man prisoner; I said they were his, and the woman of the house told me so.

HENRY CROCKER sworn.

I am constable of St. Pancras, where this robbery was committed, I went to the lodgings of the man and woman prisoners, they both lodged together, when I came there, I found those two china images, they have been in Cammell's possession ever since.

GEORGE BOYDEN sworn.

I am watch-house-keeper, I produce these pick-lock keys.

FRANCIS PLAISTOW sworn.

I am the General's son, I have surveyed these images, and they are my father's property, I believe them to be his, I entertain no doubt about it: the stove is called a patent stove.

WILLIAM COVENTEN sworn.

I am a tripeman, I have known the prisoner Brease fifteen or sixteen years.

What has been his general character the last year or two?—Very indifferent.

RACHAEL SALISBURY sworn.

I have but little to say about the fellow, but Betty Timerth I have known these twenty-three years.

Court to Jury. Gentlemen, a dwelling house is within the intent and meaning of the act of parliament an inhabited house, it appears in evidence here, that the prosecutor had left this house, and left some furniture, but never had an intention of returning, so that if this house had been broke open in the night time, it would not have been a burglary; therefore you must acquit him of the capital part of the charge.

THOMAS BREASE GUILTY of stealing.

Transported for seven years.

ELIZABETH TIMERTH, NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. Justice HEATH.

---

5. JOHN ALLSO was indicted for burglariously and feloniously breaking and and entering the dwelling houſe of George Rochead, about the hour of eight at night on the 28th of April laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, three mahogany backs of chairs unfiniſhed, value 14s. his property.

GEORGE ROCHEAD ſworn.

I am a chair maker, I keep a houſe, on the 28th of April at eight at night, the ſpring latch of my fore door was lifted up, it was not bolted, and three mahogany chair backs were taken away, the door was on the lock or ſpring latch I cannot aſcertain which, after that, that was bolted, I ſaw the chair backs that evening, I had them in my hand, I miſſed them the next morning at ſeven; I left my ſhop about eight in the evening, they were there then.

Is your ſhop part of your houſe?—The lower part of the houſe under the ſame roof, I cannot tell how they were loſt, I judge they were taken from the time the door was left on the ſpring latch, which was from eight to ten; I left nobody in the ſhop, the ſtreet door was locked at ten, there is no door to the ſhop, it was taken off for the ſake of room, but it is the firſt room on the right hand, the ſtreet door was bolted next morning, nobody in the houſe but my wife and me, I got the backs of the chairs again that day fortnight, they were brought to my houſe, and offered to me for ſale by one of the witneſſes, John Oliver; I aſked him how he came by them, he ſaid he had them from one John Allſo, a carpenter and joiner; I ſtopped him and took him to the Rotation-office, the Juſtice gave him liberty to find the man, in the courſe of the week following; and he found him in the Weſtminſter Hoſpital, and he was not in a fit caſe to be moved.

What was the matter with the priſoner?—He had two broken ribs, and was not fit to be moved, two days after they gave us leave to bring him away in a coach, I never ſaw the priſoner before.

——— LEE ſworn.

I know nothing more than taking charge of Oliver with the property.

——— COCKERILL ſworn.

I went to the hoſpital, and ſaw the priſoner as the other witneſs has related.

JOHN OLIVER ſworn.

The priſoner was the man that brought the backs of the chairs, and left them at my houſe, he neither offered them for ſale, nor was there any money advanced upon them, he at the ſame time owed me money which he promiſed to pay, but did not; I kept the things for many days after, and not ſeeing or hearing of him, being diſtreſſed for money, and looking upon the property to be his; I took the things to the proſecutor's as the only man I knew of the trade, I offered them for ſale to him, I always looked upon the priſoner to be a very honeſt man.

Proſecutor. That evening I was at work on ſome mahogany chairs of the very pattern that were taken away, they were unfiniſhed.

Court. Had you done anything to theſe mahogany backs that evening?—No, but I had them in my hand that evening, I ſhewed them to the carpenter, the carver went away at half paſt ſeven.

The remainder of this Trial in the next Part which will be publiſhed in a few Days

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commission of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middlesex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wednesday the 29th of JUNE, 1785, and the following Days;

Being the SIXTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER VI. PART III.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noster Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of John Allſo.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

On Thurſday or Friday the latter part of April 1785; I, John Allſo, with intent to buy a pair of ſhoes of him, went to Mr. Oliver, No. 10, St. Clement's-lane; and was recommended by him to a friend of his in Field-lane, Holborn; returning home, I found three mahogany backs of chairs, between Fetter-lane, and Chancery-lane: I then in conſequence thereof, went to Mr. Oliver's and acquainted him therewith, he agreed they ſhould remain there, in expectation of their being advertiſed; after waiting eight or nine days, and not being advertiſed, I thought it would be proper to advertize them, in order to find the owner, the intended advertiſement I accordingly drew up, as follows, viz.

"To all maſter mahogany chair-makers, "who have loſt any chair backs, wholly "framed and glazed, the back legs not "finiſhed carving, may ſee them at No. "10, the corner of Plough-court, St. Cle-"ment's-lane, and proving their property "therein, may have them again, on pay-"ing the expences, &c.——They were "found between Fetter-lane, and Chan-"cery-lane, Holborn.

On the 13th of May, I had the intended advertiſement ready, and meant then to have delivered it to the printer, but unluckily on that day fell, by treading on a piece of orange peal, on ſtone ſteps, and broke three of my ribs, and on the 11th was carried to the Weſtminſter Infirmary, being in inexpreſſible agony, ſoon after after which I ſent to Mr. Oliver, who came two or three times to ſee me, and the laſt time of his coming compelled me to go with him before a Magiſtrate (Juſtice Girdler) concerning the ſaid chair backs—Then and there to my ſurpriſe, I found that Mr. Oliver had been endeavouring to ſell them unknown to me.—So that by his miſconduct, I was ſent to New Priſon, innocent I am of any crime reſpecting this affair, as the child unborn.—The above misfortune prevented me from publiſhing the intended advertiſement, which I produced to the conſtable.—I was very unfit to be moved from the hoſpital to New Priſon; the removal cauſed me to be confined to my bed three weeks; notwithſtanding the care and ſkill of the doctor, and the indulgence and kindneſs of the wardſman to whom I render my ſincere thanks.

Ca

Court to Oliver. Did the priſoner tell you how he found them, or how he came by them?——He did not, if he did I being deaf, I did not hear him.

Were they left with you on account of the debt that was due to you?——No, by no means in the world, they were only left in my houſe till he called for them.

How came you to ſell them?——Being diſtreſſed for money, and to pay myſelf what he owed me.

Then you had no authority from him to do that?—No, I never heard any more of him.

When did you receive the chairs?——I cannot ſay.

How many days did you keep them before you carried them to Rockhead?——I kept them near a fortnight.

Did you get them in the morning or evening?—About ſix in the evening.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

646. MARY BECK was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 23d of May nine yards of thread lace, value 4l. 10s. nine yards of other thread lace, value 3l. 12s. ſeventeen yards and half of other thread lace, value 5l. ſeven yards and half of other thread lace, value 36s. eight yards and half of other lace, value 40s. four yards of other lace, value 4s. two yards and half of other lace, value 4s. the property of Conſtant de Charmæ.

CONSTANT DE CHARMÆ ſworn.

I am a lace merchant, and keep private rooms in Nauſſau-ſtreet, I charged the priſoner with robbing me to a very great amount, ſhe had been with me about eight months as a ſervant, we had a falſe character of her, we ſaw the things that were loſt perhaps four or five days before, they were kept in ſome drawers in a lace preſs, with the other laces; I miſſed them on the 23d of May, the drawers was ſtill locked.

ANN PENNINGTON ſworn.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. I believe you was taken up for ſtealing this lace?—Not for ſtealing it.

Court. That is only to her credit.

Mr. Garrow. I ſubmit it goes a great deal further, it will go to her competency, to prevent her being let in now, ſhe is the principal felon, there is no ground at preſent.

Court. What are you?—A ſervant out of place, I lived with a painter and glazier, in St. James's-ſtreet, Covent Garden, at Mr. Saint Clare's, I was out of place at the time this lace was taken away; I went to drink tea with the priſoner Molly, and ſhe aſked me if I would ſell ſome lace for her, I aſked her how ſhe came by it, ſhe ſaid it was given her by a perſon who came from abroad, I ſold them for her, and ſhe had the money, I delivered it to Mrs. Samuel, ſhe ſold it, ſhe lives in St. Martin's-lane, I do not know how much there was, but I can tell you how much money there was, it was thread lace, a piece of lappeting at four ſhillings a yard.

How much money was it?—Firſt ſhe had thirty-four ſhillings, then ſhe had a guinea, and next eleven ſhillings.

Do you remember the quantity of lace?—I cannot ſay.

Was it once, or twice, or three times?——Three times.

Mr. Garrow. The lace that you received, you delivered to Mrs. Samuel?—Yes, I did not meaſure it, or take any particular notice of it.

How much had you from Mrs. Samuel?——The ſame I gave her.

You underſtood this was a bit of ſmuggled lace, did not you?——Yes.

FRANCES GATES ſworn.

What age are you?—Going on fourteen.

Do you know the nature of an oath, what will become of you if you take a falſe oath?——I ſuppoſe if I take a falſe oath, that that I ſhall be damned, I am ſervant to the profecutor, the priſoner made me take the lace.

How?——Sometime in February, I believe ſhe told me anything I could get would be of ſervice to her, and I took about a quarter of a pound of Engliſh cotton, and I took ſome thread lace out of a preſs, the keys hung up in the parlour.

Who told you to go for the keys?—The priſoner at the bar told me to unlock that preſs, and to take out ſome lace and give it to her.

Where was the priſoner?——She ſtood in the yard, and took the lace from me.

Whereabout was the preſs?——The cloſet in the back parlour.

How long ago was this?—It was ſince April.

Mr. Garrow. Now you muſt know you was committing felony at this time?—She ſaid, if I told, I ſhould be hanged, but ſhe ſhould not be hurt.

She told you this before you took it?—No, Sir, after I had taken it.

How ſoon did you tell anybody?——I did not tell it at all till it was found out, I was afraid.

Was you taken up?——No, Sir, that young lady carried me to my aunt's, and they kept me up ſtairs I believe from about two o'clock, till about eight or nine at night.

Did they give you any victuals?—No, Sir, I was not to have victuals till I told, I did not ſay a word about it all theſe hours, for I was afraid to tell.

At eight o'clock what did they do to you, what did Miſs De Charmæ ſay to you, who was with you?——My aunt, ſhe aſk-me about it, and I ſaid, I knew nothing about it.

What did they ſay was to become of you that night, if you did not tell?——That I was to go to Bridewell.

And what afterwards?——That I was to ſuffer the law.

Did you underſtand that you was to be hanged?—Yes, and they told me that if I told, I ſhould not be hurt.

Then in conſequence of that to ſave yourſelf, you told it?——Yes.

You never told it before?—No.

How many months was this after you ſtole the things?——No months at all, I ſtole them the week before.

When did you talk this matter over laſt with your maſter and miſtreſs, laſt night or this morning?——We did not talk it over.

When was it you laſt talked it over with Miſs De Charmæ?——I was here all day yeſterday waiting for the trial.

What did they ſay to you about the evidence you was to give to day?——It was to tell all I knew.

Did they put you in mind about it?—No, Sir, they did not, the priſoner uſed to pinch me, and make faces at me.

Then you did not like her, ſhe uſed you ill, did not ſhe?—She uſed me ill enough.

You hated her abominably, did not you?——I did not like her.

When was it ſhe pinched you, and made faces at you?——To oblige me to ſteal them.

Did the priſoner ever give you anything for it?——No.

Court to Profecutrix. From whom had you theſe laces?—They were brought back by the witneſs Pennington.

Ann Pennington. I gave the laces to Mrs. De Charmæ.

Mr. Garrow. Can you ſwear that theſe laces that Mrs. Samuel gave you are the ſame?——Yes, by the length they are the ſame, I did not meaſure them.

Then how can you ſwear to the length?——The priſoner told me the length.

Court. Were they of the ſame quality and ſort?——Yes.

Do you believe them to be the ſame?—Yes.

Jury. How long were they at Mrs. Samuel's?——A week, I do not know what has been done with them to night, I know the pattern.

Is it any common pattern, or is there anything curious in it?—Not very curious.

Profecutrix. This is my lace, I can ſwear to it, the patern is familiar to me.

Ha

Have they any ſhop marks on them?—No, they have taken away the ſhop marks and private marks.

Mr. Garrow. Thoſe that you loſt, you loſt with a private mark, and Cuſtom-houſe mark?——Yes.

How often do you take an account of your ſtock?—Once a year.

Court to Priſoner. What have you to ſay for yourſelf.

Mr. Garrow. My Lord, I humbly ſubmit to you, here is no evidence to put the priſoner on her defence, the property is not proved, that theſe are the ſame laces that were given to Mrs. Samuel.

Mr. Juſtice Buller. He has ſpoken as much to the property, as a perſon can do to property of that nature, Pennington ſwore, ſhe ſold ſome lace which ſhe received of the priſoner to Mrs. Samuel, ſhe demanded that lace of Mrs. Samuel, and received it back again; therefore, if there is any chaſm, it is in Mrs. Samuel; therefore, it is ſtill a matter of fact, of which the Jury are to be ſatisfied, whether it is the ſame lace.

Mr. Garrow. Then I ſubmit that the evidence goes to prove a receiver if it proves anything.

Mr. Juſtice Buller. No, the priſoner firſt of all tempted the girl to take the lace, and the priſoner herſelf ſtands in the garden at the time, and receives it from her out of the window.

Mr. Garrow. Mrs. De Charmæ, how long had the priſoner lived with you?——Eight months, and we took her to be very honeſt.

The priſoner called three witneſſes who gave her a very good character.

The Jury retired for ſometime, and returned with a verdict

GUILTY.

She was humbly recommended to mercy by the Jury.

To be confined to hard labour three years in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

647. SUSANNAH SPENCER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 28th of May, one pair of metal ſhoe buckles, value 2s. two pair of cotton ſtockings, value 2s. one handkerchief, value 3s. two remnants of muſlin, value 1s. a cap, value 1s. 6d. a ſilk purſe, value 6d. one piece of thread edging, value 1s. the property of Sarah Rainsford, ſpinſter; and a ſilver milk pot, value 10s. one ſilver table ſpoon, value 6s. two tea-ſpoons, value 6s. a pair of ſugar tongs, value 10s. a ladle, value 2s. the property of Sarah Harding, ſpinſter, in her dwelling-houſe.

(The witneſſes examined apart at the priſoner's requeſt.)

SARAH HARDING ſworn.

I live in Charlotte-ſtreet, I am a ſingle woman, I loſt the things mentioned in the indictment.

What is the milk pot worth?——Four ſhillings, the two table ſpoons, value four ſhillings, the ſugar tongs coſt me half a guinea, they have been in uſe ſometime, a ſilver ladle, value two ſhillings, theſe things have been in conſtant uſe in the kitchen, I loſt them the 28th of May, they were in uſe at tea about half after five, they were taken away I believe between the hours of ſix and half after ten; I let part of the houſe to one Mrs. Rainsford; I was ſitting in the front parlour, and I heard ſoebody ſcreaming up ſtairs, I ſaw the print of ſomebody's foot in the bed room, and the ſervant girl ſaid, as ſhe ſtood on the ſtairs, a ſmart dreſſed man in ſilk ſtockings, and nankeen breeches ran by her, and held up his clothes, and ſhe believed he had flannel ſhoes on, he went out ſoftly; we went up ſtairs and ſearched the houſe, and did not find anybody, we thought it very odd the girl did not get ſtruck by the man; at half after ten we got ſomebody to ſearch the houſe, and while we were gone up ſtairs we left the priſoner below knowing her to be with child, ſhe ſaid, ſhe was a married woman, when ſhe came into the houſe, ſhe was Mrs. Rainsford's ſervant; when we came down again, we ſaw the back door open, ſhe ſaid ſomebody had gone out, we began to ſuſpect her, as ſhe did not give any account of who her huſband was, in the priſoner's pocket there was a ſmall parcel, which ſhe made a little heſitation to let me look at, and it did not belong to me; this was on Saturday night, we got a perſon to ſit up in the houſe all that night, ſhe ſaid, ſhe had loſt her gown and her wedding ring, which was tied up in a ſilk handkerchief; when we went into the garden, the firſt thing we found was the priſoner's gown, which ſhe ſaid ſhe had loſt; Mrs. Rainsford brought down a parcel to me, which ſhe ſaid, ſhe found under the mattraſs, ſhe never would ſay who her huſband was; Mrs. Rainsford ſaid, they were her things, and ſaid to her, Betty you are the perſon that have got the things; ſaid ſhe, he made me do it, he would have murdered me laſt night, if I did not let him come in and take the things, ſhe ſaid, I have ſaved you for a week; ſhe gave the man's name and addreſs to the conſtable, that was the man, ſhe ſaid, ſhe was with-child by, ſhe confeſſed to the conſtable that the man had hid the ſilver things in the duſt, and they were found there on Saturday about noon, that place was between the paſſage leading to the garden and the kitchen.

JAMES PARKE ſworn.

I found this plate in the coal-hole, and ſome muſlin, part up ſtairs, and part in the kitchen; I found it there on the 28th of May laſt, part of theſe things I took out of the box; I do not know the priſoner.

(The things depoſed to.)

Mr. Keys, Priſoner's Council. I believe you ſaid, the priſoner confeſſed ſomething to you?——Yes, ſhe ſaid that ſome man had prevailed upon her to let him in to rob her miſtreſs.

What promiſe had your made her, if ſhe would confeſs?——That I would not ſend for a conſtable.

At what time did you loſe this plate?—Between five and ſix, the things were hid at that time.

Court. Did you find theſe things hid in the duſt-hole in conſequence of what the priſoner told you?—Yes, if the man had not taken them away.

Now this houſe you live in there are a great many people come there?——I dare ſay there may.

SARAH RAINSFORD ſworn.

I live in this houſe; I loſt thoſe things that are here, they were under the mattraſs.

MARY FLETCHER ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mrs. Harding; I was at the houſe the time the priſoner made the firſt alarm, and ſaid there was a man in the houſe, ſhe called to me, I was buſy and could not come; ſays ſhe, for God's ſake come up! I came to the yard door, ſhe ſeemed to be ſadly frightened, ſhe ſaid ſhe was going up ſtairs to her miſtreſs's rooms, and ſhe ſaw a man paſs her elbow, he did not make two ſteps from the ſtairs to the ſtreet door; ſhe ſaid ſhe believed he had cloth at the bottom of his feet, ſhe ſaid ſhe was ſo frightened; I immediately ran to the ſtreet door, and ſhe ſaid ſhe was afraid her miſtreſs had loſt her gold watch, ſhe looked about and ſaid ſhe would touch nothing; when her miſtreſs came home ſhe had the watch, but miſſed two gowns and a petticoat, which her miſtreſs found under the ſopha, and under the bed we found a petticoat; when her miſtreſs came home we went and ſearched the houſe, but ſaw nobody; in about half an hour her miſtreſs was obliged to go out, and was out till half paſt ten; I ſaw no man, nor heard any.

Court to Mrs. Rainsford. Did you ſee any man in your houſe?—Yes, I thought I did, but I was ſo frightened.

ROBERT HANBURY ſwear.

I was called for on the 28th of May, to No. 83, in Charlotte-ſtreet, I ſent for an officer, as I was not in office, and I ſaw him ſcratch the plate out of the duſt-hole; I have the things in my pocket.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

648. FRANCIS PRIMROSE was indicted for burglariously and feloniously breaking and entering the dwelling house of John Beaumont about the hour of twelve in the morning, on the 2d of June, and feloniously stealing one canvas bag, value 1d. twenty eight pounds of soap, value 14s. one cloth apron, value 1s. one cotton check apron, value 1s. his property.

JOHN BEAUMONT sworn.

On the 2d of June my house was broke open, my apprentice was last up the night before, he is here: about six in the morning we were alarmed; my servant alarmed me first, he called me out of bed; the cellar window appeared to be forced open by some kind of an instrument, it had been fastened by two bolts, which were forced back: I lost the things mentioned in the indictment, but the tobacco I lost was my greatest loss; I was directed to the King's Arms, there I saw my sack, and some soap; I went home, and there I saw I had lost some soap: the sack was marked J. H. on one side, and J. Hogskins on the other, that sack was in my house before the robbery; I cannot say positively who it came from, it was there the day before, I am sure of that, I look upon it it came from Mr. Stone, because I had some bags from him.

What was in the sack?——The shag tobacco.

How comes it there is no tobacco in this indictment?——Because it was found in the street; there was some soap without a mark, common yellow soap, not in the sack; the prisoner was in the house when I found these things.

What did he say or do?——He did not say anything to me there, there were other people there.

What connection had he with the sack or the soap?—None that I know of.

Mr. Garrow, Prisoner's Council. Are you a licenced dealer in tobacco?—There are no licenced dealers.

ANN BEAUMONT sworn.

The night before the robbery the boy was working very late, and the shag tobacco Mr. Beaumont is speaking of was not finished till ten, or a quarter after ten at night; it might be a hundred and a quarter, I believe we were all in bed by eleven, and in the morning the boy came and called out, Sir, Sir, Lord Jesus Christ! I thought it was a fire, and I jumped out of bed in my shift, and went into the kitchen, I missed a coloured apron, they had wrenched open a board and bolt.

JONATHAN BARRINGTON sworn.

I am apprentice to the prosecutor, I was last up in the house that night, and first up the next morning; I went to bed a little after ten, and fastened all the doors and windows up, I am sure of that.

Did you fasten the cellar window in particular?——I always fasten it every night, and I did so that night; I got up about six, and I found the wine cellar door pushed too, and all the shag gone; the back door was fast, and the shop door was fast, and I went into the street, and saw the cellar window broke open; I know the shag was lost, and the sack.

Mr. Garrow. What was you doing to the shag?——Drying it.

How came it wet, it was a matter of moonshine, was not it now, upon your oath do not you know it was smuggled tobacco?——I do not know.

I ask you upon your oath, do not you know it was smuggled?——No.

Who brought it?—I help to manufacture it.

Why the smugglers brought it?—I do not know who brought it; my master deals with Mr. Robinson in the Borough.

Did this come from him?——I cannot say particularly.

Did any of Mr. Robinson's people bring it?——I cannot tell you.

Do not you know upon your oath?——Not particularly I cannot speak to it.

Upon your oath when was it your master master desired you not to tell who brought that tobacco?——He never desired me not to tell nothing about it.

How many different parcels was it brought in?——I cannot tell you that.

Was it brought in one parcel, two, or three, or a dozen?—I cannot tell.

What time of day was it brought?

Court to witness. You must answer the question, if not I shall commit you to Newgate. Do you, or do you not know?——I do not know.

Upon your oath?——I do not know Sir, indeed; I know there is never none brought by night, because I should hear it.

Did you hear who brought this tobacco?——I did not hear.

Nor see?—Not in no night.

Did you in the day?—Yes, I did.

What time of the day was it brought?—I cannot particularly tell.

Who brought it?—Some of it had been in the house these three months.

I ask you who brought the last quantity, will you answer or not?—I will as far as I can.

Who brought that tobacco to your master's house? come, Sir, speak out!

Court to Mr. Newman. Take him into custody, commit him to Newgate.

Has there never been tobacco brought into your house from the Custom-house keys?——No, Sir, if the people came to my master's house, he always turns them away.

Did not this tobacco come from the keys?——Not to my knowledge.

Who brought it, will you swear upon your oath, and at the risk of being prosecuted for perjury, that you do not know?——It had been there sometime.

Do you or do you not know who brought the tobacco?

Jury. How old are you?—Near nineteen.

Then answer the question directly!—Not particularly, I cannot say, I know my master buys some sometimes, I do not know who brought that, that was in the house, I only had to cut it, I do not know particularly who brought it.

Do you know or do you not, once more?——My master bought some of a man at Wapping, I believe that was amongst it.

Now, who was the man?——I know he lives in Wapping.

Do you know his name?——His name is Forsyth.

JOHN OSBORNE sworn.

I am a house-man in the watch-house of St. John's, Wapping; as I was sitting at the watch house door at two in the morning, I saw the prisoner coming by with a load, and I detained him; he said he was going home; he said he had a bit of soap in a bag, there was nothing else; I did not examine him any further.

WILLIAM WHITEWAY sworn.

I was headborough of the night, the 2d of June, on my return, I found the prisoner stopped with some soap, which he said he had brought from board a vessel, I believe he said a French vessel, I removed him to our lower town watch-house, and in going along, I observed something bulky in his coat pockets; I searched him, and in each of the pockets of his coat I found an apron, which the prosecutor's wife swore to the next morning, I took him to the office; the King's Arms is opposite to it; he said he had the aprons from the same place where he had the soap, on board the ship; this soap, and the apron, and the bag of tobacco, another watchman had stopped another man with a bag of tobacco on his back, and the other man who had it ran away.

Court. Let me look at the two aprons before I examine the woman.

Court to Mrs. Beaumont. Did you see any of the things afterwards that the constable found on this prisoner?——I saw them at the Justice's.

Do you know any of them?—Nothing but the two aprons; one was a very dirty check apron, a little daubed with red paint; the other was a rough-dry white apron, which was full of iron-mould, which I had folded up and hung over chair; here is the fellow apron to the check, the coloured apron has no mark, but diaper tape at the top, and ſeamed up the middle with blue thread, I ſeamed it myſelf, I can ſpeak to it being my own work.

(The aprons depoſed to.)

Mr. Garrow. You told me twice, it had no mark.

Court. If it has a mark, what is the mark?—I cannot ſay, I have had it theſe dozen years; I think one mark is an M; I am not ſure, the aprons I bought out of pawn, and I cannot ſay, it is ſuch a quantity of years.

Is this an M?——No, it is not, I have one that has an M. it is a very old apron.

Court. But if you have had it ſo long you muſt have taken notice of it?——I know it by the iron-moulds, and being rough-dried; I can ſwear to my own work, I darned it myſelf.

Mr. Garrow. Now about this ſame blue apron, is that an old one?—No.

Do not twenty women ſew check aprons with blue thread?—I do not know.

Now is this ſaid diaper tape a curioſity?——It is very dear, it is not extravagant, they laſt ſo much longer.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I am a waterman by buſineſs, I belong to a watch club.

Court to Proſecutor. You cannot ſwear to the ſoap, I ſuppoſe?—No, Sir.

The priſoner called three witneſſes who all gave him a very good character.

GUILTY Death.

The priſoner was humbly recommended to mercy by the Proſecutor.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

649. JAMES DAVIS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 31ſt of May fifty-nine pounds weight of lead, value 5s. belonging to Charles Blakey, then and there affixed to his dwelling houſe, againſt the ſtatute.

THOMAS ROGERS ſworn.

On the 31ſt of May, in the morning, between two and three, I was alarmed by a dog that Mr. Blakey keeps in the back part of his houſe, which adjoins to mine, in Golden-lane. I got up and looked through my window, I ſaw nobody at firſt, but the third time I looked the priſoner was dragging a piece of lead out of the gutter into my yard, I ſaw him ſtanding on a bench, then I ſaw him ſtamp upon it to bend it together; I did not ſee him ſeparate the lead, I got up twice, but could not ſee him, there was 56lb. of lead, it came undoubtedly from the gutter, the priſoner ſeeing me ſtooped down, I ſaid to him, are you a plumber at work here? and he ran away; I purſued him, I never loſt ſight of him; I am ſure he is the man, ſome more lead had been taken out of the gutter, it had not been repaired; I ſent the lead to Mr. Blakey, the lead anſwered to the gutter exactly, I meaſured it.

CHARLES BLAKEY ſworn.

This lead was miſſing on the 31ſt of May, I went in conſequence of an information to the houſe, and found lead miſſing from the waſh-houſe part of the gutter; I did not meaſure it to the gutter.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was coming from the ſtreet where I lodge, ſeeing the yard door open, I went in to get a drink of water, and I went out again, and this man called out to ſtop me.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

650. ANN SHELDON and MARY wife of JOHN WILLIAMS, otherwiſe MARY WILLIAMS, ſpinſter, were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 26th of May laſt, nine linen handkerchiefs, value 18s. nine other linen handkerchiefs, value 9s. twenty-ſeven yards of ſtriped cotton, value 50s. three yards and a quarter of book muſlin, value 16s. the property of Edward Gibſon, privately in his ſhop.

——— NICHOLSON ſworn.

The priſoner Sheldon came in firſt, and not two minutes after the other priſoner followed her, I thought they did not belong to each other, Sheldon aſked to look at ſome handkerchiefs, I took down conſiderable qu ntities, I do not know how many; the other came in before I ſhewed her the handkerchiefs, and ſat down about two yards from Sheldon, cloſe to the wall, where three or four whole pieces of cotton lay; Sheldon was difficult in being pleaſed with the handkerchiefs, it was ſome time before we could agree, and I was obliged to attend ſome other cuſtomers that wanted flannel, when I came back, I ſold her two handkerchiefs.

Who was in the ſhop with you?—Only Mrs. Gibſon, at that time, in the courſe of ſelling the handkerchiefs the two priſoners talked to each other, and became acquainted, which I was rather ſurpriſed at, and ſhe aſked to look at ſome muſlin for a cap border, I ſhewed her ſome, I counted the quantity as I laid them down by her, there were eight quantities, ſhe ſeemed very difficult, and we parted, ſhe only wanted one-eighth of a yard, and when they were going out, I counted the quantities of muſlin and there were only ſeven, the little one called the other Mrs. Cooke, and they talked as knowing one another, they went to the door together, and the little one Williams went out firſt, and made off as faſt as ſhe could, the other followed her, but as ſhe was going out I miſſed the muſlin; I ſays to Mrs. Gibſon, you muſt take care Madam, theſe people have ſtole a piece of muſlin, and I went after her to the next door and ſtopped her, and took her into that ſhop, I told them to take care of her till I came back; I overtook the other about fifty yards off, ſhe was going through a paſſage, and making off as faſt as ſhe could, I brought her back, as ſoon as ever I brought Williams in, ſhe dropped a piece of cotton below her cloak, ſhe ſtooped down againſt ſome glaſs and things in the ſhop, and dropped it, I am quite ſure of that.

What did you find under her cloak where ſhe dropped it?—It was my cotton, it was my mark upon it, the officer was ſent for, and the book muſlin was found inſide Williams's petticoat at the upper part; upon the other priſoner there were two parcels of handkerchiefs, thoſe I found in Mr. Holmes's ſhop cloſe by her; they begged for mercy, and acknowledged themſelves guilty, there was no promiſe of favour, I am very ſure of that.

Did you ſee them take any thing?—No, I did not know or perceive that they had taken anything.

Mr. Garrow. Have you never ſaid, that you ſaw them take anything?—Never.

Did you never ſay that you had laid a trap for them and had caught them?—No, the reaſon I had to take them, I miſſed the piece of muſlin by the number.

Mr. Garrow. This is a charge againſt the priſoners for ſtealing all theſe things; It has been held over and over again that two perſons cannot do this, in the firſt place the priſoner Williams is proved by this witneſs to be in a ſituation where ſhe might ſteal cotton, the other where ſhe could muſlin, neither of them in ſituations where they could ſteal the others.

Court. Can you mention any circumſtance where it has been ſo held; as to your firſt objection, I am at the ſame time aware that there have been caſes where two perſons have been guilty.

Mr. Shelton. In ſtealing from the perſon, but not the ſhop.

Mr. Garrow to Nicholſon. Recollect and tell us, whether the next morning after the loſs of theſe goods, you did not ſay you had obſerved theſe things taken, but you was adviſed not to ſay ſo, that it might be a capital offence?——No, Sir, I am ſure I did not.

HENRY PIPER ſworn.

On the 26th of May laſt, I was in Mr. Holmes's compting-houſe, Mr. Nicholſon came in with the priſoner, and ſaid, take care of this woman, ſhe drew rather on one ſide, I pulled her away, I then ſaw two pieces of handkerchiefs at her feet, I ſaid, Oh, theſe are what you have dropped, the handkerchiefs were delivered to the officers, they are the ſame that had dropped from her.

JOHN EDWARDS ſworn.

Theſe were delivered to me by ſomebody at Mr. Gibſons, but I cannot ſay who delivered the cotton or the handkerchiefs, it might be Mr. Nicholſon.

—— Nicholſon. I delivered the handkerchiefs and cotton, they were all marked before they were loſt.

Court. What is the value of theſe things at a low valuation?——They are valued at prime coſt.

JANE LATHAN ſworn.

I know Mrs. Sheldon three years, a very honeſt, hard working woman, ſhe takes in waſhing, and waſhes for me.

WILLIAM PITT ſworn.

I am a ſhoe-maker, I know Williams, ſhe is a very good kind of woman, ſhe worked for me in the buſineſs of binding ſhoes.

MARY WILTSHIRE ſworn.

I have known Williams about two years, never heard anything but what was very honeſt, binding ſhoes, and needle work.

The priſoner called one more witneſs who had known her fifteen years, and gave her a good character.

BOTH GUILTY.

Of ſtealing, but not privately.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

651. DANIEL RICHARDSON and SAMUEL GREENOW were indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting John Billings on the King's highway, on the 10th of June, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon and againſt his will, a piece of broken ſilver coin called a ſixpence, value 4d. and five copper halfpence, value two pence halfpenny, his property.

(The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of the priſoners Counſel.)

JOHN BILLINGS ſworn.

I am a journeyman to Mr. Goodman, baker, in Church-ſtreet, Mile-end Newtown; I was robbed this day three weeks very near one in the morning, as nigh as I can gueſs, in Pelham-ſtreet, I was ſent out to ſee for my maſter who had been a fiſhing, and going to the public houſe, I was robbed by two men, they came to me and aſk me what buſineſs I had there, I thought they were two patrols, or two bye watchmen; I made them very little anſwer, and they aſked me if I had any money in my pocket, I ſaid, two pence halfpenny, the other ſays, if he has no more do not take that, the other ſearched for my watch, and could not find it; they were both very much in liquor, and began to ſwear at me, that they could not find my watch; then they went away, they had got my money out of my pocket, and a key, and I aſked them for my key, and they returned that again.

Which of them was it that ſaid, if he has not any more money do not take that?——I think that was Richardſon, but I am not ſure.

How did they get at the money?—They both ſtood by me, and with huſtling me whether this took it out, or the other took it, I cannot be right poſitive.

Jury. Did not they tell you to ſtop?——No, they aſked me what buſineſs I had there, I was for turning up another ſtreet, but they turned me up Silver-ſtreet, when they returned me the key, they went off.

Priſoner.

Priſoner Richardſon. He told the Juſtice he thought it was two dyers.

Proſecutor. I am not poſitive whether they were weavers or dyers, nor as to the perſons of either of them.

JOHN WHISKER ſworn.

This is what I took from the priſoner Richardſon, I and one of the patrols of Spitalfields took it from him this day three weeks, a little before one in the morning; we were going our rounds, and happened to ſee the proſecutor, who ſaid he had been robbed by two fellows, one had got a bundle and the other had not; we aſked him which way he thought they were gone, and he pointed up the ſtreet, and we purſued them, and in about two hundred yards, we ſaw theſe two men ſtanding up nigh a wall, and I ſtopped Richardſon, and in ſearching of him, theſe halfpence, and the piece of ſixpence dropped out of his waiſtcoat pocket, I took it off the ground.

Richardſon. He ſaid firſt, he found it in my right hand waiſtcoat pocket, and I ſhewed him I had no pocket in that waiſtcoat, then he ſaid, he picked it off the ground.

Mr. James, Priſoner Richardſon's Council. When you came up to Richardſon, he was ſtanding ſtill?——The officer came up to him before me, when I put my hand in his pocket, the halfpence and piece of ſixpence dropped down.

In that pocket there was a great hole?——Yes.

Richardſon. I know nothing of this priſoner Greenow.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner Greenow's Council. Pray who pays the expences of this proſecution?——Billings is to pay it, he paid for the bill being found, we paid our own expences, and the proſecutor paid us.

Have you ſettled what ſhare of the reward you are to have if it goes on?——No.

Mr. James. When you was before the Juſtice, you did not ſay that you found the money in Richardſon's pocket?——I ſaid, the money was in his pocket, and in ſearching his pocket it dropped on the ground, when I put my hand into Richardſon's pocket I found ſome halfpence.

(The money produced and depoſed to.)

Proſecutor. There was two pence halfpenny and a farthing, or three pence and a farthing in copper, and there was one halfpenny bent both ways, it was rather crooked, I cannot ſwear to the halfpence, they look to be my halfpence, and the ſixpence looks to be the ſame.

Court. You ſaid nothing about the ſixpence at firſt.

THOMAS DAVIES ſworn.

I was the officer of the night, I was going my rounds with the patrol, we met the proſecutor, he ſaid, he had been robbed by two men, one of them had a bundle with ſomething in a handkerchief; we followed them down the next ſtreet, I thought I heard them, and we went up the ſtreet as faſt as we could go, they were ſtanding againſt a wall; I laid hold of them, one of them who had a bundle, and the patrol ſearched them while I held them, and putting his hand in his pocket the money fell down on the flag-ſtones.

Court to Jury. Gentlemen, both the priſoners muſt be acquitted, the point of law goes to the acquittal of both of them; for the boy ſays, when they came up, they accoſted him in an inſolent way, and they aſked him for his money, but when he ſaid he had but two pence halfpenny or three pence, one of them ſaid, do not take that; therefore, ſuppoſing two men attacking a man with intent to rob him, if one repents in the moment if the other man takes the money yet it will be no crime in him who changes his mind; but, ſays the proſecutor, which it was that took my money I cannot tell: this is like a caſe from Ipſwich, where five men were indicted for murder, and it appeared upon a ſpecial verdict, that it was murder in one but not the other four, and the Jury had no evidence which committed the blow, and ſays the Court, if you cannot poſitively ſay by evidence which is the man that is guilty we cannot puniſh any one; beſides, in the ca taſe, the boy was pointedly examined about the ſixpence, and ſaid nothing of it at firſt, and after that it is material for the ſake of juſtice that you ſhould not ſuffer him to mend his evidence in ſo eſſential a point as the property which was loſt, and he expreſsly ſaid at firſt that he loſt only twopence half-penny.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

652. ELIZABETH CLARKE was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Elizabeth, wife of John Ewen on the King's highway, on the 7th of June, and putting her in corporal fear and danger of her life, and taking from her perſon, and againſt her will, one black ſilk handkerchief, value 10d. his property.

ELIZABETH EWEN ſworn.

I am the wife of John Ewen, I bind ſhoes, my huſband is an ivory cutter; I was going out at eight in the morning to get ſome tea and ſugar for breakfaſt, on the 7th of June, I had the tea and ſugar in my apron, and this woman came by me and called me gallows Beſs, and damned me, and told me the handkerchief would look as well on her neck as mine, and tore it off my neck, and went into the public-houſe, I went up ſtairs directly to hide myſelf, being without my handkerchief; I never gave her an angry word.

She was a little drunk I ſuppoſe?—Very like ſhe might.

What is the priſoner?—I have no acquaintance with her, till ſhe abuſed me two or three times; ſhe came and abuſed me ſeveral times before; I believe the man that is now my huſband is the man that ſhe had lived with; ſhe ſaid I had no right to him.

Had ſhe any other claim to him?—No other than living with him now and then. I never got my handkerchief.

Court. Gentlemen of the Jury, this is nothing like a highway robbery.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

653. REBECCA, the wife of WILLIAM NOAH, was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 7th of June, one canvas bag, value 1d. half a crown piece, value 2s. 6d. a French ſhilling, value 10d. ſix pieces of foreign ſilver coin, value 15d. and five guineas, value 5l. 5s. and half a guinea, value 10s. 6d. the property of Chriſtopher Andrews, in the dwelling houſe of Henry Dickhouſe.

CHRISTOPHER ANDREWS ſworn.

On the 7th of June, I loſt the things mentioned in the indictment, at the houſe of Henry Dickhouſe, between five and ſix in the afternoon, I called for ſix pennyworth of rum and water in this houſe, and I took out my purſe to pay for it; I gave him a ſhilling, he returned me the change, immediately a girl who ſat at my left hand took the purſe out of my hand, and conveyed it entirely away, I could not come at it, ſhe paſſed it away in a moment by ſlight of hand, I never got it again; nobody was in company with me but the priſoner, ſhe followed me without aſking my conſent.

Did you conſent, had you any converſation with her, did you give her a little rum and water?——Yes, I did, nobody was nigh her, a conſtable came and ſearched her, and it was not found, all ſhe ſaid to me was ſhe ſwallowed it.

Was not you boaſting of your riches?——No, I am not a rich man, it was all I had but a few halfpence; I am a King's pilot, I came up from the ſhip that day, that was the money I took, and ſhe got it all.

Were you in liquor?——I was not really ſober, but I was not much in liquor, I held her till a conſtable came.

HENRY DICKHOUSE ſworn.

I am the landlord of this houſe, the man came in, and aſked for ſixpennyworth of rum and water, I made it him, and this woman came in and ſat down by him, and he ſaid to her, give me my guinea; I gave you a guinea for a ſhilling, ſhe ſaid no, he gave me ſixpence for the liquor, and I went away, and by and by I heard him ſay you have robbed me, he had hold of the woman; I enquired what was the matter, and ſent for an officer directly, he had the purſe in his hand when he paid me the ſixpence, and ſome more money in it, but what is become of it I do not know.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

The gentleman aſked me to go in and drink, I ſat down by him, ſays he I know I gave you a guinea inſtead of a ſhilling, ſays I, Sir, you did not, I have no pocket on, ſo he tore my gown, and got knocking me about, and an officer came and ſearched me, and pulled off my ſhoes and ſtockings, and ſtripped me from top to toe; he then ſaid, if I could make up three guineas I ſhould not go to gaol, and the Juſtice put me back from twelve to ſeven.

Proſecutor. I did not, a friend of mine did; ſhe told the Juſtice ſhe took the money and would keep it.

ROBERT FOGG ſworn.

I was coming in to get a pint of beer, and the proſecutor called for ſixpennyworth of brandy and water, ſo ſays he you ſhall pay for it, and he tore her gown.

The priſoner called five witneſſes who all gave her a good character.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

654. JOHN BERRY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 11th of June, one ſilver watch, value 30s. the property of Henry Lane, privily from his perſon.

HENRY LANE ſworn.

I am a ſeaman, I have been ſeven months at ſea, and I went on ſhore to drink with my ſhipmates over night, that was on the 10th of June, I went home with a young woman as I knew very well, and ſlept with her, I got up the next morning, I thought a little more liquor would do me good, and I went to have a little more drink at the Barley Mow in New Gravel-lane, this was the morning between five and ſix, the priſoner came in, and I gave him what drink I had left, and I told him to drink it up, for I was in a hurry to go home, when I went to this woman's houſe I went to ſleep, I never ſaw him before; after I had been in about half an hour the young woman waked me, and told me I was robbed of my watch, which I did not find till afterwards they had ſent for ſome officers, which took the man, and we went to the Juſtice's, the young woman gave me the watch, while the officers were in the room; ſhe had ſtopped the priſoner at the ſtreet door, and locked it, and taken it from him, and gave it into my hand; I am ſure the priſoner is the man that was in the public houſe with me, but where ſhe got the watch I cannot tell.

JUDITH CUMMINS ſworn.

I am ſervant to the houſe in New Gravel-lane, where this young man was, I was getting breakfaſt ready, and I heard the young fellow had loſt his watch, and ſaid you ſhall not go with his watch, ſo he gave it me again, and I gave it to the proſecutor, the gentlewoman of the houſe ſent for an officer, and he was taken into cuſtody; the priſoner gave me the watch, he ſaid the proſecutor was a Briſtol lad, and ſaid he took the watch out of the young man's pocket for fear the woman ſhould take it, as he was coming down ſtairs, Lane came and laid down the long-ſide of the woman woman, and Berry and another man came and went up ſtairs to another woman.

Proſecutor. I came away by myſelf, I am ſure I had never ſeen the priſoner before, nor never had any converſation with him, he aſked me what country lad I was, I told him I came out of Kent with a ſhipmate of mine that was there, he told him he came from Briſtol.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was juſt come from the Eaſt-Indies, with Sir Edward Hughes, and I came to look for ſome prize-money, I got drunk, and ſpent all my money, I came into the Barley Mow telling my diſtreſſes, and this youth was drinking there at the time, ſo he left the houſe, and another man that was in the public houſe aſked me to go and take a walk with him, I ſaid I did not care where I went, and we went into a houſe, I thought he was acquainted, he took a girl out of the Barley Mow with him, and this proſecutor and a young girl was laying in bed together faſt aſleep, and we could not wake them, ſo he ſays to me, he will be ſerved as you have been, if he has any money, I will take it out, ſo he took his watch out of his trowſers, and he gave it me to hold, I knew nothing of it, when the proſecutor awoke, I told him his watch was ſafe enough, and was going to give it him, and this young woman fnatched it out of my hand, and gave it him.

——— COLE ſworn.

I produce the watch, which I had from the proſecutor.

(The watch depoſed to by the chain and ſeals.)

Cummins. I never ſaw the man with my eyes before he came from the Barley Mow with a young woman, and went up ſtairs.

How long was it when he came in after the proſecutor?——I was not in the houſe when they came in.

Was the priſoner in ſailor's dreſs at that time?——He had a long brown coat on, and brown trowſers, and white trowſers withinſide of them.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

655. THOMAS SMITH was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 22d of June five pieces of printed callico for gowns, containing twenty-four yards, value 4l. the property of John Hunt.

RICHARD BATES ſworn.

How old are you?——Between thirteen and fourteen.

Do you know the nature of an oath?——If I falſe ſwear myſelf I ſhall be perjured, and ſhall be puniſhed both here and hereafter. I was going up Holborn laſt Wedneſday was a week, to carry a parcel to Mr. Wilſon's, in Caſtle yard, I knocked at the door, the maid took the parcel, and gave me another to take back, which contained five chintz patches, I counted them myſelf, and was going back to Mr. Hunt's, in Wood-ſtreet, the priſoner overtook me, and clapped me over the ſhoulders, he ſaid, halloo my boy, are not you juſt come from Mr. Wilſon's, I ſaid yes; he then took the parcel from me, he ſaid, you muſt go back to Mr. Wilſon's, he took the parcel off my head, he ſaid he would give me ſix-pence for myſelf, but he gave me a ſhilling, then he ſaid do not you know me my little boy? juſt after he ſaid that a gentleman came up, and aſked me if I knew him, I ſaid no; the gentleman inſiſted upon Mr. Smith's going before Mr. Wilſon, to ſee whether he ſent him for the parcel; the priſoner ſaid he would go to Mr. Wilſon, and when he got partly up the hill, he did not like to go, ſo the gentleman laid hold of him, and made him go; juſt as we got to the houſe, I aſked him if Mr. Wilſon was at home, and he ſaid yes; ſays I, that cannot be, for he is not at home, ſo then he ſaid Mrs. Wilſon is, that is all the ſame.

Priſoner. I beg to aſk a queſtion, which I hope will appear particularly in my favour, mary when I returned him the bundle I told him I presumed I was detained into custody, in consequence of which I desired him to go with me to Mr. Wilson; and going up Holborn-hill I desired the gentleman to stop, to let me look for the gentleman on the other side of the way, and the man that took me refused?—No, Sir, I do not remember that he did.

Prisoner. Recollect yourself my dear?—I did not hear that he did.

AARON EYLE sworn.

On Wednesday last but one, I was going on some business to Bloomsbury, when I was past the end of Fleet-market, about twenty or thirty yards above Fleet-market, I saw the boy which since proves to be Mr. Hunt's boy, coming down the flag pavement with a parcel on his head, I saw the prisoner in the horse-way, the first I saw of him was about three yards distance from the boy with the parcel, he was running, he came to the boy and put his hand to the parcel, I thought he was going to wrong the boy of the parcel, because I have heard of many such instances, the boy stood on the flag pavement, and to the best of my knowledge the prisoner had one foot on the kirb stone, and the other on the horse-way, I stepped between them, the prisoner had his head rather stooping down, I saw him with a shilling in his hand, and I saw him put the shilling in the boy's hand, and heard him say to him make haste, he then had the parcel under his arm, the prisoner said Mr. Wilson sent him, I asked the boy who that Mr. Wilson was, the prisoner answered, he lives in Castle-yard, Holborn; and the boy in the mean time laid hold of the parcel he had under his arm, and he let him have it, the prisoner agreed to go to Mr. Wilson, the boy put a question, did Mr. Wilson send you? the prisoner said, yes, the boy said that could not be for he was not at home, he said Mrs. Wilson sent him, that was the same thing, or words to that purport, the prisoner made many excuses not to go to Mr. Wilson's; one of us knocked at the door, the prisoner began, I spoke and the boy spoke, so there was such a confusion, that I believe Mrs. Wilson did not understand it at first, she said, the parcel was safe, and thought it better to let the man go; I took the prisoner to Mr. Hunt's, and related the affair there; the parcel was left in the care of Mrs. Wilson.

Prisoner. Did I desire to stop in the street to speak to anybody on the other side of the way?——I cannot positively answer that question, he did mention something about a friend.

JOHN HUNT sworn.

I know nothing of the robbery, the prisoner at the bar was brought to me charged with taking a parcel from a servant of mine, he acknowledged that he had taken the parcel, but was employed by an acquaintance of his, the bundle was left at Mr. Wilson's, in Castle-yard, I did not see it till the next day.

——— FLETCHER sworn.

The bundle was delivered to me before the Alderman, I received it from the clerk to the sitting Alderman.

——— WILSON sworn.

I cannot identify the parcel, I suppose the boy or Mr. Hunt can.

Was there any parcel that night to have gone from your house to Mr. Hunt's?—Yes.

Do you know the prisoner?—Not till this affair.

Did you ever send him?—I did not, nor did I send any body else.

Court to Ely. Was the parcel that was left at Mr. Wilson's, the same that you saw the prisoner have?—Yes.

MARY ALLEN sworn.

I delivered the parcel to the boy when he brought another, in about a quarter of an hour, I saw it again, the boy and that young man brought it back, I opened the door to him when they returned, and they left the parcel in the passage upon the bench, bench, it was left at our house an hour or two afterwards in the passage, then it was moved into the office till the next day, my master had the care of it, it was the same parcel that was brought back, I opened it, and looked at it, this is the same I am sure.

Prisoner. I perceive Mrs. Wilson is in Court, and I wish to have her examined, if it is not intruding on the Court, and the Gentlemen of the Jury.

Mrs. WILSON sworn.

Did I say a person employed me to fetch the parcel, and give one shilling?——He said a person had sent him, a man had met him in the street and told him to give a shilling to the boy.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

With submission, I trust the situation I stand in at present will plead my excuse for troubling the Court with a defence; permit me to inform you, that on the day this unfortunate affair happened (I am by profession a clerk, and out of employment) I met with a gentleman I personally knew, and he said how do you do Mr. Smith, how does the world go with you; he said will you give that boy a shilling, and desire him to go to Mr. Wilson's, I did so, and the boy gave me the shilling again and thanked me for the shilling; in consequence of this that man came up and asked the boy if he knew me, the boy said, no, I said, are you an officer, he said no, but he would go with me; I said, I see I have been led into an error, and going to St. Andrew's church, I stopped and asked to go across the way to speak to the gentleman that I saw, who employed me, but they would not stop, and I went to Mr. Wilson's, and I went to Mr. Hunt's, Mr. Hunt would have been very glad to have cleared me that night, I know the gentleman personally.

What is his name?——I do not know upon my word.

He knew your name it seems very well?—Yes.

How come you not to know his name?—I do not know.

Where have you been acquainted with him?—I presume in company with some of my friends.

Do you recollect any one person that ever saw you in company with this man?——I cannot; I have very good friends, but I did not communicate this circumstance to them, I have a wife and child, and they depend entirely on my support and industry.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

656. THOMAS SQUIRES was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 17th of June, one linen handkerchief, value 2s. the property of John Crowther.

JOHN CROWTHER sworn.

Coming over London Bridge this day fortnight, about two o'clock, I suddenly felt a change in the weight on the right side of my coat, I turned about and I could not see no person near me, nor any person gone from me; a person pointed to the prisoner, and I took him to Alderman Saunderson, I was then going to Alderman Wright's, and in passing from the bridge up St. Martin's-lane, I was in conversation with the prisoner, and the person was saying, he believed the prisoner had made away with the property, and given it to another man; says the prisoner he is a false man, for the other man has not got the handkerchief, here is the handkerchief, he pulled it out and gave it to me; the handkerchief was mine, I took him to Guildhall and he was committed.

LANCELOTT HUDDON sworn.

I saw three gentlemen standing against the wall, and the prosecutor was coming by, I thought I saw the prisoner take his handkerchief, and put it behind his coat.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I saw a crowd of people, coming by the handkerchief was thrown down close to my feet, and I picked it up, when the gentleman came up to me, I gave him the handkerchief directly.

The prisoner called one witness to his character.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

657. SARAH HARRIS was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 1st day of June, two linen sheets, value 7s. the property of Jacob Smith, being in a lodging room let to her by him, against the statute.

JACOB SMITH sworn.

I am a shoe-maker, I lived in Whitechapel between ten and eleven years, I let the prisoner a furnished lodging, the 1st of last January, by verbal agreement she staid in them four weeks and one day; I broke the door open on the Thursday following, and the sheets were gone, she went away on Sunday night late, or Monday morning, she said nothing when she went away, and took the key of the door with her; I never found them, they are worth seven shillings, the door was never open from the time she went away till I broke it open, I saw it every day; I met her in Whitechapel, not far from my house, and I went along with her to Fleet-market, for as I had no warrant, I did not know I had a right to take her, before we came to Fleet-market we had a pint of beer together, she paid a penny and I paid three farthings, she pretended she was waiting for her husband, then I went back with her to Smithfield, and some conversation passed again, she was asking me if I would sell my soul, and so forth; then we went into St. John's-street, and into the fields, and she said there was a magistrate sitting there to do business, then we went to the New-river, then we agreed to ask the first man that we saw, and that was a man that was hanging across a rail, we came to Hicks's-hall at last, I took her before a Magistrate, but I do not know his name, and she was committed that night in five minutes, the main thing she said was I am innocent, she paid two weeks lodgings, and left two unpaid; I delivered the sheets, I am a single man, the house was full of lodgers, married men and their wives, this woman told me she had a husband in the country.

Did you live upon terms of intimacy with her?—The woman was agreeable.

How happened you to be in this familiar way, drinking with a woman whom you charged with being a thief?—It was needless for me to think anything of a pint of beer.

Prisoner. Did not I leave the keys with you two days and two nights at different times?—She did once or twice at the beginning of the time.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I took the lodging of him by the week at two shillings a week, I told him we could get no work, and my husband went to the parish, I got up on the Monday morning, and I unlocked the door, I told the prosecutor he should not lose the money; Mr. Smith got out of bed and slipt his coat on, says I, I have not four shillings if it will save our lives, we went to the work-house, and were there eleven weeks; I never robbed anybody of a penny, I went all about Whitechapel, and then he met me, I am as innocent as any gentleman in Court.

Court to Prosecutor. Did you open the door yourself?——I broke it open myself I tell you, the Thursday after she was gone.

Did you ask her for any money to make it up?——The day before she was brought brought to the magiſtrate again to be fully committed, I would have made it up that night for the exact money the ſheets coſt me.

Priſoner. He wanted ſeventeen ſhillings.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried By the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

658. CATHERINE COLEMAM was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 12th of June, ten ſhillings and ſixpence in monies numbered, the monies of Samuel Payne.

SAMUEL PAYNE ſworn.

I am a cheeſe-monger, the priſoner came into my ſhop on the 12th of June, at ten at night, and ſaid, Mrs. Cook would be obliged to me to let her have ſix or ſeven ſhillings in ſilver, Mrs. Cook is my oppoſite neighbour, and keeps a public houſe; as I was taking out the money, ſhe ſaid, if you can ſpare half a guinea's worth, my miſtreſs will ſend you over the half guinea preſently; I ſaid, you may have which you pleaſe, I aſked her if ſhe lived with Mrs. Cook, and ſhe anſwered, yes, ſhe went away, and my lad told me ſhe ran down the ſtreet, the boy purſued her, and ſhe was brought to my ſhop about half an hour after; in about five minutes I went to look after them, I miſſed them, and when I came back the priſoner was brought back; I deſired ſhe might be taken to the Juſtice's, or to the watch-houſe, ſhe was ſearched and there was ten ſhillings and ſixpence upon her, there was a ſixpence which I can ſwear to, which was in my till a fortnight or three weeks before, I do not think it is good ſilver.

Did you give her any ſilver then?—— Yes, I give her ten ſhillings and ſixpence, of her miſtreſs, Mrs. Cook.

Court. Gentlemen of the Jury, this is not a felony, the offence is that of a fraud obtaining money under falſe pretences.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

659. ESTHER DAVIS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 31ſt day of May, eight ſhillings in monies numbered, the property of Henry Bottle.

(The witneſſes examined apart.)

HENRY BOTTLE ſworn.

On the 31ſt of May, I was coming up the Strand in the morning much about two, and a man aſſaulted me in the Strand, I had ſome property about me, there were three men, but one I charged the watchman with, and he was taken to St. Martin's watch-houſe, I went with him, I left four guineas and a half in gold, in St. Martin's watch-houſe, with the conſtable of the night, and I left the ſkirt of a lady's riding habit, a coat, and a pair of velveret breeches (I lodge at the Globe, in the Strand) for ſafety; I could not get in, but whether my wife was in bed or no I cannot ſay, I went into Drury-lane along with the patrol for ſafety, and I ſaw the priſoner and another with her; they aſked me, to give them ſomething to drink, I ſaid, I have no objection, will you have ſome gin, they ſaid they could not drink gin, they would have either peppermint or anniſeed, I cannot tell which.

Were the patrol with you when the women aſked you that queſtion?—Yes, I told them I am under the care of the patrol, and if he chooſes to ſerch it ſo be it, the women drank three penny worth, and the patrol two penny worth, I gave them a ſhilling to fetch it with; whilſt this was drinking the young woman the priſoner made free to lay hold of me, I was in liquor, ſhe put her hand into my pocket, I did not feel her.

Court.

Court. How can you say he did then?—I do not know, I know I loft feven fhillings and two fixpences, I had got upwards of fifteen fhillings and fixpence, when I loft my money, I had but feven fhillings left, I pulled out my filver at the watch-houfe, which they defired me to leave, I will not fwear to the money nor the woman.

Who are the patrols?——Richard Dorrington, and Matthew M'Kenzie.

Prifoner. He faid he had loft no money that night, and he would not go to the watch-houfe to maintain the charge.

Profecutor. I am clear I loft it, and in her company and nobody's elfe; I had the money in my pocket in Drury-lane, and when I put my hand into my pocket, I had more filver then, than I had afterwards; I found the door of the Globe open, and I went to bed.

MATTHEW M'KENZIE fworn.

I am patrol in St. Martin's parifh.

Who are you appointed by?——The parifh.

At the veftry or how?—At the veftry.

Then the veftry of your parifh have the appointment and removal of the patrol?—Yes, every quarter.

How long have you been a patrol?——About nine years; on the 31ft of May this man came to the watch-houfe with a man who attempted to rob him in the ftreet, and he gave charge, and he went with us, we would fee him home, becaufe he was very much in liquor.

Who went with you?—My partner.

What is his name?—Richard Dorrington; we went to his lodgings, they were fhut up, it was two in the morning, he wanted to go into the Red Horfe in 'Change court, we would not let him ftay there, we defired him to go with us as far as Drury-lane, and he fhould receive no hurt; we went up Drury-lane, and faw the watchmen on their duty, and returning back by Market court, we met two women, and they afked the man would he give them any thing to drink, and he faid he did not care; he afked them where they would go they faid over the way, and faid they fhould not go into any houfe, and he gave my partner a fhilling to fetch a quartern of peppermint for them, and a quartern of gin for me and my partner, and when my partner came back he gave him the change and my partner went home with him with the liquor was drank, and we were talking together, and this prifoner and the profecutor went down the court about three or four yards from us, and the woman that was along with her faid, let the man alone for he is under the care of the patrol, but my partner looked back and faw the woman by the wall put her hand in his pocket, and my partner faid, you wicked woman what are you going to rob the man before my face and he run and laid hold of her, and took feven fhillings and fix-pence out of her hand, and fix-pence dropped; and he faid I was going to rob her, for it was his own property.

Court. Do you know the prifoner?—Yes, a good many years.

Do you know her companion?——Yes very well.

What are they?——They are girls of the town.

Now, Sir, do you think you difcharge your duty in fuffering a man that is under your protection to be picked up by women of the town, and to ftop and drink in the ftreet at two o'clock in the morning?—It was between three and four in the morning.

Does that mend the matter?—No, Sir.

Is that the way in which you ufually difcharge your duty, and preferve the peace of the town, do you make a common practice of that?——No Sir, we do not indeed we thought no harm in it.

The concluſion of this Trial in the next Part, which will be publiſhed in a few Days

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commission of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol-Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND

The Gaol-Delivery for the County of Middlesex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wednesday the 29th of JUNE, 1785, and the following Days;

Being the SIXTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND,

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER VI. PART IV.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noster Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of Eſther Davis.

Court. If that is the conduct of your nightly watch, I ſhall take care you ſhall not do this hereafter, for I ſhall repreſent it to St. Martin's pariſh.

RICHARD DORRINGTON ſworn.

I am a patrol, and have been ſo three years.

You are the gentleman who went with money from the man under your care to fetch liquors for the women of the town? ——We were coming up at two in the morning from the Strand, the watchman had got hold of a man for robbing the proſecutor, he gave me a ſhilling, and I went over and fetched the liquors, and brought the change to him, I was turning round and the other woman ſaid to the priſoner, that is too bad before the patrols; I ran up to her, and caught her hand out of his pocket, ſhe wanted to get her hand down.

Court. I do not wonder at women's robbing men before your faces, if you ſuffer them to pick up men in this manner?—There was no picking up, we did not ſuffer them to go out of our ſight.

So that the diſorders that are committed within your ſight are all proper, they ſhall be enquired into.

Priſoner. They attacked us about three in the morning, and the man went to fetch the liquor, the gentleman aſked me to go with him to the place, I ſaid I did not like to go, the other patrol ſaid he did not like to go, ſo he took me and pulled me three or four yards down, he was in liquor; he ſaid, I want to give them the bag, and the patrol ſaid, damn your blood, what do you want to pick the man's pocket, I have owed it you a long time; the proſecutor would not go to maintain the charge, he counted his money over, and declared he had not loſt a half-penny; two gentlemen of St. Martin's pariſh came up and ſaid why take the girl to the watch-houſe, ſhe is not guilty; they ſaid, damn your bloods I ſuppoſe you are parties concerned, we will charge you, which they did, they found they were pariſhioners of St. Martin's pariſh, and they begged their pardon; Dorrington had been at No. 10, in Bennet's Court, and he wanted a guinea and a half to make the affair up.

Dorrington: I am as innocent of this as God is in Heaven.

WINEFRED MARGATE ſworn.

I ſaw Dorrington the patrol laſt Monday at No. 10, in Bennet's Court, Drury lane, he asked if the friends of this young woman could make up one guinea and a half, he would make up this affair, and would not appear against her, this is the man.

Who else was present?—There was another woman, but she is very ill, and could not come.

What is that other woman's name?—Elizabeth Lawless, I know her since she was a child, and she had good friends, she always bore a very good character, but is a poor unfortunate woman of the town; she goes by the name of Susannah Moore in our court.

Dorrington. On Saturday last I was down at Guildhall, Westminster, we had several trials, one concerning this man, it was this Mrs. Lawless that was with the prisoner, and told her not to rob the man; she was down at Westminster, and we went to have something to drink; I went to her house to let her know when the recognizances were to be withdrawn, and she said what can we do concerning this matter of Het Davis that is in prison now, says I, I can do nothing in it; says she I will give you a guinea, that will be half a guinea a piece, says I, I cannot make it up, I dare say the prosecutor will not hurt you, that was all I said; I could not stand and see that man robbed. I can bring people to my character, here is one of the beadles here if you please to call him.

Court. Your conduct sufficiently speaks your character.

The prisoner called one witness to her character.

NOT GUILTY.

The patrols were ordered to return the prosecutor his money.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

660. WILLIAM STEPHENS was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 8th day of June, one linen handkerchief, value 10d. the property of Samuel Athawes, Esq.

SAMUEL ATHAWES, Esq. sworn.

On the 8th of June, I saw the prisoner at the bar have my handkerchief in his hand, and throw it down, near Sam's Coffee-house, I took him directly.

——— HEMMET sworn.

I am constable, I produce the handkerchief.

(Depos'd to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was going to Billingsgate to buy fish for my wife's dinner, and I saw the handkerchief upon the ground, I picked it up, and Mr. Athawes took me.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

661. JOHN GRAINGER was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 22d day of May last, one silk handkerchief, value 3s. the property of Bolton Hudson.

BOLTON HUDSON sworn.

On Thursday se'nnight near St. Bartholomew's church-yard I saw three or four lurking persons, about eleven in the forenoon, the prisoner at the bar gave me some suspicion of him, I felt in my pocket and found my handkerchief was gone; I pursued the prisoner at the bar, and saw him throw it away before I took him.

——— MASTERS sworn.

I saw him take the handkerchief from the prosecutor.

SAMUEL

SAMUEL LAURANCE sworn.

I produce the handkerchief.

(The handkerchief deposed to.)

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

662. MARY GREEN was indicted for feloniously ſtealing on the 25th of June twenty ſkeins of white ſewing ſilk, value 20s. the property of Thomas Treſlove and Henry Pulsford.

HENRY PULSFORD ſworn.

I only prove the property.

A WITNESS ſworn.

The priſoner came to our ſhop on Wedneſday morning laſt for a ſkein of ſilk to match a pattern, I was looking for ſome, and ſhe pulled over ſeveral parcels of ſilk which ſhe had no buſineſs with, and I had a ſuſpicion that ſhe was on no good deſign, and I ſaw her put ſome ſilk in her apron, I called up my fellow ſervant, and ſhe was making away out of the door, and I took the ſilk out of her apron, ſhe was ſearched, and a pair of ſtockings was found upon her.

Mr. Peatt, priſoner's Council. There was ſome ſilk in the woman's apron when ſhe came in?——No, I ſaw her take the ſilk and ſlip it under her apron.

Was not ſhe dealing with you for ſilk, and going to buy it of you?——It was not the ſilk that I ſerved her with, it was other ſilk, and nothing like the pattern; it was put by way of concealment; ſhe only wanted a ſingle ſkein, and here is near two pounds.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I know nothing about it, I went to match ſome ſilk.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped, and imprisoned ſix months.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

663. JOHN LLOYD was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 23d of May laſt, one watch, with a gold caſe, value 4l. the property of David Sidney.

DAVID SIDNEY ſworn.

I am ſervant to Lord Milton, I was going to Aſtley's, and I loſt my watch, I ſaid I had loſt my watch; I ſtood in the yard, and repeated the words again, the very ſame night my watch was found in the poſſeſſion of the priſoner, offered to be pawned at Mr. Dry's, in St. Martin's-lane.

ABRAHAM DRY ſworn.

The 23d of April in the evening the priſoner came to me, and brought this watch to pawn for three guineas and a half, I ſtopped him.

(The watch deposed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was going to Aſtley's, I was ſitting down where they pay the money, and picked up this watch, I kicked it with my boots.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

664. LAW

664. LAWRENCE KENNEDY and MARY RICHARDSON, were indicted for feloniously ſtealing on the 26th of May, 60lb. weight of lead, value 12s. belonging to Major Wright, affixed to a certain building of his, againſt the ſtatute.

——— TRACY ſworn.

I am watchman, Mr. Wright lives near the New Cut, Ratcliffe-highway; on Thurſday morning I took ſome lead from a man and woman, they were both together; nobody had the lead; it was between two and three o'clock in the morning, about twenty yards from the proſecutor's houſe; I aſked them where they got it from, they would not tell me; they were ſtanding ſtill when I came up to them, at a butcher's ſtall, they ſtood between me and the lead; I never heard them ſay anything about it ſince.

THOMAS RICHARDS ſworn.

I was officer of the night; I went up when I heard the rattle go, and I ſaw the priſoners; they told me they found it ſtanding up againſt the ſide of the houſe.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

---

665. JOHN EDWARDS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 9th of June ſix iron bars, value 5s. and one iron boiler door, value 2s. belonging to William Parker, affixed to a certain building of his, againſt the ſtatute.

WILLIAM PARKER ſworn.

I live in Sharp's-alley, Cow-croſs, the 9th of June I loſt ſix iron bars, and one iron door; they were taken out of a room, the bars were fixed to the brick-work, and the door was hung on hinges, they were loſt between five and ſix; they were found ſince on Saffron-hill; the priſoner had worked for me once before.

WILLIAM BLACKEY ſworn.

I produce the iron bars; when I took the priſoner, he told me he had ſold them: I told him it was a pity to rob poor people like them, if he had robbed rich people it would not have been ſo bad; and he carried me to the ſhop on Saffron-hill, where he ſold them. Theſe are them.

(Produced and depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

When Mr. Blackey took me, I never ſaid a word to him, I never had anything to do with them.

——— GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

666. SAMUEL CHAMPNESS and EDWARD CROWDER were indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Thomas Read on the King's highway, on the 17th of May laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon and againſt his will, one gold watch, value 5l. and one guinea, value 1l. 1s. his property.

THOMAS READ ſworn.

On Monday evening the 16th of May, Mr. Worral and myſelf had been at Ranelagh, and about two in the morning we were in Duke-ſtreet, Lincoln's-Inn-Fields, on our return, the Hackney coach we were in was ſtopped, and the door opened; I obſerved three men, the one of them immediately quitted and went away; I ſuppoſed him to be at the horſes heads, I only ſaw two of them at the door, and one of the priſoners put his foot on the ſtep, at the ſame time they both aſked for our watches and money immediately; it was ſome time, I ſuppoſe a minute, or a minute and an half, before I could get out my watch, which was laſt, it was a gold watch; and the priſoners had either piſtols, or cutlaſſes, or ſomething, I had one of them in my hand, I rather imagine them to be piſtols; I put it on one ſide, and gave my watch, or my money into the hand of Champneſs, and in his hand I obſerved a wound, and into that hand I put my money or my watch; I can only ſwear to loſing one guinea and my watch; I had loſt more money in the courſe of that night; his hand was covered over, and had ſomething wrapped round it as if it had been wounded; the priſoner Champneſs is the man to whom I gave my watch and money, I ſwear poſitively to him.

What ſort of light was it?——There was light, the day was breaking, there was ſufficient light to diſcern every part of his dreſs; I have his face as ſtrong in my recollection as any friend I may happen to know; I did not ſee Champneſs till the day after, at the bar of the Bow-ſtreet Office, he was in company with others; I believe he came and ſurrendered himſelf, hearing that the Magiſtrates had ſent for him, he came to know what they wanted with him; I mentioned that he was the very man before the Magiſtrate, and I believe Lord Weſtmoreland and another gentleman that were there heard it; I ſhould ſuppoſe that they were a minute or a minute and an half with me, or poſſibly more; I was ſomewhat intimidated, and could not get my watch immediately out, and they were very quiet, and did not ſwear or anything of that kind.

Court. You ſay this paſſed in a minute or a minute and an half, and you was in a hurry, and this was two o'clock, and yet you can venture to ſwear to him?——I am very confident of him, I feel the unhappy circumſtance, I knew him when he came into court, he is the only man I ſwear to; he had a whitiſh waiſtcoat, and a light coloured coat.

Did you obſerve the hand, when you was at the Juſtice's?——I did, immediately as I got home I mentioned the circumſtance.

When you ſaw him at Bow-ſtreet did you obſerve his hand?——Immediately, my Lord, it was in his pocket, it was covered with a handkerchief, it appeared as it did the night before.

Priſoner's Council. This I ſee was a very ſhort tranſaction, ſo ſhort that you had not an opportunity of obſerving whether it was a piſtol, or a cutlaſs, or a ſtick? I obſerved either a piſtol, or cutlaſs, or ſomething, I had hold of a thing which appeared to me like a piſtol, and I put it aſide.

You was ſomewhat intimidated?——I confeſs I was.

So much intimidated that you do not know exactly to whom you gave your money, and to whom you gave your watch?——I know this, that I either gave my money or my watch into the hand that had the wound; I can only ſwear to one guinea; I never ſaw the priſoner before, there was ſomething tied over the hand; I do not know whether there was a thumb-ſtall or not.

The man came to Bow-ſtreet voluntarily?——So I was told; he immediately came to the bar; he ſaid that the officer had been enquiring at his houſe for him, and therefore he walked up; he was with ſeven or eight at the bar.

He was ſhewn to you as a perſon that had ſurrendered himſelf, knowing that enquiries had been made after him?——No, he was not, I ſaw the faces of four or five.

Who was under examination, at that time?——I believe the man in the green coat was at the bar at that time.

Who was in the coach with you?——Mr. Worrall, and a Mr. Hall.

I ſhould ſuppoſe they had the ſame opportunity of obſerving the priſoner that you had?——I was next the door myſelf.

Court. Did you ever ſee your watch afterwards?—No, I never did.

——— WORRALL ſworn.

I do not ſwear to either of the men, only know in general of the robbery.

CHARLE

CHARLES JEALOUS sworn.

On the 16th of May the prisoners were discharged from Sir Sampson's; and the lusty man, Champness had a handkerchief round his hand at that time; this gentleman came on the 17th, to give information.

This man came to the office of his own accord, did he not?—Yes, he did.

Jury to Read. Do you know anything of the other prisoner?—No.

PRISONER CHAMPNESS's DEFENCE.

I leave it to my councel intirely; I hope my surrendering myself is sufficient that I was innocent.

Court to Prosecutor. Did you charge him before you saw his hand?——Before I saw his hand I mentioned it to several persons round.

Prisoner Champness. I confess I had something round my hand; it had been cut; there was not a single person at the bar when I surrendered myself but this young man.

EDWARD CROWDER, NOT GUILTY.
SAMUEL CHAMPNESS, GUILTY, Death.

Prosecutor. I think it a justice to the prisoners, to say, they were perfectly civil.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Justice HEATH.

---

667. JOHN MORRIS and JAMES GUTHRIE were indicted for feloniously assaulting John Marshall, in a certain field and open place near the King's highway, on the 15th of June, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniously taking from his person and against his will, one silver watch, value 40s. one ribbon, value 1d. two steel watch keys, value 2d. one iron key, value 1d. a gold breast buckle, value 5s. a cambrick handkerchief, value 6d. a pair of gloves, value 3d. and one sixpence, value 6d. and eight copper halfpence, and three guineas, value 3l. 3s. his property.

JOHN MARSHALL sworn.

I was servant to the Rev. Mr. Hulse, I lately left him before the robbery, on the 15th of this month, I was coming across Hyde Park, about half after nine in the evening, and I saw two men coming in the path between Grosvenor-gate and Kensington; they were running, I thought they were running a race, they turned short and came to me, Morris came and caught hold of my collar, and made use of a great many vulgar expressions, and demanded my money or my life; I said, do not use me ill, you shall have what I have, it is not much; then the other prisoner put a pistol to my head, I gave them what is mentioned in the indictment, then they shook hands with me and wished me a good night, I called out, and the turncock came to me, I said, I had been robbed by two men, one in soldiers clothes, and the other looked like a groom, says he, I will send the dogs after them; they got away from me at that time, I went round Petty France, and coming up by the Horse Guards or rather by the Admiralty, I met a soldier, which I took to be one of the men, I was not clear in it, I looked at him by the Paywoffice, he stopped with pretence to make water, and a girl of the town came up to him, and I heard her mention a watch, I then did not know whether to take the man and the woman, or the woman alone; I thought of endeavouring to take them both, and just as I was considering, somebody came behind me, and it was Morris, I knew him directly, I took him into custody, he made two blows at my face, says I, my lad you may blather away, I shall not leave my hold; I took him into the tilt-yard, and went to the officers, they said, they had nothing to do with it as it was a robbery, I must get a constable; I said, will you be so obliging to let somebody get me a watchman or constable, a constable came, and I went with him, when he was searched a pair of gloves was found upon him, I said, if

if they are my gloves, I will give a particular mark, one of the fingers of the glove has some wax candle on it, which I got in the service of Lady Coote; there was a quantity of halfpence found upon him he was searched at that time, he was up to his knees in mire and dirt, of which he gave a very poor account; there is a patrol in the Court who will give an account that he found my breast buckle, and likewise the sixpence upon him.

Are you sure now that Morris is one of the men?—I am positive of it.

What became of the soldier?—On Sunday morning the 20th a little before seven o'clock, I met him; I had Morris in the watch-house before eleven the same night, he told the serjeant he had been with his girl to Piccadilly, and he had got the dirt in the kennel, the officer told it was impossible, when the gloves were found on him, I said them are my gloves, and he immediately said good God, they are my gloves; the Sunday after I was going out of my own house, and this soldier was going up Duke-street, St. James's, and I was going along Bury-street, I thought he was the man that robbed me, I hastened up to him, he crossed opposite the church, and pretended to look at the clock, I thought if he went up the church yard, I would go up the court just by, and I followed him into Piccadilly, and I collared him, he said he was innocent, I called for a watchman, and took him to a constable in Jermyne-street, this was about seven on Sunday morning; he was not searched then; on the Monday morning at Litchfield-street, the Magistrate asked me if I could swear to him, I told him I was clear he was the man, but I was conscientious in swearing to him, unless there was property found on him; the Magistrate ordered his quarters to be searched, I desired the constable to take notice of an old white handkerchief, and I went with them, and the very first thing that was found was the handkerchief, and a pistol was found under his bed, it was where he was quartered.

How do you know that?—A man pointed it out.

Was the prisoner himself asked where his lodgings were?—Yes, I believe he told where.

JOSEPH COWPER sworn.

I am a constable, on the 15th of this month the prosecutor brought in the prisoner Morris, I examined him and found only these gloves, and four penny worth of halfpence upon him, and in the morning I searched him again, and found a gold breast buckle, and a sixpence, we put them down in the hole for safety, and the patrol said, here is the breast buckle.

(The breast buckle deposed to.)

Prosecutor. It is an oval breast buckle, it is a very particular buckle, it has a double tongue, and it buckles to my shirt like a shoe buckle.

Cowper. I know nothing of the other prisoner.

WILLIAM BLACKETER sworn.

I belong to Litchfield-street office, the prisoner Guthrie was examined at Litchfield-street office, on the 20th of this month, he was asked where he lodged, he said at the White-bear in Piccadilly, the Magistrate sent me directly to his lodgings, they shewed me his room, and I found this pistol laying under his bed, and this handkerchief a little further, I remember it was said, that the other man had very dirty stockings on, and in a hole I found these dirty stockings.

EPHRAIM HART sworn.

I know the prisoner Guthrie, on the 15th and 20th of this month he was quartered at the White-bear.

In what room?—In the first stairs going up the stairs next to the tap, the first door on the left hand; three or four sleep there at different times, I was not present when the pistol was found; there were two beds in that room, and three or four people used to sleep there, there were no more soldiers that slept there.

Blacketer.

Blackerton. In a room over the ſtable the knapſack hung over the bed, it was the left hand fronting into the yard; I brought Hart afterwards from the office, and ſhewed him the bed where I found the things, and he ſaid it was his bed.

Court to Hart. Is that ſo?—Yes, my Lord.

YOUNG PRICE ROWND ſworn.

I am a conſtable, in the pariſh of St. James's, I had charge given me of the priſoner Guthrie, I went to the White-bear, and ſearched and found nothing in his pockets; Blackerton found a handkerchief and piſtol under his bed, and lifting up the bed he pulled out thoſe ſtockings from a hole covered with a quart pot.

——— PICKERING ſworn.

I am an officer, I went in company with Price and Blackerton, when we came back there was no cock to the piſtol, I aſked the ſoldier where the cock was, ſays he, it is in my knapſack; I came back and ſearched and found the cock, and I took Mr. Hart to ſhew him the bed, and he ſaid, it was the ſoldier's.

(The handkerchief produced and depoſed to.)

Proſecutor. I know it by a mark J. M. and by ſome blood.

PRISONER MORRIS's DEFENCE.

That gentleman made the ſoldier a preſent of five ſhillings to do ſo and ſo, which it is not likely for two men to do together, and he made a bargain to meet the ſoldier; he came to me and my fellow priſoner, and told him and I, that there was a gentleman to meet him, we came to the place and ſaw them both arm in arm, and they were buſſing one another the ſame as a man and a woman; they went to the water ſide, they were up againſt the rails by the water ſide, both of them, and their breeches down, we both went up to them, and ſaw them doing a thing that they ought not; I caught hold of them, ſo ſays I, you ſhall go to the guard room; I took him by the coat four or five yards off, and the proſecutor gave us every thing in the world, ſays he, if you will let me go, I will give you every thing in the world, he pulled out his watch and ſome halfpence, and a ſixpence; we did not take a farthing, he gave them to us; the man is at the door who can prove it.

JOSEPH DIAMOND ſworn.

I am a ſoldier in the firſt regiment of foot-guards, I am come to ſpeak as much on the proſecutor's ſide, as I am on the priſoner's ſide; I was going with a letter into Oxford-road, into Park-ſtreet, and walking through St. James's Park, in the grove I ſaw a gentleman who took great obſervation of me, the gentleman followed me, I rather made a bit of a ſtop and walked up and down once or twice, it was about nine or a quarter after, but as well as I can recollect, I believe it was ten minutes after, the gentleman followed me into Hyde-park, and took great obſervation of me; in St. James's-park I ſtopped, and the gentleman ſtopped; going acroſs Piccadilly into Hyde-park, the gentleman went rather before me, and he ſaid the wind blows very cold indeed, and I ſaid the duſt rather blew, and he aſked me further queſtions which I could not reſolve, queſtions that it was not proper to aſk any man, I did not know the meaning of it, or what it was; he wanted to feel my private parts, and deſired me to feel his; and he ſaw two men coming, ſays he, here are the patrols coming, ſo I ſaid, then let us go that way, and one of the men ſtopped us, and ſaid now I have ſeen all your actions, you b——gg——rs.

Do you know the two men now?—No.

Have you ſeen either of theſe men ſince?——I cannot be poſitive, I cannot ſwear theſe are the men that robbed him, I cannot ſay that, I never ſaw them, I did not know them at that time.

Do you know them now?——I cannot ſay I ſhould know if I was to ſee them; nor I am not poſitive, I ſhould know the gentleman if I was to ſee him, for I never ſaw him before.

How came you to be brought here to day?—By order of Colonel Sir James Duff.

Should not you know the man you call the gentleman that walked with you?——No, I do not know that I ſhould, I never ſaw him before, nor he me as I know of.

Blacketer. I am informed that this very man was in the ſame company with Guthrie, he is one of the ſame company, and they were both out together that night.

Diamond. I did not know the man before that night.

Priſoner Morris. This Diamond cannot deny that he received five ſhillings from the proſecutor the night before on centry?——I am not poſitive that was the gentleman, I was centry the night before, and there was a gentleman came along and gave me five ſhillings, but I am not poſitive that it was this gentleman.

Blacketer. This man ſaid, he was in the ſame company with Guthrie; I met the ſerjeant, and aſked him if he had three men in his company, one named Diamond, and another Guthrie, he ſaid, yes, I went to this Diamond's quarters, and ſearched his lodgings.

PRISONER GUTHRIE's DEFENCE.

My fellow partner that is now at the bar and me, catched theſe two men in a very undecent ſort of manner, ſo my comrade ran up to him, and told him he was worſe than the beaſts in the field; the proſecutor told him he would give him all that he had if I would not take him to the watch-houſe; he gave him his gloves, and ſhoved that old handkerchief into my hand, the other made his eſcape; as for the piſtol which he ſays was preſented to him, I had from the witneſs here that night, I had a ſhort jacket on which I uſually work in, and I thought I ſhould drop it, I held it in my hand, it had no cock to it, and had none for twenty-four hours after I received the piſtol; after we got the property we made up the Park as far as the Mint, this witneſs that is here now, came and received the watch of my fellow criminal, and he went and croſſed over by the Mint, and came down by Tyburn turnpike, there was ſome perſon from the toll-houſe called out, if they ſaw a man in a white frock, I went home, I heard the next morning that my fellow priſoner was taken up, I went from thence to Joſeph Diamond's lodgings, and ſaw the watch, which was then to the beſt of my knowledge with both the hands broken off, and there was an old woollen cloth; this Diamond is the man that ſold the watch, and received the money, and likewiſe was the man that received the piſtol, with the words, you clean that ſometime this week.

Priſoner Guthrie to Diamond. Did not you ſell the watch?——I never ſaw the watch, I have had no watch but my own for theſe two years and a half, and that I brought out of my country, I never had a piſtol in my poſſeſſion in my life, I never had anything but a fuzee of the ſerjeant's and colonel's to clean.

Priſoner Guthrie. Whether this man who is now witneſs, in either reſpect I think he ſtands, only let him ſay whether or not, he did not go on the Friday and take this watch to ſell it to a Jew in Weſtminſter.

Diamond. I never ſaw ſuch a thing, nor never had ſuch a thing in my life.

Court to Marſhall. Did you know Diamond?—I never ſaw him before, my Lord, he aſked the man that ſwore me here in Court, whether I was the proſecutor or not.

Where had you been that evening?——I had been at Kenſington-gardens, I went from home a little before eight, I was coming home.

What time did you go to Kenſington-gardens?——A little before eight.

How long did you ſtay there?—I only juſt went within the gate and returned again, and was coming home acroſs the park.

Was you in St. James's-park that evening?——No, nor that day.

Priſoner Morris. So help me God, them men were in the grove, and went from thence to Hyde-park.

Priſoner Guthrie. This ſame witneſs, and the proſecutor were together, and making free with one another as if they had been man and woman; he paſſed through the grove, and we ſtood as if we were looking

ing through the rails, we ſtruck through the park, and got to the gate that leads to Piccadilly; theſe two men were in a very indecent and unaccountable manner, for me or any other perſon to expreſs.

DAVID SUTHERLAND ſwear.

I have know the priſoner Morris upwards of twelve years, he always behaved very well, and very honeſt, I never knew anything bad of him before.

What is he?—A porter about the town, carrying coals, and going of errands, and working, I never heard anything bad of him before.

The priſoner Morris called another witneſs who gave him a good character.

Priſoner Guthrie. Mr. Hart will give me a character.

Hart. I have known him four months, I have known no harm of him in the leaſt, always a man that wiſhed to earn a ſhilling if he could, I believe there are gentlemen in the inn that will ſpeak to his character.

DANIEL DRIVER ſworn.

I came to ſpeak for the ſoldier, he has lodged in the gallery at the White Bear for ſix years, I never knew him offer to meddle with anything; as to the room, there is all manner of people lays there, three or four in a room, I drive a hackney coach, and I go in there for lights at two or three o'clock in the morning.

Court to Proſecutor. Is there anybody here that was with you that evening, or that knows you?—Nobody was with me, but I could bring perſons enough to my character, but I did not know it was neceſſary.

Priſoner Morris. He bears a very bad character by all report.

Proſecutor. I believe I can have a character from the gentleman whom I had the honour to ſerve, and a very good one; I left him becauſe I have been to learn to dreſs ladies and gentlemen's hair, and he did not want a ſervant.

Court to Jury. Gentlemen, to this crime there is a very ſerious defence ſet up, and as groſs and as ſcandalous a reflection on the proſecutor as men could throw out; if the proſecutor appeared to be a man addicted to ſuch abominable practices as they attribute to him, it would go to affect his credit; however, they charge him directly with being in a moſt indecent ſituation with another man, and that he gave them theſe things to make his peace; but then they have proved that by a witneſs, with reſpect to whom it is not neceſſary there ſhould be anything further to blaſt his character and credit than his own teſtimony, for he tells you out of his own mouth, that his conduct was ſo ſcandalous, that the night before he took five ſhillings from ſome man as a conſideration for ſuch abominable practices, ſo that he has proved himſelf to be a worthleſs, profligate fellow, and deſerves no credit; if you credit the proſecutor, the defence of the priſoners makes their caſe much worſe, and if they extorted money from him under the idea of ſuch a crime as this, it does not excuſe them.

BOTH GUILTY Death.

Court to Priſoners. I am thoroughly ſatisfied as well as the Jury, that the whole ſtory that you have told, is abſolutely falſe, and deſtitute of the ſmalleſt foundation: I ſaid to the Jury in the courſe of ſumming up the evidence, that I thought your defence a great aggravation to your crimes; and I think it proper to tell you now, before you are taken from the bar, that if I am called upon to give any account of this trial, I ſhall certainly ſay it is proper that the judgment of the law ſhould take its full courſe upon you.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

668. JAMES LOCKART was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 22d of June, eighteen diamonds, value 110l. eleven ſtrings of pearls, value 41l. one hair ring ſet with diamonds, value 18l. two ſapphire rings, value 10l. a gold ſtock buckle, kle, value 3l. one antique ring, value 3l. and two linen handkerchiefs, value 4s. the property of Ewen Bailey, Esq; in the dwelling house of Narcissa Marshall.

EWEN BAILEY, Esq; sworn.

Early in June, 1784, I had in my possession returning from India, diamonds and pearls to a certain amount, which were shewn to a broker, Mr. Sharpe, for the purpose of being disposed of in the usual course of business, some time had elapsed when a person was brought in order to purchase those diamonds, I think it was a Mr. Randall, he was brought by Mr. Sharpe, and upon examining these diamonds, this Mr. Randall found a deficiency from the original invoice, Mr. Randall and Mr. Sharpe ascertained the quantity that were taken out by comparing with the invoice, and Mr. Sharp sold the pearls to Mr. Randall, not supposing as I believe, or not knowing, or not suspecting that there was any robbery committed on them; the pearls were sold according to the invoice, and the diamonds according to the deduction of the ascertained number of the stones that were taken out; Mr. Sharpe acquainted my agent sometime after (I was not in town myself.) that upon Mr. Randall's having sold these pearls to a certain person there appeared a deficiency in the pearls, Mr. Sharpe advertised these pearls and diamonds, and circulated hand-bills in the usual form, these produced no discovery; I could not at that time fix the robbery on any particular person: in the course of last month I was going out of town, and I took from my finger a diamond ring that was made by Gray in Bond-street, and put it in one of my lodgings in a drawer, the house is in St. Alban's-street, No. 11, the house of Narcissa Marshall; I lodged there when the former things were stolen, the prisoner was my servant, and had been so during the whole time, he had lived a little more than twelve months with me at this time, and he had formerly lived in my service: upon my return to town I looked for this ring and could not find it, I think I was absent ten days, the prisoner was not with me, I left him in town, I left it in a drawer in a mahogany box, and the box was locked up, I had the key; I enquired of my servant, who denied having seen it or knowing anything of it; when I returned the box was locked as I left it; I could not arrive at any knowledge of this ring, and it then struck me very forcibly that this servant must be privy to it, and I recollected having seen in the same box two sapphire rings, and a gold stock-buckle, and they were missing also; that confirmed me in the idea of the prisoner's dishonesty; I then came into a resolution of quitting everybody that was about me, from the discomfort of having a thief about me, I quitted my lodgings and went into a house of my own, and the prisoner was the only person I took with me; I mentioned the circumstance to the gentlemen at the Rotation-office, and they sent to search his boxes, I was present at the search, and in searching his baggage there was found that ring, made by Mr. Gray, the stones of an antique ring that belonged to me also, and two handkerchiefs with my name; the ring made by Mr. Gray was a hair ring set with diamonds of a particular form, the sapphire rings and the gold stock-buckle are accounted for, but not found.

Mr. Garrow, Councel for the Prosecution. After he was taken into custody were there any promises made to him, that it would be better for him if he would say anything on the subject?——I sent to him, and told him my determination to quit everybody that I had about me, and that it was necessary to recommend him to the next service, that he should undergo a search that my mind might be convinced; I advised him to make a full discovery, which he did not.

——— DIXON sworn.

I went to search this house, and found this ring; I was searching the drawers in the room where the prisoner lay, and just as I came to the drawer where the ring was, he went down on his knees, and said he would would ſhew where it was; and I found it in a powder bag, mixed with the powder; it was in the caſe juſt as it is now; I found the ſtones of a ring, and theſe two handkerchiefs; here is the antique; and I found two keys in one of his breeches pockets in the drawer, which opens two of the Major's boxes, I tried them, and the Major tried them, theſe picklock keys opened the boxes as eaſy as the Major's keys.

(The diamond ring depoſed to.)

Proſecutor. This ring I purchaſed of Mr. Gray in Bond-ſtreet; I am clear it is the ſame, the form of the ring is particular, I have no doubt of its being mine from the hair in the inſide; it was made by my particular directions; this is the ſtone of a ring that I wore, when I loſt it it was ſet; I have had it ſeveral years, I have no doubt of this being the ſame; I examined the keys that were found, they opened and ſhut the boxes.

JOHN GRANT ſworn.

Mr. Silveſter, Priſoner's Council. This property muſt have been found out in conſequence of the confeſſion.

Court. It ſtrikes me from the evidence Mr. Bailey gave at the outſet, that it will be extremely difficult, perhaps ultimately ſo, to identify theſe diamonds and pearls, the value of the things already produced go far beyond the mark the law fixes.

Mr. Garrow. I wiſh to call Mr. Grant.

Mr. Silveſter. With ſubmiſſion, whatever comes to you, is in conſequence of the confeſſion of this boy.

Court. Unſuſpected and voluntary confeſſions are the beſt evidence againſt offenders, and it is from the apprehenſion that promiſes of favour or threats might induce a man of a weak mind, like torture in ſome countries, in order to obtain the benefit of thoſe promiſes, or to eſcape thoſe threats, to make a confeſſion that was not wholly true; but that can never go to the rejection of the evidence of other witneſſes which is got at in conſequence of that confeſſion, as the law is clearly ſettled.

Mr. Silveſter. The examination of Mr. Grant is for the purpoſe of ſupporting out of his own mouth, an action againſt him.

Mr. Garrow. I have no difficulty in ſtating what my purpoſe is, independent of any action, I think it my duty that he ſhould be examined.

Court. Had it been wholly immaterial, I dare ſay you would not have deſired to add leſs evidence to the ſtronger, and the reſiſtance to it would decide me in receiving the evidence, if I had no other motive.

JOHN GRANT ſworn.

I am a jeweller.

Did you at any time purchaſe any articles in your way of trade of the priſoner at the bar?—I purchaſed a few pearls of him, ſix ſtrings of pearls, in December laſt.

What price did you pay for them?——Ten pounds.

Did you purchaſe any other articles of him?——No, Sir.

Did you at any other time purchaſe any rough diamonds of him?——No, Sir, not of him.

Did you of anybody that came with this man?——No, Sir, not in his company.

Court. Did you purchaſe of anybody you ever ſaw in his company?—Yes.

When did you ſee that perſon in the company of the priſoner?——Some time before.

Had you any converſation with the priſoner at that time?—No, I think they came firſt together.

Did they come together when he ſold the pearls to you?——I cannot recollect, upon my honour.

What complexioned perſon was he, black or white?——He was a mulatta, a genteeliſh looking man.

What time was it that you purchaſed any diamonds of the other?—In the ſame month.

Was it after or before you purchaſed the pearls from the priſoner?——I think it was after, I think it might be eight or ten days after.

Have you your books here?—No.

Will not it appear by your books when you purchaſed them?——I do not know it will.

Do not you enter theſe things in your books?—I am not a regular book-keeper.

Court. Is there any other evidence to this property, not out of Mr. Grant's mouth?

Mr. Garrow. There are, but they are not here.

Mr. Grant. My book ſhews the ſum of money, but there is no quantity; my man corroborates the circumſtance, but he is not here.

Then it reſts upon the memory of you and your man?——Yes.

Is that the uſual courſe of your buſineſs?—I ſeldom buy pearls, I do not deal much in them.

Do you frequently buy diamonds in the rough ſtate?——Not very often, I cannot ſay that I bought any others, I believe not.

How many ſtrings of pearls might you buy beſides theſe?—I have bought diamonds ready wrought, and ſtrings of pearls; I really cannot ſay, but I believe half a dozen or a dozen in that ſtate.

Did you conſider the ten pounds as the full value of the pearls upon your oath?—I ſold them for thirteen pounds, I ſold them to different people.

When did you ſell them?—Immediately after, I do not buy theſe things to keep by me.

What is your man's name who was preſent?——James Lucas; he lives with me now.

Mr. Garrow. Did the priſoner purchaſe any thing of you at the time he ſold theſe things?——Yes, a pair of ſilver buckles at three guineas and an half.

Did he aſk for buckles at firſt?—He did.

Jury. Theſe buckles were a part of the ten pounds?——Yes.

Court. Let me look at theſe buckles.

(The buckles handed up.)

Mr. Grant. They coſt five guineas from the maker.

They are a large and heavy pair; is not yours a pretty conſiderable ſhop?——Not very conſiderable.

How long have you been in buſineſs?—About three years.

Did the priſoner come to you in livery?——No, he did not, he made a very genteel appearance; I looked upon him as a dealer coming from India.

Mr. Bailey. He never wore any livery, I believe the other perſon was alſo one of my ſervants.

Court to Mr. Grant. Did you aſk theſe perſons any queſtions how they came by theſe pearls and diamonds?——They ſaid they brought them over from India; they ſaid they lodged in the Haymarket, and were dealers, they did not ſay they were ſervants.

Did you ſuppoſe them to be merchants that had come over from India to diſpoſe of their property?—If I had had the leaſt ſuſpicion I ſhould not have bought them, I had no ſuſpicion of them; I have ſtopped things.

Mr. Silveſter. Were not the things left at your houſe for ſome time?——Eight or ten days; I did not buy them raſhly at the firſt coming, I thought they had been all over the trade, I ſent my man to enquire whether they lodged there, becauſe one of them was about buying a gold watch.

WILLIAM SHARPE ſworn.

Mr. Garrow. What is your profeſſion?——A diamond broker, I ſaw a parcel of pearls, out of which Mr. Bailey miſſed ſome. Mr. Bailey firſt produced me the invoice of diamonds, by India weights; on opening them and ſhewing them, I found them once exactly agreeable to the invoice, the pearls I counted and weighed myſelf, and when I firſt ſaw them they tallied exactly with the invoice; after this I returned them to Mr. Bailey; I had the pearls five or ſix days, we did not agree on the purchaſe of them, and I returned them to him.

What quantity of pearls were miſſing when you had them the ſecond time?

(Refers to a memorandum.)

Mr.

Mr. Bailey. I returned them to Mr. Sharpe in the ſame ſtate.

Mr. Sharpe. I found, that inſtead of weighing twenty-ſix carats, they only weighed twenty-three the ſecond time; the deficiency of diamonds was one hundred; the pearls I valued at 600l. Mr. Rumbold bought them at 550l. clear of all deductions; and according to the 600l. the proportion of pearls that were taken were worth 41l. 14s.

Mr. Garrow. How much was the value of the ſix ſtrings of theſe pearls which you had ſeen, and which you had received from Major Bailey?—If five of theſe ſtrings were ſold by the ounce they would be worth about 5l. I cannot aſcertain the value.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

Theſe diamonds that were ſtolen from Major Bailey, a ſervant he had before told me that the Major had ſomething belonging to him in his hat-box, and would be obliged to me to get him the key to take out his goods, I gave the key to the ſervant, he took out ſeventeen pieces in diamonds, and nine ſtrings of pearls, and he told me they were his goods; and theſe pearls he ſold at Mr. Grant's for ten pounds, and Mr. Grant told him he would give him ten pounds for them, becauſe he bought a pair of buckles of him; theſe diamonds he left at Mr. Grant's, becauſe Mr. Grant ſaid he would ſhew them to ſome gentlemen, and bid him call again the next day, he called, and ſold theſe diamonds to Mr. Grant. I aſk my character from Major Bailey, he has known my character for eight years and ſeven months.

Court to Major Bailey. How did this man behave?——I had him at ſeven years of age, I took him at the time of the general famine in Bengal, millions were ſtarving, I took this boy and kept him five or ſix years, I brought him here and educated him, and transferred him to a family of my particular acquaintance, the family of General Lockyer; upon my return to India he came to me upon paying off a ſervant, and five or ſix days after I miſſed theſe things.

Court. How long has he been reſident in England?——I came home in 1773, he was then with me, he was at leaſt ten years reſident in England.

Priſoner. As for the ring that was found in my cuſtody, Major Bailey went out of town, and he left this ring in the table drawer; the table drawer has neither lock nor key; one day I found this ring and laid it by; and unfortunately I had this ring in my cuſtody, and the Major told me if I confeſſed every thing, that he ſhould forgive me; I was immediately frightened, I had not power to expreſs myſelf; but I leave it to his own judgment, and when they came into my room and ſearched my trunk, I kneeled down on my knees, and told him, ſince his goodneſs had promiſed to forgive me if I would confeſs where it was.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

669. PATRICK BURKE was indicted for that he, well knowing that one Richard Smith deceaſed, had ſerved our Lord the King on board the Robuſt, and that certain wages and pay were due to him at the time of his death, for ſuch ſervice, on the 7th day of January laſt did appear in his proper perſon before the worſhipful Andrew Coltee Ducarel, Doctor of Laws, &c. and then and there did produce and exhibit a certain paper, partly printed and partly written, with the name Richard Smith thereto ſubſcribed, purporting to be his laſt will and teſtament, and to be ſigned, ſealed, publiſhed and declared by the ſaid Richard Smith, on the 25th of February, 1780; and that he, before the ſaid Andrew, unlawfully, willingly, knowingly and feloniouſly did take a falſe oath to the purport and effect following, that is to ſay, that that paper contained the laſt will and and teſtament of Richard Smith, meaning the ſaid paper partly printed and partly written, and that he was the executor therein named, meaning that he was the executor named in the ſaid paper, partly printed and partly written, the ſaid Andrew having then and there ſufficient power and lawful and competent authority to adminiſter the ſaid oath; whereas the ſaid paper did not contain the ſaid laſt will and teſtament; and whereas at the time he produced and exhibited the ſaid will, he well knew that the ſame did not contain the ſaid laſt will; and whereas he was not the executor of the ſaid laſt will and teſtament; with intent to obtain the probate of the ſaid paper partly printed and partly written, in order to obtain the ſaid wages and pay ſo due as aforeſaid, againſt the ſtatute.

A ſecond count, For that he ſuppoſing that wages and pay were due to the ſaid Richard Smith, did take a falſe oath in manner aforeſaid, in order to receive ſuch wages and pay which he ſuppoſed to be ſo due to the ſaid Richard Smith, againſt the ſtatute.

The Indictment opened by Mr. Fielding. and the Caſe by Mr. Baldwin.

HENRY HUNTER WILLIAMS ſworn.
(Examined by Mr. Silveſter.)

I am a clerk in the Ticket-office, in the Navy office, here are the books of the Medway for the year 1775; this is the Medway's muſter-book, it is entered Richard Smith, he is muſtered here as an able ſeaman, aged thirty, in December, 1775, he was turned over from here to the Robuſt, and in the Robuſt's book he is deſcribed the 7th of May, 1778, coming from the Medway, and born at Peterborough.

How long did he continue on board the Robuſt?——He is entered on the Robuſt's pay book to have been turned over the 21ſt of January, 1782; and to have died in the Prince George the 24th of January, 1782.

On the 25th of February, 1780, where was the Robuſt?——She was at anchor in Tybee Road, and by the Robuſt's book it appears Richard Smith was muſtered on board the ſhip for the whole month of February, 1780; here is Henry Clayton that was ſhip's barber, that was ſent to New-York hoſpital, the 14th of November 1779, he never appears to have returned to the ſhip, he comes from the Robuſt, and on the 14th of Auguſt, 1780, he died in the Hoſpital at Long-Iſland, I do not know the priſoner.

Was any wages paid by your books, to a man of the name of Patrick Burke, the 21ſt of January, 1783?——He appears till the 27th of January, 1779, and was ſent ſick to Halifax hoſpital.

When was he firſt muſtered on the Robuſt's books?—The 17th of March, 1778, from the Conqueſtadore, as a preſſed man he was diſcharged from the hoſpital, on the 20th of November in the ſame year; and he appears on the 26th of November, in the ſhip's books again.

How long did he continue on the Robuſt's books after that?——Till the 11th of September, 1782, he received his wages at different times, he was diſcharged the 11th of September 1782, into the Sandwich, and was paid on the 21ſt of January, 1783, and his wages appear to be paid the 19th of January, 1785, to Patrick Burke, excutor.

Court. Have you gone through the books of the Robuſt, ſo as to ſay, during the time between the year 1778, and the year 1780, whether there was any other man of the name of Richard Smith on board the Robuſt?——It does not appear that there was, but where there are two men of the ſame name, at the ſame time, they generally diſtinguiſh them by firſt and ſecond.

Was there any other ſeaman of the name of Richard Smith on board the Robuſt?—Here does not appear to be any.

Have you examined ſo that you could ſee if there was any?——From Auguſt, 1778, there does not appear to be any.

Priſoner. There were more Smiths than Richard Smith, there were three more Smiths beſides.

Court. Look into that?——There was a boatſwain named John Smith, and a purſer of the name of Henry Smith, and there is a landſman of the name of John Smith.

Priſoner.

Prisoner. There is not the name of Joseph Smith?——There are several more Smiths, numbers, but none of Richard.

Jury. We wish to know whether this Richard Smith is rated on the ship's books of the Prince George, as an able seaman?—No, he is not, he is not rated here, he is said to come from the Robust, he is a supernumerary man, he is a lent man to be returned again; entered as from the Robust.

THOMAS FLETCHER sworn.

I am clerk in the prerogative office, I produce the original will of Richard Smith, which I had from the prerogative office, I do not know the prisoner.

WILLIAM COMMERFORD CLARKSON sworn.

I am Clerk to Mr. Faulkner, I have seen the prisoner.

Upon what occasion did you see him?—To produce that will.

Who produced that will?——The prisoner at the bar produced that will at Mr. Faulkner's office, to prove the will, I attended him and wrote the jurat, on the 7th of January, 1785, and he attended me and took the oath on the 7th of January; that is my hand writing.

Court. From whom did you take the instructions for writing the jurat?—From the will.

Did the prisoner tell you what his name was, or who he was?——A conversation took place on the 5th of January in the evening when he first produced this will, I apprehending it was a forgery from the similitude of a letter in another forged will, he said, it was not, that he was the executor, and that it was a fair will; I was present when he took the oath.

Who was the oath taken before?—Dr. Ducarrel, I was present when he signed it, I saw him sign it.

(The will read dated the 25th of February, 1780; witnesses Henry Claxton and Daniel Gearing: and the 7th of January, 1785, Patrick Burke executor was duly sworn as usual, proved at London.)

SPENCER ENO sworn.

I know the prisoner, I have seen him on his examination before the Lord Mayor, he was asked where the will was executed, he said, at a public house in New York, this was on the 27th of May last, either the Lord Mayor or Mr. Evans asked him, and he said, that Claxton one of the witnesses was empowered by several of the seamen to execute wills for them, and that he filled up this will, and wrote Smith's name to the will in his presence, and that Smith impowered Claxton to write his name, which he did in his presence, and in the presence of the other two.

Court. Was he asked any question, what was become of Claxton or the other witnesses to the will?——No, I do not believe he was.

Was his examination taken in writing?—No, it was not.

HENRY HILL sworn.

I am a seaman on board the Robust, I knew Richard Smith vastly well.

Do you know the prisoner?——Yes, very well.

What was he on board the Robust?—Captain's sweeper.

What was Smith?—He was Captain of the after guard, then he was broke and put into the waste, and then he was made Captain of the mast, he belonged to the march in Cambridgeshire, he was what they call a lighterman.

Court. Did the prisoner ever tell you what countryman he was?——I have heard he was an Irishman, the prisoner was on board the ship.

Did you ever hear them call one another relations?——No, never, Richard Smith messed with me near two years.

Did you ever hear the deceased talk of his relations?—I never heard him mention anybody but his sister.

Could he write?—I do not think he could write to the best of my knowledge.

When did you leave New York to go to Tybee?——On Christmas-day, 1779.

How long did you continue at Tibee?——About five or six weeks, I believe, we sailed on the Christmas-day, and went to Charles Town, Halifax; and we sailed again in June.

Where was you in February?—Why, upon our paſſage I think.

Jury. Pleaſe to aſk the witneſs whether he obſerved any particular friendſhip between Richard Smith and the priſoner?—There might be, but not to my knowledge, they were meſſmates once.

Court. Was that after the time that you and Smith meſſed together?——Yes, we went from Sandy Hook to Halifax, about the 10th of June, 1780.

Was Smith with you on your paſſage from Charles Town to Halifax?——I cannot ſay whether he was or not, there were one hundred and fifty went on ſhore at Tybee.

Do you remember whether he was on board at Tybee?——I cannot, we had a great many went bad on ſhore at Long-Iſland.

Are abſent men if abſent with leave, ever muſtered in their abſence?—No, not after the firſt month, they are kept on the ſhip's books a month.

Are they never kept longer by any indulgence or favour of the officers, is it never done?—Not that I know of, I cannot of my own knowledge ſay, whether Richard Smith was at Tybee or not, he was not my meſſmate then.

Was the priſoner at Tybee or not?—I cannot remember that, I belonged to one part of the ſhip, and they belonged to another, a good many of the men were left on ſhore at New York, and Long Iſland.

Did you know Henry Claxton?—Yes.

What was he on board?—Ship's barber.

Could he write and read?——Yes, I believe he could.

Do you remember when he died?—No, I cannot ſay, I believe he died in Long-Iſland.

Do you know anything of Daniel Gearing?—Yes, he was a ſeaman on board, I ſaw him laſt May was a twelvemonth, on Tower-hill.

Is he living?——I do not know.

Was you much acquainted with him?—No, Sir, I was acquainted with a very few people on board the ſhip, except my meſſmates.

Do you happen to know whether he was at Tybee?——There were ſo many went on ſhore as Tybee, that I cannot recollect who they were.

Court to Williams. Does it appear when Daniel Gearing was diſcharged?——The 11th of September, 1782, into the Sandwich.

Does it appear where he is now?——He is not on board the Sandwich, he was afterwards on board the Triumph.

JAMES COX ſworn.

I was a ſeaman on board the Robuſt, I knew Richard Smith.

Did you ever hear from him what countryman he was?——He was a man that always uſed to nominate from Norfolk.

Have you ever heard the priſoner and Smith ſay they were relations?—Never.

Do you know what countryman the priſoner is?—An Iriſhman.

Was you on board the ſhip with Claxton?——Yes, he went on ſhore at Long-Iſland.

Do you know whether Smith could write or no?——He never could read or write.

Did you know Smith well?—He was my meſſmate ſometime.

Did you ſee Smith at Tybee?——He was on Board the ſhip Tybee, I am quite clear, he was on board the ſhip, and came to Halifax with us.

Was Burke with you?—Yes.

Both at Tybee and Hallifax?——Yes.

Was Daniel Gearing on board?—Yes, he was on board the ſhip.

AMEY JOHNSON ſworn.

Where do you live?—At Peterborough in Northamptonſhire.

Had you any ſon?——Yes.

What was his name?—Richard Smith.

What was he?——A waterman, he was apprentice at March, in the iſle of Ely, with one Daniel Peggs; after that he went to ſea, he was preſſed, and before he would be be preſſed, he entered for the Race-horſe, then he went to Plymouth, and ſtaid there a year before they went off.

Where did you hear from him afterwards?—The laſt letter I had from him, I had from Halifax hoſpital, he had been at ſea almoſt twenty years on and off, he was preſſed in January about ten years ago.

Where was he born?——In Peterborough, he was about twenty-one when he was preſſed.

Was he born before or after the rebellion?—He was born in the rebellion 1745, I am ſure he was born in that year.

Court. You are clear in that?——Yes.

What age are you?——Threeſcore and twelve.

Had you ever a relation of the name of Patrick Burke?—Never in my life.

Court. Look at that man?——I know no more of him than you do, nor he is not a kin to me.

Did your ſon ever give to you any will or power?——No, Sir, only what was in the letter he ſent me, he talked of making one if he ſhould have got any money.

Had the father of Richard Smith any ſiſter?——None at all, he has been dead many years.

What countryman was he?—He lived in a place called Morrah by Wiſbech, I do not know where he came from, he belonged to Morrah, he made a ſettlement there, he had no ſiſters.

Had you ever any ſiſters?——Yes, they never were any of them married.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

My Lord, I cannot read or write, that bill I had of Richard Smith, and I made him a will the ſame time to take my wages any thing ſhould happen.

When or where was that?——Indeed I cannot ſay where or how it was, it is ſo long ago.

Do you remember where the will was executed that Smith gave to you?——I think it was at New-York, but I am not ſure where it was.

What is become of Daniel Gearing the other witneſs?—I do not know.

Have you made any enquiry for him ſince this proſecution?—No.

The Jury retired for ſometime, and returned with a verdict

GUILTY Death.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

670. GEORGE MORRIS otherwiſe ROBERTS was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of John Hancock, about the hour of ten in the night, on the 26th of May, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, one black ſilk mode cloak, trimmed with black lace, value 5s. a linen ſhift, value 1s. a cap, value 6d. an apron, value 6d. another apron, value 6d. a pair of ſleeves, value 1s. a box, value 6d. the property of Suſannah Sullivan.

SUSANNAH SULLIVAN ſworn.

I live at the Bell Savage Inn, I am ſervant to Mr. Hancock, I loſt ſome things on the 26th of May, about ten at night, I loſt a box with the things mentioned in the indictment, I miſſed the box when I went to bed, I ſaw it at four in the afternoon, the window was faſtened with a nail; the conſtable has the things.

JOHN HANCOCK ſworn.

I live at the Bell-Savage, I keep the tap, the houſe belongs to Mr. Harder, the window was ſafe that afternoon between four and five.

JOHN CLARKE ſworn.

I took the priſoner, it was about one in the morning, we ſearched him and found theſe things that are here about him, on the 26th of May; he had theſe things tied under his waiſtcoat, and ſhirt, and breeches concealed, they were wrapped round, under der his waiſtcoat, and in his breeches ſtuffed full, he ſaid, theſe things were given to him on the other ſide of the water by his mother, we did not believe it, we took him to the Compter.

WILLIAM FORSYTH ſworn.

On the 26th of May, about one I met the priſoner, I ſaid what have you here, and he ſaid damn me, what is that to you, and we found theſe things on this boy.

THOMAS HIGHWOOD ſworn.

The priſoner and me were ſitting together at the Old Baily, and the priſoner ſaid, he knew where to get linen, and I aſked him where, he ſaid, the back part of the Fleet; with that we went together, and went down Fleet-lane, and went through Mrs. Wright's wine vaults, and got up the wall, and went along the wall, and came to the window belonging to the houſe of the proſecutor, and we came to the window, and went to lift the window up and found the window faſtened, and he took a knife and broke the glaſs, and pulled a nail out that made the window faſt, and went in and fetched this box out, and we went and ſtood atop of the window, and he took the box and cut the lid, and took out the things and carried them away; coming up Fleet-ſtreet the patrols aſked him where he was going, and he ſaid, damn me, what is that to you? then he run away, and they ran after him and took him.

What time was it, when you got to the Bell Savage?—About ten o'clock.

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Council. Where did you meet this boy on the day the robbery was committed?—We had been together ſwimming.

You made uſe, I believe, of ſome force to make this boy go w'th you, as threats?—No, Sir, I did not, he aſked me to go.

What converſation has paſſed between you and any perſon, at any time, reſpecting the reward you were to have for convicting this boy?—I do not want nothing.

Have you had no converſation of that ſort with no perſon?—No, Sir, I have not.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

All that I have to ſay, I leave to my Counſel.

Jury. How did you know there was a thoroughfare from Mr. Wright's to the Bell Savage?——Becauſe that boy knew it, we ſaw nothing of the people of the houſe, nor they of us, we came back the ſame way.

THOMAS RASTON ſworn.

I was in company between the priſoner and the evidence, we went up to the New-River to bathe, and I perſuaded young Roberts to go home to his father and mother, and this boy whiſpered to him, he touched him on the toe.

Did he uſe any force of any kind?—No.

RICHARD SMALL ſworn.

Depoſed to the ſame effect.

The priſoner called one witneſs who gave him a good character, and ſaid, he was between twelve and thirteen years of age.

(The things depoſed to.)

GUILTY, Death.

He was humbly recommended to mercy on account of his youth.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

The next Part will be publiſhed in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 29th of JUNE, 1785, and the following Days;
Being the SIXTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER VI. PART V.

LONDON:
Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)
And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and
S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.
M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

671. BENJAMIN MOORE, THOMAS GROVES, and JOHN WILLIAMS were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 4th of June one table ſpring repeating clock, value 6l. one purſe made of ſilk and gold, value 6d. and one reading-glaſs, value 1s. the property of Frances Cotton, ſpinſter, in her dwelling houſe.

(The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of the priſoner.)

JOHN PEARSON ſworn.

I am gardener to Mrs. Cotton, I lodge in the houſe, in the morning of the 4th of this month, about half after two or near three, I was alarmed by the houſe dog; I got out of bed and went up the great ſtair-caſe, I ſtopped ſome time, and heard no noiſe below, I went to bed again for a minute, and I got out again, the dog ſtill alarmed me, and I went out upon the leads, I heard the noiſe of the great iron gate, which makes a creaking, I immediately went to the parapet wall and looked over, and I ſaw five men in a boat, which lay about forty yards off in the river, about thirty yards from the ground; I went down ſtairs and found all the doors wide open, I went into the fore court and found the hall door open; I went to ſee what o'clock it was to be punctual to the time, the clock was gone; I ſaw it when I went to bed, and I heard it ſtrike eleven and twelve; then I called up my fellow ſervant to come down and ſhut up the houſe that I might purſue the thieves, for the houſe was robbed; the men in the boat went off towards Crabtree, down the river, William Mumford was with me, and nobody elſe, till I came to Chelſea, then we alarmed Mr. Graves a waterman, and he came to our aſſiſtance, but in the mean time there were two or three more, and I deſired them to man a galley, for that the galley which contained theſe five men, that I took particular notice, came from Hammerſmith, I called up our butcher, Mr. Hammond of Hammerſmith, to get a horſe, and when we came oppoſite to Chelſea waterſide, we ſaw the ſame boat and perſons, I immediately manned a boat, and ſent four men after them; I took ſuch particular marks of the boat and of the men, as near as I could by the time in the morning.

Should you know the men again?—No, I know ſo far as to their ſtature, but I never ſwore to the men. I have a ſuſpicion that theſe are the men, I can ſwear to the marks and colour of the boat and the clothes of the men, but not to the men's perſons; the colour of the boat was the inſide painted green, almoſt new apparently to me, and the ſculls painted lead colour.

GEORGE

GEORGE ALLEN ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mrs. Cotton, I know the blue and gold purſe and reading-glaſs to be in the bureau, I was the laſt perſon that ſaw them there, when the bureau was locked, that was near a month before the robbery was committed; the key of the bureau was with Mrs. Cotton, who was at her town houſe in Harley-ſtreet.

ABRAHAM GRAVES ſworn.

I purſued this boat from Chelſea in my own boat, rowed by three men, and I ſteered it.

Did you overtake the priſoners?——I followed them as far as Nine Elms, Batterſea, then they went on ſhore; I told the men to row, and pull as faſt as they could, we got aſſiſtance from the maltmen, and they apprehended them.

Are you ſure it was the ſame men?——The very ſame men; I found nothing about them but two keys, which I took out of Groves's pocket.

Priſoner Groves. Where did you ſee us firſt?——Oppoſite Chelſea church.

Did you call out to us before we went on ſhore?——No.

WILLIAM MUMFORD ſworn.

I am a waterman at Hammerſmith, I went with Pearſon in purſuit of the five men in the boat, and when we came to Chelſea they were right a-breaſt of us, and we took them; I did not ſee any property upon them, we found a cutlaſs and a brace of piſtols in the barge.

ROBERT NORCOTT ſworn.

I am a maltſman, I was at the Nine Elms, I remember the priſoners coming there by water in a wherry, there were four and a waterman came down, ſomebody hallooed out, ſtop thief, I ſaw the men, and they rowed a ſhore at the cauſeway at Nine Elms, they ran by me, and I ſaw the man run by me with a piſtol and a cutlaſs in his hand, that was the priſoner Groves; they gave no account of themſelves to me.

JAMES POWELL ſworn.

I am a fiſherman at Chelſea, I was in the purſuit, here are two iron crows, one was inſide the barge, and the other ſtuck in the plank.

BENJAMIN LITTLE ſworn.

I am a bargeman, I ſaw the three priſoners running, ſeeing me they went back, and they were ſtopped; I went up and aſſiſted; I ſaw the priſoner Williams ſtopped, this bunch of picklock keys was given to me by a waterman, and this piſtol was picked up by ſomebody that is not here.

JAMES WHITE ſworn.

I am a waterman, I produce a cutlaſs, which I found in a barge; I ſaw them row by the barge, but I ſaw them throw nothing in; I helped in taking them, they were not charged with anything.

JOHN COATES ſworn.

I am a fiſherman at Chelſea, I went in purſuit of theſe men, I apprehended them, and I found this dark lanthorn, and a bunch of keys in the boat.

Was it in the boat that they had been in?——Yes, the ſame boat.

Are the priſoners the men?——Yes, I am ſure of it.

RICHARD KING ſworn.

I am a maltſman, at Nine Elms, I joined in apprehending the priſoners, I found nothing, I had this cutlaſs from Robert Norcott, who picked it up.

Norcott. I gave it to him, I ſaw a man that picked it up in the barge, they got out of their boat and got into a barge, and there they dropped the things.

SAMUEL BATEMAN ſworn.

I am a waterman at Arundel-ſtairs in the Strand, I took a fare from Arundel-ſtairs to Paul's wharf, four men took a boat of me to go to Chelſea, they were the three men at the bar and another, they aſked me what they ſhould give me, I ſaid 18d. and at Chelſea, they aſked me to go to Chiſwick, and were to give me 3s. it was about ten, and they went to a friend's houſe and ſtopped a couple of hours, and came and brought ſome bread and cheeſe to me and gin, and they aſked me to go to London with them, and I ſaid I will if you will make it up 6s. coming down on the ſide of Chiſwick, one of the men aſked me if I would let them go on ſhore to ſee another friend, the three men that are here now went on ſhore, and the other man that is not here ſtopped half an hour, and then he ſaid I will go and ſee whether they are coming, and they all returned back to the boat, and brought a bit of a baſket with them, as far as I could conceive; I thought it was greens or lettuces, or ſome flowers from a friend; they deſired me to row to London, which I did as faſt as I could; coming off Chelſea the man that got away, ſaid, there is a man on horſeback, and from thence we rowed down oppoſite to the willows, and the other man ſtood up and ſaid, by God there is a galley coming after us, I do not know what they want, and he deſired me to put him on ſhore at Nine Elms; and he ſtood up, whether he chucked anything overboard I could not tell, by the ſluſhing of the oars, but the baſket was in the boat empty afterwards; as ſoon as ever I landed my boat's head on the ground, the people in the galley hallooed out ſtop thief; and they went to Sir Sampſon's, and I followed them.

was

Court. Was there any ſearch made for theſe things?——Yes, I underſtood they did, they were thrown out below water-mark; my boat was painted green, and black oars, and the lower part of my boat was red, below water-mark.

Priſoner Williams. Whether he ſaw any of us bring anything into the boat?—No, none of you three, but the tall man that run away.

That man was in the boat before we took you?—No, you all came down together.

Court to Pearſon. What is the value of this repeating clock?——It was 10l. I believe, they valued it at 6l.

Do you believe it is worth 6l.——Yes, it was a ſpring repeating table clock.

Allen. It was a good clock, and went well.

Court to Pearſon. Were the doors all faſt at night?——Yes, I went laſt to bed, and was firſt up in the morning, and I found them broke open.

What had they been broke with?—The window-ſhutters was broke, wrenched in two in the middle.

There is nobody here ſpeaks poſitively to the value of the clock?——No.

PRISONER MOORE's DEFENCE.

We are really innocent, we hired this waterman to go up the river, we went on ſhore at Chelſea, and got ſome liquor, and ſome bread and cheeſe, we then rowed up to Chiſwick to my couſin, we were all very much in liquor, we went on ſhore there and could not find my couſin out; we went to the public-houſe, and we ſtopped, then we all returned to the boat, and bid the waterman carry us home, going on ſhore at the Elms, to get ſomething to drink, we heard the cry of ſtop thief, the man that was with us, whether he was in liquor I do not know, but he ran away, we ſtopped, ſo they took us; the man was a ſtranger to us that got away.

Priſoner Groves. I have nothing more to ſay than what my fellow priſoner has ſaid.

Priſoner Williams. I have nothing more to ſay, I am very innocent.

Jury. Did you perceive any fire-arms about theſe men when they came into the boat?——They had great coats on.

The priſoner Moore called two witneſſes who gave him a good character.

The priſoner Williams called one witneſs who gave him a very good character.

Court to James White and John Coates. Did either of you ſee a baſket in the boat?—Coates. Yes, I ſaw a baſket.

ALL THREE GUILTY, Death.

Court to Waterman. Your conduct has been extremely ſuſpicious, I hope from the fate that attends theſe priſoners, you will take warning, and be more careful in future.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

672. DAVID

672. DAVID ENGLISH was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 31ſt of May, twenty-five yards of white thread lace, value 3l. the property of John Baker, Robert Dawſon, and John William Gallabin, privily in their ſhop.

JOHN WILLIAM GALLABIN ſworn.

I am one of the aſſignees with John Baker and Robert Dawſon, to Thomas Baker, the aſſignment was made before this robbery happened.

Then you were in poſſeſſion of the goods and the ſhop?—Yes, about a week.

MARY ANN DADLEE ſworn.

I looked after this ſhop, I loſt this lace between ten and eleven on Tueſday morning the 31ſt of May, there was nobody in the ſhop between the time I laid the laces in the window till the priſoner came in, I was in the parlour, I had laid the laces out even, I ſat with my chair cloſe to the door of the parlour, I turned my head round and I ſaw the priſoner in the ſhop, feeling in his pocket for ſomething behind his coat, I thought he had ſomething to match, I went into the ſhop and aſked him what he wanted, he ſaid, does Mrs. Thompſon live here, I told him no, he immediately went out of the ſhop.

Jury. You did not ſee him enter in at the door?——No, Sir, I turned round my head and ſaw him there; I miſſed a card of lace, there was a vacancy, I immediately purſued him, he had got to the next ſhop window, I followed him from New Turnſtile, ours is the third ſhop from New Turnſtile, he looked behind him and ſaw me run, and he ſet off and ran as faſt as he could, I called out ſtop thief, and the neighbours ran, ſome coachmakers, and I then loſt ſight of him down Gate-ſtreet, and I returned to the ſhop, and a man came immediately and ſaid the boy was taken, and the lace was found; I went immediately into Lincoln's-Inn Fields and ſaw the priſoner, and knew him again, I am confident it was the priſoner.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. Was there any other perſon but the priſoner when you ſaw him in the ſhop?—No.

Deſcribe a little the ſituation of the ſhop to that part from whence the lace was taken?——He muſt come in the ſhop to take the lace.

So that ſitting in that ſituation, if I underſtand you, you ſaw him draw the lace?——No, he was ſhuffling in his pocket.

Court. She did not know that anything was gone, ſhe ſaw nothing taken, her impreſſion at the time was this, that he wanted to match ſomething, it is the actual taking conſtitutes the felony, ſhe had no idea that he had got anything of her's.

Mr. Garrow. I take it that it is not at all neceſſary that you ſhould ſee the actual thing taken, if you ſee the act of taking, in ſo penal a caſe as this is.

Mr. Juſtice Heath. It muſt be left to the Jury.

Mr. Garrow. In a caſe where a man ſaid, I felt the act of pulſation in my fob, it was ſo held.

Mr. Juſtice Buller. But here he had got poſſeſſion of the thing at the time that ſhe firſt ſaw him, her firſt conception was, that he had ſomething to match.

WILLIAM FALKNER ſworn.

Here are two cards of lace which I had out of the houſe of Mr. Hamilton's area, it was thrown down his area.

Mr. Garrow. Did you ſee him throw it down?——I did not, I took the priſoner in Mr. Hamilton's yard.

(The lace depoſed to.)

Priſoner. I leave it to my council to ſay for me.

JAMES ENGLISH ſworn.

I am the father of the boy, he is fifteen years and an half old, he was apprentice to me, he was at work with me about an hour and an half before, I ſent him out to ſeveral places, we wanted a piece of blue perſian, and I told him to go to Mr. Thompſon's for a piece, he is a very honeſt lad, a ſober, orderly good boy.

The priſoner called three other witneſſes who all gave him a very good character.

Court to Jury. Gentlemen, the only queſtion is, whether he did or did not take it privately, the diſtinction has been, whether they take ſo as nobody ſees them at the time they actually commit the theft, or whether they are diſcovered in the act of the theft; here the boy was in the ſhop before ſhe ſaw him, and he was fumbling in his pocket; if he had before that time got poſſeſſion of the lace, the felony is compleat; if you think then the boy was in the act of taking it, it does not amount to taking privately.

GUILTY, Death.

The priſoner was humbly recommended to mercy by the Proſecutor.

Court to James Engliſh. Has your ſon ever appeared here before?—Never in his life, nor no where elſe.

Court. You are more to be pitied than your ſon a great deal.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

673. JAMES M'INTOSH was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 7th of June, one ſilver milk pot, value 2l. 12s. 6d. five ſilver tea ſpoons, value 18s. a pair of tea tongs, value 12s. a pair of ſtone ſhoe buckles, value 21s. one paſte buckle for the arm, value 10s. 6d. a pair of ſciſſars tipped with ſilver, value 4s. a miniature picture ſet in gold, value 3l. 13s. 6d. a pen knife, value 12d. a laylock ſilk gown and petticoat, value 4l. 4s. a morone ſilk gown, value 42s. a blue and white ſtriped gown, value 42s. a white corded dimity muſlin gown, value 27s. 6d. a muſlin jacket and coat, value 30s. 6d. a callico gown and coat, value 52s. 6d. a red ſtriped cotton gown, value 21s. a blue ſtuff flounced petticoat, value 12s. a pair of ſheets, value 15s. a pair of pillow caſes, value 5s. ſix yards of cloth, value 12s. five dimity under petticoats, value 14s. three aprons, value 8s. five neck handkerchiefs, value 8s. eight pair of cotton ſtockings, value 20s. a pair of ſilk ſtockings, value 5s. a ſhawl, value 12s. another ſhawl, value 10s. a pair of muſlin ruffles, value 10s. two linen ſhifts, value 10s. four linen handkerchiefs, value 2s. four yards of black lace, value 22s. a dreſſing gown, value 10s. a muſlin apron, value 5s. a glaſs pepper caſter with a plated top, value 2s. one pair of ſtays, value 18s. a tea cheſt, value 3s. two tin canniſters, value 2s. a pair of ſhoes, value 2s. two linen bed gowns, value 5s. two muſlin handkerchiefs, value 3s. a Spaniſh dollar, value 4s. 6d. and twelve guineas, value 12l. 12s. in monies numbered, the property of Margaret M'Farlen, in the dwelling houſe of Robert Munday.

(The Caſe opened by Mr. Garrow.)

MARGARET M'FARLEN ſworn.

I lodge at Mr. Munday's Liſle-ſtreet, Leiceſter-fields, I went out in the evening a little before ſix, I left every drawer ſhut, and every thing properly locked up, and I double locked the door of my apartment and took my key, I left at home Miſs Munday, and the priſoner who was apprentice to Mr. Munday, who was a taylor, and did not live at home, he was in the Fleet; he has never been at home ſince I was there, I came home about eleven, and deſired them to lend me a light, and when I went up I found this picklock key in my door, I went in and found every thing gone and the drawers empty in my room; I then run to the little trunk where I had a little property of money, that I had ſaved to pay ſome money, it was all gone, and every thing but a half guinea which they dropped; I am ſure there were twelve guineas, there might be more, there was a very nice ſilver milk jug, five ſilver tea ſpoons, and a pair of tea tongs, there was a pepper caſter with a plated top; there was was a laylock ſilk gown and coat, and other things, the milk pot was worth two pounds twelve ſhillings; the next day I was engaged at Weſtminſter Abbey, I gave information and the priſoner was taken up in conſequence of it, and on the Friday I ſaw him at Litchfield-ſtreet, he was then dreſſed in a pair of new olive coloured breeches a new dark waiſtcoat, new hat and new ſtockings, and new plated buckles, I never ſaw him in any ſuch clothes before, for he was very much diſtreſſed, and had not a ſhilling at any time, for his maſter could not give him any money, I loſt in money and cloths as I reckon, the loweſt is fifty pounds.

SARAH MUNDAY ſworn.

Mr. Garrow. Speak out and remember you have juſt taken an oath?——The priſoner was apprentice to my father, I remember Miſs M'Farlen going out about ſix, the priſoner was at home, I went out after ſeven and left the priſoner at home then in the parlour; there was a gentleman in the houſe that lodges in the one pair of ſtairs.

Had you heard any noiſe like the breaking open any places before you went out at ſeven?——I had been ill in bed, and I had buſineſs to go out upon.

How near was your apartment to her's?—Mine is in the parlour, and the lady's is up two pair of ſtairs, I returned at eleven, and I did not find the priſoner at home; I did not go up ſtairs till Miſs M'Farlen called me, I ſaw her firſt at the ſtreet door, or in my apartment which is the parlour, I did not let her in.

When ſhe came in, did you tell her any thing about the ſtate of her apartment?—I did not know anything till ſhe called me up ſtairs.

Did the priſoner come home again that evening?——No.

When did you firſt ſee him again?——After he was in cuſtody.

How was he dreſſed when he was in cuſtody?——In a green coat.

Had he anything new on?——Not that I perceived, I heard that he had new things on.

Had you ſeen any of thoſe things which he had on when he was in cuſtody, before this robbery, upon your oath?——Not to my knowledge, that is all I know about it, the proſecutrix ſaid, if the priſoner would give up the property, ſhe would drop the proſecution, and my father and me, and two or three more went down to Tothill-fields.

JUDITH SHAW ſworn.

I live in Princeſs-ſtreet, Leiceſter-fields facing Liſle-ſtreet, it has the whole command of the ſtreet, and every body coming in and going out; I remember the priſoner at the bar, and on the 7th of June, I ſaw him go into Mr. Munday's houſe, I ſuppoſe it to be paſt ſeven o'clock, I ſaw he had a green coat on, I was reſting my eyes, it was near eight, and preſently I ſaw him come out of the door with a large bundle, and he looked about and beckoned to ſomebody behind him who was ſomething taller than this lad; he went firſt and the other followed him with another bundle in his arm not ſo big; they went towards Sydney's-alley, I thought they could not be taylor's clothes going home, I thought it would be very wrong to carry them home in a wet evening.

Are you quite ſure that it was the priſoner?——Upon my word and my oath I have no doubt about it, I told him before the Juſtice, ſays he, I had no bundle, nor had nobody with me, this was about eight, he was about a quarter of an hour in the houſe.

JANE TEW ſworn.

I live in Liſle-ſtreet, oppoſite Mr. Munday's houſe, I know the priſoner, I ſaw him on the evening on the 7th of June, between ſeven and eight come along the ſtreet and go into the houſe, and in about a minute or two he came out again, and called a young man of the name of Joe, I think to the beſt of my knowledge he had a green coat, he had no bundle at that time, I ſaw no more of him they went in together.

ELLIS

ELLIS ROBERTS ſworn.

I apprehended the priſoner at the Bull and Mouth in Drury-lane, I ſearched him and found ſeven ſhillings in his pocket, he was dreſſed in a green coat, with new velvet breeches and waiſtcoat, new ſtockings, and a pair of new buckles, and this new hat he had on, I have known the lad for a couple of years, I keep a public houſe juſt by there, and he frequented the houſe, his father and all his relations.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I am intirely innocent of the affair, and the money that I bought that coat with, was a guinea my maſter gave me to get it out of pledge.

ROBERT MUNDAY ſworn.

I am the maſter of the lad, I have known him from an infant of a week old, I had him at ſchool for a conſiderable time, I cannot ſay that he has not been guilty of juvenile follies; as to honeſty, I have ſent him frequently home with clothes,

What has been his general character?—A very good one.

Mrs. SYBELIOUS ſworn.

I am a lodger in the houſe, for three months, I believe I have heard he has been guilty of little wildneſs and follies, but I have intruſted him with the keys of my room and money, I gave him a pair of velvet breeches, they were my huſband's who died about half a year ago, they were a very good pair almoſt new.

Mr. Garrow. When did you give them?——About a month before he altered them and wore them.

The priſoner called one witneſs to his character.

Sarah Munday. I know the lady that lodges in our houſe gave the priſoner a pair of breeches.

Mrs. Sybelious. They were black, and he dyed ſome wood to make them more black, it was brazil, and it made them brown.

Proſecutrix. Theſe were olive breeches.

Roberts. They were new olive breeches.

Munday. He had a guinea from me.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

---

674. MARTIN TAYLOR and ELIZABETH TAYLOR were indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Samuel Hooker at the hour of two in the night, on the 7th of May laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein ſixty yards of linen cloth, value 6l. ten linen handkerchiefs, value 20s. two hundred and fifty yards of thread lace, value 20l. one hundred and fifty yards of thread edging, value 10l. two hundred and fifty yards of black lace, value 10l. four ſilver table ſpoons, value 40s. five ſilver tea ſpoons, value 5s. a pair of ſilver tea tongs, value 5s. a ſilver milk ewer, value 16s. two thouſand yards of ſilk ribbon, value 80l. thirty yards of muſlin, value 4l. and two ſilk handkerchiefs, value 9s. the property of the ſaid Samuel.

(The caſe opened by Mr. Silveſter.)

SAMUEL HOOKER ſworn.

I am a houſekeeper at Highgate, the woman priſoner lived ſervant with me about ſixteen months ago, I never ſaw the man before his apprehenſion to my knowledge; on the 7th of May as was my uſual cuſtom, to ſee my houſe faſtened up, and my family and I retired to bed, the watchman gone half paſt ten, I faſtened the houſe myſelf, I was the laſt perſon that went up ſtairs to bed; in the morning when I got up between ſix and ſeven, I was ſurpriſed by an uncommon ſtrong light which ſhone into the kitchen, and when I went down, I found a hole had been broke under the kitchen window, the hole was four courſe of bricks taken down, and by which I or a luſtier man than I, could get in: I then went went into boxes of l bons, I th

bour, and of my hou ſituation I was ruine pounds wo found two ings, and handkerchi window, ſ
ter, and fo immediatel in Bow-ſtre applied at thing tranſp ſons the co
ſons to the
Martin Ta
there I foun
on, which ſome few ya found there.
Jury. W
They were n went to the
I found diffe into ſhirts an kerchief on ſhop window officer to app
Bow-fair, an from me, ſhe
Seaſons's ho was a ſmall her pocket bo Magiſtrate, ſ
whole tranſac
Was any th
to confeſs?—
Mr. Garro not ſhe told ſh not?——I th
I am very ſur
Court when ſ acknowledged boxes of lace three boxes;
confeſſion was

went into the ſhop, there I miſſed three boxes of lace, and alſo ſix drawers of ribbons, I then directly went out to a neighbour, and took him in to ſee the ſituation of my houſe, I ſhewed him the diſtreſſed ſituation I was in, and likewiſe told him I was ruined, for I had loſt two hundred pounds worth of goods and upwards, I found two pieces of muſlins, and ſome edgings, and ſilk handkerchiefs, and pocket handkerchiefs had been taken out of the window, ſome Iriſh linens from the counter, and ſome of the ſhelves, upon that I immediately applied to the Rotation-office, in Bow-ſtreet, and it was adverti ſed, I alſo applied at Mr. Wilmot's office, but nothing tranſpired, I alſo applied to Mr. Seaſons the conſtable, and I went with Seaſons to the dwelling houſe of the priſoner Martin Taylor, that was the 18th, and there I found a cap which had ſome lace on, which I ſhall identify; I alſo found ſome few yards of ribbon, nothing elſe was found there.

Jury. Were the ribbons on blocks?—They were not; after his apprehenſion we went to the houſe of Mrs. Halloway, there I found different pieces of Iriſh linen cut into ſhirts and ſhifts, and I found a handkerchief on Mr. Powell, which was in my ſhop window before; I then went with the officer to apprehend Elizabeth Taylor, at Bow-fair, and ſhe attempted to run away from me, ſhe was brought to town to Mr. Seaſons's houſe, ſhe was ſearched, there was a ſmall quantity of ribbon found in her pocket book, when ſhe was before the Magiſtrate, ſhe made a confeſſion of the whole tranſaction.

Was any thing ſaid to her to induce her to confeſs?——Not to my knowledge.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. Was not ſhe told ſhe ſhould be hanged if ſhe did not?——I think, I can competently ſay, I am very ſure ſhe was not, I was out of Court when ſhe made the confeſſion, ſhe acknowledged to me, ſhe took away three boxes of lace, I queſtioned her to theſe three boxes; I cannot ſay whether this confeſſion was taken in writing; ſhe ſaid, that ſhe ſtood about three or four yards diſtant from where this hole was made, and that ſhe received the property from two men that committed the robbery.

MARY HALLOWAY ſworn.

I live in Dowlings-buildings, Portpool-lane, Leather-lane, at No. 12; I know both the priſoners, the man lodged in my houſe ſometime, and his ſiſter, I know by coming backwards and forwards to ſee him; I made ſhirts for him, and ſhifts for his wife, and he came and left me a bit of cloth to make his ſiſter a couple of ſhifts; a gentleman came and claimed the cloth, I am ſure I received that piece of cloth from the priſoner Martin Taylor.

THOMAS SEASONS ſworn.

I am a conſtable, I ſearched this woman's houſe, here is the cloth I took from her houſe, and ſome ribbons, theſe were all found in the apartment of Mrs. Halloway.

Mrs. Halloway. The beſt part of theſe things were in my apartment, and others in the apartment of Mrs. Powell.

Mr. Garrow to Mrs. Halloway. Do you know the cloth?——Mr. Seaſons and another ſhewed me that cloth, my huſband is a hackney coachman, and I do a little work for anybody; I am ſure I received that cloth from the priſoner Martin Taylor about a fortnight before I had the ſhirts, he came on Monday to be meaſured for the ſhirts, and he was taken up on the Wedneſday.

Seaſons. This is the linen I received from this woman, we ſearched the houſe and the drawers all over, the proſecutor rolls it up and takes hold of it, ſays he, I verily believe this is my linen, this has my private ſhop mark; then I took Mrs. Halloway into cuſtody; I went up ſtairs, and ſome of the things were found in the room of Mrs. Powell, up one pair of ſtairs, and this ribbon, and theſe things were found in her poſſeſſion.

Court. What did you find in Martin Taylor's apartment?——We apprehended him firſt, I went to this place afterwards; I de-

I desired the people to step down stairs, and to mind the door, I did not know he was the landlord of the house; I saw nobody upstairs but a man who was in the glass-cutting way, I found this in Martin Taylor's apartment, this ribbon, and this bit of linen and this cap; we then went to Bow fair, I did not know Elizabeth Taylor, and the prosecutor said that is she, then we went and took her, and knocked down about a dozen sausage stalls; there were fifty thieves endeavouring to rescue her, I desired them to take particular care of her hands; I took her to my house and examined her, and found this pocket-book on her, with this ribbon, and two duplicates, but they were not relative to this matter: she desired to speak to me on one side; says I, I am very sorry; she said, if a confession of any kind would be of any service to her she would make a confession of the robbery; I said I could hear nothing of it, she then said, she with two more persons, went and committed this burglary.

Mr. Garrow. That is just what she said about it?——Yes.

Was that her expression, or is that your polish when you are giving evidence upon oath, to affect the lives of prisoners?

Powell. The ribbons were not found in my room; there were two shifts found in my room, which I made for Catherine Taylor, the wife of Martin, I know nothing of Elizabeth Taylor, only I have seen her come up and down to her brother.

Prosecutor. This cap and ribbon that was found, it is a pattern of lace which I was pretty positive I had in my shop before I was robbed, and I have a counter part of the same lace; the other things, and the ribbon, I do not so positively swear to; the Irish linen has my shop mark, which is, U. R. W. but it is in characters; I mark all in characters; I cannot positively swear to these, because they have not my mark upon them, they are linen cloth, and in all probability a counter part of these I have here, but this bit of lace was brought to me by Ann Powell, it is a counter part of the lace; this handkerchief was in my shop window the night before the robbery; I have red and purple of the same pattern; there is no mark upon it, it was brought to me by Elizabeth Powell; this edging was given me by Elizabeth Powell.

Mrs. Powell. I had that edging from the same person, the wife.

PRISONER MARTIN TAYLOR's DEFENCE.

I went to see an acquaintance in the Borough, and returning home a man asked me to look at some handkerchiefs, he said he was afraid of the custom-house officers, he shewed me some, I did not approve of them, and I bought some linen of him at 22d. per yard, he sold it me for fourteen yards, and I brought it home and kept it four or five days, and I got Mrs. Halloway to make it for me, as my wife goes out every day with fruit and fish.

ELIZABETH TAYLOR's DEFENCE

I know nothing at all about it.

MARTIN TAYLOR, ELIZABETH TAYLOR } GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Justice BULLER.

---

675. JOHN BURN was indicted for feloniously assaulting William Jones on the King's highway, on the 18th of June, putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniously taking from his person, and against his will, one wooden cask, containing nine gallons of rum, value 4l. the property of Elizabeth Stutfield, widow, and Charles Stutfield.

WILLIAM JONES sworn.

I am porter to Mr. Charles Stutfield and his mother Elizabeth, I was going to the New Road, Whitechapel, with nine gallons of rum, on last Saturday sev'nnight, between three and four, and five men met me, two of them took hold of my collar, and swore they were Custom-house officers, I told them I had a permit, the other three swore they were Custom-house officers, and they they muſt have my keg and would have it, and I told them they ſhould not, with that the two ſhoved it off my head, it ſtaved directly, and liquor came out; I purſued after the priſoner and took him, and I went after the keg and took it up; they ſtaved out the head clean, and all the liquor was loſt; the reſt of the men got off.

Was nobody going by at that time?—There were very few nigh me; the priſoner ran away, and I purſued after him, and he came with his double fiſt, and ſaid, you take me, I ſaid yes, I will have you, and one of the neighbours aſſiſted me.

CHARLES STUTFIELD ſworn.

On Saturday the 9th of laſt month I ſent our porter William Jones with nine gallons of rum, to Mr. David Davis, of Whitechapel, with a bill and permit.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

Coming along Whitechapel, I met Jones, and there were four more men walking along, I paſſed by them, and I heard one ſay to the other, I do not like that man, I believe he has ſmuggled liquor, I turned round and ſaw the four men make up to him, and I went up and ſpoke to him, and aſked him what was the matter; they ſaid it was ſmuggled liquor, then I was going away, and the liquor flew off his head, he called ſtop thief after me, and I ſaid for what, he ſaid I threw it off his head.

Jones. I take my oath that the priſoner is the man that took me by the collar, I ſaw them at a diſtance laughing and all playing the rogue together, this man was along with the other four, they were all in one company, they all came up to me together; the priſoner took me by the collar, and ſaid, he and another in a blue coat were cuſtom-houſe officers.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

676. JAMES COTTA was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 26th of June two linen ſhirts, value 2s. ſeventeen guineas and one half guinea, the property of William Ellard, in the dwelling houſe of William Birchall.

(The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of the priſoner.)

WILLIAM ELLARD ſworn.

I live in Church-ſtreet, Bethnal-green, in the houſe of William Birchall, laſt Sunday, between three and ſeven, I loſt ſeventeen guineas and an half, and two ſhirts, I was out at three, and back again at ten; I am ſure they were there when I went out, and the box was broke open; it was kept behind the room where I uſed to work, I found one of the ſhirts at the priſoner's daughter's houſe, in King Edward's ſtreet, Mile-end New Town: the reaſon I had for accuſing the priſoner was, he returned ſome of the money back again the next morning, he ſaid he had been in fault, and was ſorry for it, and I told him if he would return the money I would not trouble him; upon my telling him that, he returned me a part of the money, I only found one ſhirt, the other he had on, as he ſaid himſelf, I did not examine it, he told me he had the ſhirt on before I promiſed not to trouble him.

SAMUEL KING ſworn.

The father of the proſecutor came to me, for he ſaid his ſon had been robbed, and he had hanged himſelf; I went up with as much expedition as I could, and I and another cut him down, when we cut him down and brought him to life, for he ſeemed to be dead; he looked to ſee whether he was robbed, and he found his box broke open; on the Monday morning they brought this priſoner, and he ſaid he was ſorry for what he had done, and he would give me what money he had; William Ellard the proſecutor was preſent; then he gave me five guineas in gold, twenty-four ſhillings and ſix-pence in ſilver, and ſix half-pence in copper; when we came before Mr. Wilmot, Mr. Wilmot aſked him if he did not know know of any more money, he ſaid at firſt, he was ſorry for what he had done.

Do you remember William Ellard telling him that if he would return the money, he would not trouble him?——I did not hear any ſuch thing.

JOHN ELLARD ſworn.

I know the priſoner, when I took him, he owned he had taken the money, and he gave part of the money back again; that was when I firſt carried him up in the ſhop, I found him at his daughter's about nine in the morning; I ſuppoſed he had taken the two ſhirts to be waſhed, I found the two ſhirts there, one he had on; he came to his daughter's after I came there; the firſt time nobody was at home, the ſecond time he came, I told him he muſt go with me, and he ſaid he would, I think as ſoon as ever he came into my brother's ſhop he ſaid he had done a bad thing, we did not ſay anything about it coming along.

Did he ſay he had done a bad thing before your brother ſpoke to him, or afterwards?——I believe it was before, as ſoon as he came into the ſhop, I ſaw him return part of the money back again.

JOHN CRAYDEN ſworn.

Laſt Monday morning, John Ellard, the younger, came to my houſe, and told me there was a melancholy circumſtance happened, that his brother was robbed and had hung himſelf, and he ſuſpected the priſoner, and he aſked me where his daughter lived; I ſaw John Ellard the younger and the priſoner come paſt my door, and in following them, I ſaw the priſoner try to throw ſome money out of his hand, and in going from my door to the proſecutor's houſe, I ſaid to the priſoner, what a ſhocking thing this had like to have been Jemmy, how could you be guilty of ſuch a thing as this, ſays I you had better let us ſee what money you have, I believe this was before William Ellard ſpoke to him, with that he put down five guineas and twenty-four ſhillings and ſix-pence in ſilver, and ſix half-pence in copper, I ſaid that never can be all, ſhew us the reſt; ſays he I have no more; ſays I you could not ſpend it in ſuch a ſhort time as this, what have you done with the ſhirts, he ſaid he had one on his back, and the other he left at his daughter's; I went to the daughter's, and ſhe gave it me.

The ſhirts depoſed to, the ſhirts were in the ſame room as the money, hanging on a line.

ELIZABETH ELLARD ſworn.

Are you related to William Ellard?——I am his ſiſter in law. (Looks at the ſhirt.) I know this ſhirt, it is William Ellard's, I know it by a particular mark with a bit of yellow worſted which is put there.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

They went out laſt Sunday between two and three, I was laying on the bed, about four I got up and waſhed myſelf and went out, I had a pint of beer, they came back again and found the door open, by reaſon of my leaving the key on one ſide of the door, I went into the garret and found nobody, I found this money juſt at the foot of my bed in a paper.

JAMES SMITH ſworn.

I have known the priſoner fifteen or ſixteen years, he has worked for a houſe I have been foreman to almoſt all the time; I always found him a very honeſt diligent man, never heard any ſyllable againſt his character till this preſent occaſion.

PETER ENVOICE ſworn.

I have known the priſoner theſe twenty-five or twenty-ſix years, and I never heard anything of him diſhoneſt before I aſſure you.

MARY HENSHAW ſworn.

I have known him twenty-five years, always thought him to be a very honeſt man.

SAMUEL ALDRIDGE ſworn.

I have known him between nineteen and twenty years, I never heard any harm or miſdemeanor of him, but always a hard working man.

JAMES BUCKLEY ſworn.

I have known him ten years, he was a very induſtrious, hard working man.

RICHARD EVANS ſworn.

I have known him eight years, never knew him to be anything elſe but a hard working honeſt man.

SAMUEL HULL ſworn.

I have known the priſoner ten years, never knew anything amiſs of him in all my life, but a hard working honeſt man.

SAMUEL KING ſworn.

Though I was a witneſs againſt him, I have known the proſecutor and priſoner, I never knew anything againſt him in my life.

JOHN JONES ſworn.

I have known him a year and half, he has followed his work for that time regularly and conſtantly.

GUILTY, Death.

Court to Samuel King. Suppoſe this man was to get at large ſoon, who would employ him?——I am almoſt ſure the perſon who has employed him theſe twelve years would.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

677. WILLIAM CRUSE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 6th of June, one callico printed gown, value 20s. a man's linen ſhirt, value 12d. a linen ſhift, value 12d. a pair of ſilk and cotton ſtockings, value 12d. a pair of worſted ſtockings, value 12d. two white muſlin handkerchiefs, value 12d. two white cloth aprons, value 3s. a ſheet, value 4s. a gold ring ſet with garnet ſtones, value 5s. one other gold ring ſet with other ſtones, value 5s. two pair of ſilver ear rings, ſet with ſtone, value 6s. a ſilver thimble, value 12d. a piece of a ſilver locket, value 6d. two pair of ſleeve buttons, value 12d. one enamelled box, value 12d. and ſeven guineas, value 7l. 7s. and one half guinea, value 10s. 6d. the property of John Shirley, in his dwelling houſe.

MARY SHIRLEY ſworn.

I live at the Plaiſterers Arms, in Tottenham-court-road, my huſband's name is John Shirley, on the 6th of June, I loſt every article that is mentioned, and a great many more; I did not find it out till ten at night, there were ſeven guineas and a half, four in a box and the reſt looſe, every thing was in the drawers at five o'clock.

Where was you from five to ten?——I was in my bar minding my buſineſs, I went to put my little boy to bed, I have two doors to my room, I unlocked one, and the moment I went into my room, I found the other door was broke open, I found a parcel of rags, which I call patches, laying about in my room, which had been moved and the work bag taken; I catched the priſoner myſelf in the ſtreet, becauſe he bore a very bad character, and he lodged in my houſe for a week, and I did not intend to let him lodge there longer, he ſaid himſelf he was in; nobody ſaw him there, but I know it muſt have been him; I had not ſeen him ſince he came in, I ſaw the ſhift laying on the bed, and a pair of large ſciſſars laying on the bed; I broke his room door open myſelf, I called firſt and nobody anſwered, but the ſciſſars were fetched away, and the thread was left behind, I told him he ſhould not lodge any longer without he paid me a week's lodging, and he had no money; I did not ſee him till I took him up, the 6th of June was on a Monday, and on the Tueſday morning, met him in Charlotte-ſtreet, I laid hold of his collar, ſays I, you dog, you have robbed me, ſays he, if you will not ſend for a conſtable, I will tell you where your things are, and give you part of the money, and ſend for my uncle; he ſaid, if I ſent for a conſtable he was ſure to be done, I ſent for a conſtable, the minute I went into the houſe, and I ſent for a coach, and he told me he had ſold all the things to Mrs. Brown in Fleet-lane, for ſix thillings he told me he bought a ſilk handkerchief for two ſhillings, and he had but four ſhillings, I went to Mrs. Brown, and ſhe flew in a great paſſion, and ſaid, ſhe had no ſuch things in her houſe, and never ſaw the boy, I fetched the priſoner to Mrs. Brown's, ſhe denied having anything, pho, pho, ſays he, you know I ſold you them laſt night, and you put me out, and there was a boy that was born with a double chin; in ſearching him there was a part of a ſilver locket found in his pocket, which I had in my hand that very day; I put them together as old ſilver, thinking to ſell them the next day, to buy my child a frock, he gave the conſtable three guineas and a half, as part of my money, and ſaid he would ſend for his uncle to make up the reſt, the conſtable has the money, I got none of the things of Mrs. Brown, the Juſtice gave him from Tueſday till Friday to conſider who had them, and on Wedneſday he told me he ſold them to Mrs. Brown; he ſaid he went to his girl in Newtoner's-lane, but ſhe was gone to live with another man, I aſked him how he came to break the lock of my door, and he ſaid nobody ſaw him do it, if he did do it.

Court. Is that part of Fleet-lane, where Brown lives, in London or Weſtminſter?——At the bottom next Holborn.

SAMUEL ABBOTT ſworn.

I am a conſtable, the proſecutrix took the priſoner to the public houſe in Bedford Square, and ſent for me, accordingly I took charge of him, he ſoon confeſſed the whole in going to the Juſtice's, he ſaid, he would reſtore it as already related, and what money he had about him he would reſtore again, then he gave me that money.

Were any promiſes or threats made uſe of to make the priſoner confeſs?——She promiſed that ſhe would not take him to the Juſtice if he would confeſs.

Was that before he confeſſed anything?——Yes, I ſearched him at Juſtice Blackborough's, and took from him a part of a ſilver locket, and a pair of ſciſſars.

(The locket depoſed to by the proſecutrix.)

Proſecutrix. I have had it for ſome years, I ſaid, if he would reſtore all my things again, I would not carry him to the Juſtice, for it would be the ruin of me, as I had nobody at home, and had two young children, I could not ſpare time to attend him here; I ſaid if he would reſtore all my property again.

GEORGE COPELAND ſworn.

I cannot ſtate any more than what has been ſtated before.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

She told me if I would let her have her things and would confeſs, ſhe would not take me to the Juſtice, the money was my own money, but rather than be taken to the Juſtice I gave it her, I have no relations, my father and mother have been dead ſeventeen years, I am ſure ſhe never had a bad character of me, I had not been out of work above a week, and I did a good many jobs for her.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

678. MARY HUGHES and CATHERINE MARTIN were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 22d of June, eight yards of muſlin, value 40s. the property of Joſeph Capps, privily in his ſhop.

JOHN HARDY ſworn.

I am ſhopman to Mr. Capps, at No. 35, Oxford-ſtreet; on the 22d of June laſt, between two and three, theſe two priſoners came into our ſhop, and aſked to look at ſome muſlins, I cannot tell which aſked, they were together, they both looked at them; I reached them down ſome muſlins, and they looked at them, part was folded up in paper and part I gave to them, I rather took a rough ſurvey of what there was, and they deſired me to cut off three nails, I could not immediately aſcertain what quantity there was on the counter, folded

folded up the three nails for them, and they walked out of the ſhop, I had ſome ſuſpicion that they muſt have ſomething with them, and I immediately followed them, I thought there was not the quantity, but I did not know; I purſued them without knowing whether I had loſt anything or not, and on the priſoner, Mary Hughes, I found a quantity of muſlin, the priſoner Martin was brought back and examined, but nothing of our property was found on her, but the three nails of muſlin which ſhe paid for. (The muſlin produced) I cannot recollect whether it is the ſame ſort I ſold to Catherine Martin or not, I think I know this muſlin very well, here is our mark upon it.

Are you ſure it is your's?—Yes, I know this was in the paper in the morning I took five pieces out of the papers, and they were ſo confuſed, I could not tell whether there were five or not, I threw them under the counter before I went after them, and when I returned I found only four under the counter, they were only got a little diſtance when I followed them.

What is the value of that piece of muſlin?—It coſt ſix ſhillings a yard, there are eight yards of it.

PRISONER HUGHES's DEFENCE.

It was not known to me, that I had any property of that gentleman's about me; I have no counſel, I hope you will plead my cauſe, I am innocent I do not deny its being taken from but I deny the having it knowingly.

PRISONER MARTIN's DEFENCE.

What I aſked for I bought and paid for.

The priſoner Hughes called four witneſſes who gave her a good character.

The priſoner Martin called one witneſs to her character.

MARY HUGHES, } GUILTY, Death.
CATH. MARTIN, }

Hardy. I was ſuſpicious of them, for I ſaw a movement in the cloak of Martin, and at that time I ſuppoſed ſhe had ſomething, and I thought ſhe had the muſlin, and I am confident that the priſoner Hughes, from the place where ſhe ſtood could not take it.

They were humbly recommended by the Proſecutor to his Majeſty's mercy.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

679. JOHN COX and WILLIAM STAPLES were indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Elizabeth Gower, ſpinſter, on the King's highway, on the 29th of June, and putting her in corporal fear and danger of her life, and feloniouſly taking from her perſon, and againſt her will, one ſilk cloak, value 3s. and two ſhillings in monies numbered, her property.

The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of the priſoners.

ELIZABETH GOWER ſworn.

I was robbed the 29th of June, about ten o'clock, between High-ſtreet and Baker-ſtreet, behind Portman-ſquare, in the waſte ground, I was croſſing, and ſaw two boys lay on the graſs, I turned from the path to avoid them, they aroſe and came up to me, and aſked me if I had got any money, I told them no; one took hold of my hand, and the other put his hand in my pocket, and robbed me of two ſhillings, I had no more in my pocket, and he took my cloak.

In what manner did he take theſe things from you?——I begged him to let my cloak alone, and I endeavoured to hold my cloak, and the other held a knife to my throat, then I let my cloak go; then they told me to go along about my buſineſs, and not follow them; I ſtood ſtill and let them go, and then I was going to follow them, there being a public houſe near, and the other turned round with his knife, and ſwore he would run me through if I followed them; I did not go on then, I let them go off; I went to No. 8, in little Mary-le-bon-ſtreet, to a friend's houſe, and told them I was robbed.

What

What ſort of night was it?——It was a very clear night.

Was it before or after ten?——The watchman had juſt gone ten.

Had you light enough to diſtinguiſh the features of the perſons that robbed you?——Yes.

How long was it after that the priſoners were taken?——The next day, one at four o'clock, the other at eight in the afternoon, I ſaw them the next day? I deſcribed them to the watchmen, and they went round to ſearch for them, and ſaw them at a public houſe where they robbed me, not twenty yards off, there were fourteen or fifteen of them in company altogether, and I picked out the priſoners, I knew them perfectly well; I am now quite ſure theſe are the two; I never ſaw them before the robbery, but I have no doubt but they are the perſons; my cloak was never found.

Priſoner. The proſecutrix ſaid at the Juſtice's ſhe did not know which of us it was that took out the knife.

Proſecutrix. I told the Juſtice which it was, it was the priſoner Cox.

Jury. Are you ſure theſe are the men that robbed you?——I am ſure and poſitive.

LAWRENCE JONES ſworn.

After I had cried ten on Wedneſday the 29th of June, this woman came by my box crying, and the poſtman aſked her the cauſe, ſhe ſaid two men were laying in the field, and they had robbed her, I went up and ſhe told me the ſame, then I went and called my partner; ſhe deſcribed them, and we went to ſearch for them, we gueſſed partly who they were, the next day we went again, and ſhe deſcribed them in the ſame manner again, and we went and took her to a houſe where theſe people reſort.

What houſe is that?——At the bottom of High-ſtreet, there is a ſkittle-ground, the man's name is Dickinſon, there were about a dozen of them there, and ſhe knew them when ſhe came up, and before ſhe came within a hundred yards ſhe ſaid them were the very men that attacked her the night before.

Did ſhe heſitate which it was?——Not a word, ſhe fixed upon the two directly, I found a knife with two blades upon him, a common knife.

Proſecutrix. The knife that was put to me was a ſmalliſh knife, and much ſuch a knife as that.

JOHN HOARE ſworn.

There were ſeveral more people there, ſhe knew them immediately, and ſhewed them to us, the young woman appeared to be very clear, the priſoners ſaid nothing when they were taken up neither one way nor the other.

HENRY WARNER ſworn.

On the 29th of laſt month, at eleven, as I was going upon duty, I met Jones the watchman, and he told me of this robbery, the next day we went in purſuit and took the two priſoners, by the deſcription the young woman gave us, the young woman went with one of the watchmen, which was Millar, then ſhe ſaw the two men, and told him they were the two men; he did not think he could attack them both, ſo we went with him, and we took the priſoners, ſhe was not with us then, I believe ſhe was in a houſe in Baker ſtreet; Cox was taken firſt, and the other ſome time after.

Who took Cox?——There were Millar, Harry Jones, and I.

Who took the other?——The other was taken by a man that is at the door, he is ſon in law to Millar, one of the watchmen; I was not preſent when the young woman ſhewed them to Millar; they were taken ſome few minutes after.

——— MILLAR ſworn.

I am a watchman, my comrade Jones brought this young woman to me on Wedneſday night, and we went together to ſee if we could ſee them, but we did not that night; the next day between four and five my comrade told me that there were a great many people in the public houſe, ſo I went with the young woman over there, and ſhe ſhewed them to us, it was between four and and five in the afternoon the next day, and ſhe ſhewed me the two priſoners, they were the outſide of the houſe.

Why did not you take them then?——I was by myſelf, and I had nothing in my hands; I am very ſure there was nobody with me but the young woman; if I had any aſſiſtance I would have taken them immediately.

How ſoon afterwards did you find your comrades to aſſiſt you?——My comrades was juſt on the other ſide of the chapel, a little diſtance off us, I went and told them, ſo they came the back way again; then Cox was there, and Bill was gone away, there were ſeveral people with the priſoners, but whether they were in their company I cannot ſay, there were above a dozen or better.

How near did you go to them?—Within three or four yards, the young woman and me.

So that ſhe could ſee them very well?—Yes.

Did ſhe ſay anything to you in their hearing?——I cannot tell that they heard it, ſhe told me them were the two lads that robbed her.

Court to Jones. How came you to tell me that you were preſent when the young woman pointed out to you theſe priſoners?—I did not tell you I was preſent, I told you ſhe picked them out.

You know the priſoner's conviction will be followed by a reward?—I am not beholden to the reward now nor any time, I can do very well without it.

But you know the fact?—I have very often heard of it.

Has there nothing of this ſort been named now among you?—It has often been particularly mentioned.

Court to Hoare. How came you not to tell me Millar went firſt of all to look for this man?—We went to the public houſe and waited there till Millar and the young woman went to pick them out.

Court. That is nothing like your former evidence.

NICHOLAS PARISH ſworn.

I was at the taking of William Staples, I took him at the top of Saymour-ſtreet, about half paſt ſeven in the evening, nobody was with me but my mother, I heard there was an information againſt him, that he was liable to be taken for a robbery committed in the fields; I did not know him, but my mother-in-law knew him, and ſhewed him to me.

Priſoner Staples. There is a young man that was with us at the time the robbery was done, his name is name is George Riches, and there is another young man that was with this young woman on Saturday, and ſhe ſaid ſhe could not punctually ſwear which it was that held the knife, or which it was that put his hand in her pocket.

The priſoner Staples called four witneſſes who all gave him a good character.

The Jury withdrew ſome time, and returned with a verdict,

BOTH GUILTY, Death,

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

680. THOMAS HARRIS, JOHN LAMBERT, alias WELDON, and ANN EDWARDS were indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of George Wyber, about the hour of one in the night, on the 29th day of June, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein two table cloths, value 5s. a towel, value 4d. ſix ſilver ſpoons, value 9s. one pair of ſilver tongs, value 10s. five pair of leather ſhoes, value 10s. three hundred and ſixty copper halfpence, value 15s. 240 copper farthings, value 5s. one linen handkerchief, value 1s. three tin canifters, value 9d. two pounds of tea, value 12d. his property.

GEORGE WYBER ſworn.

I keep a public houſe, on Wedneſday laſt I was alarmed by the watchman ſaying my ſtreet door was open, I went down ſtairs, and found the thieves had made their way into the cellar window, and forced a ſtrong door on the cellar ſtairs, and from thence came to the bar; I was laſt up that night, the houſe was faſt, I went to bed a little after twelve, the cellar window was faſt, for I held up my man while he bolted it, and the cellar door I locked myſelf: they had worked the bolt back, but the lock of the door was broke, and ſome part of the door-poſt cut away: I miſſed half a dozen tea-ſpoons, and a pair of tea-tongs, they were in the bar; my ſhoes were loſt, and one bag of counterfeit halfpence, and one bag of real good ones, three canniſters with tea, two table-cloths, and a ſmall towel, five pair of ſhoes, four of mine and a new pair of a gentleman's who lived there, two bags of half-pence, the quantity I cannot aſcertain, and ſome farthings; the priſoner Thomas Harris was taken by the watchman, and locked up in the watch-houſe, there I ſaw him, he was ſearched in my preſence, in his pockets nothing was found but ſome matches and a candle; when we had ſearched him the watchman went into the little place where they lock them up, and there he ſaid there were a great many halfpence in the corner of the room, he ſaid ſo aloud; I went in, and there was about ſeven ſhillings, all counter feit halfpence, in the corner of the room, nothing more was found in the room; the priſoner would not tell us his name, nor where he lived, he ſaid he lodged ſometimes in the hay field, and where he pleaſed, it was nothing to us; we found another watchman who knew where he lodged.

Mr. Knowles, Counſel for the Priſoner Harris. You were alarmed about four?—Yes.

It was broad day light?—Yes.

You had no alarm before?—No.

Therefore ſuppoſing this matter had been committed at three, you cannot tell?——I do not ſay I could.

JOSEPH LEE ſworn.

I am a watchman, about three in the morning another watchman, one Ware, came to me, and aſked me to give him a pinch of ſnuff, I did ſo; while we were talking Harris came by with an empty baſket upon his ſhoulders, I followed him, and watched him; he went along Leather Lane, and another man came out of Baldwin's Gardens, and met him juſt at top of Croſs-ſtreet; they joined one another, with that I went down Charles-ſtreet to ſee which way they went, I ſaw him go through the poſts into Great Saffron-hill; there I loſt ſight of him; I am ſure Harris is one of the men; I firſt ſaw Harris about fifty yards from the proſecutor's; he went by us at that time on the other ſide of the way, I could not diſtinguiſh the other man to be there; I went paſt at two and three, and the door was faſt; I did not try it; at four I perceived the door was ſomewhat wider than it was uſually, but I did not perceive it when I went by before; then I alarmed Mr. Wyber; before I got out of Union-Court, about half after four, this Harris came after me, and he paſſed me, I knew him again to be the ſame man; he went up to the corner again, I told the houſe-man, and he bid me take him, I followed him to Holborn, and took him and brought him back to the watch-houſe, then I went to a conſtable.

Mr. Knowles. You know there is a reward in this caſe?——I knew nothing of a reward, I have heard ſo ſince.

Go a little further, and tell us you did not know it then?——I did not; he reſorted to the houſe where the things were afterwards found.

RICHARD WARE ſworn.

I was with the laſt witneſs on Wedneſday morning laſt about three o'clock, and I obſerved a man with a baſket on his ſhoulders, ſtanding againſt the poſt.

Do you know the man?——Yes, it is Harris, I knew him before. I knew where he has reſorted a good while, I never ſaw him but in the night time, I have frequently ſeen him in George-alley at two, three three, and four in the morning, I did not know in particular what house he lodged at, it was a private house, I am sure he is the man that I saw; there was no other man then; I saw this other prisoner, and this boy together in George-alley, about half after two, and I saw them together after this time, they were standing in a little square in George-alley, and I saw them again afterwards, about an hour after, I saw a basket in the alley the last time, but nothing in it, he had the basket on his shoulders, I did not go to the watch-house at all, I am sure it was Harris that Lee and me saw with the basket.

Do you remember seeing any others?—No.

Mr. Knowles. In the course of a year I suppose there may be twenty thousand different people there, what do you mean by resorting there?—Going backwards and forwards.

What the prisoner is a pot companion of your's! Pray Sir, what share do you hope for of this reward?—I wished not to have come here at all.

What you wished to have the forty pounds for doing nothing?—Not at all.

THOMAS WADE sworn.

I am the house-man belonging to the watch-house, last Friday morning, about a quarter past four, Lee came to me, and told me he thought Mr. Wyber's door was not so fast as it should be, I brought the prisoner Harris to the watch-house, and he said his name was Jones, he said he lived in Portpool-lane, and the officer of the night got up and went for the prosecutor, and he and the officer of the night came, and a candle and matches were found upon him, and no other prisoner had been in the black hole that night.

Was you in the black hole when the prisoner was put there?—I was there that night, at nine o'clock.

Had there been any other prisoner locked up there in that whole night?——No, Sir, none, I am sure of that.

Did you see what was in the black hole?—There was nothing in it, I sweep it out every night.

Mr. Knowles. You have a general custom of sweeping out this place every night?——Yes, I have had no conversation with these watchmen; the halfpence was partly bad and partly good, the prisoner refused to give me any account of himself, but by Ware's instruction, I went to this house in George-alley.

JOHN DRAY sworn.

The prisoner was brought to the watch-house, after five I ordered him in, I was called out of my bed, I ordered the watchman to go and search the hole, there was found some halfpence, some good and some bad, most of them bad, the prosecutor said, he had lost a quantity of halfpence.

Court. Could these halfpence have laid there any time without being seen?——I think not; these other things were found in a lower apartment at this house, where the prisoners Lambert and Edwards were; I turned round a bed-stead, and there were some goods belonging to the prosecutor in a cupboard, I found a caddee of the prosecutor's with some tea in it, tied round with a string, I saw five shillings of halfpence lay in a window, I cannot say whose lodging it was; this dark lanthorn was found in the prosecutor's house by Lee, the watchman, I found this key myself; these are the halfpence I found in the watch-house, and these are them that were found in the room.

(The things produced with the mark cut out.)

Prosecutor. I believe them to be mine, here is three old table cloths, the best table cloth was my mother's, and it has a curious darn in it; as to the new linen I have the piece that was cut from it, so that I am sure of that, I am quite sure of this table cloth, and that it was in my bar the day before; I firmly believe the other things to be all mine, I lost such things, which I verily believe to be the same.

Court. Is not this a common lodging house?——Yes.

JONATHAN

JONATHAN BATT sworn.

About a quarter paſt two, I looked out of my box, and ſaw a man ſtanding at a door, he moved up a little after that, I ſaw no more of him till he was brought to the watch-houſe, he had white ſtockings and dark colour clothes on, afterwards on ſuſpicion he was brought to the watch-houſe.

Who was put into the black hole?—The priſoner Harris, I ſearched Harris, and in his pocket I found ſeveral broken matches, half a candle, and ſome halfpence under the bench that was in the black hole, then we went in ſearch for Ware, I was in the watch-houſe when he was put into the black hole.

JAMES DESWICK ſworn.

I was at the watch-houſe, in Hatton-garden, laſt Tueſday night, I am head-borough, we heard a great noiſe and diſturbance in the alley, we went up into the houſe, and ſaw the three priſoners there, one Macglew, I believe, was with the priſoner, it is a private houſe.

Did any of the priſoners lodge there?—I cannot ſay, I was with Gray the next morning when he found theſe things, to the beſt of my knowledge theſe are the things, they were in the houſe where the priſoners were, I think part of them was taken out of the bed-ſtead.

Proſecutor. This towel I believe to be mine, I cannot directly ſwear.

Court to Richard Ware. How long do you remember Harris reſorting to that houſe in George-alley?—Three or four months, M'Glew kept the houſe before, I had not ſeen him that morning, the woman priſoner ſaid, ſhe lodged there that night, it was a private houſe.

Mr. Knowles. Would not theſe ladies of the town have carried me to that houſe?—Certainly they would.

Mr. Knowles. My Lord, I ſubmit whether on this evidence, Harris ſhould be put on his defence, that which is againſt him expreſsly, is, that he was found in a ſituation where theſe halfpence were found, the indictment ſpecifies that theſe halfpence naming the number of them, are of a preciſe value, the ſame as the farthings, now this man's evidence ſays, that they were ſome of them counterfeits.

The indictment handed up to the Court.

Court. It is not neceſſary to prove the value that is loſt, if the whole was counterfeit halfpence, they ſhould be ſo ſettled to be ſure, but I do not conceive that the Court will ſay, if a part are counterfeit that ſhould vindicate the reſt; I do not now ſpeak of the effect of the evidence, but ſuppoſing it to be clearly proved under this indictment, that the priſoner had ſtolen ten good halfpence of the value of five pence, do not you conceive that would be ſufficient to maintain the indictment; but, ſuppoſing the priſoner had ſtolen nothing but bad halfpence, I think it would not have been ſufficient to maintain the indictment.

PRISONER HARRIS's DEFENCE.

I leave it to my counſel.

PRISONER LAMBERT's DEFENCE.

I had been out a drinking that night, and I was in the houſe when theſe people came in, and there were more people there.

PRISONER EDWARDS's DEFENCE.

I lodged in the houſe, and I do not know what I am taken up for.

Priſoner Lambert. I am an intire ſtranger, I have no witneſſes.

ALL THREE NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

The next Part will be publiſhed in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday, the 29th of JUNE, 1785, and the following Days;

Being the SIXTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER VI. PART VI.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX PENCE]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

681. PETER HOULTON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 22d of May laſt, a pair of ſilver ſhoe-buckles, value 3s. the property of Richard Ready.

RICHARD READY ſworn.

I loſt a pair of ſilver buckles on the 22d of May, and I found them on the Monday morning; they were ſent to me.

JOHN HESTER ſworn.

I received theſe buckles from this man, Thomas Ryan, on Sunday morning he left them with me for three ſhillings, and I gave them to the Juſtice, and he kept them in the office.

Proſecutor. I had the buckles from the Juſtice.

THOMAS RYAN ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner ſtoop and pick ſomething up, I do not know what they were, he ſaid he had found a pair of buckles, and he ſaid if I could get a ſhilling or two on them till Monday, he would like to ſee them advertiſed.

Court to Jury. Gentlemen, here is no evidence againſt the priſoner.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

682. SAMUEL LAMBE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 25th of June, one copper pot, value 5d. nine iron bars, value 9d. and one iron door, value 3d. the property of Thomas Hector.

THOMAS HECTOR ſworn.

I went into the back yard for ſome wood, and I ſaw a man going out with a pot on his back, and I followed him, and took him about twenty yards from the houſe, he ſaid, he brought it from a gentleman's houſe, and I brought him back, he had the pot and ſome bars.

(The things depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

A gentleman hired me to carry it, and he ſtood at the door.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

683. ROBERT

683. ROBERT BARBER was indicted for feloniously ſtealing on the 26th of May laſt 20lb. weight of leaden pipe, value 6d. and four iron bars, value 4d. belonging to the Rev. Anthony Knapp, then and there affixed to a certain b lding of the ſaid Anthony.

Lancelot Evans was called on his recognizance, and not appearing the recognizance was ordered to be eſtreated, and the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

684. THOMAS EDWARDS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 31ſt of March laſt, two linen ſheets, value 6d. a blanket, value 2d. a drinking glaſs, value 2d. the property of Ralph Unſworth, in a lodging room let to him, againſt the ſtatute.

RALPH UNSWORTH ſworn.

About half after ten the priſoner took a one pair of ſtairs lodging of mine, ready furniſhed, he came the night he took it, I never ſaw any more of him after the ſecond night for ten weeks, he gave me no notice of quitting, after he went away I miſſed the things in the indictment; I had ſeen them there, the things were never found again, I never ſaw them ſince.

Did he leave his lodgings locked or open?—Locked, and he took the key away with him; as I was at work I ſaw him about ten weeks after in the ſtreet, and I immediately went to him and ſeized him in the ſtreet.

What did he ſay for himſelf?——He ſaid he was not the perſon, but I am quite poſitive; I ſaw him both nights, he came and ſtood the ſide of me when I was at work ſome few minutes; I did not ſee him by day light before he was taken.

Mr. Knowles, Priſoner's Counſel. How have you deſcribed this perſon and his dreſs before the Magiſtrate?—I can tell you the particulars; the firſt night when he came into the houſe a fire was lighted for him, he went up in his room, the door I locked myſelf the laſt thing in the morning, when I got up to go to market, I found the door open, I ſaw no more of him till the next night, when I was at work he came in and aſked for a candle, and went to bed; the next night when he came, I did not ſay anything to him; I have other lodgers.

Do you recollect how he was dreſſed when you apprehended him?—No.

Was it the ſame dreſs in which he firſt came to you?——I think it was.

Have not you ſaid that he has appeared before the Magiſtrates in different dreſſes at different times?—No.

Have not you ſaid that he frequently wore boots?——No.

Several people I believe attended this gentleman?——Yes.

Did not you hear that he had been a man of great eſtate in America, which he had loſt by his attachment to his country?——Yes, I did.

Have you not ſaid before the Magiſtrate that he wore boots and half-boots?——I never did.

You never found any of your property?——No.

Did you ſearch his lodgings?——I did not know where.

Did not you take the trouble to enquire where he lodged?——I enquired into his character, and I found it a very good character, but I did not think it worth while to enquire after my property ten weeks after.

Court to Priſoner. Mr. Edwards, do you wiſh yourſelf to ſay anything.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

Pleaſe your Lordſhip, I never knew the man before he took me, I never was out of my lodgings but one night ſince I took it, from the 10th of December, to the 15th of April, then the houſe was given up, and I moved with the people, I now live with them, I uſed to be with a gentleman that came paſſenger with me, one Major Ward; I am a gentleman that have a wife and family in America; I came here on my own matters; I was very angry with the gentleman tleman that took me; I had a ſtick in my hand, but I did not uſe it.

JOSEPH CHANDLER, Eſq. ſworn.

I know the priſoner, and I can ſay this of him, he lived in Connecticut where I uſed to live, he was a man in that colony of as good reputation as any man, he was a goldſmith, and could not have purſued that buſineſs if he had not had a good character, for we truſt our property with them, they are a kind of bankers; he was a man of univerſal good character, I knew him in Nova Scotia, and lived at the next door; he has been in England about nine months I ſhould think, I have ſeen him every day; it is true, he has not received much money, all that he has received is from Lord Cornwallis; he is a man that would deſpiſe a low mean action, I have that opinion of him, his character is very fair, and very unexceptionable; it is true, he appears at times, and I believe the misfortunes he has met with, ſacrificing his eſtate, ſacrificing his family, ſacrificing his connections, have flung him into a dejected ſtate; but that would by no means induce him to commit a mean action.

You believe him to be a man of ſtrict integrity?—I do.

Captain JOHN WALKER ſworn.

I have known the priſoner ten years, I have known him ſince he came to London, he often came to my houſe where I lodge.

Has he preſerved a good character ſince he came to London?——As far as ever I heard, I never knew anything to the contrary, I knew him in America, his character was that of a man of integrity there, and taken notice of: he was in priſon ſeventeen months, and I alſo to my great misfortune, for his loyalty to his Royal Maſter.

Was you before the Magiſtrate?—Yes, Sir, I was one of his bondſmen.

Did you hear any expreſſions of the proſecutor's, that he appeared in different clothes?——I did not.

Captain PATRICK WALSH ſworn.

I know the priſoner, he always bore a good character ſince I have known him, that was in 1757; he was a gentleman that lived well, I have ſeen him every day ſince he came to London.

Do you believe him to be a man capable of a bad action?—I do not think he knows how to be capable of a bad action.

Mrs. HULL ſworn.

I know the priſoner, he lodged with me, from December the 10th to April the 15th.

What was his conduct when he was in your houſe?——He was as regular as any man could be, getting up and going to bed by eight or nine o'clock.

Have you any reaſon to know that he conſtantly ſlept in your houſe from the 10th of December to the 15th of April?——I know he ſlept conſtantly in my houſe except one night that he was out with Major Ward, who at that time was ill, and he attended him, it was in the very hard weather; I believe him to be a very honeſt worthy, judicious man, as ever was.

Court. Might he not have been abſent other nights without your knowledge?—He might without my knowledge, but not without the reſt of my lodgers knowledge; when I am out of the way I employ a perſon to make his bed for him, one Mrs. Packwood.

SOPHIA PACKWOOD ſworn.

I know the priſoner, he lodged in Stonecutters-alley, Lincoln's Inn Fields, at the houſe of the laſt witneſs, I lodge there, I aſſiſted her to make his bed, I never knew him to be out but one night, and that I have reaſon to believe was with Major Ward.

If he had been abſent any other night muſt you have known it?—Certainly, my Lord, my little boy uſed to ſleep with him almoſt every night.

What day was this?——I cannot ſay.

Major THOMAS WARD ſworn.

Mr. Knowles. I believe, Sir, you are an American?——Yes.

You are one of thoſe unfortunate gentlemen that are under the deſcription of loyaliſts?——Yes, I know the priſoner, ſometime time towards the laſt of February laſt, he called at my lodgings and I was very ill, and I aſked him to ſtep of an errand for me, and he went and came back again, I aſked him to ſtay with me all night, I knew him in America, his general character was very good; I have known him in this country, I have ſeen him almoſt every day, he came in the ſame ſhip, he has preſerved the ſame character.

NOT GUILTY.

Court. Mr. Edwards, from your ſituation in life, though at preſent you are in unfortunate circumſtances, I think it right to declare, I am in my own mind ſatisfied that the proſecutor is miſtaken as to your perſon, and from the manner in which the Jury have given their verdict, I believe they are of the ſame opinion; and therefore there is no loſs of character to you, from your having appeared in ſo unpleaſant a ſituation.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

685. JOHN SIMPSON was indicted for that he, on the 7th of July, at the pariſh of St. Mary Matfellon, otherwiſe Whitechapel, did marry one Hannah Turner, widow, and had her for his wife, and afterwards on the 16th of December laſt, at the pariſh of St. George's with force and arms did marry one Mary Ann Harwood and to the ſaid Mary Ann Harwood was then and there married, the ſaid Hannah Turner his firſt wife being then alive.

MARY WILKIE ſworn.

I was one of the priſoner's brideſmaids to his firſt wife.

What was her name?—Hannah Turner, widow, I was at the marriage.

Who has got a copy of the regiſter of the firſt marriage?——Hannah Turner.

Who proves it to be a copy, who adviſed you in this proſecution?——I do not know.

Is there anybody here who can prove the copy of the regiſter?—Herſelf is here.

HONNOR CLOUGH ſworn.

Court. Do you know anything of the marriage of Hannah Turner?—I was at it.

Is there any copy of the regiſter in Court?—Yes.

Did you compare it with the regiſter?—Not as I know of, I was at the marriage, the 7th of July, 1783.

If there is nobody that can produce the copy of the regiſter we can go no further, Gentlemen, the copy of the regiſter is neceſſary evidence.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

686. JOHN EADES was indicted for that he being impriſoned in the houſe of correction at Clerkenwell, did on the 5th of June laſt, unlawfully and feloniouſly without any lawful cauſe eſcape out of the ſaid houſe of correction.

(The record read by Thomas Shelton, Eſq; Clerk of the arraigns, and examined by the Court.)

JOHN HARWOOD ſworn.

I know the priſoner, I am governor of the houſe of correction.

Was this priſoner ever delivered into your cuſtody?——Yes.

When?——I do not recollect, it is ſpecified in the indictment.

Cannot you recollect it?—No, he came by a certificate from the clerk of the arraigns, which is here in Court.

Have you ever tranſmitted the certificate to the clerk of the peace?——No.

Why have not you complied with the directions of the act of parliament in tranſmitting the certificate to the clerk of the peace?——I did not know (The certificate read of John Eades, of the age of twenty four years, for twelve months) I am ſure this is one of the perſons delivered to me by that certificate.

What became of him afterwards?—— He made his eſcape on the 5th of June laſt, he went through the cieling of the top roof, and over the garden wall, I ſaw the place broke, he was in the gaol in the courſe of that day, and was miſſing when I called them over to ſee who had eſcaped, ſeveral others had eſcaped, I believe there were eleven or twelve.

Priſoner. I ſaw the reſt of the priſoners go out, and I went with them.

THOMAS MUMFORD ſworn.

He was under the care of my maſter on Sunday the 5th of June, ſome people got out, and he was miſſing; Young who took him is not here.

Court. It does not appear how the priſoner comes here into Court?

Harwood. He was retaken in about a week.

Court. He might have been ſecretted in the gaol at that time?—That he could not be, he was brought from the round-houſe keeper of St. Giles's; I was at home when he was brought in, I ſaw him as ſoon as he was brought in the priſon.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was eating my dinner, and I ſaw all the priſoners going out, and I followed them, I never broke the goal, ſeveral went out before I did.

GUILTY.

Court. He wanted one month and two days of his time being out, the ſentence muſt be three years, one month, and two days.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

687. ROBERT FRANKLIN was indicted for feloniouſly eſcaping, from Clerkenwell Bridewell.

(The certificate read.)

——— HARWOOD ſworn.

My man took him.

THOMAS MUMFORD ſworn.

I took him about two hours after he was out in Ruport-ſtreet, at the White Horſe; I brought him back to gaol in a coach.

GUILTY.

To be impriſoned four years, and two hundred and ſixty-three days.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

688. GEORGE REYNOLD (a little boy) was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Thomas Smith, on the King's highway, on the 14th day of June, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon and againſt his will, a ſilver watch, value 40s. a ſteel chain, value 2s. a key, value 1d. one white ſtone ſeal ſet in baſe metal, value 6d. the property of the ſaid Thomas.

THOMAS SMITH ſworn.

The priſoner ſtole my watch on the 14th of June, between eight and nine in the evening, the corner of Leadenhall-ſtreet; I had a little table on my head, and I was going towards the Change with it, I have a very bad diſorder on me, the gravel and ſtone, I could hardly walk, and there were many people and I walked paſt them, and this boy whipped my watch out of my pocket, and I threw the table from me, and I ſtrove to run and I fell down, I ballooed out ſtop him! I have loſt my watch; when I got up again, I ſaw a gathering of people together, and he was ſtopped, and when I got up to him, he ſaid, he had got the watch, and that he took no watch from me; I found no watch, I am ſure that is the boy that took it according to my beſt ſight; he was out of my ſight when I fell down.

Court. Who adviſed you to indict the little boy for a highway robbery?—— Every body.

Who was it in particular?——I have a ſon adviſed me, and other people, no particular perſon adviſed me to proſecute him capitally.

WILLIAM GOFF ſworn.

I am a conſtable of the city, patrol of the Eaſtern diviſion, I was going up Biſhopſgate-ſtreet, about nine, on the 14th of June, and I heard a perſon cry out ſtop him! I ſaw three boys come running along, the priſoner was in the middle of the three he parted with them and run into the path, I held him, and the proſecutor came up, and fell down, and he got up again, and I ſtopped the boy; ſays he, that boy has picked my watch out of my pocket, ſays I, how do you know he has, ſays he, I ſaw him, I had a table on my head, and he run under the table, and I purſued him, he ſaid, he was ſure he was the boy; I ſearched the boy and found nothing upon him, the other two boys run away directly, and I took him to the Compter.

Have you put the man in the way of carrying on the proſecution?——No, I never ſaid a word to the man.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I have nothing to ſay, only I came from St. Martin's workhouſe, and coming up to Cornhill, I heard the cry of ſtop thief! and I ſaw a parcel of people running, and I run, and a man in a white coat caught me, and held me till that old man came up, and ſaid I took his watch from him, I had my friends here every day, I do not know whether they are here now.

NOT GUILTY.

Court to Priſoner. You have had a very fortunate eſcape on this occaſion, I hope it will not be an encouragement to you, for this is not the firſt time that you have been here notwithſtanding your tender years, and the next crime you commit, may bring you to be hanged; and therefore you muſt take warning that your youth will be no ground whatever for you to obtain mercy.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

689. ELIZABETH WHITE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 16th of June, twenty-five yards and half of printed linen, value 40s. the property of Adlard Thorp and Curtis Graves, privily in their ſhop.

CURTIS GRAVES ſworn.

My partner's name is Adlard Thorp, I loſt ſome printed linen the 16th of June, between ſix and ſeven in the evening, the priſoner and another woman came in with intent to buy a remnant of cotton for a child's frock, I ſerved the other woman to the amount of five ſhillings, they went out together, and as they were going out of the door, I ſuſpected there was ſomething under the priſoner's cloak; I told my young man I was not ſatisfied, and we both went from behind the counter to the door, and the moment we got to her, my young man ſaw her drop the linen, I did not; I ſaw the linen on the floor in the ſhop, they were only juſt at the door, ſhe made ſome frivolous excuſe, and ſaid, ſhe knew nothing at all of it.

Did you perceive her take anything at all in the ſhop?——No, it was laying juſt by the door.

Mr. Knowles, Priſoner's Council. Your counter is near the door?—Yes.

You have linen placed in other parts of your ſhop?——Yes.

You had a horſe of linen?——Yes.

That extends near the door?—Yes, it is at the door.

Might not any perſon in paſſing briſkly towards the door have diſlodged this linen from the horſe?——No, Sir, we never put any of that kind on the horſe; it never was on the horſe.

Are

Are you ſure there was no cotton of that pattern on the horſe?—Yes.

How long was it ſince you inſpected the horſe?—I cannot tell.

Who prepared the horſe for ſhew?—My man.

Do you take upon yourſelf to ſwear, and do you expect to be believed, that when another man furniſhed that horſe with goods, that this cotton was not on the horſe?——I will take upon myſelf to ſwear that that printed cotton was not there.

How many pieces might this horſe contain?——Twenty.

Will you take upon yourſelf to ſwear that you took a particular note of every one of theſe twenty pieces that were on the horſe?——I cannot ſwear that, but I can ſwear that that linen was not on the horſe.

Do you know where that linen lay?—I do not.

Then will you ſay it was not on the horſe?——I am ſenſible it was not on the horſe, but I do not know where it was.

How many cuſtomers had you in your ſhop that day?——I cannot ſay.

It is a ſhop pretty much frequented?—Yes.

How many were in it at that time?—Six or eight.

Then of courſe theſe people had been up and down the ſhop?——I admit that.

Did you ſearch this woman?—No, Sir.

What, my friend, ſuſpect a woman of robbing you and not ſearch her, then of courſe I think you took her for an honeſt woman; what became of the other woman?——She went, I let her go.

How did the other woman behave when you ſtopped the priſoner?——She ſtopped about five months, but ſhe went off when I ſent for a conſtable.

JOHN HOWTON ſworn.

On the 16th of June laſt, between ſix and ſeven, I was ſent for to take charge of the priſoner, and he charged her in my preſence with ſtealing a piece of printed linen, ſhe made no anſwer at all.

JOHN YOUNG ſworn.

I ſaw the piece of linen fall from the priſoner at the bar, ſhe was by the door, I was behind the counter when it fell from her, but I was cloſe to her, I was going to take hold of her, as I ſuſpected ſhe had ſomething, the horſes were faſtened to the door, there are one on each ſide, ſhe was between the two horſes, a perſon may go without touching either of them.

Mr. Knowles. That is as much as they can do I fancy?——Yes.

What part of her did it fall from?——From her clothes, I ſaw it ſlide down, I ſaw it before it came entirely to the ground, I ſaw it falling, it fell between her and one of the horſes; I was ſo cloſe to her I could not be deceived, I am quite ſure of it, it was under her cloak I imagine; ſhe had a long cloak on.

Did you furniſh the horſes?——Yes.

Was there any goods of that kind on the horſes?——We never put any ſuch common goods on the horſes, this was a linen, we never put any on the horſes but calicoes.

Did you perceive her taking it?—I did not; it was delivered to the conſtable in my preſence, it was the ſame I picked up.

Conſtable. I had it from the counter, Mr. Graves delivered it to me.

Proſecutor. That was the ſame that was picked up off the floor.

(The piece depoſed to by the ſhop-mark, by Young and Graves.)

Mr. Knowles. A man might go without touching any of them, might not he?—Yes, juſt ſteer clear.

Was the other perſon before her or behind her, that went out of the ſhop with her?——I cannot poſitively ſay.

Jury. Did you find it between the horſe and the door ſill, or between the horſe and the counter?—Between the door ſill and her, it was in the middle of the door-way, without-ſide the horſe.

When you hang theſe pieces on the horſe you hang the ends to ſhew, you put the heavieſt heavieſt inſide the horſe?——I am ſure I found this without ſide the horſe.

Were you ſo near her as to ſwear that you could ſee diſtinctly whether this piece fell from her or not?—That was the woman that I ſaw the piece of linen fall from, I was ſo cloſe that I could not be deceived, the other woman was not between me and her, I was cloſe to this woman, but the other muſt be be before of courſe.

Mr. Knowles. That is reaſoning, but you did not ſee that; the priſoner permitted herſelf to be ſearched very quietly?——I do not know that ſhe was ſearched at all.

Do you know every piece that you put on that horſe?—I do not.

Do you know every piece that you put on theſe two horſes?—I do not know exactly, but I know partly.

Priſoner. I leave it to my councel.

The priſoner called three witneſſes who all gave her a very good character, and ſaid ſhe worked hard for her living at her needle.

Jury. Did you ſhew the priſoner this linen?—No.

GUILTY 1

Of ſtealing to the value of 4s. 10d.

To be privately whipped and confined to hard labour ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

690. BENJAMIN JONES was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 11th of June, one pair of mahogany carved poſts for a bedſtead, value 17s. the property of William Gough.

THOMAS COSFIELD ſworn.

The priſoner worked for Mr. Gough about two years ago, I have the management of the buſineſs.

JOHN WITHERS ſworn.

About half after eleven I ſaw the priſoner take the poſts from the door, and put them on his ſhoulder, and walk away with them, I live almoſt oppoſite to the proſecutor's, I went over and informed the people of the ſhop, and Mr. Cosfield went after him, and overtook him ſome little diſtance from the houſe, I then went home to my own houſe, and ſaw no more of it, I did not ſee them taken from him; I am ſure I ſaw him walk off with it.

ANN COSFIELD ſworn.

I followed the priſoner from our door to Camomile-ſtreet before I overtook him, and they were on his ſhoulders, when I ſtopped him, I aſked him where he was going with them, he immediately gave them to me, he did not offer to run, he was ſtopped directly, he never was out of my ſight, he made theſe excuſes in the warehouſe before the men, that he meant to pay for them.

JOSEPH GATES ſworn.

I took the man and the poſts, they are the ſame poſts. (the poſts depoſed to.) Here is my mark before they went to the turner.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

On Saturday morning I got up about five o'clock, and I went into Whitechapel; in Biſhopſgate-ſtreet I met a young man an acquaintance, at the top of Houndſditch there ſtood a carpenter whom I knew by ſight but not his name, he aſked me where I was going, I ſaid to work, he ſaid go and ſend me a hand, I have a bedſtead to make, and have juſt bought the pillars, they ſtand at the corner, go and fetch them ſays he, they are at the door there ſays he, come make haſte; ſo I took them on my ſhoulders and brought them up to the ſtreet, I thought he was behind me; and Mr. Cosfield came and aſked me if I was going with them.

Who was this man?——A carpenter I have been in company with different times, I do not know his name, nor where he lives; lives; the man ſent me for the poſts, but whether he is here or not I cannot ſay.

The priſoner called one witneſs to his character.

GUILTY.

To be whipped and confined to hard labour ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

691. JOHN GODFREY was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling-houſe of James Gent, about the hour of one in the night, on the 16th of May laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein one ſheet, value 5s. four ſhirts, value 15s. twelve callico ſhirts, value 3l. two pair of cotton ſtockings, value 3s. two ſilver ſpoons, value 20s. three teaſpoons, value 10s. one leather ſurgeon's inſtrument caſe, value 2s. two pair of ſteel ſciſſars, value 2s. two ſilver forceps, value 2s. two ſilver probes, value 2s. one common ſteel lancet, value 6d. one ſteel abceſs lancet, value 6d. one director, value 6d. one razor, value 12d. one tin ſalvatory, value 6d. a pair of baſe metal ſhoe-buckles, value 2s. an Indian riding cane mounted with ſilver, value 10s. a pair of men's ſhoes, value 3s. a canvas bag, value 1d. and forty-eight halfpence, value 2s. the property of the ſaid James Gent.

The Caſe opened by Mr. Garrow.

JAMES GENT ſworn.

The priſoner lived with me from the 26th of July, 1784, till January, 1785, as a porter and ſhopman; I always take my keys to bed, I generally remain in the ſhop till the man has locked the ſhop door, one man lays in the ſhop; on the 16th of May I ſaw the houſe faſtened, and I took up the keys with me, I went to bed a little after eleven; about five in the morning the maid came and knocked at my door, the waſherwoman ſlept in the houſe with her, they were going to waſh the next morning, and the linen was all ſpread in the houſe, ready ſorted; when I came down I found every apartment below faſtened, I went immediately up ſtairs, and found the parlour door open, which opens into the paſſage of a private door which I had, I pulled it too the night before, it was on the ſpring lock, there was a handle on both ſides the door; the cloſet door was forced open by cutting the wood, and forcing back the bolt, I am perfectly ſure I ſhut it the night before I ſaw the cloſet door open; I went to the ſhop and ſaw a board down, where the perſon had entered, there is a long place under the ſhop window where we put the ſhutters into of a day, and of a night that is a hollow, and there is a board which communicates from that place where we depoſit the ſhutters, it has two turn buckles, but it had a lock withinſide which was locked, and it was wrenched off, the wooden work where the lock goes into was forced out of it, and the door lay down on the place, which I ſaw when I went out immediately; by this means a man might have acceſs to the ſhop, and to the parlour of courſe, I then went to the counter, the handle of the till was torn off, and lay atop of the counter, the counter was cut, but the till was not open, this cupboard was likewiſe cut above the wood work, where I kept my tea and ſugar and ſome liquors, and a ſet of inſtruments, this door was wide open; it had been forced open, there was the mark of the knife where the wood-work was taken away; there were three tea ſpoons taken away, a canvas bag with two ſhillings worth of halfpence, a pocket ſet of inſtruments, and a tin ſalvatory, ſome bad ſhillings, and a ſix-pence, and a bottle that had ſome rum in it was found down by the cupboard; they took likewiſe a pair of buckles from the chimney ſhelf, and a cane which I brought from India myſelf, and two table ſpoons out of the kitchen drawer, and ſixteen ſhirts, two pair of cotton ſtockings, one odd ſilk ſtocking, and a coarſe ſheet off the man's bed bed, marked No. 3; there was one tambour waiſtcoat was dropped in a pan of water, and a pair of ſhoes from a very obſcure place in the ſhop, very near where the man lay, the beſt of a dozen pair; I believe it was on the 31ſt of May that ſome of the things were pawned, and on the 2d of June I received information.

Court. You ſay the priſoner lived with you?——Yes, he left me on the 26th of January.

Mr. Silveſter, Priſoner's Councel. Who did the priſoner live with at that time?—He lived with Mr. De Brah, at Temple-bar, at the time the robbery was committed.

You have a ſervant to lay in this ſhop?—He lays in a little room in this ſhop.

One would have thought it made a conſiderable noiſe?——I was ſurpriſed that the man did not hear it.

JOHN MEREDITH ſworn.

I live with Mr. Lane, the pawn broker, in Holborn, I produce a caſe of inſtruments which I received of the priſoner at the bar, on the 31ſt of May, between eleven and twelve he brought them to our ſhop to pledge, I lent him 7s. on them, he pledged them in the name of Mr. Grant, I ſuppoſed him to be a ſurgeon, as he appeared to be genteel, I took them in and aſked him no queſtions; I am ſure I received them from the priſoner; we had information from Bow-ſtreet of the other things, and the caſe of ſurgeon's inſtruments on the 2d of June, and I took them to Bow-ſtreet, and they ſent me to Mr. Gent, the priſoner was taken in his maſter's ſhop; he did not come again to our ſhop.

Mr. Silveſter. You never ſaw him before?—No, but he was in the ſhop ten minutes or more, I had no reaſon for taking particular notice of his perſon, I firſt offered him 5s. then he ſaid that would not do, then I offered him 6s. then 7s. we have a great number of people comes to our ſhop, it was a fortnight after when he was taken up, I knew him by his being pitted with the ſmall pox, and by his voice, I have no doubt at all about him.

Mr. Silveſter. How many people came to your ſhop that day?——It is impoſſible for me to tell.

Will you ſwear to every perſon that came to your ſhop that day?—I will not.

JAMES SHORE ſworn.

I am a pawnbroker, I live at Mr. Lane's, I was preſent when the inſtruments were pledged, they were pledged by the priſoner, I had a converſation with him, it was between eleven and twelve; he aſked half a guinea on them, the lad took them of him, I was rather higher up over the counter, the boy brought them up to me, I began to look at them, and he aſked what inſtruments they were, the priſoner ſaid they were ſurgeons inſtruments, he ſaid he wanted half a guinea on them, I went down to him, I ſaid, Sir, we will lend you 5s. upon them, he ſaid that would not do; it is the priſoner at the bar, I know him by his features, I am ſure it was him, I was in converſation with him for the ſpace of eight minutes.

Mr. Silveſter. You never ſaw him before?—No.

What light had you?—There was ſufficient light, it was lighter then than it is here.

It was in one of theſe little private boxes?——Yes, but the priſoner leaned over the counter, took off his hat, and rubbed his head; we take particular notice of people, but I had no ſuſpicion of him, he looked like a gentleman.

Mr. Garrow. I am afraid if any other gentleman was to come to your ſhop, you would know him again?—Yes, if he was ſo long, and was to argue as he did.

Proſecutor. I had theſe inſtruments made for myſelf by Bodker, his name is on every one of them, but one, which one had been loſt and replaced by another maker, which is the abceſs lancet.

What name is on that?—I do not know, I think there is a crown upon it, but I am not certain.

Mr.

Mr. Silveſter. Bodker is a great maker?——He was, but he has failed long ſince, and is now a porter in the India-houſe; I have had them three or four voyages to India, and upon the whole, I have no doubt but they are mine, I ſaw them the night before the robbery.

JACOB FREEMAN ſworn.

I apprehended the priſoner at Mr. Le Brah's, in Fleet-ſtreet, when I apprehended him, he behaved very genteely, he ſaid they were Mr. Gent's inſtruments when he ſaw them before the magiſtrate, he ſaid he had had them in uſe, and that they were his maſter's inſtruments.

Mr. Silveſter. What was he aſked before he ſaid this?—He ſaid they certainly were Mr. Gent's inſtruments, but he never knew of the taking them.

Court. When he ſaid theſe were Mr. Gent's inſtruments, did he accompany that with any account how he came by them?——No, when he was put to the bar to be examined before the magiſtrate, he heard what Mr. Gent had to ſay, and Mr. Gent ſaid, with ſubmiſſion to your worſhip, I ſhall only aſk whether they are my inſtruments, he ſaid they were; he ſaid he did not pawn them, nor know how they were loſt, and he ſaid he did not know Mr. Lane's, much leſs of the pawning them.

Priſoner. I would only obſerve, Sir, that the boy ſwore at my ſecond hearing, that Mr. Lane could as poſitively ſwear to me as he did, and when Mr. Lane was there, he could not.

Meredith. I never ſaid any ſuch thing, Mr. Lane was preſent at the time I lent the money on them, but not when the priſoner firſt came into the ſhop, but he did not know the priſoner, he did not take any notice.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I never ſlept out of Mr. De Brah's houſe but twice, the firſt was the 3d of May, then I could not get in, the laſt was the 29th of May, and this robbery was committed on the 16th of May laſt.

JANE DAVIS ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. De Brah, he is a chemiſt in Fleet-ſtreet, the priſoner was ſhopman to Mr. De Brah.

On the night of the 16th of May did he lay at his maſter's houſe or not?——I do not know, he was there before me, I went there on the 25th of April.

Did he lay out of the houſe during that time?——Twice, one day was the day the air balloon went off, and the other was of a Sunday.

Mr. Garrow. What air balloon was it?——I do not know.

Was it the air balloon that your maſter was to have gone in?——Yes.

I take it for granted that you and he did not ſleep near one another?——No, nor not far off.

How near?——I ſlept a ſtory higher.

Might a man go out at two o'clock, and then come home when the ſhop was open?——He has come home at twelve.

Any later?——I cannot remember, there is no keyhole on the outſide the ſtreet door.

WILLIAM POOLE ſworn.

I am porter to Mr. De Brah, ſometimes I opened the ſhop, and ſometimes the priſoner; I cannot remember when the priſoner came to my maſter, I cannot tell whether he lay at home on the night of the 16th of May, he only lay out two nights to my certain knowledge, the firſt night was when Count Zambeccari was to go up, and did not go up, every other night, as far as I found, he lay at home, was always let in by the priſoner, excepting theſe two times.

——— DE BRAH ſworn.

You are a chemiſt in Fleet-ſtreet?—Yes.

What day was it that Count Zambeccari's balloon was to have gone up?——I do not really recollect the day, it was on Monday, but I do not recollect the day of the month.

Jury. Was not it Monday the 16th of May?——It might or it might not be, I do not know.

Mr. Garrow. That is ſingular, when you was to have gone up in the balloon——It is not at all ſingular, becauſe I was aſked to go up the ſame morning.

Can you swear that that day was not on Whit-Monday?——I should conceive it might be on that day, most likely on that day.

Prisoner. It was on the 3d of May.

Court. Whatever day of the month it was, that was one of the nights that this lad lay out, and I wish this circumstance could be ascertained, and it may very easily; the Foreman of the Jury has a recollection that it was on that Monday, one question will ease all my private doubts about it, was it on a Monday, whatever Monday it was?——I must own I cannot positively say, whether it was on a Monday or a Tuesday.

The Foreman of the Jury. My wife laid in a dangerous state on that day, and she died on the day following.

The Porter. It was Tuesday the 3d of May, that it was to have gone with Count Zambeccari.

Court. Had Count Zambeccari made any attempt which failed before that?—No. Did Mr. Lockwood make a successful attempt afterwards?——He did.

Was there any attempt between that in which he was concerned, and the other?—None that I know of.

[The newspapers sent for.]

Mr. Garrow, reads. On the 2d of May there was an advertisement that it was to ascend:——

Mr. Garrow to De Brah. You have said, that on the two nights you have named the prisoner was absent from your house?—Yes.

Where did he sleep?—Up in the second floor, under the maid's room.

In what way was the shop door fastened?—Most commonly I go to bed last, and I generally turn the key, and leave it in the door, the reason is in case of fire.

So that if any body was so disposed, they might go out of your house without your knowledge?—They might so certainly.

Mr. Silvester. Where did you lay?—In a room opposite to his.

Then if he had gone out, you must have heard him?—I might or I might not.

——— REIN sworn.

I am an apothecary, I have known him four years and a half, he always bore the best of characters.

——— M'KENZIE sworn.

I am an engraver in St. Ann's-court, Soho; I have known him about five years, I never heard a bad word given of him, I was quite amazed to hear of his being in Clerkenwell Bridewell.

——— WAINWRIGHT sworn.

I am a victualler in St. Ann's-court, I have known him six or seven years, he is as honest a young man as ever was, and never in a prison or watch-house before this.

——— DAVIS sworn.

I have known him eight or nine years, never heard anything against him before this in my life.

Mrs. SALTER sworn.

I have known him seven years, a very honest young man.

Court to Prosecution. I think you said, one man always sleeps in the little room behind the parlour, adjoining to the shop?—Yes.

Who was that man?——He is not here, he is my servant now.

Where was he that night?—In his bed.

Did he hear no disturbance?——No.

From the situation in which you found the door at his room, was it possible it could happen without his hearing it?——I think it was.

Have you ever had any suspicion of him?——No.

Have you ever examined him upon the subject?——Yes.

Have you ever searched for the things that were lost in his places?——No, the maid makes his bed constantly, he has no place, he has no box.

Why did not you bring that man?——I cannot spare him, I believe firmly he heard no thing of it.

Court. What sort of man is that man in person?——A short man, not so tall as the prisoner is, he is rather lustier.

Very much unlike him?——No resemblance of him.

Court to Meredith. Have you ever seen Mr. Gent's other shopman?——I did see him when I took the instruments to his house.

What sort of a man is he?——He is a young man, I cannot say what sort of a man he is.

Is he the size of the prisoner?——I think he is.

Now recollect the person of that man, and say whether there is any resemblance between him and the person that brought the things to you?——I do not think there is in the features, but he is about the size; I looked at the prisoner, and I swear positively he is the person that delivered the instruments to me.

Court to Prosecutor. At what time was you alarmed?——At five in the morning.

NOT GUILTY.

Prisoner. My Lord, and Gentlemen of the Jury, upon my honour there never was a young man went from the bar more innocent than myself.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before ——Mr. RECORDER.

---

692. JOHN CLARKE was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 31st of May last, one leather cart back-band and crupper, value 9s. the property of William Fisher.

WILLIAM FISHER sworn.

I live at Southall, in the precinct of Norwood, on the first of June, I missed a leather back-band and crupper, we looked about and could not find it, the first time I saw it afterwards at Mr. Woodstock's, at Norwood Green, between three and four on the 2d of June; I can swear it to be mine by the marks.

Mr. Silvester, Prisoner's Counsel. What day of the week was the 1st of June?——On a Wednesday, then, I missed it, it was seen on Monday in the stable; there is a round ring on the back that is sewed with wax thread, just by where the chain goes through, I had it at Christmas, it has been worn twice or three times.

Who made it?——Mr. Clarke the prisoner.

What is there particular in the round ring?——A mark that I can swear to; the prisoner is a master harness maker at Southall, I am a public house keeper, I keep the George, I have another harness but it is in town.

CHRISTOPHER CROXSTON sworn.

I am a collar maker, I live at Acton, on the second of June the prosecutor sent his servant to my house for me to go with him to Norwood on some particular business, and he would serve me as much another time; I went with him to Mr. Woodstock's house, the farmer's, it was about nine or between nine and ten, Mr. Fisher asked me if I understood whether a harness had been worn or no, because he had seen one there, and he was pretty sure it was his, he was partly sure that was the word, and whilst we were disputing upon it, the servant came, and Mr. Fisher sent for me to consult me on this harness; I never saw this harness before to take notice of it, have seen it go past my door, this is the same harness, and it has been in my possession ever since.

What is the use of a ring if applied to this harness, is not it a common thing to put these rings to harnesses?——I never saw it in my life.

Do you mean to swear that this ring is a singular thing?——Yes, I never saw it in the trade before.

Is it so singular in the trade that a man may very safely swear to it?——It is quite uncommon in the trade.

Mr. Silvester. You said, you had seen this harness?——I saw them go by my house.

How many harnesses have you seen by your house to Acton?—Only there at one time of Mr. Fisher's, some are made with rings, and some are not.

If I desired you to take off the rings, would not you take them off for me?—Yes.

Would not you cover it then?——I should not put it into your hands for a new harness.

RICHARD JONES sworn.

I was hostler to the prosecutor, my master lost on the 2d of June, on a Tuesday, a leather cart back-band and crupper. I missed it about nine in the morning; on Monday night the prisoner said to me, will you go to London tomorrow, the prisoner lives the second door from our gates, he keeps a shop there, he asked me if I went to London with the team the next day, Tuesday, I said yes, and he desired me to call him up between three and four in the morning, I called him up about half after three, and I went to London with the cart and two horses, we had only two horses, I had no occasion for this crupper; I set off about four, when I came back which was between two and three that afternoon I first missed this, I thought my master had lent it, till Wednesday morning doing the horses, I found the chains and leather were gone off, I went and told my master, he said, I must know something about it, says I, I will be upon oath it will be found out, I saw it afterwards at Mr. Woodstock's in the stable, and I saw the prisoner and the farmer that evening, I was there when he came out of the house I saw him there between eight or nine at night.

Did he say anything in your hearing?—Nothing that night, I saw nothing there that night, the next morning we got up, and I went over to the farmer's with my master, and there I saw the leather cart back-band, the maid servant shewed it me, I knew it by having sweat upon it, that came from off the horse in several places, there was no other mark upon it by which I could know it; I went into the prisoner's shop on the Tuesday, when he was making a bit of a halter about eleven, and I asked him who it was for, and he said for Mr. Woodstock, that he was going to send over a horse harness there, and there was no other harness in the shop (The harness deposed to, and the crupper.) I swear to the crupper by the hole where the hinge of the crupper went through it.

JAMES WOODSTOCK sworn.

I live about a mile from the prosecutor's, I bespoke of the prisoner a harness for one horse, he brought me a complete harness on Wednesday the first of June, I was to have a new harness, and I paid for it as such; it was brought home in the day light publickly, it laid open then on the dresser not in any brown paper, I had no doubt but it was a new harness, it laid in the kitchen which is an open room where we live.

Did you see anything like the sweating of a horse on any part of them?—I did not at that time, I did not examine it minutely because I had no such thought.

Was it pointed out to you the next day or did you perceive it yourself that there was any sweating of a horse upon it?——It was pointed out to me.

By who?—By Mr. Fisher, I was gone to town when Mr. Croxford came.

Is the harness now produced, the harness that was taken from your house?——I believe it is, it is like it, I would not go to swear to the harness, because other harnesses may be like it, I was not at home when it was taken away.

Mr. Fisher. I went for a warrant, and he said you must bring the harness with you, so we took the prisoner up, and I went round and fetched the harness from Mr. Woodstock's wife.

Court to Woodstock. Had you any other new harness but this?——No.

Fisher. I put it into a sack, and carried it to Mr. Lamb's, then Lamb gave it to Croxford, I saw it given to him.

Croxford. I kept it in my possession ever since, till I brought it into Court now.

Jury to Woodstock. Did you think it was sweated?

sweated?—I cannot think about it, it did look as if it had been put on a horse, but I will not swear it had, and Mr. Fisher pointed out a hole in the crupper, as if it had been made to fit his buckle.

Court to Crosford. What is the fair charge for these several articles?—Six shillings for that back-band, and with crupper and straps about nine shillings, the belly band two shillings and sixpence; the prisoner is a collar maker, and I have often dealt with him, I know no harm of him.

Crosford. I never saw a crupper so made before, but it is possible that a collar maker for his convenience or his customers, might make such alterations as is made in that harness, the leather is put on with single thread, and the other is put on with double thread.

DANIEL SEYMOUR sworn.

I am a wheeler at Southall, I live just close to him, I was at the prisoner's house on the Monday before he was taken up, I was there on the Friday night.

What was he at work upon then?—On a crupper and hip straps for Mr. Woodstock.

Prisoner. The man heard Mr. Woodstock speak for them.

Seymour. I was present when he ordered them (looks at it) it is the same that hung up there, I know the crupper but nothing else; I am sure of it by this place, this hole, I told him, says I, Mr. Clarke, this is one that you cut out for your father.

Prisoner. My father lives in Essex, he spoke to me for a set of harnesses, and he did not like the crupper.

Do you keep house at Southall?—Yes, I was to make a pair of wooden hames for Mr. Woodstock, and I went in to see how forward he was, as I had not made them.

The prisoner called five witnesses who all gave him a good character.

Fisher. I was up that morning at five, and I saw him at my gate.

Jury to Prosecutor. Who made this collar of yours?—The prisoner.

Jury to the Currier. How long do you think it is since that leather was curried?—I do not think it had been curried a vast while, and might perhaps about three months, but I do not think it had been worn.

Court to Currier. Can you say with any certainty, or can you not?—I can.

Jury to Fisher. When did you buy this harness?—About Christmas.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

693. WILLIAM GLOSTER was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 18th of June, three coach glasses, value 30s. the property of John Whitworth, and one great coat, value 5s. the property of John Chalkley.

JOHN WITWORTH sworn.

I am a coach-master, I only swear to the glasses.

JOHN CHALKLEY sworn.

I only prove my property.

SARAH HALES sworn.

I am a working woman, I get up very early in the morning, and I saw the prisoner come down Back-house-lane, Hackney, about a quarter after four last Saturday was a week, and I saw him look through the key-hole of Mr. Newman's stable door, my cousin's called me off, and in about ten minutes I saw him come from off Mr. Whitworth's coach house door, he had a great coat and a bag, I cannot say what was in the bag, but I saw the coat; he walked off up the lane, I did not know him before, nor ever saw him, I know him by his apparel, I did not see his face, for his back was towards me, I can swear to his clothes.

SAMUEL EVERTON sworn.

I was standing at the watch-house door in Hackney church-yard, in the morning, a little

a little before five, I made after him, and took him, and he had theſe glaſſes and a coat, all that he ſaid was, that he begged I would not hurt him, one Mr. Gough came up and ſaid it was Mr. Chalkley's great coat, and Chalkley came and owned it, and we have had them in our poſſeſſion ever ſince.

A WITNESS ſworn.

I was with the laſt witneſs, I ſaw the priſoner paſs, ſo we ſtopped him and brought him back with the things upon him, he cried out do not hurt me, he had a bag and a great coat, and there were three coach glaſſes. (The things depoſed to.) The coach ſtrings were cut off and left in the coach-houſe, and they match directly.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I went down this lane and there was no thoroughfare, coming back I found that was no turning, I was taken ſhort, and I went by the ſide of a dunghill, and there was this bag and theſe glaſſes, and the great coat was alongſide of it; I ſhook the great coat and brought it out, and looked at it for five or ſix minutes.

The priſoner called one witneſs who gave him a very good character, and ſaid he had three children.

Court to Whitworth. Was your coach-houſe door locked?—No, it was bolted withinſide, they could get in by getting over into a gentleman's garden, where the bolt was on the outſide.

Court. Do any of the officers know whether he has ever been here before?—no, my Lord.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

694. JANE, the wife of ROBERT ALLEN was indicted for that ſhe, on the firſt of December, in the 23d year of his Majeſty's reign, in the pariſh of St. John, Wapping, did marry Robert Allen, and him then and there had for her huſband, and afterwards on the firſt of September, 1784, with force of arms, in the pariſh of St. Martin's in the Fields, feloniouſly did marry and take to her huſband one Charles Burton, and to him was married, her ſaid former huſband being then alive, againſt the form of the ſtatute.

The priſoner challenged Murdo M'Kenzie, and William Turner, two of the Middleſex Jury, and Joſeph Greenhill and John Linton ſerved in their ſtead.

The Caſe opened by Mr. Silveſter.

WILLIAM COOMBES ſworn.

Here is a true copy of the regiſter that is made from the marriage regiſter book, No. 476, "Robert Allen, of this pariſh, butch-"er, and Jane Watſon, of the ſame pa-"riſh, ſpinſter, were married by licence "the 1ſt of December, 1782, by me Wil-"liam Pfior, miniſter; this marriage was "celebrated between us this firſt of De-"cember, 1782.

"ROBERT ALLEN,
"JANE WATSON,
"her — mark.

"In the preſence of Alexander Mat-"thiſon and John Coles."

ALEXANDER MATTHISON ſworn.

Do you know that woman?—Yes.

Do you know Robert Allen?—Yes.

Were they at Wapping church in December, 1782?——Yes.

What were they doing there?——Getting married.

Are you ſure that is the ſame perſon?—Sure enough.

Mr. Garrow. What is become of that Allen that was married to her?——He is here now.

Do you know whether they ever lived together afterwards?—Yes.

Do you know whether it was ever a marriage in fact, as well as in law?——They did live ſome time together.

William Coombes. This is a regiſter of another marriage, which is alſo in my hand writing, from this regiſter book.

Mr. Garrow. Where did you find that book?—In the cuſtody of the pariſh clerk. (Reads.) "The regiſter of the marriages "of St. Martin's in the Fields, Middle-"ſex; Charles Burton and Jane Watſon, "both of this pariſh, were married at this "church, by L. A. B. this firſt day of "September, 1784, by me, John Hunt, "curate; this marriage was ſolemnized "between us in the preſence of James "Clarkſon and Margaret Dugdale."

JAMES CLARKSON ſworn.

I know the lady at the bar, I was preſent at her marriage at St. Martin's church, I gave her away; I am ſure ſhe is the ſame perſon.

Mr. Garrow. Who are you?—A houſekeeper down at Wapping.

You knew Allen very well?——I did not.

Did you know what name this woman uſed to go by?—By the name of Mrs. Allen.

Did you tell her Allen was dead, and died abroad?—No, I never told her ſo.

Did you ever hear anybody elſe tell her that?——Not to my knowledge.

That is a little aukward ſwearing?——I never did hear it.

Have you carried any meſſage from Allen to this woman ſince this marriage was diſcovered?—Never.

You was not the man that offered to make it up for three guineas?—No.

How long did Allen continue to live with her?——I do not know, I was gone to ſea.

How long did you continue to live at home after they were married?—I do not know.

How did this man behave to her?—I do not know.

Mr. Garrow to Coombes. You are the attorney for this proſecution?—I am.

Did you ever offer to make it up for a ſum of money?

Mr. Silveſter. I object to that queſtion.

Had you directions to make it up from Allen for three guineas?—No, moſt ſolemnly not.

Court. The rule in civil caſes is clearly that he ſhall not divulge the ſecrets of his client; any thing that comes to his knowledge in the capacity of an attorney to his client; did you know this man when he lived with the woman at the bar?—I certainly did not.

Mr. Garrow. My Lord, may I be permitted to prove that this man, during the ſhort time he lived with the priſoner, treated her in a moſt brutal manner, and forced her to ſubmit to proſtitution to maintain him before he abandoned her.

Court. That might lay her under the neceſſity of quitting one huſband, but could not lay her under the neceſſity of marrying another.

GUILTY.

To be Branded.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

695. THOMAS JOCELYN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 4th of June, two linen ſheets, value 5s. the property of Roger Gaſterell, and one callico gown, value 10s. the property of Elizabeth Wyatt.

(The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of the priſoner.)

ROGER GASTERELL ſworn.

I am a taylor, the bottom of Hemlock-court, Carey-ſtreet, Lincoln's-Inn-fields; I loſt two ſheets, on Saturday the 4th of June, returning to my houſe between one and two in the afternoon, I met my wife in purſuit of the priſoner, I aſked her where ſhe was going in ſuch a hurry, and I purſued the priſoner down Carey-ſtreet, into Great Shire-lane, I took him in Great Shire-lane with theſe two ſheets upon him, and this gown, they are my property; he fell fell upon his knees and implored my forgiveneſs; I told him if I was ever ſo much diſpoſed to forgive him, public juſtice would not; theſe picklock keys were taken out of his pockets, and this hammer.

MARY GASTERELL ſworn.

I am wife to the proſecutor, I was ſtanding at my ſhop door; I keep a large green-ſhop; I ſaw the priſoner walking out of the ſtreet-door, he had a bundle in his leather apron, holding it in his right hand, and ſhutting the door with his left; I put the ſheets upon the bed four nights before, I never ſaw him before.

ELIZABETH WYATT ſworn.

I lodge at the proſecutor's, I am a mantua-maker, I never ſaw the priſoner till the 4th of June, when the proſecutor took him with my gown upon him, which is here.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I had been about a month before that with a girl of the town in a room in this court, and ſhe robbed me of five ſhillings, I went to Weſtminſter to put on a lock, I returned again and found the young woman there, I told her if ſhe did not pay me I would take a warrant for her, and ſhe gave me a pair of ſheets and a gown to carry down the court, and ſhe would follow me.

—— FAULKNER ſworn.

I am a conſtable, I went to take him, and theſe things, and he went down on his knees, and ſaid for God's ſake let me go about my buſineſs, and I will return the property; I ſearched him and found a number of picklocks; he confeſſed he took the things off the line.

Do you know Roger Gaſterell?—Yes.

Is it a reputable family?—Yes.

Priſoner. He locked me into a room, there is never a picklock key amongſt them, I am a ſmith by trade, and have a little ſhop of my own; I go about and buy old keys, and ſell them on Tower-hill.

The priſoner called four witneſſes who all gave him a good character.

Priſoner. When I get a drop of liquor, I am out of my ſenſes; I jumped into the Thames about three months ago.

Conſtable. He was not in liquor at the time I took him, that I will take my oath on.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

---

696. CORNELIUS MARNEY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 13th day of June, ten iron bars, value 10s. the property of Henry Dagge, Eſq.

THOMAS SAMSON ſworn.

I am a watchman to the proſecutor, I found this bag in the hay, I left it laying there, and the next morning I ſaw this man coming for them, I followed him, I ſaw him go to the bag, lift it upon his ſhoulders and carry it away; I aſked him if he was going for a bag, and he anſwered aye.

JOHN EDWARDS ſworn.

I made theſe bars, they were taken out of what we call the copper-hole of the green-houſe, I tried them, they fitted, there was a particular mark upon them.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I have nothing to ſay only what I ſaid before *, I went to look for a day's work, and this ſhed was in a field not above forty yards from the foot way, I thought it was too early to aſk for work, and I thought to lay myſelf down in the place to ſave myſelf from the dew, and I laid in the hay, and then that gentleman came down and ſaid ſtand,

* See No. 634, this priſoner tried for the ſame offence.

I never

I never moved the bag in nor out of the place where it was, nor never touched it.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

697. JOHN SCOTT was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 17th of May laſt, one cloth coat, value 20s. a ſatin waiſtcoat, value 10s. a pair of velveret breeches, value 5s. a man's hat, value 1s. a ſilk handkerchief, value 1s. a pair of cotton ſtockings, value 2s. a pair of leather ſhoes, value 3s. a pair of metal buckles, value 6d. one tin japan box, value 2d. one claſp knife, value 2d. and one ſixpence, the property of John Lambert.

JOHN LAMBERT ſworn.

I am a labourer in the India Warehouſe, on Tueſday the 17th of May I loſt my clothes in George-yard, Whitechapel, they were upon the chair in the room where I ſleep, which was about a quarter after eleven, I waked about a quarter after ſix or ſeven, and my things were abſent, I found my knife on the priſoner when I took him on the 25th of May; he laid with me every night, but he was always in bed before me, and up before me; he ſaid he was horſe-keeper to Sir Benjamin Truman, I took him up by the ducking-pond facing Whitechapel, and I found my knife upon him.

ELEANOR M'CORMICK ſworn.

The priſoner is the man I let the lodgings, he lay with this young man, and the third morning he loſt his clothes, I let my lodgings for a ſhilling a week, he never came back, he did not pay me the lodging.

Priſoner. Did not more lay in the room? —Yes, there were two, one was in bed, the other was gone out, that man came back at night.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I found the knife coming down the ſtreet.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

698. JAMES BRADLEY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 8th of June one white linen handkerchief, value 2s. the property of Robert Thornton, Eſq.

ROBERT THORNTON ſworn.

I was coming up Chancery-lane the 8th of June about four, and juſt by one of the courts I felt ſomebody put a hand in my pocket, I had juſt wiped my face before, the priſoner puſhed between me and the paliſadoes, I caught him by the collar, he endeavoured to eſcape.

(The handkerchief depoſed to.)

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

ERRATA in Number VI. Part V.

Page 888, ſecond column, line 13, for ſettled read ſtiled.—Line 16, for vindicate read vitiate.

The next Part will be publiſhed in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 29th of JUNE, 1785, and the following Days;
Being the SIXTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER VI. PART VII.

LONDON:
Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)
And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and
S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.
M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

699. JOHN TITFORD and MARY TITFORD were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 20th of May 100 lb. weight of lead, value 10s. belonging to Abraham Adams, and affixed to a certain building of his, againſt the ſtatute.

JOHN ROBSON ſworn.

I am a carpenter, about four in the evening I ſaw ſome perſon go into the proſecutor's houſe, I watched till eleven o'clock, and at eleven I ſaw ſomebody come out of the buildings, two perſons, it was a conſiderable diſtance, but it was moonlight; I ſaw them coming along, and the woman was laſt; the watchman ſeized the man, and took the lead; the priſoner ſaid he had bought it ſomewhere along the road; I took it the next morning and matched it to the lead on the building, and it fitted exactly.

PRISONER JOHN's DEFENCE.

I went as far as Brentford, and I ſaw ſomething lay, and I found it was lead, my wife was with me.

JOHN TITFORD, GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

MARY TITFORD, NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

700. DIANA CHADDICK was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 2d of May laſt, two ſheets, value 5s. a pair of flannel blankets, value 4s. a tin boiler, value 1s. one iron padlock, value fourpence, an iron key, value 1d. the property of George Carter, being in a certain lodging room let by him to the ſaid Diana, and to be uſed by her with the ſaid lodging, againſt the ſtatute.

GEORGE CARTER ſworn.

I live in Cable-ſtreet, I let a ready furniſhed apartment, and loſt the things mentioned in the indictment. I delivered the property to the priſoner, and the key, and within three hours ſhe and the things were gone; the room was the next door to my dwelling-houſe; I ſaw the priſoner the Monday following by accident, and ſhe denied herſelf being the perſon at firſt, but I can ſwear ſhe is the perſon; I let her go home to her huſband, ſhe ſeemed to be ſurpriſed at firſt, but at laſt ſhe declared ſhe did take the room of me, but it was for another perſon, and that ſhe knew nothing of the things; I never ſaw any of my things after; there are two other lodgers in the houſe, it is a public ſtair caſe, therefore I cannot ſwear ſhe ſtole the property, though it was delivered to her.

PRI-

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I took the room of this man, and it was very dirty, and in the evening I left a woman in the room to clean it; I went to fetch my husband and child to the room, and when I came back the door was open, and the things were gone.

Carter. In half an hour after she went to her husband, as she said; I went up stairs and found the door open, and the things gone; there was no woman there when I went up.

The prisoner called two witnesses who gave her a very good character.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. Justice HEATH.

---

701. JOHN POLAND was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 19th of May last 90lb. weight of lead, value 10s. belonging to Abraham Adams, and affixed to a certain building of the said Abraham, against the statute.

JOHN ROBSON sworn.

I am a carpenter, I matched this lead, and I am positive it came from the place by the nail-holes.

HENRY WARNER sworn.

The 19th of May about a quarter past eleven, this man passed me in the street, I am a patrol, and looking after him I saw he had something heavy, I pursued him, and he mended his pace, as I was coming up to lay hold of him he threw the lead down, I sprung my rattle, and he was taken.

Was he ever out of your sight?——No, I am sure he was the man I first saw with the lead upon his shoulders.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was going from New Prison, Clerkenwell, with a letter, into Cavendish-street, and one of the watchmen stopped me; I saw a man on the highway.

The prisoner called one witness who gave him a good character.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. Justice BULLER.

---

702. JANE JACKSON and ELIZABETH FLINN were indicted for feloniously stealing on the 6th day of June, one silver watch, value 20s. a key, value 1d. a seal, value 2d. a hook, value 1d. a hat, value 12d. and three shillings and sixpence in monies numbered, the property of Martin Rowley.

MARTIN ROWLEY sworn.

I am a carpenter, I lost my watch, chain, seal, and key, in a room with the prisoners, there was no bed there; I felt one of them draw my watch out of my pocket, and they ran down stairs; I went and staid in the house till the morning.

WILLIAM VAUX sworn.

I was called up, and took the prisoners, and I searched the prisoner Jackson, and found the watch upon her; I found nothing upon the other.

PRISONER JACKSON's DEFENCE.

The young man asked me where I lived, I told him, I went home with him, and he gave me the watch to be with me three or four days.

PRISONER FLINN's DEFENCE.

I know nothing at all of the affair.

(The watch deposed to.)

Prosecutor. I know it by the number 1006; I was not the least particular to one more than the other, I felt one of them take take the watch, that was the priſoner Jackſon.

Jackſon. He took up an old woman firſt.

Vaux. This old woman was taken up on ſuſpicion, but the proſecutor never knew any thing of it.

JANE JACKSON, GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

ELIZABETH FLINN, NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

703. THOMAS BUCKLE and ELIZABETH TETHER, alias BUCKLE, were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 8th day of June, one ſilver watch, value 40s. ſix linen ſhirts, value 3l. ſix holland ſtocks, value 12s. ſix muſlin neckcloths, value 12s. two pair of nankeen breeches, value 20s. a ſilver ſleeve button, value 2s. two ſilk waiſtcoats, value 10s. a feather bed, value 3l. two blankets, value 20s. one bolſter, value 10s. two linen curtains, value 20s. twenty guineas, value 21l. eight half guineas, value 4l. 4s. and one crown piece, value 5s. the property of Thomas Marſhall, in his dwelling-houſe.

The Caſe opened by Mr. Knowles.

The witneſſes examined apart.

THOMAS MARSHALL ſworn.

The priſoner, Mrs. Tether, was my houſekeeper; I keep a public houſe, the coach and horſes in Leather-lane, the priſoner Buckle came to lodge with me ſix weeks before the robbery; I have a club every Tueſday night, and I ſat down with them and we were merry together, about twelve they went away, after the members of the club were gone the priſoner Buckle and I had ſomething to drink together, and I fell aſleep, I was a little overtaken, he was the laſt that was in the room with me, I had fourteen guineas and three half guineas, and ſome ſilver in my pocket, a little after I awoke, I found my money was gone out of my pocket, all but three half guineas and ſome ſilver, I thought the woman priſoner had taken care of it; I went to bed and laid down, and I awoke between two and three, and I ſaw my bureau was broke open, in conſequence of which I alarmed the houſe, and called up ſome people, and I found neither of the priſoners, they were both gone; I found a ſervant maid, Elizabeth Willet, had gone to call a coach for them; I went to different places to enquire for them without effect: then I took the girl up before a Juſtice, and ſhe confeſſed; by this means I came to ſome other people that were confederates in conveying my goods away; I miſſed a great deal beſides the feather bed and hangings; I had two crown pieces, and I loſt one; I cannot ſwear to that; I miſſed my watch, and out of my bureau I loſt 20l. and upwards, I am not ſure to a few ſhillings; I loſt a feather bed, one bolſter, two pillows, two blankets; I cannot ſay when I ſaw them in the houſe laſt, there were ſome other curtains that were nigh reſembling put in the places in order to deceive me, but I have brought a curtain from the bed that was fellow to thoſe that are here; my clothes were taken away, all that was of value.

Mr. Silveſter, Priſoner's Council. You keep a public houſe?—Yes, this woman was a ſervant of mine, a houſe-keeper.

Do you mean to ſay ſhe lived with you as a common ſervant?——I looked upon her to be in truſt ſo far as this, you might come in and think we were man and wife.

Aye, I thought ſo; why, did not every one elſe think ſo?——People that did not know us might.

How long has ſhe lived with you?—At different times ſhe has lived with me twelve years; ſhe lived with me eight years together.

Did not ſhe pay the taxes, and take the houſe for you when you was a bankrupt?——She never took a houſe for me when I was a bankrupt.

Did not ſhe pay the bills?——I paid my bills in general; I have ſaid to my ſervants, go and ſee where ſhe is gone.

Did

Did not you ſay go and fetch Mrs. Marſhall?——I do not know that I ever ſaid ſo in my life.

Will you ſwear that?—I will not.

When you ſent her to pay the rent, did not ſhe pay it as Mrs. Marſhall, and your wife?—She paid it on my account no doubt, and Mr. Wallis might certainly think ſhe was Mrs. Marſhall.

Did not you treat her in every reſpect as your wife; you quarrelled ſometimes like man and wife, did you not?——There are very few but may have words.

You uſed to beat her too, I believe?—I have ſervants now that I take and beat; I have a nephew now that I beat.

Now this watch, did not you in one of your loving fits give her this watch?——No, never.

Was not you vexed when the man priſoner took her away?—I never heard of ſuch a thing till I found it out, till I traced the marriage.

Was not you angry at loſing your deary?——I was not.

Upon your oath did not ſhe and you live in every reſpect like man and wife?—Upon my oath we did not live in every reſpect or paſs to all the world as man and wife.

I give you fair warning Mr. Marſhall, did you, or did you not?——No, we did not.

Did you generally paſs as man and wife?—Some people in the neighbourhood looked upon us as ſuch, but there were thouſands of people that knew to the contrary.

Had not you a marriage agreement?—As to any marriage agreement that is erroneous, it could not be, ſhe knew my wife well all along; my wife lived in the country, there was a diſagreement between her family and me, and ſhe lived in the country.

Who had the care and management of your bed and all your property?——The houſekeeper had the management of the curtains and the bed, I was a little intoxicated that night, and fell aſleep.

ELIZABETH WILLETT ſworn.

I was ſervant to Mr. Marſhall, I remember the time when Mr. Marſhall was robbed, the night that the priſoners went away, which was the club-night, between two and three in the morning my maſter was very much in liquor, and the priſoner Mrs. Buckle promiſed to give me a gown, and a new pair of ſhoes if I would not tell my maſter about the things going out of the houſe, I ſaw the bed go out of the houſe in the middle of the day, Anthony Willett took it out of the houſe by order of Mrs. Buckle.

Court. Are the priſoners married?—Yes.

Was her huſband preſent?—No, Sir, he took my maſter out of the houſe while the bed went out, her name was not Mrs. Buckle then, but Mrs. Tether; ſhe was married on the Thurſday after, ſhe went away on the Wedneſday; I knew of the curtains going out, I took them out myſelf, by the orders of Mrs. Buckle; ſhe ſaid ſhe ſhould go out of the houſe and leave him, and keep another public houſe, for ſhe could not lead ſuch a life with him, and ſhe ſaid that I ſhould come and live with her, and ſhe promiſed to come and fetch me on the Friday night.

Mr. Silveſter. Betty, how long have you lived with Mr. Marſhall?—— Three months.

What did the family conſiſt of?—There was my maſter, and miſtreſs, that is Mrs. Tether, ſhe went by the name of Marſhall, he uſed to call her Betty, they lived together as man and wife.

Was the bed taken out of the houſe in the middle of the day?—Yes.

How did your maſter treat her?——I do not know, I cannot tell you that.

Did not he beat her a little as his wife?——Yes, I believe ſo; this young man lived in the houſe about a month; ſhe had the paying of every thing, I did not know that they were not man and wife till they went away.

Did Mr. Marſhall treat her as his wife?——Yes, I believe ſo.

Had they ſeparate beds, or only one bed?——One bed, Sir.

ANTHONY WILLETT ſworn.

I was employed to move ſome goods from Mr. Marſhall's houſe.

Who employed you?—Mrs. Marſhall.

Who do you mean by Mrs. Marſhall?——The woman priſoner; it was a month to day ſince I moved the bed.

Where did you carry the bed to?——To my houſe in Brick-lane, by Old Street.

Did you ſee Mrs. Marſhall and the other priſoner there?—Yes, Sir, ſhe came to my houſe in the afternoon, on the Monday following I took away a braſs fender.

Mr. Silveſter. Had you been at his houſe before?——I worked for him all laſt winter.

Did not they always paſs as man and wife?—Yes, I did not know any other till ſhe was married to Mr. Buckle.

This bed was taken away openly?——At four o'clock in the afternoon.

Did ſhe deſire you to be ſecret?—Yes, not to let my maſter know.

Who paid you?——Sometimes he paid me, and ſometimes ſhe.

——— M'CARTHY ſworn.

I remember ſeeing both the priſoners; I live the bottom of Brick-lane, in Old-ſtreet, I never had any dealings with either of them, any otherwiſe than buying a bed, which I bought the 9th of June, I gave 3l. 4s. for it; I bought it of the gentlewoman, there were ſeveral in the room, they are all here.

What name did the perſon go by of whom you bought this bed, at the time you bought the bed?——I did not know the name, I never ſaw her with my eyes before.

JOHN FISHER ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoners apprehended at Leominſter, in Herts; firſt of all I came over and ſpoke to the young man, by the name of Buckle, and he anſwered to that name, the watch was found in his fob; Mr. Buckle ſaid it was his, and Mrs. Buckle directly anſwered and ſaid, yes, it was, he had bought it and paid for it before they were married; Marſhall deſcribed it as a bruiſed watch, and this had no bruiſes in it, and the name of Mr. Buckle was engraved on the back.

JOHN TAYLOR ſworn.

I was preſent at the apprehending the priſoners, firſt I apprehended the man, then he told me his wife was up-ſtairs, then I took her into cuſtody; and I found in his poſſeſſion a ſilver watch, I told the man I had a warrant againſt him for felony, he ſaid well, behave civilly, do not make any oration in the place, for I ſhould be happy the neighbours ſhould not know of it, for it may hurt my ſiſter and brother; I found upon him a ſilver watch, and ſeven guineas and a half in money, then I took the watch out of his pocket; I ſaid here is the watch, but it does not anſwer the deſcriptions, which were, that it was very much bruiſed, the priſoner Buckle ſaid, it is my watch, for I bought it.

JAMES EDWARDS ſworn.

I live in Leather-lane, this watch the priſoner at the bar brought to me on Monday the 6th of June, there is a paper of mine of that date in the caſe now, I always date every watch at the back.

In what ſtate was the watch when brought to you?——Very much bruiſed, and no glaſs, and no minute hand; I had order to put a new glaſs in, take the bruiſes out, put a minute hand, and engrave the cyphe T. B. upon it.

Mr. Silveſter. Did you know Mr. and Mrs. Marſhall?——No, Sir, I did not know there were any ſuch people in the neighbourhood, for I never go to any public houſe.

Mr. Marſhall. This is my watch, I know it by the name J. Day, No. 190; I knew the number before I ſwore to it before the Magiſtrate, it was much bruiſed on the outſide caſe, and the minute hand broke.

Mr. Silveſter. How long had Mr. Marſhall had this watch?——Not long, bro broke the glaſs and minute hand when I was down in Moorfields, it lay in my drawer, ſhe had no keys to that drawer, ſhe had keys of the drawers underneath, where her clothes lay.

Who adviſed you to indict this woman capitally?——I thought the robbery that was committed upon me was ſufficient; we did not live as man and wife, ſhe knew that, no doubt but many of the neighbours looked upon us to be man and wife.

Court. Did you ever pay this woman any wages?——Yes, many different times, I paid her about a year and a half ago.

What is due to her?——I cannot think there is anything, conſidering the money that has been made uſe of.

What did you pay her for wages?——Eight pounds a year was the agreement, and I believe we have not ſettled for a year and a half.

Were there any arrears due?——No, I paid her up to Chriſtmas was a twelvemonth; ſhe has had at different times of me a good many guineas on account.

Have you any receipt for wages?——Yes, I have, I ſhall be able to prove that a great part of my books and writings have been deſtroyed and burnt.

PRISONER TETHER's DEFENCE.

Mr. Marſhall gave me that watch, when he won a watch at a raffle, a little watch that he had, he gave me this in the preſence of my ſiſter, he told her ſo; he went out afterwards and ſtaid out all night, and loſt his own watch, and then he wore mine.

Marſhall. I never won a watch at a raffle in my lifetime.

Mrs. Buckle. When we firſt went together we were in ready furniſhed lodgings a year and a half, and he had not a bed to lay on; then afterwards I went to his houſe.

Marſhall. I bought it, or lent her the money to buy it in my name.

Court to Marſhall. Is that true that this was her bed, or that ſhe had a bed?—She never had.

Priſoner Tether. He has laid in bed till I have waſhed his ſhirt, many a time.

LYDIA TETHER ſworn.

I am ſiſter to the priſoner Buckle, I know Mr. Marſhall very well many years; when firſt they went together I did not know but they were lawfully married for ſome years, I aſked her firſt, and ſhe told me they were married; and I aſked him ſeparate, and he told me they were married at Biſhopſgate church; with reſpect to the watch, I went to their houſe in April, and I was ſhewing my ſiſter a watch I had lately purchaſed, and ſhe ſhewed me one that ſhe had, I aſked her if it was her watch, and he made anſwer, he had given it her, ſhe replied it was all broke, it was not worth a gift, it was broke, the glaſs and hands.

Had ſhe any furniture when they were in lodgings?——I believe the firſt was a ready furniſhed lodging that they had, and after that they had a room with one bed, and a very little furniture.

Who purchaſed that bed?—She had feathers of me to fill a bed, but that was ſince; I do not know who purchaſed the bed.

Mr. Knowles. Where was this watch broke?—The glaſs was broke and the caſe was injured.

Was any thing more broke?——Not to my knowledge.

What watch was this?—A ſilver watch.

JOHN PAGET ſworn.

I know Mr. Marſhall, and the priſoner Buckle, ſhe came to me and took a houſe of mine, in the name of Mr. Marſhall, and gave me half a guinea earneſt, and paid me the rent.

What is her general character as to honeſty?——A very honeſt, ſober, decent woman; Mr. Marſhall has frequently come to my houſe, and ſaid ſend a pot or a pint of beer to my wife.

Marſhall. To my houſe I have ſaid.

Mr. Knowles. How long ago is it ſince you ſerved him with beer?—Laſt April, I believe they had but few beds when they lived in my houſe.

Mr.

Mr. WALLIS ſworn.

I am a colourman, I have known the priſoner Buckle five or ſix years or more.

What has been her general character in life for honeſty?—A very good character, I always ſuppoſed her to be Mr. Marſhall's wife, and not only his wife, but a very good one; I have heard him in my preſence call her by the name of his wife.

GEORGE SAGE ſworn.

The woman priſoner lived in our neighbourhood four or five years ago, a very honeſt ſober woman, always went by Mr. Marſhall's name, I truſted her with bread, and ſhe paid me, and I ſhould have looked to Mr. Marſhall for the money, if ſhe had not.

THOMAS HORNE ſworn.

I have known Mrs. Buckle about three years, I am a collector of the Poor's Rates, ſhe is very honeſt; I always thought them to be man and wife.

The priſoner Thomas Buckle called three witneſſes who all gave him a very good character.

Mr. Knowles to Proſecutor. Do you know that bed?——Yes, I know it to be mine.

To Mrs. M'Carthy. Is that the bed you bought of the priſoner?—It is the bed, I know it is the bed.

THOMAS BUCKLE, NOT GUILTY.
E. TETHER, alias BUCKLE, NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice HEATH.

---

698. WILLIAM JACKSON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 9th of May laſt, five yards of printed cotton, value 20s. a cotton gown, value 5s. two black ſilk cloaks, value 20s. eight ſhirts, value 30s. ſix ſhifts, value 10s. one white marſeilles waiſtcoat, value 5s. two table clothes, value 12s. a handkerchief, value 6d. four chair covers, value 6d. two jackets, value 5s. two petticoats, value 4s. one callico muſlin petticoat, value 2s. two childrens cotton frocks, value 3s. three pair of childrens cotton ſtockings, value 3s. two ſilver tea-ſpoons, value 2s. two other ſilver tea-ſpoons gilt with gold, value 4s. the property of Nicholas Shepherd in the dwelling houſe of Robert Barker.

JANE SHEPHERD ſworn.

I am wife of Nicholas Shepherd, I live in Brownlow-ſtreet, in the houſe of Robert Barker, we rent two rooms there, a fore parlour, and a back room, on the 9th of May, about half after ſix in the evening, I loſt the things mentioned in the indictment; it is not in my power to tell all I loſt, twenty guineas would not put them in the place, I was at Mr. Gibſon's at the time the things were taken away, which is three doors off; in a very little time after my little boy come and told me of it, I was not out a quarter of an hour, when I returned, my drawers were pulled out, and my property taken away; I went to the public office in Bow-ſtreet, I have only ſeen one ſilk handkerchief again, that I ſaw at the firſt hearing at Bow-ſtreet.

MARY NICHOLLS ſworn.

About half after ſix, I ſaw a young man come out of the proſecutor's houſe, with a large bundle in a white cloth, he run quick to the end of the ſtreet, he turned round the corner, and I ſaw no more of him after, I never ſaw him before; I was fetched to the Juſtice's when he was taken up, I really believe he is the man, but to ſwear to him, I cannot poſitively.

Was he dreſſed as he is now?——No, Sir, he had a green coat, and his hair ſtraight, not curled at all, and he was in the ſame dreſs at the Juſtice's as when I ſaw him with the bundle.

JOHN SHALLARD ſworn.

On the 9th of May about ſeven, I ſaw the priſoner at the Seven Dials, he was coming from the ſtreet where the robbery was committed, I met the priſoner with a large bundle under his arm, I did not ſuſpect pect it was ſtolen property, or elſe I ſhould have ſtopped him, but I went to ſee where he went to, and he went to Leiceſter-fields and he took a coach; I came down to the public-office; he was taken about four weeks after, I know him perfectly, Mrs. Shepherd ſaw the priſoner and his mother together at the Brown-bear, and ſhe ſaid, ſhe really believed that her handkerchief was round his mother's neck, and I took it off, and ſhewed it to the proſecutrix.

Proſecutrix. This is my handkerchief, there is a little bit of wax on the ſelvage, and it will never come out.

DOROTHY BAKER ſworn.

I know that is Mrs. Shepherd's handkerchief by the mark.

EDWARD STONE ſworn.

The priſoner took his handkerchief off his neck at the Brown-bear, and delivered it to his mother, and ſhe gave him a white handkerchief to put round his neck.

JOHN SOLEMN ſworn.

I was in Leiceſter-fields, and there came a man with a bundle, and he aſked me what I would have to carry him over Weſtminſter-bridge, I cannot ſwear to the priſoner, he had a bundle and a green coat, I drove him to the Surry ſide of Weſtminſter-bridge, he got out of the coach and paid it, I do not know the man, I believe he is the ſame perſon.

FRANCIS SHEPHERD ſworn.

How old are you?——Going in ten.

Court to Proſecutrix. When was he nine?——In March laſt.

Do you know the nature of an oath?—Yes.

Why are you ſworn?—Becauſe I am to tell the ſtory.

But why did the man ſwear you?—Becauſe I ſaw the thief through the key-hole.

Do you know the nature of an oath?—No.

(He was not examined.)

JOHN SAYRE ſworn.

I apprehended the priſoner, I found nothing about him.

Priſoner. I wiſh to call one Mary Sykes that had that handkerchief in her poſſeſſion a fortnight before Whitſuntide.

MARY SYKES ſworn.

I know the young man, he is a taylor.

Do you know this handkerchief?——I know it by the pattern.

Do you know it by anything beſides the pattern?—I cannot ſay that I do, I bought it of him as near as I can recollect, about a month before Whitſuntide.

Mrs. SHARP ſworn.

I keep the houſe, I have ſeen the handkerchief to the beſt of my remembrance, tied up in a bundle a fortnight before Whitſuntide.

JOHN GORDON ſworn.

I am a taylor, the priſoner is the ſame branch as I am, we worked together ſome conſiderable time at Douglaſs's and Lambert's, St. Martin's-lane, that handkerchief I had in my poſſeſſion ſometime in the middle of May laſt.

——— HART ſworn.

I am a maſter taylor, I have known the priſoner two years, he bears a very good character, he worked for me all laſt winter, I have intruſted him with pounds of my property, and would again.

DANIEL COZENS ſworn.

I am foreman to this ſhop, I know the priſoner, he worked for us, the 9th of May he left work at ſeven.

Court. How do you know that?—By the work that he did, I ſaw him in the ſhop that night, on the 9th of May he ſtaid till ſeven; he did not ſtay till ſeven every night, he went off on Weſneſday in the afternoon, that is he left work, he came to us again on Thurſday morning, he was there all day the Friday; he was not off at other times before, that I will venture to ſwear, he kept at our ſhop.

JOHN BALSTONE ſworn.

I work at the ſame ſhop, the priſoner is a journeyman taylor, he worked there on the Monday before, he worked all day till ſeven, we work from ſix in the morning till ſeven at night, I take upon myſelf to ſwear that he was there on the Monday, the Tueſday, and half a day on Wedneſday, I know from my own knowledge, he left the ſhop at ſeven on Monday, he was there every day till the 11th of May, except the Wedneſday and Friday.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

699. MICHAEL OXEN, otherwiſe OXDEN, was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 21ſt of June, three quarters of a pound weight of green tea, value 2s. the property of the Eaſt India company.

A ſecond count, Laying it to be the property of perſons unknown.

JOHN SAMUEL ſworn.

I ſaw him take ſome tea and put in his breeches, from Fenchurch-ſtreet warehouſe, about ſix o'clock.

How much?—About three quarters of a pound; it was found in his breeches.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I unfortunately found this tea in a corner of the warehouſe.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. Juſtice BULLER.

---

700. ANN ICORN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 25th of April laſt, one man's cloth coat, value 18s. a ſcarlet cloth cloak, value 12s. a linen ſhift, value 18d. two printed callico muſlin gowns, value 20s. one black ſtuff petticoat, value 8s. the property of Samuel Hudſon, in the dwelling houſe of James Burdett.

ESTHER HUDSON ſworn.

I get my living in the ſtreet at Cornhill, I lodge in the houſe of Mr. Burdett, I am a married woman, my huſband's name is Samuel Hudſon; I think I loſt the things on the 25th; the priſoner I have known from a child, I recommended her to lodge in this houſe, where ſhe had been a fortnight, and I let her ſtay in this room, ſhe told me ſhe had learned to wind the engine; I went out at nine in the morning, and I left her in my room, and at night when I went home, inſtead of bringing the key to me, ſhe left it in the next room, and a child gave it to me, I came back about nine or ten at night, and I miſſed the things; I ſaw them in the morning before I went out, I left a gown and petticoat on the bed, and deſired her to double them up; I cannot ſay how many other things lay about, ſome were in the drawers, they were not locked; I have ſeen the things ſince, the things are of the value mentioned in the indictment.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. Does your huſband live at home with you?——Yes.

Theſe pawnbrokers are quite ſtrangers to you?——Yes, I do not live their way.

They are not the pawnbrokers you deal with?—No, Sir, I go nearer my neighbours.

What is the name of the pawnbroker you deal with?—Davis, in London Wall.

You are a pretty good cuſtomer of his?—I do not ſay that I am.

Who did you ſend in general?—I ſent anybody that I liked to aſk.

Who was the firſt—Any body that was in the way.

How often have you ſent the priſoner at the bar think you?——Never, I never ſent her in my life, ſo help me God.

Did you ever pledge anything of hers?——No never, ſhe had nothing to pledge.

Did

Did you uſe ſometimes to borrow any of her things?—Never.

You have none of her things now?—No.

You did not authoriſe her to pledge theſe things?—No.

What buſineſs was this young woman?—I never knew anything bad of her before, I knew her a child.

EDWARD FRANCIS ſworn.

I am a pawnbroker in Shoreditch, I never ſaw the priſoner before ſhe was at Guildhall; I have a petticoat in my poſſeſſion that the proſecutrix has ſworn to be her property, it was brought to me by Sarah Cawdell, ſhe is not here.

Court. Then I will ſtrike that out entirely.

JAMES BOYLE ſworn.

I am a pawnbroker in Hair-alley, Shoreditch, I have a gown here, which Mrs. Hudſon ſwears to be hers; it was pledged by a woman in the name of Ann Icorn; I never ſaw the priſoner but at Guildhall; I lent 13s. upon it.

HENRY CLARKE ſworn.

I am a pawnbroker, on the 25th of April the priſoner whom I have ſeen before, more than once, brought a man's cloth coat, which I have here, to our ſhop, it appears by my ticket to be on the 5th of April, I am ſure as to the perſon of the priſoner; I lent 13s. upon it, I take that to be very near the value of it; on the 27th following ſhe brought a ſcarlet cloth cloak, and a linen ſhift, I lent 3s. on the ſhift, the cloak I lent 14s. on; the value is 16s; I do not obſerve any particular mark upon them of any kind, and they are new; there is nothing diſtinguiſhable in them.

Mr. Garrow. You would not venture to ſwear to them?—I would not myſelf ſwear to them by no means; I have been in that way of buſineſs ten years, or more, and from any obſervation I could make of theſe, I could not ſwear to them.

Having looked at them attentively, if they had been out of your hands a day or two, would you venture to ſwear to them?—No; the priſoner was in the habit of coming to our ſhop from another perſon, and I underſtood from her that the coat was the property of that perſon, and the cloak and the ſhift of another perſon, ſhe deſcribed them ſo.

What time was it?—It was in daylight I am confident, I think it was ſomewhere between eleven and four, but nearer than that I cannot ſay.

Court. Theſe are ſuch things no perſon can ſwear to them?—I had them in my poſſeſſion, with the duplicates upon them, if anybody had ſubſtituted others for them, I could not ſwear to them, but I have no reaſon to ſuſpect that; the coat is the 25th of April, the cloak and the ſhift on the 27th following.

(The things looked at by the Proſecutrix.)

Mr. Garrow. By what marks do you know them?—I can ſay with a ſafe conſcience that they are mine; the ſhift is new, it has no mark.

Do you think it is impoſſible for you to be miſtaken?—I think ſo.

Might anybody elſe have ſuch another cloak?—They might.

Had nobody elſe a new ſhift at that time?—I believe they might.

Now about the coat?—It had been worn two or three times.

So has one I have got at home.—I dare ſay you wear better cloth than this.

Did you make the ſhift yourſelf?—No, I never makes nothing; the cloak was made at No. 2, Houndſditch, I have worn it twice.

To the beſt of your belief do you think it is yours?—Yes, my huſband has not had the coat on ſince it was at the pawnbrokers; I believe this to be the coat; I know ſuch things were miſſing on that day.

Priſoner. I leave it to my councel.

Jury to Pawnbroker. Do not you often take in things upon which you do not immediately put a ticket?—It frequently happens in the hurry of buſineſs that we do not put them on immediately.

Court. Can you ſwear that that was the ſame

ſame woman that brought you theſe things? ——Yes.

The priſoner called four witneſſes who all gave her a good character.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

701. EDWARD HUGHES was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 1ſt of June, 14lb. weight of rice, value 3s. the property of James Gaſcoine and Co.

JAMES GASCOINE ſworn.

On the 1ſt of June, looking out of the compting-houſe at Porter's-key, which joins Bear-key, I ſaw the priſoner at the bar with another man whom I could not take, force the head off a barrel of rice, and the priſoner filled his apron; I ſuppoſe I was about twenty yards diſtance; I went down, and he had not then abſolutely given over the matter, I rather mended my pace towards him, and he knew my face, ſeeing me walk ſharp up to him he put off and ran up Bear-key gate, I followed him, and ſaw him ſhoot the rice, I was cloſe to the gate; we are accountable for the rice; it was in our poſſeſſion, I am ſure it was a barrel that belonged to us.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was looking for work on the key, and I ſaw a man that I had worked with, and I aſked him for a little rice for my own uſe, and he put a little in my apron, and this gentleman came after me, and I thought I was in an error, and I went and put it into a caſk.

Mr. Gaſcoine. He did not carry any back again to the caſk, that I am ſure of.

GUILTY.

Whipped and impriſoned one month.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

702. ROBERT WALKER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 27th day of May, one pair of white ribbed cotton ſtockings, value 4s. the property of Alexander Leary.

ALEXANDER LEARY ſworn.

On the 26th of May I bought a pair of ſtockings, and I left them at the houſe of Charles Callaghan. I could not prove they were mine, I do not now know that they are mine.

CHARLES CALLAGHAN ſworn.

I live in Leatherſeller's Buildings; the laſt witneſs left a pair of ſtockings with me, I ſhould know them, I could ſwear to them; on the morning of the 27th I went into the neceſſary, and the duſtmen called and aſked if there was any duſt, they had hardly gone in when the priſoner looked in at the window, the ſtockings laid there, in the place where the proſecutor laid them in, and I ſaw him lay them in the window the day before, we were at dinner when he called; they were white ribbed cotton ſtockings; I happened to look out, and they were in the back yard a very little time, and this chap lifted up the ſaſh window, it was between eight and nine, I ſaw him put them in his pocket, he wore a ſhort white jacket, and when he had done that he took his baſket, and I followed him down to his duſt cart, which lay at the end of the gate; I laid hold of him by the collar and put my hand into his pocket and pulled them out; he reſiſted a little, and I ſent for a conſtable.

What did you do with the ſtockings afterwards?——I gave them to the conſtable.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I am quite innocent.

GUILTY.

Whipped, and impriſoned one month.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

703. EDWARD

703. EDWARD JEFFERSON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 5th of June, four ounces of Bengal ſilk, value 3s. the property of John Michael Gilleage and Philliberd Gilleage.

MARY BARBER ſworn.

I am a ſilk windſter; I work for Mr. Taylor, the priſoner came to my room to aſk a woman that lives with me to waſh a pair of ſtockings and a ſhirt; I am a room keeper; and whilſt ſhe was waſhing theſe things he came to the baſket and took a piece of ſilk out of it, a child informed me of it; I looked and miſſed three pieces, and one piece I found in his breeches; I examined him before he went out of the room, he had not his ſhirt on then; I knew the ſilk I miſſed it directly, and that I found upon him was the colour of the ſilk that was miſſing; the conſtable has it; I have known the priſoner between two and three years, he is a weaver.

—— TAYLOR ſworn.

I am a ſilk throwſter, I employ Mrs. Barber, I weighed her three pounds of ſilk, I cannot ſay the exact day, it was about the 19th of May it was Bengal raw ſilk, I ſhould know whether it was Bengal raw ſilk, but not whether it was the identical piece of ſilk that I delivered, that is impoſſible; the ſilk belongs to John Michael and Philliberd Gilleage, I underſtand they are partners, their names are upon the door together.

Court. You know nothing of Mr. Gilleage's name but by what he told you?——No, not that they are in partnerſhip, except by themſelves, on their door is J. M. and P. Gilleage.

Are they reputed partners do you know?——I underſtand them to be ſo, and dealt with them as ſuch; I received the ſilk from them to throw, and I gave this woman three pounds; about a fortnight after this woman came to me, and told me ſhe was robbed of part of the ſilk, but did not mention the name of the man that robbed her, ſhe ſaid ſhe had got the thief; I do not remember that ſhe ſaid where.

THOMAS TAYLOR ſworn.

I am a weaver, I was in Mrs. Barber's room at the ſame time, but I was looking out of the window, my back was to him, I turned myſelf and I ſaw this Mrs. Barber go to the place where the work did lay, and ſhe turned to the priſoner and ſaid, you have got my work, and he denied it; he was lying near the work, with that ſhe got to his breeches, and ſaid, oh! there is my work; and he denied it ſeveral times, he had got no ſhirt on; I ſaw it taken out of his breeches, Mary Barber took it out.

Did you ever find the other two?——I did not examine him myſelf, but Mrs. Barber did.

Court to Mrs. Barber. I underſtand you that you miſſed three of theſe pieces of ſilk?——Yes, I do not know what is become of the other two, he was up and down ſtairs two or three times before his ſhirt was off, that was when his ſhirt was off that I found the piece upon him, he was gone out that morning a matter of two or three hours; he was in the room both before and after dinner.

MARY CROMLEY ſworn.

What ſilk did you carry to the conſtable?——That he has got in his handkerchief, it is the ſilk that I ſaw Mrs. Barber take out of his breeches, and give it to the conſtable.

JOHN HENLEY ſworn.

I am conſtable, I received this ſilk of Mary Cromby, I have kept it ever ſince.

Proſecutrix. I work for nobody but for Mr. Taylor, and I had no ſilk at that time, but what I received from him.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

When I went up there in the morning, I aſked this woman to waſh my ſhirt, and I laid down and ſlept, I gave them ſome money, and this woman charged me with the ſilk; they have known me many years, there were more in the room than me.

Court. How came the ſilk in your breeches?—It was not in my breeches.

The priſoner called three witneſſes who gave him a good character.

GUILTY.

Whipped, and confined one month in Newgate.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

704. WILLIAM GOSLING was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 13th day of May laſt, one ſilver watch, value 40s. a ſteel chain, value 12d. a baſe metal key, value 1d. a hook, value 1d. a trinket, value 1d. the property of Benjamin Amblert.

BENJAMIN AMBLERT ſworn.

On the 13th of May between one and two in the afternoon, I loſt my watch in Chiſwell-ſtreet, I was going home, I had been to ſee the balloon go off; there was a great croud, and I ſtopped myſelf for the croud to go by in a vacant place, and in an inſtant I felt ſomething draw me round, I turned and caught the priſoner, and I looked to ſee if my watch was gone, it was, and I ſaw him throw the watch into the kennel; I held him with one hand, and with the other picked up the watch, but the caſe flew further off, and before I could get at that it was picked up, I never looſed him till I took him to the Compter, he denied it, and another witneſs aſſiſted me and put the watch in his pocket, the outer caſe was loſt.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. This was the day the balloon aſcended from the Artillery Ground?——Yes.

There was a very conſiderable croud we all know?——There was a great many on the path way, I was coming home like a great many thouſands.

The firſt thing you did after you found ſomething was gone, was to ſeize the firſt arm you could catch?——Yes.

Recollect a little, conſider the conſequence to the priſoner, can you undertake to ſwear to him?——I can.

How was he dreſſed?—He was dreſſ'd in a brown waiſtcoat, and a coarſe apron.

Have you always told this ſtory?—Yes.

Do you know Mr. Hart, the conſtable?——No.

Do you know Mr. Rowley?——No.

Had you any converſation with Rowley at the time you went to Guildhall about this young man?——No, not to any ſoul that I know of.

FRANCIS ROWLEY ſworn.

I was cloſe behind the man when the priſoner took his watch, I am ſure the priſoner had the watch, I ſaw the proſecutor lay hold of the priſoner at the bar, I ſaw the priſoner throw the watch from him.

Mr. Garrow. Are you ſure you was in Chiſwell-ſtreet with him?—Yes.

Was the priſoner behind Mr. Amblert?——Yes, There might be ten or a dozen.

Can you venture to ſwear it was this young man that took it?——Yes, I was behind, I ſaw him diſtinctly, I am ſure of it.

RICHARD TILCOCK ſworn.

I am the officer that took the priſoner into cuſtody, the watch was delivered to me before the ſitting Magiſtrate by Mr. Amblert.

Proſecutor. That is the watch I picked up out of the kennel.

Is it your watch?—It is my own watch, I know it by the maker's name in the inſide, Carter, and there is a trinket on it with two hearts, and a little ſtone.

What ſort of a chain had your watch?—A ſteel chain and a bit of gilded thing in the middle, and two old keys, and one braſs key, there is no ſeal at all only them two little hearts.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was coming up Old Street road, and I met one Mr. Gill, a gentleman of my father's acquaintance, and up Bunhill row, I came into Chiſwell-ſtreet, there was a crying out about loſing a watch, and I went to ſee

ſee what was the matter, and the gentleman ſaid it was me, and laid hold of me.

GEORGE GILL ſworn.

I live at No. 7, in Monkwell-ſtreet; I I am a dealer in tobacco, I have known the priſoner near three years, he lives with his father, it happened on the day the the balloon went off, I met him in Bunhill-row and a young woman was with him, and he aſked me to go down with him into Chiſwel-ſtreet to ſee the balloon go off, I ſaid, I am going that way; when we came to Bunhill coming into Chiſwell-ſtreet, there was a bit of noiſe about having loſt a watch, and the priſoner went into the croud to ſee what was the matter, and he was taken into cuſtody.

Court. What ſort of a dealer in tobacco are you?—I buy it, and pay ready money for it, and make it up for public houſes; I am a houſe keeper, I have lived there about two months: I heard the diſturbance about the robbery before this man went into the croud, and he was ſeized immediately.

Mr. Garrow. What robbery was it that there was this hue and cry about?——I take it to be this, but I cannot ſay it was this.

I meant to aſk you about the character of this young man?——The priſoner bore a very good character.

JOHN CHATHAM ſworn.

I live in the highway, Wapping, I am a gardner, I have know him a twelvemonth, he has always been with his father ever ſince I knew him, and bore a very good character.

Court. What is the priſoner?——He worked along with his father.

Mr. Garrow to Rowley. What buſineſs did you ſay you was?——A green grocer and chandler twenty years.

Did anything remarkable happen to you in the month of June or July, in the year 1780?—Yes.

I believe you was here in that month?—I was, no diſgrace to me for that.

You had the misfortune to be, I believe, as many other perſons were, wrongfully accuſed of the riots?——I was tried and accquitted with much applauſe.

Have you had any complaint ſince?——Very lame, forced to go upon crutches.

Has that been the only complaint to which you have been ſubject?—Yes.

The priſoner called five more witneſſes to his character.

The priſoner then wiſhed to call the following witneſs, whom Mr. Garrow his Counſel declined to examine, and adviſed the priſoner not to call.

MARY GRAHAM ſworn.

I live facing the Sun tavern fields, Shadwell, in Mr. Biſhop's houſe; on the Wedneſday in the Whitſun week, his mother and me were together, and the two gentlemen were together, the proſecutor and Mr. Rowley, it was in Guildhall yard, they were diſcourſing together about the young man, and Mr. Rowley ſaid, he would make forty pounds on him; and his mother ſaid, ſhe hoped he would not make five farthings on him; when they came into the hall there was a man named Hart, who told theſe two gentleman to ſwear plump againſt him, or elſe he would not be fully committed, and there was another gentlewoman named Mary Newmark, and Hart ſaid, if ever a one of us offered to ſpeak in his behalf, he would perjure us all three, and they would not ſuffer ever a one of us to ſpeak a word; then Hart told Rowley and the proſecutor to ſwear plump againſt him, or elſe he would not be fully committed; all this I heard myſelf, for I was in the hall till the young man came out.

Who elſe was preſent?——The gentlewoman that was with his mother, her name was Mary Newmark, and by the fright, and ſhe being with child, ſhe now lays ill, and her life is not expected.

Who was this Mr. Hart?——I do not know what he is, I believe he is a conſtable or ſomething of that kind, he wore brown clothes; the priſoner's mother ſaid, gentlemen,

gentlemen, do not ſwear my child's life away wrongfully, and Mr. Rowley ſaid, I will make forty pounds of him, I only want the reward; the gentleman took the watch out of his pocket and ſhewed it to the Alderman, and Mr. Rowley ſaid, he ſaw a ſtrange man take the caſe out of the kennel, and go away with it.

Court to the Officer. Take care this woman does not go out of Court till the Jury have found their verdict.

Lord Mayor. Who did you mention this to firſt?—His mother and I diſcourſed about it, I did not tell anybody about it, the Magiſtrates would not let him ſpeak nor any body elſe; they told him not to talk till he came here.

Who was the Magiſtrate?—Mr. Plomer, I believe.

Then you did not mention it to any perſon?—No, Sir, I have no acquaintance only his own friends.

Which was the firſt friend you mentioned it to?——His mother.

Why, ſhe heard it?—I did not mention it to anybody elſe.

Court to Rowley. You have heard what this woman ſays, is it true?—No, upon my oath.

Court to Proſecutor. Is there any truth in any part of this?—Not a word.

Court. See for Hart.

(He was ſent for but not found.)

Court to Priſoner. Do you know this woman, Mary Graham?—Yes.

Did you know ſhe was coming as an evidence?——No, I did not, I knew ſhe was with my mother when ſhe went up to Guildhall.

GUILTY.

Court to Rowley and Amblert. You have heard the groſs imputation that has been thrown on both your characters in this proſecution, by that witneſs Graham: as I am determined that ſhe ſhall have a trial by a Jury of her country for perjury, I will order her to be committed for that purpoſe: let Mary Graham be committed to Newgate.

Court to Priſoner. You have been convicted of a crime of very conſiderable enormity, but the attempt you have made to cover that crime which the jury have conceived by their verdict to be perjury, and in which I am far from diſagreeing with them, is a great aggravation of your offence, and though the Court would have ſentenced you generally to be tranſported for ſeven years, yet now in conſequence of ſuch aggravation, your ſentence is to be tranſported for ſeven years to Africa.

Mary Graham. What I have ſaid is every word true.

Court to Priſoner. You are very much indebted to the direction of your counſel, in declining to examine that witneſs, his good ſenſe felt what would be the conſequence of her examination.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

705. DOROTHY WILKIE and CATHERINE KNOCK were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 16th of May laſt, one linen ſhirt, value 2s. a cotton waiſtcoat, value 1s. a linen ſheet, value 4s. a linen apron, value 6d. a ſmoothing iron, value 3d. a handkerchief, value 4d. two caps value 2s. and one woollen blanket, value 1s. the property of John Wilkie.

JOHN WILKIE ſworn.

The priſoners were journey women to my wife, ſhe is a quilter, one lodged in the houſe and the other did not; on Whitſun Monday in the morning, me and my wife went out, and left the two priſoners in the houſe, they promiſed they would not depart the place till we returned, we came back about half after nine at night, when we returned we found the houſe door locked, ſo my wife thought there was ſomething wrong going forwards; ſhe called out ſhe was robbed, I got in at my window with the help of a neighbour, and I went to the cheſt where the things were, when I opened it I found a gown gone, there were ſome things left in the cheſt, they had not cleared it intirely, I went to the chamber door to get into the ſtair caſe, and I found the lock was wrenched back from the haſp, as I was coming down ſtairs the priſoner came, the priſoner Knock had the key, my wife put them up ſtairs before her, and I believe there was a gown of my wife's upon the priſoner Knock at that time, ſhe made her put off that up ſtairs.

Was ſhe drunk or ſober?——Why, ſhe was, as the ſaying is, between both, ſhe was in liquor, not very much nor very little, ſhe had the appearance of having drank.

How was the other?——I do not think ſhe was any ways touched in liquor that I could ſee indeed, then I went for a conſtable, and had them to the watch-houſe, they were all amazed, they owned their guilt.

In what terms did they own it?—They ſaid, they were ſorry for it, and wiſhed I would be favourable to them.

Sorry for what?——For what they had done, Knock had dreſſed herſelf up in my wife's cloaths, and went up to Whitechapel, and there ſhe got herſelf into trouble, and ſhe ſent Mrs. Wilkie to pawn the gown, ſhe ſaid ſhe only dreſſed herſelf in them to go out; we loſt the things mentioned in the indictment; at the Rotation office they owned taking the other things, there was no promiſe of favour made them, they owned it voluntarily; they ſaid, they had been carrying out things for a fortnight before, the very ſame time I went to church to marry my wife, they carried things out, and pawned them, ſome of the things were found at Mr. Rolfe's the pawnbroker's.

THOMAS ROLFE ſworn.

I produce a ſilk handkerchief, two caps, and one coloured apron, the handkerchief and two caps were pledged on the 14th of May by the priſoner Dorothy Wilkie; the coloured apron the 16th, but I do not recollect I took that in.

(The things depoſed to by Mary Wilkie.)

Mrs. Wilkie. I made the caps myſelf, and the lace I bought a whole piece of it.

ELIZABETH CARPENTER ſworn.

On Eaſter Monday the 16th of May, the two priſoners came to my houſe, the priſoner Knock did then lodge with me, ſhe had been abſent a fortnight, I demanded the key of my room, and ſhe gave it me with much difficulty, I then deſired to have ſomething for my money, and I ſent up the maid to ſee if my ſheets were ſafe, and the maid went up and brought down theſe ſheets in the ſtead. (The ſheets depoſed to by Mrs. Wilkie.) When they were brought to the Rotation office they were dirty, and there were marks by which I knew them.

LUCY JONES ſworn.

I was looking out at the window, and I ſaw the priſoner Knock go in at the proſecutor's window in the evening, the proſecutor and his wife came home between nine and ten, I did not ſee her go out again, I did not know but ſhe might lodge there.

MARK FOCAULT ſworn.

I am a next door neighbour to the proſecutor, and about half after eight or rather more the priſoner Knock came to me, ſhe had a young child, ſhe ſaid, Sir, I will be obliged to you to lend me a ſmall ladder, to give my child ſome victuals, and to put it to bed, I knew ſhe lodged there; out of humanity to the child I lent her a ladder, ſhe wanted me to go in but I would not, but I followed her up the ladder to keep her from falling, and ſhe went in, and went down to the ſtreet door to open the ſtreet door, but ſhe could not; in a quarter of an hour a man that lodged in the houſe, one Waters, came with the key, and ſaid, how the hell came you here, ſhe ſaid, what is that to you, you ſee I am here, with that I went up ſtairs, and in about a quarter of an hour, Waters and ſhe went up together, it then wanted about a quarter to nine, a little after that the proſecutor and his wife came home, and he came and aſked me, and I told him, he deſired me to lend him the ſame ladder to get in too, and I did ſo; and I went in firſt with him, and we found the room door wrenched open, and we went down to the ſtreet door, and the priſoner Wilkie came with the key, and the other came and they were committed.

PRISONER WILKIE's DEFENCE.

Before the proſecutor was married, this woman Mrs. Knock, brought ſome things to Mrs. Wilkie, and ſhe deſired me to pawn them, and I was ſo fooliſh to do it, and this woman that lodged in the houſe Mrs. Knock put on a gown of Mrs. Wilkie's, which ſhe ſaid Mrs. Wilkie had lent her, the man forced me down ſtairs, and made me go out and ſet down at the door; the handkerchief and two caps that I pledged at Rolfe's were brought me by Mrs. Knocks, and ſhe told me that Mrs. Wilkie had ſent her to me to pawn them for her.

Court to Proſecutor. Was the priſoner Dorothy Wilkie, ſitting at the door when you came home?——I did not ſee her for ſometime.

Did you ſee her before Knock came with the key?—No.

Are you ſure of that?—Yes.

Court to Focault. Did you ſee her?—— I did not ſee her there when they came, I ſaw her ſtanding at the door by ſomebody and then ſhe moved into an entry, and ſtood upon a ſtep, ſhe ſeemed to be waiting till they came home, and ſhe ſaid, ſhe would not ſtir from the door till they did come home.

PRISONER KNOCK's DEFENCE.

I waſhed for Mr. Wilkie laſt ſummer, when I went into the country, I came to town again the month before May; and Mr. Wilkie came, and ſaid, he had a job for me to do, he brought me a ſhirt to mend, ſhe told me I might come and live with her, and ſhe told me I might take anything of her's and put them out for a trifle, and ſhe let me wear her own clothes, and when ſhe gets drunk ſhe cares nothing about it.

Mary Wilkie. I never gave her leave to pawn anything in my life.

The priſoner Knock called one witneſs to his character.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

706. GEORGE STEPHENS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 4th day of June, ſixteen yards of black ſilk ribbon, value 10s. the property of Thomas Hatterſley.

THOMAS HATTERSLEY ſworn.

On Saturday the 4th of June in the evening about ſix, there were ſixteen yards of black ribbon ſtolen from my ſhop, I was at home, but did not ſee it taken, nor miſs it till it was brought to me.

JOHN DIXON ſworn.

On the 4th of June, as Lucas and I were ſtanding in Holborn, talking about ſome buſineſs, three men paſſed us between five and ſix; as ſoon as the priſoner paſſed us he croſſed the way, Lucas ſaid, that fellow has got ſomething, I went through a court and overtook him in St. Giles's, and Lucas held him, and I pulled this piece of ribbon out of his pocket, and the proſecutor owned it.

—— LUCAS ſworn.

I was with Dixon at this time, and I ſaw what he has ſaid.

(The ribbon produced.)

Proſecutor. I know the ribbon, it has no mark but the figure of twenty, one of my young men had been uſing it twenty minutes before, I know it by the quality of the the ribbon, and by miſſing a quantity that correſponds with it, I cannot recollect any other mark but twenty, that was the meaſure of the ribbon.

Court. Had the priſoner been in your ſhop that day?—I think not.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

On the day of this unfortunate affair, I met a young man who was going to buy ſome hair ribbon, when he returned he gave it me, and theſe men came up and ſaid, I ſtole it.

The priſoner called five witneſſes who gave him a good character.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

707. GEORGE BAILLIE was ſet to the bar, and the indictment againſt him ordered to be quaſhed, and he remained till the next Seſſion.

---

708. JOSEPH PARKER was indicted for that he, on the on the 4th day of April laſt, was a ſervant to one Patrick Leeſon, Eſq; and not an apprentice, or a perſon within the age of eighteen years; and that the ſaid Patrick Leeſon did then and there deliver to him on confidence and truſt, one ſilver watch, value 20s. two gold ſeals, value 20s. nine handkerchiefs, value 18s. a red morocco pocket book with a ſilver lock and claſp, value 5s. one pair of knee buckles, value 3s. ſix pair of ſtockings, value 30s. two pair of ſilk and cotton ſtockings, value 5s. one pair of cotton ſtockings, value 1s. one box value 6d. two waiſtcoats, value 10s. twenty ſmall pieces of wire to hold buttons on, value 1s. five metal coat buttons, value 6d. one livery drab cloth coat, value 20s. one other drab coat with metal buttons, value 20s. one ſilver laced hat, value 3s. one flowered ſword knot, volue 1s. and one piece of ſilk ribbon, value 1s. his property, ſafely to keep the ſame goods and chattles to the uſe of the ſaid Patrick Leeſon, and that he afterwards, to wit, on the 28th day of May, with force and arms, at Weſtminſter, did withdraw himſelf from his ſaid maſter Patrick Leeſon, and feloniouſly did go away with the ſaid goods, with intent to defraud him of the ſame, to his great damage, and againſt the ſtatute.

Mr. Fielding, Councel for the Proſecution, informed the Court that they gave up the proſecution, as it could not be ſupported; and ſaid, it was only that very moment that the proſecutor was appriſed of his opinion.

The Priſoner's Councel applied for a copy of the indictment, which was refuſed by the Court.

NOT GUILTY.

---

709. JOHN HENRY AICKLES was indicted for feloniouſly returning from tranſportation, and being found at large without any lawful cauſe, before the expiration of the term of ſeven years, for which he was ſo tranſported.

Mr. Silveſter. My Lord, in this caſe the ſentence is not ſet forth in the indictment, the offence is being at large, after having received the King's pardon, on condition of tranſporting himſelf; I move to quaſh the indictment.

Court. It is ſufficient to effect the priſoner that he had received ſentence of tranſportation, and was found at large; the condition is broken.

Mr. Garrow. My Lord, I am for the priſoner, and the proſecutor now exerciſing his judgment on the caſe, ſays his evidence will not meet his caſe; theſe ſort of applications are not favourable to priſoners, there is nothing bad on the face of the indictment; your Lordſhip ſees that this defendent has pleaded; and what is the error on the face of the record; it ſtates the conviction, it ſtates the ſentence, and the breach of of that ſentence; but it is not true in point of fact, becauſe that ſentence was altered by the King's pardon, but your Lordſhip do not know that in a judicial way.

Court. What is the end of your objection?

Mr. Garrow. Why my Lord, that this poor devil may be remanded to his former ſentence, inſtead of being hanged; and that he may be acquitted on the defect of the fact applying to this indictment: he is indicted now becauſe he has been at large after the judgment of tranſportation paſſed in this court; when that is diſpoſed of, the other is a quite different offence; whether he has been guilty of the breach of the King's pardon or not.

Court. He muſt be acquitted on this indictment, and remanded till the next ſeſſions.

NOT GUILTY.

---

710. ROBERT MOUNTAIN and ANTHONY MATTHEWS were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 23d day of May laſt, one wooden trunk covered with leather, value 2s. one iron lock, value 2d. eight ſheets, value 8s. ſix aprons, value 4s. one handkerchief, value 1d. one other handkerchief, value 4d. one cap, value 1d. one piſtol, value 4s. the property of James Poole.

BRIDGET POOLE ſworn.

I hired the two priſoners to carry ſome things from Cock-hill, Ratcliff, to No. 15, in Farmer-ſtreet, Shadwell; I do not know the day; I believe it was a month laſt Monday; they were to carry a trunk and two bags, and in one of the bags was a piſtol; the other trunk had my linen. My huſband had been ſix or ſeven voyages to the Eaſt Indies; they did not deliver the things, and in one of their breeches were found two old handkerchiefs, and an old cap.

DENNIS CRANEY ſworn.

I apprehended Matthews at a public houſe in Ratcliff-highway, the 26th of May, and this cap, and theſe two handkerchiefs were in his breeches; I ſaw them taken from him; he ſaid he bought them of an old-clothes-man, there was an old-clothes-man at the window at the time.

ESTHER FREEMAN ſworn.

I packed up theſe things in a trunk for the proſecutrix.

HANNAH JOHNSON ſworn.

I live at No. 15, in Farmer-ſtreet, the priſoners came and delivered two bags to me.

(The things depoſed to.)

PRISONER MOUNTAIN'S DEFENCE.

I know nothing of the trunk.

ANTHONY MATTHEWS, GUILTY.

Privately whipped.

ROBERT MOUNTAIN, GUILTY.

To be whipped, and impriſoned ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

N. B. On this day which was the 5th of the ſeſſion, John Hooker ſerved on the 1ſt Middleſex Jury, in the room of Edward Orgill.

The next, and laſt Number of this Seſſions will be publiſhed in a few days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 29th of JUNE, 1785, and the following Days;
Being the SIXTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER VI. PART VIII.

LONDON:
Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)
And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and
S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.
M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

711. JOHN WELCH and JOHN ELLISON were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 6th day of June, 180lb. weight of lead, value 20s. belonging to Abraham Adams, fixed to a certain building of his, againſt the ſtatute.

One of the witneſſes depoſing that this building belonged to one Jonathan Mann, the priſoners were

BOTH ACQUITTED.

---

712. DANIEL MACKANEY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 13th day of May laſt, one linen handkerchief, value 10d. the property of a perſon unknown.

ISAAC BACHARAH ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner and two more joſtling ſeveral gentlemen on the day the balloon went off; I ſaw the priſoner go over to a gentleman, and take the handkerchief out of his pocket, and put it in a leather apron, and the gentleman was joſtled away; I am ſure the priſoner was the perſon.

Priſoner. Did not you ſee me pick up the handkerchief?——No, I ſaw him take it out of a gentleman's coat, I gave the handkerchief to Mr. Gunſton.

RICHARD TILCOCK ſworn.

I produce the handkerchief given to me by Mr. Gunſton; this is the handkerchief.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I went to ſee the air balloon, I was going along, there was a great mob, and I picked up this handkerchief under a barrow, and the gentleman ſaw me if he was to ſpeak the truth; he came directly and took me.

Jury. What is the boy?——Priſoner's Mother. He is a child's pump-maker, he is not an apprentice, he works for Mr. John Dunſtan in Golden-lane.

GUILTY.

Priſoner's Mother. My Lord, for Chriſt's ſake let me ſpeak a word.

Court. Take care, for the boy's ſake and your own, not to ſwear what is falſe.

PRISONER's MOTHER ſworn.

The firſt time this Bacharah came to my houſe, I have ſeen him before, becauſe Mr. Butts heard this man ſay, if I would make him a preſent, he would not hurt the boy, he came to me before I applied to him; and when he came he told me, that the allowance of the Court would be fifteen ſhillings, or a guinea; I told him it was not in my power

power to give ſo much; and he told me the leaſt he could take was half a guinea: I had but five ſhillings, and the five ſhillings I gave him; well, then, he ſaid, I will take it as you can give it me; I gave him the five ſhillings, and he came to me laſt Thurſday was a fortnight, ſays he, I have been to Hicks's-Hall, and I have been buying a bedſtead, ſays he, I am to give fifteen ſhillings, and have got but twelve; I ſaid you may have three ſhillings more of the money if you have a mind, and I gave him three ſhillings more; ſays I, I have not the money now, but if you will call again in an hour's time, I can get the money, and he called again; and laſt Thurſday as ever was, he came and had the other half crown; I have a woman by that is a witneſs of it.

Court to Bacharah. Is this true?——It is as falſe as God is true.

Did you ever receive any thing from her?——I never received a farthing from her to abandon this proſecution.

Did you receive any ſum from her on any account?——I did not.

Upon the oath you have taken you never received a farthing of that woman?——I never received a farthing of the woman in my life.

A WITNESS ſworn.

I know no otherwiſe than I have ſeen this man three or four times, and he came in to the priſoner's mother's on Friday laſt, and ſaid I wiſh you would let me have that money, and ſhe went and gave him two ſhillings and ſixpence; he ſaid ſhe had no occaſion to make herſelf uneaſy at all about it.

What are you?——My huſband is a jeweller, a lodger, I live on Saffron-hill.

How long have you lived there?——A good while, about four months.

Was it a half crown piece?——It was two ſhillings and ſix-pence.

Priſoner's Mother. My Lord, yeſterday morning this Bacharah came to me, and ſaid, ſo I find you have told the conſtable that you have given me half-a-guinea; how could you be ſo good for nothing woman; but ſay he you have no occaſion to bring anybody to his character, for ſo long as I bring the boy off, what is that to you.

Tilcock. My Lord, ſhe told me ſhe gave him ten ſhillings and ſix-pence.

Court. Let Iſaac Bacharah be committed to Newgate, and you muſt proſecute him for compounding felony: it is a groſs miſdemeanor.

Bacharah. My Lord, I hope you will ſend me to Woodſtreet Compter, I ſhall be killed by the priſoners in Newgate, they do not like me.

Court. Then let him be committed to the Compter.

Court to Priſoner. The Court would have paſſed the ſentence of tranſportation upon you for ſeven years, but in conſideration of what has paſſed ſince your conviction, the conduct of that witneſs Bacharah having thrown very great diſcredit on his evidence, the ſentence of the Court is, that you be Privately whipped and diſcharged.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

When ſentence was paſſed, Iſaac Bacharah was ſet to the bar, and thus addreſſed by the Recorder:

Iſaah Bacharah, your conduct was ſuch in the evidence you gave on the trial of Daniel Mackaney, as juſtly to incur the cenſure and indignation both of the Court and Jury; there appeared very great reaſon to ſuſpect that you were guilty at leaſt of the crime of compounding felony, if not of the greater crime of perjury; however, as you expreſſed at the time a ſenſe of the fault that you had committed, the Court will diſmiſs you at preſent with a reprimand, hoping this narrow eſcape will be a warning to you, and that you will never again preſume to enter a Court of Juſtice, but with the pureſt motives of public juſtice, and the ſtricteſt regard to truth in the whole of your future deportment.

713. RICHARD KAYNE was indicted for feloniously ſtealing, on the 12th day of June, one man's cloth great coat, value 7s. and one cloth ſurtoot coat, value 13s. the property of Francis Flaxmoor.

FRANCIS FLAXMOOR ſworn.

I am a hackney coachman, I loſt my property in Houndſditch, the 12th of June, on a Sunday; I was getting off my box, I rang at a bell, and the box coat and a ſurtoot coat were both on the box, I miſſed them, and took the priſoner with the coats on his arm, he begged me to let him go, he ſaid, he picked them up in the ſtreet, I am ſure I left them on the box when I got off, they are my property.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I picked them up in Houndſditch, in the road near to a coach, ſays I, to myſelf, they are two coats, I walked on and heard him call ſtop! ſtop! and I immediately turned towards him, and walked two or three paces, he ſaid they are my coats, I ſaid very likely, they are not mine.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

714. THOMAS CLEAVER was indict for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 26th day of May laſt, 6lb. weight of raiſins, value 2s. the property of John Butler.

The proſecutor was called, and not appearing the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

---

715. MICHAEL REGER otherwiſe RACHER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 17th day of May laſt, 90lb. weight of lead, value 10s. belonging to the Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens of the City of London, then and there affixed to a certain dwelling houſe of William Mooriſh, againſt the ſtatute.

(The Caſe was opened by Mr. James.)

RICHARD LONGFORD ſworn.

I live in Hart-row-ſtreet, ſome call it Newgate-ſtreet; between three and four on Whit Tueſday, the 17th of May in the morning, I heard a great noiſe on the top of my daughter's houſe, I lay there, my daughter lived in the houſe, her name is Alice Mooriſh, the wife of William Mooriſh, he keeps this houſe, it is let to him by leaſe: and I called up a young man named Jenkinſon, he jumped out of bed directly, and ran up ſtairs, I did not go with him, but I dreſſed myſelf as faſt as I could, and I went and called the conſtable out of Cock-lane: I believe the priſoner is a cooper: the conſtable came, and we went into the priſoner's houſe, and I obſerved a bag and a barrow: the priſoner opened the door, and the bag was within the door, and there was ſuch lead as is on houſes cut in different pieces, by the bag there was a great deal more of lead lay that was cut to pieces, which was behind a ſhutter or board in the ſhop, and there was an adze; I told the priſoner he had been to the top of the houſe, and I do not know what anſwer he gave to the conſtable, he ſeemed quite confounded.

Court. The lead you ſay was cut in pieces?—Yes.

What, in regular pieces?—I cannot ſay, I went up to ſee what lead was miſſing, I think there was a matter of a hundred weight of it taken that morning more than we miſſed before.

Priſoner. Pray, Sir, did you ſee my face when I was upon the lead?—I did not ſee your face taking any away.

WILLIAM JENKINSON ſworn.

I was at Mr. Mooriſh's houſe the 17th of May, I was called up between three and five, by Mr. Longford, I ran up ſtairs in my ſhirt, and obſerved the priſoner with a bit of lead in his hand, and I ſaw him take it acroſs the leads towards his own houſe, and he came back and put ſome dirt where the lead had been taken from; he was then upon Mr. Mooriſh's houſe, I obſerved the top of the houſe, the lead had been taken from off the place recently, it was taken off that morning, I was up the night before to ſee if I could ſee anybody, becauſe we had miſſed ſome before, that was between twelve and one, and it was not off then: there were eighty or ninety pounds weight of lead miſſing the next morning as I imagine, I did not weigh it, I was preſent when the conſtable came, and we went to the priſoner's houſe, he was there, and I obſerved in his houſe a bag of lead, containing about eighty or ninety pounds, and there was a door, and when I laid hold of it down tumbled a parcel of lead, ſome appeared as if newly cut, they were pieces of different ſizes, there was a cooper's adze by the bag: the priſoner ſaid, he was then moving of his own things, ſometime had elapſed, near upon an hour, it was about four when I was firſt called up to go to the top of the houſe; I went up afterwards, and meaſured three pieces that were in the priſoner's houſe, and they matched with the places exactly, but we could not match more than three pieces; the three pieces of lead I found in the priſoner's houſe, were exactly of the ſame ſort and ſize with thoſe taken from Mr. Mooriſh's houſe, the lead that was in the bag was beat up, I could not tell for certain what it was beat up with, it was cut a little bit, and then torn, it was folded, we were forced to unfold it, but we did not uſe any inſtrument in unfolding it.

Priſoner. Can you ſwear to any particular mark in my face?——No, I cannot, but I ſwear to his perſon altogether, he is dreſſed different.

Jury. What parted the two houſes at top?——A bit of a wall, about five or ſix feet.

Was there any part where you could walk ſtraight on, without getting over?—No.

Could a man with tolerable eaſe get over that wall?—Yes.

Are there any ſteps or any thing that could aſſiſt a man?—Only the brick work, the houſe where the priſoner was, was an empty houſe, there was no place for any perſon to ſleep in, I am ſure of that, I obſerved nothing but ſtraw and tubs.

SAMUEL ROBERTS ſworn.

I am a conſtable, at a quarter before five in the morning, I was called by Mr. Longford, I went with him, and waited outſide the priſoner's door half an hour, I heard a hammering, but what it was I could not tell, the noiſe was in his own ſhop, cloſe to the door; we waited, and the priſoner opened the door, I ſaid, halloo! what do you do here, and I deſired Mr. Jenkinſon to mind the door while I looked about, I ſaw a cupboard door placed cloſe underneath the window, and under that there were ſeveral pieces of lead, and I ſaw this adze juſt over the lead in the window, the priſoner ſeemed very much confuſed, and did not give me an anſwer; we ſearched all the houſe, but found no other tools: there was a wheel-barrow, and a few ſtaves in his own buſineſs, I aſked the priſoner how he could be guilty of anything of that ſort, he ſaid he had laid out a good deal of money on the houſe, he ſaid nothing elſe, I made no promiſe to him; I went up to the top of the houſe to ſee which way he got out, and I went out, and could get on Mr. Mooriſh's houſe, as eaſy as I can go down theſe ſteps; there is a gutter that goes from the priſoner's houſe to Mr. Mooriſh's houſe, his trap door was open; there was a great deal of lead miſſing, and I afterwards examined the lead with the places they came from, at the top of Mr. Mooriſh's houſe, and theſe three pieces tallied exactly, they came from the middle; I cannot ſay whether theſe three pieces were in the bag, but there was ſome of the lead taken upon the priſoner; theſe pieces were folded together all of them, I beat it out at my own ſhop, and then took it out flat, but when I meaſured it, I trod it down with my feet, I only ſmoothed the others.

Jury. Was the ſituation of the roof ſuch that a perſon not being very converſant with the two houſes, could ſuppoſe himſelf to be on one houſe, when he was actually on the other?——He could not, there is a gutter between the two roofs firſt, and then there is a gutter adjoining to the wall, the wall is between three and four feet.

Is the roof of the houſe he lived in leaded?——No, it is not, only the gutter and the trap door at the top of it, and not leaded.

Does the houſe he lives in and that from which the lead was taking join in any part?—No.

JOHN GARNON ſworn.

I am one of the City collectors, theſe houſes of the priſoner and Mooriſh's are the property of the City, I collect the rents, William Mooriſh was tenant at will.

Court. How long has Mr. Mooriſh had this houſe?—A little better than a twelvemonth, Mooriſh was tenant the 17th of May, I have received rent ſince that time.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

My Lord, I live in the houſe, it was rather out of repair, I moved out of it, I had ſome lodgers, and I told them to quit it as ſoon as poſſible; theſe people had nowhere to go to, and I told them, it is not material for a few days, you may ſtay here, they ſent word they would quit the place on Monday, and I waited, and waited, and on Tueſday morning when I was taken, I came for the key, I knocked at the door and I could not make them hear, and a boy came running down ſtairs, ſays he I have been up ſtairs, ſeeing what it was o'clock, and I ſent him to tell his father, I muſt have the key; when he was gone, I looked about, and packed up my things, and I went and opened the door to give a little light, and refreſhment; and the proſecutor came up, and ſaid, you are my priſoner, and it ſtruck me ſo, I did not know what to do.

Jury. How did you ſee to pack up your things?——There was a ſky light, and a ſufficient light over the door, and the windows gave light enough.

The priſoner called three witneſſes who gave him a good character.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

716. THOMAS HANVY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 26th day of May, a piece of caſt iron called a half hundred weight, value 4s. the property of our Lord the King.

JOHN SWIFLEN ſworn.

I am conſtable of Biſhopſgate Ward, on the 26th of May, I was going to Lovelane, oppoſite to Biſhopſgate, about half after eleven in the morning; and I ſaw the priſoner with ſomething in his apron that he had on; I took the weight from him, he had it in his apron.

(Produced and depoſed to.)

Jury. Did you ever ſee him frequent the Keys?—No, I know the man.

Is he any buſineſs?——I have ſeen him blacking ſhoes at the monument, and ſelling fruit; I know him very well.

Jury. Theſe weights are brought from the maker's in a cheſt?——Yes.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I ſell ſaloop for my living, and clean ſhoes, I have been a ginger-bread baker; and near Tower ditch I found this weight, having occaſion to ſtop; I came along through Thames-ſtreet and they took me there were two ſailors preſent, but they are gone on board.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

717. ANN JOHNSON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 24th of June, one ſilver watch, value 40s. a ſteel chain, value 6d. a key, value 1d. a pair of ſilver ſhoe buckles, value 40s. a pair of knee buckles, value 6s. the property of Philip Lebart.

PHILIP LEBART ſworn.

(The proſecutor being a foreigner from Liſle in French Flanders, an interpreter was ſworn.) I do not know when I loſt my watch or my buckles, but my motive for believing that the priſoner is really guilty of the charge is this, that ſhe introduced me into a public houſe.

When was that?——Friday ſe'nnight.

What time of the day or night?—It was about half paſt midnight when ſhe introduced me.

How long did you ſtay with her there?—I cannot tell.

Was you in liquor?——I was already in liquor when I went there, then I plainly recollect that I did drink a glaſs of beer, but whether I drank more I do not know; and I believe I did ſleep there; I found myſelf in the watch-houſe; I am poſitive I had my watch when I went in with her, I beg leave to obſerve, that I perfectly recollect the girl in the watch-houſe, ſhe was there with when I firſt found myſelf there, we were both taken to the watch-houſe together.

Was ſhe ſearched?——I am not ſure, I was very much in liquor.

WILLIAM BUTLER ſworn.

I am one of the watchmen of the liberty of the City Rules, I was going my rounds at three o'clock, I ſaw this gentleman lay at the Sun tavern door, upon the ſteps in Shire-lane, very much in liquor, and the priſoner was within two or three yards of him, and as ſoon as I came up ſhe turned away through Temple-bar; I found the proſecutor robbed of his ſhoe and knee-buckles; I had a ſtrong ſuſpicion that ſhe muſt have robbed him, there was nobody elſe near him; I went immediately and fetched her back again, and aſked her if ſhe knew the gentleman, ſhe ſaid yes, ſhe had been with him the beſt part of the night; I am ſure ſhe is the ſame woman, though I loſt ſight of her; I aſked her if ſhe knew any thing of his buckles, ſhe ſaid ſhe did not; I then ſtirred the gentleman up, and the very firſt word he ſaid was you damned bitch, you have robbed me of my watch, my money, and my buckles, and he ſtruck her; ſhe ſaid ſhe knew nothing of it; then I brought them both to the watch-houſe, and he was very inveterate againſt her all the way, he ſtruck her, and I kept him off as well as I could.

When he firſt ſpoke was he in a condition to know and diſtinguiſh one perſon from another?——I do not think he was; I brought her to the watch-houſe.

JOHN GUY ſworn.

I am the beadle, I was at the watch-houſe when theſe two people were brought in, I ſearched her, when ſhe was firſt brought into the watch-houſe ſhe dropt one of the knee-buckles, I took it up, then ſhe gave me the other out of her hand, then I took her into a room that we had at the conſtable's. I examined her and I found theſe ſhoe-buckles in her pocket, and I found this watch under her arm-pit, ſhe begged for favour and went down on her knees, and I ſent her to New Priſon that night.

Court to Proſecutor. How long have you had your watch?—Seven years; I do not know the name of the maker, I knew it by the ſeal, part being broke in two places and part of the chain broke.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I am an unfortunate woman, I met the gentleman, he aſked me to go with him, he was very much in liquor; he went and drank with me, he paid for the liquor, he ſaid he had no money but he would give me his property to take care of till morning; when we came out the gentleman ſet down at the door; the watchman lives where unfortunate women of the town live, and keeps rooms to let to women of the town, and I do not lodge with him, and he has a ſpite againſt me.

Butler. The priſoner denied having any of the property when I firſt ſpoke to her.

Where do you live?——The ſign of the Sun, Drury-lane, corner of Brownlow-ſtreet.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped and confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

718. MARGARET WOOD was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 18th day of June, four waiſtcoat pieces made of ſilk and cotton, value 20s. two worſted waiſtcoat pieces, value 6s. two callico ſhawls, value 19s. half a muſlin ſhawl, value 8s. 6d. one dimity waiſtcoat, value 9s. a piece of nankeen, value 7s. 6d. fifteen worked muſlin handkerchiefs, value 37s. one worked muſlin handkerchief, value 2s. the property of Nathaniel Scarlet.

NATHANIEL SCARLET ſworn.

I live at No. 86, Biſhopſgate-ſtreet without, on Saturday the 18th of June, about ten in the morning, a cuſtomer came in and bought ſome goods, and there were a quantity of goods that lay on the counter for his inſpection, after he went out, the goods were left on the counter, and me and my wife returned into the parlour to recaſt what we had been doing; I went into the yard, as ſoon as I came out I found a young lady in the ſhop, who ſaid, your wife is gone after ſomebody, I followed and met my wife with ſome goods, and the priſoner was given to me by Mr. Anthony Shady, I brought the priſoner home, and after ſhe had got into the parlour, ſhe ſaid ſomebody had offered her ſixpence to take theſe goods out of the ſhop, and to carry them to her in Skinner-ſtreet; I do not know that I had ſpoke to her before ſhe made that application to me.

ELIZABETH SCARLET ſworn.

I am wife of the laſt witneſs, I ſaw the priſoner go out of my ſhop; I aſked her what ſhe wanted, I bid her ſtop, as ſoon as ſhe heard me ſpeak ſhe ran out, I purſued her and left another girl in the ſhop that came in with her; I purſued her into Skinner-ſtreet, and as ſhe ran, I ſaw the things drop; I am ſure ſhe dropped them; they were the things mentioned in the indictment; I did not ſee her take them; I did not miſs them till I ſaw them drop; I do not know what became of the other girl, I immediately went after this, and left the other in the ſhop, and what ſhe took I do not know.

(The things depoſed to.)

WALTER PROSSER ſworn.

I am a conſtable, theſe things were given to me, I have had the care of them ever ſince.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was going along Biſhopſgate-ſtreet, and a young woman came out of the ſhop, and aſked me to carry a bundle for her, and ſhe would give me ſix-pence, ſhe ſaid I muſt go to Skinner-ſtreet, and ſhe gave me the bundle, and bid me make haſte with it; I never ſaw her before in my life.

The priſoner called four witneſſes who all gave her a good character.

GUILTY.

She

She was recommended by the Profecutor and Jury, being only thirteen years of age.

Court to Prifoner. In conſideration of your good character, and the recommendation of the Profecutor and the Jury, it is the deſire of the Court that I ſhould paſs a ſmall fine upon you for ſo large an offence, and that is, that you be confined one month in Newgate, and then diſcharged.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

719. THOMAS WHITE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 29th of June, one linen handkerchief, value 6d. the property of Peter Macpherſon.

PETER MACPHERSON.

Court. How old are you?——I am turned of fourteen.

Do you know the nature of an oath?—No.

Not at all?——No.

Do you know what will become of you if you take a falſe oath?—Go to hell.

Taking a falſe oath and telling a ſtory are very bad crimes?——Yes.

PETER MACPHERSON ſworn.

On Wedneſday the 29th of June I loſt my handkerchief, in Beach-lane; I went to the Artillery-Ground, to ſee ſome firing at a mark, and the reſt of the company that had been there ſtopped in Beach-lane; I know I had a handkerchief when I went into Beach-lane, and I ſaw it afterwards in the conſtable's hands in Grub-ſtreet.

(Depoſed to.)

Was anybody elſe near you beſides the priſoner?——Yes, this young man, John Deeves.

JOHN DEEVES ſworn.

I am a gentleman's ſervant out of place, I lived with one Mr. Prior, in Surry, at Carehauton; I was going through Long-lane, on Wedneſday night, when the company were coming from the Artillery-Ground; the priſoner was going along, and he dropped a pocket book from under his arm, I picked it up, and gave it to him again, and going down Barbican I ſaw him take this handkerchief out of his pocket.

Profecutor. Deeves gave me a handkerchief, and I took it to the conſtable.

JOHN SANDERSON ſworn.

I am a conſtable, I produce this handkerchief, which was given to me by another young man that was along with this youth.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was coming from my labouring work, and I ſaw a crowd; I was very much in liquor, and I followed them; there were three or four boys ſtanding by, and the men came and took me.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

720. JAMES DUNLOP was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 3d of June, two pounds and an half weight of cotton, value 3s. the property of Thomas Hunter.

THOMAS HUNTER ſworn.

I am a merchant's watchman upon the keys.

You are a ſervant?——I am paid yearly, I am accountable for anything that is loſt.

Do you pay for everything that is loſt as merchant's watchman?——We do not always, ſometimes the merchants are favourable; but I have paid a great deal for loſſes, and laſt year I paid 160l.

Is it a part of your contract with your maſter, that you ſhould pay?—Certainly it is. (The cotton produced.) I did not ſee the cotton taken, it is impoſſible for me to ſwear to it; but it was taken from the bags under my charge.

WILLIAM WELLS ſworn.

I am the conſtable on the keys; I was upon Ralph's key, and I heard the cry of ſtop thief; I immediately went out from the tobacco work, and I ſaw the priſoner in Thames-ſtreet, I followed him near to Water-lane, there he was ſtopped and ſearched; I did not ſee him take anything.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

721. JOHN ROPER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 1ſt of June, one pound and a half weight of cotton, value 2s. the property of Thomas Hunter.

Court to William Wells. Did you ſee the priſoner take this from any place?—Yes, I ſaw him take this out from a bag from Ralph's key, I caught him ſitting on the bag, I immediately ſearched him, I found it round his body; I was cloſe to the landing place; there were ſeveral more bags there.

Court to Proſecutor. Have you the care of the cottons that were at Ralph's key?——Yes.

Was there any cotton there that was not under your care?——No.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I went down upon the keys to look for work, and I was rather ſtarved with hunger, and ſeeing plenty of cotton, and ſeeing people run away with it, I went and took it.

What is the value of it?——Fifteen pence.

GUILTY.

Recommended by the Jury to be whipped.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

722. THOMAS WILLIAMS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 6th of June, two pounds weight of American tobacco, value 3s. the property of Thomas Hunter.

SAMUEL WILLIS ſworn.

On the 6th of June I caught the priſoner at the cart's tail, between two and three in the afternoon, I caught him pulling the ſtaves open and taking the tobacco out of a hogſhead, he was doing it with his hands, I ſaw him take this, and he put it under his arm, and he had it under his arm when I took him; he might have about a couple of pounds, as near as I can gueſs, it was leaf tobacco; I ſaid, come my friend, I have had many a run after you, but you have got off; ſays he, I hope you will not hurt me, and I gave him in charge to the Compter; I never loſt ſight of him, I am ſure he is the man, I left the tobacco at my maſter's houſe.

Mr. Hunter. I had the tobacco, there were about ſeventy hogſheads, there were three hogſheads laying on the ground, it is American tobacco; I was there two or three three times that day, I had the care of all the tobacco that came by this ſhip.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was at work, and this tobacco was laying on the ground, and I ſtooped and was taking it up, and going to put it on the caſk, and this man came and took me; and ſaid I was going to ſteal it.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

MISDEMEANORS.

723. MARGARET KNAPTHORP was indicted for that ſhe, on the 11th of May, at the pariſh of St. Mary Magdalen, Milk-ſtreet, did bring in a male baſtard child, out of the pariſh aforeſaid, the ſaid male baſtard child being of the age of four years, and unable to provide for itſelf; by means whereof the ſaid pariſhioners of the ſaid pariſh are obliged to lay out large ſums to maintain the ſaid child.

(The Caſe opened by Mr. James.)

THOMAS BATT ſworn.

I am beadle of the pariſh of St. Mary Magdalen, Milk-ſtreet, on the 11th of May, I ſaw the child at the church-warden's.

BENJAMIN TAYLOR ſworn.

I was not preſent at the finding of this child, but I firſt ſaw it at the end of the court, the corner of my houſe, then it was a quarter after nine in the evening of the 11th of May, our beadle was there.

What did you do in conſequence of ſeeing the child in that ſituation?——I took it into my own houſe that night, and the next day, I ſent it to the workhouſe at Hoxton.

Court to Batt. When did you firſt ſee the child, and where?—At the end of the court, ſome women had got round the child, the child was then juſt by Mr. Taylor's door.

Who were with it?—Some women had gathered about the child, it was crying for its mamma.

Mr. James to Taylor. As you had ſeen the the child, what did you do to learn to whom it belonged?——I advertized it ſome days after, and in conſequence of ſome information I received, I apprehended the priſoner, and ſhe ſaid, that child was her's, that it was a baſtard child born in the pariſh of St. Giles's, Cripplegate, and that ſhe had applied to the pariſh for ſome relief, and they refuſed it, becauſe ſhe did not belong to that pariſh, and that ſhe brought it to us, becauſe ſhe could not maintain it.

Court. Was any threat or promiſe made to her?——No, not a word, I am ſure of it.

Mr. James. Where has the child been ſince?—At our workhouſe.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I have not a bit of anything, I made away with the laſt thing that ever I had in the world.

Court to Taylor. Did you hear her mention the age of the child?—When ſhe was apprehended ſhe ſaid it was four years old.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped and diſcharged.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

724. JERVIS BRADBURY was indicted for that he, on the 26th of May laſt, unlawfully, and falſly, and deſignedly, did obtain from one James Lawrence, two carpets, one three feet wide, and three feet and a half long, value 7l. the property of Richard and John Myles.

(The witneſſes examined apart.)

JAMES LAWRENCE ſworn.

I am a ſervant to Meſſrs. Myles, of Biſhopſgate-ſtreet, their names are Richard and John Myles, they are wholeſale upholſterers; I knew the priſoner, he came to me on the 26th of May laſt, and told me he came from Mr. Loader of Moorfields, upholſterer, for two Perſia carpets, one three yards wide, and three yards and a half long.

Court. The indictment charges one to be three feet wide, and three feet and a half long, this being a variation, the priſoner muſt be acquitted.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

The Trials being ended, the Court proceeded to paſs Sentence as follows.

Received Sentence of Death, 25.

(N. B. Thoſe marked thus * were afterwards executed, on Wedneſday the 17th of Auguſt.)

Patrick Burke, George Morris alias Roberts, James Lockhart *, Richard Jacobs *, George Olive, John Raybo alias Preſcot *, Thomas Bayley *, Sam Champneſs, Francis Primroſe, John M ris *, James Guthrie *, Benjamin Moo Thomas Groves, John Williams, Da Engliſh, James Mackintoſh, Martin T lor *, Elizabeth Taylor *, John Bur Ja

James Cotta, William Cruſe, Mary Hughes, Catherine Martin, John Cox, William Staples.

To be tranſported for ſeven years to Africa, 1.

William Gosling.

To be tranſported for ſeven years, to ſuch place or places, as his Majeſty with the advice of his Privy Council ſhall think fit to declare and appoint, 30.

William Noble, William Cooke, James Jones, John Morland, James Moffat, Richard Ward, Thomas Breeze, James Davis, Joſeph Boſley, Richard Myer, Francis Oſland, Abraham Harley, William Stephens, John Grainger, Thomas Smith, Thomas Squiers, William Gloſter, Thomas Jocelyn, John Lloyd, John Edwards, James Bradley, John Tidford, John Poland, Jane Jackſon, Samuel Lambe, Roger M'Guire, John Brown, Richard Kayne, Michael Reger alias Racher, Thomas White.

To be confined to hard labour in the Houſe of Correction, four years and two hundred and ſixty three days, 1.

Robert Franklin.

To be confined to hard labour in the Houſe of Correction, three years, one month and two days, 1.

J[illegible]s Eades.

To be confined to hard labour three years in the Houſe of Correction, 2.

Mary Beck, Harriot Kirby.

To be confined to hard labour one year in the Houſe of Correction, 3.

Ann Brooks, Ann Sheldon, Mary Williams.

To be impriſoned ſix months in Newgate, 1.

William Warwick.

To be confined to hard labour ſix months in the Houſe of Correction, 8.

William Brandon, Jane Curfew, Mary Green, Robert Mountain, Ann Johnſon, Elizabeth White, Benjamin Jones, Ann Barret.

To be confined to hard labour one month in Newgate, 5.

Edward Hughes, Robert Walker, Edward Jefferſon, Margaret Wood, Thomas Williams.

To be publickly whipped, 14.

William Warwick, Michael Rochford, David Brandon, Cornelius Marney, John Scott, Michael Oxen, Edward Hughes, Robert Walker, Edward Jefferſon, Robert Mountain, Benjamin Jones, William Haywood, John Roper, Thomas Williams.

To be branded, 1.

Mary Allen.

Samuel Roberts, a priſoner upon the orders was ſet to the bar, and informed by the Court that the ſentence of the law was that he ſhould be tranſported for fourteen years.

Sentence on Thomas Field was reſpited.

The Trial of Meſſrs. Goodridge's and Evans was poſtponed till the next ſeſſion, on affidavit that the ſuit is ſtill pending in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury.

The next Seſſion will begin on Wedneſday the 14th day of September next at the Old Bailey.

To the Purchasers of the Sessions Paper.

SEVERAL interesting trials within the last three years being entirely out of print, Mr. Hodgson has caused fresh impressions of them to be sent to press, and which may be shortly had in separate Numbers, price 6d. each, at Mr. Walmsley's, Chancery-lane, and Mr. Bladon's, Paternoster-row.

Mr. Hodgson respectfully embraces this opportunity of making his most unfeigned acknowledgments to the public in general, and the gentlemen of the law in particular, for that estimation in which the Sessions Paper continues to be held for its accuracy; and assures them, that his most unremitting attention shall be exerted to retain and increase such estimation.

The trials so much enquired after, and which Mr. Hodgson purposes to reprint for the accommodation of his customers are as follow:——The remarkable trial of John Graham and his wife for forgery.—Charlotte Goodall and John Edmonds for robbing Mrs. Fortescue at Tottenham.—Francis Gray for the murder of Mr. Hurd.—Dr. Daniel M'Ginnis for the murder of Mr. Hardy.——William Wynne Ryland for forgery.——Nicholson, Ward, Shaw, Murry, O'Brien, and others, for the murder of Nicholas Casson, at the Huffings at Covent-Garden.——Richard Corbett, (a youth) for setting fire to his master's house.——Colonel Cosmo Gordon for the murder of Frederick Thomas, Esq; in a duel.——Henry Morgan for the murder of Mr. Linton.——Porter Rideout, for the murder of Moses Lazarus, in Duke's Place.——Captain Keith Mackenzie, for the murder of Kenith Murray Mackenzie, at Fort Morea, in Africa.—Thomas Wood and George Brown for robbing Sir Thomas Davenport.—George Ollive, a youth, (of this session) for setting fire to the house of his master Mr. Parlee, in St. James's-street, Martin Taylor and Elizabeth Taylor, of this session, (brother and sister) both executed on Wednesday the 17th of October for burglary.

☞ TRIALS &c. accurately taken in SHORT-HAND, and expeditiously copied by E. HODGSON, No. 35, Chancery Lane:——Short Hand taught as usual in FOUR LESSONS, price 2l. 2s.—Also HODGSON's SHORT-HAND BOOK to be had as above, price 2s. 6d.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 14th of SEPTEMBER, 1785, and the following Days;

Being the SEVENTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER VII. PART I.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

BEFORE the Right Honourable RICHARD CLARK, LORD MAYOR of the City of London; the Honourable Sir HENRY GOULD, Knt. one of the Juſtices of his Majeſty's Court of Common Pleas; the Honourable Sir WILLIAM HENRY ASHURST, Knt. one of the Juſtices of his Majeſty's Court of King's Bench; the Honourable Sir BEAUMONT HOTHAM, Knt. one of the Barons of his Majeſty's Court of Exchequer; the Honourable JAMES ADAIR, Serjeant at Law, Recorder of the ſaid City; JOHN WILLIAM ROSE, Eſq; and others his Majeſty's Juſtices of Oyer and Terminer of the City of London, and Juſtices of Gaol Delivery of Newgate, holden for the ſaid City and County of Middleſex.

First London Jury.	Second London Jury.	First Middleſex Jury.	Second Middleſex Jury.
John Shank	Peter Cockburn	John Gregory	Francis Jones
William Seaman	Robert Black	Edward Shee	William Nicholl
Joſeph Buckland	Ayres Cook	James Lock	Simon Leith
James Ealey	William Hales	Tho. Cartwright ‡	George Mitchell
William Allen *	Thomas Cotton	Thomas Southwell	Thomas Weaver
Samuel Hall	John Allen	James Canter	James Linden
Henry Young	John Box †	James Burges §	Charles Chowles
James Fowle	John Bailey	John Lambert	Richard Warren
John Smith	John Bird	Thomas Lyne	Caleb Jones
Joſeph Johnſon	Henry Shutleworth	John Smith	George Wells
Thomas Farrance	Thomas Wilkie	William Allen	John Moore
Tho. Gillebrand	John Brown	Joſhua Owen	James Bumpſted.

* Thomas Collier ſerved the four laſt days in the room of William Allen.
† Miles Maſon ſerved the laſt day in the room of John Box.
‡ William Lockwood ſerved on the 5th day in the room of Thomas Cartwright.
§ Saul Richardſon ſerved on the 7th day in the room of James Burges.

---

725. CORNELIUS MORAN was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Francis Phillips, on the King's highway, on the 2d day of July laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon and againſt his will, one ſilver watch, value 30s. two ſeals, value 4s. and one ſteel chain, value 1s. his property.

FRANCIS PHILLIPS ſworn.

On the 2d of July, I was robbed, about half paſt nine in the evening, in Ratcliff-highway, the priſoner at the bar gave me a ſhove, I cannot ſay he robbed me; I was beat and ill uſed very much, there were ſeveral others that appeared to be of the priſoner's company.

Did any thing paſs between the priſoner and the people that appeared to be in his company?——I cannot take upon me to ſay, I was rather in liquor at the time.

As you was in liquor, then can you take upon yourſelf poſitively to ſay, that the priſoner was one of the perſons?—He was the perſon that firſt ſtruck me, and gave me a ſhove, then the priſoner aſked me if I would fight with him, I ſaid, I would charge an officer with him as ſoon as I could get one, and ſeveral people being round me, I felt one of them pull at my watch, but who it was I cannot ſay; I was almoſt knocked down but not quite, I was againſt the wall, they made two pulls, and I loſt my watch, a ſteel chain, and two ſilver ſeals; it was a very ſmall watch, both caſes ſilver, I held the priſoner by the coat while I got aſſiſtance, I am not certain whether I loſt any money.

Did the priſoner appear to be ſober?—I cannot inform you, for I was very much in liquor myſelf, and I cannot tell in what condition he was, but to me he appeared to be ſober.

How many were there that appeared to be in his company as you ſuppoſe?——I ſuppoſe at leaſt there might be ſeven or eight, and one of them held me by the hair while another hit me over the face, I look upon it, that it was the priſoner that robbed me, but I cannot be poſitive.

ROBERT PARNELL ſworn.

I was coming along at the ſame time, behind the proſecutor, and I ſaw the priſoner ſhove the proſecutor againſt a public houſe, the corner of White's-yard and afterwards the priſoner aſked the proſecutor if he would fight; then he went into the houſe oppoſite, and as ſoon as he came out again, five or ſix men came out, and the priſoner put his head between the proſecutor's legs, and after ſometime he pulled the watch out of the proſecutor's pocket with his left hand.

Did you ſee him do that?—Yes.

Are you ſure of that?——Yes, I then called out that the gentleman's watch was gone, and then all theſe men that came after him went and pulled the gentleman about, and ſaid, what watch? and then the priſoner called out let him fight; he then had his head between the proſecutor's legs, then the other pulled the proſecutor by the hair of the head, out into the middle of the road, and the proſecutor held the priſoner by his coat, the proſecutor cried murder! they got him down a gateway, I then went to a butcher's over the way, and aſked where the runners were kept, then I ſent a boy from the public houſe for one, and the priſoner and the proſecutor were taken into the public houſe, the proſecutor ſtill kept hold of the priſoner.

Were the other men got away?—They might have got away, there was a great croud.

Did you find the watch upon him?—No.

Priſoner. Why did not he mention it at the time that he ſaw me take the watch?—I mentioned it at the time.

WILLIAM PACKER ſworn.

I am headborough of St. John, Wapping; I was applied to by the laſt witneſs, to come and take this man, the proſecutor had hold of the priſoner when I came up, there was no watch upon him when he was taken.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I knew nothing of the gentleman's watch, I have no witneſſes.

Jury to the boy. What are you?——I live at Mr. Lowden's, hat-maker, in Leadenhall-enhall-ſtreet, I am ſixteen years old; I am ſure I ſaw the priſoner take out the watch, and it was handed away directly.

Jury to Proſecutor. What are you?—A gangſman, I knew the priſoner before.

Have you been in company with him?—No, never in my life, the priſoner knows me very well, but I never employed him, I wiſh you to be favourable to him, only that he may be puniſhed.

Jury to the boy. How came you to be there; I was carrying home a hat.

And are you ſure you ſaw him take the watch out of his pocket?——Yes.

The Jury withdrew for a ſhort time, and returned with a verdict,

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice ASHURST.

---

726. WILLIAM LAWES was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Jane the wife of Thomas Holmes, on the 15th day of May laſt, in a certain field and open place near the King's highway, and putting her in corporal fear and danger of her life, and feloniouſly taking from her perſon and againſt her will, two half crowns, value 5s. and ſixpence in money, the monies of the ſaid Thomas.

JANE HOLMES ſworn.

I am wife of Thomas Holmes, on the 15th of May, Whitſunday, on my return from Edmonton Church, at the end of ſacrament time as near as I can recollect a quarter paſt one, a little more or a little leſs, I was going to Wynchmore-hill, I was on foot and quite alone, and near the entering of a lane, called Mr. Taſhmakers Lane, a man met me and ſtopped me.

How far was that from Edmonton church?——A mile, the man preſented a piſtol to me, and ſaid, Madam, your money or your life, I begged him to take that from me, and I would give him all I had, he told me not to be frightened, I ſhould not be hurt, and I gave him two half crowns, and ſixpence, and he left me immediately, I went to Wynchmore-hill, I ſuppoſe he went from me, I ſaw no more of him.

Do you know the man?——Yes.

Is the priſoner the man?—Yes.

Look at him?—Yes, he is the man.

Did you know him before?—I never ſaw him in my life before.

How long might he ſtay with you?——I ſuppoſe four or five minutes.

Was you ſo long getting out the half crowns?——Yes.

Did you ſee any body go by at the time?——Not anybody, I did not ſee a creature near me till I was out of the field in the lane.

Is it a public path?——A public path from the church.

How was he dreſſed?—In a day labouring working dreſs.

What ſort of a hat?——A very old ſhabby hat flapped round his head.

And had you a fair opportunity of ſeeing his countenance?——Yes, my Lord, I ſtood with him ſome minutes particularly begging he would not hurt me, and pleading to ſave one half crown.

You mean to tell the Jury, the priſoner is the man?——I am too ſure he is the man, if I had had the leaſt doubt I would not have come into this Court.

How long after was he taken up?—The 17th of July.

Court. That was two months after the time, did you recollect him again immediately?——I recollected him the inſtant I ſaw him, I mentioned the robbery as ſoon as it was committed, I was walking with Mr. and Mrs. Dale and Mr. Holmes after tea, and in a lane near Salmon's brook the man met us, and I inſtantly ſaid that is the man that ſtopped me on the Whitſunday, the reply was, are you ſure of that? and immediately Mr. Dale and Mr. Holmes ſeized the man.

Court. Was that near the place where you had been robbed before?——It was ſome diſtance, I cannot tell exactly how near.

MICHAEL DALE ſworn.

I ſeized the man by Mrs. Holmes's directions, that that was the very man that had robbed her, I ſaid, are you certain ſure? ſhe pointed with her fingers, ſays ſhe, that is the fellow, with that we ſeized him, the poor man abſolutely utterly denied it, and ſaid, he was not the perſon, and ſo he ſtill continued, the man behaved very decent, and very pretty; and I certainly did take him, I ſearched him and found a piſtol in his pocket, which I tore out of the bottom of his pocket.

Was it loaded at the time?—No, it was not in a condition to fire at anything.

Jury to Mrs. Holmes. Do you recollect whether that was the ſort of piſtol that was preſented to you?——Yes, my Lord, as near as one piſtol can be to another, when I came home, I ſaid it was like an old great horſe piſtol.

Dale. He ſaid at the time he overtook her, he would not hurt the hair of her head, he is an eaſy quiet poor creature.

Holmes. I can ſay nothing more than to coroborate the evidence Mr. Dale has given, except I aſked him how he came by the piſtol, he ſaid he did not know he had it, I ſaid that was impoſſible, then he ſaid he carried it to protect himſelf, I afterwards remonſtrated with him, and he ſaid, being a gardener he carried it to frighten the birds.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was not the perſon.

PATRICK DRUMMOND ſworn.

The priſoner has worked for me ſome years as a gardener, I had known him upwards of four years, he always behaved himſelf honeſtly and well.

—— ANDERSON ſworn.

I have known him almoſt twenty years; never knew anything againſt his character, but he always behaved himſelf as an honeſt, quiet, ſober, peaceable man.

—— ARNOLD ſworn.

I have known him about eight years, an honeſt, ſober man, he lodged with my father between two and three years, and I never knew him to lay out of the houſe but one night, and that was the night he was taken, he is a gardener by buſineſs, and works for Mr. Drummond.

DENNIS BROWN ſworn.

I have known him near twenty years, a very honeſt, ſober man, I never knew any other of him.

—— DOWNES ſworn.

I have known him almoſt four years, he worked for a gentleman, employed by this Mr. Drummond upwards of four years, he was honeſt and ſober, I never knew anything to the contrary.

MOSES JOLLIE ſworn.

I have known him between four and five years, he worked for Mr. Phillips going on ſix years, never neglected a day's work, I never knew any diſhoneſty by him.

Court to Drummond. Is the priſoner a married man or ſingle?——He has been twice married, he is ſingle at preſent.

Has he any children?—He has a daughter and ſon.

Jury to Drummond. Is it uſual for men employed in a garden to carry piſtols in their pockets for the purpoſe of ſhooting at birds?—It is not uſual, but ſometimes it is done to frighten birds from the ſeed-bags and the fruit.

Did you know him to carry a piſtol at any time?——The piſtol had been laying about in the garden for ſometime.

Jollie. This piſtol lay in the garden for a month before, hid in a parcel of tyles, it was found about a week after he was taken by a bricklayer; when he came to work one morning he looked for his piſtol as uſual, and had loſt it, he enquired of the men, and they enquired of the maſter, and the maſter brought it to me, and ſhewed it to me.

Did you ever know him to carry this piſtol about?—I never ſaw it before then,

I aſked him the uſe of it, and he ſaid, he had it to frighten the birds, I aſked him which way, he ſaid, he ſtruck it down at them, and by ſtriking it down it frightened the birds off the trees.

Court. You heard him mention that he had loſt his piſtol?——Yes.

Mr. PHILLIPS ſworn.

This man has worked in my garden for five years, in the country; I had a very high opinion of him, he behaved extremely well, he went in when he pleaſed, I had not the leaſt doubt in the world about him, I had no idea of anything of this ſort, I never was ſo aſtoniſhed in my life; the man was the moſt regular in his work I ever ſaw, and he worked there till the evening he was apprehended.

Do you know anything about his carrying a piſtol?—I have heard ſome of my ſervants ſay, he had a piſtol in the garden, which he told them was to frighten away the ſparrows; that is all that I know of it, I never ſaw it.

Court to Dale. What was the defect in the piſtol, that it could not be fired?—— The flints were not fixed for firing.

GUILTY, Death.

He was humbly recommended to mercy by the Proſecutor and his wife.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

727. JAMES DUNCAN, JAMES MUNDAY, THOMAS ARNETT, and EDWARD GRIFFITHS, were indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling-houſe of Benjamin Rooke, about the hour of two in the night, on the 15th of July laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein one pair of ſilver ſhoe-buckles, value 10s. one pair of ſilk ſtockings, value 5s. one pair of thread ſtockings, value 3s. one muſlin neckcloth, value 2s. and three ſilver tea-ſpoons, value 4s. his property.

BENJAMIN ROOKE ſworn.

I live at Hertford, and I have chambers in Staples-inn; I received information of my chambers being broke open about the 15th of July, and I came to town immediately to enquire about it, and I found I had loſt a pair of ſilver buckles, and three ſilver tea-ſpoons, a muſlin neckcloth, a pair of ſilk ſtockings, and a pair of thread ſtockings.

Court. How lately before had you been in the chambers?——About a fortnight.

Did you leave anybody in the chambers?—No, the laſt time I was in the chambers, I locked them up, and left the key at the lodge with the porter's wife, who is my laundreſs; I have no reaſon for charging the priſoner with this robbery, only when I appeared before Sir Sampſon Wright, the buckles were then produced, ſaid to be found on Duncan, and the other things in a place where he was taken.

WILLIAM DUNCAN ſworn.

I am the porter of Staples-inn, I only know that the watchman told me my boy was in the cellar, at No. 11, in the next court; there are two courts in Staples-inn; I took my ſon out of that cellar, and kept him in the lodge till I got one of the patrols to take care of him; I took him on ſuſpicion of his being out of his lodgings, becauſe I paid his lodging duly and truly every week, and I knew he had no buſineſs out of his lodgings.

When was this?—On the 15th of July, on Friday morning about four o'clock.

HOWEL JONES ſworn.

I came at two o'clock to water the road on the 15th of July, and I ſaw a drover turning ſome ſheep into Brook-ſtreet, and he ſaid what are thoſe people doing there on the leads, and I looked acroſs the way to Staples-inn; and at a ſide window I ſaw a couple of men on the leads, I turned towards them, and they jumped off, and two ſtood below, I kept my ſight as well as I could on one of them, that did not run, the other three run.

Did they jump off into Staples-inn or into into Holborn?—Into Holborn, the leads are over ſome ſhops, the one that I kept in my eye was the priſoner Munday; Griffiths I believe was the other, but I will not be poſitive of any other but Munday, as I was flurried; I took Munday in Brook-ſtreet, I found nothing on him.

Priſoner Munday. My Lord, I was drinking at the pump when he took me.

Did you obſerve the windows oppoſite to thoſe leads when you obſerved the men, were they open or ſhut?——The glaſs of the caſement was broke, and the caſement was open, I charged them with a conſtable, and I told the porter that I ſaw another in the window half in and half out, but I could not tell who it was; Munday was let go out of the watch-houſe, there being nothing found on him.

Mr. Knowles Counſel for the Priſoner Munday. You do not come to water the ſtreets, I ſuppoſe, till day-light?——It was not very light.

You could have ſeen the face of any of your companions that were paſſing by that way?——Yes, and it was as much as I could do.

Where was Munday when you came up to him?——He was ſtopping at the pump to drink.

Did you hear him ſay, or do you know that that was the way to his mother's houſe?—Yes, he ſaid ſo.

And you have found it out to be ſo ſince?—Yes.

Did you call to him to ſtop?——Yes.

He returned to you voluntarily?—Yes.

How came he to be diſcharged?——The conſtable aſked me if they charged him, and I ſaid no; I only was in the room at the chambers at that time.

Was not this man examined ſeveral times before the juſtice?——Only once when I was there.

Do not you know he has been examined twice before you appeared?—Yes.

Before you went to the juſtice you knew he was taken up?—I was told ſo.

Then did not you think it your duty to appear when you firſt heard he was taken up?——I am a ſtranger to theſe things, I went when I was aſked to come.

Who aſked you to come?—Jackſon, the runner.

Is Jackſon here?—I believe he is.

Now, I ſuppoſe, he did not tell you it would be worth your while to come?——He told me I muſt come.

Did not he give you ſome hint that you might get a little money for coming?——No, Sir.

What was to fall to your ſhare?——He never promiſed me any thing, nor never ſpoke to me about the money.

Who was that man that did promiſe you any part of the reward?——I have had no talk with any of them for the reward.

You knew though I ſuppoſe that you was to have at leaſt a ſhare of forty pounds?——There were ſome people of my kind that told me here and there, that I ſhould have it.

Yes, I thought ſo, now if you could have ſtrained yourſelf a little further, you would have a ſhare of four times forty pounds?——I would not wiſh it.

No, I ſuppoſe not! that is well done; your employment is a waterman?—I have done it ſeveral ſeaſons.

How much may you get a-day by it?—Fourteen ſhillings a-week, ſometimes more and ſometimes leſs.

Jury. I think you ſaid that Munday was one of the two that jumped off the leads?—Sir, I did ſay that he was one of them, as I believe.

Are you ſatisfied that is the man that you ſaw jump?—I believe ſo, Sir, as far as I know.

Court. Did you keep him in ſight from the time he jumped off till he was taken?—I think I did.

JOSEPH JACKSON ſworn.

I am a ſhoemaker, on the 15th of July in the morning, Mr. Duncan, the father, ſent for me from home, and told me, that his ſon was in cuſtody, and that Mr. Rooke's chambers had been broke open, and he thought his ſon, with four or five,

or

or ſix more had done it; accordingly I took the priſoner Duncan from his father's apartments to Bow-ſtreet, and one John Sherwood aſked me, whether I had ſearched him, and I ſaid no, for his father ſaid he believed he had no property about him, then Sherrard ſearched him, and found a pair of ſilver buckles belonging to Mr. Rooke in the priſoner Duncan's fob pocket, and took them out in the office.

JOHN SHERRARD ſworn.

When the priſoner Duncan was brought to the office, I ſearched him, and in his breeches fob pocket I found theſe ſilver buckles.

Court to Mr. Rooke. Are theſe your buckles?——I believe they are.

Can you ſwear to them?——There are other buckles, I ſuppoſe, of the ſame pattern, but I can ſwear that the buckles I loſt were exactly of this pattern and ſize.

Court to Duncan. Did theſe leads communicate with Mr. Rooke's chambers?—Yes, they did, I had no other reaſon for ſuſpecting my ſon, but his being out of his lodgings at an improper time of night.

Jackſon. After the buckles were taken out of Duncan's pocket, he was brought to the bar, and Sir Sampſon aſked him, whether he had any other perſon that was with him or not.

Court. You muſt not tell any thing that Duncan ſaid that tends to charge any body but himſelf; was any thing ſaid by him importing a denial of his being concerned, or a confeſſion that he had been concerned?—He owned that he had been concerned with four or five more, and mentioned their names.

What was he charged with before the Juſtice?—With breaking and entering Mr. Rooke's chambers, and ſtealing the property we have here, and he told his father in the Brown-bear, he had hid ſome property belonging to Mr. Rooke, and I went and found it; I went to No. 11, Mr. Townſend's chambers, and in the cellar I found three ſilver ſpoons, a pair of ſilk ſtockings, a pair of thread ſtockings, and a neckcloth.

Proſecutor. Theſe ſpoons I believe to be mine, they are marked B. R. M. N. the neckcloth is mine, I know it by the mark; the ſtockings have no mark, but I believe them to be mine, having loſt a pair of ſilk and a pair of thread, and the ſilk of the ſame pattern.

Mr. Knowles. At what examination was it, that this waterman attended?—It was the ſecond examination.

WILLIAM SEASONS ſworn.

I received a private information, and I apprehended Griffiths, and one Kendrick, I ſent up to Sir Sampſon's office and received a meſſage to bring them up, when they were brought before Sir Sampſon, the waterman poſitively ſwore then to Griffiths but not to Kendrick, we found nothing on Griffiths, and he behaved very civil.

THOMAS ISAACS ſworn.

I apprehended Griffiths with the laſt witneſs.

WILLIAM BLACKETER ſworn.

I only apprehended Griffiths with Seaſons.

HANNAH GOSS ſworn.

They fetched me to Bow-ſtreet, and they bound me over to proſecute, we kept a public houſe eleven weeks in Bell-court, Gray's-Inn-lane; I know nothing further, only that a parcel of men came in the night of this robbery, I believe it was, Griffiths and Munday and Duncan were in company with ſome others.

How late did they ſtay at your houſe?—It might be about eleven.

Was Arnett there?——I do not know that I ever ſaw him, they had three pots of beer, and two papers of tobacco, and behaved very decent.

Priſoner Griffiths. Were we in company?——You were all in company together, there might be eight or nine for what I know.

To

The Prisoner Munday called five witnesses who gave him a very good character.

HENRY JENNINGS sworn.

The prisoner Duncan lived clerk to my father about six months, he came on or about the 29th of October, and left him about April, 1785.

Court. What is your father?——An attorney, No. 3, Staples-Inn, during that time we could not impeach his character in the least, the only reason that I understood my father parted with him for was, he neglected coming early one morning, he did not come till ten o'clock, and was to have come at eight, during that time he was with us he received money, and paid money, we never missed a pin's point; my father is at Nottingham, or else he would have come himself.

JAMES DUNCAN, GUILTY, Death.
JAMES MUNDAY, NOT GUILTY.
THOMAS ARNETT, NOT GUILTY.
EDWARD GRIFFITH, NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Justice ASHURST.

---

728. JAMES ROE was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 1st day of September, two ewe sheep, value 32s. nine wether sheep, value 10l. and nine lambs, value 6l. the property of George Kibble.

GEORGE KIBBLE sworn.

I live at Shoreham, between Seven Oaks and Dartford, in the county of Kent; I heard from my shepherd on the 1st of September, that I had lost one score of sheep, and on Sunday morning the 4th, between ten and eleven I heard there was a man taken on suspicion of stealing some sheep, which was on the 1st of September.

Court. What sort of sheep were they?——There were nine lambs that were shorn, and among the nine one ram lamb was saved intended for a young ram for a breeder; and there were nine wether sheep and two ewe sheep; they were all South downers; the lambs were marked in the neck with oker, and the wether lambs marked separate across the loins with a thin streak of oker to distinguish them from the ewe lambs, the ewe lambs were not marked across the loins, the wether sheep were marked across the shoulders with a narrow strips of oker at sheering time; as to the two ewes we were not certain whether they were both marked or not, if they were marked they were marked with a streak of oker down the rump; I never saw any of the sheep since, but I have seen the skins, they were laid all tumbled about together, and a many of them were cut and mangled, but amongst them there were several whole skins which were quite perfect, clear to be my mark; the skins began to smell very much, I found them at the public house, the sign of the Bear, just by Sir Sampson's office.

Court. From the description you have given of the marks that you used, are they such as enable you positively to swear to your own skins?——Yes, they are very clear, and have the oker being marked in three different places, and the different wideness of the oker.

Court. Do the other farmers in your neighbourhood use the same sort of mark?——Not that I know of, I believe there is no farmer in that neighbourhood that keeps south downers but myself; I am trying to recollect if there is one; no, I do not recollect any; the south downer sheep are short legged, close wool, and black faced, their legs and face are black and smutty, and they are fuller of wool than the other sheep, and the wool is a much finer wool.

WILLIAM YATES sworn.

I am shepherd to the prosecutor, on the 1st of September he lost some sheep, near Shoreham, we missed a score of sheep, nine lambs, and nine wether sheep, and two ewes, they were south downers; they were marked down the neck, the wether lambs had a mark down the loins, and the sheep across the shoulders, and the ewes down the neck, I heard of them again on the Sunday day in the fore con; I saw the skins afterwards.

Court. Could you judge from the skins whether they had been lately killed?—Yes, they were.

Prosecutor. By the appearance of the skins it appeared as if they were killed about the time I lost them; I live about twenty miles from London.

THOMAS GENTLEMAN sworn.

I am a butcher in Duck-lane, Westminster, I was sitting at a house, and a neighbour said there is our neighbour has got a score of sheep, says he let us take a walk, and we went round, and I saw my neighbour killing two sheep, one was hung up, and the other lay dead, this was in the evening of the Thursday, about four o'clock.

What was your neighbour's name?——Thomas Beadle, they were downers sheep; says I, you have have got a rare stock here, what are you killing for shipping? Says he, I have got a score, they belong to no butcher; says I, is there any butcher's mark on them, and I looked at them; why says I these things are certainly stolen; says he, I know nothing at all about it; I goes away and went to Bridewell, and made the complaint, and two people were sent down and he was brought up to Bow-street; I counted them, they were all dead; I saw two with the skins on, and the rest of the score dead, and I saw them told over in the shop; I observed the two skins that they were taking off, they had the same mark that the farmer has spoken of.

JOHN SAYRE sworn.

On the first of September this gentleman came to Tothillfields Bridewell, and gave information that there were a score sheep he suspected were stolen, I took a man with me, and went to Beadle's shop, and Beadle was skinning the last sheep; the prisoner was within-side the shop cleaning the guts.

What was he a servant of Beadle's?—No, I took Beadle in custody at the door, and took the knife in his hand, and asked him who they belonged to; he said they did not belong to him, they belonged to the man in the shop; I took him into custody, the prisoner said he brought them out of Kent for two men, he fixed upon a man at Hungerford market, but we could find no such man; he said he came out of Kent, but I cannot rightly recollect what part.

THOMAS BEADLE sworn.

I am a butcher, I was going along the street about my business, and I met the prisoner enquiring for somebody to kill a score of sheep; I met him on Thursday the 1st of September, about ten in the morning, he had not the sheep with him then, he had put them up in a place near the horse ferry road, I said to him, Sir, I have got a place to kill them in; I was to have 3d. a sheep, which is common in the trade; he said as I alter would be there in an hour, or an hour and half, and he would satisfy me; he said his master's name was John Taylor; I asked him where his master lived, he said in George Court in the Strand; I never saw the prisoner before; he brought the sheep out of the place in the horse ferry road to where I lived, about ten in the morning; killed twenty, they were south downers black faced and black legged.

Is it an usual thing in your trade to do these sort of things?——Yes, Sir, I get my living by it.

Then you do not sell sheep to anybody——No, Sir, I get my bread merely by killing.

Were they fat sheep?——Many of them were middling sheep.

Were they fit for market?—Yes.

Prisoner. My witnesses are not come, have sent for them.

Jury. Did you observe when you killed the sheep whether they were cool or heated as just come off a journey?—They seemed to be very cool and settled.

Were they in that state they usually are when brought to you for that purpose?—Yes; I enquired about Mr. Taylor, and there was such a man six months ago, but he was gone to Birmingham.

What was to be done with them?—

The

They were to be ſent to Mr. Hill and King in Newgate Market, a man that keeps carts in the neighbourhood was to ſend them, that was the orders he ſaid he had; Mr. Hill ſold the ſheep laſt Saturday.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

My Lord, I was ordered to drive theſe ſheep down to Weſtminſter, by Mr. William Taylor, the brother of that Taylor; I went to Foots Cray to work at hops, and I lay at a butcher's, and between five and ſix the next morning, juſt by counſellor Chetwood's, ten miles this ſide Foot's Cray, he aſked me to drive them to the half-way houſe, and wait for him; I went on and ſtopped, he rode up to me, and ſaid, I have overtaken you my lad; yes, ſays I; ſays I, is not your name Taylor, your brother was in town laſt year, and had ſome bullocks killed; ſays he take theſe ſheep down to Weſtminſter, where my brother had his bullocks killed, and then ſend them to Mr. King; I went and found Mr. Beadle, ſays he, I ſhould be glad of a job, I told him they were three-pence a ſheep, he ſaid I dare ſay I can ſell moſt of them in my own ſhop; he ſaid he would take the hides and plucks, and be anſwerable for the price, they are ſixpence a piece, and in taking the laſt ſkin that gentleman took him and me, and I know no more about it.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

729. GEORGE NUGENT and WILLIAM BURKE were indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Joſeph Walker on the king's highway, on the firſt day of Auguſt laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon, and againſt his will, one ſilver watch, value 30s. his property.

(The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of the priſoners.)

JOSEPH WALKER ſworn.

I had been at my benefit club, I was ſtopped by three men on the firſt of Auguſt, two of which are the priſoners, they followed me and collared me, they ſaid nothing to me; I laid faſt hold of my chain, and one of the three forced his hand into my fob, and pulled out my watch.

Was there a moon?—Yes, but it was not clear moonlight, it was cloudy.

Did you know the men before?—Never.

How ſoon were they taken after the robbery?—Between one minute and two, as near as I can gueſs, I kept them in ſight till they were taken; one of them was taken by William Glover, and another by James Wayland: when they pulled the watch out, I held faſt by the chain, it did not go, then they gave another pull and a twiſt, and broke the watch from the chain with a link or two of the chain with it; here is the remainder of the chain (produces it.) As ſoon as ever they quitted their hold, I gave the alarm, and purſued one of them acroſs King-ſtreet, and as we were going down Holborn, the other man turned down King-ſtreet, and at the top of King-ſtreet they were ſtopped, one turned one way, and one the other.

Was you perfectly ſober at the time?—I had been drinking, but I was very ſober to know what I was doing, and perfectly ſure of the people.

Was the watch found upon either of them when they were ſtopped?——No.

Had they any arms, or any thing found on them at the time?——No: they did not preſent any thing to me, only collared me.

Priſoner Burke. What ſtreet was I taken in?——The corner of King-ſtreet.

In what ſtreet was you robbed?——In Holborn.

How far was it from the place where you was robbed?—I cannot ſay, it is not above one hundred yards.

Did not you charge another man with robbing you, in the watch-houſe?—I did not.

Did

Did you charge any other man but us two?—I did not.

I refer it to the watch book of the night, he said at first it was the man that robbed him who is now a witness against us?——I said no such thing.

WILLIAM GLOVER sworn.

I was at the Coach and Horles, the corner of Hart-ſtreet and King-ſtreet, I came out hearing a noiſe of the watchman's rattles, it was between twelve and one, near half after twelve, or thereabouts, I heard a noiſe and cry of ſtop thief, I ſaw the two priſoners runing up King-ſtreet, by the ſide of the Buffalo tavern, they croſſed over towards Orange-ſtreet, which leads to Red Lion ſquare, hearing the cry of ſtop thief, I made after them, and took William Burke, and pulled off a piece of his coat, the corner of King's-gate-ſtreet; here is a piece of his coat; I made after him again, and directly he threw his hand back, I heard ſomething fall, I thought it was a piſtol, I collared him, and the proſecutor ſaid theſe are the men that robbed me of my watch, here is the chain in my hand, which they left behind; what he threw down was not found; I cannot ſay what it was.

Priſoner Nugent. Did you ſee me with this man?—You was cloſe behind him.

How long was it between the time he was taken and I was taken?——It could not be long.

JAMES BANKS ſworn.

On the 1ſt of Auguſt, as I was going up Holborn, about a quarter after twelve, I ſaw a few people ſtanding together, and as I approached nearer, the proſecutor ſaid, I have loſt my watch, I have the chain in my hand; the men at that time were gone from him; he cried ſtop thief; I ran with the proſecutor very faſt after the priſoners, and we overtook them; the two priſoners are clearly the ſame men that were running, becauſe they were never out of my ſight, they ran exceedingly faſt, they were about half way up the ſtreet before the rattles went, I was cloſe after them, and juſt as they turned the corner of Kings-gate-ſtreet I was immediately up with the ſhorteſt, that was Nugent, and he was ſtopped by a luſty man, I have ſeen him ſince at Juſtice Walkers, and here in the yard, I know nothing of the robbery, only I know theſe are the two men that ran from the plaintiff.

Priſoner Nugent. Was not you charged with this watch?——I was.

Did Walker ſay at the watch-houſe that I was not one of the men?——I did not hear him ſay any ſuch thing.

JAMES WAYLAND ſworn.

As I was coming home one night from my duty, I heard a hue and cry; I kept no account of the day of the month, it was between twelve and one that the rattles were going, I run up to ſee what was the matter, and I ſaw this Nugent run acroſs the ſtreet juſt before me, he was crying ſtop thief, ſtop thief, I ſaw nobody before him, I ran and ſtopped him; ſays I, I believe you are the thief; and he ſaid he was none of them, ſo I brought him up where the mob was, and the man that loſt the watch ſaid immediately, that was one of them.

HUGH O'DONNELL ſworn.

The watchmen ſprung their rattles, I am watchman, and I came to their aſſiſtance, and I ſaw a parcel of people running, and I ran to the firſt man that I ſaw running, which was Mr. Banks, one of the evidences, and I took him, and brought him up to the proſecutor in the ſtreet, and aſked him if that was one of the men, ſays I, Sir, you will excuſe me, I muſt detain you, I did, and the proſecutor had a doubt upon him whether he was the man that ran away or no, and he ſaid no, with that I let him go, and laid hold of one of theſe men that were in cuſtody of the watchmen, when we came to the watch-houſe, Mr. Banks ſaid he apprehended one of the men, I ſpoke to him and replied, he muſt be very wrong to ſay ſo, when he was in my cuſtody at the time they were apprehended, ſo that gave us a ſtrong ſuſpicion that he might be a party concerned himſelf, and the proſecutor gave charge of him on ſuſpicion of his being one of the party, and ſaid, he would not proprofecute him if he had a good character, but his character was dived into, for the profecutor ſaid, that if his character proved amiable, he would not proſecute him; therefore one of the beadles, and ſomebody elſe went, and it proved that he was employed by ſome attorney as his clerk, and therefore he was diſcharged, and he came the next day to the office and appeared againſt them.

Priſoner Nugent. Did not you hear Mr. Walker ſay I was not one of the men?—— While they croſs examined the profecutor in the watch houſe, he was rather diſguiſed in liquor, I did not hear what anſwer the profecutor gave, but the priſoners ſaid they did not know one another; the priſoner Nugent ſaid there you hear he ſays I was not one.

Who ſpoke to him?—Why that young man.

JAMES MAYES ſworn.

I know nothing of the robbery, but I being patrol, I was called in to know if I knew any thing of theſe men, or ever ſaw them in my rounds of a night, becauſe they pretended not to know one another; and I told the juſtice I had ſeen them together a number of times, and another in company with them.

JOHN GALWIN ſworn.

I watch in King-ſtreet, I was crying half after twelve, and the profecutor hallooed out to me, and told me to ſtop them two men, that had robbed him of his watch this minute; he ſaid they croſſed the ſtreet from me, I ran after them and ſounded my rattle, they were ſtopped before we came up.

Are you poſitive ſure theſe are the two men you firſt purſued?—I cannot be ſure.

WILLIAM HOUNSWORTH ſworn.

On Monday night between twelve and one, th profecutor met us juſt at King-ſtreet, and in Holborn he called out watch, watch, I have been robbed by three men, and the priſoners at the bar run up the ſtreet; there were four run; the two priſoners, the profecutor, and Banks: I am very clear to two of the priſoners, and the other I am clear in his dreſs, but I did not altogether take notice of his perſon.

Which is that?——The priſoner Burke, they run very hard up King-ſtreet, and I followed them, and I turned my rattle; the priſoner Burke never was out of my ſight, he was taken in King-ſtreet by Glover, and Glover ſaid that the priſoners had thrown ſome thing away, I looked with my lanthorn, but found nothing; the profecutor came up immediately, and ſaid that was one of the men that robbed him; immediately the other priſoner was brought up, and the profecutor ſaid he was the other man; we ſearched Burke, and found nothing but a tobacco box, and knife, I did not ſearch the other, but I did not hear any thing was found upon him.

PRISONER NUGENT's DEFENCE.

I am a ſeaman, I had been to Wapping for my wages and prize money; I met with a woman in King-ſtreet, I was ſpeaking to her, a man run by me, and the woman deſired me to go about my buſineſs, or I ſhould be taken up, I run, and at the watch-houſe the profector ſaid I was not one of the men.

PRISONER BURKE's DEFENCE.

I was going home to bed, and when I heard the rattles I run leſt I ſhould be taken up diſorderly in the ſtreets.

Jury. Was Walker ſober at the time or not?——He ſeemed to be diſguiſed, and had a doubt, the conſtable aſked him whether he was ſober; he ſaid he had been at his club, but he was ſober enough to know he had been robbed, and who robbed him; he was a little diſguiſed.

GEORGE NUGENT, WILLIAM BURKE, } GUILTY Death.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice ASHURST.

---

732. JOHN MOODY was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting John Grandedier, in a certain field and open place near the King's highway, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniously taking from his perſon and againſt his will, one watch with the inſide caſe made of metal, and the outſide caſe made of tortoiſeſhell, value 50s. two ſeals made of baſe metal, value 2s. one half guinea, value 10s. 6d. and two ſhillings his property.

JOHN GRANDEDIER ſworn.

I was robbed in the rope walks, about half after ten, on the 2d of July, I was going out into Newman-ſtreet, from Queen Ann-ſtreet Eaſt, and the priſoner came up to me with a knife, he preſented the knife to me, and aſked me what money I had to deliver, there were two others with him; I put my hand in my pocket to give him what I had, and one of the other men called me a bloody thief, and told me to deliver all I had, and at the ſame time that man put his hand into my pocket, and took out twelve ſhillings and ſixpence, and my watch, then they all ran away, and I went home.

Did you make no alarm at the time?—No, I did not.

Why did not you give an alarm to the neareſt watchman?—I did not think of it.

Who did you tell you was robbed?——I told Mrs. Brown when I went home, I gave information on Monday at the office in Litchfield-ſtreet; I gave a deſcription to Mrs. Brown, and ſhe gave it to the office; I knew him before by ſight, I knew him at a public houſe that he frequents, the corner of the rope walk.

Did you know his name?—No.

Did you know where he lived?—No, it was about half paſt ten at night, it was a clear night, not moon light.

Did you know him at the time?—Yes, perfectly before he came up to me, I am quite ſure he is the man.

MARY BROWN ſworn.

I live in Queen Ann ſtreet, I only know that the proſecutor went out of an errand for his maſter, and in about ten minutes he returned, and ſaid he was robbed.

What is the proſecutor?——He is my huſband's apprentice, my little boy was with him, but he run away, the proſecutor ſaid he knew the perſon that robbed him, it was a man with lank black hair, and a pale face, or at leaſt I ſo underſtood it, for I was very much frightened for the child, he told me he had been robbed, exactly as he has deſcribed it to your Lordſhip.

What age is your little boy?—Ten years of age.

Do you think your little boy knows the nature of an oath?—I do not think he does, I never heard him ſay any thing more than that he was frightened and ran away; he gave no particular deſcription of the circumſtances or the perſon.

ELLIS ROBERTS ſworn.

On the Monday after the gentleman was robbed, he came and gave information, he ſaid he knew the man very well; I went with him, and I went to the publick houſe; the proſecutor ſaid he was a pale faced young man, dreſſed in a black coat and waiſtcoat, corderoy breeches, and mourning buckles, the proſecutor ſaid immediately that is the man, he was dreſſed exactly as he deſcribed, he ſaid he ſaw him the Sunday after he was robbed, but he had nobody with him; he had nothing in his pockets but a common penknife.

Did he ſay any thing about what coloured hair he had?—I do not remember, I think he ſaid darkiſh hair.

Court to Proſecutor. Is that the knife?—It was a larger than that to my knowledge.

How came you to deſcribe the perſon who robbed you, if you knew him ſo well, to have lank black hair?—It appeared ſo to me then.

But if you knew him by ſight before that, you knew what colour his hair was before?——He has had his hair cut ſince, it was in curls then, it appeared to me to be black, I never ſaw him cloſe, I am quite poſitive this is the man.

When did the little boy go away?——I do not know.

JOSEPH WAKELEY ſworn.

About ten o'clock on Monday morning, I went down with the laſt witneſs, and went went into the ſkittle ground, and ſaw a man that anſwered the deſcription of the proſecutor; he came with me, and ſaid the man in black was the man that robbed him; I went and took him, and Roberts took him in charge.

Priſoner. I am innocent with what I am charged with, I have people to prove where I was at the time the robbery was done, I have two witneſſes.

Court. Let the other witneſs ſtep to the door while this witneſs is examining.

HENRY KINNERSLEY ſworn.

I live in Grays Inn, I have chambers there, I am not of the law, I am a coal merchant, I know the priſoner, he was ſervant to Mrs. Hales, No. 82, Queen Ann-ſtreet when firſt I knew her; I was at Mrs. Hales's drinking tea, and ſpending the evening on which the robbery was, which I believe was the 2d of July.

How came you to recollect it?—When I went again the Wedneſday following, the ſervant told me, good God! poor Jack is taken up for a robbery; and when I went into the parlour Mrs. Hale told me the ſame; I had ſpent the evening the Saturday before, and on that night I believe about ten, I went into the garden or yard; Mrs. Hales ſtables and coach-houſe ſtand in the garden, but no communication to it; I ſaw a light through that window that looks into the garden, I was a good deal alarmed thinking it might be fire or thieves, and I knew that young Mr. Hale and the foot boy were below ſomewhere; I called Mrs. Hale out, ſays I, have you any body in the ſtable, no, ſays ſhe; I immediately went round, and took the preſent foot boy with me, the watch was then going his rounds; I ſtopped and made the boy get a light from a woman in the Mews, and I ſtill ſaw the light in Mrs. Hale's premiſes, all at once it was put out; the watchman was then going ten: I took the key and opened the door, and who ſhould preſent himſelf in black, but the priſoner at the bar, ſays I, good God! Jack, what do you do here, he rather ſeemed to heſitate, I inſiſted on knowing what he did there, he ſaid he was looking for a dog, I told him it was a very improper hour to look for a dog with a light, I believe by this time the watch was going half after ten; the priſoner then came out, and went to a cottage over the way in the Mews, but whether he went in there I do not know; I came back to let Mrs. Hale know, and ſhe then told me that her ſon had juſt told her, he had given him leave to ſleep in the ſtable, in the coachman's room, to ſave a lodging while he was out of place, but that it was unknown to her before.

How old is Mrs. Hales ſon?—Between fifteen and ſixteen, I believe; upon that ſhe was very uneaſy, but I took the watchman and went and examined very carefully, and found all very ſafe; I ſaw no more of the priſoner after he went out to go to the Mews, but that very evening I called there, I ſaid I will croſs the rope walks in going over two men attacked me, and made a puſh at me, and bid me ſtop, and one of them was ſo like the priſoner, that had the priſoner been at liberty, I could poſitively have ſworn to him.

What was that young man dreſſed in?—I do not know, it was a very dark night, he was in a dark dreſs, the man who ſtopped me appeared to have prodigious black hair, I obſerved he was a very black man, but I cannot ſwear to his hair.

Was this young man's hair when you firſt knew him lank or curled?—I cannot ſay, I did not take any notice, he uſed ſometimes to wear his hair curled when he was with Mrs. Hale, but it was oftener lank then curled.

Jury. How far may it be from this ſtable, to the place where this gentleman ſaid he was robbed?——I imagine it is near four hundred yards, you are obliged to come up Queen Ann-ſtreet, and down Ogle Court, and down the rope walk.

Mrs. Brown. Mrs. Hales lives three doors below me.

What clothes was the man dreſſed in when he ſtopped you on the Wedneſday?—no I believe he was in black, I ſprung from him, and gave him his own ſalutation back again, again, which was not a very gentleman-like one, there were two men.

MARY HALE sworn.

The prisoner lived with me and my son four years, and behaved exceedingly well, and had my son been living, he would have appeared in his defence, but he is dead; he looked after the horses, he laid in the house on the Saturday night before he was taken up; he laid in our stables that particular evening, my youngest son saw him about eight o'clock.

Do you remember when he was taken up?—I heard of it about three or four days after he was taken up; the robbery was on the Saturday, and he was not taken up till the Tuesday.

When did you hear he was taken up?——Upon my word, I cannot say, it was two or three days after, I fancy it might be about Wednesday or Thursday, a gentleman came and told me of it, a coach-maker that does our business came and asked me about it, I did not know that he laid in the coach-house.

Was it with your knowledge that he lay in your stable?—No, Sir.

When did you first know it?——That very night, that was on the Saturday, a gentleman that supped at our house went in the garden, and said, there is a light in your coach-house, and he came back, and said, there is Jack there; and then my son said, mother, he lays there. I have frequently entrusted the prisoner with money and drafts. That gentleman was Mr. Kinnersley; it was about half an hour past ten that this happened.

Court to Mrs. Brown. Do you recollect about what time it was that your apprentice was out?—He was not out above ten minutes, I believe it was not above ten minutes under or over half past ten, I cannot be more particular.

Jury to Prosecutor: Was there more than one in black, at the time of the robbery?—No there was not, they had short jackets on, I think one was a butcher.

Have you any means of fixing what o'clock it was when this happened to you?—It was about half after ten, I cannot fix it more near.

How long has the prosecutor lived with you?—Two years.

Do you recollect the person of the prisoner, seeing him at any time as a neighbour?——I cannot say I do.

Court to Prosecutor. Did you know where Mrs. Hales lived?—No, Sir, not then.

Where did you see the prisoner?—At the public house, it was after he had left his place.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

731. WILLIAM MASON was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 29th day of August, one iron saw, called a turning saw, value 6d. and one other saw, value 2s. the property of Henry Clark.

——— HALL sworn.

About the 29th of August last, I saw the prisoner take up two saws, and put them under his coat, which I thought belonged to some of the workmen, I called to them, and asked the prisoner how he came by them saws, he said he found them outside of the building.

(The saws produced and deposed to.)

SAMUEL CLARKSON sworn.

I know this saw to be mine by being broke and filed round at the point.

HENRY CLARK sworn.

Do you know that saw?——Yes, my name is upon it.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I found the saws outside the building, two gentlemen see me pick them up.

GUILTY.

Whipped, and taken to the Lord Mayor to be passed to Liverpool.

Tried by the first London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

732. JOHN

732. JOHN HARRIS was indicted for feloniously ſtealing, on the 12th day of September, one linen handkerchief, value 12d. the property of William Dalton.

WILLIAM DALTON ſworn.

On that day, I was going up Ludgate-hill, I ſtood looking at the print-ſhop, preſently I felt ſomebody at my pocket, I turned round and took the priſoner directly with my handkerchief upon him, and charged the conſtable with him.

——— WARREN ſworn.

I am a conſtable, I only produce the handkerchief.

(The handkerchief depoſed to.)

Court to Proſecutor. Are you ſure that is your handkerchief?——I am.

GUILTY,

To be twice whipped, and impriſoned one month in Newgate.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

733. JOHN HAYES was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 15th day of July laſt, ſixteen yards of printed callico, value 3l. the property of Mathew Atkinſon privily in his ſhop.

MATTHEW ATKINSON ſworn.

I live in Newgate-ſtreet; on Friday the 15th of July, the priſoner came into my ſhop between ſeven and eight in the evening, and enquired for a black ſilk handkerchief, the ſhop was rather crouded with cuſtomers, and I told my ſervant to ſhew him ſome, but not to ſhew them with other goods, the priſoner left ſixpence earneſt on one of the handkerchiefs, and he got to the door and out of the ſhop; he was followed and brought back, and the piece of printed callico which is produced, I ſaw drop down from him; he had nothing to ſay in his defence, he was very much frightened, the callico is mine, it is here, I delivered the property to the conſtable, John Proctor.

JOHN PROCTOR ſworn.

I produce this piece of callico, which has been in my poſſeſſion ever ſince.

(Depoſed to, having the ſhop mark.)

Court. What may be the value of it?——Three pounds.

Do you mean that is the ſelling price?——The coſt price, worth it at any time, at any public ſale.

JOHN PANTING ſworn.

I am ſhopman to the proſecutor, the priſoner at the bar came into Mr. Atkinſon's ſhop, July the 15th, in the duſk of the evening, he deſired to look at ſome black ſilk handkerchiefs, he went to the other end of the ſhop, and he agreed for a handkerchief, he left me ſixpence, and was to call again, he walked down the ſhop, I walked behind him, and ſomething under his coat appeared rather bulkey, I went to Mr. Atkinſon, and mentioned it to him I went after the priſoner, I purſued him about fifteen yards, and brought him back, and deſired him to enter the ſhop, and as ſoon as he came back, the piece of print dropped from under his coat in the ſhop, as ſoon as he entered.

Where had it laid before he took it?——I cannot ſay, we were very buſy that day.

Did you ſee him take it at all?——No, not at all, I had no ſuſpicion of him till I ſaw it bulkey under his coat.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I went to buy a black handkerchief, I ſaid, I would call in about ten minutes, I was going out, and the gentleman came and patted me over the ſhoulder, then he aſked me for the money for the handkerchief, I ſaw a friend that gave me three ſhillings, and I paid him for the handkerchief; I did not think my trial would have come on, I have nobody to my character.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

734. GEORGE REYNOLDS (aged fourteen) was indicted for feloniously ſtealing, on the 29th day of July, twelve men's black hats, value 6l. the property of James Hardy and Thomas Bland, priſily in their ſhop.

The witneſſes examined apart at the deſire of the priſoner.

JAMES HARDY ſworn.

My partner is Thomas Bland.

Court. What kind of goods do you deal in?——Hats, on Friday the 29th of July, while my partner and I were ſettling our accounts, the time I believe to be about half paſt nine in the evening, when I happened to leave the ſhop, and went into the compting-houſe, and in about three minutes I heard a moſt monſtrous noiſe in the ſhop I went firſt to ſee the occaſion of it, and found the priſoner at the bar, with two or three other people, who ſaid, they had ſeen him go out of the ſhop with ſuch and ſuch property, and they believed it to be mine, being goods that had been packed up for an order, I knew them immediately, they were my property, they were a dozen of hats of the value of ſix pounds, the priſoner was then ſecured, and in the ſhop; I do not know who found the goods upon him, I know nothing more.

GABRIEL JOHNSON ſworn.

On the 29th of laſt July, about half after nine, or rather better, I was going up Cornhill, and I ſaw the priſoner ſtand at Mr. Hardy's door, I thought he was a lad belonging to the ſhop, till I ſaw two others about a yard diſtance come up, and ſpeak to the priſoner, then that gave me a ſuſpicion it was thieves, and I went acroſs the way, and ſtood behind a hackney coach, and in about a minute or two I ſaw the priſoner ſtop himſelf, and go in at the door.

Court. What occaſion had he to ſtop to go in at the door?—I do not know that, my lord; the other men paraded backwards and forwards the mean while; he was in the ſhop, as near as I can gueſs, about two minutes, and I ſaw him come out with two parcels under each arm, two bundles of hats, then he croſſed over the way, and the other men followed him, the other two were men grown, they were a great deal taller than him, as ſoon as he had croſſed over, I went and laid hold of him directly with the property upon him; as ſoon as I laid hold of him, he cried out Shimerah! Shimerah! as loud as he could, which I underſtood to be his companions, he ſtruggled to get from me, and my foot ſlipped, and I cried out ſtop thief, for fear the others ſhould come up to take the goods away, and a waterman belonging to the coaches came up, and laid hold of him, and picked up the things, and gave them to me; we took him into Mr. Hardy's houſe, and he was committed, the other two made off.

You are ſure the things that were given to you were the ſame he had under his arm?—Yes, they were never out of my ſight.

CHARLES SILK ſworn.

I produce ſome hats, I had them at the upper end of Cornhill; I am beadle of the ward and conſtable likewiſe; I was ſent for about half paſt nine, I had the hats in my cuſtody, and I gave them to Mr. Hardy, and he gave me a charge to take the priſoner to the Poultry Compter; the hats were delivered to me by Mr. Hardy, at the ſhop door, they were ſealed up at Mr. Hardy's, and taken into Mr. Hardy's, and put into a particular room.

Court to Johnſon. Are theſe hats the ſame hats you took with the priſoner?—Yes.

BENJAMIN SMITH ſworn.

I am waterman at Cornhill, about a quarter before ten this gentleman called out ſtop thief, by which means the young lad came along with four bundles of hats, I caught hold of him, he dropped them, I picked them up, and delivered them to Johnſon when I ſtopped him, ſays he, I am no thief and he called out Chauvir, Chauvir.

Court to Hardy. Look at theſe hats, are theſe the hats that were brought back by Johnſon, when the priſoner was brought

—The

—They are my property, they are my work.

When you went into the compting-house who did you leave in the shop?——Nobody, I had discharged the servants, and Mr. Bland and myself were settling our cash accounts, and was carrying it forwards.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was walking along that night, there was a parcel of men crossing the way to the coach stand, they chucked a parcel of hats down under my legs, and I stooped and picked them up and looked at them, and that man came and catched hold of me, my friends are gone, and my mother did not think I should be tried to day; my mother lives in Whitechapel, and is a chair woman, I live with my uncle at Wapping.

Jury to Johnson. What are you?——A smith, I work in Bagnio-court, Newgate-street, with Mr. Hill, the boy's mother said he would discover who the two persons were that were with the boy.

You happened to be going by that way?——Yes, I was.

Was that your way home?—No, Sir.

Out at work somewhere that way?——No, Sir, I sometimes take a walk in the evening after I have done my work.

GUILTY, Death.

He was humbly recommended to mercy by the Jury.

Court to Jury. Gentlemen, there is one thing that is necessary for me to state to you, that this is not the first, second, third, or fourth time that this boy has been here.

Tried by the first London Jury before Mr. Justice ASHURST.

---

735. WILLIAM HOPPER was indicted for burglariously and feloniously breaking and entering the dwelling house of John Hutchinson, Esq; about the hour of one in the night, on the 10th of September, and burglariously stealing therein one iron padlock, value 2d. his property.

JOHN HUTCHINSON Esq; sworn.

I have a house in Duke-street, on Saturday night last my house was broke open; about one in the morning my servant alarmed me, by telling me the watchman had taken a thief, and desired me to come down immediately; I come down, and the watchman had custody of the prisoner, who said he had taken the padlock from the outer door, and had wrenched the shutter into another place; as to my own knowledge, I can only say that this padlock was gone; the door was locked, and the shutter was fast, and the outer door the night before at eleven o'clock; it is a place that nobody could go into but myself; he broke through one place, which is through a back yard, called Mason's yard, and that communicates to the place where my property is; there was a door that is broke and the window shutter between that part and the other, and he was in, all but his feet, when the watchman took him; the door was broke, the padlock was taken off it, and the padlock was found in his possession, he took off the padlock, and was got in the first room, and was getting into the second room when he was taken; he got into the second room by wrenching the shutter, and breaking it from the hinges.

WILLIAM FULLWELL sworn.

I know the prisoner, and I know the prosecutor's house; I remember the prisoner working for my master at daily work, plaistering, and a little painting, or any thing he required; that morning I was alarmed with the cry of thieves, by the watchmen, and went down, and took charge of the prisoner, and the watchman gave me a padlock that he had taken from the pirisoner.

—— HARWOOD sworn.

This padlock I found upon the prisoner, on Sunday morning about one, as I was crying the hour in Mason's-yard, I catched him, and searched him, but no key was to

to be found; the prisoner was creeping in upon his belly, all but his ancles; I was crying the hour down Duke-street, and through Mason's-yard, I saw the prisoner in Mr. Hutchinson's house.

Was he trying to get in at any other door?——That I cannot say, but the hinges were broke, where he was trying to get in, it was a room that contained property, I seized him by the feet, and dragged him out, and then I collared him, and went and alarmed the prosecutor.

Was that padlock on the outside of the door?——Yes, I saw it hang upon the staple at twelve.

Did you know it was locked at that time?—Yes.

Did you try it?—I did, and it was fast then, and at one, when I was calling my round, I found the door open, and the man upon his belly.

Court to Prosecutor. Have you the key of the padlock?——Yes, I have it, but it is at home.

Can you swear to the padlock?——Yes, I am sure it is the padlock that was on my outer door, and I believe my man knows it to be so.

Have you any means of saying that that padlock was fast on the night of the robbery?—I am sure it was in the day, about four to the best of my knowledge.

Fudwell. I remember it being fast in the day, but I cannot say how it was at night.

Had you unfastened it?—No.

Court to Hutchinson. Had you ever unfastened it at any time after, the day you locked the door?—I had not.

Did you fasten it with the key?—I locked it with the key, I left it at home.

About four you say?—I cannot say.

Fudwell. It was about three or four.

Court to Hutchinson. You was saying that the prisoner was all but his ancles in the outer room?——Yes.

By what means could he get into the other room, all but his ancles?——There was a kind of a bit of shutter, and he dragged that in; I cannot explain what the fastening was, it was a kind of a shed, where he was endeavouring to get into the parlour.

Prosecutor. This was a shutter that I fastened at the bottom with two butt hinges on the outside, the top was fastened with a pulley to the rope on the inside, so that nobody can get in at it; and he had forced the bottom of the shutter from the hinge that remained, and part of the shutter, had got that down, and was getting into the back house where my property principally is.

Court. Gentlemen of the Jury, if you are not satisfied of this offence being fully compleat, as it is a capital offence, to be sure it is your province to judge of the case, and as the account that has been given is a very puzzling and perplexing one, you may acquit the prisoner.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Justice ASHURST.

The next Part will be published in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commission of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the City of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middlesex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wednesday the 14th of SEPTEMBER, 1785, and the following Days;

Being the SEVENTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND.

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER VII. PART II.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noster Row.

MDCCLXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

736. CHARLES COOPER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 15th day of Auguſt laſt, one linen handkerchief, value 2s. the property of Edward Trelawney.

EDWARD TRELAWNEY ſworn.

On Monday the 15th of Auguſt laſt, going along Whitechapel, at the end of Petticoat-lane, I felt my handkerchief go from my pocket, I turned round to my left, and ſaw a ſuſpicious perſon run to the head of the horſes of a coach ſtanding there, then to the ſide of the coach, I ſaw him throw down the handkerchief, I went round and ſeized him by the collar, and endeavoured to get a conſtable, but could not then; I then took him into a ſhop, and ſent for a conſtable, and gave charge of him.

(The handkerchief produced and depoſed to.)

GUILTY.

(To.)

To be twice whipped, and impriſoned one month in Newgate.

Tried by the London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

737. WILLIAM BARNES and RICHARD SILVESTER, otherwiſe JACK the Gardener, were indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Edward Daniel on the King's highway, on the 11th of Auguſt laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon and againſt his will, one guinea, value 1l. 1s. ſix copper halfpence value 3d. and one ſhilling his property.

EDWARD DANIEL ſworn.

On the 11th of Auguſt, between ſeven and eight in the evening, about the four mile ſtone, on the Edgeware-road, I was robbed in a poſt-chaiſe, Mr. Wallis was with me, I was coming from Watford, on coming to the four mile ſtone, I obſerved three men coming along the foot path, and when they came oppoſite the mare, two of them ſtruck right to the mare's head, and the other jumped right into the chaiſe, the laid hold of the mare, and I gave the man a couple of ſtrokes, I thought to have diſengaged her from them, but the other then jumped into the chaiſe, gave me a ſtroke over my arm which hurt me very much, I think he ſtruck me with a cutlaſs, I ſaw cutlaſs afterwards.

Was it drawn or in a ſcabbard?—When I ſaw

I ſaw it, it was not in the ſcabbard; they aſked me for my property, I told them they ſhould have it; I gave him a ſhilling, and he aſked me if that was all, I told him I thought it was enough, ſays he, I muſt have more; he then rummaged one pocket, and found nothing, then he put his hand on the outſide of the other, and took out a guinea; that was the priſoner Silveſter; he then took three pennyworth of half-pence out of my waiſtcoat pocket, and left one penny, and then rummaged every pocket I had, and finding there was no more, he had nothing further to ſay to me; he left me, and came to the other ſide where my friend was that the other man was robbing, who is not taken, and they took four plates that my friend had got in a little baſket, and then they went away.

How long might they ſtay with you altogether?—I ſuppoſe it might be five minutes, I diſcerned the men before they came to the chaiſe.

Had you leiſure to obſerve the men ſufficiently to know who they were?—Quite ſo.

Do you know which they were?—Yes, I am convinced theſe men are the men, I picked theſe men out of fourteen priſoners.

Were they dreſſed as they are now?—Barnes was in a brown coat, and the other was in a drab coat; the one that is not taken put a handkerchief into his mouth, and I am not clear whether Silveſter did or not, but I think not.

Can you recollect which of them was in the chaiſe with you?—Silveſter was in the chaiſe.

When were they taken up?—The next day, I believe one of them was taken up in Wardour-ſtreet, in London, they went acroſs the fields towards Hampſtead as we underſtood.

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Counſel. Did you ever ſee either of their perſons at all?—No, Sir.

You was conſiderably ſurprized?—No, Sir, I was not, I never met any thing with ſo much reſolution; I paid my attention to the priſoner, I ſaw his face as clear as I ſee yours.

JOHN WALLIS ſworn.

I was with Mr. Daniel in the chaiſe, I have heard the account he has given of the robbery, it was exactly as he has told it.

Then are you equally poſitive with him as to the two men?—No, I do not ſwear to the men, but I ſwear to the key that they took from me.

Was it a light night?—It was ſo light that I ſaw them forty yards before they came to us, but had not the leaſt apprehenſion of their ſtopping us.

JOHN DIXON ſworn.

I apprehended Silveſter, I found the key of a piſtol in his pocket, with ſome powder, I took him up on the 12th of Auguſt between three and four o'clock in the afternoon in Wardour-ſtreet, I found a guinea upon him, but Mr. Daniel could not ſwear to it.

WILLIAM PICKERING ſworn.

I know no further than what Mr. Dixon has related, I was with him, Barnes was taken the ſame evening, he was loitering about the ſtreet.

Mr. Peatt. What is the reward you are to receive on the conviction of theſe perſons?—I cannot pretend to ſay.

Did you ſuggeſt any thing to the proſecutor, or ſay any thing, or point out the parties?—No, I did not, he went in by his own accord, I did nothing by way of pointing the party out.

Proſecutor Daniel. I hope the gentleman does not impute any thing to me, I never will receive any thing, nor expect any thing.

Priſoner Silveſter. Pleaſe your Lordſhip Mr. Blacketer pointed me out to that gentleman.

PRISONER BARNES's DEFENCE.

I was going along Litchfield-ſtreet, and I went to the Cock, and I was there taken by two of Sir Robert Taylor's men, in about four or five days I was brought up again, and ſworn to for a footpad robbery.

Court to Daniel. I aſk you juſt for the ſatisfaction of the Jury, had you been drinking, drinking, or was you perfectly ſober?—No, my Lord, I was perfectly ſober.

WILLIAM BARNES, RICHARD SILVESTER, } GUILTY, Death.

Proſecutor. My Lord, from the character I have had of Barnes, till within theſe three months, I wiſh to recommend him to mercy, he has lived in one of the firſt families in the kingdom, which is Lord Salisbury's, and till within theſe three months has behaved very well: I hope your Lordſhip will recommend him to mercy as a young offender.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

738. JAMES BELTON was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting William Fletcher in a certain field and open place, near the King's highway, on the 23d of June laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon, and againſt his will, ſix ſhillings in monies numbered, his monies.

WILLIAM FLETCHER ſworn.

I am a gardener, I live at Hampſtead; I was robbed on the 23d of June, rather paſt nine in the evening, I was going home on foot, I was alone, I was ſtopped going down the other ſide of Primroſe-hill, upon the declivity of the hill, going towards Hampſtead, by the priſoner.

Did you know him before?——No.

Did you ſee him before he ſtopped you?——Yes, about 20 yards from me, coming towards me, he and another.

What paſſed when he ſtopped you?——Juſt before he came to me I ſaw ſomething glitter from under his coat, which was a piſtol, he put it to my breaſt, but not quite cloſe, and ſaid, damn you, your money, and your watch; I ſaid, I have no watch, and I had but a little money, and they ſhould have it, but not to uſe me ill; then they aſked me how much I had, I ſaid between ſix and ſeven ſhillings, and I put my hand in my pocket and gave it him, and he put his other hand to look it over, then he aſked me if I had no more, I ſaid I had not, and the other man who was in ſoldier's clothes ſaid, look whether he has got a watch or not, and I ſaid I had not, they might ſearch me, and before that he ſaid paſs, and then as he was going away he turned about, he ſays, there are two more men in the hollow, but if they ſtop you, you ſay bob; the priſoner was taken up the 3d of July; it was a very fine clear night.

Was it dark?——No, far from being dark.

Did you take particular notice of the countenance of the men?—Exceedingly of this man, but of the other I did not, becauſe of the other man I had not an opportunity, this man held the piſtol to my breaſt, the other man went round me.

Are you ſure that is the man?——I am very poſitive of it.

Did his figure ſtrike you at the time?—Yes, very much.

If you had deſcribed him now when you went home, how did you deſcribe him?—I deſcribed his viſage, a black ſwarthy man, about five feet ten inches, he was dreſſed in a lightiſh coat and red waiſtcoat, but I could not diſtinguiſh what cloth it was, as to his lower part I could not ſee, he had nothing over his face, his hat was flapped.

When you ſaw him ten days after was you ſure of him at that time?——Yes, I was very poſitive of it, as he accoſted me in a very odd manner.

How ſo?——On the 3d of July, as I was going home, I had a great coat on my arm, and a large bundle in my hand, I met him this ſide of the Bunch of Grapes, by Brompton road; there are new buildings there juſt began, I was looking over my hand to the buildings, and he ſaid good cheer, old man! and at the ſame time ſaid, damn your blood, do not be ſulkey.

Had you ſaid any thing to him?——His voice ſtruck me, and I ſtood ſtill, but he did did not, I says do you know me? and he says, damn you, I know you, and the next time I meet you, I'll do for you; he said I will meet you, and kept on going, and uttered many more oaths that I did not hear diſtinctly, but I never heard any oaths pronounced with ſuch vengeance; I ran home and was quite aſtoniſhed at it, and there was a trembling came upon me.

I thought you lived at Hamſtead?——Yes, but I came to Brompton to ſee my wife, I went and told my wife I had ſeen the man that robbed me; I did not ſtay with my wife a quarter of a minute, then I met two men, and I aſked them to aſſiſt me, and they ſaid they did not like to do ſuch a thing; then I met with a good ſtout lad, I ſent him for a conſtable and bid them follow me; I ſaw the priſoner go into the two brewers, and there I followed him, and the conſtable came in juſt after.

The night you was robbed going towards Hampſtead, was you perfectly ſober?——Yes, Sir, I had only part of a pint of beer.

You never ſaw the man before?——Not to my knowledge; I was not ſo much frightened at the time, only afterwards his telling me there were two men to meet me frightened me, I am clear he is the man.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. Now Mr. Fletcher, you are a gardener at Hampſtead?——Yes.

How far may that be from Knightſbridge?——I ſuppoſe it does not exceed ſix miles.

Knightſbridge is not the road to Hampſtead from London?——I did not go by Knightſbridge.

Is Knightſbridge in the road to Hampſtead from London?——No, certainly not.

Now the firſt thing that drew your attention to this man on the 3d of July, was his ſpeaking to you?——Yes, Sir.

Otherwiſe you would not have ſeen him?——No, I did not ſee him till he ſpoke.

That put you into a ſad trembling, that ſame ſwearing bout frightened you dreadfully, even almoſt out of your ſenſes?——It did.

But when you had two ruffians accoſting you, and one with a piſtol, you was not afraid?——I thought by my ſaying no reſiſtance they would not uſe violence.

Court. Was you or was you not afraid?——I certainly was a little, but not ſo much.

Did you tell this ſtory in Bow-ſtreet?——I did.

They took down what you ſaid there, did they not?——They did not take down all.

Did they take down any thing about Bob?——Yes.

Then it is not here, not a word now ſee about Bob? (looking at the examination.)——I am very clear there was.

Who laid hold of this man?——The beadle is here.

Do not you know that the beadle left him at liberty till the next day?——I do not know that.

Have you never heard that from the beadle?——No.

Have you enquired who this man is that is at the bar?——No, no farther than the account that he gave of himſelf.

Have you ſearched his lodgings?——No; he had a red waiſtcoat on, and his voice ſtruck me firſt.

What day of the week was you robbed on?——Thurſday, it was a very light night, the moon was at the full the day before.

Now recollect whether the moon roſe earlier than eleven that night?——Yes.

You will ſwear that it was up, and ſhining at the full?——Yes.

You never ſaw this man before?——Not to my knowledge.

What ſhould you think about it if I was to call you ſix people to prove he was in another place?——I could not believe it.

I believe theſe twelve gentlemen will, and that will be a better thing.

——— VAUGHAN ſworn.

On Sunday morning this man came to the two brewers at Knightſbridge, and charged the landlord to take up the priſoner, whom I knew very well, he ſaid I have nothing to do with prisoners; what is the matter, says he, he has robbed me? then says he, you must get a constable, says he, take hold of that man; what man says I, what Belton? there the man stands, I know him very well, I laid hold of him, and we went before Mr. Justice Gilbert, the same day, and he was committed, then Mr. Belton said, I should be glad not to go to prison, let me lay at the public house, or at the constable's house; says Mr. Gilbert, I have committed you, but if the constable and you can agree, I have no objection, so we went and had a pot of beer, and I took him home to my own house, and kept him all night, and the next morning I took him before Sir Sampson Wright; I have known Mr. Belton for two years, he is a shoemaker at Knightsbridge, he lived along with Mr. Silvester a shoemaker.

Court. What Silvester is that?

Mr. Garrow. He is here my Lord, it is not the man that was tried to day, we all know there are good men of that name, as well as bad.

Mr. Garrow to Vaughan. I see you was astonished when the man made a charge against Belton?—I said which is the man, there were but two sitting in the box, that was him and his man.

Was the prisoner an honest hard working man?—I knew his wife.

RICHARD ANGEL sworn.

I am a shoemaker, I worked for the prisoner, on the 23d of June he was at work from the hour of seven in the morning, till eight at night, we worked together at the shop in Curzon-street, May Fair; Lord Aylesbury's people were going out of town, and they asked us to spend the evening with them, and we were there till past eleven, the names of these servants are James and John; I am sure that was the day, I do not recollect the day of the week, my master was taken up on the 3d of July, on Sunday morning; he never was out of his work for six months, but to the leather cutters and back again.

Court. What fixes this 23d of June in your mind?—Because when my master was taken up, he said it was last Thursday se'nnight that he was robbed, he said he had a good mind to swear to me, he said he could not, but if I had soldiers clothes on he would swear to me.

Where does Lord Aylesbury live?—In Seymour Place, May Fair.

—Do you work for Lord Aylesbury's servant's?——Yes, in the mending way.

JAMES HOLT sworn.

I was servant in June to my Lord Aylesbury, I am so still, I am his coachman; I know the prisoner, on the 23d of June, he was at my Lord Aylesbury's stables, with me and my fellow servant, a little before nine in the evening, and staid till past eleven, he came on purpose to wish us a good journey, we were packing up to go out of town, I am sure it was the 23d of June, because it was the evening before we went out of town, I am very sure of that upon my oath.

Was Angel with him?—Yes.

Was John Boston there?—He was.

Is Lord Aylesbury in town?—No.

JOHN BOSTON sworn.

I lived in my Lord's service, on the 23d of June, the prisoner was at my Lord's stables from nine till a little after eleven, we were going out of town the very next day, I am sure it was the night before we went out of town, I am likewise sure it was from nine to eleven; Angel was with him, I have known him for three quarters of a year, he works just by our stables, I have seen him every day, he is a hard working honest man as ever I knew.

JOHN SILVESTER sworn.

I am a cordwainer, I live at Jamaica wharf, Christ Church, I have known the prisoner two years and upwards, he is a cordwainer, he has the best of character for honesty, sobriety, and industry.

Was he a man that worked at his bu[si]

ness, or was he an idle good for nothing fellow?——I never knew him to lose one day while he worked for me.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

731. AMOS ROWSEL was indicted for burglariously and feloniously breaking and entering the dwelling house of Richard Spicer, about the hour of one in the night, on the 27th day of June last, and burglariously stealing therein, one silver watch, value 40s. one gold seal, value 2s. one base metal key, value 2d. two iron keys, value 6d. two pounds weight of tea, value 2s. one handkerchief, value 6d. one hundred and twenty four copper halfpence, value 7s. 4d. and thirty shillings in monies numbered, his property.

RICHARD SPICER sworn.

I live at Endfield, on the 28th of June last, about one in the morning, I heard a noise in my house, I got out of my bed, and a man was undoing my bureau, at my bed's feet, and I seized him directly, and we had a scuffle together, and he rushed away from me, and ran down the yard.

Had you any light in the room?——No light.

How did you see him then?—I followed him, see him I could not, I did perceive him, but not to make any thing at all of him, we had a scuffle, he run out of doors, and I after him, and caught him at the bottom of the yard, and there we had a long scuffle, he was rather the best hand in getting over the pales, and I tore the skirt of his coat off, which is here; after the coat began to tear, he swore he would kill me, and he turned himself short about, and I perceived his features, and I knew him; he was on the other side of pales in a ditch, and he looked up at me, then I knew him perfectly well, he used to use my shop, I keep a chandler's shop; when the coat tore he got away, he was taken I believe the Sunday following; I found this pound of tea without the door, tied up in a handkerchief, and on that side of the coat which I pulled off, were between seven and eight shillings in halfpence, I found nothing else upon him, but I lost my watch, and about forty shillings in silver, the silver was in the next till to the halfpence, and my watch was in my pocket, and the key of my bureau; in my breeches pocket, which lay in a chair by my bed side; I never found my watch again.

How did this man get into your house?——He got in at the window, and undid the door, he took a pane of glass out, and took off the casement; the house was all fast when I went to bed, I am always the last up, I went to bed about ten, I saw all the doors and windows fast myself.

What family have you in the house?—None but a little girl fourteen years old; two quarries of glass were taken out first, but there was a shutter prevented him there, and then he came round backwards; I am sure to the man, quite thoroughly satisfied it is the man; it was not moon light, but bright star light.

Can you undertake to say positively that this was the man, when he was on one side of the pales, and you on the other?——I had the fuller view of him.

Had you lost any halfpence?—Between seven and eight shillings worth.

Did you find the silver?——No.

Was the till locked?——Yes.

Was it broke open?——He had got the key, that key was laid between two drawers upon the right hand behind.

JAMES SHAKESHAFT sworn.

On Tuesday the 28th of June, Mr. Spicer came and gave information that he had had his house broke open, and gave me a description of the person that had broke it open, and I received some private information where I could meet with him, and on the Sunday morning I saw the prisoner coming through the turnpike at Stamford Hill, I waited till he came to cross the Green, to come to the house where I was informed; I seized him, he struggled, and my brother officer came up, and we secured him, him, and then took him to Newington, and ſearched him, and upon him I found theſe two keys, which Mr. Spicer has ſworn to be his; I went down laſt Sunday morning to Mr. Spicer's houſe, and this key opened his bureau, and this key the till; I took this purſe, and eleven ſhillings in ſilver, and ſome halfpence, and ſome dice upon him; I put the priſoner in a parlour amongſt a many more people, and Mr. Spicer came and picked him out directly.

(The keys depoſed to by the Proſecutor, having had the key of the bureau theſe twenty years, and being a very remarkable one.)

HENRY BAMFORD ſworn.

I was preſent when Shakeſhaft took the priſoner, I ſaw the keys taken from him.

JOHN CARTER ſworn.

I know the priſoner was from his lodgings that night, he was my lodger, he uſed to come in at nine or ten o'clock he never came in any more.

WILLIAM DOWN ſworn.

I know no more, than the priſoner was abſent from his lodging that night, I only knew that, and to the beſt of my knowledge, that is part of the coat, that he wore at the time he laid with me in one bed, he ſet up in the bed, and I along ſide of him in the bed, when I ſaw him, I ſaid, that is the man that lay with me at Carter's in one bed.

WILLIAM HAYES ſworn.

I am a watchman at Tottenham, on the 28th of June, as I cried the hour of three the priſoner came by me in his ſhirt ſleeves, he was without a coat and a white waiſtcoat, and Mr. Spicer came up in about half an hour afterwards, and aſked if he was gone by, he aſked me about him whether I had ſeen ſuch a man go paſt.

Priſoner. It is well known that I never had any other waiſtcoat than this, ſince in the country I have been.

Court to Proſecutor. Were the halfpence you found in his pocket, looſe?——Yes, they were looſe in the till.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

740. ALEXANDER ELDER was indicted for burglariouſly and felonioufly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Mary Warren, ſpinſter, on the 19th of Auguſt laſt, about the hour of nine in the night, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, one linen ſopha cover, value 4s. three linen waiſtcoats, value 30s. nine linen ſhirts, value 4l. two linen table cloths, value 10s. two linen window curtains, value 6l. five linen chair covers, value 40s. one pair of nankeen breeches, value 10s. and one cotſtocking, value 2s. the property of John Hankin.

(The witneſſes examined apart, at the requeſt of the Priſoner.)

SARAH HANKIN ſworn.

About nine or a few minutes after, went out and locked my room door, I a lodger, I am a married woman, I liv in Tottenham ſtreet; I had been goo about ten minutes, when I returned I hear a noiſe in the room, there were other peo ple in the houſe, it is let out in tene ments, I have the firſt floor.

Who is Mary Warren?—She rents th ground floor, ſhe has nothing to do wit the firſt floor, a perſon ſaid ſhe thoug there was ſomebody in my room; we bot came out into the paſſage, and ſhe calle out John, but nobody anſwered, and the ſhe went half way up ſtairs and met th priſoner with a bag of linen, ſhe called t to ſtop him, and I caught him by his co I held him with one hand, and my child the other, till he got into the ſtreet, a there he got from me; he was taken in few minutes after, and brought back, wh he was brought back, there was found upon him one ſopha cover, three ſhirts, two waiſtcoats, and one ſtocking; when one of the witneſſes pulled the things out of his pocket, he threw ſome that way, and ſaid, here Madam, here is your things; I heard him ſay nothing elſe in my apartment.

MARY WARREN ſworn.

The priſoner came to the houſe, I heard a noiſe up ſtairs as if ſomething fell, I went to go up ſtairs, and I heard a door locked, and a key taken out, ſo I ſaid I will ſee who it is, if it is the devil; I ſaw a man on the ſtairs, he ſaid he had been to ſee an acquaintance of his in the garret, and he put down the bag on the ſtairs from his ſhoulders, I ſaid he was a thief; I did not examine the bag, there were ſopha covers, chair covers, window curtains, and ſhirts, and waiſtcoats, and a number of different things belonging to Mr. Hankin.

CHARLES HOVENS ſworn.

On the 19th of Auguſt, I was ſtanding at my ſtable-door between nine and ten at night, and I heard a cry of ſtop thief, I ran into the mews, and I ſaw the priſoner run out of the rope-walk, and I took him with theſe things upon him; I took him back to Mr. Hankin, I ſaw the things taken from him, I marked them again myſelf, I ſhould know the mark again.

(The things produced that were found on the priſoner.)

Court to Hovens. Are theſe the things you found on the priſoner?——Yes.

Court to Mrs. Hankin. Are theſe things your property?——They are linen I had to waſh, I am ſure of them; I am ſure the priſoner is the ſame man I met at the bottom of the ſtairs, I never ſaw him before.

THOMAS JONES ſworn.

I heard the cry of ſtop thief, I went to the door, I ſaw ſeveral people running to the end of the ſtreet, where there is a gateway that leads into the rope-walk; I overtook the priſoner and brought him back to the room of the proſecutor, and there were ſeveral things in his pocket which I ſaw taken away from him.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I had a direction to enquire for a man that owed me ſome money, and I believed that to be the houſe, I went up ſtairs, and kicked againſt ſome things in the dark, and I took them up with intent to give them to the people of the houſe, I aſked the gentlewoman what things they were, ſhe ſaid you are a thief, that ſtartled me, and made me run; the gentlewoman ſwore that the door was locked; had I been in the room I ſhould not have ſtaid to lock the door.

Proſecutrix. I tried the door, and found it was locked, and I pulled out my key and opened it as uſual, only that I had double looked it with my own key when I went out, and then it was ſingle locked.

ROBERT GAINS ſworn.

I live in Bow-ſtreet, Bloomſbury; I have known the priſoner for above five years, he is a taylor by trade, I have had large dealings with the man, a very honourable man in his payments, ſeveral people have been here to his character.

Priſoner. I was coming down ſtairs, the gentlewoman was never up one ſtair, therefore it was impoſſible for her to ſee this bag; I had no things in my pocket, it muſt be a very uncommon pocket to put ſuch things in, I never ſaw the bag till the light came.

Court. Gentlemen of the Jury, this does not appear in any ſenſe to be the dwelling-houſe of Mary Warren, the whole houſe being let out in different tenements.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing, but not in the dwelling houſe.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

741. THOMAS SMITH was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling-house of Robert Rudd, about the hour of two in the night, on the 16th day of July last, and burglariously stealing therein one silver tea spoon, value 1s. a lawn handkerchief, value 1s. and one pound weight of ham, value 6d. his property.

The witnesses examined apart at the prisoner's request.

ROBERT RUDD sworn.

I live at St. Mary, Stratford-le-bow, my house was broke open on Sunday the 17th of July last, I found it broke open when I came down about four o'clock in the morning; I and my wife were up last the night before, and I saw all secured as usual when I went to bed, which was about ten; a little before four I awaked, and my little girl who lays in a little bed by herself, says da, there is somebody below stairs, I heard the foot of a man; immediately I got up an end in the bed to awake myself, and rubbed my eyes to be sure I was awake; in about five minutes I heard something go, I believe it was the lock of the foredoor, that caused me to get up, I went down in my shirt, I had a loaded pistol on the mantle-piece, I went down stairs, and saw by the light through the crevice, that the house had been broke open, it was then day-light, I saw by the light that the window had been open, I unbolted the stair foot door, and that minute I saw the prisoner jump out of the window of the back kitchen; I just saw the back part of him, I turned directly, and I said to the prisoner, what you are there, you rascal, I have got you, have I? he directly pointed a pistol at me, which terrified me, being in my shirt, as it would any man, I suppose, with the heart of a horse; immediately I run from the window, as another man I suppose would do in my situation, he jumped into the window after me, I said for God's sake do not shoot me; but b—r my eyes, says he, if I do not, he snapped the pistol at me, but it did not go off, I believe it was not loaded; when I turned myself round, I saw the fire flash from the pistol, and it did not go off; I immediately caught hold of his collar, and up with my fist and knocked him down on the floor, I believe he and I were upon the floor for four minutes, and he cutting me over the head in twenty places with the pistol during the time, and I wrenched it out of his hand; I believe I lost two quarts of blood that morning at the least, he then turned round and jumped out of the same window that he came in at; while we were upon the floor, I cried out murder, murder to my wife, and said, bring down the loaded pistol from my apartment; she opened the window, and cried out murder, I immediately opened the door, and saw where he chucked this pistol, I run down our court in my shirt, as I was to alarm the town, I pursued the gentleman the back way, I run up to the Black Swan corner, after that I gave information of the gentleman to every person I saw, and at last I was coming home and I met a man who said he is caught; he was taken in about four or five minutes; I am sure he is the man, I have no doubt but he is the man; this is the pistol, I believe it was not loaded, except the balls and powder dropped out, it appeared to have been loaded; I lost one silver tea-spoon, one muslin handkerchief, and a pound of ham the gentleman wanted for breakfast; they were found in the garden all but the silver spoon, which was found upon him, there were two or three large spoons if he had looked where they had been.

Prisoner. You are positive I am the man?—I am sure of it.

ELIZABETH RUDD sworn.

My little girl heard a noise, my husband went down, and after he went down I heard him say, what are you there, I have got you at last, and I thought it was a cat that I had fastened into the house, and I heard my husband say, for God's sake do not shoot me! but what the prisoner said I cannot tell, then my husband called out murder! murder! bring down the pistol; I threw up the sash, and called out murder! then I came

I came down ſtairs, and the priſoner was going out of the back window: I ſaw the man, and very well know the priſoner to be the man; he was as near me as I am to your lordſhip, there was a good light, his back was towards me then, I never ſaw his face, he never was out of ſight. I know him to be the ſame man by the dreſs, he had his hair tied behind with a bit of ſtring, and a brown coat and ſtriped trowſers: he was taken to the watch-houſe, and brought back; there was one ſilver tea ſpoon, one morning handkerchief, a piece of raw ham, and this knife he took to the window, that I ſcrape the gridiron with.

WILLIAM PARROTT ſworn.

On the 17th of July in the morning, ſometime about the hour of four or ſomething after, I cannot tell particularly the time, being in the room where I lodge, I heard a great cry of murder in the next houſe, I live next door to the proſecutor, I run down ſtairs as faſt as I could, and got into the back yard adjoining Robert Rudd's yard, and there I ſaw upon a little ſhed in Robert Rudd's yard, the priſoner making up the ſhed to a high wall, ſeeing him all over blood, I thought there muſt be ſomething extraordinary, and hearing Mrs. Rudd ſay ſomething I purſued him over the ſhed up the wall; I never loſt ſight of him, only ſo far as when he jumped over a wall, the wall hid him till I got upon it; I immediately purſued him as faſt as ever I could, I thought he got the advantage of me, but at laſt I took him, after a conſiderable ſtruggle, and William Weſt came up to aſſiſt me.

WILLIAM WEST ſworn.

I live at Bow, next door but one to the proſecutor's; I heard the cry of ſtop thief! between four and five in the morning. I ſaw Mrs. Rudd looking out of window, and crying murder; ſhe told me which way the priſoner was gone, and I followed him; when I firſt ſaw him, he was down, and William Pe rot atop of him, keeping him down, and I helped to take him; at the time I had him againſt the door, there was a teaſpoon lay beſide the pale, where he had been, at Nooke's, at the back door.

Is there any body that ſaw him drop it?—No, Sir, I believe not, but it was cloſe by the priſoner.

(The ſpoon depoſed to.)

THOMAS BARNETT ſworn.

On the 17th of July laſt, in the morning between four and five o'clock, juſt turned of four, my wife waked me with the cry of murder, I dreſſed me and went down; I went up the court where the proſecutor lives, which is behind my houſe, I found the proſecutor's door open and nobody in the houſe, but I found a hat half full of blood, which was the priſoner's hat, as he owned before the juſtice, and it was in the proſecutor's fore-room below ſtairs, I took this knife from him, which the proſecutor's wife owned.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was going to Stratford, and coming through Bow, I heard a great noiſe, and coming acroſs the field this man ſeized me, and ſaid I muſt go with him, he knocked me down, and cut me over the head.

GUILTY.

Of ſtealing, but not of the burglary.

Court to Priſoner. You have been fortunate in the circumſtance which, in point of law, intitled you to be acquitted of that part of the charge of this indictment which would have affected your life, in which the jury had thought themſelves warranted in a general verdict of guilty; for your conduct was ſuch, it would in all probability have excluded all hopes of mercy from your ſovereign, and certainly as far as depended on me I ſhould have thought you moſt clearly a perſon proper to be made a public example of; for you were not only guilty of the moſt atrocious offence, but after the fact committed, and when you had an opportunity of making, or at leaſt attempting to make your eſcape, not content with that you returned again, and, as far as lay in you, endeavoured to deprive the proſecutor profecutor of his life: under theſe circumſtances therefore there could not be a more fit example of public juſtice than you; but the jury have juſtly and rightly acquitted you of that part of the charge, and I am perfectly ſatisfied with their doing ſo; for however atrocious the crimes of offenders may be, it is our duty to adminiſter the law with mercy and juſtice; but I cannot do my duty to the public, without paſſing the ſevereſt ſentence upon you that the circumſtances of your caſe will admit, which is, that you be

Tranſported to Africa for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

742. EDWARD GLYDE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 8th day of April laſt, two iron bars value 20s. one iron horſe, value 5s. and two iron bolts, value 3s. the property of William Hill and John Taylor.

JOHN TAYLOR ſworn.

I am partner with Mr. Hill, I loſt the things mentioned in the indictment, I only ſpeak to the property, which I ſaw at Juſtice Green's.

WILLIAM ELBY ſworn.

I am conſtable of the night; about two in the morning going down Gravel-lane, I ſaw two men on the other ſide of the way, I ſtopped Grubb, the other eſcaped, it was very dark, I took up the priſoner ſome time after, I took him in April; I know nothing againſt him, only I apprehended him on the information of the evidence, his name is William Marſh.

RICHARD MITCHELL ſworn.

I am a watchman, about two in the morning, on the 8th of April, I heard the noiſe of gingling of iron, and I ſaw the priſoner at the bar, and the evidence here, whoſe name is William Marſh, ſtanding at a little diſtance, and I paſſed between them, I walked about ten or a dozen yards, and I ſaw ſomething lay, which I thought was a boat-hook, I ſtruck it with my ſtick, I ſounded it, and it was iron; I went a little further, and I ſaw ſome more iron laying, theſe two bolts that are here, I came back from that place, in order to call my brother watchman, and while I was going to call him the priſoner and the evidence made off, when I returned, the firſt plate of iron was removed.

WILLIAM MARSH ſworn.

Court. Now you know you are upon your oath, do not add one ſin to another, but take care to ſay the truth, and nothing more.

Was you in company with the priſoner on Tueſday the 8th of April in the morning?—Yes.

Was you there when the watchman Richard Mitchell came up?—Yes.

What was that iron that was there between you and the priſoner?—Two long bars, a horſe, and two bolts, this iron was taken from Mr. Hill's ſhop.

Who took it from there?——Edward Glyde, and I, and John Grub.

What time of night was that?—Between twelve and one the ſame night.

How did you get into the ſhop?——At firſt we did not know which way to get in, but at laſt we ſaw a weather board blowed down, and we got in there.

Where was you carrying this iron?—To New Crane.

Did you carry any part of it?——Yes, one long bar, John Grub carried the reſt.

What did the priſoner do?—He ſtood in the boat.

(The iron produced.)

Profecutor. The bar is made in ſuch a manner, there is hardly ever a bar made like it, I never ſaw one, I have been in buſineſs fourteen or fifteen years, I am perfectly sure it is my bar.

Mr. Pratt, Priſoner's Council. You do not manufacture this bar iron yourſelf?—No not in bars.

I ſuppoſe a great multitude of them are made?—Yes.

There is one general and common mark?—Yes.

Priſoner. I leave it all to my council.

The priſoner called ſix witneſſes who all gave him a good character.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice GOULD.

---

743. JAMES MOSDELL was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Mary, the wife of William Warwick, on the King's highway, on the 19th day of July laſt, and putting her in corporal fear and danger of her life, and feloniouſly taking from her perſon, and againſt her will, one ſhilling, and one counterfeit ſhilling of no value, and eight copper halfpence his property.

(The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of the priſoner.)

MARY WARWICK ſworn.

On the 19th of July laſt, about half after ten at night, I was going to Old-ſtreet-road, towards Shoreditch, juſt on the other ſide of Mr. Calvert's houſe, I was ſtopped by two fellows, the priſoner at the bar is one; the priſoner and the other came up to me; the priſoner had a knife in his hand, he bid me ſtop and give him my money, or he would cut me down; I told him it was not worth his while to ſtop me, for I had very little money in my pocket, he inſiſted upon my giving him what I had, or he would cut me down; I put my hand into my pocket, and pulled out ſome halfpence, and then a ſhilling, he told me it was not all, I told him it was; then they both turned from me, and he bid me go quietly about my buſineſs; before he ſtopped me, I had only two good ſhillings, and a bad one, and ſome halfpence, and when I came to look in my pocket, I miſſed a good ſhilling, a bad ſhilling, and four pennyworth of halfpence.

Did you know the priſoner's perſon before?—No.

Was it light enough for you to be ſure of the perſon of the priſoner?—Yes, it was, and I am ſure the priſoner is the perſon that demanded my money, with a knife to my face, and ſwore he would cut me down twice; I purſued them, and called ſtop thief! and a young man came up to my aſſiſtance, and aſked me what was the matter, I told him, he ran after them, I could not have ſworn to the other, but my eyes were ſo fixed upon this, by his holding the knife to my face.

JONATHAN TODD ſworn.

On the 19th of July laſt, the proſecutrix applied to me, and ſaid ſhe was robbed, I was about ſix yards off, and ſhe cryed ſtop thieves, they have robbed me; I immediately turned and ran after them, they ran about fifteen or twenty yards, one of them was taken in my ſight, by one Kinchin, the other got off.

RICHARD COLLINS ſworn.

Coming down Old-ſtreet-road, I heard the cry of ſtop thieves, I ran after them, they ran on the other ſide; Kinchin took the priſoner by the collar, and I got hold of him.

STEPHEN KINCHIN ſworn.

On the the 19th of July laſt, I was ſitting in the City-road, at the round houſe door; I heard the cry of ſtop thief, I ran into the middle of the road, and a young fellow with me that I was talking to; I had a ſtick in my hand, I ſaw the priſoner running, he came paſt the young fellow, and I ſtruck at him with my ſtick, and received part of the blow on my chin; I caught him by the collar, and turned him quite round, he ſaid I am not the man, I am running after the man; I ſtopped him, and the proſecutor and ſome more came up, and one came up and ſaid, you are the man that ran from the man, and I held him faſt, the proſecutrix ſaid he was the man; I had not the preſence of mind to ſearch him.

Priſoner. I am quite innocent of the affair, my miſtreſs I work for told me to go to the Angel in Old-ſtreet, to look for a man to work, I went and had two pints of beer, and delivered my meſſage, coming along about half paſt ten, I heard the cry of ſtop thief! I ran, and I was ſtopped, and another man as well as me, he is here now.

JOHN CROWDER ſworn.

I keep a cane ſhop, I never knew the priſoner, I was ſitting in my own houſe, which is nearly oppoſite to where he was taken, and I heard the cry of ſtop thief! and I ran immediately into the middle of the road, there were ſeveral people running, I ran as well as the reſt; I was laid hold of for the thief, and immediately after, that ſame perſon ſaid they knew me, I was releaſed, I went to the watch-houſe, the woman ſeemed rather much fluſtrated, and they aſked her what ſhe had loſt, ſhe ſaid ſhe could not poſitively tell; the next morning I went to hear the priſoner's examination before the Juſtice, and when I came there, there were ſome witneſſes ſwore this was the perſon who committed the fact, then the Juſtice aſked her if ſhe was ſure this was the perſon, and ſhe ſaid yes, he ſaid ſhould you know the other, and ſhe ſaid ſhe could not know the other if he was by her; after he was committed, there was a young man that works for me leaning upon the table, and ſhe went and looked under his hat, and ſaid this is the other man that robbed me, I ſaid are you ſure he is the other, ſays ſhe, if he is not the other, he is one of their companions; ſays I, madam you muſt be a very baſe woman to ſay ſo, when he was at the ſame time at quite a different part of the town, upon that ſhe held her tongue.

RICHARD ATWOOD ſworn.

The priſoner ſerved his time to me, an honeſt worthy young fellow as ever broke the world's bread; he was at work the day of this accident, and for weeks before, he had a ſhilling of me about half after eight that evening, I am a whiteſmith.

The priſoner called nine more witneſſes, who all gave him a very good character.

Jury to Proſecutrix. Were there any lamps about you that night?——Yes, there were, and as for Crowder never ſpoke to me in his life.

Kinchin. No, Mr. Crowder is wrong there.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice ASHURST.

---

744. THOMAS MEAD was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Richard Barker and John Winter, about the hour of twelve in the night, on the 28th day of July laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, one ſilver watch, value 4l. one ſteel chain, value 6d. two ſeals, value 6d. and one braſs key, value 2d. the property of George Geddies.

GEORGE GEDDIES ſworn.

I know Richard Barker and John Winter, they are leſſees of the turnpike gates, they two have a houſe at Holloway.

Who lives in that houſe?—Every man according to his turn while he is on duty; on the 28th of July I was there, it was my night, I miſſed my watch about one in the morning, there was another beſides me, the doors and windows were done, I locked the door myſelf and put the windows in.

What time did you go to bed?—About eleven.

When did you awake?—About one.

What did you miſs?——I went to look what it was o'clock, and I miſſed my watch the priſoner came to the door, he called, and I let him in, the door was faſt, I opened the door, and aſked him where he was going ſo ſoon in the morning, he ſaid he had been in the fields to fetch his horſes up, and I told him I had loſt ſuch a thing, and he aſked me what I meant by that, then I ſaid my watch and he d——d his eyes, and aſked me if I thought he had got it, and ſaid he would ſtrip all his clothes off, and let me ſearch him, I ſaid ſomebody had got it

He

How was the window faſtened?——By a bolt on the inſide.

Where was the key over night?——On the inſide, on the table, when I opened the window I found a pane of glaſs had been taken out, the lead had been undone by a knife, or ſome inſtrument, then he went away, and I took him up on the 1ſt day of Auguſt, with the officer; we did not find the watch upon him, but he confeſſed he was the man that took it.

What was ſaid to induce him to confeſs?—It was the officer that talked to him.

What did he ſay?—I do not know.

Did you know him before?—He lived ſervant with Mr. Hickman, the houſe is the turnpike houſe.

Is there more than one room?——There is a cellar below.

Where was your watch?——Hanging on a nail.

THOMAS ISAACS ſworn.

I received information from Mr. Geddies that the houſe had been robbed, he ſaid he had a ſuſpicion of a lad that worked along with Mr. Hickman, accordingly I went down to Holloway, and apprehended the priſoner, ſays I, my friend, you muſt go along with me; for what, ſays he; ſays I, do you know this man, which was Geddies; Oh! ſays he it is about the watch; I meant to take it back again; ſays I, where is it.

He ſaid this to you without your ſaying any thing to him?——Without any thing at all, he fell a crying, and went and ſhewed me where it was; it was hid up in the hay loft of Mr. Hickman's houſe at Holloway; here is the watch, with the proſecutor's name upon it.

(The watch depoſed to.)

EDWARD STONE ſworn.

On the 28th day of July I ſaw a gentleman's carriage at the gate, this boy let it through, being one of the patrol belonging to Bow-ſtreet, I thought it would be well to take notice of what was upon the road; the boy went to the window and put his head in, and put the key in; this was at the time that the gentleman's carriage had paſſed on, it might be a minute, the turnpike gate was not open, nor anybody there but two ladies that got out of their carriage, he then went to the window, and put his hand in, as I ſuppoſed with the key, and ſhut to the window; at about two minutes after I heard a carriage coming along, it ſtopped again, the boy went and put his head right in, and took the key and let the ſtage coach through, and I heard the ſtage coachman ſay, here boy, where is the turnpike man, here is ſix-pence, and if you do not keep it you ought to be d——d; he opened the gate and let the ſtage through, after the gentleman's carriage had gone through.

Court to Proſecutor. Why I thought you always faſtened the gate at night?——It was faſtened.

How did this boy get in?——Why he came in at the window, and took the key and went out of the window again, there was no ſpring key of the bolt belonging to the window.

Stone. The priſoner then went to the window again, but what he did I do not know.

When you ſaw him twice go to the window, did you ſee him open the window?—I ſaw him open the window and take out the key of the gate.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

On the Thurſday night my maſter ordered me to get up very forward in the morning, and be at market about five, without fail, I went to bed, and waked in the middle of the night, and brought up my horſes, the proſecutor let me through, as I was running along after the horſes I ſaw ſomething lay white, and I turned round and picked it up, and it was this watch, I did not know what to do with it, I thought one would own it, and another would own it, and I know there is a great many bad ſort of people about, and I thought I would wait for the advertiſer for it;

it; I enquired every day in the papers, on Monday night this gentleman came to me, and asked me if I had it, I told him I had, it was at my master's, and I went and fetched it out of the hay, then he told me he was an officer, and he would have me to gaol.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing to the value of 39s. but not of the burglary.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

745. WILLIAM HANDS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 18th day of Auguſt, one linen handkerchief, value 2s. the property of Edward Trelawney, Eſq; privately from his perſon.

EDWARD TRELAWNEY, Eſq; ſworn:

On Thurſday afternoon, the 18th of Auguſt laſt, as I was paſſing down the back lane leading towards Stepney-fields, I put my hand into my pocket to feel for my handkerchief, I miſſed it, I immediately turned round to take notice if any perſon was near me, I did not obſerve any but a gentleman on the oppoſite ſide of the way, and I thought by his holding his fingers up to his noſe, he knew ſomething of it, I was going to croſs the way to him, and I obſerved the priſoner at the bar run out of an alley, I purſued him through ſeveral alleys, through two houſes, and ſeveral turnings, during the purſuit he dropped my handkerchief in the kennel, I picked it up and followed him till he took ſhelter in a houſe.

What do you ſuppoſe it to be worth at the time it was taken?——I do not know, it coſt me three ſhillings, I am not acquainted with the value of old handkerchiefs, I ſuppoſe it is not material.

But it is material?—Then if it is material, I wiſh to value it as low as poſſible; I only come here to do juſtice to my country; I wiſh to exerciſe the feelings of humanity at the ſame time.

Priſoner. The gentleman cannot ſwear I picked his pocket, I was playing with ſome other boys.

Proſecutor. He ſaid before the Juſtice he lived at Brentford, he was playing at hoop; he appeared in a very indifferent ſituation, I gave him ſix-pence at the time, and I gave him ſix-pence after he was committed.

Court. Gentlemen of the Jury, If the indictment had been proved as laid, it would have been a capital offence, for if you find him guilty of privately ſtealing from the perſon to the amount of more than a ſhilling, it would exclude the benefit of clergy.

GUILTY, 10d.

Whipped.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice ASHURST.

---

746. FRANCIS GROOME was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 2d day of September, two ounces weight of leaf gold, value 8l. the property of Robert Durnford.

ROBERT DURNFORD ſworn.

I loſt ſome leaf gold, upwards of two ounces, out of my ſhop, on the 2d of September.

Is your ſhop a part of your dwelling houſe?——Yes.

When did you ſee it there?—I ſaw it there within an hour.

At what time did you miſs it?——The next morning at ſix my people miſſed it; I ſaw it the night before at eight o'clock, and at nine I ſaw the priſoner come in, he came in to ſell ſome ſkewins, which is a kind of gold that the gilders and coach painters rub off after they have uſed it, with cotton.

How long did he ſtay in the ſhop?—I might be ten minutes I believe.

Did

Did you buy any of theſe ſkewins?——I did.

Where was your leaf gold at that time?——It was lying on a board in the ſhop; after I miſſed it I ſent out perſons to different parts of the town to have it ſtopped; the firſt let him go, the ſecond would not buy it, the third only ſtopped the gold, and not the man, the fourth ſtopped both gold and man; Mr. Stubbs has it.

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Council. Did this man ever ſell you any of this article before?——Never.

Who was in the ſhop;——I can ſay there was my ſon in the ſhop, and I called my boy to get change, and I believe my daughter went to the door of the ſhop.

JOHN STUBBS ſworn.

I am a ſilverſmith in Holborn, I produce this gold leaf, which the priſoner brought to my ſhop, he came there the 3d of this month, about twelve, and aſked me if I bought any gold, I told him I did; he told me it was gold leaf, he had not got it then, but he would go and fetch it; he went out immediately, and in the ſpace of five minutes he brought this gold to me; I aſked him if he had any more of it, he ſaid, yes, he had, but he could not get at it at preſent; then I aſked him how he came by it, he ſaid he found it the corner of a ſtreet; I told him immediately I had had information that morning twice, that Mr. Durnford had his ſhop robbed of a quantity of gold, and that I was deſired to ſtop both man and gold; and if he came by it honeſtly, he would not mind being examined; accordingly I put him in the parlour, and Mr. Durnford came down, and ſaid, the priſoner was the man that was in his ſhop the night he loſt his gold; I aſked him where the remaining part of the gold was, he ſaid he had given it to another man, and could not get at it at preſent.

Proſecutor. This part of the gold that was loſt, I have a duplicate of it in my pocket; as to the melting, and manufactory, it is in ſuch a ſtate as I am ſure of, it is my own work that I was upon.

Mr. Peatt. Is it not uſual, Sir, to manufacture gold in that way?——Certainly, but it is in the ſame ſtate, the ſame melting, the ſame ingot and colour.

Court to Proſecutor. How much is there of that?——There is a five penny wright, which is about the eighth of it.

——— FARLEY ſworn.

I am a gold-beater, I produce this gold leaf, which I received from a perſon, but I cannot tell who it was, I conceive it to be the priſoner, I am not poſitive; the perſon ſaid it was not his own property, it belonged to a perſon that found it; there was more of it, and he had given him this to ſell.

What quantity is there?——About ſixteen ſhillings worth, he went away to fetch the perſon, and I ſent to the proſecutor.

——— BADGER ſworn.

The priſoner is my maſter, he told me at Bow-ſtreet, that they had not got all the gold, there was ſome hid, he did not ſay where; I went in ſearch of the gold, and I found the ſkins, ſome bits of gold were in a ſtable, the ſkins were found cloſe by the ſhop, in a hole with ſome dirt over it.

(The ſkins produced.)

Mr. CLOCKIN ſworn.

I found theſe ſkins in Mr. Durnford's ſhop, brought there by this man.

(Depoſed to.)

Proſecutor. I know theſe ſkins by many marks, they have been through my hands, I ſuppoſe two thouſand times.

Did you loſe theſe ſkins at the time you loſt the gold?——I did.

Was there gold between every ſkin?——May be not between every one, but between the major part.

Mr. Peatt. Thoſe are ſuch ſkins as gold is uſually beat on, manufactured in that way?——They are.

I ſuppoſe there are many thouſands of the ſame ſame ſort?——Without doubt, but I know the ſkins by many marks.

RICHARD ADAMS ſworn.

How old are you?——Sixteen, I am an apprentice to Mr. Durnford, I know this gold, by pulling it to pieces it appears exactly like it; my maſter has ſome that would appear like it, ſuppoſing it to be rumpled up as this is; I ſaw it the night before; I was going to work upon it; gold was not often left as ours was.

Suppoſe you ſaw that gold any where elſe, would you ſwear to it?——I could not particularly ſwear to ſuch a thing.

No, I dare ſay you would not, any more than you would ſwear to the taſte of it? Does the colour vary?——Very frequently the ſame.

Priſoner. Sir, I found the gold the night before this gentleman ſays he loſt it; the gold I ſold to the proſecutor, and the other too.

Court to Durnford. What did you give him for the ſkewins?—Twenty-pence.

Jury. What trade is the priſoner?——He is a farrier.

The priſoner called five witneſſes, who all gave him a very good character.

Court to Proſecutor. What is the value of the gold found upon him?——About twenty ſhillings.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing to the value of 20s.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

747. JAMES LEWIS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 15th day of Auguſt laſt, two ſilver ſalt holders, value 12s. two pepper caſters, value 20s. one ſilver milk-pot, value 10s. ſix table ſpoons, value 3l. one ſilver marrow ſpoon, value 8s. the property of Hannah Chadwick, in her dwelling houſe.

(The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of the priſoner.)

HANNAH CHADWICK ſworn.

I live at the Gun alehouſe at Iſlington, the priſoner and another came into my houſe on Friday the 12th of Auguſt, and had a pint of beer; they were in my houſe Friday, Saturday, Sunday, and the Monday they robbed me; they came in on Monday morning at half paſt ſix, and called for two-pennyworth of gin and water, and waited there till half after eight, till I ſat down to breakfaſt; then when I ſat down to breakfaſt the priſoner got up and went to the door, as I did imagine, and inſtead of that, he went to the bar, opened the door, and took the plate which I have here; I did not ſee him go into the bar, but I caught him there; I called out I am robbed, and my ſiſter came to my aſſiſtance; I aſked him what he did there, he ſaid he was doing nothing; ſays I, but you have got ſomething out of my cupboard, and I called to my ſiſter, and he laid hold on one ſide of her, and he got out of the bar from us, and threw down theſe things in the paſſage, my ſiſter had hold of his waiſtcoat, and it gave way, here is half of it; then he got away, and carried off the ſalts and pepper boxes; he threw down half a dozen ſilver ſpoons, a marrow ſpoon, and a milk-pot.

What is the value of theſe things?——They are altogether about the value of 3l. the priſoner ran out, and I came in to ſee what was the matter, and what was loſt, and I miſſed the two ſalts and pepper boxes, I never found them; they were in the bar along with the reſt; I told a perſon that I was robbed, and the priſoner was brought back in leſs than half an hour, I am ſure of the things.

SARAH BURLAND ſworn.

I know the priſoner, I live with the proſecutrix, I ſaw the priſoner at her houſe four times, I remember ſeeing him there the 15th of Auguſt, my ſiſter called ſhe was robbed, I went into the bar and caught hold of the left-ſide of his waiſtcoat, and held him till he got into the paſſage, he left part of his waiſtcoat in my hand, then he got away from me, and I did not ſee ſee him till a man brought him back.

ANN DELL ſworn.

I live ſervant with Mrs. Chadwick, two gentlemen came in about a quarter after ſix in the morning, my miſtreſs aſked them to walk into the parlour, they had two-penny worth of gin and water, and when the kitchen was ſcowered, theſe two gentlemen went in, after we had done the parlour, at about a quarter after eight, we went to breakfaſt, and at the firſt diſh of tea this priſoner went out, and my miſtreſs thought ſhe heard the ſpoons jingle, juſt as if the cat was licking a plate, and ſhe got up and cried out I am robbed, I am robbed, and we all ran out, and my miſtreſs collared him, and her ſiſter and I went to take the ſpoons out of his hand, and he clawed me all down my arm, then he threw the ſpoons down under the bench in the entry, and the marrow ſpoon and the milk-pot.

ROBERT SIBLEY ſworn.

I took the priſoner, I was going about my buſineſs at half after eight on the 15th of Auguſt, and I ſaw the proſecutrix and her ſiſter at their door very much frightened; ſhe ſaid ſhe had been robbed by two men in brown coats, ſhe ſaid they were gone the way I was going, and I followed them; I firſt ſaw them in a cow place, they ſaw me after them, and they went into a field that goes to the Shepherd and Shepherdeſs, and the other man made away, and I took the priſoner; I aſked him how he came to rob the woman, and he ſaid he knew nothing of it, his coat was buttoned up; the proſecutrix told me he had left part of his waiſtcoat, and I unbuttoned his coat, and ſaw part of his waiſtcoat wanting; ſays I, friend, you muſt go with me, for they want you to match the other part of the waiſtcoat; ſo I took him back, and he was committed, I did not ſearch him.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

On the 15th of Auguſt, about five, I got up, I ſays to my wife, I will go and ſee if the water is ſmooth to go a fiſhing, I did not take my rod with me, at the New-river I ſtopped a little, and I entered into diſcourſe with a man, he ſaid he had been there an hour and a half, and had caught three fiſh, ſo we went to the Gun, and he aſked me to go in; the gentlewoman ſaid come into the parlour, we ſtaid there, and drank the liquor out, then we went into the kitchen, I was reading a newſpaper, I went out to the door, and ſtopped for the ſpace of five minutes, I came in again, and my ſhoe was unbuckled, I was buckling my ſhoe and riſing up, and coming into the room, the woman ſaid I robbed her, the other man that was with me ran out, and he threw ſomething from him; I have but lately come from Yarmouth, I came to receive ſome prize money from the Thunderer, the lady was not in town, it was lady Walſingham.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice ASHURST.

---

748. ELIZABETH DALTON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 15th day of September laſt, fourteen linen handkerchiefs, value 14s. the property of Joſeph Earle, privily in his ſhop.

JOSEPH EARLE ſworn.

I am a linen-draper in the Strand, on Monday the 12th of September I loſt fourteen linen handkerchiefs, between the hours of five and ſix in the evening; the priſoner was in the ſhop when I came into the ſhop, I ſaw ſomething about her hands and cloak as ſhe went out of the ſhop, and I ſuſpected her.

Court. Did you ſee her put any thing under her apron or cloak?——No, I caſt my eye on a pile of pocket handkerchiefs, and obſerved it appeared as if ſome of them were gone, the top one appeared to be moved moved out of its place, I then ſtepped after her, ſhe was then got about twenty yards from the door, I tapped her upon the ſhoulder, and begged her to come back, ſhe came back, I deſired her to ſit down, then ſhe run out again; ſays ſhe, what buſineſs have you to deſire me to ſtay here, or words to that effect; I purſued her, ſhe ran very faſt, and was got ſome diſtance before I could catch her, then I took her to the beadle's, and he examined her, and found nothing upon her.

JOHN JOHNSON ſworn.

I happened to be coming acroſs the ſtreet, I walked pretty faſt, and I met this young woman full-butt; and in the meantime, the gentleman came up and tapped her on the ſhoulder, and told her to come back to the ſhop; while ſhe was turning back, I ſaw theſe handkerchiefs drop from her, I picked them up, and followed with them, and gave them to Mr. Earle in the ſhop, and I thought ſhe had bought them and loſt them.

Proſecutor. Theſe are the handkerchiefs that the black brought, ſome we charge at three ſhillings, and theſe eleven linen handkerchiefs were thrown down an area where ſhe ran by; they were in the ſhop when ſhe was in it, I put them in the window in the morning myſelf.

JANE HOLLOWAY ſworn.

I ſaw theſe handkerchiefs tumble down the area, but I did not ſee who threw them; I live about a hundred and twenty doors off.

Court to Proſecutor. In your purſuit of this priſoner, did you paſs Mrs. Holloway's houſe?——Yes, I ſuppoſe twenty yards.

DANIEL WILLIS ſworn.

I was in the ſhop between five and ſix in the afternoon, this woman came in, and aſked to look at ſome lawns, while I was ſhewing her ſome, I ſaw her with her hand in her pocket as if ſhe was putting ſomething under her apron.

Did you ſee theſe handkerchiefs in the ſhop at that time?—No, not at that time, I ſaw them in the morning, I did not miſs them at that moment, I ſuſpected her, and I kept her in ſuſpence as long as I could, till ſomebody came into the ſhop; ſhe aſked the price of ſome lawn, I told her it was two ſhillings and two-pence; ſhe aſked me to take two ſhillings, I told her I would cut her half a yard for one ſhilling; ſhe went out of the ſhop, and my maſter brought her back, and ſhe went away again, and the black brought the handkerchiefs.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I am ſure I am innocent, I do not know who might take them out.

Proſecutor. I put them in the window in the morning, I do not recollect they were ſhewn to anybody.

The priſoner called two witneſſes, who gave her a very good character.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing, to the value of 3

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

The next Part will be publiſhed in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 14th of SEPTEMBER, 1785, and the following Days;

Being the SEVENTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER VII. PART III.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

749. WILLIAM HAYWARD was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 26th day of July laſt, twenty-five yards of Iriſh linen, value 27s. and nine ſilk handkerchiefs, value 4s. the property of Ann Ravenhill, privily in her ſhop.

JOHN MOUL ſworn.

I live with Ann Ravenhill at Norton-Falgate, ſhe keeps a linen-draper's ſhop; on Tueſday the 26th of July, ſhe loſt twenty-five yards of Iriſh, and nine ſilk handkerchiefs, the Iriſh was taken off the ſhelf behind the counter in her ſhop, they were in the window, I ſaw them there that morning, I miſſed them a little after one.

Why did you ſuſpect the priſoner?—— I was at dinner, and I ſaw ſomebody run haſtily down the ſteps, I immediately jumped out of my chair, and ran out of the door, I could not ſee anybody, I came back again, I took my hat, and ſomebody told me which way the priſoner went, I purſued and ſaw him, I came up with him in a very few minutes, he was ſtopped by Cole.

JOSEPH COLE ſworn.

I ſtopped the priſoner, I believe it was him to the beſt of my knowledge, I ſtopped him in Petticoat-lane upon the cry of ſtop that lad, I ſaw him drop the piece of Iriſh, I held him by the collar while I picked it up, it is here.

—— ARMSTRONG ſworn.

I received the care of this Iriſh from Mr. Cole and the proſecutor, and the charge of the priſoner.

(The Iriſh depoſed to by the private mark.)

Moul. I do not know who marked it.

Did you find a cavity after he went out of the ſhop?——Yes.

Was it that piece that was wanting?—Yes.

What is the value of it?—It coſt thirteen pence a yard, and there are twenty-five yards.

Cole. I ſaw him drop ſome handkerchiefs, but I do not know how many at the ſame time.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I had been in the city, and a gentleman aſked me to carry that piece of Iriſh, and told me he would give me ſix-pence, he bid me run all the way, and the gentleman laid hold of me.

GUILTY, Death.

He was humbly recommended to mercy by the Proſecutor and Jury.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

750. JO-

750. JOSEPH BANNING was indicted for that he, on the 25th day of July laſt, feloniouſly and falſely did make, forge, and counterfeit, and cauſe and procure to be falſely made, forged, and counterfeited, and willingly aid and aſſiſt in the falſe making, forging, and counterfeiting, a certain order for the payment of money, dated the 18th of July laſt, with the name of George Preſcott thereunto ſubſcribed, purporting to be ſigned by George Preſcott, Eſquire, directed to Meſſrs. Preſcott and Co. for payment of 52l. 10s. to George Scott, or bearer; the tenor of which ſaid falſe, forged, and counterfeited order for the payment of money, is as follows; that is to ſay, "July the 18th, 1785. Meſſrs. Preſcott and Co. pay George Scott, or bearer, fifty-two pounds ten ſhillings. George Preſcott, 52l. 10l." with intent to defraud the ſaid George Preſcott, Eſquire, George William Preſcott, Andrew Grotte, William Culverden, and John Hollingſworth.

A ſecond count, for uttering the ſame, knowing it to be forged, with the like intention.

Third and fourth counts the ſame as the firſt and ſecond, only with intention to defraud George Preſcott, Eſquire.

(The witneſſes examined ſeparate at the requeſt of Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council.)

HENRY CLAYTON ſworn.

I am clerk to Meſſrs. Preſcott, Grotte, and Co. and have been ſo for ſome years.

Where is their banking-houſe?——In Threadneedle-ſtreet.

Do you know that young man?——Perfectly well.

Do you remember his coming to the houſe?——Perfectly well, it was on the 26th of July, between ſix and ſeven o'clock, he brought a draught to the houſe for payment, we told him it was paſt the hour, and we could not pay it him; he ſaid he had been early by our houſe that morning, and was going to Cheſhunt that evening, and he muſt come to town again on purpoſe; we thought it reaſonable to pay him after conſulting a little together, and the draught paſſing through the hands of two or three, we told him we muſt give him notes, he deſired to have caſh, but he took a 30l. bank-note, a 15l. bank-note, and 7l. 10s. in money, he did not ſeem to count it readily, he ſeemed to turn the notes over as if he could not read them; I told them over to him, he took them without counting them, and put them in his pocket; after he was gone, a confuſion having been obſerved, I deſired to look at the draught, and having reaſon to ſuſpect it, I looked at ſome other draughts of Mr. Preſcott's in the houſe, and they differed materially; he told me his horſe and chaiſe were waiting at the Baſing-houſe, we ſent there, but we could not find any perſon there that anſwered that deſcription.

Court. What is the Baſing-houſe?—— It is a public-houſe where they water their carts and horſes; I put two marks on the draught immediately on ſuſpicion.

Did you know the number of the notes?——Yes, clearly, I entered them in the waſte book.

What are the numbers?——The book is here, the number of the 30l. note is 7477, and the 15l. note is 2476.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. How long have you been a clerk to Meſſ. Preſcot?—Between ſix and ſeven years.

Mr. George Preſcott, many of us know, lives moſtly at Theobald's?—Yes.

He generally draws by draughts?—He has frequent occaſion to draw, I am one of the paying clerks, I have very frequent opportunities of ſeeing his hand writing, this draught was tendered to me.

You have had frequent opportunities of ſeeing Mr. Preſcott's draughts?—I have, the draught was tendered to me for payment, it was tendered after five.

You are very ſure?—Yes.

How often may that happen?—We very frequently oblige gentlemen.

I believe you do not pay after five, but to cuſtomers?—This was not a cuſtomer.

So I ſee, and I wiſh the Jury to remember that of courſe, after you have done paying your hurry is over?—Yes.

Then

Then a man coming after the hour of paying, he muſt be ſubject to more notice than he would be in the hurry of buſineſs?—He certainly cauſed more notice to be taken.

A man coming with a forged draught would be glad to get away, I ſhould think?—He would rather have had caſh.

At the time you paid it, you believed it to be the draught of Mr. Preſcott?—If I had not, I ſhould not have paid it.

Upon compariſon then you ſuſpected it?—I did.

That ſuſpicion however did not then decide you that it was a forgery: now I aſk you, as a conſcientious man, upon your oath, whether at that time you could have ventured to have ſworn that that draught was a forgery?—I could not ſwear it was not his ſignature.

Mr. Preſcott we all know, or at leaſt I do, has a very large eſtate at Theobalds?——Yes.

He has very many occaſions to ſign his name?—He has.

He is a magiſtrate for the counties of Hertford and Middleſex?—He is.

He is likewiſe a commiſſioner of the land-tax?—I believe he is.

Now from the ſtrong likeneſs in this draught, was not you induced to believe, and had not you ſuſpected, that ſomebody had ſubſtituted this to Mr. Preſcott, as ſome other paper he intended to ſign?—It never occurred to me.

You did not go with Mr. Smart to the priſoner's houſe?—I did not.

I take it, that even now, looking at the draught alone, without comparing it with any other writing of Mr. Preſcott's, you would not have ventured to have ſworn it was not his hand writing?—I have heard nothing from any body on the ſubject, I have compared his draughts, and there is a great difference.

I aſk you, if that draught was put into your hands at York, where you could not compare it, upon the bare inſpection would you venture to ſwear it was not his hand-writing?—Not the ſignature I would not.

Then if this thing had been offered to you any where but in Threadneedle-ſtreet, and you had been diſpoſed to have advanced money upon it, would you have done it?

Court. That is a conſequence of its being Mr. Preſcott's hand-writing.

JOHN FOSTER ſworn.

I am likewiſe clerk to Meſſ. Preſcott and Co. I remember the priſoner's coming to our houſe; I have not any doubt as to his perſon, I am ſure he is the perſon that brought the draught: on the 25th of July he came about ſix in the evening, with a draught of Mr. Preſcott's for 52l. 10s. drawn by Mr. Preſcott, on a plain piece of paper, and not ſtamped.

Court. What do you mean by that obſervation, that it was on a plain piece of paper, and not ſtamped?—I never ſaw one of the kind before, as I recollect on a plain piece of paper: the priſoner aſked if we could oblige him with the payment of that draught; that he was paſt our houſe about ſix in the morning, had been to Richmond and was going to Cheſhunt that evening that he was to meet his friend at the Baſing-houſe in Kingſland road about ſix and would be much obliged to us to let him have payment; upon ſhewing it to the head clerk, this being Mr. Preſcot's draught we concluded on paying it; we aſked him how he would have it, he ſaid in money, as he might find ſome difficulty in getting notes changed in the country; we had locked up our caſh, and told him we ſhould be obliged to pay him in notes; we paid him a 30l. note, and a 15l. note, and 7l. 10s. in money, which was paid him by Mr. Clayton; he ſeemed confuſed, he did not ſeem clear whether it was right or no

Court. It is ſufficient that you upon inſpecting of the draught, from ſuch inſpection of it you ſuſpected it, tell us what you did?—In conſequence of ſuch ſuſpicion, the draught was ſhewn about to the different clerks, and it was ſhewn to Mr. Hollingſworth, then we ſent down to Mr. Preſcott's with a deſcription of the perſon then Mr. Smart came up to me on the

Thurſda

Thurſday, and I went with Mr. Smart to the priſoner's houſe, but he was not at home, the next morning I ſaw him with Mr. Smart; Mr. Smart turned round and aſked me if that was the man that brought the draught, I ſaid he was, and I was ſorry to ſay it; we had a poſt-chaiſe waiting at a little diſtance, and I went with him, Mr. Smart came with me and the priſoner, we came to Threadneedle-ſtreet, we took him into the office; Mr. George William Preſcott came into the office, and aſked him what he had done with the property.

Mr. Silveſter. Had you any further converſation with the priſoner?——The priſoner aſked me when I was alone, whether Mr. Preſcott was angry, I told him I did not chuſe to have any thing to ſay, and declined giving him an anſwer; when he came to town Mr. Preſcott aſked him what he had done with the property that he received from us, to the beſt of my recollection thoſe were the words; the priſoner put his hand into his pocket, and pulled out a little pocket-book, and delivered a 30l. note into Mr. George William Preſcott's hand, I was in the room, he did not ſay anything; Mr. Preſcott aſked him, what he had done with the other note, in anſwer to that he ſaid, he paſſed the 15l. bank-note to Mr. Carrington Bowles, in St. Paul's church-yard.

Mr. Garrow. The 25th of July was Monday?—Yes.

The priſoner was from home when you went on Thurſday?—Yes.

What time might that be?——About eight.

What meſſage was left for him?—I do not know.

What time did you go the next morning?——Between ten and eleven.

That was on Friday?——Yes.

So that from Monday to Friday this note had been in his poſſeſſion?——Yes.

I believe in that part of the world it is very well known, that Mr. Smart is the agent for Mr. Preſcott?—I do not know it.

What was the date of the draught?—It was the 18th of July, a week back.

It was payable to bearer?——It was payable to George Scott or bearer, payable on being preſented.

Thoſe in general I believe are preſented the day, or the day after?—It is moſt common, but not general.

A man coming at the diſtance of a week then would not be leſs a ſubject of obſervation?——We do not pay great regard to dates, unleſs they are dated forward, if they are backward we do not.

But in order to know that, you muſt look at them you know?——Yes.

How many of you had looked at it?——Three, Mr. Clayton, Mr. Woodhouſe, and myſelf, Mr. Woodhouſe is the head caſhier, we ſuppoſed the ſignature to be Mr. Preſcott's hand-writing.

If that draught had been tendered to you at York, would you have believed it to be Mr. Preſcott's hand writing?——I think I ſhould the ſignature.

Whilſt you was in the chaiſe the priſoner aſked you if Mr. Preſcott was angry?—Yes.

Had he been told the draught was a forged one?—I was not preſent when Mr. Smart went with the priſoner.

It was after that?—Yes.

Court to Foſter. Was this draught advertiſed publicly at all?—No Sir.

——— SMART ſworn.

I am agent and ſteward of the courts to Mr. Preſcott, but not land ſteward; I was at dinner when the deſcription of forgery came in, I went to town, and in conſequence of that, and of what I heard in town, I went to Edmonton to the priſoner's houſe.

What is the priſoner?—He is a ſchool maſter, he ſerved his time with Mr. Draper, maſter of the free-ſchool there; Mr. Preſcott is acting magiſtrate there: when I went to the priſoner's houſe in the evening, I aſked his wife if he was at home, ſhe ſaid no, he was gone to Mr. Flacks; there was a houſe between that and Mr. Flack's, which I thought he ſometimes uſed, he was not there, we returned and went there the next morning, and as ſoon as I ſaw him, I ſaid Banning, how could you be guilty of this forgery on Mr. Preſcott, you muſt go with me to London, he poſitively denied it.

Court. Recollect in what terms as near as you can?—He ſaid he had done no ſuch thing, or he knew nothing about it, or words to that effect.

Did you tell him what it was that had been forged on Mr. Preſcott?—I hold him it was in vain to deny it, it was for fifty guineas, and that one of Mr. Preſcott's clerks was at the door waiting to identify his perſon.

What anſwer did he make to that?——None, I then put my hand upon his collar, and led him to the door, and beckoned to Mr. Foſter, and aſked him if he knew that man, he ſaid he was but too ſure.

Is that the man the money was paid to?——Yes.

Court. I obſerved there is an expreſſion you and Mr. Foſter both uſe, that he was but too ſure, what did he mean by that?—I believe no otherwiſe than that he was ſorry any man ſhould be guilty of any ſuch offence, I believe only general tenderneſs; The priſoner then aſked leave to diſcharge the children from ſchool, and to clean himſelf, which I permitted; I went up ſtairs while he diſcharged the ſchool, and put on a pair of ſhoes, inſtead of a pair of ſlippers which he had on before, he then came down ſtairs, and as we went to the poſt chaiſe, I taxed him with having copied it from a warrant, ſigned by Mr. Preſcott, the only anſwer he gave me was, was not Mr. Preſcott very angry when he found it out, was there no way of getting through it, them were the words, or very near them; we then reached the chaiſe, and I handed him into the chaiſe, and put Mr. Foſter with him, and no other converſation paſſed till we came to Mr. Preſcott's banking-houſe in London, there Mr. George William Preſcott aſked him what he had done with the notes, or what he had done with the property, he put his hand into his pocket, and took out a pocket book, and delivered a 30l. note to Mr. George William Preſcott; Mr. Preſcott immediately handed it over to me, I went into the other room to compare it with the number in the book, I have the notes and books all here.

Did the number correſpond?—We found it did not, there was nines inſtead of ſevens.

Which book did you compare it with?—I cannot ſay.

Mr. Silveſter to Clayton. Was you preſent?——It was compared with my book, the number in the two books is mine, it is entered in Mr. Atkinſon's book, the note was 7479, the book was 7477, on finding a difference, the other book was immediately looked into, and the two books agreed, upon which I took up the note and ſaw the alteration; then on returning into the room again, I, or Mr. Preſcott, aſked what he had done with the other note, he ſaid he had paid it away to Mr. Bowles; I aſked him what Mr. Bowles, he replied, Mr. Bowles print-ſeller in St. Paul's Church Yard; he was then taken to Guildhall and committed; I then went to Mr. Bowles, and on looking into a large bundle of notes, I found the note of 15l. which I inſtantly ſaw had been altered.

In what particular?——By altering it from 2476 to 2496, I carried Mr. Bowles another 15l. note, and he gave me that which is now in my poſſeſſion; this is the note that I found at Mr. Bowles's.

Mr. Silveſter. Did you compare that with the book?——Yes, upon our return the number was 2476.

How long have you been acquainted with Mr. Preſcott?——I have done buſineſs for him for ſeventeen or eighteen years, I cannot ſay which.

Mr. Silveſter to Mr. Clayton. Look at that draught?——This is the draught I received from the priſoner, this note has two marks, the one has the initials of the perſon's name that gave it me, W. for Woodhouſe, and C. L. for clearing book, where I had it from, I am perfectly clear it is the note I marked, and the note I received.

Mr. Garrow to Clayton. When draughts are paid in the paying hours what becomes of them?——We file them directly we paſs, three three times in a day we clear the file, we take off the draughts and put them in another place.

You take them off, poſt them, and depoſite them ſomewhere elſe?—Yes.

Have you often ſeen Mr Preſcott write?—I have ſeen many hundreds of his draughts.

Look at that hand-writing?——I do, the body bears no ſimilarity at all to his hand writing, the ſignature bears a diſtant one, he has a method of writing rounder with his G at the bottom, and the turn at the end of Preſcott commonly goes the contrary way; if this had been offered to me as one of Mr. Preſcott's draughts I ſhould have immediately ſtopped it.

(The draught read.)

"July 18th 1785. Meſſ. Preſcott, and "Co. pay George Scott or bearer, fifty-"two pounds ten ſhillings. George Preſ-"cott. 52l. 10s."

Court. What is the ten, figures or letters?—Figures in the body. (The draughts ſhewn to the Court. The bank note read, No. 7479.) I know this note by two marks, the name of Dimſdale is wrote upon it before it was paid that very night, I am ſure this note was paid to the priſoner, I am ſure as far as any circumſtance can go, I believe this very note was paid to the priſoner; the clearing clerk writes on all the notes that he receives.

Was this one of the notes that he brought home that evening, do you recollect that the note you paid to the priſoner, had the name of Dimſdale on it?——I do not.

Can you, or any of you ſay, except from the compariſon of numbers, that this is the note you gave to the priſoner?—I believe it to be the note by the number, and name of Dimſdale, I did not obſerve the name of Dimſdale upon it, when I gave it the priſoner.

Then from the number, and from the number only, you believe that to be the ſame note that you paid to the priſoner?—I do.

Mr. Garrow to Mr. Smart. It was not till Thurſday you communicated your ſuſpicions to anybody of this tranſaction?—No.

Had you heard any thing of the buſineſs before he told you?——No.

Do you know when he firſt heard of it?——Since the tranſaction it was that I had the information from him.

Only juſt tell me the day?——Not till the Thurſday morning.

The priſoner's houſe is on the road from Theobald's to London?—I left a fictitious meſſage.

What was it? What meſſage did you leave with his wife?—That I called about Captain Peters's buſineſs.

Did the priſoner know you?—For many years, he certainly knew I was his attorney; I left word I would call as the next morning.

At what hour?—I believe about ten.

Did you then find the priſoner in his buſineſs?—His wife called him out of the ſchool to me.

Then you found him in his buſineſs?—Yes.

You deſcribed him in his ſlippers?——Yes.

Not in the dreſs of a man going to fly?—Not in the leaſt.

He came to you directly?—Yes.

He came with you willingly?—Yes, he ſhifted his coat in the room above ſtairs, and I ſtaid in the adjoining room.

Was anybody in the room above ſtairs where he ſhifted?—Only his wife.

Did you ſearch his wife?——Certainly not.

Did you take her to London?—No.

If ſhe had had any property given her ſhe might have concealed it?—Yes.

She might have burnt it?—Yes. When we came to London he delivered me that bank note, as I before ſtated.

Then inſtead of being put under his bed, given to his wife, thrown out of the window, or put down his throat, he carried it to London?—He certainly did.

When he came to Mr. Preſcott's houſe he inſtantly produced the one, and directed

ed you where to find the other?——He did.

Without any ſort of heſitation?——He did.

Now I aſk you this, what are the ſort of inſtruments which you have been accuſtomed to ſee Mr. Preſcott ſign?—I have ſeen him ſign letters, deeds, and draughts.

And abundance of other things, orders of removal, orders of baſtardy, and the whole of Burn's Juſtice?—Yes.

How many hundreds of the one do you ſuppoſe for one of the draughts—I ſuppoſe I may ſay two thouſand to one, of thoſe in preference to draughts.

Now pray do not you know that Mr. Preſcott adopts another character of hand-writing in thoſe inſtruments to what he uſes in his draughts?——They are ſo much alike I cannot tell the difference.

I aſk you, Sir, excluding from your mind all compariſons of hand-writing, whether looking at this draught you will venture to ſwear it is not Mr. Preſcott's hand-writing?——I will venture to ſwear that I do not believe, nor that I ſhould never believe, it to be his hand-writing.

Without any compariſon of hand-writing?——I ſhould have ventured to ſwear I did not believe it to be his hand-writing.

Will you venture to ſwear that Mr. Preſcott uſes preciſely the ſame character of hand-writing in theſe inſtruments and in draughts? I aſk you whether there is any intentional difference?—I believe none; when I taxed him with copying his hand-writing, then he denied it, and aſked if Mr. Preſcott was not angry.

Without offence one may aſk whether Mr. Preſcott would not be angry that any perſon ſhould receive his money who had no right to it?——Mr. Garrow would in the ſame ſituation.

——— ATKINSON ſworn.

I am a clerk in Mr. Preſcott's houſe, I never ſaw him write.

Look at theſe two bank notes?—Here is my hand-writing, Dimſdale and Co. on both; the 30l. I am very particular in; I received it on the 25th of July, and the 15l. appears from the book to be received on that day, but I am not ſo particular to one as the other, as I have omitted putting dates to them; I do not know to whom they were paid.

Mr. Garrow. I take it for granted you are what we call an out-door clerk?—No, I am not; I receive theſe in exchange of draughts, I received the 30l. from a cuſtomer, it is cuſtomary in the clearing houſe to put a letter. I have very good reaſon to know it comes from there; after I bring home the bank notes, I give them to the clerk, and what becomes of them afterwards I know not.

JOHN RUSSELL ſworn.

I have lived with Mr. Preſcott upwards of twenty years; I am his land ſteward; I have often ſeen him write.

Look at that draught?——I do not believe it to be his hand writing, it differs in the G, in the firſt place, and in the flouriſh after the ſtroke acroſs the T.

If you had ſeen that note any where elſe, ſhould you have taken it to be Mr. Preſcott's hand writing?—I ſhould not.

Mr. Garrow. Whether, independent of all you have heard, upon a bare inſpection, you would not have taken it to be his hand writing?——If the note had been tendered to me for money, I ſhould not have given money for it, I ſhould have looked to the ſignature of it, which I am ſo well acquainted with, and upon the inſpection of it I ſhould have been ſatisfied it was not.

Would you upon the bare abſtract view of it have ſworn that it was not his hand writing?——I certainly ſhould.

Court to Clayton. Have there not been many thouſand pounds of theſe draughts paid without objection?——Yes.

Court to Priſoner. Mr. Banning, do you wiſh to ſay anything to the Jury in your own defence before your councel calls your witneſſes.

(The priſoner made no reply.)

Court to Jury. Gentlemen, I ought to ſtate ſtate to you what has paſſed between the banker's clerk and me juſt now, the two different notes appear to be entered without any dates, they are entered once in the clearing book when the clerk brings them in, then they are entered again in the book with the bills ſet down, the numbers correſpond, and both entries are made, not one book from the other, but both from the notes themſelves; ſo that it appears from the books ſcarcely poſſible that there could be a miſtake in the figure in both the books.

JOHN COCK ſworn.

I live at Edmonton, I have known the priſoner about twelve years.

What buſineſs does he follow?——He was an uſher to the ſchool; I knew him when he was apprentice to the ſchool-maſter; I had two of my children at his houſe at the time he was apprehended; he had a very good character for honeſty, was entruſted with pariſh affairs, and every thing of that kind.

JOHN BROWN ſworn.

I live at Edmonton, I am a plumber and glazier, I have known him from a child down to this time; his general character has been a very good one, I have no children old enough to go to ſchool, or elſe for any thing I know they would have gone there.

FRANCIS CARTER ſworn.

I live in Moorfields, I am a ſurveyor, I have known him three years, he is a ſchool maſter by profeſſion, and lately he has taken upon him to write for painters; his character is a very good one for all I know.

BENJAMIN CARTER ſworn.

I am a baker at Edmonton, I have known him fifteen or ſixteen years, he bore a very good character.

RICHARD GOOD ſworn.

I live in Biſhopſgate-ſtreet, I am a ſtationer; I knew this young man two years, he dealt with me, I always took him to be a very honeſt character.

HENRY RICHARDSON ſworn.

I live at Edmonton; I am a hair-dreſſer and ſhop-keeper; I have known him from his childhood upwards, he bore a general character.

——— SKELTON ſworn.

I have known him ten years, I have intruſted him to ſettle my books and affairs, and always found him very honeſt and juſt.

Court. It appears clearly that this was a man truſted as a man of good character.

GUILTY, Death.

He was humbly recommended by the Jury to his Majeſty's mercy, having a wife and a very large family.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before

MR. RECORDER.

---

751. JOHN FRAY was indicted for that he, not having the fear of God before his eyes, but being moved and ſeduced by the inſtigation of the devil, on the 11th of September laſt, with force and arms, at the pariſh of St. Pancras, upon one Thomas Wakin, in the peace of God and our Lord the King then and there being, feloniouſly, wilfully, and of his malice aforethought, did make an aſſault; and that he the ſaid John Fray, him the ſaid Thomas Wakin in both his hands, did then and there take, and the ſaid Thomas into a certain pond of water there ſituated, feloniouſly, wilfully, and of his malice aforethought, did caſt and throw, by which means of caſting the ſaid Thomas, he the ſaid Thomas was then and there ſuffocated and drowned, of which ſuffocating and drowning the ſaid Thomas then and there inſtantly died; and ſo the jurors aforeſaid ſay, that the ſaid John Fray him the ſaid Thomas Wakin did kill and murder.

The priſoner was alſo charged with the like murder on the coroner's inquiſition.

THOMAS WALLIS ſworn.

On Sunday laſt about ſix in the afternoon, as I was going in Tottenham-court-road, I ſaw a mob of people, I went to enquire the matter, I went near the place, and I was informed that they were going to duck a pick-pocket, then I returned to inform my wife and a friend in the road of what was the matter.

Court. Was this aſſembly of people near any pond?—Yes.

Was it a large pond?—Yes, it has been gravel pits, and there is water in it, and my wife, and friend (the wife of another tradeſman) croſſed the road, and went to the north ſide of the pond, and when I came there I ſaw a boy about fifty or ſixty yards diſtance in the water, about five or ſix yards from the ſhore, he appeared to be about ſixteen or ſeventeen years old, he was above his middle in water when I firſt ſaw him, I left my wife and friend and went to the place where the boy was, and when I came near the place the boy was crying and holding up his hands, and begging that the people would give him leave to duck himſelf; juſt as I came to the pond ſide the boy took his hat off his head and flung it into the road near the pond where I ſtood, I thought he was going to duck himſelf, but he did not, he dipped himſelf down into the water.

Court. How high did the water come then when he dipped himſelf down?—As near as I can recollect about his navel or above his breaſt, he ſaid he could not ſwim and begged they would give him leave to duck himſelf, and then ſomebody perſuaded him to come out, he came out near the ſhore, and ſome man, as the boy was coming out, in a blue coat, a genteel looking man, ſpoke to the boy and ſaid a raſh word, but what it was I do not recollect.

Court. Did he ſpeak with warmth or how?—He ſpoke with warmth, and the boy as he came out came near where I was, and I had a hard matter to keep from being puſhed in, he came ſo near to me, the priſoner at the bar ſays give me hold of him or give him to me, I cannot ſay which, I was ſo flurried.

Court. Where was the priſoner?—He ſtood by the ſide of the pond about five or ſix feet from me, he then took him by the ſide of the collar and the boy fell down and begged for mercy as he could not ſwim.

Court. How do you mean fell down on his knees, or how?—He tumbled down. The priſoner took hold of him by the thighs or ſome part of his body, I cannot ſay what and lifted him off the ground and threw him into the water, and as he threw him into the water, the boy holding faſt by the priſoner pulled him in, they both went into the water together about a yard from the ſhore, or hardly ſo much, when they were both in the water, the boy either got looſe from the man or they were ſevered from each other.

Not by any other perſons aſſiſtance?—There was no body in the water but themſelves; then the priſoner took the boy a ſecond time and ducked him under the water.

Court. Had he hold of his hand then?—He had hold of ſome part of his body, his clothes, or ſomething; then he gave him a puſh from him, and the boy went a couple of yards from him, ſwimming, as I thought; I then ſaw him ſtruggling for about a minute at the top of the water. I never ſaw any body ſo near death, and I never ſaw him more.

Court. When the boy was ſtruggling on the ſurface of the water, what did the priſoner do?——The priſoner was on the ſide of the water ſtanding; a woman ſtanding by me ſaid, ſhe was d——d if the boy was not drowned; I ſaid to the people by me, I think it proper that the man who threw in the boy ſhould be ſecured. I turned about, and ſaw the priſoner on the outſide the people; I went up to him immediately, and took him faſt by the collar; ſays I, you raſcal, how dare you to drown the boy? He made ſome reply to me, but what, I really do not recollect; there were ſeveral people aſſiſted me, but as the man had been in the water I was afraid of getting ting myſelf wetted and dirtied, I let go of him; ſomebody laid hold of him; he was at the edge of the pond, and he went into the water; I ſaw him in the water, when he was in the water: I then left them, and went to my wife, that was about fifty yards off: what I am telling you now was what I omitted when I was examined before the coroner. I went to my wife, and told her that the boy was drowned; that I had taken hold of the man that threw the boy into the water by the collar, and that I would go and ſee whether the priſoner was ſecured; ſhe begged I would not, but I did; when I came to the pond I ſaw the priſoner in the water, and a good way up to his middle; there were a couple of men ſtripped that were diving after the boy.

Court. Was the priſoner diving too?—No, Sir, he was not above his middle; he was ſtanding about breaſt high in the water.

Did he offer to do any thing? —— I did not ſee him.

For what purpoſe could he have got up to his middle in the water?—I cannot ſay; when I returned from my wife to the water I ſaw the priſoner in the water, but his purpoſe I do not know.

How far was he from the man?—About four or five yards; he did not return till he found he was out of the depth; where the man died was a very deep place, and where he ſtood was not deep.

How large is this pond?——A largiſh pond; it had been a gravel pit, it is now a pond, where boys go a bathing, and where they get logs and ſwim about.

From the circumſtance, and your obſervation, what do you ſuppoſe was the purpoſe of the priſoner being in the water up to the middle?——I ſuppoſe he went to ſee if he could get the boy out; he went near the place where the boy went out, but when he found it was deep he returned; when the priſoner came out of the water the ſecond time, ſomebody laid hold of him.

How long was that after you ſaw him the laſt time?——About a couple of minutes; I went and looked at him, to ſee that it was the ſame perſon, and then I left him.

Court. Are you ſure the priſoner is the ſame perſon?——I really believe he is the ſame man.

Can you be poſitive? —— He has the ſame dreſs, and the ſame appearance.

The queſtion is, whether he is the ſame man?—I really believe he is the ſame man, I have no reaſon in the world to doubt it is the ſame perſon.

What number of people do you ſuppoſe might be aſſembled about this pond?—— Near the place where I was there might be one hundred; but there were people all round; a great concourſe of people.

The charge againſt the boy was, that he had picked ſome body's pocket.——Yes, Sir; I was not there at the firſt.

Did you hear the boy ſay any thing about that?—No, Sir, only the boy was begging for mercy.

Priſoner. Did not you ſee the boy and me down together?——Yes, I did, when he firſt threw him into the pond.

Did not you ſee me follow the boy, and then, ſays I, my good Sir, I cannot ſwim, I went out of my depth?——I never heard him ſay any ſuch thing, but I ſaw him, I ſuppoſe that was twenty minutes after I loſt ſight of the boy.

But you ſtaid talking with your wife ſome time, and telling her you had collared the man, then you went back to ſee the man again, and then it was you ſaw him ſo deep in the water?——Yes.

Court to Jury. You ſee, gentlemen, he did not ſee him go into the water the ſecond time, but when he returned he was in the wat r.

JOHN ELLIOTT ſworn.

What did you ſee of this unfortunate buſineſs?——I was coming up Tottenham Court Road between five and ſix laſt Sunday afternoon, and I ſaw a mob with a pickpocket, and I went up to the water, and I ſaw a boy, I knew him very well; he uſed to draw beer.

How many people were there?——Nigh upon a thouſand people; I knew the boy, and I called to him.

Where

Where did you ſee the boy when you came up?—In the pond.

How far in?—In, I ſuppoſe, five or ſix yards from the ſhore, and I called to him; ſays I, Tom, Tom Wadham, and I ſaid, come out, nobody ſhall hurt you in the world; he was a long while before he could ſee me, but when he could ſee me he made to me, and came to the ſhore-ſide to me; ſome gentlemen ſays to me, as I was catching hold of the boy's hand, oh! this is ſome fellow of yours, ſo I turned round to look at him, and the boy juſt caught hold of my hand, and the priſoner then came and catched him out of my hand, and he ſaid, come here, my man, ſays he, I will take care of you; as ſoon as ever he caught hold of him, the boy fell a ſcreaming, and he took him under the hams, and by the collar, and threw him into the pond; afterwards, whether the priſoner did go in himſelf, or whether ſome body puſhed him in, I cannot ſay.

How far did he throw the boy in?——I ſuppoſe a yard, or a yard and a half, or thereabouts.

Then the priſoner was in the water himſelf?——Yes.

But whether he went in, or was puſhed in, you cannot ſay?—I cannot; then the people that were there ſaid, why do not you follow him? the poor little fellow is ſinking, the boy is drowning, the boy is drowning; the people hallooed out all to the priſoner, what is the reaſon you do not catch hold of him? and he made anſwer, I cannot ſwim, I cannot ſwim; the boy ſtruggled greatly, and then two men began to dive after him.

How far did the priſoner go in, do you imagine?——I ſuppoſe about five or ſix yards

Did you ſee the priſoner come back?—Yes.

Did it appear to you that the priſoner went as far as he could for the depth of the water?—No, I imagine not, he was much about breaſt high, and he cried out to the mob of people that he could not ſwim.

Do not you think that the priſoner meant to uſe his beſt endeavour to ſave the boy?——I did not ſee him make any offer to plunge in after him.

Court. I think, when a man has got as high as you point out, unleſs he can ſwim he muſt neceſſarily be drowned himſelf, do not you think ſo?—I do not think but the man would, if he could get at him in his own ſafety, but he was afraid of his own life to go after him.

Jury. Are you of opinion that the man exerted himſelf to the utmoſt to ſave the boy?——He never went any otherwiſe than breaſt high.

Court. Do you think that the man would have ſaved the boy if he could?——I do imagine he would, if he could, if it lay in his power.

Did you ſee the boy taken out?——No, Sir; when he came out of the pond it was in Squire Mortimer's field; and when we had taken hold of the priſoner we ſecured him.

Did you ſee the boy taken out?—No, I ſaw him the next day.

Jury. Was the boy upon the water when the priſoner went in after him or had he ſunk?——They were in both together after he threw this boy in, he was in.

Was that declaration that he could not ſwim, before the boy had ſunk or after?—After.

How long after?——About half a minute, the boy was in firſt, but he was down directly after him.

Priſoner. Did not I pull off my jacket immediately as I was pulled in the water and go after the boy immediately?—Yes, you did pull your jacket off, and went as far as you could go.

Priſoner. The boy's hair and his head were above water, as far as his eyes.

Court. Pray is the pond a level pond or an unequal pond?—— It is very unequal.

Jury. Where did the man take off his jacket, when he was in the water or on ſhore?—I ſaw him without his jacket, but where it was I cannot ſwear.

JAME

JAMES POMROY ſworn.

I was walking along Tothenham-court-road, and they ſaid there was a thief, I went to the pond, and I laid hold of the boy, there were a great quantity of people there.

Were they charging him as a pick pocket?——Yes, I told the mob the conſequence of the pond, that it was a deep place, but that I would take the boy into cuſtody, and take him to a Juſtice.

What are you?—I am a watchman; and a man who has been a conſtable belonging to Marybone, one Thomas Young, ſaid, you ought to be ducked as well as the boy, and I expected it; with that the mob forced him away from me, and my coat was torn in trying to ſave him, they forced the boy from me and took him into the pond.

Who did?——It was a man in a blue coat, a good creditable ſort of a man, but who he was I cannot ſay.

How did he put him into the pond?——They forced him into the pond, I was glad to get away from the pond for fear of being ducked myſelf, I went away a little diſtance from the pond, and I ſaw the laſt witneſs go and call to the boy, he ſaid, young Wadham come out; the boy was cloſe to the pond ſide, and Elliott had hold of the boy, and with that the priſoner at the bar took him out of his hands, and chucked him into the pond, he caught hold of him and flung him in by main force; after the boy ſunk, the priſoner who ſtood by me, took off his jacket, and went into the pond with intent to ſave him, he told the mob he could not ſwim.

Jury. Was it after the boy ſunk or before?——The boy was ſunk, the priſoner went about breaſt high, and he told the mob that he could not ſwim.

Did he go in as far as he could, without loſing his own life?——I cannot ſay but what he did.

Did other perſons go in?—There were two or three more went in.

They could ſwim could they?—They could ſwim.

Did they dive after the boy?—They did.

When was the boy taken out?——I do not know, I took care of the priſoner, and when I came back he was taken out, I believe it was three quarters of an hour.

Jury. You ſaid in the beginning of your evidence, that you told the people the water was very deep?—I did.

You are ſure of that?—Yes.

Do you apprehend the priſoner heard you?—I do not know that he did, there were ſuch a quantity of people that I was afraid of being ducked myſelf, but I am ſure I did ſay ſo.

Court to Priſoner. Have you anything to offer on your behalf to the Jury?

Priſoner. Mr. Errington who keeps Kilburne-wells knows me, and Sir George Rodney would give me a character, but I cannot write, and I could not get anybody to write for me.

WILLIAM LEICESTER ſworn.

I am come voluntarily of my own accord to give evidence of what I ſaw of the matter, being there preſent; I was going up Tottenham-court-road, on Sunday evening about ſix o'clock, and oppoſite to Midford-place I ſaw a mob, I went to ſee what was the matter, and among the mob I met with a Mr. Gaſcoine, who lives in Monmouth-ſtreet, who I knew very well; he told me that two men had been fighting, and that it was over on account of a boy having picked a pocket, and they were going to duck him; I went cloſe to the ſide of the pond, and I ſaw the boy forced into the pond by a gentleman in blue, whom I ſuppoſed to be the gentleman that had his pocket picked, the mob hallooed out to the boy to duck himſelf, and the boy begged and prayed, and deſired that he might not be ducked; and ſaid, he had rather be whipped, or anything rather than be ducked; upon which he drew backwards to the pond, the length I ſuppoſe of five or ſix yards, he made an attempt to duck himſelf, but never ducked himſelf higher than his ſhoulders; this man Elliot called out to him, then he came out, and when he came to the bank of the pond, ſomebody put their hand to him, I ſaw a hand put out, but whoſe it was I cannot ſay; upon which ſeveral of the mob cried out he had not been ducked half enough, and one man ſwore he ought to be ducked over head and ears; the priſoner ſoner at the bar took hold by the collar of the coat, and the waiſtband of his breeches, as nearly as I can recollect, in order to throw him in; the boy clung to him, and went in with him; the boy, almoſt inſtantly as he was in, I look upon it he was not above two yards from the ſhore, he began inſtantly to ſink, I ſuppoſe it to be from the weight of his clothes; ſeveral cried out that the boy was drowning; upon which the priſoner pulled off his jacket, and the priſoner and ſeveral people uſed their beſt efforts to ſave the boy.

How nigh did he go?—He went ſo high at one time, I could but juſt ſee one of his ſhoulders; there was a boy floating about in the pond upon two large pieces of timber, like a Saint Andrew's croſs, and he came ſo near to the place where the boy ſunk, that I had my apprehenſions whether this timber might hinder the boy from riſing; they were very large timbers, almoſt as long as that table each of them.

Court. From what you obſerved upon this occaſion, you have no conception of any intention in the priſoner to deſtroy this boy?—Not in the leaſt, I look upon it in no other light, than he was the dupe of the mob.

Did the priſoner know of your coming?—No, Sir, not in the leaſt; I live with Mr. Croft, a ſilk mercer in Fleet-ſtreet, and I told him I ſhould be glad to come, and he gave me leave; I ſent my direction to the priſoner this morning, and deſired I might be ſent for when his trial came on.

Jury. We have heard nothing from any of the other witneſſes, reſpecting this croſs piece of timber.

Elliot. I cannot diſcern it was nigh the boy, it was further off than from here to the window.

Jury to Wallis. Did you ſee the piece of timber?—I ſaw it, but it was at a diſtance, the mob hallooed to the boy to come out.

Court to Jury. Gentlemen, in order to direct your attention to the evidence, it may not be improper for me to make an obſervation previous to the ſumming it up; which obſervation I have ſtated to my learned brother, and the Recorder, and they concur with me. Gentlemen, this common error of puniſhing pickpockets by ducking, is a thing that happens, we all know, very frequently; certainly ſpeaking in general upon the ſubject, it is never accompanied with an intention of the parties acting in it of taking away the life of the offender; according to the courſe of the law of this country, certainly ſuch a procedure is not ſtrictly juſtifiable; the conſtitution of this country has provided a puniſhment for ſuch offenders, which is to be inflicted on them if they are guilty, upon conviction, in the ordinary courſe of juſtice; but yet, gentlemen, we are to conſider, that we are men, and that the law gives ſome indulgence to the infirmities of human nature; and it is in common experience before you all, where certain provocations are given, and a man is ſlain on thoſe provocations, the law indulges the infirmities and imbecilities of human nature, and allows a jury, from that provocation, to reduce the crime of murder to manſlaughter; and I ſhould conceive, in a caſe like the preſent, that although by no means it would be a ſtrict juſtification of the priſoner, yet, it is competent to the jury, taking the circumſtances of the caſe into their conſideration, and ſeeing that there was no particular malevolence or deſign to deſtroy the perſon, to admit that conſideration to mitigate the charge, and to reduce it from murder to manſlaughter: gentlemen, that is the general idea that I entertain upon a ſubject of this kind, and in theſe ſentiments my learned brother, and my friend Mr. Recorder, concur: I will therefore now ſtate the evidence: [Here the learned Judge ſummed up the evidence, and then added] This is an obſervation which, I think, may be made, that, at leaſt, ſpeaking for myſelf, this is the firſt inſtance that ever I knew of ſo unfortunate an event following the puniſhment of ducking; ſo that you muſt ſee there has not been any precedent to give a caution to thoſe people that act upon the ſudden effort of paſſion from the deteſtation of this buſineſs ſineſs of picking pockets; there has not been any occaſion for any precedent to put people on their guard: I did at the outſet take notice to you of the indulgence of the law to the infirmities of human nature, and it does ſeem clear to me upon this occaſion, and the witneſſes ſeem to ſpeak very plainly and evidently, as well as what the laſt witneſs concluded with, that the priſoner had no ill intention or malevolence whatſoever; I ſhould therefore think, gentlemen, that you will be well warranted, if you ſee it in that light, to reduce and mitigate this charge againſt the priſoner from murder to manſlaughter; but if you think that the man had a diabolical intention to deſtroy one of his Majeſty's ſubjects, (whether he had any perſonal enmity againſt him or not, does not ſignify) then you will find him guilty of murder, but I cannot ſee any ground to raiſe ſuch an inference from this evidence, but if you do, you will find him guilty generally upon this indictment.

The jury withdrew for twenty minutes, and returned with a verdict.

GUILTY,

Of Manſlaughter.

Alſo guilty of Manſlaughter on the Coroner's Inquiſition.

To be fined 1s. and impriſoned ſix months in Newgate.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice GOULD.

---

752. MARY GEE and ALICE FRIZEN were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 15th of Auguſt laſt, fifteen pillow caſes, value 30s. two table cloths, value 4s. four napkins, value 6s. three blankets, value 3s. one ſheet, value 5s. four flat irons, value 3s. one waiſtcoat, value 2s. two handkerchiefs, value 3s. one neckcloth, value 1s. 6d. the property of Thomas Pritchett, in his dwelling houſe.

THOMAS PRITCHETT ſworn.

I live in Threadneedle-ſtreet; I have at many times loſt things out of my room, and in particular ſome time in Auguſt, I think on the 13th; and I took out a warrant againſt the priſoners; I ſaid to the priſoner Gee, Mary, I have loſt a damaſk napkin, and nobody can have it but you, or by your knowledge; ſhe ſaid, ſhe was very ſorry, and could not think how it could go; the bureau was in the middle room; I always gave her the key of my room whenever I went out; I never went out but if I left a neckcloth it was gone; I began to ſuſpect Mary Gee, who was frequently drunk, and by the advice of my friends I took out a warrant againſt her who was my ſervant; I told her, if ſhe would tell me where the things were I would redeem them, but ſhe never informed me; the other priſoner lived ſervant up ſtairs, and ſhe having pawned her miſtreſs's things, I came at the knowledge of my own; I found them at Mr. Jones's, a pawnbroker.

Did you ever get any of your things from there?—Yes, ſome pillow caſes, and ſeveral other things.

THOMAS JONES ſworn.

Do you know the priſoner Mary Gee?——Yes, ſhe uſed our houſe for theſe five months paſt.

What did ſhe pawn at your ſhop?——A waiſtcoat, fifteen pillow caſes, a table-cloth, three napkins, ſeven towels, and ſundry other things.

Were they all pledged ſeparately by Mary Gee?——No, ſome by Alice Frizen; they were all pledged in the name of Ann Dyer; Gee came as often as the other, but I cannot ſwear to any thing that ſhe pledged but that handkerchief; they ſaid it was one and the ſame thing; I thought her name was Ann Dyer then; they never pledged but one thing at a time from February to Auguſt.

Proſecutor. There is no mark on the linen, they are mine and nobody's elſe.

ELIZABETH SAUNDERS ſworn.

I have frequently gone to Mr. Pritchett's houſe houſe, and I have frequently ſeen his maid very much in liquor, that is the priſoner Gee, and on one day I ſaw her take down the key and open the cloſet door where he kept his liquors, but where ſhe got the key from I do not know, and ſhe took out a bottle with liquor, and put it there again and locked the door, but what ſhe did with the key I do not know.

Proſecutor. This falſe key I found in my cellar wrapped in the tail of a woman's gown, and put under a pail, I have tried it, and it opens all the drawers of my bureau but the top, the top being the mother key it will not open that.

Priſoner Gee. When I was hired to Mr. Pritchett, I was informed he was a broker and auctioneer, then I found he got his living by giving falſe characters to ſervants, to get them into houſes to rob their maſters and miſtreſſes, and things are brought to his houſe; that woman is his daughter in law, and her mother is his wife.

Priſoner Frizen. What Jones has ſworn againſt me is falſe.

RICHARD GETLING ſworn.

I have known Mary Gee for eight, nine, or ten years, ſhe has lived with me at different times, and always behaved very honeſtly.

MARY WATTON ſworn.

I am a watch-maker's wife, I come to ſpeak for Alice Frizen, I have known her almoſt three years, a very good character as far as I know of her, here was another gentleman with me, but he is loſt in the croud.

Court to Jury. Gentlemen, theſe things to make it a capital offence, muſt be all taken at one time.

MARY GEE, GUILTY,

Of ſtealing to the value of 39s.

To be privately whipped and diſcharged.

ALICE FRIZEN, NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice ASHURST.

753. JOHN BLOMBERG was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 24th of Auguſt, one man's linen ſhirt, value 8s, the property of Roger Evans, John Evans, and William Evans, privily in their ſhop.

WILLIAM EVANS ſworn.

I live at Wapping.

Who are you in partnerſhip with?—Roger and John Evans, on the 24th of Auguſt laſt, the priſoner came in to look at ſome white ſhirts, I ſhewed him two papers of plain ones, he then wiſhed to look at ſome ruffled ones; while our young man Thomas Edwards was opening a paper to ſhew him ſome, and I was making up a parcel which could not take me more than half a minute, I turned round, when I came to look at the priſoner, he had a ſhirt under his waiſtcoat, and I ſaw the mark hanging to the tail of it, which hung behind his waiſtcoat, as ſoon as he ſaw my eyes fixed on the ſhirt, he immediately ran out of the ſhop, I deſired Thomas Edwards to purſue him.

THOMAS EDWARDS ſworn.

On the 24th of Auguſt, between ſeven and eight, the priſoner came into our ſhop and deſired to ſee ſome white ſhirts, I ſhewed him two papers, he then deſired to ſee ſome ruffled ones, I ſhewed him ſome, he then aſked the price, and immediately ran out of the ſhop; Mr. Evans ſaid, he had a ſhirt under his coat, and deſired me to purſue him which I did, and overtook him, he ran about thirty yards, and one of the witneſſes attempted to ſeize him, but he immediately ſtruck him down, he ran a few yards further, and ſeeing another man ready to ſeize him, threw the ſhirt from him, I ſaw the ſhirt taken up and delivered to Mr. Evans, it was given to Mr. William Evans by a ſtranger.

(The ſhirt produced and ſworn to value 8s.)

WILLIAM SAUNDERS ſworn.

Between ſeven and eight I heard the cry of ſtop thief! at Mr. Evans's door, I turned round and ſaw a man run up to me, I tried

I tried to catch at him, and he ſtruck me down.

JOHN COOK ſworn.

As I was coming from my work between ſeven and eight, I ſaw the priſoner and ſeized him, I never quitted him till I brought him to the proſecutor's ſhop.

The Priſoner called ſix witneſſes who gave him a very good character.

Mr. Garrow. Did you ſearch this man when he was taken?—No.

Do you know whether he had any money in his pocket when he was taken?—I cannot tell.

GUILTY, 4s. 10d.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice ASHURST.

---

754. TIMOTHY BRYAN was indicted for that he, not having the fear of God before his eyes, but being moved and ſeduced by the inſtigation of the devil, on the 25th day of September laſt, in and upon one Francis Weeden, in the peace of God and our Lord the King then and there being, feloniouſly, willfully, and of his malice aforethought, did make an aſſaul, and with both his hands and feet, him the ſaid Francis, in and upon the head, breaſt, belly, ſtomach, back, loins, and ſides, of the ſaid Francis, divers times did ſtrike, beat, and kick, and him did to and againſt the ground divers times, caſt and throw, giving him as well by the ſaid ſtriking, beating, and kicking, in and upon the head, breaſt, belly, ſtomach, back, loins, and ſides of the ſaid Francis, divers mortal bruiſes, of which he lingered till the 4th of October laſt, and on the 4th of October laſt, the ſaid Francis of the mortal bruiſes aforeſaid did die, and ſo the Jurors ſay, that the ſaid Timothy him the ſaid Francis in manner and form aforeſaid, did kill and murder.

He was alſo charged on the Coroner's inquiſition, with feloniouſly killing and ſlaying the ſaid Francis.

Owen. My Lord, the priſoner ſays, he is newly come from Ireland, and does not underſtand Engliſh well enough to know what the witneſſes ſay againſt him.

Court. Why he pleaded not guilty.

Mr. Juſtice Gould. Aſk him from what part of Ireland he comes?——From the county of Corke.

Mr. Baron Hotham. Priſoner, do not you underſtand Engliſh at all?—Not one word in ten.

Jury. He fully underſtands to give your Lordſhip a very proper anſwer.

Court. I fancy you may go on.

Court to Priſoner. You will attend to what the witneſſes ſay, and where you do not underſtand what they ſay, apply to me and I will tell you.

NICHOLAS WEEDEN ſworn.

The priſoner and the deceaſed, and ſome more were ſitting in a box, I do not know what day of the month it was.

What month?—I cannot tell.

How long ago?——About ten or eleven months ago.

Where were you ſitting?—At the ſign of the Crown, Wapping-wall, Shadwell; and as the deceaſed was going over the table, he laid his hand on a half pint pot, and his foot ſlipped, and it came cloſe to the priſoner.

Was it ſpilt upon the priſoner?——No, it was not ſpilt, there was nothing in it, with that, ſays the priſoner at the bar, if you knock my brains out, what will become of you; ſays the other, it did not go near you, with that the priſoner ſaid, he had a great mind to ſtrike him, and he got out of the box and made an offer at the deceaſed, that is he made the offer at him, and Francis Weeden ſtruck him down the eye, with that the priſoner laid hold of him, and hit him againſt the table, and broke broke the ſide of the table, and his neck and ſhoulders came againſt the coal box; then he was taken and ſtretched on a table, he could not move, and was carried up ſtairs, he was very bad all night, he was taken to his brother's houſe the next day, and on Tueſday after he was brought to the Hoſpital, and he died there.

Court. How long had you been drinking there together?—About an hour.

Were the deceaſed and the priſoner ſober, or were they in liquor?——They had been both in liquor.

Were they both ſhip mates?—Yes, both worked together till this accident of the pot falling down.

Had they been good friends?——They diſputed about one halfpenny at firſt, and they made it up afterward, and they had no words at the time at all, the deceaſed man ſaid, he lent him ſeven-pence, and they diſputed about the halfpenny.

Court. Priſoner, if you wiſh to aſk that good man anything, aſk him anything that you pleaſe; aſk him in Iriſh? (He anſwered in Iriſh.)

Court. What is that.

A Witneſs. He ſays, he is affraid of his life.

PETER SWINNEY ſworn.

Was you preſent at the time?—Yes, my Lord, from firſt to laſt, they went to the public houſe, the whole kitt of them, they got drunk, they were as well united as any men in the world during the time, we collected five ſhillings of a Saturday night for ſettling money, in collecting the money this man lent the deceaſed ſeven-pence, the little fellow the deceaſed man took a pint pot in his hand, and threw it all down whether he went to ſtrike this man or no I cannot ſay, but he chucked it into this man's breaſt, then ſays the priſoner you may as well knock my life out, and he hit him juſt over his eye, and gave the priſoner a black eye, the priſoner laid hold of him, and they both came againſt the table and fell, I never ſaw the priſoner give the deceaſed a blow.

Court. It is impoſſible to make it murder, it muſt be manſlaughter.

GUILTY

Manſlaughter.

To be fined 1s. and diſcharged.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

755. WILLIAM HUGHES was indicted for that he, on the 2d day of September, upon Edmund Lechmere, Eſq; in the peace of God and our Lord the King, then and there being, feloniouſly did make an aſſault, and did then and there in a forcible and violent manner, unlawfully, willfully, and feloniouſly demand the money of the ſaid Edmund, with intent to ſteal the ſame againſt the peace.

EDMUND LECHMERE, Eſq; ſworn.

I live in Brunſwick-row, Queen-ſquare, and I was returning home in a hackney coach, at one o'clock on the morning of Monday the 2d of September; the coach was going pretty faſt, and it ſtopped ſo ſuddenly, that I thought ſome accident had happened, or that one of the horſes had fallen, I was on the left hand corner of the coach, and was juſt going to let down that window to aſk the coachman if anything was the matter, when that inſtant the right hand door opened, and two men ruſhed in at the door, and one of them put his right-hand againſt me, and both of them at the ſame inſtant, ſaid, your watch and your money, quick, Sir; quick, be quick! they repeated it ſeveral times; the other man who afterwards made his eſcape, a much ſhorter man than the priſoner, ſeeing he had an inſtrument in his hand, I could not tell what it was, I put my hand into my breeches pocket, where I had ſome gold and ſome looſe ſilver, when at that very inſtant to my great ſurpriſe both the men who demanded my money vaniſhed from the door; I heard a voice ſay with ſome expreſſion that I cannot recollect, collect, or mention, what do you ſtop my coach for, and about the diſtance of five yards, I ſaw two men ſtruggling together; it was extremely dark, and I got out of the coach as faſt as poſſible, the coach door was put too again, when I came up to the ſpot, the coachman ſaid maſter, I have got one of them, but the other has made his eſcape; when I came up, I found the coachman and priſoner ſtruggling together; it occurred to me at that very inſtant, from a manœuvre of the priſoner as he was turning himſelf, that he meant to make his eſcape by pulling off his coat; I had no arms, nor a ſtick, I ſtruck him with my fiſt, and he fell backwards, and I then ſeized him by the collar, and held him down and called out watch, and it was ſome minutes before the watchmen came, but when they did come up, they explained the circumſtance of their not coming up immediately, for they were calling the hour, and were at a diſtant end of the ſtreet, and when they did come up, I will do them the juſtice to ſay, they uſed every attention and zeal in taking the man; the coachman was ſo active, that he left his coach and horſes without any perſon on earth to take care of them, becauſe he would ſecure him; the man was taken to the watch-houſe, he had no arms of any kind about him, he had not a knife at all; this is the whole of what I have to ſay, but I think in juſtice, I muſt add this, that he made uſe of no abuſive imprecations whatever, or dreadful expreſſions of any ſort, and he had no weapons about him of any ſort; it would have been impoſſible if we had not ſecured this man at the inſtant, that I could ever have recollected their features, for I was coming by the rails of Bloomſbury Square, to Queen's Square, and they were with their backs to the lamps, therefore I could not ſee their faces.

CHARLES CUNNINGHAM ſworn.

I was going acroſs Queen Square, with that gentleman home, and I ſaw two men running after the coach, and they hallooed out ſtop, ſtop, juſt as I came to the corner of Bloomſbury Square I ſtopped, and one of them ſays, damn you, ſtop this minute, I replied to the man, damn you, what do you want to ſtop my coach for? and I immediately jumped off my box; the other made off, and I caught this man at the coach door; I heard the priſoner demand the gentleman's watch and money.

Court. How do you know it was him? ——Becauſe nobody elſe was nigh but him; I laid hold of the priſoner, and got him down, and in a ſhort time the gentleman came.

—— PAYNE ſworn.

I was crying the hour of one, in Southampton-ſtreet, Bloomſbury, I heard the cry of watch, watch, when I came up, I took hold of the priſoner, he was down on his backſide, and as I took hold of him, the gentleman and the coachman both told me they had been ſtopped, and the coach door was opened by the priſoner at the bar, and the priſoner demanded his watch and money, and he told him to deliver it quick; I never quitted him till I took him to the watch-houſe.

THOMAS FLOWER ſworn.

I heard the cry of watch, watch, I took the priſoner, I never quitted him till he came to the watch-houſe; we ſearched him, there was nothing about him but 5s. 6d. in money.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I live in the neighbourhood of Liquorpond-ſtreet, and coming along Bloomſbury Square, I was a little in liquor, and I went againſt the rails, the coach ſtopped oppoſite to me, as I turned the corner of the ſquare the coachman ran after me, and ſtruck me with the ſide of his whip.

Court. Did the priſoner appear to be drunk?—I cannot ſay he did.

WILLIAM CROPFORD ſworn.

I have known the priſoner ever ſince he was ſix or ſeven years old, he was a fiſhmonger, and his father died and left him a good deal of money.

How long has he been a fiſhmonger?—— Two or three years, I have not known him theſe

these two or three years particularly, I always thought he lived upon what his father left him; I have had dealings with him, I keep a shop at Temple Bar, I took him to be a very honest young fellow.

SAMUEL OTTER sworn.

I have known him between four and five years, I have not known him these two or three last years, I never knew a dishonest thing by him in my life.

WILLIAM HARRISON sworn.

I have known him ten years, a very honest, just man, I have not seen him some time, I do not know what he follows now, I thought he was independent, his father left him a great deal of money.

Jury. Where did he live at the time he was taken up?—I do not know, I saw him a week before.

How long before that?——I cannot rightly say.

JOHN HENSHAW sworn.

I have known him about fourteen years, I lived at the next door to his father, he bore a very honest character to the best of my knowledge, I never knew any other of him; of late years I cannot say I know so much of him, he has left our neighbourhood about two years, his father was rather opulent, and left him a good deal of money.

CHARLES ALLEN sworn.

Before the prisoner's uncle died, in his illness he got me to market for him, and he did sell a deal of fish, he took to the business himself, I thought he had a sufficiency to live on; while I knew him no man in the world bore a better character, as punctual and as upright as the day.

DAVID DAVIS sworn.

I have known him this fourteen years, he lived next door, and during the time I knew him, he bore a very good character, within these two or three last years, I have not had much acquaintance with him.

Court to Conclusion. The Court is extremely well satisfied with your behaviour, and also with the watchman, therefore if you go to the officer, you will have a liberal allowance.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

756. SAMUEL LOVEL was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 4th day of July last, twenty-eight pounds weight of barley sugar, value 20s. the property of a person unknown.

WILLIAM DENNETT sworn.

I am constable, at half after three o'clock in the morning, I saw the prisoner coming with the sugar, and I stopped him.

What did he say?——He said, he got it by sweeping the lighter he had been working on board of.

Prisoner. I told the watchman I was going to carry the sugar to the Captain.

JOSEPH FENNELL sworn.

This watchman brought him up to the watch-house, I asked him how he came by it?—He said out of the lighter he had been at work on board of.

Did you go with it to the Captain?—I did, but not with the prisoner.

Then you cannot say any thing which the Captain said.

Court. Then I cannot put the prisoner upon his defence.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the first London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

The next Part will be published in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 14th of SEPTEMBER, 1785, and the following Days;

Being the SEVENTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER VII. PART IV.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

757. CORNELIUS COLLINS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 4th day of Auguſt, one iron grate, value 2s. one iron bar, value 2d. belonging to the Right Honourable Henry Earl of Uxbridge, then and there fixed to a certain dwelling houſe of the ſaid Earl, againſt the ſtatute.

JOHN VARDY, Eſq; ſworn.

I have the direction of the works carrying on for the Earl of Uxbridge in Burlington-gardens, Vigo-lane; my Lord Uxbridge has a houſe in Burlington-gardens, we had miſſed ſeveral pieces of lead, and other things, and I happened to be there, I think, on the 4th of Auguſt, at four in the afternoon, I was informed a man was carrying a grate, and while I was talking about it, the people ſaid he was coming back, I deſired him to be brought into the houſe; while I was talking, I on a ſudden miſſed the man, he had got into the back-yard, and was walking away, not running; I called him, but he did not ſtop; I went out and ſeized him by the collar, and brought him in.

Was that the priſoner?——To the beſt of my recollection, and to the beſt of my belief he is, I will not ſwear poſitively that he is the man, the man was committed; the priſoner took us to a man that lived in Carnaby-ſtreet, one Crook, where he had ſold it at a penny a pound.

Mr. James, Priſoner's Council. Then the priſoner went voluntarily and ſhewed you where the grate was?——Yes.

Did you happen to obſerve, Sir, whether the priſoner was intoxicated or not?——He did not appear to be much intoxicated, there was a ſort of ſtupidity about him; it was an old grate, and had been mended.

Court. Deſcribe the ſituation of this grate?——There is a plate under the grate, it is under the ſtreet.

Mr. Juſtice Gould. Do you know who was at the expence of putting this grate there?——A perſon that belonged to the Duke of Queenſborough.

JOHN CROOK ſworn.

I am a ſmith, I live in Carnaby-ſtreet, my wife bought the grate, I was not at home.

ANN CROOKE ſworn.

The priſoner brought a grate, and an iron bar to our houſe, the 4th or 5th of Auguſt, he ſaid, here is a bit of old iron for you miſtreſs; I put it into the ſcales and weighed it, we buy old iron, it weighed thirty-ſeven pounds, I gave him three ſhillings and one penny for it.

I

Is that the uſual price for old iron?——Yes.

Did he ſay how he came by it?——No, nor I had not the preſence of mind to aſk him, becauſe he brought it in open day-light on his head.

(The grate produced by John Crooke.)

This is the grate, I always buy every thing in open day-light.

Court. But then you ſee, from this inſtance, how neceſſary it is to diſtruſt a little.

JAMES ROBJOHN ſworn.

I fixed this iron at the front of Queenſborough-houſe about May laſt, by the orders of the Duke of Queenſborough's ſervants, I know it to be the ſame iron.

ANDREW MORLEY ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner go down Cork-ſtreet with this grate on his head, on Thurſday, which was the day on which it was miſſed; it wanted about ten minutes of ſix; I cannot ſay he was ſober, he was rather in liquor.

JAMES THOMPSON ſworn.

When we went before Juſtice Hyde, he deſired me to take the dimenſions of this grate, I meaſured it, and it tallies with the hole.

Mr. James. My Lord, I am inſtructed that this was not fixed, but was found, if ſo, it will do away the indictment.

JAMES COWPER ſworn.

Were you in company with the priſoner on the 4th of Auguſt in the afternoon?—I was going paſt there accidentally in the courſe of my buſineſs, I obſerved the priſoner pick up a grate, I was very nigh Cork-ſtreet, by Burlington-buildings, and I ſaw a grate lay there, and the priſoner came up to me, and aſked me, if it belonged to me; I told him no, I knew nothing about it, then ſays he, I will take it up, and make ſome beer of it.

Were theſe the particular expreſſions he made uſe of?——Yes.

Are you poſitive of that?——Yes.

What part of Cork-ſtreet was it?—Near Burlington-buildings.

Vardy. After you have paſſed Cork-ſtreet before you come to Vigo-lane, the outſide of the houſe is palliſaded in the coach-way.

Court to Cowper. What part of the ſtreet was it in?——In the road-way, quite from the kirb, it was detached from any buildings, it was laying by itſelf.

Was it in the ſtreet that communicates into Saville-ſtreet?——It was laying upſide down, quite in the middle of the coachway, not on the pavement.

THOMAS BINDER ſworn.

I am in partnerſhip with Edward Wallis; and the priſoner worked with us at Uxbridge-houſe, he was a bricklayers labourer, he has worked for us ſome years, I never heard any thing amiſs of him till this time.

Is he to your knowledge a hard-working induſtrious man?——The ſame as other labourers.

——— BARNES ſworn.

I have known him between ſeven and eight years, a very honeſt hard-working man.

JOHN SOMMERS ſworn.

I have known him between ſeven and eight years, he behaved himſelf like another workman, never heard anything amiſs of him in my life.

DENNIS O'BRIEN ſworn.

I have known him between ten and eleven years, and upwards, he was a bedfellow of mine, a workman of mine, and a lodger of mine; I am ſure his character was extraordinary good till this preſent time.

TIMOTHY SULLIVAN ſworn.

I have known him ſixteen years, I never heard a word of a ſtain in his character till this time, he worked for me five years conſtantly.

JOHN SULLIVAN ſworn.

I have known him nine years, I worked with him both in town and country, and he he has been a lodger of mine, and I never heard anything amiss of him.

OWEN HARRINGTON sworn.

I have known him eleven years, and never heard or knew anything amiss of him before.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

758. JOSEPH NEWLAND was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 23d day of July last, twenty-eight pounds weight of lead, value 5s. belonging to Robert Keene, Esq; and then fixed to a certain building of the said Robert, against the statute.

THOMAS SAMUEL sworn.

I am a bricklayer, we have been building a house for Mr. Keene in Tabernacle-walk, St. Luke's; the main part of the house was newly covered in, it was not inhabited, nor is yet; the gutters had been laid but a few nights before, some persons stripped the gutter from the roof; we found it necessary to appoint a watch, they watched about a week, and then came to me, and informed me they had taken a thief.

What day was it?——It was the morning of the 23d of July, between three and four; it was a gutter over a back office, the tiles were torn off, no lead was carried off.

JOHN ROBINSON sworn.

On the 23d of July, I was going round between three and four, I saw the prisoner on the top of the kitchen; I turned a rattle and got assistance, and he got into the yard; I then went over the wall, and in searching about half an hour, we found the prisoner concealed in a chimney, and I saw the hold-fasts cut out and doubled up, and removed from its place.

JAMES BLUNDELL sworn.

On the 23d of July, I heard a rattle go, I made the best of my way to the rattle; I got over into the yard with Robinson, we searched the house from top to bottom, and could see or feel nothing of him, it was the dawn of the day, and a gentleman brought a light to me, and in a chimney in the lower room I found the prisoner.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

In the evening before I had been with an acquaintance of mine as far as Westminster, and was drinking till late; coming home I found it was too late to get into my lodging, and I was coming by this place, and I saw it was an empty place, and I went in to rest myself out of the way of the watch; I lay there two hours, or two hours and a half, and in the morning I awoke and found it was break of day.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

759. ROBERT HOLMES was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 8th day of August, one metal watch, value 15s. a base metal watch chain, value 6d. a stone seal, value 3d. two keys, value 2d. a pair of knee buckles, value 3s. a hat, value 2s. two waistcoats, value 3s. a pair of breeches, value 3s. a pair of stockings, value 3s. and one linen waistcoat, value 6d. the property of George Harrison.

ISAAC MASON sworn.

I live at Greenwich; I deal in brokery goods, the prisoner came to my house about the 9th of August, and sold me this watch that I have in my hand.

What did you give him for it?——Seven shillings, it is a metal watch, a very indifferent one.

Was he dressed then as he is now?——No, he had a light coat and a shirt on, he told me he was a sailor, and was going to Chatham.

GEORGE

GEORGE HARRISON ſworn.

I am a ſmith, I know the priſoner, he laid in the ſame bed with me, I loſt the things in the indictment all together, on the 8th of Auguſt; I was out in the afternoon, this is my watch, he had ſlept with me about a fortnight, I miſſed the things that night when I came home, he never came back again, he was taken on the Sunday following.

Priſoner. I took it out of the drawer.

GUILTY.

Six Months impriſonment.

Court to Maſon. I cannot help telling you, that you are in luck, in not being indicted for being the receiver of theſe ſtolen goods; for it is impoſſible that you ſhould not ſuppoſe, that that boy ſtole the watch.

One of the Jury. My Lord, I am of the buſineſs, and that watch is worth three times the money.

Court. If I could puniſh you I certainly would.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

760. ELIZABETH GOWER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 29th of January, one ſilk gown, value 5s. a cotton gown, value 5s. a ſilk petticoat, value 2s. a dimity petticoat, value 2s. a marſeilles petticoat, value 5s. two linen table cloths, value 6d. a marſeilles waiſtcoat, value 5s. two muſlin aprons, value 5s. a fringed ſhawl, value 6d. a marſeilles waiſtcoat, value 2s. a pair of boots, value 2s. a pair of cotton ſtockings, value 12d. one ſhift, value 12d. four ſmall pieces of muſlin, value 12d. the property of Thomas Thrale.

THOMAS THRALE ſworn.

I am a coach-maker, I work in Long Acre; in the beginning of laſt January, I cannot ſay the day, I loſt ſeveral articles which my wife can name, I know I loſt my coats.

ANN THRALE ſworn.

I loſt the things mentioned in the indictment, theſe things were taken out of my drawers in my bed room, they all went from one place, which makes me ſuſpect they all went at once, I found one of my gowns about ſeven months afterwards, the priſoner lodged with me five or ſix months, ſhe came to me in December, they were furniſhed lodgings, ſhe came to me as a married woman, Mr. and Mrs. Gower, and officer told me they had the priſoner in cuſtody that day for robbing her lodging, and he ſaid to me did ſhe rob you, I ſaid no, becauſe my huſband charged me to ſay no, for fear they ſhould puniſh me for what I had ſaid, as I could not prove it at that time, I went with him to ſome pawnbrokers with ſome tickets, which he ſaid he had taken from her, and there I found my table cloth.

——— LIGHTFOOT ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. Payne, in Wardour-ſtreet, he is a pawnbroker, we had an order from Litchfield-ſtreet, to ſtop the priſoner when ſhe came to our ſhop, which we did; on the 29th of January, we took in of her a table cloth, this is the ſame, it was pledged in the name of Mrs. Brown, ſhe ſaid they were her own property, when ſhe left them at our houſe. (The table cloth depoſed to.) We have nine duplicates of things pawned by the priſoner, and all the reſt proved to be the priſoner's wearing apparel.

JOHN CROUCH ſworn.

I am a pawnbroker, I produce a pair of boots, which I believe was pawned by the priſoner, I am not poſitive, they were brought on the firſt of January, the proſecutor believes them to be his boots.

Court to Thrale. Look at theſe boots? ——Theſe are my boots, I know them by the tops.

Priſoner. I never pawned any ſuch thing as boots in my life, I know nothing of them, the table cloth is my own property, I bought it of a man.

Mr. Thrale. It is mine.

Jury to Profecutor. Was not there other lodgers in the houſe?——Yes, I did not ſuſpect her, had not other things occured that gave me great reaſon.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

761. ELIZABETH BLAND was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 23d day of June laſt, one pair of woman's ſtays, value 6s. one linen ſhift, value 4s. one woollen apron, value 18d. one cap, value 2s. the property of Elizabeth King.

JANE MOORE ſworn.

I live in Whitecroſs-ſtreet, the priſoner at the bar pledged theſe things with me, the 22d, 23d, and 24th of July, I knew her a little while before, ſhe pledged them in the name of Elizabeth Blake, here is a pair of ſtays, a blue apron, a ſhift, and a cap.

ROBERT LYRE ſworn.

I was ſent for to take the priſoner into cuſtody, I took her out of a cellar, ſhe was charged with robbing her miſtreſs, Elizabeth King, ſhe immediately owned ſhe pawned the things with Mrs. Moore, there was no promiſes made her of favour, and ſhe ſaid, ſhe hoped her miſtreſs would forgive her; ſhe ſaid ſhe pawned them with Mrs. Moore, in Whitecroſs-ſtreet, ſhe acknowledged they were her miſtreſs's things, ſhe ſaid ſhe did not know what bewitched her for doing ſo, for her miſtreſs was a very good miſtreſs; ſhe went with us to the pawnbroker's ſhop, ſhe ſaw theſe things, and acknowledged them to be the things ſhe pawned.

Priſoner. I lived along with my miſtreſs's ſiſter, and living with her there was a woman came out of the workhouſe, and ſhe diſcharged me, ſo this woman lent me ſome things to pawn, and ſhe gave me a week to redeem them in, and her own ſiſter promiſed me if I would get them out, ſhe would not hurt me, and my proſecutor if ſhe was here, could not deny it.

ELIZABETH KING ſworn.

I ſell fiſh and fruit, I took the priſoner as a ſervant, ſhe lived with me the ſpace of ten or twelve days, ſhe was in the neighbourhood out of emplo , I had no character with her; I left her one day to ſell ſome goods, I left her with a pounds worth of property, ſhe owned ſhe took twelve ſhillings and ſixpence, ſhe came in and ſaid, miſtreſs, I will give you the money I took yeſterday, between eight and nine in the morning; when I waked the priſoner was gone, and the door half opened, I looked for my ſtays, I miſſed them and one old cap, one ſhift, and one apron, I never ſaw the priſoner for three weeks; I ſaw her in a court, and when ſhe ſaw me, ſhe ſlipped down a cellar, I waited to ſee her, and gave charge of her; I am ſure ſhe is the ſame perſon.

What did the priſoner ſay?—When I took her, ſhe cried, and I told ſhe muſt cry then for ſhe left me to cry.

Did you promiſe her any favour?——I did not, ſhe owned to the property, and the conſtable ſet down every thing.

Did not you promiſe her?——Before ever I took her, I ſaid I ſhould light of her one time or other, but if the things were brought me, I could not tell what I ſhould ſay, her mother lived in Whitechapel.

Is there any particular mark?—There is.

(The things depoſed to.)

Priſoner. She knows ſhe promiſed me a week to take out the things.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped and confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

762. MARY

762. MARY FREELOVE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 11th day of March laſt, one pair of linen ſheets, value 3s. a ſmall copper ſaucepan, value 6d. a braſs candleſtick, value 6d. two knives, value 2d. two forks, value 2d. two prwter table ſpoons, value 1d. the property of Joſeph Chamberlaine, being in a certain lodging-room, let to hire, by the name of Mary Johnſon, and to be uſed by her and one John Johnſon, her pretended huſband, againſt the ſtatute.

ELIZABETH CHAMBERLAINE ſworn.

My huſband's name is Joſeph; we have a houſe in Orange-court, King-ſtreet, Seven-dials; the priſoner came to lodge with me the 11th of March; ſhe came in the name of Mary Johnſon; ſhe ſaid her huſband worked at Mr. Hatchet's in Long-acre; ſhe gave me 6d. earneſt, and aſked if I had any good ſheets; ſhe ſaid her huſband did not love to lay in coarſe ſheets; ſhe took the room by the week, at half a crown a week; ſhe was to find her own crockery ware: ſo I put on the ſheets I had, ſeeing her a decent motherly kind of woman: ſhe came to my houſe the ſame night, about eight, and went up ſtairs, and ſhe took the ſheets that night; ſhe ſaid ſhe muſt go and meet her huſband with the box; ſhe went out, and locked the door, and did not return: when ten o'clock came, I ſuſpected her, and had the door broke open, and the property was gone, as mentioned in the indictment; ſhe never came back; ſhe never lay there at all; when I found her, I told her I would not hurt her if ſhe told me where the ſheets were, and ſhe took me to a pawnbroker's, but he had not the ſheets.

Are you ſure that no other perſon had not been in the place till you broke it open?—No, nobody ever was in the place.

How long did ſhe ſtay in the place?—She had her dinner, and ſhe made her a diſh of tea; and between ſeven and eight ſhe came down, and ſaid, ſhe was going to help her huſband with a box.

SUSANNAH AVIS ſworn.

I have lived in Mrs. Chamberlaine's houſe two years: on the 11th of March the priſoner came into the room at her houſe; ſhe took the room the week before.

What was the agreement?—Half a crown a week; there was a padlock to the door, and the key was delivered to her; ſhe came in about twelve, and went out about ſix or ſeven; ſhe ſaid her huſband's name was Johnſon, and was a ſawyer.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

The proſecutor ſaid ſhe had no ſheets but her childrens, I told her it was nothing to me, if I lay in the blankets; I never ſaw any ſheets; ſhe offered to make it up for half a guinea; I never touched the ſheets; I have nobody at all as witneſs.

GUILTY.

To be confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice GOULD.

---

763. DAVID FLEMMING was indicted, for that he, on the 28th of Auguſt, feloniouſly, willingly, and knowingly, did perſonate, and falſely aſſume, the character of one Daniel Skannell, on board the Cerberus, in order to receive the ſaid wages and pay againſt the ſtatute.

A ſecond count. For that he, feloniouſly, willingly, and knowingly, did falſely aſſume the ſaid name and character, who had then lately ſerved our Lord the King on board the Cerberus, who was then ſuppoſed to be intitled to certain wages and pay, in order to receive the ſame againſt the ſtatute.

The indictment opened by Mr. Knowles, and the caſe by Mr. Fielding.

I think the act of parliament may meet this crime; if you ſhould be ſatisfied that he, when he applied at this office, did it with an intention afterwards to apply to the pay-table, and receive the pay of this ſeaman; man; if you ſhould ultimately be of opinion that he did it wantonly, fooliſhly, and that he had no ſuch intention to receive the money, as he certainly has not applied to the pay-table, it may be lucky for him that he was detected in this early ſtage of buſineſs; I ſhall be perfectly ſatisfied with the deciſion of the law from the Recorder.

——— HODGSON ſworn.

I am one of the clerks in the Ticket-office, Crutched-friars, I ſaw the priſoner on a Saturday laſt month, I do not recollect the day, he came to me, and aſked me, whether his name was upon the books of the Old Cerberus, there is a frigate in the ſervice of that name; I aſked him for his certificate; I repeatedly aſked him his name, he ſaid, Daniel Skannell; he pulled out a certificate, with the name Daniel Skannell upon it; this is the certificate, which he produced; I marked it upon the back.

Court. What did he ſay his name was? ——Daniel Skannel.

Court. That is not the name in the indictment, this is Saunderſon, the name in the indictment is Daniel Skannell.

Mr. Fielding. This is the only evidence of his aſſuming the character.

Court. The character in that certificate is the character in the book?—He ſhewed me the certificate, and ſaid that was his name.

Mr. Fielding. Then there is no doubt.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

764. LYDIA KENELLY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 8th day of July laſt, one piece of printed linen handkerchiefs, containing nine handkerchiefs, value 8s. the property of Joſeph Bourman and Elias Biſſon, and Robert Barrett, privily in their ſhop.

JAMES HENNESEY ſworn.

I was ſhopman to Meſſrs. Bourman and Co.

Do you know the priſoner?——Yes, I was waiting on another cuſtomer when the priſoner came into the ſhop; ſhe had been in about half an hour, and the perſon I was ſerving informed me ſhe ſaw the priſoner ſteal ſome handkerchiefs; I jumped over the counter.

What time of day?——I cannot recollect.

What day was it?—I cannot recollect.

Do not you know whether it was morning or afternoon?—I cannot recollect.

If your memory is ſo very uncertain, how can you undertake to recollect the circumſtance, did you ſee the priſoner come into the ſhop?——Yes, ſhe came to buy ſome cotton handkerchiefs; I did not wait upon her; the perſon that ſerved her is here.

Is that lady here that ſaw her take them? ——No.

You underſtand that ſhe ſaw her take them?—Yes; on that I immediately jumped over the counter, and cried, Devonſhire, a word we uſe when we ſuſpect any body; then the people were all on their guard; I was going to untie her apron, but ſhe undid it, and ſhook her cloak, and a little boy that is here ſaw the handkerchiefs drop.

GEORGE BOURMAN ſworn.

I am ſixteen years old; I am the perſon that ſerved the priſoner.

Did you obſerve her take any thing?—No.

What happened afterwards?——When ſhe went to the door I ſaw the handerchiefs drop from her; I am ſure of it; they dropped from before her, near ſome boxes; ſhe appeared to want to drop them from under her cloak upon the boxes, but they dropped upon the floor.

Who picked them up?—I really do not know.

Henneſey. The deceaſed Mr. Bourman picked up the handkerchiefs; the handkerchiefs that were given to the conſtable are the ſame that were picked up.

JOHN HOUGHTON ſworn.

I produce the handkerchiefs; they were given given to me by Mr. Bourman that is dead, on the 8th of July.

What might be the value of them?—— They were valued at 8s.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I went into the ſhop to buy a cotton handkerchief; I bid them twenty-pence; he called me in again; I was not out of the door, and then he took the handkerchiefs up, and aſked if I had dropped them; I never ſaw them before.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing, but not privately.

To be privately whipped, and confined to hard labour for twelve months.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

765. JOHN MILLS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 23d day of July laſt, one handkerchief, value 3s. the property of Thomas Jameſon.

THOMAS JAMESON ſworn.

On the 23d of July, at paſt eight o'clock, coming up Snow-hill, I loſt my handkerchief; I felt my handkerchief drop from the priſoner's hand, I immediately took him to the watch-houſe.

(The handkerchief produced and depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I have nothing to ſay, only that I picked up the handkerchief upon Snow-hill; I was ſent from the watch-houſe to the compter.

—— MILLS ſworn.

I go out a charing; he worked at Moor's carpet-warehouſe for ſome years.

GUILTY.

To be twice whipped, and impriſoned one month in Newgate.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

766. JOSEPH JACKSON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 6th day of July laſt, one linen handkerchief, value 2s. the property of John Barber.

JOHN BARBER ſworn.

When did you loſe your handkerchief?——On the 6th of July, between ten and eleven o'clock, in Newgate-ſtreet; I did not ſee him take it, but ſaw it lay under a ſhop-window; Mr. Jenour picked it up, and aſked me if it was not mine, I told him it was; it is marked B; I miſſed it that moment before.

Priſoner. Aſk him if I was not before the proſecutor when he miſſed his handkerchief?

How far was the priſoner from you?—About ten yards.

JOHN CHINNER ſworn.

I picked up the handkerchief; I ſaw the priſoner follow the gentleman at the top of Saint Martin's-le-grand; I ſaw him make two ſnatches at his pocket; I cried, Aye! and ſaw him throw down the handkerchief; I picked it up, and gave it to the gentleman, and told him that was the man that picked his pocket.

RICHARD MARTIN ſworn.

I was in Newgate-ſtreet, juſt croſſing the way, and ſtepping up upon the kirb, I ſaw a handkerchief drop; I ſaw a man behind ſtoop, and pick it up; as I was going along the laſt witneſs came up to me and ſaid, the priſoner had picked the gentleman's pocket; I did not ſee him pick the gentleman's pocket; I have had the handkerchief ever ſince.

(The handkerchief depoſed to.)

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

767. FRANCIS SAUNDERS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 17th day of Auguſt laſt, one white cotton counterpane, value 10s. the property of John Hill.

JOHN HILL ſworn.

The priſoner came to lodge at the Four Swans, nobody ſlept in the ſame room; I am chamberlain; when he went away I went in, and miſſed a counterpane; I overtook him, and brought him back, with the counterpane round his waiſt; he begged for mercy.

Priſoner. I have nothing to ſay.

Court. What are you?——I am a ſurgeon.

Where have you lived, and how have you been employed? —I have followed the ſea.

How long have you been at home?—— Five months.

Out of employ during that time?—Yes; I am a German; I have been all the war in the Engliſh ſervice; ſeven years.

Have you any friends in your own country?—Yes.

Where were you ſerving on board, what ſhip? — A ſurgeon on board the Mercury, and ſurgeon in Gibraltar.

Where is ſhe now?——At Briſtol.

Can you get any account from her officers? — Yes; if I ſend down to them General Boyd will give me a character.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years, with leave to tranſport himſelf.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

768. ELIZABETH ROSSON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 25th day of Auguſt laſt, two cotton gowns, value 10s. one linen bedgown, value 3s. a diaper tablecloth, value 2s. a linen ſleeve, value 6d. a cheque linen apron, value 3d. the property of Joſeph Sanders.

ELEANOR SANDERS ſworn.

I live in Gutter-lane, Cheapſide; I loſt the things mentioned in the indictment out of my room three weeks ago; I found them on the priſoner; I found her in my houſe, and ran after her; I took her in Goldſmiths-hall; one apron I found upon her, and the reſt ſhe threw into the gentleman's neceſſary.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was going to Whitechapel, the woman's daughter overtook me in Cheapſide; the proſecutor and me laid in together in Brownlow-ſtreet Hoſpital, and we had ſome gin, and the daughter ſaid, do take theſe things to your lodgings, and I will call on you for them; ſhe ſaid, do not let my mother ſee them, for ſhe has uſed me very ill; accordingly I took them, and met the mother, and ſhe ſaw one of the gowns hang under my cloak; ſhe cried ſtop thief, and I ran into the neceſſary, and ſhe followed me.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

769. WILLIAM RICHARDSON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 28th of Auguſt laſt, one pair of man's leather ſhoes, value 3s. the property of Matthew Muggeridge.

MATTHEW MUGGERIDE ſworn.

I heard a foot in the ſhop; after dinner I ſaid, here is a perſon in the ſhop is gone out; he was turning into Red-lion-court; he had a pair of ſhoes; I ſaid, I ſhall make an example of you; it was a pair of ſhoes that one of my ſhopmen brought in not ten minutes before; the conſtable has them.

——NAPLETON ſworn.

I took charge of the priſoner and the ſhoes from the proſecutor.

(The ſhoes depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

Coming down Fleet-ſtreet, I had been at Mr. Ennerley's with ſome ſtocks, I found the ſhoes; there was a man running before.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

770. ALEX-

770. ALEXANDER BELL was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 9th day of September, one pewter pint pot, value 10d. the property of Joſeph Williams.

JOSEPH WILLIAMS ſworn.

I keep a public houſe in Biſhopſgate-ſtreet, I loſt a pint pewter pot, on Friday, September the 9th, about half paſt eight in the evening; I was informed where the man was that took it, by my maid, I went and charged the priſoner, and found it in his pocket, it was marked No. 30. the conſtable had it directly.

FRANCIS PHIPPS ſworn.

I had this pot of Mr. Williams, I ſwear to the pot, I marked No. 30, with my own engraving, my name is at the front of it, the ſign, the ſtreet where I live.

MARY JENNINGS ſworn.

On Friday laſt I had juſt put the pot out of my hand, on the bar door, a man came to the bar, and went backward into the yard, and when he came from out of the yard, he took the pot from the bar door, I was in the back room, and I told my maſter of it directly.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I went in and bought a quartern of gin, I went into the yard, I know the maid, ſhe lived at a ſhop I work for, it ſtood on the bar with ſome water, I was playing with the maid, I had it not in my pocket I had it by the ſide of my coat.

Proſecutor. He ſtrictly denied having the pot.

The priſoner called three witneſſes who gave him a good character.

GUILTY, 10d.

Whipped.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

771. CHARLES CLARK was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 22d of July laſt, one hand ſaw with a wooden handle, value 12d. one iron ſpade, value 2s. one iron bill with a wooden handle, 12d. the property of William Laythorpe.

WILLIAM LAYTHORPE ſworn.

I am a labouring man, on the 22d of July laſt, I loſt a ſpade, a bill, and a ſaw from Holloway; I left them in the barn, I had been at work in the morning part, and I went out to breakfaſt, when I came back they were gone, I found part of them in the fields, I found the ſaw on a woman in the fields; ſhe ſaid he gave it her, the next morning I found the others by his own confeſſion where he ſold them; I know the priſoner; he had worked upon the land for my maſter, in hay-time two days.

THOMAS ISSAC ſworn.

I found the bill and ſpade, at Mr. Bradford's, on Saffron-hill, on the very day after the robbery.

REBECCA GAIN ſworn.

The priſoner at the bar met me one day in the fields, he gave me a ſaw, he told me he had no money, he gave it me to have connections with me, it was on a Friday a good while ago, it was the day I gave it again to Laythorp, I know the ſaw, there is a W. C. upon it.

——— BROWN ſworn.

This ſaw I picked up in the road after the proſecutor dropt it, in running after the priſoner, I ſaw the proſecutor drop it, it is the ſaw of one William Cooling, he was a lawyer, he died and left it to me; I have had it theſe five years, I knew it had that mark, I told her it had that mark before ſhe gave it me.

ROBERT OLDERSHAW ſworn.

I apprehended the priſoner with my brother officer.

MARTHA BRADFORD ſworn.

I remember a ſpade and a bill being brought brought to me by that young man, I cannot recollect the day, nor the day of the month either, the day they were claimed on the day after; I cannot ſwear to them again, I believe theſe are them, he told me, he had been at work at Hampſtead or at Highgate, and he had got a place at a ſtable-yard at London, and that they were of no uſe to him, therefore he muſt ſell them.

What did you give him for them?——Eighteen-pence, one ſhilling for the ſhovel and ſixpence for the bill.

What would you ſell them for now?—I aſk fifteen-pence for the ſhovel, and would have taken fourteen-pence, as for the bill, I did not know the value of it, ſo I told him.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

As I was walking in the fields the day the things were found, I ſaw a man and woman go into the barn, and bring out the things and hide them in a ditch, and I ſaw this woman, and I gave her the ſaw, there was a man, and I did not ſtop to have any connection with her, and I went and ſold the things.

Olderſhaw. My Lord, after I took the priſoner, he ſaid, he would go quiet if I would let him go, and when he had got as far as this place, he took out a knife, and ſwore we ſhould not have him, he cut at me in my face, and cut my brother officer under the ham, Mr. Laythorpe he cut his throat quite to his windpipe, and cut underneath his ham two inches and half, which Dr. Hale ſewed up.

Court to Priſoner. As this is the laſt time I ſhall probably ſee you, I recommend it to you to conſider of your fate, it certainly will be mentioned to his Majeſty, the very great cruelty you have ſhewn, and probably the place of your deſtination where you will be tranſported to will be worſe than that of common felons.

GUILTY.

Tranſported to Africa for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

772. JANE CREEKE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 1ſt day of Auguſt laſt, thirty-five pounds weight of feathers, value 12s. two pair of flat irons, value 6s. and one coffee pot, value 2s. the property of Sir John Warley Gardner, Baronet.

ELIZABETH HARVEY ſworn.

I keep the proſecutor's houſe; in the beginning of Auguſt laſt we loſt the things mentioned in the indictment, the feathers were in a bed, the bed was cut open, and the feathers carried away; the priſoner was a chair-woman, I ſaid we will go and mangle the chair covers; ſhe fetched a deep ſigh, and ſaid ſhe had a terrible pain in her head, ſhe went out and did not return; then I miſſed the irons and tea-kettle, and I went to tell her blankets, and the blankets were all over feathers; I turned them up, and I ſaw the bed was cut open, and a great quantity taken out; ſhe had ſerved two more ſo beſides that ſhe ſlept in; nobody was in the houſe but us two; we took her the next night in Eagle-court, Swallow-ſtreet; I ſaid to the conſtable, that is your priſoner; ſays ſhe for what, I have carried home your property, two mangled cloths, and two flat irons, and flung them over the area; when we came home they were flung over the area; then the conſtable and me went to look at the feather-beds, to ſee how they were cut, and I left her with this good man the witneſs; and ſhe made a confeſſion to him; we took her to the cage, and ſhe took us to the man's houſe where ſhe had carried the feathers; the man's name was John Crooke, in Carnaby-ſtreet; I know the irons and the coffee-mill, the flat irons were worth about half a crown a pair.

JOHN CROOKE ſworn.

I know nothing of the feathers nor the priſoner, ſhe came to offer them for ſale through poverty and diſtreſs.

When did you buy them?——I do not know the day, I bought 35lb.

What did you give for them?——Four pence pence a pound; I had known her for about the ſpace of half a year before that time.

Did you ever buy any feathers before?——No, not of the priſoner, nor in any reſpect but in whole beds.

Was not you ſurpriſed?——Not conſidering her diſtreſs, ſhe ſaid they were her own feathers, and told me where ſhe lived, in Heydon court, we catechiſed her how ſhe came by them; I remember the witneſs Harvey came to our houſe, and aſked me if the priſoner had ſold any feathers, I ſaid yes, I never attempted to hide anything, it is well known I dare ſay to the proſecutor, and all that has any buſineſs with me, that I have not attempted to hide any one thing, becauſe I never buy anything, knowing it to be ſtolen.

Priſoner. They were my own feathers, I ſold to him laſt ſummer.

Court to Crooke. What does your family conſiſt of?—A wife and one child, and my houſe conſiſts of creditable lodgers, and I believe my lodgers and neighbourhood in general will give me an excellent character.

Court. Upon my word it has a very bad appearance?——Undoubtedly it may have an indifferent look upon me, but I hope it will be rightly conſidered that it was not meant—.

Court. It can only be rightly conſidered if it is conſidered by you, and that the event of that conſideration ſhould be that you never will traffic in this way again: I deſire Mr. Clerk of the Arraigns, that you will take down this man's name, and if ever he appears here again, that it may be mentioned, that he has been twice examined here in one day, as a receiver of ſtolen goods, and you know the puniſhment of that, to be tranſported for fourteen years.

Crooke. I am much obliged to your Lordſhip, I will readily reſign the buſineſs, for I find I cannot carry it on without being deceived by crafty people.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

773. WILLIAM FOX was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 8th day of July, 60 yards of callimanco, value 57s. and 30 yards of ſhalloon, value 31s. the property of Moſes Hearne.

(The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of the priſoner.)

JOHN HAWES ſworn.

What are you?——I am a waggoner of the Cheſhunt waggon, it was robbed the 8th of July, I was going to Cheſhunt from town, going along the priſoner brought a box on his ſhoulder, and he aſked me to take him as a paſſenger, I took him up and the box; he wanted to go to Acton; we went to the waggon and horſes, Shepherd's Buſh, there I ſtopped to take out ſome goods, then he ſaid he would walk on, and he walked on to Acton, there he got down, and I took the box down, and I found the box as heavy again as it was, and I ſearched about in my waggon, and found a truſs cut open, and part of it gone, I took the box into my hand, and tried to ſtop the man, but he ran out of the back door and left the box behind; he got over ſome high pales into the next yard, and out of that yard he came into the road again, croſſed the road down the George yard; I ran after him, and took him in about ten minutes.

What time of the day?—About five, nobody elſe was in the waggon but the priſoner and myſelf.

Was the box tied or corded?—No, we broke open the box and found theſe three parcels in the indictment.

Priſoner. Did you miſs anything at that public houſe?——No, nothing.

Had you obſerved this truſs particularly before you took me into the waggon?—No, I had not.

CHRISTOPHER CROXFORD ſworn.

On the 8th of June I was at the George, oppoſite my houſe at Acton, and I went to get me a glaſs of gin and water, and I ſaw the priſoner go into the Orange Tree, next to my houſe, and in five minutes I ſaw him come down my yard, I knew he muſt have got over ſome pales; he was looking earneſtly towards the waggon, and ſuddenly he ran over to the George, and I ſaw the waggoner looking one way and another, and I aſked him if he looked for the priſoner, he ſaid yes, he had robbed his waggon, and I ran after him and took him.

HENRY STEPHENSON ſworn.

I took the priſoner in cuſtody, and I broke open the cheſt, and found this piece of goods in the cheſt.

JOHN PRICE ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner run down the George yard at Acton, I ſaw Mr. Croxford take him in the trap-ball place, and near upon the place I found a key belonging to the cheſt, and I took it immediately over to Mr. Croxford's, and it unlocked the box very well, I marked the key.

LEONARD MEDCALF ſworn.

I had eleven pieces to ſend down by Hawes's waggon, the 8th of July, for Cheſhunt, directed to Adam Simpſon of Cheſhunt, they were packed in coarſe cloth; this is the package, it is cut, but it was not cut when I packed it; I put it in the warehouſe, and delivered it to the book-keeper in the warehouſe; it is directed to Mr. A. Simpſon, Cheſhunt.

Court to Medcalf. Look at the callimanco, and tell the Jury whether that is what you packed up?—I believe this to be our goods, they have our mark upon them, there ought to be five pieces in all; (The package opened.) it contains one half yard of mourning crape, and one piece of bombazeen, which makes the quantity.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was informed the Princeſs Amelia wanted a ſecond coachman, at Kenington Gravel-pits a gentleman aſked me to take this box and put it in the waggon, I rode to this public houſe, and I walked to Acton, at Acton he gave me the box out, the gentleman was not there, I did not know what to do with the box, I took it from him, and ſet it down on the bench, and was going away.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

774. JOHN BEESTON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 31ſt day of July laſt, one ſilk handkerchief, value 2s. the property of Samuel Elliott.

SAMUEL ELLIOTT ſworn.

On the 31ſt of July laſt, between nine and ten at night, a few doors off my houſe a gentleman told me my pocket was picked of a ſilk handkerchief, I found it was gone, the priſoner was cloſe to me, I turned about and charged him with it, he denied having my kind of knowledge of it whatever, I told him I ſhould take him to the watch-houſe immediately, and on endeavouring to ſecure him, I ſaw him put his hands behind him, and throw it into a gentleman's area; I then took him to the watch-houſe, and gave him in charge; I did not ſtop to take up the handkerchief; as ſoon as I had ſecured him I returned for my handkerchief, and the ſervant immediately brought it up to me from the area, and gave it me in the preſence of the gentleman who informed me I had been robbed; that handkerchief was mine, I am ſure it was the handkerchief I had in my pocket, I am quite ſure I ſaw him throw it down.

THOMAS BORES ſworn.

On Sunday the 31ſt of July, between nine and ten at night, being in the ſtreet where the proſecutor lives, I obſerved a man take the handkerchief out of his pocket, and drop it, the priſoner took it up, and put it in his right hand coat pocket.

Court. How near was the priſoner to the the other perſon?——He was behind the other perſon.

Was the priſoner ſo ſituated that he could ſee the other take it out of his pocket?——I ſhould ſuppoſe ſo, he was but a very little behind; I ſaw the priſoner when he picked it up, not before.

Court to Elliot. When you laid hold of the priſoner, and charged him with the handkerchief, did he deny having the handkerchief?—Poſitively, ſeveral times.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I picked up the handkerchief walking along.

The priſoner called one witneſs who gave him a very good character.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

774. THOMAS FROST was indicted for that he on the 3d day of July, about two in the night, into a certain garden ground of, and belonging to one John Renton, unlawfully did enter, and fifty young plants, called orange trees, value 6s. twenty ſtock flower roots, value 3s. three balm of gilead roots, value 6d. from out of the ſame, without the conſent of the ſaid John, then and there, unlawfully, willfully, and feloniouſly did pluck up, dig up, take and carry away, againſt the ſtatute.

JOHN RENTON ſworn.

I live at Hoxton, I am a gardener, on the 3d of July, I was called up in the morning at half paſt two by John Farrance, I went down, and he told me to look in the garden to ſee if I was robbed, and I went down the garden, and found great part of my double ſtocks were pulled up by the roots, and I found two or three double roots, and two ſingle ones pulled up and dropped; I brought them out in my hands, and I was told to go to the watch-houſe, and there I found the ſtocks in the priſoner's apron, and I took him to Clerkenwell, and his apron was ſearched, and there we found the orange roots, we left the ap on at the watch-houſe; when we went to Clerkenwell, the priſoner ſaid he found them, when we came back we found ſome orange trees, and ſome balm of gilead roots; I compared the piece of root that was left in the pan, with that that was at the watch-houſe, and it agreed; I judged the plants were mine, becauſe I had loſt the ſame number, and the ſame ſized plants.

JOHN FARRANCE ſworn.

On the 3d of July at two, I went with the watchman part of his rounds, and going up Haberdaſher's-walk, at half paſt two, I told the watchman to take charge of that young man, becauſe he had a bundle in his hand which I thought he had ſtolen, ſo he ſprung his rattle, the priſoner ſet off upon a run as faſt as he could; I knew him, I have worked with him; I ſent the old man after him, and I went to the watch-houſe to tell the conſtable of the night; the watchman ſaw no more of him at that time, and I ſtood in the road and ſaw him jump into a garden, and juſt before his own houſe I took hold of him by the collar, with the bundle in his hand.

What is he?——He is a gardner.

Who was preſent when you took him?—Nobody, he then ſaid for God's ſake John let me alone, I have only been into the country for a few flowers, and I told him he ſhould go to the watch-houſe; when I brought him out of the paſſage, I ſaw the conſtable, and one of the watchmen, and I took him into the watch-houſe by myſelf, and the bundle too; then I enquired amongſt ſome gardners, and found out the proſecutor; we did not examine the bundle till after we came to Clerkenwell.

Who was left at the watch-houſe with the bundle?—The watchman who is not here; the priſoner ſaid before the Juſtice that he found them, that he ſaw two men drop them, and he run and picked them up, he he then called to me, and aſked me if I would not give him his apron again, ſo if he had found them, he found them in his own apron, by his own account; I gave him the apron, the eleven bunches of flowers were tied up with green oats, twiſted round and round.

Court. Is there any oats near Renton's garden?—Within twenty yards, at the head of the garden.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I had been down to work, and coming home on Saturday night, I ſaw two men in the Brick-fields, ſtanding at the gate, and when I came up to the gate, I ſaw them run away, then I ſaw theſe flowers lay, I took them up in my apron.

Court. What ſort of a night was this?—It was quite broad day light when I firſt ſaw him, it was half after two.

Was it a clear morning?—Yes.

The priſoner called two witneſſes who gave him a very good character.

GUILTY.

Whipped, and impriſoned one month in Newgate.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

776. HARRIET MILLER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 10th day of May, one linen apron, value 2s. 6d. one table cloth, value 3s. one pair of cotton ſtockings, value 2s. and two ſilver tea-ſpoons, value 6s. the property of Joſeph Colleſs.

HESTER COLLESS ſworn.

I know the priſoner, ſhe was a ſervant of mine, ſhe lived with me between four and five months.

What is your huſband's name?—Joſeph, during the time of her living with me, I loſt a great number of things, and I diſcharged one or two ſervants innocently, ſhe left me without any ſuſpicion of her being the thief, ſhe was afterwards detected by a young woman, whom I had turned away on account of the things that the priſoner took.

MARY MORPETH ſworn.

I was diſcharged from Mr. Colleſs's ſervice, on ſuſpicion of having the things which the priſoner ſtands indicted for; after leaving Mrs. Colleſs's, I applied for work in Picadilly, ſhe ſent for my character, and Mrs. Colleſs not willing to deprive me of bread, though ſhe did not chuſe to keep a ſuſpicious perſon, ſaid ſhe diſcharged me becauſe the work was over, but told me to prepare for a feaſt, ſhe always gives her people; knowing I had no time to get my things in readineſs myſelf, I employed the priſoner to aſſiſt me two days, the feaſt was poſtponed, and I had no further occaſion for the priſoner, and ſhe left me; on Thurſday morning, when the family where I lodged were aſſembled to breakfaſt, of which I was conſidered as one, they having a knowledge of me for many years, a tea-ſpoon was miſſing, upon which the lady inſiſted upon its being found before any breakfaſt went on, we all got up for ſearch, but none could be found; I was rather in fear, knowing the things that had been loſt, I ſuſpected the priſoner, the priſoner called on the Thurſday evening accidentally with her ſiſter to aſk me how I did, I aſked her where ſhe was going, ſhe ſaid with her ſiſter, to her mother's; I told her to call upon me as ſhe came back, ſhe promiſed ſhe would, but never came; on Friday the 29th, ſhe not coming, about four in the afternoon I went to her where ſhe lodged, I told her I ſuppoſed ſhe knew what I was come on, ſhe ſaid no, ſhe really could not tell, I ſaid ſhe muſt certainly know herſelf to have been guilty of an offence, or ſhe would not be in ſuch confuſion; I taxed her with the ſpoon, which ſhe denied, I told her it was a cruel thing, not only to deny the ſpoon, but putting me in danger of loſing my character, as there was nobody but us two, and I muſt be conſcious of my own innocence; I left her, ſhe would not not confeſs, but promiſed to come on Saturday, but did not, I went and fetched her, ſhe would not confeſs then, and promiſed to come on Monday to go before the juſtice, but ſhe would not; I was buſy till the Thurſday, I went and told her I was come again, but with no intreaties, for I would take her before a juſtice, ſhe told me if I would forgive her, ſhe would fetch the ſpoon, ſhe ſaid it was not at a pawnbroker's, I ſaid I will go and ſee where it is, ſhe aſked me to let her fetch her father, I ſaid ſhe ſhould not go without me; when ſhe found I was reſolute, ſhe put on her bonnet, and went with me to Mr. Payne's, pawnbroker, in Wardour-ſtreet, and ſhe demanded a ſpoon which ſhe had pawned for one ſhilling and ſixpence, on the Wedneſday night after ſhe left me; I then aſked her if there was anything elſe there, ſhe ſaid no, it was the firſt time ſhe had ever ſtolen any thing, I ſaid it was a falſhood, ſhe had ſaid at the pawnbroker's her name was Elizabeth Miller, upon which I aſked her how ſhe could ſay ſo, as her name was Harriet; the priſoner came back with me to my landlady, we then went to Miſs Monro; Miſs Monro, the priſoner, and me, went to the pawnbroker's, to ſee what elſe we could find; we went the next morning at eight o'clock, and the pawnbroker promiſed to find what he could, and the pawnbroker then had found one ſpoon only, which was Mr. Colleſs's; we then went to the watch-houſe to the girl, where we had left her the night before, and then ſhe confeſſed to ſome more things at the pawnbroker's; the pawnbroker afterwards brought down to the Juſtice, the things that are in Court; Mrs. Colleſs ſaw the things the ſame day at the Juſtice's, and claimed them as hers.

JOHN LIGHTFOOT ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. Payne of Wardour-ſtreet, I have table cloth, two tea-ſpoons, a white apron, and a pair of ſtockings, the priſoner pledged them all, I am ſure of it, at three different times, ſhe pledged them in the name of Elizabeth Miller.

(The things depoſed to.)

Proſecutrix. I believe the ſtockings to be my apprentices, the other things are marked with my own name. I beg to ſpeak a word or two, if it deviates from proper rules of the Court I ſtand corrected; when I went to the pawnbroker's, I aſked him if he had any ſhirts, or other things.

Was the priſoner there?—No, ſhe was at the watch-houſe.

Then you cannot mention it now?—— I am ſorry for it my Lord, becauſe I think it would let your Lordſhip into the knowledge of ſome very bad practices of the pawnbrokers.

Court. We will enquire into it after the verdict.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I have nothing to ſay.

EDWARD BAYTHORN ſworn.

I am a tin plate worker, I live in Tottenham-court-road, have known her from her infancy, and her father and mother, I fancy ſhe is between fifteen and ſixteen.

ELIZABETH ——— ſworn.

I live in Portland-ſtreet, St. James's, her parents lodged with me going on five years, very honeſt and induſtrious people, and the girl too, I never heard any harm before, I believe ſhe is between fifteen and ſixteen.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped and confined to hard labour twelve months in the Houſe of Correction.

Court. Now, Mrs. Colleſs, you may ſtand up, and with great propriety mention what you was going to mention before?—From a girl of that innocent appearance and age, I aſked the pawnbroker's man how he poſſibly could, as to my knowledge he did, receive things from her with different marks, and at different times, without aſking her how ſhe came by them; he ſaid I was a very impertinent woman, I ſaid, I hoped not, but I ſaid I knew he had more in his poſſeſſion, though he baſely denied it from a ſuppoſition that the girl would deny it alſo; he ſaid I was impertinent to come and teach him his buſineſs, why did I not get a ſearch warrant; the conſtable was preſent. I told him upon his peril to ſtir out of that ſhop, till I got a ſearch warrant, he ſent a little boy, who upon my honour, was not gone out of the ſhop half moment, I ſaid, Sir, I will not believe that child, it is your place to ſearch; he again abuſed me, and inſiſted he would not, I told him I would make him, he dared me to do it; I went home and was ill, I went to the girl and told her the conſequence, ſhe ſaid, ſhe had not pledged anything at this man's ſhop, I went back again, he ſaid he would be upon his ſacrament he had nothing more. he utterly denied, and ſwore upon his oath he had not; I was more irritated with the pawnbroker than the girl, and three nights ago, I went to the houſe of the pawnbroker, I cannot ſay I was in temper, I then ſaid to him, Mr. Payne, I had not the happineſs of ſeeing you before, I acquit you of ill behaviour, provided you as an honeſt man, and a man of feeling, and a fair man, will give up the ſhirts, you have in your poſſeſſion four ſhirts; the man immediately looked at his maſter, and ſaid, we have no ſhirts; Payne himſelf behaved very ill, he likewiſe refuſed one of my ſpoons, and ſwore he had but one, and in opening a pair of ſtockings another ſpoon was found.

Court. You have done very right in expoſing to the public the conduct of this pawnbroker, it may therefore be worth conſidering how far Mr. Payne may yet be the ſubject of proſecution himſelf, his man who has been examined cannot, but Mr. Payne may.

Lightfoot. My Lord ——

Court. Sir, your own conduct is ſufficient, this is not the firſt time in which your conduct has appeared to the Court in an improper light: if you had not been admitted to give evidence, I ſhould have directed a proſecution againſt you: the Court will keep an eye both upon you and Mr. Payne, I aſſure you.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

777. JOHN THOMPSON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 22d day of Auguſt laſt, one pair of ſtuff ſhoes, value 2s. and one pair of ſilver buckles, value 8s. the property of Joſeph Blakeley.

(The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of the priſoner.)

CHARITY BLAKELEY ſworn.

I live at No. 8, Little Ayliffe-ſtreet, Goodman's-fields; I am wife of Joſeph Blakeley; I loſt a pair of ſtuff-ſhoes, and a pair of ſilver ſhoe-buckles; they were worth ten ſhillings; I loſt them the ſecond of Auguſt, about one in the day, from the yard; I ſaw the priſoner John Thompſon going out of the yard, and I miſſed my things in fifteen minutes after; he had been at our houſe once before that day; the firſt time he came he aſked me for ſome perſon which he called a Doctor; that was about fifteen minutes before the ſecond time he came; I did not know any ſuch Doctor; I thought it very odd his coming the ſecond time; I looked in my parlour, and I miſſed my ſhoes and buckles from a dining table, facing the door; I ran out, and ſaw the priſoner half-way along the ſtreet; he was on the foot-path; I cried ſtop thief; he turned his head round his ſhoulders, and ſet off running as faſt as he could.

When you firſt ſaw him on the foot-path was he walking or running?—He was walking very faſt, but not running; in conſequence of my crying ſtop thief he was taken; he was out of my ſight before he was taken; I ſaw him again in ten minutes in cuſtody of Mr. Chambers; the ſhoes and buckles were found behind ſome ſugar caſks; when he firſt came to enquire for the Doctor he had a handkerchief tied down one ſide of his face, and one of his ſhoes down at heel; and when I ſaw him in cuſtody of Mr. Chambers he was in the ſame dreſs then; I took notice of him the firſt time becauſe he came to aſk for a Doctor.

JOHN CHAMBERS ſworn.

I took a man with a handkerchief round his his face, on the 22d of Auguſt, about one, in Rupert ſtreet; I was at dinner, and I heard the cry of ſtop thief! and I run down ſtairs, and I ſaw a man run along the ſtreet, which gave me a ſuſpicion that he was the thief, I purſued him about four or five hundred yards, there were many people running.

Who run foremoſt?——I cannot ſay.

Was there anybody running before the priſoner?——I cannot ſay, but I believe there was, I believe he had a great coat on.

Did you obſerve anything about the priſoner's ſhoes or either of them?—He had one ſhoe down at heel, I believe.

Did you ſee that?—Yes, I ſaw a pair of ſhoes and buckles brought to the woman by a boy, they were brought while I was purſuing the priſoner.

JOHN WELSH ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner, but I cannot tell how long ago, nor what day it was, I know Charity Blakeley, I heard the cry of ſtop thief! and I ſaw the priſoner running, and he hid a pair of ſhoes and buckles behind ſome ſugar hogſheads, and I found them there, there were two men cloſe at his heels, and I ſaw him throw them down, and I picked them up, and gave them to the proſecutor; the priſoner had a handkerchief about his head.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I have witneſſes to my character, and a witneſs that the lad ſaid, I was not the perſon, when he firſt ſaw me.

The priſoner called two more witneſſes to his character.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice GOULD.

---

778. JAMES LAWRENCE and THOMAS BROOME were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 16th day of July laſt, four live geeſe, price 10s. the property of Charles Lufkins; and one live gooſe, price 2s. the property of John Weſton.

CHARLES LUFKINS ſworn.

On the 16th of July laſt, about five, I was informed my maſter's ſtable door was open, I went and I miſſed four geeſe of mine, and one of Mr. Weſton's a neighbour; on the Monday following I heard there were two men ſtopped at Iſlington, with ſome geeſe; I loſt them on Saturday there were three grey ones, and two white ones, and one of the grey ones had a white wing, I have had ſome of them near a twelvemonth, two were young ones, I heard of them at Mr. Lack's, the conſtable at Iſlington, he ſhewed me the geeſe, and I was ſure they were mine.

JOHN BOWES ſworn.

On Saturday morning the 16th of July I ſaw the two priſoners at the bar, coming down what they call the back road Iſlington, with two ſacks on their backs; by their appearance I thought they looked diſorderly, I ſtopped and they paſſed by me, I looked after them, and there was a foot of ſomething hanging out of one of their ſacks, ſo I looked after them, and this Broome had ſomething rolling in his ſack I ſtopped them and they put down their ſacks, I opened one, there were three geeſe in it, I did not open the other's ſack then, ſo I took them to Mr. Weſt of Iſlington, a cow-keeper, they ſaid they would go with me where I liked, they ſaid they bought the geeſe in Holloway, of a waggoner, who was going into the country, ſo I had them committed; in the other ſack there were two geeſe, and two pieces of iron, a kind of a crow.

Did you obſerve the colour of theſe?—I did not take particular notice, Lufkin came, the Tueſday following, and claimed the geeſe, and ſwore to them before Juſtice Blackborough.

At what time was it on Saturday that you ſaw this?—At five in the morning.

How

How far from Weſton's houſe was this?—About a quarter of a mile where I took them, almoſt oppoſite Sadler's Wells, the geeſe were alive.

PRISONER BROOM's DEFENCE.

I went to Highgate to ſee a ſiſter of mine, that lived at the Red Lion, ſhe was gone away, and had been gone two months; I got a lodging in the town, and this young man was there, and he ſaid he was coming to London in the morning; we both got up in the morning, at about a mile out of Highgate, we met a farming man with geeſe, and I bought three, and this young man bought two, and he gave us a bag each of us, to put them in.

PRISONER LAWRENCE's DEFENCE.

I can only ſay the ſame.

BOTH GUILTY.

Each tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

795. THOMAS HARRISON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 3d day of Auguſt laſt, one pair of baſe metal candleſticks, value 3s. the property of John Thompſon.

JOHN THOMPSON ſworn.

On the 4th of Auguſt laſt, I had a ſale of goods at No. 6, in Caſtle-ſtreet, Oxford-market, and on the 3d I loſt a pair of candleſticks.

PETER HOPKINS ſworn.

I was at Mr. Thompſon's on the 3d of Auguſt, and the priſoner came and aſked for a catalogue, I gave him one, he went up ſtairs and then down into the kitchen again, I thought he had ſomething in his pocket, I deſired my fellow ſervant to look after him, I went into the kitchen, and miſſed three candleſticks that were below; I went after the priſoner, and met him in Oxford-road, I brought him back, and theſe are the candleſticks he took out of his pocket; I only found two, they were in the kitchen before; I took him to my maſter, he aſked my maſter to forgive him, he told him it was the firſt time.

Proſecutor. I believe theſe candleſticks to be mine, I will not ſwear to them, they had this label on them, No. 2, Lt. 7, which agrees with the catalogue.

Priſoner. I went into the houſe, and went down into the kitchen, and the proſecutor followed me, and took me.

The priſoner called five witneſſes who gave him a very good character.

GUILTY.

To be confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

The next Part will be publiſhed in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commission of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middlesex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wednesday the 14th of SEPTEMBER, 1785, and the following Days;

Being the SEVENTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER VII. PART V.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noster Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE
PROCEEDINGS
UPON THE
KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

279. JOHN HARRIS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 4th of July, one pair of gold ſleeve buttons, value 26s. one pair of baſe metal ſleeve buttons, gilt with gold, value 13s. the property of Nicholas Middleton.

(The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of the priſoner.)

NICHOLAS MIDDLETON ſworn.

I loſt one pair of gold ſleeve buttons laſt July, I believe the 4th; the ſhop window was broke in order to get them out; I never ſaw them again, the young woman that attends the ſhop, bid me ſtop the man with the box.

NICHOLAS MIDDLETON, Jun. ſworn.

I came from Iſlington that morning, I called at my father's, on the 4th of July, and Sarah Ball, who is an apprentice of my father's, deſired me to go after a man with a box, for he had ſtole ſomething, it was a man with a box, I ſaw him go paſt the ſhop door, which is a glaſs door, and I followed him, and took him within fifty or ſixty yards, and I brought him back immediately, the conſtable ſaid he would be ſearched at Bow-ſtreet, the priſoner was the man that I ſtopped.

SARAH BALL ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner at the bar with a hook in his hand, and a pair of buttons on the hook, he had taken them from the place where I had put them.

You did not ſee him actually take them? ——No, but I ſaw them in his hand, upon the hook, I had put them in that place juſt before, it was a drawer where we put trinkets; this is the hook, and theſe are the buttons that were found, one pair was gone when I came to the window, that was the gold pair, this pair are plated with gold, they are not ſolid gold.

Had you put them both there juſt before? ——Yes.

Was that your hook or his?——It was his hook, he had this hook in his hand when I looked towards him, he dropped the hook in the ſhop window, through a little hole that was cut, and walked away, I immediately called out ſtop that man, he has ſtolen ſomething; there was a bandbox on his head, I never loſt ſight of him till he was ſtopped, theſe are my maſter's buttons, I put them there myſelf.

Priſoner. I with to aſk the gentlewoman what ſhe ſaid to me, when I firſt came into the ſhop?——I told him I believed he had cut the window, and I ſaw this hook in his hand, taking the buttons out, I told him I would ſwear to him.

Court.

Court. What time of day was this?—About ten minutes after nine in the morning.

Was any body else going by at the time?—Not a creature, my Lord, I do not think there was one.

Where is your shop situated?——In the Strand, opposite the New Church.

JOHN STOCKER sworn.

I saw the prisoner, standing near ten minutes with this box close to the window, I was standing the opposite side of the way, and I saw his hand rather move, but to tell what he was about I could not.

Was his face to the window, or from the window?—To the window, he stood there about ten minutes, I saw him walk away at a distance, and I saw Mr. Middleton's son come out in a flurry, and run after him and bring him back.

Court to Ball. Where had you been for ten minutes before?——I had been in the parlour at breakfast, and was just come into the shop.

(The buttons deposed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I am intirely innocent, there is a man now in the bail dock, one John Askton, that has confessed to every person in the gaol of stealing the buttons, breaking the window, and selling the buttons for half a guinea; I had been at Cranbourn-alley, and I might stop at this gentleman's window three minutes; I came back quietly, I am intirely innocent, as God is my saviour; and the man below in the Bail-dock is the man that certainly committed the robbery.

Court to Sarah Ball. Did the buttons that you have drop with the hook?—Yes, the buttons dropped from the hook, when he dropped the hook.

The prisoner called one witness who gave him a good character.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

780. WILLIAM DEADROSS was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 7th day of July last, fifty four linen shirts, value 10l. one pair of silk gloves, value 2s. two pair of satin breeches, value 20s. one pair of sattinet breeches, value 10s. one pair of corderoy breeches, value 4s. two pair of nankeen breeches, value 10s. three waistcoats, value 30s. thirty-six pair of silk stockings, value 3l. the property of John Minster.

JOHN MINSTER sworn.

I am at present out of employ, I could not get a place on account of this prosecution; I lost two places before, that I might have engaged with, one was with a gentleman going down to the North of Scotland and I was in service with one gentleman twelve years, the late Mr. Oswald, the 7th of July last, on Thursday morning, about three, I found my chest broke open, which stood in Tyson-street, Bethnal Green, at my cousins, John Shanks, I sent the chest up to him, I omitted to inform him that they were things of consequence, and he put them in a stable under where I slept; I was not alarmed much in the night, I heard once a little knock, and about three in the morning Mrs. Shank went down stairs, and found the chest taken out, and broke open, we went out directly, and the things were lost.

Whereabouts did this chest stand?—It stood in a stable, upon finding it broke, I immediately went to Justice Wilmot's, and gave out hand bills; I did not see any of my property till the Tuesday following, which was the 12th, then I found a shirt, a stock, and sattinett breeches, some from the officers of justice, and some from the pawnbroker's, I know nothing of the prisoner, only that he said the things were his property, he was taken up the next day.

EDWARD FRANCIS sworn.

I am a pawnbroker, I live in Shoreditch, one of the witnesses, Hannah Wilkins, brought a shirt, a stock, and cambrick handkerchief to me the day following the robbery, bery, the 8th of July, I asked her whose property it was; she told me it belonged to another woman that was at the door; I immediately called that woman in, and stopped them both, and sent for Mr. Armstrong, the officer; the shirt had a mark picked out of it, and I knew it was a shirt that could not belong to them.

Court. You did extremely well, I wish all pawnbrokers would do as well.

(The shirt, stock and handkerchief deposed to.)

THOMAS STAFFORD sworn.

I am a pawnbroker, a woman left these breeches at our house, she is a customer to us sometimes, her name is Sarah Pearson, she said they were her husband's, I lent her 5s. upon them, and gave her a duplicate; those breeches were pledged before the hand-bills were sent out, in fact, we never received any hand-bill at all, but there was no mark to the breeches.

Prosecutor. I know these breeches by the make, they were made in Scotland, and I know them by the stuff, and by the lining and pockets, there was not enough, and they were made up with another sort; I had a coat made at the taylor's, and he wanted some tape, which I went to town to fetch, and I have a bit here exactly the same.

JOHN ARMSTONG sworn.

On the 8th of July Mr. Francis sent for me, I went to the woman's lodgings, and found this stock; I took her to the Justice; the prisoner lives with the daughter, and she confessed them before the magistrate; says the prisoner they are mine, and you may search the room, you will not find a suskey.

(The stock deposed to, having a mark in it.)

Prosecutor. These gloves I know, and this is the ribbon I used to tie round Mr. Oswald's night cap.

JAMES SHAKESHAFT sworn.

I went with Armstrong, I took this coat and the waistcoat, which I believe I have seen the prisoner wear; he was dressing himself.

Prisoner. The room was not mine, and there was a waistcoat hanging up in the room.

SARAH PEARSON sworn.

I pawned these breeches with Mr. Stafford.

For whom?——For the prisoner.

Did he give them you to pawn?——Yes.

Did he say whose they were?——His own.

How came he to employ you?——I cannot say.

How long have you known him?——Above twelve months, I never knew any harm of him.

Have you often pawned things for him before?——Never.

Are they the same breeches?——The pawnbroker knows best.

Prisoner. I never gave her any breeches at all, she knows it very well.

HANNAH WILKINS sworn.

I called accidentally at Mrs. Pearson's room, and she asked me to pawn them; I took it into Mr. Francis's, and he stopped me at Mrs. Pearson's desire.

Does the prisoner live at Mrs. Pearson's?——No.

When did she desire you to take them?—I do not know the day.

Pearson. I was taken very ill after I had been with these here; the next morning I was very ill, and this young woman came up, and took them to Mr. Francis's; I should know them.

Did you give them to her to carry?—Yes.

Who did you receive them from?——From the prisoner.

JOHN SHANK sworn.

This property was left under my care, and we found the back yard open at three o'clock, and the chest broke open in the yard, it was safely locked up before.

PRI-

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I never saw Mrs. Pearson for six weeks before I saw her at the Justice's; she said she was flurried when the runners took her up, but it was her husband that gave her the things; Armstrong and Shakeshaft came up into my room; no, it is not my room; and there hung up an old waistcoat, and they took out a stock out of their pocket, and put it into the old waistcoat, or else they said they should get no bail upon me.

Shakeshaft. Upon my oath I never had any stock in my possession.

Armstrong. It is not truth, the prisoner lodged with the daughter of this Pearson as a wife, and I know the prosecutor heard him before the Justice acknowledge that this was his property.

The prisoner called one witness to his character.

GUILTY.

To be transported to Africa.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

781. FRANCES GOAD was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 28th day of August, one thread purse, value 1*d.* four guineas, value 4*l.* 4*s.* two half-guineas, value 1*l.* 1*s.* and seven shillings in monies numbered, the property of Adam Clarke.

ADAM CLARKE sworn.

I lost some money the 28th of August, in the morning, four guineas, two half-guineas, and seven shillings in silver, out of my pocket; I put my breeches underneath my pillow, and my breeches were taken from underneath my pillow, and the money taken out.

Where was this?——In Bell-court, Kingsland-road.

How came they there?——I went with the prisoner.

Where did you meet with her?——At the Green-dragon in Bishopsgate-street; I was locked out of my lodgings, and I called there to get two penny-worth of gin and water, and this woman sat down with me, and persuaded me to go home with her.

How long did you stay at the Green-dragon?——Half an hour.

How long had you been in bed?——Three hours.

When you awoke was the prisoner there?—She was gone.

How do you know you had it?——Because I felt for it in both my pockets before I laid my breeches under my head; the silver was loose in the right hand pocket, and the gold in a purse in the left; the prisoner saw me put it there, and nobody else; I took the prisoner the same evening at the same house, the Green-dragon; I found none of my money; she had other clothes on, and was very gay rigged out; I never got any of my money again; I was not in liquor, but I had been drinking.

What did you drink at the Green-dragon?—Two penny-worth of gin and water?

What a clock was it?——It was about one in the morning; we had been at the bean feast; it was on Saturday night.

Was you sober enough to take upon yourself to say upon your oath that you had this money in your pocket at the time you went to bed?—Yes.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I never saw the gentleman till he took me as a prisoner; he took another young woman first.

Prosecutor. I am sure that is the girl.

What are you?——A carpenter.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron HEATH.

---

782. JOHN BROWN was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 23d day of August last, four saws, value 20*s.* the property of George Jeffries.

GEORGE JEFFRIES sworn.

I am a carpenter; I have four saws of my own; I lost them on Tuesday the 23d of Auguſt, out of the houſe where I was at work; I never got them again; I ſaw them there that night when I left work, and in the morning they were gone; there was a board nailed up under the ſtool-board, and that was broke down, by which I ſuppoſe he got in.

DENNIS HERRING ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner come out of the houſe with theſe ſaws in Whitecombe-ſtreet, Leiceſter-ſtreet, at about a quarter after two in the morning; he was coming out underneath the ſhutters; he had nothing with him but theſe two ſaws; there was more in company; one end of the houſe was empty, and the other was inhabited; I was going to ſtop him; I fell over ſome paving ſtones that lay there, and then he threw away the ſaws out of his hand, and run away; I purſued him; I never loſt ſight of him till the next watchman took him; this is the man.

(The ſaws depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

Before the Juſtice he ſaid he loſt ſight of me in Sidney's Alley.

JAMES LYON ſworn.

I am the other watchman; I was in Sidney's Alley, and I heard the cry of ſtop thief, and I ſaw the priſoner and another watchman, and they were both on the ground, and I came up to their aſſiſtance; the priſoner is the man; he ſays, I knocked him down, he fell down, and I fell over him.

THOMAS GOSS ſworn.

I was going on ringing the rattles, and the priſoner was running as faſt as he could, and I tried to ſtop him, and he knocked me down, and cut my elbow; we were both down together.

Priſoner. I had no ſaws: I was talking to a woman of the town at the Coach and Horſes, Leiceſter-fields.

GUILTY.

To be tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

783. ISABELLA HALL was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 23d day of Auguſt, two ſilver ſpoons, value 20s. one waiſtcoat, value 6d. three table cloths, value 5s. a muſlin apron, value 5s. a pair of ſilk ſtockings, value 15d. the property of Conſtantine Teulings.

CONSTANTINE TEULINGS ſworn.

I live at Charing Croſs; I am a goldſmith; the priſoner was my ſervant, I diſcharged her the 20th of Auguſt; ſhe could not clean the houſe before ſhe went away, and ſhe came again to clean the houſe, and ſtaid there that night; the priſoner came for her trunk, and went away about half paſt ten; and about half after twelve one Mr. Norman, the conſtable, brought her in again, and aſked me if I had loſt any thing, I ſaid no; then he pulled out a table ſpoon out of his pocket, and aſked me if I knew that ſpoon, I told him yes; ſays he, I will ſearch the lady; and he did ſo, and found in her pocket a good many duplicates; he took off her bonnet, and in her hair there was another ſpoon of mine concealed, and I was going to Juſtice Walker's, and then the priſoner called me backwards, and ſaid ſhe had pawned ſeveral other things, three table cloths, and other things at Mr. Hall's and Mr. Fripp's, pawnbrokers.

Did you encourage her to tell you this? —No, not at all, they were pawned in different names by the duplicates that I found in her pocket.

How old is this woman?

Priſoner. Thirty-eight.

JOHN NORMAN ſworn.

I am a perſon that attends to take the priſoners to gaol; I know the priſoner, I carried her to the proſecutor's by order of the magiſtrate; it was the 23d of Auguſt; ſhe went to offer a ſpoon to pawn at Mr. Duppree's in Holborn, and ſo ſhe was ſtopped with the ſpoon, and brought to me by Sarah Vaughan, and I carried her with the ſpoon to the proſecutor's, and he owned it directly; I ſearched her in the ſhop, and found a parcel of duplicates; and I found another another ſpoon in her hair, which the proſecutor then owned.

(That ſpoon depoſed to.)

Proſecutor. Here is the fellow of it.

SARAH VAUGHAN ſworn.

I live in Holborn; I am ſhopwoman to Mr. Dupree the pawnbroker, the priſoner offered a ſpoon to pledge at our houſe; ſhe ſaid ſhe brought it from a gentleman's houſe in the ſquare, as I underſtood, Bloomſbury-ſquare; I think it was Tueſday, three weeks; ſhe did not aſk any ſum upon it, but ſaid ſhe was to have the moſt ſhe could get, I told her we could not take it in of her, but ſhe muſt ſend her miſtreſs; ſhe ſaid her miſtreſs could not come, I ſaid ſhe muſt come, and you may go and fetch her, and leave the ſpoon here; ſhe left the ſpoon, and returned again without her miſtreſs; ſhe ſaid her miſtreſs could not come; then my maſter bid me go with her to her miſtreſs; when I got the other ſide of the compter to go with her; ſhe varied in her account; ſhe ſaid then that a ſervant where ſhe had lived had given her the ſpoon to make the moſt of; then my maſter ſaid, as ſhe varied in her account I ſhould go with her to Mr. Norman, I went with her, and delivered the ſpoon to Mr. Juſtice Walker; my maſter ſaid Mr. Walker's, which makes me think ſhe did not know it was a juſtice's; I gave Norman, who was there, the ſpoon, and he went in to the juſtice, and I left the ſpoon and the priſoner in the hands of Norman.

Norman. This is the ſpoon I received from Sarah Vaughan.

Priſoner. I would have made every thing good if they would but have given me a very little time, about two hours; I did not intend to ſteal any thing.

GUILTY.

Fined ſixpence, and confined twelve months in the Houſe of Correction.

---

784. JOHN LOVEJOY and JOHN GODDARD were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 22d day of July laſt, ſeven live ducks, value 7s. the property of John Bedford, Eſquire.

WILLIAM LOCK ſworn.

I am footman to the proſecutor; he lives at Acton Green, I lived with him; on the 22d of July laſt my maſter loſt ſeven ducks; I miſſed them on the 22d in the morning; I ſaw them the night before; I took care of them always; they were in and out of the yard, and ſometimes went on the green; the yard was at one end of the houſe; there were four old ones left behind, theſe ſeven were young ones, but fit for uſe; they were not quite full grown; I ſaw them again the next morning, the 23d, about ten, they were carried to London; I ſaw them in Mount-ſtreet in the watch-houſe, they were in poſſeſſion of John Piddington the patrol; on the 22d I went to town to ſwear to the ducks; I knew the ducks by their marks.

What marks have they?——One was marked juſt by the neck, with white marks.

Was it the feathers you deſcribe?—Yes.

Were the marks ſuch as you could venture to ſwear to them again? — Yes, there were three that were ſo marked.

Should you have known them at any part of the kingdom?——Yes.

Should you have known them on the green three or four miles off?——Yes, I ſwore to them, and carried them home; they have been eat ſince.

JOHN PIDDINGTON ſworn.

I am a patrol of Saint George's, Hanover-ſquare, on the 22d of July laſt, about ten minutes after four in the morning, my partner and I were ſtanding in the corner of Park-lane, and the two priſoners came along by the dead wall from Tyburn Turnpike to the corner of the lane; they came on the foot way; I turned about and ſpoke to my partner that ſtands here, and ſaid, them men were ſuſpicious looking men, and they ſhould be ſearched; Goddard had the bag; it was very light, ten minutes after four; he had the bag tied up, and upon his head, the other priſoner had nothing upon him; him; they were walking together as near as they conveniently could.

Did you hear them converſing together before you ſtopped Goddard?——I cannot ſay.

Were they walking ſide by ſide, or were they following?——I cannot ſay, I believe they croſſed one another when they came to turn down Green-ſtreet round the corner of the wall, as if not to come through it, but to go down Park-lane.

Did they appear to you as if they meant to avoid you?—Yes, I ſtopped them at the corner of Green-ſtreet, I aſked them where they were going; I ſpoke to Goddard, who had the bag, and the other ſtopped; they both ſtopped with one another, and my partner came up to me; I aſked him where he was going, and what he had got, he ſaid ducks; I ſaid, where are you going with theſe ducks, and he ſaid, to Leadenhall-market; I aſked him to whom there, and he ſaid Jones; I aſked him what Mr. Jones was, and he ſaid a ſaleſman; I aſked him where Mr. Jones lived, and he ſaid at Eaſt Acton; he ſaid he had been hay-making there; he ſaid I might ſee the ducks, I ſaid I ſhould ſee them; the ducks were all dead; I ſaw by the killing of them they were not properly killed by a market-man; I ſeized one, and my partner ſeized the other; the priſoner ſaid he was not concerned; going along Park-ſtreet, juſt by the Barley Mow, Goddard deſired to ſtop, I ſtood very cloſe to him the ſame time; I ſaw him huſtle very cloſe to the corner, and he put his right-hand into his left hand waiſtcoat pocket, and I put my hand in, and found this piece of wire, and this piece of iron; in the examination they were deemed picklocks, and I took them for ſuch; there were ſome things of no value, and a pewter ſpoon, but they are owned by nobody; nothing was found on Lovejoy but this little knife; I took the priſoner to our watch-houſe in Mount-ſtreet, and immediately ſet off for Eaſt Acton, where the proſecutor lives; I went to Mr. Bedford's to aſk if he had loſt the ducks, and deſcribed them no further than as ſeven ducks; I had no diſcourſe with the ſervant about the ducks; when I ſhewed them to him the ſervant knew the ducks, and ſaid they were his maſter's property; they were of the Muſcovy breed; I did not obſerve that he ſaid any thing about the marks.

JOHN PERRY ſworn.

I am a patrol; I was out with the laſt witneſs on the 22d of July in Oxford-ſtreet, we ſaw two men coming along from the turnpike; they were coming towards me; they turned down a lane; I was looking the other way; my partner ſtopped him, and I came up the other way; the ducks were juſt dead, they were warm, but no otherwiſe warm than as I imagined the man's hand had warmed them; I ſaw them again about ten, and I believe they were the ſame ducks.

PRISONER GODDARD'S DEFENCE.

I found the ducks under a hedge; this other priſoner is a ſtranger to me; they ſtopped me; at the firſt and ſecond time the ſervant ſaid they were too large to be his maſter's property, but the third time he ſwore to them.

Lock. I never ſaid any ſuch thing.

Priſoner Lovejoy. I know nothing of it.

JOHN LOVEJOY, NOT GUILTY.
JOHN GODDARD, GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

785. JOHN CLAYTON, otherwiſe PADDY OYSTER, was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Mary Lander, widow, on the King's highway, on the 11th day of September, and putting her in corporal fear and danger of her life, and feloniouſly taking from her perſon, and againſt her will, one muſlin apron, value 10s. one linen apron, value 1s. one linen ſhift, value 4s. one flannel petticoat, value 1s. one pair of robins, value 1s. one handkerchief, value 1s. one ſhirt, value 1s. one pair of worſted worsted stockings, value 6d. and one cap, value 6d. her property.

MARY LANDER sworn.

I was robbed on Sunday night last, a little before ten in East-Smithfield, I had two bundles in my hand, and a large lanthorn with a large candle in it, and a little girl about five years old at the side of me; and there came a man behind me, and turned me round, and pulled the bundle and took it from me, and he scratched me, and pinched my arms, and tore my apron and kicked at me, I struggled with him for a quarter of a minute, he kicked the mud all over me, and then he snatched at my second bundle, after he had taken the first; but he did not get the second; some people were at the window, and they hallooed out, do not pull the woman about so, and he went to the place called Parrot-alley, and a gentleman advised me to take my child, and go home and not follow him; I called out stop thief! but somebody ran after him, he was not taken then, but there was a little girl standing by that knew him, it was not a very dark night, but I had a light, I knew the man again in the morning, there were two men in the watch-house in the morning, and the moment I saw him, I knew him again, I am very sure it is the man that is the prisoner, I am quite sure of it; none of my things were ever found; my bundle contained the things mentioned in the indictment; the girl is here that knew him.

MARY TATE.

How old are you? ——Eleven.

Do you know the nature of an oath?—That I am sworn to speak the truth, that is all I know of an oath.

Do you know what will happen to you, if you do not speak the truth?—I shall not go to Heaven.

Do you know you are liable to be punished for it here if you speak falsely?—Yes.

Then take care and speak nothing but the truth, and answer my questions without fearing anybody.

MARY TATE sworn.

I know the prisoner, his name is Paddy Oyster, there were five of them in a gang altogether.

How long have you known him by sight?——About two or three weeks.

Did you see him last Sunday night?—I saw him take the bundle from the gentlewoman, I am very sure that I saw him take it, and he handed it over to another man whom I did not know, and I said very well Mr. Paddy Oyster, you are going to rob the gentlewoman; he said nothing, but he turned round and I ran away; when I saw him turn round, I thought he might follow me, I am quite sure it was him, and I went to the public house, the White Swan, for some liquor, that was in about half an hour after, and with my running I broke a bottle, and I told them at the public house that Paddy Oyster had robbed a gentlewoman; I saw him put the bundle up two pair of stairs, I followed up one pair of stairs, and there were two or three people before, there was Betsey Jarvis and two or three more; he did not know that I followed him; the gentlewoman came in the morning, I did not see her that night, I am sure this is the truth.

Court to Prosecutor. How did you find out this little girl?——She went to the public house for some liquor, and she told the woman at the publick house, that this man was fighting at the watch-house door, he is not beloved by the neighbourhood, and they found me out; when I came to him in the watch-house, I knew the man.

Did you hear the little girl cry out very well, very well you have got the gentlewoman's bundle?——I remember hearing her say so, I was frightened after the gentleman told me to get away, and take my child home.

——OSBORNE sworn.

I am a watchman, I was in the watch-house, house, and this man was breeding a quarrel and fighting, and I told him so go home; I wanted a pint of beer, and went into the house next door, getting a pint of beer, and the landlord said there had been a robbery committed, and I took the prisoner into custody.

GEORGE HERVEY sworn.

I know no further than from the information that the publican left, I assisted in taking the prisoner knowing him by the name of Paddy Oyster.

JOHN WILKINSON sworn.

I know nothing as to the robbery, only as to the taking the man into custody.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I have a witness here of the place where I was at, from eight till half after ten.

(The rest of the prisoner's witnesses were ordered out of Court.)

JOHN STEVENS sworn.

Court. Where do you live?——At Mr. Luke M'Carty's.

Where does he live?—In East-Smithfield.

What is he?——A publican.

What public house does he keep?——The sign of the Shovel.

Do you know the prisoner?—Yes.

How long have you known him?——I knew him to be at our house from eight o'clock.

How long have you known him?——I have known him these fourteen months.

When did you know him to be at your house?——From eight o'clock on Sunday night.

What Sunday?—Last Sunday.

What time did he come into your house?——Eight o'clock.

What did he come in for?—He came in and he called for a quartern of gin.

Did he come in by himself, or with anybody else?—There was another man and woman came in with him, and called for some gin.

How long did he stay?—He staid from eight o'clock till half after ten.

Now, did the company stay with him all the time?——Yes.

Did they go away together?——Yes.

Had they any supper?—No, Sir, they had no supper.

What did they drink during the time they were there?——The first beginning they had a pint of beer.

What more?——Then he had a quartern of gin at half after ten.

What, and had the three people but a quartern of gin and a pint of beer among them all?——Yes.

What more had they?——No more.

That was all?——Yes.

Did they sit all that time?——Yes.

Are your customers usually so sober in two hours and an half?—Some, not all.

How came you to take notice of the time these people came in and went out?—I always take notice.

What of every body?——Yes.

Can you tell me what time every body came in and went out?——Yes, some of them.

Do you remember any particular company come in or went out on Saturday night?——They are none of them here.

But who do you remember?——One Mrs. Allen.

What time did she come in?—She came in at five o'clock.

What time did she go away?——At eight o'clock.

How do you know what o'clock it was when these people came in and went away?—I know very well, I saw by the dial.

Have you a clock in the tap room?—Yes.

Did you look at the clock when the people went away?——Yes.

How happened that?—I always do.

What when every body goes away?—Yes.

How happened that?—I always do.

What when every body goes away?—I always look at the clock when our customers go away.

Wh

What do you do that for, to be able to give evidence for them?—Yes, Sir.

So they had no supper all this time?—No.

And only one pint of beer, and one quartern of gin?——Yes.

WILLIAM WALLIS sworn.

Do you know the prisoner?—Yes.

Which is him?—That is the man there.

What do you call him?—Paddy Oyster.

How long have you known him?——I have known him these five years.

Do you know where he was last Sunday evening?——Yes.

Where was he?——At Mr. M'Carty's.

Was you in company with him?—Yes, Sir, I was.

How did you fall into company with him there?——I met him at eight o'clock standing at the door, I went in with him.

Where did you meet him?——In East-Smithfield.

How many of you went there?——A woman, and he, and I.

What o'clock was it?——Eight o'clock when we came in.

Was nobody else in company?——Nobody else.

How long did you stay there?——Till half after ten, I staid.

And how long did Paddy stay?——I do not know, I shook hands with him at the door, and parted with him at half after ten, and went home.

Did he come away then?—I cannot say, I left him standing at the door, I shook hands with him, and went to bed.

What time did the woman go away?—I do not know indeed.

How long before that did she go away?—She stood at the door with him, I shook hands with them both, and left them both together.

How came you to take notice what o'clock it was?—By Mr. M'Carty's clock that stands in the tap room.

Did you look at the clock?—Yes.

So you left him and the woman together?——Yes.

Had you a good supper?—I had no supper with them.

What were you so long without having any supper?——I had no supper, I had two pints of beer, and a dram of gin with them.——

Was that all you had?—Yes.

And no supper?—No.

How came you to take notice what time you went in and came out that night?—The clock stands in the middle of the tap room, and when you go in, you can see what o'clock it is.

ELIZABETH FLINN sworn.

Do you know the prisoner?——Yes.

How long have you known him?——I have known him for these twelvemonths and better.

Do you remember seeing him any where last Sunday night?——Yes, at the Shovel, in East-Smithfield at Mr. M'Carty's.

Do you know how long he had been there before you went in?——I cannot say, I was in there at eight o'clock.

You do not know how long he had been there?——I do not know.

Did you find him there?—Yes, I found him there when I went in.

Did you go along, or had you any body with you?——I went in by myself.

How long after you came in was it that Wallis came in?——I cannot really tell how long it might be, but we were all in company together.

Did Wallis come in after you, or was he there before you?——I cannot rightly tell, but I think first the prisoner was there, when I went in.

And Wallis came in after that, did he?——I really did not take notice, whether he was there before or after, I know they were all in company together.

Why he did not go in with you?—No, Sir, I went in by myself.

How long after you went in was it before you all joined company?—Directly almost.

Who else was there in company with you?——Why, there were two more that are are not here; they attended yesterday but they could not attend to day, because they were at work.

Who were they?—Black Joe was one.

Who is he?——A black man.

Where does he live?——I do not know where he lives.

And who else?—Another man, I do not know his name.

Did the prisoner go away before supper?—Before supper, Sir, we did not eat any supper there, we had beer and gin, but no supper.

Then you did not stay long I suppose?——Yes, I did stay till half past ten, and better.

And had you no supper at that time?—No.

What drink had you then?—Only we had beer and gin plenty.

How much, recollect, I do not mean to confine you to two or three pots, but whereabouts?——I do not know how much we had indeed, I cannot remember when I am in liquor.

How much had you to your own share? To my own share, upon my word I cannot say, Sir, I drank pretty hearty.

Did the prisoner drink pretty hearty?—Yes, Sir, he was very much in liquor.

Were you all sober when you went in?——Yes.

Had you five pots or ten?——Upon my word, Sir, I cannot remember when I am in liquor.

Who paid the reckoning?—We paid it among us as it came in, I did not spend above four-pence halfpenny, I had no more.

Some of them spent more than that, did they?—I do not know indeed.

Had you any gin?——I believe so, yes, we had some gin.

How often was gin called for?——That I cannot tell.

Four or five times?——Upon my word, Sir, I do not know how often, we had it too often I think.

Which of you went away first?—Let me recollect; Wallis went away first, I think to the best of my memory.

And which next, do you remember?—I and the prisoner went together across the way.

Where did you part with Wallis?——At the corner of the alley that faces the Shovel.

Then you went out together?——We went all out together, one after the other, when Wallis went away, we all come out together, it was a little better than half after ten.

What went with the other two?—They staid in the house till the landlord turned them out.

So you had no supper at all?——No.

Nothing but drink?—No.

But plenty of that?—We had our share.

How much do you think your share was?—Upon my word, Sir, we were all in liquor mostly.

Cannot you form some judgement?——I cannot remember when I am in liquor, indeed, we were none of us very sober.

You was sober when you went in?——Yes.

How much may you drink before it get into your head?——A little thing gets into a person's head sometimes to what it does at others, we might have two or three pots besides gin.

Would two or three pots make five of you drunk?——No, I do not imagine it would.

Court to John Osborne. What time of night was it when you took the prisoner?—About half past eleven.

Jury. Is the landlord in Court.

Prisoner. I sent for the landlord, but he was not at home.

The Jury after conferring sometime desired to withdraw some time, and returned with a verdict

GUILTY, Death.

The prisoner was humbly recommended to his Majesty's mercy.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

786. WILLIAM MOORE was indicted for feloniously breaking and entering the dwelling house of John Weedon, at the hour of ten in the forenoon, on the 8th day of Auguſt laſt, no perſon being therein, and feloniouſly ſtealing therein, one linen ſhirt, value 5s. one pair of cotton ſtockings, value 2s. and one muſlin neckcloth, value 2s. his property.

(The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of the priſoner.)

JOHN WEEDON ſworn.

I live at Ickenham, near Uxbridge, I am a married man, my wife's name is Elizabeth Weedon, I have four children; on the 8th of Auguſt laſt, my houſe was broke open, I was gone to hay binding, and my wife was gone to reaping; two of my children were with my wife, and the other two were gone to ſchool.

Did you go out before your wife, or laſt?——I went out before her, and left her at home; I did not hear of my houſe being broke open, till my wife came home about five in the afternoon, I came home about eight, when I came home I found a woman in the houſe, and my things in their places as they uſually were; the firſt place that was broke through, was a large window, and the ſtaple was forced out, I loſt the things mentioned in the indictment.

What was the value of your ſhirt?——Five ſhillings.

Was it a new ſhirt?—It had a new body, a pair of old ſleeves, and new wriſtbands and collar, a pair of cotton ſtockings narrow ribbed, value 2s. a fringed neckcloth, value 2s. I pulled theſe things off the night before, I went to bed, I left them in the bed chamber, I never ſaw the priſoner till I ſaw him the next morning before Juſtice Fellows, the robbery was on the Monday, I ſaw the things the next morning before the Juſtice, they are here now.

Priſoner. Did you ever ſee me about your houſe, or in the pariſh?—I did not, I never ſaw you to my knowledge, till I ſaw you at the Juſtice's.

ELIZABETH WEEDON ſworn.

I am the wife of John Weedon, on Monday the 8th of Auguſt, I went out to reaping, about eight in the morning, my huſband went out to hay binding, I have four children, they were all four gone to ſchool, I was laſt in the houſe, and when I went out, I am poſitive ſure that I faſtened the door and windows, I returned about five in the afternoon, and found the window broke open of the little back room, it appeared to be freſh broke, I am ſure it was whole and faſt when I went out, then the door was burſt open between the back room and the other room, both the back rooms communicate with the dwelling houſe, with the inſide, there was a ſhirt taken away, a pair of ſtockings, and a neckcloth, I put them into my huſband's cheſt that very morning before I went out, there was no lock to the cheſt.

Put the loweſt price on the things?——The real worth of the ſhirt was five ſhillings, the ſtockings were worth three ſhillings, they had not been waſhed but once, I gave four ſhillings for them, the neckcloth was worth two ſhillings, it was almoſt new, I bought it myſelf, it coſt half-a-crown; the priſoner was taken between five and ſix that ſame evening, at Hillingdon; I had intelligence from Ann Milton of the robbery, and I followed him, he had my huſband's ſhirt on his back, I ſaw it taken from him, he had the neckcloth round his neck, I ſaw that taken from him, the Juſtice had the ſtockings, they were taken from him before I came, I am poſitive the ſtockings, the ſhirt, and the neckcloth were the ſame that I put into my huſband's cheſt that morning.

Priſoner. Was the cap that ſhe took before the Juſtice, in the houſe at the ſame time that the ſhirt and other things were?—There was that night a cap that laid at top of the cheſt, but it was loſt out of the bundle ſomehow, it was of very little value.

Court. How did you come by that cap?——I made it out of a white apron, the conſtable has the cuſtody of the things, I left no perſon in the houſe when I went out.

JAMES WOODLEY ſworn.

I am conſtable at Hillingdon, I have a ſhirt, neckcloth, and a pair of white ribbed ſtockings, which I took from the priſoner, he was at the door with Samuel Allen, a taylor, offering them for ſale, and Mr. Allen came over to me to the public houſe, and ſaid he had a ſuſpicious man offering him a pair of ſtockings for two ſhillings, upon which I went and took the priſoner into cuſtody, he had the ſtockings on one arm, and a piece of camblet that contained ſix yards on the other; the priſoner I obſerved had a very good ſhirt on, and I ſaw he had a very good neckcloth on; I examined his neckcloth, and pulled it out of his boſom, to ſee if there was any mark upon it, there was no mark or letter at all then, when I examined the neckcloth, I ſaw the collar of his ſhirt was not buttoned at all, I then obſerved the wriſtbands were not buttoned; he ſaid he bought the things in St. George's-ſtreet, in the Borough, I aſked him what ſhop, or number, and he could not tell me, then I took him to the Juſtice, it was rather after ſix, or about ſeven, when we got to the Juſtice's, and Mrs. Weedon came ſoon after, ſhe ſaid her houſe had been broke open, ſhe ſaid ſhe loſt a pair of white cotton ſtockings ribbed, which the Juſtice had in his hand, and ſhe ſaid they were hers, they were the ſame I took from the priſoner, ſhe ſaid ſhe had loſt a neckcloth, and ſhirt, ſhe knew the neckcloth, though it had no mark, which he had on, and ſhe owned the ſhirt being remarkable, ſhe deſcribed the ſhirt which I took from the priſoner.

ANN MILTON ſworn.

I live in Ickenham, the priſoner came to aſk me the way into the High-road, on the 8th of Auguſt about four in the afternoon; I was weeding of turnips, it was about a quarter of a mile from the proſecutor's houſe, I directed him the way, it was a by way where I was, it was not a common foot path, he turned away for Hillingdon; he had a ſickle on his left ſhoulder, and a piece of camblet under his left arm, and a horſeſhoe in his hand, he went away, and I ſaw Elizabeth Weedon about an hour after, ſhe ſaid her houſe had been robbed, and I told her of the priſoner; I was not before the Juſtice that night, but I afterwards ſaw him before the Juſtice on the Tueſday morning, I knew him again, I am very ſure the priſoner is the ſame perſon I ſaw the night before.

SAMUEL ALLEN ſworn.

I live at Hillingdon, I know the priſoner, he came to my houſe on Monday the 8th of Auguſt, in the evening, nearly about ſix, he offered me a pair of white cotton ſtockings to ſell, I took them in my hand, theſe are the ſtockings, he aſked two and ſixpence, I bid him two ſhillings, he ſaid I ſhould have them for two and three-pence, I told him I ſhould give him no more, he went towards Uxbridge about two hundred yards, and he turned back, I expected he was coming to bring me the ſtockings, and I called the conſtable, and the priſoner was taken into cuſtody, he brought the ſtockings back to me.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was coming from St. Albans, and at a place called Sundridge, I cut three acres of corn for one farmer Thrale, at five ſhillings and ſixpence per acre; I came acroſs the country, and I met a man on the road that had theſe things, and the cap; this woman will not bring the man to juſtice becauſe he is a neighbour, and I was taken becauſe I was a ſtranger.

Court to Allen. Was any other perſon with the priſoner when he offered the ſtockings to ſell?—No.

Jury. I think he ſaid to you, that he bought them in St. George's ſtreet, in the Borough?—Yes, and the Juſtice ſaid there was no ſuch ſtreet.

Court to Jury. Gentlemen, where a dwelling houſe has been broken in the day time by two perſons, and one of them erected a ladder, and opened the window, and took out the things, it had been held, that the excluſion of the benefit of clergy only applied plied to him, that actually put in his hand, and ſtole the things.

Jury to Milton. Did he ſeem to you to be coming from Weedon's houſe at the time you ſaw him?—Yes.

Jury to Conſtable. Did the priſoner ſay he bought all the things in the Borough?—Yes.

There was no perſon with him?——I ſaw no other man.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice GOULD.

---

787. THOMAS BROWNING and THOMAS WINDERBANK were indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting James Buttercaſs on the King's highway, on the 14th day of September laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon and againſt his will, one gold watch, value 7l. and five ſhillings in monies numbered, his property.

(The witneſſes examined apart, at the requeſt of the Priſoners.)

JAMES BUTTERCASS ſworn.

I was robbed on Wedneſday laſt in the evening, a few minutes after five, on the road leading from London to Harrow, within three miles and a half from Harrow, within a few yards of Wimbly-green, I was in a one horſe chaiſe, nobody was with me; I was ſtopped by two men, whom I remember very well to be the priſoners at the bar; they met me, the one that has a defect under his eye, had a horſe piſtol.

Court. What is his name?—Thomas, Browning, he laid hold of the bridle of my horſe, he had a large ruſty piſtol in his hand, and with an oath demanded my money; I inſtantly got up and made a threatning motion to jump over him, and whipped my horſe, in hopes to go over him, then the other man came to the fore wheel and preſented a cutlaſs from under his coat, I gave him upwards of 5s. and a few half-pence, I believe it was leſs than 10s. they expreſſed a doubt that it was not all, and they felt on my pocket, and lifting up the flap of my waiſtcoat, they ſaw the black ſtring of my watch, they aſked me what it was dangling, I replied that it was my watch, but it would be of no uſe to them; I delivered it to the other priſoner that drew the cutlaſs, that was Winderbank the tall priſoner; after I had delivered him my watch, they ſaid I might go on. I ſtopped their proceeding towards London, and expoſtulated with them to return my watch, and I muſt in juſtice to one ſay, he would have returned it, he was coming back, but the other threatened that he would ſhoot him if he ſtirred an inch, that was the taller priſoner Winderback, that would have returned it, Browning ſaid to his companion, I will ſhoot you if you ſtir an inch: in favour of the other who had the piſtol, I beg leave to mention that he did not fire, though the piſtol was loaded: when I loſt ſight of them by the winding of the road, I proceeded as faſt as I could to Wimbly Green, then I ſaw two men with horſes at the leaping bar, I applied to them, they were men from London, I told them of the robbery, they purſued them, and within twenty minutes after I had been robbed I met ſome gentlemen of Harrow, who told me, ſome men, ſuppoſed to be the perſons I deſcribed, were apprehended; and when I ſaw them they were the ſame; I ſaw them in a field about a mile and a quarter from the place where I was, Browning was in cuſtody of Joſeph Thompſon; it was full day light, I knew them perfectly, it was impoſſible I ſhould not know them, only their faces were much dirtier, I am perfectly clear, I had no doubt then or now, I was told that my watch was picked up by a little girl, who was with her parents in a field.

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Council. Had you ever ſeen any of the priſoners before?—No, not to my recollection.

They were much dirtier you ſay?——Yes,

Yes, but not enough to conceal his features.

RICHARD TOWNE ſworn.

I know nothing about the robbery, I was bringing a calf to Mr. Green, and Mr. Barlow was leaping a horſe over a leaping bar at Wimbly Green, the proſecutor came up, and ſaid he had been robbed by two footpads; he deſcribed them, and ſaid one of them had a brown coat on, and one had a lightiſh colour one on, Mr. Barlow was with me, and I got upon my horſe, and rode as hard as I could ride; I took down to the church, and I ſaw two men running up a field, I might have rode about a quarter of a mile, they were walking, then I judged them to be the two men, they anſwered in dreſs the deſcription of the proſecutor, and I could ſee nobody elſe; Mr. Barlow was with me, I purſued them over a field, and they came over a gate, I leaped my horſe immediately, and threw them down and myſelf too, and my horſe; and I ſays to the two priſoners, you are two villains, and you have been uſing a young woman ill, going to raviſh her, which is my ſiſter; I did not tell them the real thing till afterwards, for I was rather afraid, ſays I, if you do not follow me, I will blow your brains out; they were very civil.

No ſuch thing had happened to your ſiſter?—No, my Lord, but I was rather frightened, and was glad to ſay anything to get away from them, but they were very civil.

Had you any arms?—Nothing but a ſtick, but I told them I had arms; I went to the middle of the field, and there I jumped off my horſe, and laid hold of them, then Mr. Barlow, and another young man Joſeph Thompſon came up to my aſſiſtance; the young man with ſore eyes ſaid, he would not come on; Mr. Barlow hit him over the head with a ſtick; Mr. Barlow ſearched them both, he found nothing on them but a ram-rod and a knife, they had no arms at all; as I was riding by them, I judged they had dropped ſomething, I did not actually ſee them; there was a horſe piſtol found, and in about fifteen minutes the proſecutor came up, it was all done in leſs than half an hour, we took them to the alehouſe, and afterwards to Juſtice Lamb's; the proſecutor came and ſaid they were the two men that robbed him.

Were they ſearched again before the Juſtice?—The Juſtice would not have anything to do with them, he delivered them up to the Shepherd's-buſh patrol, belonging to Sir Sampſon Wright, who ſearched them, and found nothing upon them; I ſaid I believed I could find every thing in the field, and I took a ſtick out of one of their hands and ſtuck it up at the place they were taken from, and I looked in the field; I went from the ſtick by my horſe's tracks, by his foot tracks, it was high graſs, and I judged I ſhould find ſomething, and the firſt thing that I picked up was ſome ſhot and ſome powder, that was about fifteen yards from the place where I took them; the next thing I found was this cutlaſs, and the gentleman brought the ſheath, and ſaid it anſwered the deſcription.

Proſecutor. I found the ſheath, in the road where I was robbed.

Towne. The next thing that I ſaw was a farmer's man pick up this piſtol, it was charged, and he let it off, but what with I do not know, it made a great report, it was primed; going a little way further I ſaw a little girl pick up this watch cloſe to me, this was all within fifty yards.

(The watch depoſed to by the proſecutor.)

Proſecutor. I did not recollect the number or the maker's name, nor do I now recollect the number, though I have looked at it ſeveral times; it has all the appearance of being mine, I have had it ever ſince the year 1767; I have not the ſmalleſt doubt but it is mine; I believe it to be gold, I was told ſo, but I cannot ſwear it is; I remember the two firſt figures of the number, which are one and three; I do not not remember the reſt, and there is the name of Gordon on the inſide.

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Council, to Towne. The priſoners did not attempt to get away?—No.

Is not this the ſhooting ſeaſon?—There are partridges about you?—I do not know, I never carry a gun out.

There is a good deal of powder and ſhot in that part of the country?—Yes.

Court. It is common ſmall ſhot.

Priſoner Browning. On which of us was the ramrod found?—On Winderbank, but there is no place for the ramrod in the piſtol.

——— BARLOW ſworn.

I joined in the purſuit of the priſoners, and after they were ſtopped, we found the things in the ſame field, within the courſe of forty yards, we obſerved a part of the field that the priſoners had gone on by the track of Mr. Towne's horſe, I was within two yards of the track, my horſe made a fault, and fell down into a gravel pit, ſo I was not up ſo ſoon as Towne, but I ſaw the things found; I did not ſee the watch picked up, I ſearched that man, and took a knife and key from Browning, and the other, Winderbank, had a ramrod, the proſecutor immediately ſaid that is the man that held the piſtol to my horſe's head, that was Winderbank; and that is the man that ſtood with the cutlaſs, and took my watch, that was Browning, and the gentleman ſaid that Winderbank would have given him his watch back, but Browning ſaid he would blow his brains out; I am ſure of their perſons.

Towne. I cannot recollect poſitively which it was he ſaid ſtood at the horſe's head, but I think he ſaid the ſhorteſt, Browning, and the other took his money; my recollection in that circumſtance differs from Barlow's.

JOSEPH HOGSDON ſworn.

I was coming from town, and I joined in the purſuit, and I helped to take them; I ſaw them picking up the things, I ſaw the watch ſoon after it was picked up, but I did not actually ſee it picked up; when the proſecutor came he ſaid they had robbed him; he did not ſhew me which, he ſaid they were the two men that robbed him; their faces were rather dirtier; the ſhorteſt man was rather dirtier.

PRISONER BROWNING'S DEFENCE.

We were going a little way with a ſhipmate; we went down the higheſt way, and we went acroſs a bean-field, and he took three or four beans, and we thought it was the farmer.

Towne. There was not a ſoul that I could ſee within a quarter of a mile; the two priſoners were behind a hedge, and I did not ſee them at firſt.

Priſoner Browning called ſix witneſſes, who all gave him a very good character.

Priſoner Winderbank. My witneſſes are not come yet.

THOMAS BROWNING, } GUILTY, Death.
T. WINDERBANK, }

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

788. JOHN ASHBOURNE and JOSEPH WOOD were indicted for feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling-houſe of George Whitmill about one in the afternoon, on the tenth of Auguſt, no perſon being therein, and feloniouſly ſtealing therein one cotton gown, value 17s. a camblet gown, value 10s. a linen gown, value 2s. a cloak, value 5s. a pair of leather breeches, value 3s. a linen waiſtcoat, value 9d. a piece of linen, value 1d. a ſhift, value 2s. the property of the ſaid George Whitmill.

GEORGE WHITMILL ſworn.

I went out about five o'clock in the morning, and left my wife at home, when I came home, my wife, who had been out, came home, and as I was coming home I met my daughter, who was coming down to the field where I was at work, to tell me, and as I was going home I saw two men, with each of them a bundle, in a field adjoining to the wheatfield which I came out of; I was reaping wheat; that was about half a mile from my house, this was about half after one.

Who were the two men that had the bundles?——They are the prisoners at the bar, who were strangers to me then; I am positive to the prisoners; they were going from my house across the field towards Harrow on the Hill, I went back to the field I came out of, and called to the two men that were reaping in the field, and told them I really thought my house was robbed; they came to my assistance, and the prisoners ran across a hedge into a plowed field; I had heard at this time that my house had been broke open, I pursued them about ten or a dozen yards, but after they threw the bundles away I returned back to pick them up; I saw the bundles picked up; the prisoners were taken in less than half an hour; when I came home I saw a back window was broke open into the orchard, the glass was unnailed, and one side of the light, and two of the staves, were broken down, and the case was pulled out.

Were the things that are contained in those bundles in your house that morning?——Yes.

In what part of your house were they?—In my lodging-room.

Prisoners. When you saw us pass over the hedge, how could you see us heave the bundles away when you was the other side of the hedge?——Oh lack-a-daisy! you did not throw the bundles away till we had run after you six or seven yards; there was only a hedge that parted the plowed land from the field; we could have touched them if we had but a rod when they first jumped over the hedge.

WILLIAM READING sworn.

I was reaping on that day I saw the prisoners, I pursued them; they are the men; I saw them both have a bundle in their hands; I saw them throw away the bundles; I was about nine or ten yards off when they threw away the bundles; we were both on one side the hedge; the prosecutor stopped to take care of the bundles, and me and Fooley followed them; in the space of half an hour we took them; we ran three quarters of a mile; we took one of them in a meadow-field, that was John Ashbourn; Wood run away, and concealed himself, and there was an alarm made, and he was taken, and brought to the other in less than an hour.

RICHARD TULY sworn.

I was with Reading at the taking of Ashbourn; I saw a bundle in each of their hands; I saw them both throw the bundles away; I know where the prosecutor lives; when I first saw them it was about a quarter of a mile from his house; they were coming from his house; it was between one and two; Wood was taken in about half an hour.

SARAH WHITMILL sworn.

I went out of my house the morning of the robbery, about eleven, as nigh as I can guess; I made the door very fast, and the windows very fast; it was not a casement, nor nothing of that sort; I have five children; two of them were reaping in the field with my husband, and two in school, and one I had with me, a little infant; I came back between twelve and one, but I cannot say justly to the time; when I came to the house I unlocked the door, and looked strait forwards, and saw one light of the window broke, and one of the staves pulled right down; this was the back window to the orchard; then I looked about my house, and saw that my house was broke open, and I ran up stairs immediately, and saw the chest open, and missed my clothes, and I saw some things laying about the room.

BERNARD LIGHT sworn.

I am the constable; I produce these things; I was sent for to the Red-lion public house on Harrow-hill common, and they gave me charge of the prisoners at the bar, and the things, I have had them in my custody ever since.

(The things deposed to)

Sara

Sarah Whitmill. Here are a red cloak, and a cotton gown, I have the cuffs to it, which did not lay with it, this gown cost my husband a guinea, I have not worn it above three times.

Is the other gown yours?—Yes.

What is that worth?—Seven or eight shillings.

PRISONER ASHBOURNE'S DEFENCE.

Me and this man were looking after work, and we saw a man come running down a bean field, two of us together; we saw him heave down two bundles, nobody came to pick them up, but we took them and carried them, then they came to me, and I hove it down and run away; I know no more of the house being broke open than your Lordship.

PRISONER WOOD'S DEFENCE.

I can say no more than he has said, we have no witnesses.

JOHN ASHBOURNE, JOSEPH WOOD, } GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

789. JOHN BRENTWOOD and ROBERT CHAMBERS were indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 20th of June last, 1100lb. weight of lead, value 6l. belonging to Benjamin Fowles, affixed to a certain building called a shed of the said Benjamin, against the statute.

A Second Count charging them for feloniously stealing 81b. weight of lead, value 4l. belonging to the said Benjamin, and then and there affixed to his dwelling house, against the statute.

BENJAMIN FOWLES sworn.

On the 20th of June, I lost some lead, or early in the morning on Tuesday the 21st, the lead was about one thousand one hundred weight, the shed adjoins to the house, it is open, I also lost at another time eight hundred pound weight from the roof of my dwelling house, it was all carried off except one piece or two, that was dropped in the garden, which was taken from the house, I compared that lead that was dropt in the garden, which was taken from the house, I compared that lead that was dropped in the garden, and it fitted; on the 28th the two prisoners were seen taking some lead out of a ditch by the two other witnesses;—it was taken from the flat of the house.

WILLIAM MOXON sworn.

I am a carpenter, I was at work upon the premises from which the lead was taken, the prisoners were brought up to me with the lead, I laid it down in several places, and found it matched exactly, another piece of lead was brought immediately after, with the corner cut off five or six inches, which matched exactly.

JOSEPH BEST sworn.

I was at work in the field, and I saw the prisoners and two others go into a ditch belonging to our field, and take out some lead and put it into a sack, and as they were taking it away I stopped them; they threw it down and run away; I ran after them and took two of them, which are the prisoners; I never lost sight of them.

RICHARD WHITE sworn.

I saw one of the prisoners go along by the ditch to pick up a piece of lead, and put it into a bag, they were both present.

PRISONER BRENTWOOD'S DEFENCE.

I saw this lead lay, and I drew it out, I did not know what it was, and in about five minutes afterwards they brought this other prisoner, he was not with me at the time.

Court to Best. Was this ditch near a foot path?—Yes, it was within a hundred yards of the foot path.

The prisoner Brentwood called five witnesses to his character.

GUILTY.

Each Transported for seven years.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

790. JOHN CLARKE was indicted for feloniously ſtealing, on the 19th day of September laſt, one boy's velvet waiſtcoat, value 18d. and one pair of jean breeches, value 18d. the property of Richard Worrell.

RODERICK M'ENZIE ſworn.

On the 19th of September, the priſoner came into the proſecutor's ſhop, who is a ſaleſman, for ſome clothes, I miſſed the waiſtcoat and breeches, and found them in the priſoner's breeches concealed, he denied having them, then he ſaid he did not do it intentionally, they were the proſecutor's property, with his ſhop mark.

(Depoſed to.)

WILLIAM BRADHAM ſworn.

I work journey-work for the proſecutor, I ſaw the priſoner and the laſt witneſs on the ſtair-caſe together, and I heard a diſpute between them, and the priſoner ſaid he had got the waiſtcoat and breeches, and would deliver them up directly, they were found in the ſeat of his breeches behind, he ſaid he did not mean intentionally to do it.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was rather in liquor, I did not know anything of it, I had been drinking very hard for a day or two, and was quite ſtupid.

Bradham. He was in liquor.

GUILTY.

Privately whipped, and confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

In a few Days will be Publiſhed in the Seſſions Paper:

The remarkable Trial of WILLIAM HARVEY, a Conſtable, for wilful and corrupt PERJURY, on the Trial of PETER NEWBERY and WILLIAM IVERSON, who were capitally convicted in February Seſſions laſt, but have ſince received his Majeſty's pardon.

N. B. This Trial which laſted SEVEN HOURS will contain the evidence of a number of witneſſes at large, with the SPEECHES of Mr. MORGAN for the Proſecution, and Mr. FIELDING for the Priſoner, and is well worth the attention of the public.

The remarkable Trials of JOHN HENRY AIKLES and GEORGE THORP for returning from Tranſportation are in the preſs, with the LEGAL OBSERVATIONS that occurred during the trials.

Alſo the remarkable Trial of JANE LANGLEY and MARY FINN, on which two witneſſes were committed to Newgate for wilful and corrupt Perjury.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commission of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middlesex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wednesday the 14th of SEPTEMBER, 1785, and the following Days;

Being the SEVENTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER VII. PART VI.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLEY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noster Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

791. ELIZABETH HENLEY wife of John Henly was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 20th day of July, one pair of linen ſheets, value 6s. two flat irons, value 12d. one copper tea kettle, value 2s. the property of John Collins, being in a certain lodging room, in the dwelling houſe of the ſaid John Collins, let by contract by him to the ſaid John Henley, and to be uſed by him and the ſaid John Henley, againſt the form of the ſtatute.

JOHN COLLINS ſworn.

The priſoner lodged at my houſe above two years, I loſt the things in the indictment, I was obliged to turn them out, for they owed me a great deal of rent, the taxes were ſo high, and now the ſhop-tax, that people find it difficult to live; a man lived with the priſoner as her huſband, I put the padlock upon the door one night when they were both out, and the next day theſe things were miſſing, and the leads of the windows were miſſing, the woman was at the door, and we charged her with a conſtable, the man went into the hoſpital; I believe the ſame day the things were found at different pawnbrokers.

WILLIAM ALDRIDGE ſworn.

I am a pawnbroker, I had a pair of ſheets, they were taken in from one Sarah Alwright in March 1784, ſhe is not here, the priſoner renewed one in March laſt, ſhe paid the intereſt of one of the ſheets, ſhe ſaid, they were her own ſheets, ſhe ſaid her huſband was very ill, which he was, he is ſince dead in the hoſpital.

Proſecutor. The ſheets have no mark, I believe them to be mine.

JOHN WICKHAM ſworn.

I produce two flat irons, anda kettle, the priſoner pledged the kettle, but I am not poſitive to the irons, the irons were in September 1784, and the kettle about three months ago, ſhe ſaid it was her own property, and her huſband was very ill, and had not anything to get him a breakfaſt; I cannot ſwear to the kettle nor the irons.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I lodged in Mr. Collin's houſe ſix years, and my poor huſband has been bad ever ſince a week before Chriſtmas, and I have been bad, my legs have been ſwelled, I buried him; I had no money, but when I had, I always paid my rent, honeſt and juſt; the things that were out, I intended to get in again; I paid him five ſhillings, and my poor huſband was then dying, I leave it to the mercy of the Court.

Court to Proſecutor. How did this poor woman behave in other reſpects?—Very honeſt honeſt, ſhe always behaved very well, ſhe worked for us.

Court to Jury. You are to judge whether ſhe did this under the authority of her huſband, if you think ſo you will acquit her.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

792. JAMES CONNELL was indicted for feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling-houſe of William Keene, on the 6th day of September; about the hour of ſix in the afternoon, no perſon being therein, and feloniouſly ſtealing therein, three linen ſhirts, value 10s. the property of William Norman; and two pair of ſtays, value 10s. one ſilk cloak, value 6d. two aprons, value 1s. four yards of ribbon, value 4d. one handkerchief, value 2d. one other handkerchief, value 6d. one pair of ſhoes, value 2s. two old rings, value 6s. one pair of ſtone ſleeve buttons ſet in ſilver, value 6d. one ſilver ſtay hook ſet with ſtones, value 1s. one linen gown, value 5s. one bed gown, value 6d. one pillow caſe, value 6d. and one crown piece, value 5s. the property of the ſaid William Keene.

WILLIAM KEENE ſworn.

I live in Cloth-fair, I am a ſtone-maſon, on the 6th of this month, I went out about five in the afternoon, I left nobody in the houſe as I knew of, nobody was in my room, I only rent one room; I locked it with a ſtock lock, and a padlock on the outſide with a chain to it; I did not return till a lad came to me about ſix, and informed me my room was broke open and robbed; when I returned the priſoner was at the door with my property by him in the hands of ſome men, and I found the door was forced open, the lock either forced or picked, and the lock of the box forced open, with an inſtrument of ſome ſort or other, there were four lodgers in the houſe, the woman that was in the garret was at home and came down the ſtairs, and three linen ſhirts belonging to one William Norman, which he gave to my wife to make up for him was miſſing, ſhe had ſeven, and ſhe had made four, and we miſſed the other things mentioned in the indictment.

SARAH HAMBURGH ſworn.

I lodge in the garret, coming down the ſtairs I ſaw the door wide open, and I turned my head round, and I thought the room was robbed, and coming down the ſtairs that man paſſed me with a bundle in his hand, he came out of the yard, as I ſtood on the bottom ſtair, I cannot ſay whether he came our of the room or not.

JOHN POWELL ſworn.

On the 5th of September ſtanding at my own door, I heard the cry of ſtop thief! I ſaw the priſoner run down the ſtreet, I collared him and apprehended him, he had two bundles with him, it was rather before ſix than after.

DAVID TIFFNEY ſworn.

Some part of this bundle I received at Guildhall, and this ſhift I took out of his pocket going to priſon.

(Produced.)

MARY KEENE ſworn.

(Depoſed to the things.) They are of the value of 40s. and upwards, they were in my box that day locked up.

Court to Proſecutor. What ſort of a padlock was it that you put on?——A very ſtrong one.

Could the ſtaple be wrenched out, without making a conſiderable noiſe?——Not very eaſily, for it was clinched at both ends withinſide, the ſtable was drawn out from the wood.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I know no more about it, than that I am to die this minute, the things I had were given to me at the entry door.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

792. BEN-

793. BENJAMIN HOWELL was indicted for burglariously breaking and entering the dwelling house of James Field, about the hour of one in the night, on the 1st day of July last, and burglariously stealing therein, one cotton gown, value 4s. one silk gown, value 18s. one other silk gown, value 16s. one coat, value 5s. one pair of breeches, value 1s. 6d. one pair of stockings, value 12d. four pair of silk stockings, value 10s. four handkerchiefs, value 3s. four stocks, value 2s. and two shifts, value 10s. the property of Mary Royle, spinster.

MARY ROYLE sworn.

I live with James Field, on the first of July last, he is a brewer in Steward's-rents, No. 21, his house was broke open the first of July, I had been out a washing all day very hard, I made the front door and back door fast, and I made up my window, and put the shutters too, I slept very fast having been hard at lab ur all day, I was but newly out of the country, in the morning I waked about four o'clock, and I found all my things stolen, and the very linen I had pulled off my back, and the things that I brought home to wash; they opened my window shutter, and opened the sash, they must climb over a wall to get in, I did not put up the bar, but they were fastened with a bolt, so that I could not have opened it on the outside.

What was it you lost?——The things mentioned in the indictment, they were in my room when I went to bed in the night, nobody else slept in the room, I bolted the door in the inside, and left the key on the outside, and they locked the door on the outside, so that I could not get out myself in the morning; part of the property Mr. Atkins has here, I do not know the prisoner.

THOMAS CROSBY sworn.

I belong to Sir Sampson's office; on the 2d of July, this woman came and said she was robbed, I went with her and received information concerning the prisoner, and I found him at the Bull and Mouth in Drury Lane, in a two pair of stairs back room, just getting out of bed, between eleven and twelve, he was not quite dressed, there was nothing about him but a white handkerchief about his neck, which my fellow servant took from his neck, which the prosecutrix said was hers.

JOHN ATKINS sworn.

I apprehended the prisoner, I took this handkerchief off his neck, the prosecutrix told me the marks before ever she saw it, No. 3, E. I. E. just at his room door I found this gown, it was just outside the door, I found this gown, and this apron, this pair of stockings, and this odd stocking.

(The things deposed to.)

FRANCIS WEBSTER sworn.

I live at the Bull and Mouth in Drury-Lane, my brother did keep the house, he has left it, the prisoner about half past three in the morning came and knocked at the door, at half past four I came down and opened the door, and the prisoner came in with that bundle tied up in a white handkerchief, what was in it I cannot say, and he drank two pints of beer, and he went to bed, he had lodged there two nights, I did not see what was in the bundle.

Court to Crosby and Atkins. When you found these things were they tied up?—— Yes, tied up in this handkerchief, but one of the stockings, I think to the best of my remembrance was out, the landlord indeed pointed out where we should go to.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

On Thursday night, the 3d of July, I went up into Halfmoon-street, and I was drinking with an acquaintance, I laid in this house two nights, I went to get some supper, the house was shut up, I went up to my washer woman's, and asked her to let me sit up, for I was locked out, she let me in, and I staid there till between three and four in the morning, when I came out I asked the woman for a clean shirt, a pair of stockings, and a handkerchief, which she gave me, I brought them to the Bull and Mouth

Mouth, when I came in, I ſat down and drank two pints of beer; I gave the bundle to the landlord, I ſaid that was my own property, I went up to bed, and there were two other men laid in the room beſides me, they were in bed, I put my things atop of the table, and while I was aſleep they got up, and left me aſleep, I took my things out of the room; about ten ſomebody came up, and took me into the front room where two or three people lodged; Atkins came and ſearched the houſe, and in the garret, or upon the garret ſtairs, he brought the property down, tied up in a blue handkerchief, the proſecutrix ſwore it was hers, and I was committed for another hearing; while I was at New Priſon, ſhe came there, and aſked me to pay her for the loſs of the property, I told her I had no money, but if I had, ſooner than lay in gaol, I would pay her; I came up four times, and the woman did not recollect that was her handkerchief, but ſaid it was the fellow to the handkerchief that ſhe had loſt, and that ſhe had found the waiſtcoat in her room, that ſhe found the waiſtcoat and breeches and every thing that is in Court, then Juſtice Addington ſaid he could do nothing in it, and committed me for a hearing again.

Court to Mary Royle. Is that ſo, that you ſaid the handkerchief was not your property?—I did not.

Have you found the things again?——I have not.

Priſoner. I have witneſſes of what the woman ſaid, that Croſby had come down to her, and frightened her, and told her if ſhe would not ſwear againſt me, he would have her pillored, that there was forty pounds depending.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

793. JOSEPH MERCHANT was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 23d day of July laſt, one ſilk cloak, value 30s. and one gauze cap, value 6d. the property of James Clarke.

SARAH CLARKE ſworn.

I am wife of James Clarke, I was at Mr. Heartley's, in Golden Square, with the houſe-keeper, and I loſt a ſilk cloak, and a cap from a drawer, which was in the firſt floor; I heard the priſoner coming down ſtairs, and I took him in the paſſage with the things upon him, between one and two; the door was left on the chain for the workmen in the back yard; I caught hold of him, and aſked him what he did up ſtairs, he ſaid he wanted the workmen, I told him they were backwards, I called for aſſiſtance, and Mr. Hill came and took the things from the priſoner, he was ſecured, he did not offer to go away, the workmen were in the paſſage, Mr. Hill came in a minute; Mr. Hill and me went up ſtairs, and we found all the drawers open, and I immediately called out ſtop him, for he has robbed me!

—— HILL ſworn.

On the 23d of July I came to aſſiſt in ſecuring the priſoner, and Mrs. Clarke and me went up ſtairs, and found the doors and the drawers open, and he pulled out the cloak from his breeches, and the gauze cap from out of his boſom, which he gave to me.

(Depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I am a plaiſterer, I was out of employ, and I ſaw this houſe repairing, and I went in to ſee for work, and this gentlewoman met me at the foot of the ſtairs, and aſked me who I wanted, I aſked for the plaiſterers, ſhe told me to ſtay in the paſſage till ſhe came down, and ſhe went up and brought down the cloak and cap in her hand.

Court. How came you by them about you?—I had them not about me.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

794. WILLIAM SIMMONS was indicted for feloniously ſtealing, on the 3d day of September, one linen ſhirt, value 1s. and one linen ſhift, value 1s. the property of Abraham Waterhouſe.

ABRAHAM WATERHOUSE ſworn.

I loſt the ſhirt and ſhift mentioned in the indictment, out of Mr. Beard's ſtone-yard, at Iſlington, between eight and nine, they were drying, I ſaw them there about half paſt eight, I know nothing of the robbery.

ROBERT OLDERSAW ſworn.

I produce a ſhirt and ſhift, I was coming by the end of Cumberland-row, and I ſaw the priſoner running by, I called ſtop thief! and I ſaw the priſoner take a ſhirt and ſhift out from under his coat, and throw them over ſome rails, and he got into a field about one hundred yards from this ſtone-yard, I purſued, and took him in about ten minutes, in a garden, and found the ſhirt and ſhift there.

(The ſhirt and ſhift depoſed to.)

Proſecutor. My wife ſays, there is a ſlit cut in the ſhift below the hem.

Another witneſs purſued and took the priſoner with Olderſhaw.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

That man was along with this man, and he immediately cried out ſtop thief! I was coming along, and I found the things; I milk for a gentleman at Mr. Alleyne's: when they cried out ſtop thief, I was frightened, and chucked the things over a place.

GUILTY.

On the recommendation of the Jury, to be confined to hard labour ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

795. JAMES MILLER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 18th day of July laſt, one man's hat, value 12s. the property of Chriſtopher Sayle.

CHRISTOPHER SAYLE ſworn.

Between the 15th and 20th of July I went into the cabbin, the lumpers had done work, and I ſaw a box broke open.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. Captain, your ſhip was juſt arrived, I believe?—She had been arrived a good while from Jamaica.

How long was you in your outward bound voyage?—About nine months.

This box of hats was a part of the outward bound voyage?—Yes, they were merchants goods, ſhipped on board by merchants in Jamaica; I ſhould never have known what it contained, unleſs it was broke open.

How long had you been delivering your homeward bound cargo?—I cannot ſay exactly; I believe about five or ſix days.

How many lumpers might you have had on board?—I do not know.

You naturally enough I ſuppoſe came on ſhore as often as you could?—I was on 'Change every day.

What is the nature of your contract?—To deliver goods in the like good order I received them, unleſs I meet with damages by ſea; I carry the things to the keys, if I deliver any thing ſhort, I muſt pay for it.

Court. He is certainly anſwerable to pay for the delivery of the goods.

I was going to aſk whether the proprietor of the cargo does in fact ſend down a lighter for it?—No, the people where we land our goods, generally find lighters.

Do they do that at the expence of the owner, of the maſter, or of the proprietor?——I do not know.

Who pays the expence of carrying them from the ſhip to the Cuſtomhouſe?—The proprietor.

Where was the box?——On board the ſhip.

ANDREW FARRIER ſworn

I was ſecond mate of the ſhip, on the 18

18th of July, this man with three more were down in the gun deck clearing ſome coffee caſks to be put in the lighter, and I deſired him to be careful in moving them cheſts, I told him there were things in them that I knew not myſelf, and to be careful not to break them; immediately after that the caſks were all out of the place where we were clearing them from; the chief mate of the ſhip ſearched the reſt of the people, he paſſed this man, and imagined he found nothing upon him.

Where were they ſearched?—They were only felt upon deck as they came from below to ſee if they had got anything; Robert Parkinſon ſtopped the priſoner, and deſired he might be ſearched again, immediately the mate ſearched him and found a hat in the back part of his trowſers, and ſaw it taken from him, pulled out of his trowſers, I immediately looked at this cheſt and found it broke open, and ſome of the pap[illegible] of the hats laying about; he ſaid it was a hat that he had found in the cable tier, and that I had told him it belonged to a paſſenger.

Had you ſaid ſo?—No, I never ſaid ſo.

Mr. Garrow. You had the care of the delivery of this cargo?—Yes.

How many lumpers had you on board?—I cannot tell you poſitively the number of the whole, but there were four down with me.

Had you had any rough weather?—No, no rough weather.

Steady breezes out and back?—Yes, the cheſt was taken aboard at Kingſton, I remember bringing it with others in the long boat, we had but indifferent weather outwards.

Upon your oath was not it very like that this cheſt carried out and brought back, might not be broken in the carriage?—No, I verily think it could not, it ſtood in a ſteady place.

Did you know what it contained?—After I ſaw it broke open I knew.

So ſhould I, but before you ſaw it broke open you did not know any more than I did?—To be ſure I could not ſee through a deal board.

Has it always been cuſtomary to examine the lumpers as they come up, to ſee they have not embezzled the goods?—They all know that they ſhall be ſearched when they come up. The priſoner had been ſearched that ſame day, he had a coat on, or a jacket, I think it was a canvas frock; this box was whole in the morning, and the hat was found inſide his trowſers or breeches, I am not clear which; he had both on.

JOHN LAMB ſworn.

On the 18th of July about four in the afternoon, the priſoner was in the gun dock at work with ſome more lumpers, they were called on deck, and ſome of the witneſſes ſaw ſomething concealed in the priſoner's breeches, I aſked him what he had there, he ſaid nothing; I made him unbutton his trowſers, and I pulled a hat out that was concealed; we immediately went down to the gundock, and found the box broken, and ſeveral hats miſſing, and the paper that covered them ſtrewed about, and three more hats were concealed in different places; he ſaid he found it in the cable tier, and that he thought it belonged to ſome of the paſſengers.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was at work on board this ſhip, and I found this hat ſtowed in between two cable tiers, I put it into my trowſers, to aſk the mate about it.

Priſoner to Lamb. Was not a hat found afterwards in a moulded ſtate, which muſt have laid among the cables for ſome time?—That was the next day.

Did it appear to have been in that place for ſome time paſt?—No, it was only the dirt.

Jury. When you firſt aſked him what he had in his breeches, what did he tell you?—He ſaid nothing then, the firſt time, then afterwards he acknowledged he had ſomething there which he before denied.

The

The prisoner called five witnesses who gave him a very good character.

Jury to Prosecutor. Does the invoice mention the number of hats?——I never saw the invoice.

Court to Prosecutor. Was that box carried out from here to Jamaica or not?——To the best of my recollection I think it was, but I cannot be sure, I am sure it came from Jamaica.

GUILTY.

To be whipped and confined six months in the House of Correction.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

796. TERENCE TIMEY, otherwise TERRY was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 7th day of July last, three quarts of oil, value 18d. and one tin kettle, value 4s. the property of John Lucas and Christopher Spencer.

THOMAS TURNER sworn.

I am servant to the prosecutor, I lost a kettle and three quarts of oil, I was lamplighting, and I went to see a procession go by, and left the oil kettle in the street, as is usual, and on my return in about ten minutes I found the prisoner with the kettle in his right hand, and a large bladder in his left; I went up to him, he did not look about, but continued pouring the oil into the bladder; I took him by the collar, he let the kettle fall, and threw the bladder into what we call the boot of the kettle; he said d——n your eyes, and he struck me in the mouth, and made me bleed; he struck me several times more, and I secured him; he worked for my master.

Court. How far had the prisoner removed this tin kettle from the place where you left it?—Not above a foot, he had taken almost all the oil out when I came back.

JOHN CHARLES sworn.

I apprehended the prisoner.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was coming down Dover-street, and the procession was going by, and I removed the ladder to get upon it, and he came and took me; he said I was going to steal his oil; I have been under confinement, and bad, seven weeks in Totlil-fields, of a fever; I have lost all my hair.

Turner. The procession did not go that way.

GUILTY, 10d.

Whipped.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. Justice GOULD.

---

797. MARTIN STEPHENS was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 27th day of August last, ten pounds weight of beef, value 3s. two fowls, value 2s. two pounds weight of cheese, value 6d. and one rush basket, value 6d. the property of Michael Heathcote.

JOB COOPER sworn.

I am coachman to Mr. Cooper, who keeps the Newington-green stage, I set down my last passenger, and a young woman came and told me a man had taken a parcel out of my coach, I followed him and took the basket from him, it was Mr. Heathcote's basket.

HESTER PALMER sworn.

I live at Newington Green, I was sitting at my own door, and I saw the prisoner put his hand into the boot of the stage and take out a bundle, it was a rush basket I am sure of the prisoner, I never saw him before; he made off across the Green, I informed the coachman.

INNOCENT BEARD sworn.

I am servant to Mr. Heathcote, this is his basket, the coachman brought it to me about about half after eight, there was in it an edge bone of beef, two fowls, and a piece of cheese.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was going to Stamford-hill to meet some beasts, and a man employed me to carry the parcel.

The prisoner called one witness to his character.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

797. JAMES RILEY was indicted for burglariously and feloniously breaking and entering the dwelling-house of William Bowers, about the hour of nine in the night, on the 25th day of July last, with intent his goods then and there being, burglariously and feloniously to steal.

WILLIAM BOWERS sworn.

I live in Vere-street, Clare-market, on the 25th of July, about nine at night, I found a window belonging to my shop forced open, and I found the prisoner with his head and his arms inside my window; the window looked into Denzell-street, the back part of the shop; I did not see him doing any thing particular, any further than having his head and his arms within the shop; I did not miss any thing.

Was any thing removed out of its place?—I do not know that there was, I was on the outside; and I was informed there was a person at my window, and when I came I found him in the situation I have described; he did not seem to say any thing till after he got to the watch-house, then he shammed drunk a good deal.

Was he in liquor?——Yes, I believe he was, he appeared so at the watch-house.

BENJAMIN POWELL sworn.

On the 25th of July, about nine in the evening, I was coming down Denzell-street, and I saw the prisoner reaching in at the window, I came round, and spoke to Mr. Bowers, and he went round and caught him; I do not know whether he could have got in or no.

Had not he time to take any thing?——If there was any thing within his reach he might.

To Prosecutor. Was there any thing within his reach?—Yes; but I did not miss any thing.

How was your window fastened?—There is no regular fastening, the shutters were not put up, the sash was not fastened; it was pushed up by somebody; it was down a quarter or half an hour before; we do not open it once in a quarter of a year.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I came by this place very much in liquor; I do not know whether I was in the window or not, I guess I was leaning on it; I have not a friend in the world.

Was day-light gone?——I could see him perfectly well in the position he was by the remaining light of the day.

Court to Jury. Then, gentlemen, I will relieve you from the difficulty of considering this upon mere ground of intention.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

808. THOMAS BROWNETT was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 6th day of September, two leather bags, value 10d. the property of our Lord the King.

The Indictment opened by Mr. Knowles, and the Case by Mr. Fielding.

WILLIAM RICHARDSON sworn.

I am a sorter to the Post-office.

Do you remember being at the Post-office on the 6th of September?—Yes.

Do you know the little boy at the bar?—Yes.

Did you see him there?——Yes.

What time in the evening?—About six o'clock.

What was his buſineſs?——He uſed to bring up three bags from the Poſt-office, with letters in them.

From where?——From Wapping; the bags that he was to bring were Lambert's, Saunders's, and Allen's, there were two bags from each office, and a ſack that he brought them in, and the number of the letters, with the money on them.

Court. What is the name of the receiving office?——Mr. Allen of Wapping; at ſix I ſaw the boy there; he always brought three bags up every evening; he brought but one that evening in the room of three, I took and turned his bag out, and inſide were theſe two bags full of letters, and he delivered me one, which I opened, and took out the letters and the money from that one bag; I then aſked him where the other two were that he ſhould have brought with him, and he told me he had but that one.

Did it happen that you took from the boy what he bore?——Yes.

The boy gave you one bag inſtead of three?——Yes.

What did you do with that one bag?—I opened it, and took out the contents, and put his empty bags with the other empty bags; I then aſked him where his other two bags were that he ſhould have brought, and he ſaid he had no more.

What does that one bag from each office contain?—The letters that were not paid, and a poſt-paid bag, with a ſmall bag that is on the inſide, the money is in the inner bag of all.

What ought he to have delivered to you that night?—Three ſmall bags, with money and letters, that is, one from each office, the three larger bags were to have been delivered to the ſtampers of the office, not to me.

Court. The boy brings the ſack to the office, with three bags in them ſealed, theſe are firſt preſented to the Comptroller, who examines the ſeals, and in his preſence they are opened, then they are emptied of the letters which they contain, which are the letters not paid, and the other bags are taken out of them which contain the paid letters and the money; theſe bags ought to be brought to you, they are ſealed alſo?—It is my duty to ſee they are brought and ſealed, I receive the money and the paid letters.

The boy brought to you but one of thoſe bags?—No.

Which of the offices was that from?—I think it was from Lambert's.

Then he brought none from Allen's or Saunders's?—No, and he ſaid he had no more.

Upon that what did you do?—I ſearched his bags, the three larger bags, and kept him till Mr. Potts came to the office.

What did you find in theſe larger bags?——I found theſe two ſmall bags on the inſide of the large bags; the bags each contained letters and money; the money was three ſhillings and five pence; I gave them to our Comptroller; when I found them I kept the boy till the Comptroller came.

What did the boy ſay when you found them?——He told me if I would not ſpeak to Mr. Potts he would not do it any more; I aſked him what he meant to do with them, he ſaid he did not know; he had them then, he ſaid he would not take the bags any more if I would not tell the Comptroller of him.

Court. Have you any other witneſſes?—Only the maſter of the boy; the boy has acknowledged it to ſeveral other people.

Court. You ſee the chaſm.

JOSEPH HILL ſworn.

I am clerk to Mr. Partin, Solicitor of the Poſt-office; I attended him at Bow-ſtreet ſeveral times; laſt Saturday was a week I went to another man, who was apprehended as an accomplice to the priſoner, he charged the man with firſt perſuading him to rob the Poſt-office; there was no promiſe made to him a ſecond time; he went to the Poſt-office, brought the bag; this man, who was a ſeaman, cut the bag, and took the money out; the man denied it, but the boy confeſſed he ſtole the bag and the letters, and he did not pretend to deny at all that he had frequently done it for the ſake of the money.

Where

Where could he have taken theſe bags from?——From the table of the inland office, after he had emptied the bags he had an opportunity of taking the other bags.

Priſoner. I have nothing to ſay.

John Allen the priſoner's maſter, and another witneſs, gave the priſoner a good character.

Who finds the bags?—The Poſtmaſter-general.

GUILTY.

To be tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

799. HANNAH DART was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 2d day of Auguſt laſt, three guineas, value 3l. 3s. and one half guinea, value 10s. 6d. four ſhillings in ſilver, and ten copper half-pence, value 5d. and one canvas purſe, value 1d. the property of Thomas Hartley.

THOMAS HARTLEY ſworn.

On the 3d of Auguſt, about half after ten at night, I had been out of town ſpending the day very near London Bridge, I ſtopped at St. Magnus's church; I was ſurrounded by three women, by St. Magnus's church about ten o'clock, and I miſſed my purſe from my breeches pocket, I immediately ſaid you have got my purſe, the priſoner at the bar ran away down Thames-ſtreet, and up a gateway or alley, ſhe got from me, I called out ſtop thief! under the gateway, and ſhe came and peeped out of the paſſage; a man ſaid to her what is the matter, you ſeem frightened, I then ſaw her peeping out of the gateway, the two watchmen took her, and ſhe dropped the purſe near the watch-houſe door, between me and the two watchmen, I heard a purſe drop near the watch-houſe door; the purſe contained ſix guineas, but I ſwore to only three and an half, and four ſhillings, which was found, the priſoner ſaid, I was drunk, and that I gave her the purſe, I was quite ſober.

Mr. Garrow, Counſel for the Proſecution. Was any promiſes made to her to confeſs?——No.

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Counſel. Which way was you going?—Home.

You was ſurrounded by three women?——Yes.

Which ſide was ſhe on?—On the right hand.

She ran away from you?—Yes.

How many minutes was ſhe gone?——About four or five.

She was playing bo-peep under the gateway?——She was peeping under the gateway.

You only ſwore to what money was picked up?—No.

You thought it moſt prudent ſo to do?—Yes.

ANDREW GAINES ſworn.

I am a watchman in coal-harbour.

Do you remember ſeeing the priſoner at the bar?—No, not till the gentleman called out watch! watch!

What did you hear or ſee?—My partner had got charge of the priſoner, there was ſome money dropped by the ale-houſe door, Walker and another had hold of the priſoner, Abrahams and another walked behind her; the firſt thing that I ſaw, was the gentleman having hold of the woman, there was ſome money dropped juſt at the ale-houſe door.

Where did it drop from?——Nobody could ſee.

What were you doing when it dropped?—Walking along.

What, arm in arm, or how elſe?—Arm in arm.

Who had hold of this woman?——Walker.

Did you hear the money drop?—No.

Did you ſee it picked up?——Yes.

What did it look like?—Like ſilver and gold, it was a little bag, I took the woman into the watch-houſe.

Was anything ſaid to her?—No.

CHARLES WALKER ſworn.

I am a watchman, my ſtand is by Allhallows

lows in Thames-ſtreet, on the 3d of Auguſt, I was in the watch-houſe, I ſaw the priſoner that night, I came out of the watch-houſe with two more, on the alarm of watch, watch! they were about twenty yards from the brew-houſe, when we went out that gentleman and this gentlewoman was together, I was juſt by her at the end of the paſſage, and as ſoon as he ſaw us, he ſaid, watchman, take her, ſhe has got my money, ſhe has picked my pocket; we took her to the watch-houſe, and going along I heard the rattling of money on the pavement; there was a purſe of money under my feet.

Where do you think that purſe of money dropped from?—I cannot tell.

Was anybody walking before you?——There were people walking before and behind, I do not know whether anything was ſaid.

Mr. Peatt. There were men and women?—Yes.

Mr. Garrow. Were there any women there my man?——I did not ſee any at that time.

Mr. Peatt. How did the proſecutor appear at that time, to be ſuber or a little mellow?—He was in liquor to be ſure.

Mr. Garrow. Did he appear as if he had been rolling in the ſtreet?—No.

Court. When you firſt came out of the watch-houſe, where did you ſee that gentleman, and the woman?—Both together, he had got hold of her in Allhallows-lane, cloſe by Allhallows church, juſt cloſe by the tap-houſe by the brew-houſe gates; nobody had taken up the priſoner except the gentleman and my partner.

JOHN WAINWRIGHT ſworn.

I was conſtable of the night, the proſecutor charged the priſoner, he was picking up his purſe and money, and theſe two men came up at the time, there were ſeveral people about.

Mr. Garrow. Were there any women about?——I do not know that I ſaw any woman after the money was picked up, I took her into the watch-houſe, and then to the Compter; ſhe ſaid, if they would look they would find the reſt of the money that was miſſing.

Mr. Garrow. Tell us exactly what ſhe ſaid?—I do not know particular what ſhe ſaid, he ſaid there was ſome money ſhort, and ſhe ſaid if they would go and look at the place where they were, they would find the reſt of the money ſhe did not doubt.

Did ſhe ſay anything what ſhe and Mr. Hartley had been doing together?——Nothing at all.

Did ſhe ſay anything about rolling in the ſtreet?—She ſaid, they had been together, and he had laid hold of her by the way of ſtopping her, and gave charge to the watchman of her.

Did ſhe deſcribe the manner in which Mr. Hartly loſt his money?——I do not know ſhe did, the gentleman was in liquor, he ſaid ſhe robbed him, and he felt her hand in his pocket, and the purſe he would ſwear to.

Was he dirty?——I did not ſee whether he was or no.

Was you preſent before the Lord Mayor?——Yes.

Court. Do you remember what account ſhe gave there?——She ſaid very little for herſelf.

Do tell us that little, it will be the leſs trouble to you?—I do not recollect.

It is your duty to tell us what paſſed?—I cannot particularly ſay what ſhe ſaid, I do not know what ſhe ſaid.

Do you remember nothing of it?—She made her defence.

What was her defence?——That ſhe knew nothing at all about the matter.

How long have you been a conſtable?—This is the ſecond year.

Mr. Peatt. If I underſtand you right, you do not take upon yourſelf to ſay whether there was, or was not, women in the mob that ſurrounded the priſoner and the proſecutor?——I am not ſure, he ſaid that was the woman that robbed him; ſhe offered to make up what money there was wanting, and pay the charges, ſhe offered that before the Lord Mayor and Aldermen.

Did

Did not ſhe appear to be extremely agitated?——No.

Was not there a wildneſs in her aſpect?—No, ſhe ſeemed very compoſed.

SAMUEL UNGLE ſworn.

I was in that neighbourhood between ten and eleven at night, on Tueſday the the 2d of Auguſt, I heard the cry of watch, watch! I immediately went out, and there I ſaw Mr. Hartley and the priſoner, he ſaid, he had loſt his purſe and money, they were taking her to the watch-houſe, after they had got three yards I heard the jingling of money, he ſaid, here is my money; there were three guineas and a half, four ſhillings, and ſome halfpence; and the gentleman ſaid, this my purſe, I will ſwear to it; I went to the watch-houſe, but not while ſhe was there, I attended before the Lord Mayor, I do not recollect anything that paſſed from her about it.

In what way were they walking when you heard the money drop?—The woman was in cuſtody of the two watchmen.

Were they walking ſeparate?——There was about a dozen people altogether.

Where did the money drop from?——I cannot tell.

Were there any women in that croud?—There were none in the croud, there were women neighbours that ran out of doors.

Mr. Peatt. Were there women near the ſpot?—Yes.

How near might theſe be?—Within a couple of yards.

Can you take upon you preremptorily to ſay, that there was not another woman in the croud?—I know two, I ſaw two, I do not remember ſeeing any more.

Mr. Garrow. From the place where the money was picked up, and the ſituation where theſe neighbours ſtood, can you tell us whether any of them dropped any money?—I cannot ſay.

Court. How far was Mr. Hartley from the woman, at the time you heard the money drop?—He deſired them to take care, he ſaid, he knew the woman would drop it, and before he had well ſaid ſo, I heard the ſound of money, Mr. Hartly was in liquor, I ſaw the purſe picked up, it is the ſame purſe.

Mr. Peatt. How do you know it is the ſame purſe?——It is the ſame.

Proſecutor. This is the purſe and the money, when I came in, the woman came in and dropped, and begged for mercy, and offered me twenty pounds, I ſaid, no money ſhould induce me.

Court. What do you know this purſe by?—I have no doubt upon the view of it.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was going home, that man knocked me down, and fell atop of me; I got from him, I was affraid he would uſe me ill.

(The witneſſes for the priſoner examined ſeparate.)

JOHN MEADOWS ſworn.

I believe you are an apothecary of St. Luke's hoſpital?——Yes.

Tell the Court anything you know reſpecting the priſoner at any time?—The priſoner was admitted a patient at our hoſpital, on the 8th of January, 1779, ſhe remained there upwards of a twelvemonth, ſhe was inſane the whole time, ſhe was diſcharged the 14th of January, 1780; incurable.

JOHN JONES ſworn.

I live at St. Luke's hoſpital.

Do you recollect or know anything concerning the priſoner?—I have known her ſome years, ſhe was there upwards of a year, ſhe was inſane all the time, I dare ſay; ſhe was diſcharged uncured, I have ſeen her divers times, I have ſeen her ſometimes when ſhe appeared to be as bad or worſe; that is above two years age.

Mr. Garrow. When you ſay uncured do you mean incurable?——Yes.

Court to Meadows. When they have been a year, you pronounce them uncured, you do not then pronounce that they are incurable.

Mr. Peatt. I believe, Sir, they mean incurable oftener than uncured? —— She now ſtands on the liſt of incurables to be admitted.

Mr. Garrow. Do not you turn them out ſometimes for a day or two in order to comply with the practice?—Never, Sir.

GUILTY.

She was humbly recommended to mercy by the Proſecutor and Jury.

To be privately whipped, and impriſoned ſix months in Newgate.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

800. THOMAS BLACKHALL and WILLIAM GRAY were indicted for feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Elizabeth Abbot, about the hour of eight in the afternoon, the ſaid Elizabeth Abbot being therein, and feloniouſly ſtealing therein two pillows, value 10s. two blankets, value 12s. and three yards of printed cotton, value 12s. the property of the ſaid Elizabeth.

ELIZABETH ABBOT ſworn.

I live in little Trinity, Minories, my ſaſh was drawn a little way down from the top, and a large green blind put in the window, when the alarm was given, I went up ſtairs and found my bed ſtripped of the things mentioned in the indictment, I went into the room at eight o'clock, and found every thing right.

Did you obſerve your houſe was broke open any how; did you find any door or window broke?—No.

GEORGE ROBINSON ſworn.

I was going down the little Minories with one John Tidy, about the 16th of Auguſt, nigh on nine o'clock, and when we came to turn into Heydon-ſquare there was a cry of thieves different times, I ran and ſtepped into the middle of the road, I ſaw two men ruſhing out, to the beſt of my knowledge they ruſhed out of the ſquare near to where ſhe lives, one of them, Gray, had a bundle with a light coloured great coat, I could not perceive Blackhall had any bundle; Tidy attempted to take Gray, he ſtruck Tidy over his noſe, and cut open his noſe, I purſued him, and the two priſoners ran one after the other, crying ſtop thief, ſtop thief, as hard as they could, Blackhall fell in the Kennell, I left him in the kennel and purſued Gray, I never ſaw him any longer; Gray dropped a bundle when he ſtruck Tidy.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Counſel. How far had Gray run?—It might be upwards, not much more than an hundred yards, through a long alley leading into Manſel-ſtreet, I never loſt ſight of him; I was cloſe to him almoſt, the alley was not dark, but I was afraid.

Did you loſe ſight of him?—I never loſt ſight of him till I caught him.

Had he any unlawful weapon of any ſort?—I do not know.

Was he ſearched?——I did not ſearch him, nor I was not preſent when he was ſearched.

JOHN VINCENT ſworn.

I purſued Blackhall as ſoon as the alarm was given, I had full ſight of him, and purſued him cloſe, and when he juſt veered round to the left, he fell down, then he kept cloſe to the right, and went round the great ſquare about forty yards further, where I followed him; I did not ſee any thing with him, I never loſt ſight of him from the time I began the purſuit.

Mr. Garrow. Had he any bundle?—I never ſaw any, he was ſearched, I do not remember anything was found upon him.

Mrs. VINCENT ſworn.

On the 16th of Auguſt I was going down the little Minories to fetch ſome beer, and as I came out of my houſe, I ſaw two men ſtanding at the bottom of my neighbour's door, oppoſite to the door, and that young man in the white waiſtcoat on the ledge over the door; that young man Blackhall wa was in Mrs. Abbot's room, the day was withdrawn about an hour, a candle had been lighted, if you recollect the time past, it was a beautiful, moon-light night, and in the middle of the square, which is a very small square, there is a lamp which gives a great light, the lamp is fixed on a high post, and Mrs. Abbot's house is opposite to the lamp, her house is to the right hand of my house; seeing them, I gave the alarm of thieves very loud, with that the man at the bottom ran off immediately; Gray, when I called out thieves, looked very violent round at me, I thought he meant to run at me, but he jumped off the ledge which is what shelters the door, Blackhall made what way he could out of the room, he put his right leg out upon this ledge, I saw him get out, my eye never went off the window till he came out; he tumbled out, he had a dark waistcoat, and atop of it he had a nankeen jacket with long sleeves, and no hat on; there was so much light I could plainly distinguish anybody in the square; I have no doubt of their being the very men distinctly.

Mr. Garrow. You gave the alarm as soon as you came out of doors?—I take it from the first of my calling out to the time they were off, it could not be above half a minute.

Did I understand you right, that lamp stands in the middle of the square, opposite to Mrs. Abbot's house?—This lamp stands in the middle of the square, opposite to my door, and her door being on the other side it stands just opposite to it.

Then the lamp was between you and the persons?—No, Sir, the lamp is about a yard further from my house than her house is.

You were a great deal frightened?—Yes, I was indeed.

How long was it before anybody was brought back to you?—I apprehend about five minutes, but seven minutes was the outside, it could not be above eighty yards; I never saw the men before; I could not be so particular to the two men that stood at the door; I did not see perfectly what it was Gray had, but it was something rolled up under his arm.

Was there a light in the room?—It seemed so to me.

What did Gray's bundle contain?—A counterpane, which was all over blood, by knocking a man down.

JOHN TIDY sworn.

I took Gray by the left breast with my left hand, and I said you villain, what have you been about here; and he made a stroke at me, I cannot say with what, he had a bundle under his right arm, he knocked my hat off, it staggered me so much that my senses really went from me, for a minute or two, I took the bundle as he dropped it at my feet; he cut me over the nose, I have been forced to have a doctor since.

(The bundle produced and deposed to.)

Tidy. My Lord, this is the counterpane, and here is my blood upon it you see.

PRISONER GRAY's DEFENCE.

I was going to the leather cutters, and a man laid hold of me, I never saw any thing of the affair before.

PRISONER BLACKHALL's DEFENCE.

As I was coming through the square I was knocked down and taken.

The prisoner Blackhall called eight witnesses who gave him a good character.

The prisoner Gray called eleven witnesses who gave him a good character.

THOMAS BLACKHALL GUILTY
Of stealing, but not of the burglary.

Transported for seven years.

WILLIAM GRAY, GUILTY
Of stealing, but not of the burglary.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

801. WIL-

BOX. WILLIAM BEAR and WILLIAM DAVIS were indicted for feloniously ſtealing, on the 4th day of September, thirty-one deal boards, each containing in length twelve feet, value 4l. the property of Richard Remnant, in a certain barge on the navigable river of Thames.

(The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Counſel.)

(The caſe opened by Mr. Fielding.)

LEONARD PHILLIPS ſworn.

My wharf is in Scotland-yard; on the 4th of September laſt ſome barges were moored at my wharf, one of them was loaded with deals belonging to Mr. Remnant on the 4th of September, between the hours of two and three in the morning, I heard a noiſe of the moving of deals, I got out, it was rather duſk, I could not ſee very well, I ſaw ſomething moving on the barge taking off the deals, and putting them into a barge, and I well knew, tho' I did not go down, where they put them; I remained in bed ſome ſhort time, and I heard them at work ſo rapid and ſo loud as if they had purchaſed the deals, and were delivering them as bought; at ſix in the morning I looked from my window, and I ſaw there had been a great removal of deals from the barges; it was very perceptible, it had rained the night before, and thoſe that remained were of a particular complection then, than they were the night before; I then applied to my people, and told them, that there were a quantity of deals gone from each barge, and I believed the number could be aſcertained; I told one barge, and told them to be twe y even or twenty-eight, but it proved t. be thirty-one; the other I told to be ſev teen, and there proved to be nineteen; I then thought it was too large a quantity to be permitted to be loſt, I was at to great a certainty who had taken them away, that I purſued the barge; I went to Northfleet, we did not find the barge there; I knew the barge perfectly well, and the priſoner worked the barge, the next morning I diſpatched my ſon to find the barge; I ſent down for the deals, and they are the very ſame deals that were ſtolen off the two barges; the barge out of which the deals were ſtolen was the property of Mr. Remnant.

Mr. Garrow Priſoner's Counſel. What is your profeſſion?—I am a coal merchant and wharfinger, I was at my wharf, theſe barges were moored; I have known the priſoner Bear for ſome time, and knew his barge had delivered a freight of lime at the next wharf, there is nothing parts it but a row of pailing, this was a large bulk of deals.

Did Bear know you?—Yes.

He muſt know that your ſituation was near to this noiſe?——Yes.

You looked out, but you could not ſufficiently obſerve, who the perſons were that were making a noiſe?——Yes, I did.

Do you happen to know the apprentice Hyſer;——I did not know him before.

Court. What is Davis?—He works in barges, he worked under Bear.

RICHARD PHILLIPS ſworn.

I am ſon to Mr. Leonard Phillips, I remember going down the river by myſelf, I got down to Purfleet, where Bear's barge was loading with lime, I ſaw no ſigns of the deals all about the place; I went down to Northfleet, and upon the ballaſt walk there, I found fifty deals.

Did you find any perſon who claimed thoſe deals?——Mr. Green, a carpenter at Northfleet.

Did you communicate to him, that the deals had been taken from your wharf?—I did, after he acknowledged that he bought them of the priſoner Bear.

Could you ſpeak with any certainty as to the deals ſo loſt at your wharf?—When I ſaw the deals, I knew them to be like the deals that were in our wharf.

Then you ſpeak to the likeneſs?—Yes, I brought them up, and immediately upon their arrival, they were ſhewn to Mr. Remnant, and to Mr. Jameſon; I left Northfleet at eleven o'clock, and returned at two, and communicated it to my father.

JOHN

JOHN GREEN sworn.

I live at Northfleet.

Do you know either of the prisoners?—I know William Bear.

Do you remember his coming to you, about the 4th or 5th of September?—He told me he knew a person that had some battens to sell, and he came honestly by them, and he would sell them cheap; battens are six or seven inches wide, and deals about ten inches; I was going to purchase them if I could get the money, he told me he had fifty of them.

Did he bring them to you?—I did not see them, he told me he gave fourteen pence a piece for them, and he must charge me eighteen pence, and if that was too much, when he came down again he would settle the difference; he came between nine and ten on Sunday morning, I was going to church, they were then on board a barge, he said that he had them, he did not say any particular place where.

Did he say that he had them in a barge?—I do not remember, I believe he said he had them in the barge: on Sunday after service in the afternoon, I walked down to see where these battens were, and when I saw them, I saw they were deals and not battens, and therefore I never put my fingers upon them.

Mr. Garrow. You had a conversation with a man about battens, where they were God knows, and you gave him some money for some battens as you was going to church?—Yes.

Court. When you went down in the afternoon after church, and you found they were deals and not battens, were either of the prisoners with you?——No, my Lord, the barge was gone.

Mr Garrow. They might have dropped out of a balloon for what you know.

——— BAKER sworn.

I am servant to Mr. Green, I work for him at times, I know one of the prisoners, that is Bear.

When did you see him?—On the 5th of September, he was on the wharf, and he handed them up, the wharf was at Northfleet, and I piled the deals up.

Where did the deals come from?—Out of a barge.

Out of his barge?——That gentleman, the prisoner, gave us some beer for it.

How many deals did you take out?—I cannot say directly.

Where did you put them?—I laid them on the bank.

Describe the wharf?—I put them close by the side of the wharf.

Who was with Bear at that time?——There was a boy, I should know him again.

Court. Do you recollect young Mr. Phillips's coming down, and claiming these deals, and carrying them away with him?——No.

Mr. Fielding. Did you see any more of the deals after this?—No.

Do you know who took them away?—I do not.

Do you know Mr. Green?——Yes.

Did he come for these deals?——No.

Mr. Garrow. Once on a time you looked out some deals and piled them?——Yes.

Whose barge they came from you cannot tell?——They came out of a barge.

Court to Green. When was this honesty?——I cannot tell you.

So you know nothing of it?—No faith.

Did you know Bear?——No, we might be half an hour unloading, we did not hurry ourselves.

It was between eleven and twelve in the day time, and you piled them in the front of the wharf, how long do you think that is ago?—About a fortnight or three weeks.

Is that the boy that is there?——Yes.

JOHN HYSER sworn.

Mr. Garrow. Stand up little honesty.

Mr. Fielding. Now you will speak the truth, and nothing but the truth?——On the Sunday morning pretty nigh two, John Oakley, he came on board, and called my master out of the cabin, my master is William Bear, we turned out upon deck, I turned out firſt, and my maſter aſked me if it was high water, then we laid along ſide of this here ſaid barge, and he jumped along ſide, and he began to handle the deals off the deal barge into ours.

What did your maſter do?——He took hold of them.

Who elſe was there?—William Davis, the other priſoner, and me.

Did he do any thing to theſe deals?——Yes.

How many deals did you take out of Mr. Remnant's barge?—Both of them.

You took out of two barges?—Yes.

How many did you take out of both of them?—Fifty.

Where did you go?——We went away about a quarter after three, down to North-fleet, Bear and Davis went with us, when we got there, my maſter went on ſhore, he was on ſhore about three quarters of an hour, and after he returned, theſe two men came down and aſſiſted us to get the deals out; the deals was put on the walk, there was no other pile of deals there, and there we piled the fifty; Davis was down in the hole, and handed them up, Bear he ſtood upon deck.

Now young man, upon your oath, is it all true that you have told the Court?——Nothing but the truth.

Mr. Garrow. What is it that my friend is afraid of, that you will not tell the truth, why you are an honeſt lad, and came to ſpeak the truth?—Yes.

Where did you come from this morning?—From Tothill-fields.

Tothill-fields! what have you lodgings there?—No, I am in cuſtody.

Oh! in cuſtody! that was what made my friend ſo fearful, why what are you in cuſtody for my man? ſpeak out, don't be baſhful?—Sir.

Is it upon account of this affair?——I ſuppoſe ſo Sir.

What ſome-body was wicked enough to ſuppoſe you ſtole them?——(No anſwer.)

Why you could ſpeak faſt enough juſt now, now you are as mute as a mackarel, now I am come to ſpeak to you, why don't you ſpeak out, did not ſomebody take you up about theſe deals?—Yes Sir.

Come let us have it, then you told this ſtory about maſter?——I told on Tueſday morning.

Did you intend to tell?—No.

How long had you been in your maſter's ſervice the laſt time?—This is only the ſecond voyage.

How long did you live with him before?—Not two years.

What did he turn you away for, don't be aſhamed?—He did not turn me away.

Now I aſk you upon your oath, (God knows you don't mind that) did not he turn you away?—I went away, they did not take me up, and he wanted to perſuade me from going to ſea.

As the only way of preventing you from being hanged; now whoſe flitch of bacon was it you ſtole?—I never ſtole any bacon.

How long was you abſent from your maſter's ſervice?—I cannot tell rightly.

Was it a year, or half a year, a month or ſix weeks?—It was almoſt half a year, I worked in Mr. Man's craft at Chelſea, I was in the craft twice.

Now tell me one honeſt day's work, that you did for any human being in that ſix months?——I never took any thing from any body while I was there, I ſhould have been there now if my maſter had not fell out with him.

Can you ſtate the name of any human being, that you have done one honeſt day's work for theſe ſix months.

Mr. Fielding to Hyſer. Why do not you anſwer my friend by aſking him the ſame queſtion?

Mr. Garrow to Mr. Fielding. I have had many briefs of yours during that time.

Court. What was you to have for this?—I did not know I was to have any thing, I dare ſay they would give me ſomething.

Do you know what Davies was to have for it?——I do not know.

Did Davies and you know that theſe deals were to be moved before you were called up that night?——I did not know, and I dare ſay Davies did not.

Upon

Upon your oath, did you or did you not know that these deals did not belong to your master, that he had not bought them, or was not employed to carry them away, but that you were doing a wrong thing? — Yes, Sir, I have owned that there.

Mr. Fielding to Remnant. Are you able to speak with any precision to the property? —— The deals that were returned were the same sort that were in the barge.

Only the same sort; can you say you believe they were the same? — We know them to be the same sort by the marks at the ends of them; they bore the same marks at the ends that the remaining ones bore.

Court. And did the numbers tally? — The numbers that we were short were thirty-seven, but there were only thirty-one returned.

Mr. Garrow. You have said very fairly that you believe these to be the same sort of deals? —— Yes.

Were they narrow deals? —— Yes, two and a half Frederick stand; there were upwards of five thousand in one ship; I did not take the whole of the cargo; they were distributed among half a dozen or eight people; they are marked with red chalk, or red paint; I never saw them marked in England; they are marked in the country where they are cut.

Then the whole five thousand had the same mark as these? — I believe they had.

So that the deals, for any thing you know, may be the property of of somebody else of the same cargo? —— It is possible they may.

Where do you live? — In Saint Giles's, High-street.

WILLIAM PHELPS sworn.

I am a bargemaster at Fulham; I have known the prisoner Bear twenty-five years, he is a lightermany, and has a very good character; I have employed him; he always behaved honest, and I have trusted him.

MARY BURGE sworn.

I live at Limehouse; I have known him between three and four years; I always thought him a perfect honest man; I have intrusted him with a great many things of value, such as money, linen, plate, and jewels, he always delivered every thing very honest so far as between two and three hundred pounds.

CHARLES CHATFELD sworn.

I live at Limehouse; the prisoner has worked under me; I am employed for Mr. Birch; he behaved very honest; I sent down money by him to pay the people twenty or thirty pounds at a time.

Do you know Hyser? —— I was always very suspicious of him when he was with the prisoner; he was turned away when he was with Bear for theft.

Phelps. With respect to the boy, he robbed my craft of two shirts and two pair of stockings; he has a very bad character.

The prisoner Bear called six more witnesses, who all gave him a very good character.

The Prisoner Davies called two witnesses to his character.

WILLIAM BEAR, GUILTY, Death.
WILLIAM DAVIS, NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

802. The said WILLIAM DAVIS was again indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 4th of September, 19 deal boards, each containing in length 12 feet, value 38s. the property of Thomas Pearce and Geo. Jameson.

There was no evidence given.

NOT GUILTY.

---

803. JOHN DIXON was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 12th day of July last, one silk handkerchief, value 1s. the property of James Thomberg.

The Prosecutor caught the prisoner in Grace-church-street, with the handkerchief in his hand.

GUILTY, 10*d.*

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the first London Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

807. JOHN

turned out firſt, and my maſter aſked me if it was high water, then we laid along ſide of this here ſaid barge, and he jumped along ſide, and he began to handle the deals off the deal barge into ours.

What did your maſter do?——He took hold of them.

Who elſe was there?—William Davis, the other priſoner, and me.

Did he do any thing to theſe deals?——Yes.

How many deals did you take out of Mr. Remnant's barge?—Both of them.

You took out of two barges?—Yes.

How many did you take out of both of them?—Fifty.

Where did you go?——We went away about a quarter after three, down to North-fleet, Bear and Davis went with us, when we got there, my maſter went on ſhore, he was on ſhore about three quarters of an hour, and after he returned, theſe two men came down and aſſiſted us to get the deals out; the deals was put on the walk, there was no other pile of deals there, and there we piled the fifty; Davis was down in the hole, and handed them up, Bear he ſtood upon deck.

Now young man, upon your oath, is it all true that you have told the Court?——Nothing but the truth.

Mr. Garrow. What is it that my friend is afraid of, that you will not tell the truth, why you are an honeſt lad, and came to ſpeak the truth?—Yes.

Where did you come from this morning?—From Tothill-fields.

Tothill-fields! what have you lodgings there?—No, I am in cuſtody.

Oh! in cuſtody! that was what made my friend ſo fearful, why what are you in cuſtody for my man? ſpeak out, don't be baſhful?—Sir.

Is it upon account of this affair?——I ſuppoſe ſo Sir.

What ſome-body was wicked enough to ſuppoſe you ſtole them?——(No anſwer.)

Why you could ſpeak faſt enough juſt now, now you are as mute as a mackarel, now I am come to ſpeak to you, why don't you ſpeak out, did not ſomebody take you up about theſe deals?—Yes Sir.

Come let us have it, then you told this ſtory about maſter?——I told on Tueſday morning.

Did you intend to tell?—No.

How long had you been in your maſter's ſervice the laſt time?—This is only the ſecond voyage.

How long did you live with him before?—Not two years.

What did he turn you away for, don't be aſhamed?—He did not turn me away.

Now I aſk you upon your oath, (God knows you don't mind that) did not he turn you away?—I went away, they did not take me up, and he wanted to perſuade me from going to ſea.

As the only way of preventing you from being hanged: now whoſe ſtitch of bacon was it you ſtole?—I never ſtole any bacon.

How long was you abſent from your maſter's ſervice?—I cannot tell rightly.

Was it a year, or half a year, a month or ſix weeks?—It was almoſt half a year, I worked in Mr. Man's craft at Cheſea, I was in the craft twice.

Now tell me one honeſt day's work, that you did for any human being in that ſix months?——I never took any thing from any body while I was there, I ſhould have been there now if my maſter had not fell out with him.

Can you ſtate the name of any human being, that you have done one honeſt day's work for theſe ſix months.

Mr. Fielding to Hyſer. Why do not you anſwer my friend by aſking him the ſame queſtion?

Mr. Garrow to Mr. Fielding. I have had many briefs of yours during that time.

Court. What was you to have for this?—I did not know I was to have any thing, I dare ſay they would give me ſomething.

Do you know what Davies was to have for it?——I do not know.

Did Davies and you know that theſe deals were to be moved before you were called up that night?——I did not know, and I dare ſay Davies did not.

Upon

Upon your oath, did you or did you not know that these deals did not belong to your master, that he had not bought them, or was not employed to carry them away, but that you were doing a wrong thing? — Yes, Sir, I have owned that there.

Mr. Fielding to Remmet. Are you able to speak with any precision to the property?——The deals that were returned were the same sort that were in the barge.

Only the same sort; can you say you believe they were the same?—We know them to be the same sort by the marks at the ends of them; they bore the same marks at the ends that the remaining ones bore.

Court. And did the numbers tally?—The numbers that we were short were thirty-seven, but there were only thirty-one returned.

Mr. Garrow. You have said very fairly that you believe these to be the same sort of deals?——Yes.

Were they narrow deals?——Yes, two and a half Frederick stand; there were upwards of five thousand in one ship; I did not take the whole of the cargo; they were distributed among half a dozen or eight people; they are marked with red chalk, or red paint; I never saw them marked in England; they are marked in the country where they are cut.

Then the whole five thousand had the same mark as these?—I believe they had.

So that the deals, for any thing you know, may be the property of of somebody else of the same cargo?——It is possible they may.

Where do you live?—In Saint Giles's, High-street.

WILLIAM PHELPS sworn.

I am a bargemaster at Fulham; I have known the prisoner Bear twenty-five years, he is a lightermam, and has a very good character; I have employed him; he always behaved honest, and I have trusted him.

MARY BURGE sworn.

I live at Limehouse; I have known him between three and four years; I always thought him a perfect honest man; I have intrusted him with a great many things of value, such as money, linen, plate, and jewels, he always delivered every thing very honest so far as between two and three hundred pounds.

CHARLES CHATFELD sworn.

I live at Limehouse; the prisoner has worked under me; I am employed for Mr. Bireb; he behaved very honest; I sent down money by him to pay the people twenty or thirty pounds at a time.

Do you know Hyser?——I was always very suspicious of him when he was with the prisoner; he was turned away when he was with Bear for theft.

Phelps. With respect to the boy, he robbed my craft of two shirts and two pair of stockings; he has a very bad character.

The prisoner Bear called six more witnesses, who all gave him a very good character.

The Prisoner Davies called two witnesses to his character.

WILLIAM BEAR, GUILTY, Death.
WILLIAM DAVIS, NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

802. The said WILLIAM DAVIS was again indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 4th of September, 19 deal boards, each containing in length 12 feet, value 38s. the property of Thomas Pearce and Geo. Jameson.

There was no evidence given.

NOT GUILTY.

---

803. JOHN DIXON was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 12th day of July last, one silk handkerchief, value 1s. the property of James Thomberg.

The Prosecutor caught the prisoner in Grace-church-street, with the handkerchief in his hand.

GUILTY, 10*d.*

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the first London Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

807. JOHN

803. JOHN NEALE was indicted for feloniously ſtealing, on the 5th day of Auguſt laſt, two fowls, value 2s. the property of John Hubbard.

BETTY HUBBARD ſworn.

I am wife of John Hubbard, No. 9, Turnſtreet, Hundy-line Market; I loſt two dead fowls on the 5th of Auguſt, at half an hour after nine at night; they hung in the ſhop-window; the man that took them, as he looked through the glaſs, looked like a black man; I ſaw him through the window of the kitchen; I told Mr. Hubbard, and he ran, and cried ſtop thief.

Was the priſoner the man that took the things?——That was the man that the boy brought back in five minutes, and ſaid dropped the fowls.

JOHN COFFE ſworn.

I live with with Mr. Hubbard; I ſaw my maſter come out, and I made after the priſoner, and he dropped the fowls; I brought him back; I brought the fowls home; he was all over ſoot.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I had been at the fire in Aldermanbury, and I was coming to oil a jack; the young man ſaid, I had dropped the fowls; I ſaid, if ſo, you will ſee the mark of my black hand; I went with them gently, as an innocent man would do; if I had been given to thieving I had no occaſion to ſteal two fowls; I leave it to your Lordſhip's generoſity.

GUILTY.

To be confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

---

804. JAMES HORTON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 15th day of September, one linen handkerchief, value 10d. the property of Francis Skinner.

FRANCIS SKINNER ſworn.

I loſt my handkerchief on Tueſday laſt at Saint Andrew's church, Holborn, a little before two; I did not know who took it; this is the handkerchief; there was a crowd.

ALEXANDER SCOTT ſworn.

A little before two laſt Thurſday in the afternoon, I was ſtanding at the gate of St. Andrew's door; I ſaw the boy next the priſoner and another at this gentleman's pocket; and I ſaw the priſoner when he ſaw me, throw this handkerchief in the mud; I am ſure he picks forty forty handkerchiefs in a week.——

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was going of an errand for my mother, I was never near the gentleman's pocket.

How old are you?——About ſix.

Who employs you to do this?——Nobody; I go out with a baſket with greens and turnips along with my father.

GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

805. SAMUEL POOLE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 25th day of Auguſt laſt, 40lb. weight of lead, value 2s. belonging to Joſeph Braine, and then and there affixed to a certain building of his, againſt the ſtatute.

JAMES CROXHAM ſworn.

Between eight and nine the 25th of Auguſt, I was on the watch, I thought I heard ſomebody at the bottom of the ladder; I ſaw the priſoner with the lead under his arm; it was dark, I could not ſee him before I took him at the foot of the ladder; ſays I, what have you here, ſays he, a bit of ſomething I am going to lay down.

THOMAS BRAINE, Jun. ſworn.

This was our lead; it was tore off entirely.

Priſoner. I picked it up at the foot of the ladder.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

The next Part will be publiſhed in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commission of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middlesex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wednesday the 14th of SEPTEMBER, 1785, and the following Days;

Being the SEVENTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER VII. PART VII.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noster Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the City of LONDON, &c.

806. JOHN FARMER was indicted for ſtealing, on the 9th day of September, one woman's cloth cloak, value 5s. and one tea ſpoon, value 12d. the property of John Cliſton.

NICHOLAS KEATING ſworn.

I was in Stepney church-yard, and one Naſh, a little boy, called to me, Maſter, maſter, here is a thief, and upon the graſs I found a ſilver ſpoon, where the priſoner and Naſh were ſcuffling together; I carried the ſpoon to Mrs. Clifton; ſhe owned it.

WILLIAM NASH ſworn.

I am turned of fifteen; this was a holiday, and we went a blackberrying to Epping Foreſt, and I ſaw the priſoner and another young man come out of the proſecutor's houſe, which is in Whitehorſe-ſtreet, Stepney, and he brought ſomething out of the houſe, which appeared afterwards to be a cloak, and he wrapped it up, and put it under his arm; then he ran on a little ahead, and there were two more young fellows, and I ſaw the talleſt of the fellows beckon to him, then I thought they were after no good by that means, I followed them, and when they came to Stepney church-yard, going to the World's End, he dropped the cloak; I ſaw him drop it; I am ſure it was him that dropped it; and one of the boys ſaid, whoſe cloak is this, ſays the priſoner, it may be yours for anything I know, ſo then I caught hold of him, and called to this man; I did not ſee the tea ſpoon picked up.

William Smith. I am going in fifteen.

Court. Do you know the nature of an oath?—No, Sir.

Do you know what the conſequence will be if you ſpeak falſe?——If I tell a lie I ſhall go to the devil.

WILLIAM SMITH ſworn.

I was with Naſh, and I ſaw the cloak among ſome ſtinging nettles, I carried it to the woman's houſe, and ſhe owned it; I knew her, and I knew her cloak.

Naſh. I ſaw the priſoner drop the cloak.

James Terry. I am 14 next October.

Do you know the nature of an oath?—Yes.

What will happen to you if you do not ſpeak the truth?—— I ſhall go where all the naughty children go. Me, William Smith, and William Naſh, were going to take a walk to Epping Foreſt, and Naſh ſaid, there is a boy and a young man with him, he has got ſomething, and I ſaw him have the cloak under his arm, and drop it.

Was it the ſame cloak that Smith picked up?—Yes.

(The things depoſed to.)

PRI-

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was going to my aunt's in Stepney church-yard, and the boy came to me, and challenged me with the cloak; it was laid among ſome ſtinging nettles, I ſaid I knew nothing of it.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

807. MARY JACKSON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 26th day of Auguſt laſt, two men's velveret waiſtcoats, value 14s. and ſix boy's waiſtcoats, value 20s. the property of Samuel Cliſton.

Suſannah Cliſton and Elizabeth Robinſon called on their recognizances, and not appearing the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

808. THOMAS HEFFORD was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 9th day of July one ſtone garnet ring ſet in gold, value 5s. and nine guineas, value 9l. 9s. in monies numbered, the property of William Carleton.

William Carleton the Proſecutor called on his recognizance, but not appearing the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

809. SIMON GRIFFIN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 7th day of July laſt, one linen tent bedſtead, value 30s. the property of a perſon unknown.

JOSEPH STOKER ſworn.

On Thurſday the 7th of July I went to call the priſoner to ſweep an upholſterer's ſhop belonging to Mr. Trotter, the priſoner was porter, and I perceived him rather bulkier about his waiſt than he generally was; and I ſaid, Simon, you look as if you was with child; he laughed; I inſiſted on ſeeing what it was, and without any heſitation he unbuttoned his waiſtcoat, and down dropped a Manchester ſtriped tent-bed furniture, I believe he ſaid he got it up ſtairs: I do not know who it belonged to; they were goods which Mr. Trotter had in truſt.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was diſtreſſed one night for money, I owed eight pounds for rent, I did not mean to thieve it.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

810. ABRAHAM BENATTO was was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 11th day of Auguſt laſt one ſilk handkerchief, value 4s. the property of John Powell.

JOHN POWELL ſworn.

The priſoner came to my houſe the 11th of Auguſt laſt, to enquire for ſome ſilk handkerchiefs, we ſhewed him ſome; he deſired me to take down ſome cotton handkerchiefs that were behind on a ſhelf; and while I was taking them down I rather ſuſpected him; and he bought a cotton handkerchief, I put it into a paper; I ſuſpected he had taken ſomething, and I ſaw a ſilk handkerchief in his pocket, the corner was out; I miſſed the handkerchief, he ran out and I ran after him to a paſſage juſt adjoining my houſe; I ſaid, hark you, my friend, and he ran and he dropped the handkerchief, and I laid hold of him and the handkerchief; he had not run three yards before I ſaw him drop the handkerchief, I took it up; up; he ſaid a lady had put it into his pocket.

(Depoſed to.)

Priſoner. I leave it all to my counſel.

The priſoner called ſix witneſſes who all gave him a good character: one of them promiſed to take care of him; and the proſecutor ſaid he had enquired and found he had a very good character.

GUILTY.

Privately whipped.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

811. ANN GIBSON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 29th day of June laſt, one pair of linen ſheets, value 10s. and one cotton gown, value 4s. the property of Thomas Wightman.

THOMAS WIGHTMAN ſworn.

The priſoner lived ſervant with me, and went away privately, and took a pair of ſheets of mine, and a gown of my wife's; I ſaw her ſeven days after with the gown on her back, and ſhe confeſſed where ſhe had pawned the ſheets; no promiſes was made.

(The gown and ſheets depoſed to.)

RICHARD WARNER ſworn.

I received theſe ſheets of the priſoner; I lent her ſeven ſhillings on them, ſhe ſaid they were her own.

Priſoner. I do not know what to ſay, I leave it to your mercy.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped and confined twelve months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

812. MARTHA FISHER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 14th day of September, one leather purſe, value 1d. ſix guineas, value 6l. 6s. and 3s. and 6d. in monies numbered, the property of Thomas Baddeley, privately from his perſon.

THOMAS BADDELEY ſworn.

I am a porter in Aldermanbury, the priſoner followed me down the ſtreet on the 14th of this month, I went with her into a private houſe in Jackſon's-alley, it was between ſeven and eight, I was as ſober as ever I was in my life; I was not in the houſe a minute and an half before a girl came up and demanded 6d. for the uſe of the room, and was going to ſhut me up in the room, ſo I thought I might as well give them the ſix-pence, and I pulled out my purſe to give her the ſix-pence, and the priſoner immediately buſtled up to me, and took my purſe, and ran down, and ſent down the maid, ſhe took the purſe out of my pocket; I did not perceive it go then.

Court. You felt that ſhe took it from you?—I cannot ſay that I had the apprehenſion of juſt thinking of what ſhe was doing; I did not perceive it go; I thought ſhe belonged to the houſe; but the woman ſaid ſhe knew nothing of her, there were ſix guineas in gold, and three and ſix-pence in ſilver: then I went to Sir Sampſon Wright's, and met with Mr. Croſby, and we found her in Drury lane, juſt by the Bull and Mouth, ſome part of the money was found, Mr. Croſby found a guinea and a ſhilling; I am ſure this is the woman.

Priſoner. They took two pounds nine ſhillings out of my pocket, if he can ſwear to that, then I will ſubmit; I never was in his company in my life.

THOMAS CROSBY ſworn.

I took up the priſoner the ſame evening, about half an hour after in Drury lane, a little above the Bull and Mouth, ſhe made a great noiſe, ſhe kicked me and bit my thumb, ſome of the money fell in the ſtreet, ſhe brought twenty or thirty thieves, and people of her own ſtamp about her; Mr. Ward ſearched her, and found one pound ſeven ſhillings; I found one guinea in her hand, and one ſhilling ſhe dropped.

Did you find a purſe?—No.

JOSEPH

JOSEPH WARD sworn.

I assisted in taking her, and found one guinea and six-pence on her.

Court to Prosecutor. I suppose you do not know your two guineas?—No, Sir.

Prisoner. I never saw him, I never was in the room with him.

Court to Prosecutor. You certainly knew that this woman took the money?—I felt her press very hard on my thigh.

GUILTY.

Of stealing, but not privately.

To be confined to hard labour six months in the House of Correction.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

813. PATRICK COFFIELD was indicted for feloniously assaulting Sawney Clough, on the King's highway, on the 11th of August last, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniously taking from his person and against his will, one hat, value 4s. one black silk handkerchief, value 2s. and four shillings in monies numbered, his property.

(The witnesses examined apart, at the request of Mr. Garrow, Prisoner's Counsel.)

(The Prosecutor being a foreigner, and not understanding English, an Interpreter was sworn.)

SAWNEY CLOUGH sworn.

I was robbed, but I do not know what month.

Where was you going?——To the Blue Anchor public house, in the Back-lane, at past eleven at night.

Who did you meet?——I do not know.

Tell your own story?——I met a white man; that is the man.

Are you sure of it?——Yes.

What did he say or do to you?——He asked me if I had got any money, I told him I had got no money, he struck me first and then he robbed me, there were two men one struck me and the other robbed me while I was blinded down upon the ground.

What did he strike you with?——With his hand.

Did you lose your senses?——Yes.

What did he rob you of?——My hat, four shillings, and a black handkerchief.

What did you do when you came to your senses?——When I came to my senses I looked for the man, and he was run away.

Look again at the many and see whether you are sure that is one of the persons that robbed you?——This is the man that struck me, and caught hold of my two hands, and the man that robbed me ran away.

Was it a dark or a light night?——A dark night.

Did they speak to you immediately on coming up, or did you walk together any time?——They called me a black b—gg—r and struck me, and asked me for my money, there was a light in a public house.

JOSHUA GRAY sworn.

I was the officer of the night, on the 11th of August, I am headborough of Wellclose-square; and I saw the prisoner and this prosecutor against a door, as I came back there was a bit of a wrangle, and some girls about, I told the prosecutor to go about his business; I went down to the watch-house, and in about ten minutes a girl came running down, and said a Lascar had been robbed, I went out with the watchman, and I saw two men cross the way, and seeing the prisoner making off, I took him into custody; the prosecutor said this was the man that assaulted him, the prosecutor said this was not the man that robbed him, but this was the man that held his hands while the other took four shillings out of his pocket, and his hat and his handkerchief.

WELDON JONES sworn.

I was at the watch-house and a girl came down and said that a Lascar had been very badly used, I went with the constable, and stood in the Back-lane, I saw nothing of them, a girl said that was the man that ill used the Lascar, I went down and the prosecutor said this was the man that held him while the other robbed him.

Court. Is the girl here?—No, she was a girl of the town; I do not remember whether she was bound over, I have not seen her that way sometime.

Prisoner. I have served his Majesty ten years, I was coming from on board a ship, at Deptford, and got a little merry; I lodged at William Curtis's always, the Red-lion; as I came up the passage the prosecutor struck me, and I struck him, and we fell, I know no further, after I was admitted to bail, this man persuaded the men to swear to me on account of the bounty, I sent to Sir Richard Pearson for a character, and I expect one this evening.

Court to Gray. You represent this one Lascar to have told you this story?——Yes, Sir, so as I could understand him, he can speak English so as a good many can understand him.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

814. JOHN BROWN was indicted for feloniously assaulting James Harris, on the King's highway, on the 26th of July last, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniously taking from his person and against his will, one watch with the inside and outside cases made of silver, value 40s. a stone seal, value 12d. a base metal watch hook, value 6d. and a key, value 1d. his property.

(The witnesses examined apart at the request of the Prisoner.)

JAMES HARRIS sworn.

I am a journeyman baker, I was robbed on the 26th of July, in Lime-street, Spital-fields, between twelve and one, I was going home, I was as sober as I am now; I was knocked down by another man, I got up and ran away from him, that was just before, about a minute; the prisoner met me, and asked me what was the matter, I told him a man had knocked me down and used me ill, immediately he whipped my watch out of my pocket and ran away.

Did he speak to you by your name?—No.

Was it dark or light?——Star-light.

Are not you mistaken as to the man?—I am pretty sure I am not.

Have you any doubt at all about it?—Not in the least.

Are you clear that is the man?—Yes.

Now you have looked at him again, do you continue satisfied that he is the man?——Yes.

What sort of a watch was it?—A silver watch, I took him up the next day, he said nothing more to me than I have related, he did not ask me to deliver my money or watch, or anything.

Mr. Keys, Prisoner's Council. What day was this?——The 26th of July.

What day of the week?——On Tuesday morning.

What time of the night?——Between twelve and one.

I believe you had been drinking pretty freely?—Not above a pint of beer the whole evening.

Have not you expressed a doubt about the prisoner?—No.

Do you know one John Newton?—No, I cannot say I do.

Have you had any conversation with anybody about the prisoner?——Yes, he has sent to me to make it up.

Is not there another person in that neighbourhood, that is like the prisoner?—Not that I know.

Court. Did I understand you right, when you said no violence was used to your person by him, but that he barely snatched the watch out of your pocket, and returned it again?——Yes.

Did you see the other person that knocked you down and him together?——No.

HENRY HALE sworn.

I attended the Rotation-office, at Whitechapel, I went to apprehend the prisoner the next day, the prosecutor picked him out from several other prisoners.

Did

Did you find anything upon him?——Nothing at all.

BENJAMIN NASH sworn.

I apprehended the prisoner.

Did he mention his name to you?——No, he said he knew him very well.

Prisoner. I leave it to my Counsel.

The prisoner called six witnesses who gave him a very good character.

RICHARD BROWN sworn.

I am the brother of the prisoner, I came home on the evening of the robbery between eleven and twelve, and my brother was in bed; I went to bed to him, I am sure he did not go out that night any more.

Where do you live?—Great Eagle-street Spital-fields.

Court. What night was this?——The 25th of July.

Are you sure it was the 25th of July?—I am no scholar, any further than I got a gentleman to put it down to the best of my knowledge, my uncle put it down.

How came that?—Because my brother being in trouble, he put it down for a memorandum, it was on the Monday night.

Court to Prosecutor. What night was it you was robbed?——Between twelve and one on the Tuesday morning.

Court to Brown. When was it you desired your uncle to put this down?—The day after, or in the course of the week.

Court to Jury. From the evidence there does not seem to be that sort of violence that will constitute a highway robbery, it is a felony.

GUILTY

Of stealing, but not violently from the person.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

815. SARAH COOPER was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 27th day of July, one watch, with the inside and outside cases made of silver, value 20s. a string, value 1d. a piece of a silver seal, value 2d. and a key, value 1d. the property of John Craig, privily from his person.

JOHN CRAIG sworn.

On the 27th of July, about half past twelve at night, I was coming from the Strand, and the prisoner came up to me, and wanted me to go to Westminster with her, and I went into a little alley; she stopped me, and as I was coming out she asked me again to go with her, I told told her I could not go with her, and she laid hold of me, and hawled me, and when I parted with her, I found my pockets turned inside out, and I missed my watch directly; then I ran back and took hold of her, and asked her to give me my watch, and she began swearing, and brought a great mob of people, and they all came round me; I called the watch, and the watch came and took her into custody, and searched her, and found the watch.

Where was your watch?—In my waistcoat pocket.

How came you to carry it there?—The glass of it was broke, and there were no hands upon it, so I had it in my waistcoat pocket, open; this is the very watch; I had it about a fortnight before, I am very sure of it; I know it by the condition it is in, without the glass, and no hands; I did not give her the watch.

RICHARD DORRINGTON sworn.

I searched the prisoner, and found the watch in her pocket; she said she had the watch in her pocket, but she would not give it till she went to the watch-house; she said the man gave it her, but he denied it.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I had lately come out of the workhouse, and I was very distressed, I met this gentleman coming along the Strand, I asked him where he was going, he said home; I said, I wish you would give me something to drink, and I asked him for two shillings first, and he said he would give me two shillings shillings after I had obliged him, and he gave me the watch.

Court to Profecutor. Was you perfectly ſober? — I had been at the White-horſe Inn, in Saint Martin's Lane; I was not in liquor; I never knew my watch was gone till I came out, and ſaw my pocket turned out; I was not above three minutes from the firſt time I ſaw her; when I was coming out of the Alley ſhe met me, and laid hold of me, I told her I would not go with her, and ſhe ſnatched it out of my pocket.

GUILTY,

Of ſtealing, but not privately.

Privately whipped, and confined to ſix Months hard Labour in the Houſe of Correction.

---

816. JANE LANGLEY and MARY FINN were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 29th of July laſt, five guineas, value 5l. 5s. and 9s. and 6d. in monies numbered, the property of Robert Robinſon.

ROBERT ROBINSON ſworn.

On the 29th of July, about ten, I was robbed in Blackhorſe-yard; I was going home, and I met the priſoner Langley in Nightingale-lane, and ſhe aſked me to go home with her, accordingly I returned, and ſhe took me to Mary Finn's in Blackhorſe-yard, and I ſat down in the houſe five minutes; I felt ſomething in my pockets, and I jumped up, and felt in my pocket, and miſſed my money; I was not any way diſguiſed in liquor; I had the money after I went in not five minutes before; I had it in my hand; they ran out of the door, and a man who ſtood in the door-way before I was robbed, tripped up my heels, and ſet his feet on my breaſt as I was going out; I never recovered any part of my money; they offered me four guineas of the money afterwards, but the juſtice told me I muſt not take it; it was the day they were ſent to priſon; they were taken three days after the robbery, and they ſent a man with the money; I had ſeen both the priſoners before.

By what light did you ſee them? — By the light of the lamp; I am quite ſure they are the two women; I looked at the place where I ſat, there was no money there, I looked on the bed, and there was none there.

Did any thing paſs between you and either of them before you were robbed? — No; the priſoner Mary Finn ſtruck me before the Juſtice, and gave me a black eye, and before the Juſtice Mary Finn ſaid that ſhe had two ſhillings of the money, and that the other had all the reſt.

What did the other ſay? — The other ſaid nothing.

Did either of them deny being in the room with you? — No.

PRISONER LANGLEY's DEFENCE.

I ſerved two years to my buſineſs; I had been to carry ſome work home, coming along the man met me; he took hold of me; I ſaid I was going home; he ſaid he had been robbed in this place; I do not know by whom; he had been knocking at ſeveral peoples doors; he followed me home, and I ſtopped, and got me a half-penny candle, and I went and unlocked my door; this man followed me in, he ſat down on a box that ſtood by my bed-ſide, I told him, ſays I, I will be very much obliged to you to go out of my houſe, I wanted to go to bed, he aſked me for a bit of candle, and I locked my door and went to bed; he never took me up till Monday, and then I aſked him what for, and he ſaid he had been robbed, and whether it was us or not, he would make us pay for it.

MARY FINN's DEFENCE.

He put two ſhillings into my hand to ſhew him where he was robbed; I told him I did not know: he went round to every place; he was very much in liquor; he aſked three guineas to make it up.

Court to Profecutor. Had you loſt your money before you fell in with theſe women? — No, I never ſaw them after I was robbed.

Is there any truth in theſe ſtories? — None.

JOSEPH

JOSEPH JEFFERY SMITH ſworn.

I live in Blackhorſe-yard; I am a Smith by trade, a journeyman; I work there with one Mr. Callian; I know a good deal of the affair;——

Court. Let the other witneſſes for the priſoner go out of court till they are called.

Smith. On Friday night, about a quarter after eleven, I was ſtanding at one Mrs. Taylor's door, who keeps a chandler's ſhop, a man came and knocked at the door facing that, which is a farrier's ſhop, Mrs. Taylor ſays, what do you want there, ſays he, I have been robbed of my money, Mrs. Taylor ſays, you have not been robbed there, and I made anſwer, and ſaid, good man, you could not be robbed here, for that is a farrier's ſhop; there is nobody lives there; with that, he ſays, I am ſure I have been robbed here, then, ſays he, I have been robbed ſome where about here; ſays I, do you know who robbed you, why, ſays he, it was a tall woman, with a dark complexion, and her hair was very curly here (and he put his hand to his head, as I may do now) and a man; I ſaid, ſhould you know the party again, I do not know whether I ſhould or no, ſays he; but are you ſure they robbed you, ſays I; yes, ſays he, becauſe I felt a woman's hand in my pocket, and ſhe ſlid it away, and the man put his leg out, and he tripped me up, and I fell down, and I could not ſee any more of them; with that th priſoner, whoſe name is Jenny Langley I think; I know all my neighbours; I know her very well by ſight; I never ſpoke to the woman before that night ſhe came to the chandler's-ſhop; but whether ſhe bought a candle or no I do not know; ſays ſhe, I am going home; this good man that ſtands here ſays, I will go home along with you if you have a mind, ſhe ſays yes, with that they went to her lodging, and I am obliged to go by their door to go home; I bought a candle at the chandler's-ſhop, and went home into the priſoner's apartment to light it, and I looked at the man, and I ſays to him, good man, you are the man that was robbed; yes, ſays he, and I have got no money now; he was in the woman's apartment; no body was in the room beſides the two priſoners; the woman makes an anſwer directly, and ſays, then if you have no money you cannot expect to ſtay here, go about your buſineſs; he directly replied, I have no money, for I have been robbed of five guineas and odd.

Court. What was the woman's name whoſe ſhop you was at?—Mrs. Taylor, I expect her here.

Whoſe houſe was it that the man was knocking at oppoſite?——I do not rightly know the man's name; he has a ſhop facing Mrs. Taylor's; he lodges at Mrs. Taylor's; he knocked at the door a great while, almoſt fit to ſplit the door down.

Was there any body elſe of the neighbours that was alarmed and came out?——Yes, there is a woman.

What is her name?—I do not know, I ſhould know her if I was to ſee her.

Priſoner. Her name is Mary Jones.

Court to Smith. Was ſhe preſent when the converſation paſſed between the proſecutor and Mrs. Taylor?——No, nobody was preſent but Mrs. Taylor; this woman ſaid the proſecutor came and knocked at her door.

How long have you worked in that neighbourhood?—Better than a twelvemonth, a twelvemonth laſt Auguſt.

You know the neighbours very well then?——I keep but a little acquaintance with any of them.

Whoſe houſe did this priſoner Langley live in?——I do not know the name of the landlord, Mary Finn lives over the broadway, ſhe does not live in the ſame place with Langley.

How far is that off?—As far as it is from here to the pump going to St. Sepulchre's.

Did you ſee her at all that night?—No, I did not.

How long have you known Langley?—I believe I have known her about three or four months.

Do you lodge there as well as work there?—I have a houſe there, I have a little houſe, and I live in there, my wife and I.

Is your maſter here?—No, he has lived in Black-horſe-yard ten years.

How do you ſpell your maſter's name?——Upon my word I do not know, I am no ſcholar, Kellyan.

That is not an Iriſh name, Kelly is?—His name is Cornelius Callagan.

Then you did not ſee anything of Mary Finn that night?——No, I did not, I never ſaw any harm of either of the women, they always behaved as they ought to do.

This man ſaid he had loſt all his money, and he had no money left?—Yes.

Then it is not true that he gave Mary Finn two ſhillings, to help him to look for his money with a candle?——Not while I was by.

Court to Robinſon. Did you ever ſee that man before?——Yes.

Where did you firſt ſee him?——The firſt time I ſaw him was at the King's Arms in Eaſt Smithfield, the day that the priſoners were taken up.

You did not ſee him before?——Not to my knowledge.

He was not at the door and tripped up your heels?—I have no recollection of that man, he came up and offered me four guineas to make it up and not to appear, and I ſent in to the Juſtice.

What did he ſay?—He offered me four guineas not to appear againſt the priſoners.

Was any body preſent when he made that offer?——Yes, there was one Brown, that was with him, and one Mr. Burton, a maſter blackſmith at Blackwall, but he is lame and not able to come.

Was there anybody preſent with you here now?——No Sir, nobody at all, this man himſelf went to the Juſtice, to aſk whether I might take the money or not.

Court to Smith. How came you to make this offer on behalf of the priſoner?—My Lord, I never made ſuch an offer.

Then this is falſe?—It is as falſe as God is in Heaven.

You recollect there are two witneſſes in this caſe, mind, though Mr. Burton is not here now, he can be found hereafter; now will you ſwear, you never made ſuch an offer?——I will, all my goods and clothes would not fetch it, I did not make the offer.

You ſwear that poſitively?—Yes, neither did I go to the Juſtice, I was not with them when they took the girls up.

Were you ever, at any time with the proſecutor at the King's Arms in Eaſt Smithfield?——I ſaw him there, he came in there, but I never ſpoke to him, nor drank with him, he gave the girls ſomething to drink.

You never ſpoke to him in the King's Arms?—I never ſpoke to him in the King's Arms.

Then you poſitively ſwear that you never made him ſuch an offer, nor never ſpoke to him at the King's Arms?——I never did; at the Brown Bear I ſpoke to him, we had ſixpenny-worth of gin and water, or ſomething, I do not know what it was.

Did you make him that offer at the Brown Bear?—No.

What converſation paſſed?——I will tell you; there was one Brown, and he and I went over to the Brown Bear, and there was the proſecutor and another man ſitting, and I called for a pint of beer, and we had ſixpennyworth of ſomething, and he offered his own ſelf, that if the girls would make the four guineas up before the trial came on, he would not appear againſt them, with that I ſaid, I would go and ſpeak to the girls, and I went to the girls where they were in the lock-up place in the King's Arms, and they ſaid they could not do any ſuch thing, they had no money, they were not guilty, and could not get any money.

Then it is not true that Robinſon ſent over to the Juſtice's, to aſk whether he might take the money or not?——I do not know.

Court to Robinſon. Was it at the Brown Bear, or the King's Arms, that he offered you the money?——It was at the Brown Bear.

ELIZABETH TAYLOR ſworn.

I live in Eaſt Smithfield, juſt by Nightingale-Lane, in Wapping pariſh.

Do

Do you live in Blackhorſe-yard?—Yes.

Do you keep any ſhop there?—I keep a chandler's ſhop there.

Do you know the proſecutor of this indictment?——I have ſeen him before, I ſaw him on the Friday night, he ſaid he was robbed.

Where did you firſt ſee him that night?——The firſt time that ever I ſaw him, was in my own ſhop, my ſhop was ſhut up, and I was juſt going to bed, I was putting on my night cap, it was a few minutes paſt eleven.

Court. Let an officer go out of Court with Smith, and mind, do not let him go away, he may be wanted again.

Elizabeth Taylor. The proſecutor puſhed open the door and came in, I was putting on my night cap, ſays I, pray maſter what do you want here, ſays he, miſtreſs, I am robbed, ſays I, pray maſter do not come here, nobody has robbed you here, here is nobody elſe lives here but me, and my children; ſays he, I was robbed at your door by a tall very remarkable woman, and a man; ſays he, I ſhould know the woman if I was to ſee her among a thouſand, ſays he, the woman is very remarkable indeed, ſhe is quite a black complexioned woman, and her hair grows over her forehead all rough; ſays I, maſter, I know nothing of it, here is nobody here, and I ran round the counter, and ſhut the door too, and ſhut him out, and he went two or three doors by me, and he knocked at ſome doors, different doors, and he ſaid he was robbed, I heard him ſay ſo when I was within; there was a farrier's ſhop oppoſite to my door, and he went over there, and kicked, and knocked, and I opened my door again, and ſaid, good man, do not go there, there is nobody there but a parcel of men, that have been in bed three hours, then he went to a houſe were there was a very old man, and an old woman, and there he ſaid, he was either robbed there, or at the chandler's ſhop door, then this old man told him he was not robbed there, the old man was in a paſſion with him, and he pulled off his ſhirt, and he beat the proſecutor.

What did Robinſon do upon that?——The old man brought him to me again, with a candle in his hand, ſays he, Mrs. Taylor, this man ſays he is robbed, ſays I, do not bring a drunken man here, you know nobody could rob him here; this old man's name is Weſt, and as we were talking in came Jenny Langley for a candle, and ſhe ſays to me, Mrs. Taylor cut me a candle, I cut her down a candle, and this man, and the old man were at my door, and then Smith and his wife came into my ſhop at the ſame time, while Jane Langley was getting the candle, they were in my ſhop juſt before ſhe came in for the candle, and I cut them a candle, and this man, the proſecutor, turns round to Langley, and ſaid, I will go home with you my dear, but I have been robbed, I have no money but fourpence in the world.

Court. He made the firſt offer then?—Yes.

She did not aſk him firſt?—No, he ſaid he was robbed by a man and woman in the ſtreet, at this door, or ſome door nigh here; the proſecutor went with the young woman out of my ſhop, and I made anſwer to Smith and his wife, ſays I, I dare ſay that is ſome drunken bad man, now he will go and rob Jenny, now ſhe has got a few things about her, and is a little tidy; ſays Smith, I will take care he ſhall not, for ſhe is a quiet honeſt harmleſs girl, I will go and tell her as the man ſays he is robbed, to turn him out, and he bid his wife to ſtop in my ſhop the while, and Smith went, and when he came back, he ſaid the man was ſtanding at Jenny's door, and talking to her, and wanted to ſtay with her all night, and ſhe ſaid he ſhould not, and ſhut the door, and ſhut him out, I know nothing further, this was on Friday night, and on the Monday I ſaw this man again.

Where is the old man?——He is in the country, hopping; Smith's wife and he came in together, while the proſecutor and the old man were quarrelling at the the door, then Jenny came in and aſked me to cut her a candle.

Did

Did you see Mary Finn that night at all?——No, not that night.

Do you know her?——I know her very well, I did not see her that night.

Did not Smith take a candle from your shop?——Yes, Smith took a candle from my shop and lighted it, and he had a quartern loaf and a quartern of cheese.

Do you remember his helping Robinson to look for the money that he had lost?——I do not know, I did not go there to look, I shut to my door after Smith went to Jenny, and Smith came in again, and told me that Jenny had turned the man out, he had a candle and lighted it, and went out of doors somewhere, and then came back to his wife, I was affraid and shut my door.

Did Smith help or offer to help him to look for it with the candle?--I don't know, he lighted the candle and went out after the prosecutor had gone home with Jenny Langley.

Was there anybody present but Smith and his wife, and the old man and the prosecutor?——Nobody else.

Did Smith and his wife leave your shop both together?—Yes, at the last they did.

How long was that after the prosecutor was gone?—I suppose four or five minutes after he went out with Jenny.

Did you hear him charge Jenny Langley with the robbery, while Smith was with you?—No, I did not, he said he was robbed, but he said he would go home with Jenny Langley, he said so to her, he said he would stay with her all night, but he had no money; and she told him he should not come, and he said he would; on the Monday I saw the man afterwards, Mary Finn and another young woman that lives next door but one to me, came for some coals, there is some steps go up into my shop, and as I was bringing up the coals, they sat upon the steps, and the prosecutor and another man came in, and he says to me, pray do you know one Mary Finn hereabouts, yes, says she, my name is Mary Finn; says he, I was robbed somewhere about here last Friday night, and you may be one of them that did it for what I know; why says she, did you ever see me before, says she you would not say I robbed you, would you; says he, I will go and give charge of you now, if you do not give me some of my money back, says she, I never had any of your money, nor none I will give you, and if you have the impudence to go to a Justice, I will go with you, and he went to the Justices, and she with him.

Who was the man that was with him?——I do not know.

Was anybody else present at this conversation but you?——I do not know that there was.

Jury. When you was affraid that the prosecutor might use this young girl ill; Smith said he would care take he should not?—Yes.

And he would go along with the girl?—Yes.

He came and told you, the girl had turned the prosecutor out, and shut the door?—Yes, he went down on purpose.

Court. Call in Smith again.

Court to Smith. You say that the first you observed of the prosecutor was seeing him knock at the farrier's door opposite?—That was the first of my seeing him, I cannot recollect seeing him before, I then entered into conversation with him, and told him he had not been robbed there, then he came over and talked to me, at Mr. Taylor's door, he said it was a very tall woman, with a very dark complection, and her hair was very rough, and he put his hand to his head, and a man; and that he felt the woman's hand in his pocket.

When the conversation passed between you and the prosecutor, as you have told us, I think you say nobody was present but Mrs. Taylor?—Mrs. Taylor was at the door, but I do not remember any body else.

How long was it after the prosecutor went home with Langley, that you went afterwards there to light a candle?—I look upon it not to be above ten minutes.

Where had you staid then?——I was standing talking to Mrs. Taylor.

When you went to Jenny Langley's to light your candle, where did you find the prosecutor profecutor and her?—She was ſitting at a table or a ſtool in her apartment; I left them in the room together, but as I croſſed over the way, I ſaw him go away.

If Jenny Langley, as you ſay, was no acquaintance of your's, how came you to go to her apartment?——I went to light my candle.

Had you any other buſineſs there, or did you go there for any other purpoſe than to light your candle?—I did not to help me God.

Poſitively?——Poſitively I did not.

Mrs. Taylor keeps a chandlers ſhop?——Yes.

Pray did you buy any bacon and eggs at her ſhop that night?——I cannot rightly ſay whether I did or no.

Did you go to Mrs. Taylor's ſhop after you had been to light your candle at Langley's?——No, I did not, I went home directly and went to bed.

Then if you bought any things there, it muſt be before?—Yes, it muſt, for I went home directly, and went to bed.

Are you a married man?—Yes.

Was your wife at home?—Yes.

Was ſhe at home all that evening?——She is ſeldom at home till it is lateiſh.

What time did ſhe come home that evening?——I cannot tell rightly, about ten o'clock.

Was ſhe alarmed at this, did ſhe come out upon the occaſion?—I cannot rightly remember, but I went home and went to bed.

She was at home when you went home from Langley's to go to bed?—Yes.

Court to Jury. Gentlemen, I fancy I need not go any further in this croſs-examination, I dare ſay you are very well ſatisfied?—Yes, my Lord.

MARY JONES ſworn.

On Friday night my huſband and me were in bed.

Court. Before you give your evidence, hear what I have to ſay to you; be cautious what you ſay, I have two other witneſſes that have been examined before, you have not heard their examination, they have contradicted each other very materially; I wiſh to ſave you from the guilt of perjury: I have ordered them to be detained in Court, with an intention of committing them to Newgate for perjury, if the Jury does not believe their evidence, and if you ſhould give an evidence that the Jury ſhould not believe, you will ſhare the ſame fate; now, with that caution, if you wiſh to be examined, it is upon your own head.

Mr. Jones. I ſhall ſpeak nothing but truth; on Friday night about a quarter after 11; I was in bed and aſleep, and my huſband likewiſe, and ſome perſon knocked at the door, I aſked who was there, and the man ſaid he was a friend, and I immediately aſked him what he wanted; he ſaid to come in doors; my huſband aſked him what he wanted; he ſaid no more; he went to the next door to Mr. Weſt's, who is an elderly old gentleman, and his wife is old, and ſhe ſpins; he knocked at the door and begged for a bit of candle, and they gave him a bit, and he came to my door again with a light in his hand, and I ſaid to my huſband, get out and ſee what the gentleman wants, and he got out in his ſhirt, and I got out in my ſhift, and ſtood behind the door, and my huſband ſaid, friend what is that you want, and he ſaid he had been robbed, and my huſband ſaid, friend, was you robbed here, and he looked about a bit, and he ſaid no, he was not; he went away, and I ſhut the door and went to bed, and I know no farther.

Were you at the Brown Bear when Smith was there with the profecutor Robinſon?—No, Sir, I was at the King's Arms.

THOMAS COSSUM ſworn.

I live in Mountague-ſtreet, White-Chapel; I am a houſekeeper, I am a tambour worker; I have known the priſoner Langley ever ſince the expiration of her apprenticeſhip, that was in 1777, ſhe has worked with me three different times; I have truſted her with every thing I had, and ſhe behaved honeſt and juſt.

Priſoner Finn. Aſk the profecutor if he did not pawn his watch that night to ſleep with a girl three doors from me.

Profecutor. I have not child enough for these fifteen or fixteen years, and I think that I fee my own home that night.

JANE LANDLEY, GUILTY,
Of ſtealing, but not privately.

MARY FINN, GUILTY,
Of ſtealing, but not privately.

Court. In the firſt place let the officers take Smith and Taylor into cuſtody, and commit them to Newgate.

Court to Priſoner. Now as to you priſoners, I think it right that theſe perſons who have been the hearers of your defence, and of your trial, ſhould alſo be the hearers of your ſentence, for this Court has always made it a rule, wherever they detect perſons committing the crime of perjury in order to clear priſoners, to puniſh thoſe priſoners who ſet up ſuch defences in the ſevereſt manner; had you been convicted of this offence unaggravated with the crime of perjury, the Court would probably have thought, that whipping each of you, with ſix, or at moſt twelve months confinement in the houſe of correction, would have been a ſufficient puniſhment of your offence, but the Court conſider your perjured defence, in which opinion I muſt entirely concur with the Jury, ſo great an aggravation of your guilt, that the Court muſt paſs an additional puniſhment upon you; therefore the ſentence of the Court is, that you and each of you be tranſported beyond the ſeas for the term of ſeven years to ſuch place or places as his Majeſty, by the advice of his Privy Councel ſhall think fit to declare and appoint.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

817. JOHN WILSON was indicted for feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Lewis Ducrog, on the 28th day of Auguſt laſt, about the hour of three in the afternoon, one John Perry being therein, and feloniouſly ſtealing therein a 800 copper halfpence, value 33 s. the property of the ſaid Lewis.

LEWIS DUCROG ſworn.

I live in Fleet-market, the left hand ſide, I am a tallow-chandler; on the 28th of Auguſt laſt, during my abſence my houſe was entered, and my property taken out of the cupboard in the parlour, which was broke open, to the amount of eight or nine pounds; I left my houſe at a quarter before three; there was nobody at home when I left it, the door was faſt.

Were all the windows faſt?—I cannot ſay with certainty, I heard nothing of it till between ſeven and eight in the evening; the property was afterwards found in the neceſſary in Poppin's court; there was four pounds worth reſtored to me, the other part I ſaw at the Eagle and Child in Shoe-lane, and is now to be produced, there were fifteen papers of halfpence, I ſaw them there.

JOHN KELLEY ſworn.

I live ſometimes in lodgings, on the 18th of Auguſt laſt, I was at the proſecutor's houſe, he deſired me to come and look after it; on Sunday I got the key from his father's, none of the family were within, I unlocked the door and locked it after me, I went up ſtairs to the kitchen and laid the key upon the table; I ſtaid there till four o'clock, and then I heard a noiſe below ſtairs; I came down and found the door wide open, and I ſaw a man ſtoop down and pick up a handkerchief with a great bulk, I cannot ſay what it was; he took it from the bottom ſtep of the ſtairs, and I ſaw him take it up and run away; I aſked him what he did there, he made ſomething of a droll anſwer, but I could not underſtand, being hard of hearing; and before I could aſk another queſtion he was gone; then a gentleman came to the door and aſked me if I belonged to the houſe; I ſaid yes; then ſays he the houſe is robbed; I ſaid how could that be when I was in the houſe.

Court. How could you doubt that the houſe was robbed, when you found the door open?——I thought it was ſomething belonging to himself that he snatched away; then a young man came, and we found the backside door broke open, and the property that was in it gone; I saw but one man.

Look about, and see if you see him?—I cannot see him.

Look at the prisoner, and tell me whether that is the man you saw?——That is not him.

Court. Were the windows below stairs lift and shut?——I did not examine at all.

Mr. Garrow, Prisoner's Counsel. You should know the man that you saw in the house from ten thousand, should not you?—I think so.

You are sure this was not the man?——Yes.

WILLIAM CHITTY sworn.

I saw the prisoner come out of the house of the prosecutor with a bundle in his hand, on Sunday the 28th of August, as nearly as I can recollect, about half past three, or a little before four; I was within a yard, he passed me very quick.

Did he run or walk?—He ran, and I ran after him through several turnings about Shoe-lane, till he came to New-street, and I followed him down another court into Shoe-lane, near a public-house, but I lost sight of him near half a minute, and I was informed he was gone into this public-house, that was the Eagle and child; I went to inform the prosecutor's father-in-law, and he and I, with a constable, came up to the prosecutor: when we went in I saw the prisoner run out at the door that he went in at, and that we went in at; he was the same person I pursued; we were at the back part of the house when I saw him run out; he was pursued, and ran into a chandler's-shop about a dozen doors from the public-house, and the constable and two or three more followed him, and took him there.

Mr. Garrow. What are you by profession?——A hair-dresser, I live in Bell-Savage yard, Ludgate-hill.

Are you a master hair dresser;—I live with my father.

Is your father a hair-dresser?——Yes, I am not a master, I am journeyman to him.

Were you alone in Fleet-market?——Yes.

Did you know this man before?——I never saw him before.

How long was he in your sight before you lost him?—Not above a minute.

How long was he out of your sight?—A whole minute.

So that a man passing quickly by you, and who was in your sight about a minute, you swear to him?—I think I can.

Am I to understand you have some doubt?——I think I can positively swear to it.

Can you swear in a case that affects a man's life?—That was the person that I saw for a minute, one person is like another, I should be loth to be too positive, I can only say to the best of my knowledge.

How often was this young man examined before a magistrate?—I do not know, I was not at the examination; I was not known, they did not know who I was, he did not know me notwithstanding I lived in the neighbourhood.

How did they find you out to go before the Grand Jury?—It was mentioned at a shop in the neighbourhood, and they said the person that gave information to Mr. Cover was absent, and they did not know who it was; and the shopkeeper said I can tell you who it was, it was young Chitty; that was about three days after the Sunday that the prisoner was taken up.

When was he committed?—I heard the day after.

How long might the person that you watched in the Eagle and Child have continued there, while you went for Mr. Cover and the constable?—About ten minutes, Mr. Cover lives a few doors from the prosecutor's.

You never shewed yourself to Kelly on the Sunday?—After the person was taken into custody I went about my business; I am quite a stranger to these matters; I did not know whether it was material or no.

Court. You did not know that Mr. Cover did not know you personally?——I did did not know but what he did. I knew him, and I thought he knew me.

JOHN COVER sworn.

I am a relation to Mr. Ducrog, on Sunday the 28th of August last, Chitty came to me, I did not know him, at that time he came to inform me, that he saw two men come out of Mr. Ducrog's house with bundles, and that he had watched one of them to the Eagle and Child in Shoe-lane, we went there with the constable, we went into the house, being informed there was a very suspicious person in the back-room, and when we went in he was not to be seen; after a very little time there was a cry in the passage, here he is, here he is, my situation at that time was quite at the further part of the room, at the back of the house, expecting he might have got into the yard on that cry, I ran out as fast as I could, and saw a man running in the street; I run into the house; I had never seen his face till I saw him in the room where he was taken.

Did you find any property at the Eagle and Child?——I saw a handkerchief with halfpence in it, but I cannot say whose possession it was in, he was fastened in the room, I believe the constable broke the door, he said he had nothing there but what was his own, and denied knowing any thing about it, and said we might search his lodgings.

Mr. Garrow. Were his lodgings searched?——Ruflingly searched, and there was nothing found, there was a pistol and vast quantities of keys hanging about, he denied at first giving any account of himself, at last he said he was a locksmith.

HENRY CLARE sworn.

On Sunday in the afternoon, I came home very near four o'clock, I live at No. 7, Robinhood-court, Shoe-lane, and they said there was a thief run in there, and that he was gone into the Eagle and Child; I went in for the paper, I went backwards, and the prisoner was sitting having part of a pint of beer, and according to the description this was the man, I said nothing to him, I went out of the door, I did not take notice whether any thing was besides him; I told the constable and the people that I thought he was within, and said I will stay at the door, I had the paper in my hand the mean time; I went in and said to the mistress of the house, these gentlemen are come in to see if that is the man; the prisoner came to the bar, and said what is the matter, he pushed by me, and ran as fast as he could, and I called to them that were backwards, and they came out directly after, and they followed him home to his own lodgings, where he run in, and I followed him up stairs, I never lost sight of him till he ran into the house, I heard somebody running before me up stairs, and I called to the constable to come up stairs, and he was taken there; the constable burst the door open, he had locked himself in, they knocked several times at the door, but he did not answer; when the constable began to burst open the door, he said what is the matter, I'll open the door, and he opened the door, and the constable said, you have a thief in the house, says he, I have no thief in the room; I looked at him, and said this is the person that was at Mrs. Brown's, take down the pistols from the mantle-piece, there were pistols over the mantle-piece.

NOAH DELFORCE sworn.

I live in Blackhorse-alley, Fleet-market, I was standing at master's door, on Sunday in the afternoon, and two men came running up the court, there was a gentleman in a blue coat and red cape, running after them, that was Mr. Chitty; he said he saw the two men come out of the tallow chandlers, they ran up the court, and they had a bundle under each of their arms, and a stick in their hands, they ran up Fleet-street, we ran after them, there we lost one of them, we ran up King's-head-court, there we met one of them coming by the King's Printing Office, with a bundle under his arm, I am quite sure that is one of them; a man in half mourning cried that is the gentleman, then then he ran back through Robinhood-court, and I saw him go into the Eagle and Child in Shoe-lane.

SARAH GRANTAM sworn.

I lived at the Eagle and Child when this affair happened, but I am come away since; I saw the prisoner in the Eagle and Child, he had a bundle in his hand, and put it under his coat, and when he saw somebody come in doors he threw it down.

Did you see him come in?—No; I cannot say who took up the bundle, I ran out with the mob, I know the bundle if I see it, I am sure this man at the bar is the man that had the bundle, he had a kind of half mourning coat when he came to our house, but he changed it when he got in his room.

EBENEZER BROWN sworn.

I was sitting in my parlour, and I heard a bustle, and I went backwards and found this bundle of halfpence, I did not see the prisoner.

CAROLINE HEMMINGS sworn.

I live on New-street-hill, I was standing at my own door, the prisoner came by, and asked to leave a handkerchief there, I told him he was a stranger to me, and I would not have a handkerchief left, he said a person he owed a little money to was after him, I told him it should not be, I did not know him, I am sure the prisoner is the person.

JOHN STOCK sworn.

Between three and four in the afternoon I heard a noise, and I went down to see, and I saw Mr. Cover and Mr. Chitty talking together, and they asked me to go with them, I said we had better have a constable, so I fetched Mr. Rush the barber, in Shoe-lane, so we went to the Eagle and Child, and we walked backwards, the tap room is backwards, we turned ourselves about, but we could not see the person we were looking for, while we turned about, somebody said there he goes, there he goes; Mr. Clare run first after him, when he first went into the house where he lodged, he locked himself in, we went and searched for him and found him in the two pair of stairs, and the door was fast, we could make nobody hear there; we were going up further and somebody says he is in that room I believe, it was some child; the constable said if you will not open it, I will break it open, and the constable forced the door, he was stood up in his shirt sleeves, the prisoner said what is all this about, says I we came to look after such thieves as you, and I charged the constable with him, we searched the house and found a little bunch of keys, and there was a box, I insisted upon having it opened, there was a pistol hanging over the chimney, there were several old locks in the box, and small keys in bunches, then he was taken away.

What coat did he put on?—I cannot say.

Clare. He put on a kind of a sky blue coat, and there was an old great coat that hung over the other.

He was without a coat?—Yes.

Where was the coat he had taken off?—I cannot tell, I did not find it, I did not look for it.

Prisoner. They searched the room when they came in, and they found no other coat but the one that hung up, and a great coat, I never had a grey coat in my life.

Mr. Garrow. The constable looked expressly for that coat did not he?—Yes.

He could not find it?—No.

Prisoner. My Lord, and Gentlemen of the Jury, on Sunday I went into the Eagle and Child, there was one John Fisher that will be called was there.

MARY DAVIS sworn.

These are the halfpence I tied up, I know them by the way they were tied up, I never saw any tied up so before.

(The halfpence handed up to the Court.)

Court. What is there particular in this tying up?—I always tie them up in half a sheet of white brown paper.

How do other people tie them up?——In coarse I believe, I did not tie up this blue paper; I can take my oath these are my tying up.

How, how?—I generally put sixpennyworth of farthings in every five ſhillings worth.

Mr. Garrow. You was examined before the Alderman?—Yes, I there ſwore theſe bundles were my tying up.

Proſecutor. That young woman generally does tie them up.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

On Sunday the 28th, I went into the Eagle and Child, and called for a pint of beer and the paper, I did not ſee the girl; immediately as I went in a man got up from his ſeat, and went haſtily out of the houſe, I went and ſat in his ſeat, I went out after I had drank my beer, I went into my own room and laid down, and pulled off my coat and hung it up; they knocked at the door, I opened it directly, they ſearched the bed and every place, they took down a brace of piſtols I had to clean for a gentleman who was here laſt night, but he was obliged to go into the country; at laſt the gentleman ſaid he was ſure I was the perſon, and I had a grey coat on, they looked all about and found no grey coat, I know nothing of it, if I had been guilty, I ſhould not have gone to the houſe I had uſed in the neighbourhood where I was known.

Court to Clare. Was there any other man like the priſoner at Brown's houſe,? ——No, Sir, there was nobody in the box but himſelf when I went in, there is one box with a hole in it four or five inches ſquare, that looks to the ſtreet, the priſoner ſat in that box; I never loſt ſight of the perſon that came out of Brown's houſe, there was nobody but himſelf before me, that went into the houſe where he was.

The priſoner called five witneſſes who all gave him a very good character.

Mr. Garrow obſerved, that there might be amongſt theſe half-pence a conſiderable quantity of bad half-pence, which would reduce the value.

Priſoner. My Lord, with ſubmiſſion to your Lordſhip, I have a witneſs that was in the Eagle and Child when I came in.

Court to Jury. I will hear the evidence of that witneſs, though a little out of courſe.

JOHN FISHER ſworn.

(Examined by the Court.)

I live at No. 24, in Shoe-lane, I am a journeyman watchmaker.

Who do you work with?—Mr. Charles Allen.

Where does he live?——He lives at the houſe, No. 42, I have lived there fourteen years.

Do you know the priſoner at the bar?—I have ſeen him before.

Do you know the Eagle and Child?—Perfectly well, I was there about four in the afternoon on Sunday the 28th of Auguſt, I went in to call for a pint of beer, I ſtaid, I ſuppoſe, about five minutes, when the priſoner came and called for a pint of beer, and ſat down in a ſeat where a man had juſt gone from, juſt as I had come in and ſat down.

Did you ſee that other man come in?—No.

What time did you go out of the houſe?——Juſt about four?

How long were you there before the priſoner came in?—I look upon it to be about five minutes.

Did you ſee the other man go out?—Yes, juſt as this priſoner ſat down.

Did you ſee any bundle?——None at all, not till after the priſoner came in a ſecond time, the priſoner went out a little time after the other man.

How long did he ſtay out?—I look upon it about five minutes before he was brought in by the conſtable; I did not ſee anybody follow him out, there was a diſturbance when he came in; there was a ſearch for a bundle; ſomebody ſaid a man had come in and left a bundle.

Court. Take care what you ſay; will you ſwear that before this priſoner went out of the houſe there was no buſtle in the houſe?——As the priſoner was going there came in ſeveral people, and made a piece of work juſt about the time he went out, and in five minutes he was brought in; I did not ſee any buſtle before he went out.

Did you ſee Mr. Chitty there, or the conſtable?——I ſaw the conſtable and Mr. Cover.

Upon your oath, did they not come in before the priſoner went out?——I cannot ſay, I did not take notice, I cannot take upon me to ſay, I do not remember any thing about it.

How long was the other man gone before they came in?——He went before the priſoner did.

How long was he gone before Mr. Cover came in? — I ſuppoſe near ten minutes in the whole.

Do you know the maid Sarah Grantam? —Yes, I did not ſee her.

Do you know Mr. Brown? —— Yes, I did not ſee him till after the half-pence were brought; I did not go out till after the priſoner was taken, I was in the tap-room when he came in, and when the other man went out I ſtaid in the tap-room till the priſoner went out.

Court to Mr. Cover. Look at that young man?—I have been looking at him, I really do not think he was there, there were ſeveral women, and a man or two like a ſmith, bnt I do not think he was there at the time; I have no knowledge of his face.

Clark. I did not take notice of this witneſs; I took notice of two or three women in the box, and two or three men with them, but who they were I cannot ſay.

Sarah Grantam. I do not know this witneſs, I know he is an apprentice of Mr. Allen's.

Was he at your houſe at all on Sunday evening?——I did not ſee him at all; I do not remember his ever coming to the houſe at all; there were ſome people in the further box, the next box to where the priſoner ſat, I cannot tell whether he was one of them; I am ſure the priſoner is the man that put down the bundle, &c. and he knocked down ſome of his beer when he went out.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing to the value of 39s.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

821. JAMES LINCH was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 1ſt of Auguſt laſt, one ſilver handle of a knife, value 1s. the property of Henry Cox.

A ſecond count, for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 27th of Auguſt laſt, one other ſilver handle of a knife, value 1s. the property of the ſaid Henry Cox.

A third count, for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 2d of September, two other ſilver handles of knives, value 8s. one ſilver table ſpoon, value 10s. the property of the ſaid Henry Cox.

HENRY COX ſworn.

I keep the Mitre Tavern in Fleet-ſtreet, the priſoner was my porter.

HECTOR ESSEX ſworn.

I live in the Strand, keep a ſale-ſhop; the priſoner came to my houſe about five weeks ago with a ſilver handle of a knife for ſale; I aſked him how he came by it, he ſaid it was his own property, an old family knife, it was of no ſervice to him, and he had broke it up for the ſake of the ſilver; he made a creditable appearance, and I purchaſed it of him, and he came again two or three days following, with another handle, either knife or fork; he came without his hat, and a plate in his hand, which convinced me he lived in the neighbourhood, to look at ſome things we had for ſale; when I found his reſidence, then I ſent to Mr. Cox, and in the evening I called at Mr. Cox's, and aſked the priſoner if he knew me, he anſwered no; I then produced theſe handles, and aſked if he knew them, he denied having any knowledge of them; the box was ſent for in the room where he was, and it was opened by himſelf, and there were ſome empty bottles, and a ſpoon, and two other knife handles, and ſome other things of inferior value, which I do not recollect; he immediately begged Mr. Cox's pardon, and ſaid he had the ſpoon to take phyſic with; upon which Mr. Cox ſent for a conſtable, and ſent him to the Compter; he gave no reaſon for the knife handle.

Produce the knife handle that you had from from the prisoner?—I cannot tell which it is, I cannot positively swear to them, they being cut up.

Mr. Cox. When Mr. Essex came to my house we sent for the prisoner, and Mr. Essex accused him with these things, which he denied afterwards; I sent for the box, and he had the key of it; he opened it, and there was in it a spoon, engraved with Mr. Cole's name, Mitre Tavern, which is my property, I succeeded Mr. Cole; and there were the handles of two knives silver, and some bottles, they were my knife handles; he seemed to deny it, but I asked him what he did with the third knife handle that he offered to sell to Mr. Essex, he said, one of them was his; there were butter and cheese, and candles, and bottles, and several things.

(The spoon and the knife-handle deposed to.)

Mr Peatt, Prisoner's Counsel. You say the name Cole is on the spoon?—Yes.

The Mitre tavern, is a very old tavern I believe?—Yes.

I believe it is the custom of that house to serve all in plate?——Yes.

A great many of these spoons have been sold or lost at times?—Yes, some, but not lately.

You do not know the knife handles from any thing but their resembling the others?——No.

To Esser. You deal in old silver as well as other articles?—Yes.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

Sir, I had the spoon up to take physic, there was physic in my box, I had the spoon three days in the house, the box lay on one side where I used to clean the knives and they dropped in.

How came you to carry them to Mr. Essex to sell?—No, I do not acknowledge that.

Mr. Peatt to Cox. The key was in his box?——He lays in the room below stairs by the door, there is never a lock to it.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the second London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

819. THOMAS SPENCER was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 28th day of July last, two black cloaks, value 21s. one piece of ribbon, value 1s. two pair of gloves, value 1s. five handkerchiefs, value 5s. three pair of ruffles, value 3s. one cap, value 1s. one tucker, value 6d. one laced tucker, value 6d. one packing trunk, value 4s. four stocks, value 4s. the property of James Campbell; and two handkerchiefs, value 2s. the property of Richard Bratten.

MARY CAMPBELL sworn.

I am wife of James Campbell, on Monday the 18th of July last, about half past nine in the morning I was sitting at breakfast in the side parlour, the prisoner was at the door of the side parlour, I saw him put the box under his arm, and I ran and caught hold of his coat with one arm, and with the other caught hold of the box; I am sure the man that was brought back was the same man.

JAMES CAMPBELL sworn.

I was sitting at breakfast, and I saw the prisoner going out with the box under his arm, she immediately ran out and caught hold out of his coat with one hand and the trunk with the other; she called out a thief, a thief; he got from her, I ran after him sixty yards, I caught him, and brought him back.

JOHN EDWARDS sworn.

I took the prisoner, this is the trunk, I have had in charge.

(The trunk and things deposed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was going for some work, I saw some people running, and I heard the cry of stop thief, and they took me.

The prisoner called one witness who gave him a good character.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the second London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 14th of SEPTEMBER, 1785, and the following Days;

Being the SEVENTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER VII. PART VIII.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

820. GEORGE DAVIS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 15th day of Auguſt laſt, fifty-ſix pounds of tobacco, value 3l. and one linen bag, value 6d. the property of John Skynner.

WILLIAM CONWAY ſworn.

I do the duty of a watchman, on the 15th of Auguſt about half after ten, I was going along, I obſerved a noiſe within the Roſe Inn gates, and I ſtepped a little further on, and went down Chick-lane, I went into the penns, and waited twenty minutes; Mr. Skinner's manufactory is within the Roſe gate; after I ſtaid there about twenty minutes, I ſaw the priſoner come out with a bag, and he took it from the ground, I cannot tell whether he came out of the gates, or out of the next houſe, but I ſaw him take it up near the gates, within three feet, my attention was drawn another way, to a woman that ſtood juſt by, about two minutes, who I thought was going to be robbed; I aſked him what he had, I aſked him ſeveral times, and he would not give me ſatisfaction; when I was going to take him to the watch-houſe, he ſaid he was hired by a man, to carry it up to Iſlington for a ſhilling, he told me a name that I cannot recollect; when he came to the watch-houſe he was ſearched, and ſome looſe tobacco was found in the lining of his coat, and in his coat pockets, as full as they could ſtuff, and a piece of candle was found alſo, he ſaid nothing more; the bag that was found contained tobacco.

EDWARD RYLAND ſworn.

On the 15th of Auguſt, the priſoner was brought up to the watch-houſe, with this bag of tobacco, I ſearched him, and in each of his coat pockets this ſhag tobacco was, and in his waiſtcoat was this thick piece of candle.

BENJAMIN BROOKS ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. Skinner, on Monday the 15th, in the morning, I found the ware-houſe doors open, I took particular care to lock it on Monday, on Tueſday morning I found it open again, and while we were looking about, the patrol came and aſked if we had loſt any tobacco, we could not miſs that particularly.

(The tobacco produced by the conſtable.)

Conſtable. I have had it at the watch-houſe ever ſince.

Brooks. It is damaged tobacco, and over preſſed, it has laid a long while with us, and it is dry.

Wilſon. I ſwear to the tobacco, it was a particular hogſhead that we could not manufacture, it was not to the ſample, it was rather damaged.

But

But there might have been other damaged tobacco?—Yes, but it has gone through my hands ſo often, that I am clear in this tobacco, I could have ſaid it was his tobacco if there were fifty hogſheads.

Do you know the bag?—I know particularly well moving that tobacco, and I covered it with that bag; I know the bag going through my hands ſo many times, but there is no particular mark, I cannot ſwear to the bag.

Mr. Garrow Priſoner's Council. You ſay very fairly you cannot ſwear to the bag?—No.

If you had ſeen this unmanufactured tobacco, where it might have been mixed with a great many other caſks, would you have ventured to ſwear this to be your maſter's?—I think I could.

You might diſtinguiſh this from that which was not damaged?——Yes.

In what does this differ from any other hogſhead of damaged tobacco?——There might be ſome like it.

Proſecutor. I had fifty bags of them, I cannot ſwear to the bags, I know the tobacco.

Mr. Skinner, I ſhall not deſpair after this, to hear a man ſwear to a tumbler of water; be ſo good as to give ſome reaſons to the Jury?——This tobacco was ſent to me on the 15th of November, and opened in the month of November, and there it has laid ever ſince, and there is never a manufacturer in London would keep this tobacco ſo long in the ſtate I have done; I can ſwear to it among twenty hogſheads, I certainly know it as well as if it was a fixture to my houſe, and marked.

Now you argue that no other manufacturer in London would have kept it in that ſtate?——Becauſe it is an article they uſe more than I do; this is a tobacco for ſnuff, I have more of this ſort than I could uſe.

Will you undertake to ſwear this is not Fletcher and Yeates's?——No, it was not, becauſe it was in my warehouſe.

I do not like to treat a man of character, as I am obliged to treat you; do you know, of your own knowledge, that it is not Fletcher and Yeates's; their warehouſe as I recollect, is within two or three hundred yards of your place?—No, it is more than that.

I aſk you as a man of conſcience, knowing that they had at that time tobacco of that ſort, can you ſay it was not this?——This is dry.

Do you know theirs was not dry?——I do not.

For all you know, they might have had ſome preciſely like this?——I cannot ſay.

I do believe that you have the moſt conſcientious perſuaſion it is your tobacco?—Yes.

I will be bound for it you have; but I muſt advert to my old courſe, I ſee there is no diſcriminating; will you venture to ſwear that is your tobacco?——I will.

I aſk you upon your oath, in what does that differ from the tobacco, which you know was in poſſeſſion of Fletcher and Yeates?——Becauſe the caſe was packed up looſe.

——— CHAPMAN ſworn.

I know this tobacco by the quality of it, I believe it to be my maſter's property.

Suppoſing a man had been found with this tobacco, at the warehouſe of Fletcher and Yeates, could you have ſworn then it was Mr. Skinner's?——No Sir, no ſuch thing.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was coming along, and a perſon aſked me to take this to Iſlington for a ſhilling, they had ſome in a handkerchief, and they aſked me to put ſome into my pocket, he was a ſtranger to me; I aſked him his name, and he told me his name was Farmer, I could not rightly tell, but I was glad to earn a ſhilling, I am as innocent as a child.

The priſoner called five witneſſes who gave him a good character.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

821. ABRA-

821. ABRAHAM DAWSON was indicted for feloniously ſtealing, on the 9th Day of July laſt, one ſilver watch, value 40s. one ſeal, value 1s. one key, value 1d. and a hook, value 1d. the property of Edward Robinſon.

EDWARD ROBINSON ſworn.

On the 9th of July laſt, about eleven in the evening, I was going home to bed, and in Fleet-market, the priſoner met me, and he gave me a joſtle, and ſnatched my watch from my pocket, I followed him, and I found him laid down flat on his face; I ſaw Woodward get the watch from Barragen; the priſoner was never out of my ſight.

JOHN BARRAGEN ſworn.

As I was going down Fleet-lane to the market in July laſt, I heard the cry of ſtop thief, and the priſoner came with the watch, and cried ſtop thief; I took the watch out of his hand, I am ſure of that, and gave it to Charles Woodward.

Priſoner. That man and I had a long ſcuffle; I challenged him, and the thief got clear away.

CHARLES WOODWARD ſworn.

As I was coming down Fleet-lane I ſaw the priſoner call ſtop thief; he was running, ſo I ran up to the ſide of him, and there was another man met him full in the face, and he fell cloſe on his face, and he was trying to put the watch into a cellar, and I ſaw the other young man take it from him, and he gave it to me.

(The watch produced, and depoſed to.)

Priſoner. I hope you will hear my witneſſes examined.

Proſecutor and Roberts. We have had very great inſults from two or three people now at the door.

The priſoner's three witneſſes called in and ſworn.

Court. Let the other two go out; but let an officer go with them.

ROBERT MATTHISON ſworn.

I am a clockmaker in Shoe-lane, I work with Samuel Row, who lives the corner of Harp-alley; I am not come with a deſign to vindicate the conduct of the priſoner, nor do I know any thing of the robbery; I am come to let you know that I am ſenſible there is a man here that would not be here if it was not for the reward; a few days after the priſoner was committed, Woodward took an opportunity while I was in the ſhop with him, I am a ſhop-mate of his, to propoſe bringing ten pounds to me to go into the country, to be in partnerſhip with him; this was after the priſoner was committed, he ſaid I ſeemed ſurpriſed how he ſhould come by ten pounds, he told me if I would keep it a ſecret he would let me know; he ſaid he had an affair in hand that would bring in ſome money, upon which I promiſed ſecreſy, not knowing the buſineſs; at this time nobody was preſent but us two; he then told me, he had ſtopped a thief, I obſerved to him I did not think it was in his power, becauſe I thought he was ſo ſlight; he then acknowledged that Woodward took the watch out of his hand, and gave it to the owner, and that there was forty pounds reward, and ten pounds from the pariſh, and that he and the Iriſhman would have it between them, I told him that I thought it was more likely that the proſecutor and conſtable would have the reward; he ſaid that he knew better how to go about the buſineſs this time than he did the laſt, alluding to a ſimilar circumſtance, and that the patrol and the conſtable, and the proſecutor would have none of the money, for they did not know any thing about it.

How came you to think this would be at all material to the priſoner? —— As I was convinced in my own mind that he was actuated by a bad principle.

No bad principle at all if he ſpeaks the truth.

Court to Roberts. Has this witneſs miſbehaved? —— He was one of thoſe at the Pitt's head that was abuſing Woodward and called him blood-hound, and I told him yeſterday that if he perſiſted in that behaviour in order to intimidate an evidence I would

I would bring him into court, and he desisted upon that.

Woodward. Upon this they they have discharged me from my business.

Prosecutor. He has been with me once or twice to get what he could out of me.

Court to Roberts. Was Woodward attending here upon the court when this man insulted him?—Yes, my Lord.

This man knew that he was attending for that purpose?——Yes.

Court. Swear Woodward to that and I will commit this man to Newgate.

Woodward. Please your Lordship, he has been about to all the masters of the trade to hinder me from business.

Court. That is a very improper conduct, but not within the jurisdiction of the court?—We were in the publichouse yesterday getting a little refreshment, and he came in with two or three more, and he stood up, and after that he called out of the window as far as ever he could see me, ah! you blood-hound, you blood-hound, and the people got round so, he has done all he could to hinder me from attending upon the court.

Court. Let him be committed to Newgate.

JAMES MAUL sworn.

I live in Shoe-lane, No. 77, I am a clock-maker, I work for Mr. Rowe, the principal thing that I know is from the last evidence, that is from Matthison, from that I took occasion to ask Woodward if he would be an evidence against a man if it was not for the sake of the reward, and he asked me if I would work a week's work for my master, if I did not expect to be paid for it; I said no; then said he, what would you have.

Woodward. My Lord, this man has not insulted me while I was attending in the court.

Court. Then he may depart.

JAMES THORPE sworn.

I am a brass-founder in Peter-street, Saffron-hill; I was in company with the prosecutor one evening, and I heard him say he thought Mr. Woodward was a busy man, and he called out hold him fast, there is forty pounds reward.

Prosecutor. This man never insulted the witness.

Court. Let him go.

GUILTY.

To be transported for seven years.

Tried by the second London Jury, before Mr. RECORDER.

---

822. JOHN LLOYD alias JONES was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 12th day of June last, two black geldings, price 30l. the property of Mary Cooperwood.

There being a mistake in the indictment, the prosecutrix being called Mary Cooperwood instead of Mary Cooper, widow, the prisoner was

ACQUITTED.

Mr. Baron Hotham. This is not one of Mr. Shelton's indictments, we know he is very accurate.

---

823. The said JOHN LLOYD alias JONES was again indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 12th day of July last, one black gelding, price 10l. the property of Joseph Oates.

JOSEPH OATES sworn.

I live at Cow-cross, I am a butcher, I lost a black gelding the 12th of July, from Holloway, in the parish of Islington, from a field, it was taken out of the field, and the lock broke, I saw it in the field the night before, I put a log on him; I found the gate broke, about seven, and the gelding was gone.

What particular marks had this gelding?——He had the mellanders, he was sore in the joints, and in the bend of the knee, and carried his tail low.

How high might he be?—Fourteen and a half, or fifteen hands high; I enquired all round at pounds, and green-yards, and offered a reward, and one day last week I found him again in the custody of James Hoare; it was the same horse, he was very poor, and rode hard when he came back, he had the same malady; I said, I will turn him loose in Smithfield, and if he does not go home he is not my horse, we took and turned him loose in Cheapside, and he went home.

JAMES HOARE sworn.

I remember a horse that the prosecutor claimed, that I bought of Jones the 26th of July, I gave him a mare that I had of my own that I valued at six guineas, and two guineas in money, he said it was his own property.

Did he mention how long he had had it, or how he came by it?—No.

Where do you live?—I live at Shaftsbury, I knew the prisoner for fifteen months past selling horses there for Mr. Cooper, and Mr. Richardson and others, I have bid him money for horses before now, I know nothing more of the horse.

Mr. Garrow, Prisoner's Council. You made the exchange with him?—Yes.

You knew this man as a horse dealer?—We did.

Did not he go to all the fairs in the kingdom?——Down to the westward.

What may you be?——I am a butcher, I thought this horse would do for me, for he would draw; he said he had it from a butcher.

Did he tell you what he gave the butcher for it?—No.

Did he tell you he took his own horse out of the chaise?—No.

HUGH HORAM sworn.

Mr. Garrow. You have been in Court all the time?——Yes.

Court. What do you know of this horse that your brother bought?—The prisoner went by the name of Jones in our country, and he called upon me one morning, he had a horse that would suit, I went with him, but he wanted to sell the horse, this farmer wanted to try him, and he put him into a cart and drew him, but they did not deal, and I believe the very same day was fair day, and the next day my brother appointed to meet with him, and Jones recommended my brother to him.

Mr. Garrow. So he did this as publicly as any man could do, for he took you for a witness.

Mr. LANGHORN sworn.

We know you are a very considerable dealer in horses?—My father keeps a repository.

Do you know the prisoner?—We have sold for him within these two years a great number of horses, and likewise he has bought several in the fair way of dealing.

Jury. How long have you known the prisoner?——About six or eight months.

When did he deal with you last?——I cannot exactly say.

What name did he go by?—Lloyd.

Court. Is Aldridge here?——No, it is his selling day.

Prisoner. Please to ask Mr. Horam whether he bought the horse by day or night?——By day, the 26th day on the road.

Prisoner. I sold him the horse on the 25th, at the Five Bells, at Shaftsbury, where I always use to quarter.

Horam. I was not in the house that day.

Mr. Garrow. My Lord, we did apply to put of this trial till the next Sessions.

(The Jury desired to withdraw.)

Court to Jury. I think Gentlemen you ought to take it into your consideration when you go out, that it is too much for us here to ask him how he came by the horse, we cannot put such a question to the prisoner, we ought not to do it; at the same time he has made affidavit that there is a person he bought it of, and he has requested queſted that he might have time to bring that perſon here, but the Court in my abſence refuſed to put off the trial.

Mr. Garrow. The man made affidavit with a ſubpœna annexed to it, for a Mr. Graſſman by name.

Mr. Shelton. The reaſon why the Court would not put off the trial was, he ſwore that he was adviſed, he was material witneſs.

Mr. Garrow. Adviſed and believes; he was adviſed by me that ſuch a witneſs would be a very material one, therefore he believed it to be true.

The Jury withdrew ſome time, and returned with a verdict

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

824. JAMES RANDALL alias RICHARDSON was indicted for that he having been committed to Clerkenwell Bridewell for being a rogue and vagabond for the ſpace of ſix months, and having again been apprehended on Monday the 27th of June, with a piſtol and iron crow, and a dark lanthorn, was adjudged to be an incorrigible rogue, and ordered to be committed to the houſe of correction for two years, and afterwards on the 6th of July laſt, was committed to the ſaid priſon, and that he afterwards, and before the expiration of the term of two years upon the 6th day of Auguſt laſt, did feloniouſly break out and make his eſcape from the ſaid houſe of correction, againſt the ſtatute.

(The caſe opened by Mr. Fielding.)

ALEXANDER FENWICK, Eſq; ſworn.

Here is the office copy of the record, I have compared them, and they are true copies.

(Read.)

Do you know the priſoner?——Yes.

Was that the man committed to you by that order?——Yes, this is the man that was ſent to me as an incorrigible rogue, from the Seſſions Houſe; on the 6th of Auguſt about twelve or between twelve and one; my ſervant came to my bed-room door, and ſaid there was ſomebody ſhot, I aſked if anybody was ſhot, and they ſaid no, the priſoner was one of them that eſcaped.

CHRISTOPHER CRIDLAND ſworn.

I know the priſoner, I apprehended him on the 16th of May, I carried him before Sir Sampſon Wright, I afterwards carried him before the Seſſions, and in the month of June he was convicted as an incorrigible rogue, and ſentenced to two years impriſonment.

JOHN ATKINS ſworn.

I apprehended the priſoner the laſt time, I know him, he was confined with Mr. Fenwick, I apprehended him at large in Drury-lane, upon the 29th of Auguſt laſt, Priſoner. I would not give the Court any trouble, I was the man that was at large, I was the man that eſcaped out of gaol, the gaol was all open, I broke nothing; as for my name being Richardſon, I never went by that name in my life.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

825. MARY GRAY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 27th day of July laſt, one tin box, value 1d. and one half guinea, value 10s. 6d. the property of Ann Steventon.

(Mr. Garrow, Counſel for the Proſecution.)

ANN STEVENTON ſworn.

I went to St. James's church, Clerkenwell, on the 24th of July, after the ſervice, I was

I was in the middle isle, and the prisoner and another woman were by me, and she put herself in a passion and pulled her cloak, and said what will you be at, and said she will tear my cloak, I said I know what you will be at; just at that time Isaac the constable clapped two of them on the shoulders, and said what do you do here; then I put my hand into my pocket, and missed my box with half a guinea in it, and a little bit of a receipt for an illness, this is the receipt and box; I swear to the box, I had it when I went to church.

Have you any doubt of the prisoner being the woman?——I am sure the woman that was committed was the person.

Mr. Peatt, Prisoner's Counsel. There were a great croud round you?—Yes.

She was the person that was taken in custody?——Yes.

What did you say about this?—Just as I say now, when they went to search her, I said it was not she that had the hat on.

You said before the woman she was a pockfretten woman?—That was the person the man found the box upon; but that was the woman that said I pulled her cloak, I did not particularly mind the other woman.

——— ISAAC sworn.

I attended this charity sermon, I happened to go into the church, just at the time that the hymn was beginning to be sung by Mrs. Wrighten, and I saw a shuffling piece of work between this lady and this woman, I took out two women, one with one arm and one with the other, and the box lay down just by the prisoners feet, I cannot pretend to say from which the box fell, I said before the Justice, I believe it fell on her side, and that it might drop from her.

Court. What did you take the prisoner for?——This lady said they were about her picking her pockets.

Jury. You knew them before?——I have seen them, Sir, I cannot say how often.

Mr. Peatt. If I understand you right, it was only a conjecture of yours, that it dropped from that woman?—That is all.

That is what you said before the Justice?——Yes.

You did not directly charge the prisoner?——No.

Court to Isaac. Had not you seized these two women for something, before this lady made a complaint?—Yes, when I heard the noise, I took them both out together.

The prisoner called three women with whom she had worked, who all gave her a good character.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

826. THOMAS UNDERWOOD and JOHN MARSHALL were indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 29th day of June, forty two pounds weight of leaden pipe, value 3s. 6d. belonging to John Ardesoif, Esq; affixed to his house, and two brass cocks, value 6d. his property, having no title or claim of title to the same or either of them.

(The witnesses examined apart at the request of the Prisoner.)

JAMES ALLIS sworn.

I know the house of Mr. Andersoif, the corner of Bear-alley, it is uninhabited, there was some lead pipe lost, and two brass cocks; I saw some lead in a bag at the house, when the prisoner was apprehended, which I can swear to one brass cock was fixed to the cistern, and the other let water into the sink; they were compared and fitted exactly.

SAMUEL FOXHEAD sworn.

On Wednesday morning I got up about six, and James Streetman came and fetched me over to his room, which is in Greenarbour-court, and looks into Seacoal-lane, and I went down, and by Breakneck-steps,

Thomas

Thomas Underwood who ſet upon the ſteps ran away, and I ran after him, ſuppoſing him to be one of them, there were two men, one of them had a bag in his hand which he delivered to Underwood and ran away; the priſoner Marſhall is not the man that brought the bag to him, Marſhal was there, but he did not attempt to run away, I took him into cuſtody, and Streetman took Underwood.

How far are theſe ſteps from the proſecutor's houſe?—Not ten yards, I ſaw them all three coming from Mr. Ardeſois's houſe they were coming in that direction, but whether they came out or no, I do not know, I heard no converſation between the priſoners, they did not come together, they had not an opportunity to talk to one another while we had them.

How ſoon after did Marſhall come to Underwood?——Directly.

JAMES STREETMAN ſworn.

I aroſe on Wedneſday morning, between five and ſix, and I ſaw the two priſoners and another man break into this houſe, I live oppoſite to it, it was quite light, the priſoner Underwood opened the door, and let two men in, and they ſhut the door and Underwood ſat down on the ſteps, and I ran and called Foxhead and his man, they came into my room and I ſhewed them, I afterwards ſaw Marſhall come out of the houſe, and the other run away; the pipe and cocks were all compared and anſwered; I am ſure it is the ſame.

(Produced and depoſed to.)

WILLIAM BARNEY ſworn.

I am a chape filer, I was going to work on the morning this affair happened, I had juſt been calling my maſter up, and he was telling me what work to go about, and I ſaw two men come out of this houſe, there were three went in, and the ſecond that came out had a bag on his ſhoulder, he gave it to Underwood, and he run away, and went down Seacoal-lane, the two men were taken to the Compter, and the bag; I ſaw the bag opened in the Compter, and there was ſome lead and two braſs cocks.

JOHN BERRY ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner in cuſtody, and Streetman had the bag, I took the bag from the Compter to my houſe, and kept it till their commitment, I think I can ſay they are the ſame things that I gave to the conſtable.

PRISONER UNDERWOOD'S DEFENCE.

I was going to work, and ſat down to buckle my ſhoe, and a man came and aſked me to carry this lead, he ran away, and they took me.

PRISONER MARSHALL'S DEFENCE.

I was behind and they took me, I never was in the houſe, nor ever ſaw this priſoner before, I was going home to my wife.

RICHARD LANEY ſworn.

I am a bell-hanger and jobbing Smith, I work for myſelf, I am a houſe-keeper, I live in Chick-lane, I have known him about a twelvemonth, I never heard any harm of him before, I believe him to be an honeſt man, whatever I ſaw of him; on the 30th of June laſt, Streetman came down to the Crown, to my houſe, and he ſent for me to the Crown oppoſite Chick-lane, and he aſked me if I knew Thomas Underwood, I told him I did, and that I heard he was in trouble, which I was very ſorry for, never hearing the like before; but ſays he what can I do, I am a ſoldier, and all my neceſſaries are in pawn; and I ſaid what can I do in the affair, why ſays he, as you are a houſe-keeper, if you will be ſo kind as to ſign a note for twenty ſhillings and pay me five ſhillings of it, as you know him, I will ſay no more about it; and I took a ſecond conſideration, and I thought he muſt be a very bad man, ſo I thought I had better pay for a pot of beer and go my ways.

Upon the oath you have taken, all this is a fact?——Yes, Sir, it is.

Court to Streetman. What are you?—I work in the coffin handle way.

Are you a ſoldier?——Yes, I went to the Crown along with another young man, he told me he could help me to the other man that ran away from us.

Did any of that converſation paſs which Mr. Laney has ſworn now?——So far as this, he ſaid he was ſorry, and I ſaid I was ſorry; but no money was required, never a word paſſed about the twenty ſhillings, and five ſhillings down; I never made any offer of that kind about a note, I went the next morning and told Mr. Foxhead about the circumſtance, and we went to Laney's houſe the next day, and there we ſaw the other man that run away from us, we were affraid to take him then.

Court to Laney. Did either of theſe priſoners ever lodge with you?——Neither of them, Underwood has worked for me, and did ſo the ſame week, on the Monday; I know nothing of the other.

What man was that that was at your houſe, when the other witneſs came?——I cannot pretend to ſay who it was that might come there, I was preſent at the time, there was a man that came to buy a pound of old nails, and I ſold him ſome for two pence halfpenny, but who he was, I do not know.

Court to Foxhead. Who did you ſee there?——I ſaw the man that was with this man, I am pretty ſure it was him that was in Mr. Laney's back kitchen, he turned his back; and I ſaid to him in the preſence of Mr. Laney, young man, you was with them, but I have not taken you.

THO. UNDERWOOD, JOHN MARSHALL, } GUILTY.

Each Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

827. JAMES KENNEDY and MICHAEL BRADBURY were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 2d day of July, one piece of wood of the length of twelve feet, value 5s. the property of the Mayor and Commonalty of the city of London.

The Caſe was opened by Mr. Garrow.

EDWARD RIGBY ſworn.

I am a labourer and conſtable at Guildhall; on the 2d of July laſt, I ſaw the priſoner Bradbury, with a piece of wood on his ſhoulder, and the other in company; I ſaw them under the Piazza; we had loſt one piece about two days before, I ſaw Bradbury take the piece of timber, and put it on his ſhoulder, the other was in company all the time; I followed them into Aldermanbury, I got a man to aſſiſt me, I took him, and he threw down the timber. The priſoners talked together ſome time before they took the piece.

Did you ſee the priſoner Bradbury alone move this timber, and put it on his ſhoulder?—He took it without any aſſiſtance.

Did you ſee the other man do anything?—No further than go away quite cloſe together in company, he was rather before him.

Did any of them ſay anything?—The other man ſaid, what do you take me for, what have I done? as ſoon as I collared him.

PRISONER KENNEDY'S DEFENCE.

I know nothing about the wood, I was going to my work.

The priſoner Kennedy called five witneſſes who gave him a good character.

PRISONER BRADBURY'S DEFENCE.

I ſaw the piece of timber lay under the Piazza, among ſome rubbiſh, I did not know it was of any uſe, and I took it home for fire-wood.

JAMES KENNEDY, NOT GUILTY.

MICHAEL BRADBURY, GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

828. JOHN

828. JOHN GILES was indicted for feloniously ſtealing, on the 28th day of July laſt, thirteen pounds weight of moiſt ſugar, value 14s. 6d. the property of a perſon unknown.

There being no proof that any ſugar was loſt, the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

829. ROBERT CANE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 24th day of June laſt, three pounds and an half of tobacco, the property of a perſon unknown.

GEORGE PHILLIPS ſworn.

I am a lighterman, I was at Juſtice Key, and ſaw the tarpaulin ſhake, and I ſaw a man give the priſoner ſome tobacco; he begged for God's ſake that I would let him go; I took two pounds of tobacco from the priſoner; he ſaid, I will never come any more, I will never do ſuch a thing again; I took him into cuſtody, I ſaw the hogſhead full about two hours before.

Priſoner. Did not I ſhew you the man that gave me the tobacco?—I ſaw the man that gave him the tobacco; he received it from him, he made his eſcape from one of the other watchmen.

JAMES HINDLE ſworn.

I am a conſtable, and they ſent for me, and pulled out a pound and an half of tobacco out of the priſoner's breeches, it was the 24th of June, and I took him to the Compter about one; I have had the tobacco ever ſince.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

830. WILLIAM CONEY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 9th day of September, ſix pounds weight of tobacco, the property of perſons unknown.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

831. GEORGE SHIRLEY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 9th day of July laſt, two braides of human hair, value 6s. the property of John Saunders.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

832. GEORGE SHANDOW was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 12th day of July laſt, one linen handkerchief, value 6d. the property of Thomas Francis.

The priſoner was detected in the fact, and the handkerchief taken out of his breeches.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

833. JOHN HICKS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 12th day of September, one printed book of muſic unbound, called Peeping Tom, value 6s. the property of John Darbey, Eſq.

JOHN WILLIAMS ſworn.

I am ſervant to John Darbey, Eſq. in the month of September, I loſt the property oppoſite Furnival's Inn, in Holborn; I went to Saint Paul's Church-yard, for Peeping Tom; it is a printed book of muſic unbound, I gave 6s. for it; I called for a hat-box on Ludgate-hill, and the priſoner fonet came on the ſide of me, and picked this out of my right hand coat pocket, it was my maſter's property; he gave me the money to pay for it; I ſeized his hand and the parcel againſt my ſide, it was quite out of my pocket, I collared him, and he made reſiſtance by which I tripped him up, and ſome others come up, and had him committed; the priſoner knocked me down three times; there were ſeven or eight came round me.

Priſoner. I am quite innocent.

GUILTY

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

834. THOMAS LEWINGTON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 30th of July laſt, two checque linen aprons, value 3s. five cloth aprons, value 2s. 6d. three pair of pockets, value 18d. one gown and petticoat, value 2s. 6d. two bedgowns, value 2s. one ſhift, value 2s. one flannel petticoat, value 6d. one pair of pattens, value 6d. one black ſilk petticoat, value 2s. two yards of black ſilk ribbon, value 1d. two ſilk handkerchiefs, value 2s. 6d. three pair of white cotton ſtockings, value 1s. one pair of ſtays, value 1s. and one deal box, with an iron lock, value 1s. the property of Rachael Blackburn.

RACHAEL BLACKBURN ſworn.

On the 30th of July laſt, I loſt the things mentioned in the indictment; I lived ſervant with Mr. Moore in Cheapſide, and I ſent my box to Iſlington by the errand cart; I am ſure the things were all in the box, I helped to carry it; there is my name on the box, in my own hand-writing, the box was locked when it was taken, I locked it and corded it; when I ſaw it again my things were all there.

——— GODFREY ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner take a deal box out of a cart that ſtood in Cheapſide, on Saturday the 30th of July, between one and two at noon; I have ſince learned that the cart belonged to a man of the name of Jones, I ſaw Iſlington errand cart wrote in large letters, I cannot ſay I ever ſaw the priſoner before, I am ſure he is the man, he took the box out of the cart, and put it upon his ſhoulders, and croſſed Cheapſide, I was on the contrary ſide of the way; I let him get upon the pavement, then I followed him and ſecured him, and as he turned round I took the box into my own hand, and delivered him and the box to Warren the conſtable, who was ſtanding at Mr. Deputy Clement's door.

Was he out of your ſight?——I believe there was a hackney-coach paſſed.

THOMAS WARREN ſworn.

I am a conſtable, I had been to deputy Clements, and was ſtanding talking to his foreman, and Mr. Godfrey delivered the priſoner and the box into my cuſtody; I have kept it ever ſince, there is a lock upon it, and corded; it was opened by the proſecutrix, when we came to prefer a bill.

(Produced and depoſed to.)

Priſoner. I have nothing to ſay.

GUILTY.

To be whipped and confined twelve months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

835. JOHN RICHARDSON alias RICHMOND was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 29th of Auguſt laſt, one pewter pint pot, value 6d. the property of Thomas Berwick.

The priſoner was taken with the pot in his pocket.

GUILTY.

Fined one ſhilling, and delivered to his officer.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

836. LYON

836. LYON EUCHEL was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 24th day of June laſt, twenty-four pair of white ſilk ſtockings, value 8l. and three pair of black ſilk ſtockings, value 20s. three pair of coloured ſilk, value 20s. and one pair of patent ſtockings, value 12s. the property of Robert Blackburn.

(The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of the priſoner.)

ROBERT BLACKBURN ſworn.

I keep a hoſier's ſhop, No. 30, in the Poultry; the priſoner at the bar came to me on the 24th of June, between two and three, and aſked to look at ſome ſilk ſtockings; I heſitated to ſhew him any, till he ſaid they were not for himſelf, they were for his captain; while I was taking the ſtockings down, he took a bit of paper out of his pocket, and ſaid he wanted a dozen of men's white ſilk low priced ones, ſix pair of higher price fine ones, and ſix pair of ladies white ſilk, three pair of men's black, and three pair of coloured, and one dozen of patent ſilk; them I told him I had not in the houſe; I ſhewed him part of them; he ſaid if I would bring them to his lodgings, No. 1, Bow-lane, Cheapſide, at five o'clock, the captain would be there, I went there at five, and aſked for him, I was ſhewed up ſtairs into a dining room, and he was up two pair of ſtairs; he came down ſtairs; I ſaid where is the captain? he ſaid he is not come in, I ſhall ſtep with the ſtockings, and be back with the money in five minutes; for perhaps he may not keep all the ſtockings, them that he keeps I ſhall bring the money for, and he aſked me to make him a bill of them, I told him no, I would not make a bill, as I did not know who they were for, or whether he would keep them all, but I had an account on a bit of paper, and he took that with him, and the ſtockings off from the table; when he had got the ſtockings under his arm, he took a pair of patent ſilk ſtockings and put into his pocket, and ſaid, I will ſhew theſe to the captain, if he likes them, you may get him a dozen of them, then he had got the ſtockings under his arm; it ſtruck me he was going to rob me; I took my hat and was following of him, he looked behind and ſaw me, and he knocked at the door oppoſite, and ſaid to the woman, will you walk in Madam, and ſhe came in and began to talk about the weather, or ſomething or another, he went off, and I waited there two hours; I never ſaw him after till the Wedneſday following, when he was taken with the patent ſilk ſtockings on, I ſaw them taken off his legs, there was a bit of orange colour ſilk in the patent ſilk ſtockings in the top; the others that he pawned had a mark on the foot.

That is uſual?——It had been wrought in by ſome means or other; it was not half an inch long.

Are you ſure the man you found in the Compter was the ſame man?——I am poſitive that is the man, I have no doubt at all about it.

THOMAS TIBBALS ſworn.

I called at Mr. Blackburn's with an order on the 24th of June, the priſoner at the bar came in while I was there, he ſaid he wanted to look at ſome low priced mens ſilk ſtockings; Mr. Blackburn reached them down, he ſaid he wanted two or three dozen, Mr. Blackburn ſaid he had them at the trimmers, and ſhould have them in the courſe of an hour or two, accordingly the priſoner left an order directed to No. 1, in Bow-lane; I let Mr. Blackburn have ſome of the ſtockings that the priſoner had, I ſold him a dozen of mens white ſilk ſtockings, and ſix pair of womens; and the ſix pair of mens he parcelled out, and I ſaw Mr. Blackburn go out of the ſhop with ſome ſtockings; I took the priſoner in Saint George's Fields the day the balloon went up, about eleven weeks ago, I think it was the Wedneſday or Thurſday; after he had been in the ſhop, there was another gentleman with him, he came back with me, and I aſked him what he had done with the ſtockings, and he told me he had pawned ſix pair, ſix pair he had at his lodgings, and a dozen and half he had left with Captain Richardſon, I brought him to Mr. Blackburn's ſhop, and when the conſtable took charge of him, he would not give any direction to this Captain Richardſon; in examining his pockets the conſtable found in my preſence a duplicate for ſix pair of ſtockings, and he had two or three bills upon him on ſome of the firſt houſes in town that were paſt due.

Priſoner. Was not you in Mr. Blackburn's ſhop?——Yes.

You heard when I agreed with Mr. Blackburn for the prices? — There was no agreement at all, you ſaid you was not particular to prices; you left an order for them.

Priſoner to Blackburn. What time was it when you brought them ſtockings home to my lodgings? — Five o'clock, but I underſtood they were for the Captain.

Priſoner. I bought the ſtockings in the ſhop; I told him to bring them to my lodgings.

Court to Proſecutor. Did you ſell the ſtockings to him in the ſhop?——No.

Proſecutor. We enquired for Captain Richardſon, but could not find him.

CHARLES PORTER ſworn.

I took in half a dozen pair of ſilk ſtockings about ſix or ſeven in the evening.

Are you ſure it was in the evening?—— He had ſix and thirty ſhillings upon them; he was a quarter of an hour in the ſhop; we have frequently new goods brought in to pledge by ſhop-keepers; I took him for the owner.

TIMOTHY HARRISON ſworn.

Theſe ſtockings I took off the priſoner's legs; I have had them and the others in my poſſeſſion ever ſince.

(Depoſed to)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

On the 24th of June I went to Mr. Blackburn's, I told him I had an order for one dozen of patent ſilk-ſtockings, one dozen of white ſize pair of ladies, three pair of black, and three pair of coloured; he ſaid nobody could ſell me better; he ſhewed me the ſtockings, and I appointed five o'clock for him to bring them home; he brought them home without a bill, I gave him pen, ink, and paper, and he wrote a bill, and I took one pair of the patent ſtockings to my own uſe; and now Mr. Blackburn indicts me for feloniouſly ſtealing, but I dare ſay you ſee it is not ſtealing where a perſon ſells goods, and brings them home, and delivers a bill of parcels; I went to the New York Coffee-houſe to ſee for the gentleman I had the order from, but he was not there, and coming back I met two acquaintances, who aſked me to ſpend the evening with them, and I did not return to my lodgings; I pawned ſix pair of the ſtockings. Now, my Lord, and gentlemen of the jury, I leave it to you, whether this is ſtealing or no.

Court to Proſecutor. I underſtand you ſaying you had not ſold the ſtockings to him?——No, my Lord, it is no bill, it is only a memorandum of the ſtockings.

Priſoner. It is a bill, it is a fair bill; "Bought of Robert Blackburn."

(Court looking at the bill.)

How long has this paper been in your poſſeſſion? — Ever ſince the priſoner was committed.

Look at it carefully before you anſwer my queſtion; is that paper in the ſame ſtate it was when it firſt came into your poſſeſſion?——It is in the ſame ſtate it was; it has been worn and torn about, and in my pocket all the ſeſſions.

Look at the top of the paper, upon your oath, is not there a line cut off from the top of that paper?——I will not ſay that there is not, it may be torn off.

Is not that paper your hand-writing?— Yes.

Then you can ſay whether there was another line upon the top of it?——There might be, before I cut off the ſheet of paper which I gave him in the room.

I aſk you now, upon your oath, was there not a line upon it? ——I will not ſay whether there was or was not, if there was another line it was my name that was upon it.

Was not the firſt line "Bought of Robert Blackburn."

I believe that was upon the paper.

No

Now give me the paper; who adviſed you to cut that line off the paper?——I did not cut it off, it was tore off.

It is not torn but cut, and upon the credit of that, the Jury will decid who did cut that off?——I do not know that any body did.

That never was tore off by accident.

Court. Gentlemen of the Jury, however guilty the priſoner may be, his piece of evidence that now appears, materially affects the credit of the proſecutor, who is the principal witneſs; and where there is a meaſuring caſt, perhaps you may hardly think it ſafe to rely upon it; if the ſtockings were ſold to the priſoner, and they were delivered, it will not be a felony, provided there was a complete ſale, and only a failure in payment.

Tibbal. I ſaw the bill at Guildhall, if I look at it now I can tell, (looks at it) yes, there is a line off, which was, I remember, "Bought of Robert Blackburn" but there was no name at all of the purchaſe.

NOT GUILTY.

Court to Mr. Blackburn. Whoever adviſed you to make that alteration in the paper, gave you very bad advice, it is not the conduct of any perſon that proſecutes for public juſtice.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

837. ELEANOR ARMSTRONG, aged ſeventeen, was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 29th day of July, one check apron, value 1s. a frock, value 3d. a pair of ſtockings, value 3d. a petticoat, value 3d. two caps, value 6d. a ſhirt, value 1s. a handkerchief, value 1s. the property of Martha Gray; one ſhirt, value 1s. a pair of breeches, value 10s. the property of John Johnſon.

The things were found at different pawnbrokers, upon the priſoner's voluntary confeſſion.

GUILTY, 10d.

Fined 1s. and paſſed to her pariſh.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

838. ABRAHAM PROSSER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 28th day of July laſt, ſixteen pounds of moiſt ſugar, the property of perſons unknown.

There being no evidence to affect the priſoner, he was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

839. GEORGE KITCHIN and JOHN WINSHALL were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 15th of September, four gallons of rum, value 30s. the property of John Drinkall.

There being no evidence againſt the priſoners, they were

BOTH ACQUITTED.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

840. WILLIAM HALES was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 4th of July laſt, twelve pounds weight of tobacco, value 12s. the property of a perſon, or perſons, unknown.

JOSHUA GREGGS ſworn.

I am an officer of the cuſtoms, and ſuperviſor of the watch, the priſoner was a watchman of the cuſtoms; I happened on the 3d of July to watch a lighter near Billinſgate; on the 4th of July, in the morning, I was informed that William Hale was committed committed to the Poultry Compter, upon which, knowing that I had apppointed him to the lighter of tobacco the night before, I went to examine this lighter, and found that a hogſhead was plundered; he was ſet on the ſecond watch, that commenced from twelve at night, till ſix in the morning; there were five or ſix pounds gone out of the hogſhead, I only ſpeak to the beſt of my judgment.

Can you ſay with certainty that ſome of it was miſſing?——Yes.

Mr. Garrow. Was you ſupervisor that morning?——Yes.

The priſoner was employed then, as he had been on other occaſions as an extra watchman?——Yes, two or three years.

Was he employed in the India-houſe?——It was his duty if he had ſeen anybody plundering theſe lighters to ſtop them, and bring them down to his Majeſty's Ware-houſe, the priſoner was deemed in the Cuſtom-houſe as an honeſt man.

JOHN HUSSEY ſworn.

I am an apprentice to Mr. Jefferys, in Thames-ſtreet, he is an ironmonger; I firſt ſaw him with this tobacco about him, oppoſite to Dice's-key, between one and two; to the beſt of my knowledge and judgment, there were twenty four or twenty five pound, there was as much as would fill a large hay baſket; my maſter ſtopped him, the tobacco was concealed in his coat, and his pockets, and up as high as his breaſt, he had a great coat on, it was in the pockets of his great coat, and in the pockets of the other, it was buttoned up between his great coat and waiſtcoat; when my maſter ſtopped him, he aſked what he had there, he ſaid he had a little tobacco from on board a ſhip.

Did he ſay what ſhip?—No.

Did he deſcribe what ſort of a ſhip?—No.

Did he uſe he word ſhip, or lighter?—Ship; my maſter charged the watch with him; I went by my maſter's orders to get a conſtable, and during the time he came down, I aſſiſted him in taking the tobacco from the priſoner; the priſoner ſaid, pray let me throw the tobacco into a paſſage, which leads to our houſe by a private door, but that was objected to; I told him not to throw it in, but throw it out before the watchman who had charge of him, which he rather ſeemed to object to; and when the tobacco was all thrown out from his clothes, I went and fetched a baſket from out of the ſhop, and put it in, and I had much to do to preſs it down, and after preſſing it, and kneeling upon it, there was more than would fill the baſket; the priſoner very much objected to be tied.

Mr. Garrow. How happened you to be out at that time in the morning?——I was with my maſter.

What were you doing?——My maſter had a few friends at his country houſe, and in going home with his friends he was inſulted by the watch, he told the watchman he did not underſtand his meaning in being inſulted; he went home with his friends, and came back to his houſe, and begged of me to go with him to the watch-houſe, I went to the watch-houſe, and enquired into the ill behavour, and ill treatment of the watchmen towards him, they did not ſeem to pay any attention to what he ſaid; coming to the door I met the priſoner.

Was anybody with you when you met the priſoner?—No.

Where is your maſter's country houſe?—At Hackney.

What time did you return?—Near ten.

A little jolly?—Not at all.

How had he ſpent his time till half paſt one?——In going home with his friends, in coming back, and going to the watch-houſe; he went home with his friends to Water-lane, near the Cuſtom-houſe, he returned between ten and eleven.

What did he do with himſelf from that time till half paſt one?——He went to the watch-houſe.

Was not your maſter out of humour that night?——I do not know that he was.

Was he or was he not out of humour?—He was not Sir.

Do you mean to ſwear that?—Yes, he was in as good humour as he is generally.

Then

Then this good humoured man, at half paſt ten went out ſettling a diſpute; do you mean to ſwear that he was in perfect good humour, and that he ſtaid three hours and a half?—He was two hours and a half.

Then this good humoured man was two hours and a half ſettling a diſpute, you admit that?—Well then, Sir, it ſhall be ſo.

Do you remember this priſoner ſtating, that ſomebody had ſtolen this tobacco, and that he ran after them and picked it up?—No.

Was he bailed afterwards?—I heard ſo.

What Judge bailed him?——I do not know.

Do not you know it was one of the Judges of the King's Bench?—I preſume nobody elſe can.

Do you remember your maſter ſaying anything about paying the piper for all this?—What is paying the piper?

Did you never hear him ſay any thing of that import?—No.

He never did ſay it?——No, not till the tranſaction happened.

Ho! ho! how long have you been an ironmonger, they have ſpoiled you very much! did not your maſter ſay ſomething of this ſort, that the watchman having uſed him very ill, he had reſolved to make the priſoner ſuffer for it?—No, Sir.

You ſwear he did not?—I will, he never ſaid he would take up any watchman, or make a watchman ſuffer for it.

Was not you in liquor?—I never was any ways diſguiſed in liquor.

Did this tranſaction happen as you have ſtated it?—Yes.

Are you ſure the priſoner is the perſon on whom the tobacco was found?—Yes.

HUMPHRY JEFFRYS ſworn.

I am an ironmonger, I have nothing more to ſay than what my young man has related; on the 3d of July my friends came to ſee me at Hackney, and ſtaid till ten; at ten I arrived in Thames-ſtreet, I then went with them to Water-lane, and went from their houſe between ten and eleven, and I ſaw ſome very ſuſpicious people; I ſays to one of the watchmen, I wiſh you would give ſome little attendance, for I ſee ſome people that appear very ſuſpicious; this is a watchman whoſe name I do not know, but I gave information to the conſtables; his reply was, d——n you, I do not know anybody looks more ſuſpicious than yourſelf, and if you do not get away I will ſend you to the Compter or the watch-houſe, and I thought he would; I told him I would pay him another viſit, and I went to my friends, and ſtaid half an hour, then I came back, and ſaw this watchman off his ſtand, and two men attempting to ſteal ſomething; I then went and took my young man, the laſt witneſs, to the watch-houſe, to make a complaint to the conſtable of the night, and to the watchmen, and he went with me to the watch-houſe, and when we got there he was gone his rounds, and I ſtaid there till he came in, and in coming back I ſtopped the priſoner at the bar, very much ſtuffed, I imagined he had ſomething that was not his own property; there was nobody with him.

At that time he was quite a ſtranger to you?——Yes, I never ſaw him before, to the beſt of my knowledge; I ſtopped him near Dice key gate-way, he was walking towards the Cuſtom-houſe, I aſked him what he had there, he ſaid a little tobacco; I aſked him where he got it from, he ſaid from on board a ſhip; I charged him with the watch, who was near me, he went into a paſſage, and there he begged to unload himſelf; I ſaw the tobacco pulled from him, he had it all about him, particularly about the ſkirts of his great coat.

Had he any between his coat and waiſtcoat?—I am not particular to that, I gave charge of him and the tobacco; my young man put it into a baſket, like a hay baſket, and he had a good deal of trouble to put it in, but that may be the lightneſs of it, the conſtable has had it ever ſince.

Mr. Garrow. It was not till the third examination that the priſoner was committed, did you attend at the firſt and ſecond?——I did.

Did you tell your ſtory?——Yes, my ſervant did not attend; I told my ſtory as I have done now, with the ſame particulars, the firſt, ſecond, and third time.

You ſwore to your account, did not you?——I did not.

Did you at the ſecond?—I did not.

Did not you receive notice of the news of the perſons that would be bail?——I did.

Was he going the direct way to the Cuſtom-houſe?—No, I think not, the direct way is the foot path, he was in the road way.

Upon your oath, was he or was he not in the direct road to the Cuſtom-houſe?—He was not, becauſe he was not on the foot path.

We have had evidence that you are a good natured man, do not put yourſelf in a paſſion, I will have an anſwer if I ſit here till midnight; upon your oath, was he in the direct way to the Cuſtom-houſe?——Upon my oath I do not believe that to be the direct road for a foot paſſenger, becauſe he was behind the corner of ſome buildings.

I aſk you, Sir, whether that ſtreet is not the direct road to the Cuſtom-houſe?——It is certainly; but I will not be brow beat by any man.

Nor am I ſo young in my profeſſion to be brow beat by the greateſt ironmonger in the kingdom; the man was in Thames-ſtreet, and Thames-ſtreet was in the way to the Cuſtom-houſe?—Yes; when it was weighed it weighed twelve pounds and three quarters, but from the appearance it was more.

Was that caſk out of which it was taken ever weighed or no?——I know nothing of the caſk.

Do you know whether it was weighed or no?——I do not know.

What ſort of tobacco was it?——It was tied up as tobacco generally appears out of ſhips.

Unmanufactured?—I am not a judge of it.

Do you happen to know what it is called by thoſe that are?——I do not.

Have you looked at it?——I have not.

How ſoon muſt this man have come within the view of the watchmen of the Cuſtom-houſe if he had gone on?—In ten minutes.

What account did he give of himſelf before the Mayor?——That he ſaw a man drop it, and he ran and took it up, and was going to carry it to the Cuſtom-houſe, and he produced a white bag.

Would it have been the cauſe of this man's diſcharge from his employment as a watchman if he had been found abſent without ſuch an excuſe as that he was going to carry tobacco to the Cuſtom-houſe?—I am ſo much unacquainted with the Cuſtom-houſe buſineſs that I do not know it.

Court. It appears to me ſuch as comes from abroad?——I only ſaw it ſeparated about; my young man and him took it up, he did not come the foot path, but turned into that corner.

Was not you near enough to obſerve whether he obſerved you or not?—I do not think he did ſee me; he might ſee the watchman oppoſite.

Mr. Garrow. Did I hear right that you do not think he ſaw you?——I think not, at the time he was paſſing; the conſtable has had the tobacco ever ſince.

JOSEPH FENNEL ſworn.

Mr. Jeffrys ſent his young man to the watch-houſe; I came to the watch-houſe, Mr. Jeffrys was there with the priſoner; Mr. Jeffrys ſeemed to be very troubleſome, and aſked what watchmen I had on; he ſat there two hours, and was very troubleſome; indeed I went down when he ſaid the tobacco was in Mr. Jeffry's paſſage; he ſhewed me the tobacco; I have had it ever ſince; it is now in Court. (Produced.) it is now unmanufactured as the other was.

Mr. Garrow. I believe this is like a great many thouſands of hogſheads, ſo that if you had loſt it out of your pocket laſt night, you could not have ſworn to it to-day?—Not at all, I have not compared it at all.

Fennel.

Fennel. The prisoner told me going along, that he had got the tobacco from on board a ship, that is all that he said.

Mr. Garrow. Mr. Jeffrys had been at the watch-house some time?—He was there a long while, and when I came back he said the watchmen had been using him very ill, I took the watchman off for his abuse.

Mr. Jeffrys was a little out of humour that night?—I believe he was, to the best of my knowledge.

He is not a good natured man in his cups?—I have been a constable in that part three years, I do my duty as much as I can.

Then you would not by choice, if you had a parcel of stolen goods, come through your beat?—We do our duty as well as we can, I belong to the same employ as the prisoner; I had the first charge of the lighter that evening, it was all safe at twelve, no tobacco was missing; in the morning the head of one of the hogsheads was out, and about six pounds gone; I could not know the tobacco again; all tobaccos that come to the keys are in that way; the ship watchman was not there at six in the morning; I have known the prisoner three years.

Is Thames-street the nearest way from that lighter to the Custom-house?—Much handier than going through the keys for the casks, I should have come that way myself.

I need hardly ask you what his general reputation was, was it a good one?——I never heard any complaint in the world; he has a pretty place in the India House; I do not believe this quantity of tobacco could come out of that hole.

There is a vast deal of this tobacco smuggled, as we all know?—Yes, it is a common practice.

The prisoner called four witnesses who gave him a good character.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the first London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

841. CONRAD FAUDE was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 6th day of September, 46lb. of lump sugar, value 20s. the property of John Hawes and Thomas Slack.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Justice GOULD.

---

842. HENRY SHEPHERD was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 28th day of July last, one leather trunk, value 25s. the property of James Seasons.

JAMES PLOWMAN sworn.

I live with Mr. Seasons, a trunk-maker in the Haymarket; on the 28th of July, he lost a trunk, I saw the prisoner standing at the door, as I was below in the cellar, about half past nine in the morning, this trunk was at the door close to where the prisoner stood, and I saw him take the trunk away from the door, I went up to Michael Thomas, who was in the shop, and I and Thomas overtook the prisoner about 150 yards off, with the trunk on his shoulder.

(The trunk deposed to.)

MICHAEL THOMAS sworn.

I pursued and took the prisoner with the last witness.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I am brought to the bar under a very great disadvantage, owing to Counsellor Fielding not being in Court; for that same morning I came from the warehouse I belonged to at Mile-end, to a gentleman in Suffolk-street, one Mr. Heron, an apothecary, that has often befriended me; I sat at a door to rest myself, and a man that was decently dressed asked me to carry a trunk for him to the Blind Beggar in Whitechapel, chapel, and wait till he came; he went away, and I waited some time, and he did not come, I thought he was gone to the trunkmakers; then the man came up again and put a six-pence into my hand, and said that was the trunk; I put the six-pence in my pocket, and took the trunk and followed him, he crossed over to the corner of another street, and I was taken, and in the confusion I was in, and a mob gathering, I lost sight of the man.

Plowman. He said he was going to carry it to Whitechapel, but he was in the road to Oxford-road; he said before the Justice he was taking it to Whitechapel.

GUILTY.

To be confined six months in the House of Correction.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

843. WILLIAM PARKER and SOPHIA GIRTON were indicted for that they, on the 13th day of July last, one piece of false feigned and counterfeit money and coin to the likeness and similitude of six-pence, falsly, deceitfully, feloniously, and traiterously did forge, counterfeit, and coin, against the statute.

(The witnesses examined apart at the request of Mr. Garrow Prisoner's Counsel.)

(The Case opened by Mr. Reeves.)

WILLIAM SEASONS sworn.

I belong to the Sessions House on Clerkenwell-green, on the 13th of July, I went to a house on Back-hill, on information that there were some coiners at work, I took one Taylor with me, and one William Rose Trip, I went between eleven and twelve, I went up stairs into the room, and saw Sophia Girton sitting on the foot of the bed, she had a file in her hand, and a number of sixpences to the best of my knowledge, and there were on the table, sand-paper, brimstone, and these kind of things that are made use of in coining, and a number of sixpences (handed up) a phial of quicksilver, and some clippings; when I went into the room, says I, you are hard at work, she got up and fainted away, she begged I would not be in a hurry with her, she said, it was that rogue had brought her to it, she fainted on the bed for five minutes when she awoke, I said, what rogue do you mean? and she said, that rogue Parker: I found some punches.

Court. Have you any sixpences that was finished?—We went again, and in a closet we found these two sixpences among some rags.

Court. They are as much like any thing else as sixpences: they are not like the similitude of a sixpence.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Mr. Vernon. I beg leave to inform your Lordship, that I did not attend the examination, if I had I should not have brought it here.

Court. I guessed very much, Mr. Vernon, that that was the case.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commission of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middlesex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL, in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wednesday the 14th of SEPTEMBER, 1785, and the following Days;

Being the SEVENTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND,

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER VII. PART IX.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noster Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the City of LONDON, &c.

844. JOHN ASTIL, alias AUSTIN, alias BROWN, was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Thomas Moore, about the hour of two in the night, on the 9th of July laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein one metal watch, with the outſide caſe covered with black tortoiſeſhell, value 5l. his property.

The Caſe opened by Mr. Garrow.

The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of the priſoner.

ANN FOOTMAN ſworn.

I was ſervant to Mr. Moore, of Moorfields, he had no ſervant but me.

Do you know on Saturday night the 9th of July, how the houſe was left?——Every thing was left ſafe, all the watches were in the ſhop, we ſupped in the ſhop, and when we went to bed, about five minutes before twelve, every thing was ſafe; we were not alarmed in the night; my maſter called me about four, he got up about three; the ſhop was broke open, and all the watches gone; the lead-light was taken out of the back window, and taken into the garden; there was no caſement; I am ſure the light was there when I went to bed ſafe, at duſk they got over two or three people's gardens out of Chriſtopher's-alley; there are two walls that the perſon got over, they are as high as that wainſcotting.

Had anybody called on your maſter the night before?——Yes, about nine in the evening, my maſter was not at home, a man came and aſked if my maſter was at home, I ſaid no; I never ſaw the priſoner ſince; he was meanly dreſſed; he ſaid his buſineſs was not material, he would call again another time.

Did you obſerve the colour of his coat?——No, I did not particularly notice that; There were above fifty watches gone.

Should you know the man again?——No, I could not poſitively ſwear to him.

Priſoner. I want to aſk her a queſtion.

Court. You beſt judge the neceſſity of your queſtion, but I before-hand appriſe you that ſhe has ſaid nothing that affects you.

Priſoner. I ſhall not aſk her any queſtions, my Lord.

SAMUEL HAWSE ſworn.

I am the principal workman of the deceaſed Mr. Moore, Mr. Moore came to me between four and five this morning, he told me his houſe had been broke open, I examined the place about, and found a button.

(The

(The button produced.)

Is it in the ſame ſtate it was found in?—Yes.

Who has had it?—Mr. Moore had it when he died, and I found it under the board; when I looked over his effects, there was ſeveral watches hung by the window, and to get at them a perſon muſt reach over the ſhopboard.

Court. Any perſon from without who wanted them, would not lean over the ſhop board to get at them?—No, Sir, from within-ſide the watches were all taken away, that watch in the black tortoiſeſhell cover that I took to Mr. Moore the preceding evening was miſſed, it was an old watch that had been repaired: I was at the houſe when a neighbour of Mr Moore's came in, and ſaid there was a man went by with ſuch a coat and button on, accordingly they ran after him and took him, he had a coat with the cloth correſponding to that button, and there was a button wrenched from it, it correſponded.

Did you hear the priſoner acknowledge the button to be his?—No, I heard him ſay he had been at a fight, and loſt a button.

SAMUEL UPHAM ſworn.

I live next door but one to the late Mr. Moore's ſhop, I keep a public houſe.

After the robbery at Mr. Moore's did he give you any information of any particular circumſtance?—He ſent for me on Sunday morning about half paſt ſix, and ſhew'd me a metal button ſhanked, that he ſaid he found in the ſhop.

Look at that button?——I am ſure this is the button; he gave the button into my hand, ſays he, there is a number of people that comes to your houſe, take it and enquire for any perſon that wears ſuch a button; accordingly I took it, and kept it three quarters of an hour, and delivered it to him again, then he told me what had happened, and deſired me if anybody ſhould happen to come to our houſe with ſuch a button and coloured coat, to take notice of them; he ſaid, he found it under the vice board in the ſhop; I told him I did not ſee anybody that anſwered the deſcription then, but on the next day about eleven in the forenoon, I was at the door ſerving two people with ſome liquor, I ſaw the priſoner come by with the ſame coloured coat, and the button was off; his coat was buttoned and his hands in his pockets; he turned his head towards the window, he made no ſtop, but I thought he walked rather ſlow, that was before he came to me, then I took particular notice that he wanted a button, and I went and told Mr Moore that I thought the man was gone by that committed the robbery; Mr. Moore, me, and another, purſued him down Crown-alley, there we loſt ſight of him; we ſaw him again, and he was ſtopped, he made no reſiſtance whatever.

When you ſtopped him did you obſerve whether his coat had loſt a button?——At the Juſtice's I did, it was from his breaſt, it appeared to be torn out, it being ſet on with cloth of the ſame colour; he did not deny that the button matched with his own, but ſaid that he was in an affray on Wedneſday in Kingſland road, and might loſe his button there, and another perſon might pick it up and drop it at Mr. Moore's, enquiring for a watch, might throw it over the ſaſh; but the ſaſh did not run.

Court. Then he did not ſay poſitively whether it was his button or not?——No, he ſeemed to ſignify that it matched with it.

Was he then told where the button was found?—No.

Priſoner. What is the reaſon you was not at Mr. Wilmot's to give your evidence?——I was there, but nobody was called in but Mr. Moore, and the man that took you.

Did I refuſe going with you?—No, you went along eaſily, you ſaid you would go anywhere with me.

Was not I ſearched at Mr. Wilmot's?—Yes.

You remember there was no ſum of money found about me?——I did not ſee him ſearched.

INNO-

INNOCENT EKINS sworn.

I was present when the prisoner was apprehended; being very well acquainted with Mr. Moore, I was with him on the Monday morning after the robbery, considering of an advertisement, when about eleven Mr. Upham, who is a near neighbour, came and knocked at Mr. Moore's door, and said the man was gone by which had the button on, he went down Crown-Alley, I followed him, I saw no such man, he then went up a little alley that leads into Sun-street, I followed and saw a man going on, then I observed the colour of the coat and button, which appeared to be like that, and there was a button wanting on his coat, he said he lost a button fighting in Kingsland-road.

Did you make any remark on the rest of his dress?——He had an apron on, and when the apron was pulled up his breeches were ragged, that was all the observation I made, I cannot say whether they were ragged or torn by accident.

SAMUEL HARPER sworn.

I am a constable, I had the coat from the prisoner's back, Mr. Moore the prosecutor, and one of the witnesses brought the prisoner to me on Monday the 11th of July, and gave me charge of him, I took him to Justice Wilmot's, and they produced a button that they found in the house after the robbery, which exactly corresponded with those on his coat; he said he had had a fight in Kingsland-road, and lost his button there, and that it was possible that the person who did the robbery, might bring the button into their house; there was only one button wanting upon it.

Jury. Shew us the coat.

(The coat handed up wanting the third button from the bosom.)

(The Jury ripped off all the buttons, and they were fastened on with cloth of the same colour, the same as the single button found in the shop.

Did you observe any other part of his dress at the time he was before the Magistrate?—His breeches were torn very much behind.

Did it appear to be fair worn, or torn by accident.

I should think it must be torn by accident, they were torn in strips, he did not take off any other of his clothes.

Court. Did he say that was his button, or the button of his coat?——He said he did not know but it might be his button, but if it was his button it was lost at the fight.

Prisoner. I wish for you, and the gentlemen of the Jury to know that man is a thieftaker belonging to Mr. Wilmot's office.

Mr. Harper. I am a shopkeeper and tradesman, I keep a toyshop and chandler's shop; likewise I serve every shop in Bond-street, and all that way.

Jury to the maid. Who sweeps out the shop?——Nobody but myself, I swept it always.

Had it been swept that day?——No, it had not.

Was you much in the shop?——Yes, a great deal.

Was anybody there late in the evening?——No, Sir, nobody came into the shop, because my master was not at home, and I am very sure the button was not there before I went to bed.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

My Lord, I mean to satisfy you, and the gentlemen of the Jury, that I could not be the man that committed this robbery, by calling one Thomas Ireland; two of those witnesses were not on my examination before.

Mr. Garrow. That arises from Mr. Moore's being dead since he was examined, which makes it necessary to call other witnesses.

THOMAS IRELAND sworn.

On the Saturday which is reported to be the night the robbery was done, Mr. Astill

was

was along with me, that was the 9th of August.

What last month?——No, the month before.

Then you do not mean the 9th of August?——Yes, I do; it was last month, now I am sensible it was last month.

Recollect yourself, this is September, you say it was the 9th of August?——I am sure it was, I am positive that night he was with me, on the 9th of August, about six weeks ago, I will not go farther back, it was not June or July.

Where was he, sir, with you on the 9th of August?——I must tell my story as near as I can, and I will do it with as much justice as I can; he called upon me on Saturday evening, he sent for me out of the playhouse, we drank a pint of porter together, and he and I went home together, and my wife was gone to a sister of hers who was in labour in Ratcliff-highway. I live in St. Martin's-lane, we waited at our house till four o'clock.

You remember the time particular by the labour?——I will tell you presently; he told me he was taken up for a robbery in Moorfields; says I, you could not, you was with me that night, my wife's sister was in labour; I said the 9th of August but I was mistaken, I will swear it was on the Saturday night the 14th.

Will you you swear it was the 10th of August?—I will swear it was the Saturday the robbery was committed.

What are you?—I am a carpenter, I live in St. Martin's-lane.

Can you tell us any thing by your books?——I have not my book, it is six or seven weeks ago; I do not come here with a studied story.

Will you undertake to say that it was not in September?——Yes, it is longer ago.

What makes you think it was not July?——I have sworn before he was with me on the Saturday night, on the Monday I saw him in Clerkenwell.

On Saturday the 9th of August?——I will swear it was the 9th of August.

Court. Whereabouts in St. Martin's-lane do you live?——Next door but one to May's-buildings; I have lodged at the butcher's shop about twelve months.

Who do you lodge with?——The landlady who keeps the house, she keeps a publichouse in Red Lyon Square, her name is Treble, one Mr. Buir keeps the butcher's shop next door to Mr. Prellove, there is a baker on the other side whom I do not know.

Who do you work with?——At Covent Garden theatre.

Court to Jury. This is an awkward circumstance, such a one as will make any jury pause much upon it, at the same time it is but a circumstance, and I must say that I do not think it by any means a conclusive one; you, however, are the proper judges, it is not for me to impress upon you what I think upon it, but I confess, as the man's life is to depend on a single circumstance, I could wish that circumstance had been more conclusive; but if it is so convincing in your minds that you cannot get over it, you will discharge your consciences; if there is a probability that it was not his button, if there is a possibility that it was not his button, perhaps you may think it too much to take away his life upon a single circumstance.

(The Jury desired to withdraw.)

Court. Gentlemen of the Jury, before you withdraw, my brother Gould wishes me to mention to you what is extremely proper, that though many people have been convicted upon circumstances only, yet one cannot recollect a case in which a man has been convicted on one single circumstance, several circumstances combining together have great weight with a Jury: but where there are no circumstances to corroborate each other, but a case depends on one single circumstance; there to be sure the weight of it is very much abated.

The Jury retired for some time, and returned with a verdict

NOT GUILTY.

Foreman of the Jury to Priſoner. Be careful in future for you have had a hairs breadth eſcape.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

845. CHARLES RICE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 31ſt day of Auguſt laſt, ſeventeen pair of ſtone ſhoe-buckles ſet in ſilver, value 20l. twenty two pair of ſtone knee buckles ſet in ſilver, value 10l. one ſtone ſtock buckle, value 1l. 5s. three pair of gold enamelled buttons, value 3l. 3s. three pair of ſtuds, value 10s. 6d. one pair of gold buttons, value 25s. ſeventeen ſtone knee buckles ſet in ſilver, value 10l. ſixteen lockets ſet in gold, value 20l. twenty one gold rings, value 3l. 10s. ſeven twiſted gold wire rings, value 1l. 10s. five gold trinkets, value 2l. two gold watches, value 22l. a baſe metal watch, value 2l. 2s. two baſe metal watches covered with tortoiſeſhell, value 20s. eight chryſtal rings ſet with hair in gold, value 8l. 8s. a ſhirt buckle, value 4s. a ſtone pin, value 4s. nine ſeals, value 30s. one ditto ſet in ſilver value 2s. a caſe of trinkets, value 4s. 6d. two ſteel watch chains, value 21s. four ſilk watch ſtrings, value 12s. ſeven morroco pocket books, value 35s. two pair of baſe metal pepper boxes plated with ſilver, value 8s. three glaſs ſmelling bottles with ſilver tops, value 7s. eighteen pair of gold ear rings, value 1l. 11s. 6d. one other gold watch with two inſide caſes made of gold and an outſide caſe made of baſe metal, value 12l. and a mahogany ſhew-glaſs, with glaſſes fixed therein, value 3l. the property of John Sterling the younger, privily in his ſhop.

JOHN STERLING ſworn.

I know the priſoner by ſeeing him before the Lord Mayor, that was the firſt time, I only prove the property.

ELIZABETH STANHOPE ſworn.

I live at No. 26, in Cornhill, at Mr. Cowe's, a ſilverſmith; I was ſtanding at the window, I ſaw a man go by with a cloak under his arm, it was laſt Wedneſday week, but I do not know the day of the month, it was about ten minutes before ſeven in the evening, and about a few minutes after, I ſaw another man oppoſite the ſhop door with a ſhew-glaſs in his hand, and I ſaw the other man come out, and throw the cloak over the glaſs, and they both went paſt the window where I ſtood; I know nothing more, I know nothing of theſe two men.

How far is your ſhop from the proſecutor's ſhop? — Almoſt oppoſite.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Counſel. What window was you ſitting in? — The kitchen window up one pair of ſtairs.

You had a good opportunity of obſerving the two men from there? — Yes. I obſerved the dreſs of the man that had the cloak, he had a dark coloured coat, nankeen waiſtcoat, his own hair over the ſhoulders, and a hat on his head.

What breeches had he? — I did not take notice.

JOHN STRAHAN ſworn.

I am a ſhopman to the proſecutor, on Wedneſday the 31ſt of Auguſt laſt, about ſeven in the evening, a woman and a boy came into the proſecutor's ſhop to buy a pair of buckles while I was engaged with the woman and a boy, the man came into the ſhop, I looked at him, and aſked him what he wanted, and he went down the ſteps to the door, in the mean while the woman and the boy kept me in converſation reſpecting the buckles, they bought the buckles, and they went out of the ſhop, I ſaw the woman go out of the ſhop without a cloak on her ſhoulders; ſhe was a meaniſh looking woman, I followed to the door ſuſpecting nothing of it, when I returned back I miſſed the ſhew-glaſs.

Do you know the man that came into the ſhop if you were to ſee him? I think I ſhould.

Are

Are you ſure you ſhould know him?—I believe I ſhould.

Have you ever ſeen him ſince?——Yes, I ſaw him at Guildhall, and then I knew his face, I think he was but a very little time in the ſhop, I ſaw him and another walk backwards and forwards before he came into the ſhop.

Can you undertake to ſay you ſhould know that man that came into the ſhop, and ſtepped out again?——The priſoner I believe is the man.

From the very ſlight opportunity you had of obſerving him, can you ſwear poſitively that is the man?—I cannot poſitively ſwear it, but I believe he is the man.

Did you ſee the man go out as well as the woman and the boy?——Yes, he ſtood with his back to the door, then I ſpoke to him and he went on the ſtep, then I ſaw nothing in his hand, I ſuppoſed he belonged to the woman and the boy, the woman and the boy kept me in talk for a few minutes after he went out.

Jury. In what part of the ſhop was the ſhew-glaſs?—Upon the counter, about a yard and half from the door, my back was to the ſhow-glaſs, I was obliged to watch the woman and the boy.

Mr. Garrow. Your ſhop is but a ſmall one I underſtand?——Yes, in 'Change-alley.

What age might the boy be?—I ſuppoſe about fourteen.

Did he or the woman go out firſt?——I cannot ſay, they both went out together.

ALEXANDER BARLAND ſworn.

I was ſent of an errand for my maſter, Mr. Neaves, at the Fleece and Sun, Threadneedle-ſtreet, and going along, I ſaw a man ſtanding by a ſhew-glaſs under the gateway, in Swithins-rents, when I returned the ſhew-glaſs was uncovered, I was not gone above three or four minutes at furtheſt, the cloak was under his arm, I looked round and ſaw it ſtand, ſays I, friend what have you got here, I do not know what it is, ſaid he, I had only the curioſity to look at it; I aſked him if it was his, no ſays he, it is not mine, I know nothing of it; I aſked him if he knew whoſe it was, ſays he, I believe it is ſome Jew's box, ſays I, it does not look like a Jew's box, it is a ſhew-glaſs, he ſaid he would go and ſee whoſe it was, and I went after him, I brought him back, and ſome of the pocket books were taken out while we went acroſs, and when I brought him back he took ſome things out of his pocket, but what I cannot tell, and threw them into the caſe, and broke the glaſs, and a porter took the caſe up after the things were all put in, and took it away to my maſter's houſe till we found the right owner of it.

Who is that man, do you know him?—Yes, I dare ſay I know him if I ſee him.

Is he in Court now?——This is the man.

Is that the man?——Yes.

This is a very public place where you ſaw him?——Yes, juſt under the gate going up to the Edinborough coffee-houſe, when I firſt ſaw him, he was ſtanding by the arch-way, and the caſe was by him on the ground.

He had not hold of it when you firſt ſaw him?——No.

There was a cloak over it then?—Yes, when I come back again in three or four minutes it was there ſtill, and he was there, and had taken off the cloak, and was looking at it.

There were a number of people paſſing and repaſſing?—No, I ſaw nobody paſs or repaſs at the time.

What time of the day was it?—About ſeven at night.

On the 31ſt of Auguſt?——Yes.

Was it day light?——Yes.

How far up the alley was this caſe?——It was above three or four yards up the alley.

A number of people were paſſing and repaſſing in the ſtreet?—Yes.

EDWARD WHITE ſworn.

About ſeven on Wedneſday was three weeks, the laſt witneſs came to me, and ſaid said, there was a cloak under his arm, and taken some things out of a box that he could did not belong to him; when we came up some of the things were laying on the ground, and this denied having any thing in his pocket, and we then took some things out of his pocket, and threw them into the shew-glass, and broke and shivered it to pieces; we then took the box into the Fleece, and things were in his pocket, numbers of them.

What things were in his pocket?——Among the rest of the things, two or three purses, and some pepper castors; I saw him throw single things out of his pocket, some fell over on the ground, and some fell through into the shew-glass.

Did he make any attempt to go away?——No.

Jury. Could he have made his escape if he liked it?—Yes, Sir, Barland left me the same way, he came to me, and this man followed Barland, he might have gone any way.

Court to Barland. Did you hear him say so?——Yes.

THOMAS EDWARDS sworn.

I was coming up Threadneedle-street, when he was in custody, I saw him take the cloak off the shew-glass, and throw it upon the stones, then he took up the cloak again, and said it belonged to him, and he put it under his arm, then we took him to the public house, and when he came to the public house he chucked it on the bench, and said, he knew nothing of it; the case was then carried upstairs, this was in the alley, and a man had got hold of him by the collar, that was Barland.

Mr. Garrow. Was White with him at the time?——I cannot say.

Pray Mr. Edwards, who are you?—I am one of my Lord Mayor's servants, hall-porter to the Mansion-house, this is the third Mayoralty.

Have you never been a groom?——No, never, in my life.

I ask you upon your oath, have not you within this month called yourself a groom?——No.

(The shop-glass produced and identified.)

ANTHONY HARRISON sworn.

I know nothing of the robbery, I only went to Tom Gray's and found this letter.

Court. We cannot take any notice of the letter unless the prisoner was present?——He was in custody.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was coming through Swithing's-alley, and I saw this box covered with a cloak, it attracted my curiosity, this man came up, and asked me whose box it was, I said, I fancied it belonged to some Jew, I snatched up the cloak, and there was a piece of broken glass dropped out of the cloak, says he, what have you put in there, says I, I have put in nothing, it was a piece of broken glass dropped out of the cloak, I put the cloak over my arm.

Court to Strahan. Nobody else was in the shop?—I saw the shew-glass, just before the woman came into the shop, I passed by it to serve her, I did not see it after.

The prisoner called one witness to his character.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the first London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

846. WILLIAM COOK was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 10th day of June, fifty-seven guineas, value 59l. 17s. one half-crown, value 2s. 6d. one canvas bag, value 1d. one purse, value 6d. and twenty pounds in monies numbered, the property of Charles Lockwood, and one promisory note, value 80l. and one other promisory note, value 60l. the property of the said Charles Lockwood, in the dwelling house of Dorothy Wright, widow.

(The Case opened by Mr. Garrow.)

CHARLES

CHARLES LOCKWOOD sworn.

The prisoner was my servant, I lost my property on the 10th of June, it was in my bed chamber, at the bottom of my box, the bottom was broke out with a chissel; I saw the box about eleven that same day, it was all safe then, and the money and the notes in it, I locked the box, and I locked the room door, and came down again; I locked the key of the bed room, after making the door safe, in the ostlery, it was so till eight or nine at night, then the prisoner at the bar came for twelve shillings, which I gave him; he said he wanted to go and buy him a pair of shoes, I told him to stay till the next day, because I was going out, he said he must go that night; I gave him the key of the ostlery, to get the key of the bed room; he said he wanted to put on a pair of stockings; he brought the key of the ostlery to me, when I was down in our tap, he never gave the key of the bed room to me; I staid there some time, and he went out in the street drinking with the coachman, he said he had not bought the shoes; I went out, and returned in three quarters of an hour, and when I came back to go to bed, I looked for the key of the bed room, which was not there, and I found it in the stable; I went and unlocked the bed room door, it was locked the same as I locked it; I undressed myself, and just as I was going into bed, I thought I heard something make a noise, I got up, and saw nothing; but I saw two letters lay, which had been inside the box; I said to myself, these are my letters, and it surprised me, then I looked further, and I saw the box was broke open, and the money was gone, and the notes, there were fifty seven guineas and a half, and half-a-crown, two banker's notes, one eighty-pound, and the other sixty-pound; in consequence of this loss, I had the prisoner taken up; when the constable took charge of him, he searched him, and found nothing upon him; then he said you cannot hurt me, you have found nothing upon me.

Did he say any thing about finding any thing upon him, before he was searched?—Not to my knowledge, he was discharged by the Mayor, and in consequence of what I heard he was taken up again.

What money was taken from him, when he was taken up a second time?—He was not searched the second time as I know of.

ANN ROSE sworn.

I live at Endfield, just by the Rose and Crown, my father drives chaises, and has done these thirty years, I was going down by the Endfield coach one day, and he asked me to drink in Bishopsgate-street, it was about a month before I spoke of it, and in paying for this pint of beer, he pulled out four or five guineas, I cannot say to a guinea, I said let me shake hands with you? he said that was old Charles's money, and he had been in coop for a week.

Had you any further conversation with him?—No, I saw a purse in his hand, I had heard of Lockwood's robbery, in consequence of which, I mentioned the conversation; nobody was present, he did not tell me who he meant, but I know who old Charles was, but I did not know he had been in coop.

Mr. Keys, Prisoner's Council. What are you?—A servant, I am in place now, I was out of place then.

You used to travel backwards and forwards with this Mr. Seton on the coach box?—No.

You know all the ostlers and people in the Black Swan-yard?—No, Sir.

He voluntarily told you this?—Yes, I had not heard of the robbery, I spoke of it to Mr. Seton as I was going down in the coach one day.

What did you say to Seton about it?—Seton asked me about it.

Was not you promised a reward by Seton if you spoke of this?—No, Sir.

Who was by at the time?—Other passengers.

Do you know Jordan the book-keeper?—Yes, he was not by, nobody was by, as I know of.

THOMAS SEXTON sworn.

This young woman was going down with me somewhere about Bransford-hill, I said to her, give me leave to ask you one question, will you answer me? yes, says she, I will; says I, do you know of one old Charles being robbed? says she, I saw Will with four or five guineas in his hand at the Coach and Horses, and a silk purse, and he said that was the money he had been in coop for a week, upon that I gave information, and he was taken up.

Mr. Keys. How long have you known Ann Rose?—About three years and a half.

Have you known pretty much of her during that time?——Up and down upon my coach, she always paid me.

Do you think she is a person that ought to be believed upon her oath?——I do not know but she may.

Is she a woman of a fair character?——I never saw any thing against her.

MARK JORDAN sworn.

I am a book-keeper at the Four Swans, and have been so these thirty-four years.

Do you know this Ann Rowe?—Yes.

Do you think she is a person to be believed on her oath?—No, I do not.

Mr. Garrow. Then my Lord, I do not ask the Jury to convict a man upon the testimony of such a witness.

Court. That is very handsomely given up; you will acquit the prisoner.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the first London Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

847. JOHN STURLEY was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 12th day of August last, one silver watch, value 40s. a steel chain, value 4d. a trinket, value 2d. the property of Henry Gay, in the dwelling house of Nathaniel Gay.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

848. THOMAS COLEMAN and WILLIAM LOVERIDGE were indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 27th day of August last, four guineas, value 4l. 4s. four half-crown pieces, value 10s. and six shillings in monies numbered, the property of William Hartley, privily from his person.

WILLIAM HARTLEY sworn.

I was walking along, and I was dry, I went into a publick house in Rosemary-lane, last Saturday night was three weeks, to get some beer, about three, and came away about half past nine; I was waiting for some shipmates, I was in liquor when I came away, I paid my reckoning, and felt my gold in a piece of brown paper, four guineas, four half-crowns, some shillings and sixpences, and soon after I found my pocket was picked, and a woman said, I will tell you on Monday who has picked your pocket; I remember feeling the prisoner's hand upon my thigh, one on one side, and one on the other, they both came up to me, and gave me a push, one on one side, and one on the other, the woman was not near me.

ANN HUTTON sworn.

I saw this man at the public house, the 27th of August, he was rather dozing, laying his head on the table; the two women were drinking in the same box, he got up and and went out of doors, and stumbled, and the two prisoners came in, and stumbled against him, and I saw the prisoner Loveridge's hand in his left hand pocket, and I saw Colman put his hand into another pocket and shut it, then they both ran out of the back door.

Thomas Taylor and Joshua Gray apprehended the prisoners, and found nothing upon them.

Prisoner. Mrs. Hutton was in liquor, she said she was very sorry for what she had done.

Prosecutor.

Profecutor. The woman was quite ſober before the magiſtrate.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

849. MICHAEL YOUNG was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 2d day of July laſt, twelve pounds weight of bacon, value 6s. the property of Edward Hall.

The priſoner was taken with the bacon upon him.

GUILTY.

To be confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

850. SARAH ROYSTON was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting John Watts on the King's highway, on the 4th day of Auguſt laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon, and againſt his will, one guinea, value 1l. 1s. ten copper half-pence, and two ſhillings and ſixpence in monies numbered, his property.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

851. THOMAS LESTER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 30th day of Auguſt laſt, two quart pewter pots, value 2s. and eight pint pewter pots, value 4s. the property of William Turner.

The proſecutor and witneſſes not appearing, the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

852. RICHARD PAYNE and THOMAS THOMPSON were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 16th day of Auguſt laſt, two canvaſs ſacks, value 6d. one ſack, value 1d. two keys, value 3d. two hens, value 6d. and one cock, value 6d. the property of John Hedges.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

853. SARAH KEYWOOD was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 24th day of Auguſt laſt, one ſilver table ſpoon, value 12s. the property of William Green.

There being no evidence the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

854. JAMES PILE and MARY SMITH were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 9th day of September, two cotton frocks, value 2s. one ſilk bonnet, value 2s. and one linen towell, value 6d. the property of James Collins.

The proſecuter and witneſſes not appearing, the priſoners were

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

855. CORNELIUS BLAND, THOMAS BLAND and THOMAS LONG were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 2d of Auguſt laſt, one buſhel of apples, value 5s. two dozen of cucumbers, value 3d. the property of Robert Pryke.

Theſe things being picked off the trees and vines, vines, the offence was not within the Act of Parliament.

ALL THREE NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

856. JOHN DIXON was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 26th day of August last, three plate coach glasses, value 40s. the property of John Stanbridge.

GUILTY.

To be confined six months in the House of Correction.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

857. WALTER KELLEY was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 24th day of August last, one man's hat, value 9s. the property of Thomas Cox.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

858. MARY PARKER was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 8th day of April last, two linen table cloths, value 5s. the property of John Hickman.

GUILTY.

To be confined six months in the House of Correction.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

859. MARY HYMER was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 3d day of July last, one silver watch, one steel chain, value 6d. one steel seal, value 6d. and one key, value 1d. the property of Thomas Brown.

THOMAS BROWN sworn.

I am a seafaring man; on the 3d of July I lost a watch; I was going down Angel-gardens, and the prisoner stood at a door, and she asked me to go in, I said I would if she would give me any thing; when I got in she asked me what I was going to give her to drink, I said I had no money, she asked me to stay all night, and I said I could not, having no money; she said I might leave her my watch, no, says I, if I leave her I shall never see her no more; she never left me till she got it from me, which was in the course of a few minutes, she loosed two buttons of my breeches; there were her and two more, but the other two did not touch me, and the prisoner clicked it out of my pocket, and before I got my breeches made fast she was out of my sight, and I cried stop thieves, and they cried thief; it was about eleven at night; it was not a very dark night; I never saw her before; I was in the house with her two or three minutes; I pursued her; she was taken by Mr. Fletcher a few minutes after; I knew her again; the watch was silver, and has never been found; but the gentlewoman where they live, proffered to buy me a watch of three guineas price before the Justice committed her.

Prisoner. The gentleman was at my lodgings, and he said he would take three guineas.

MARGARET SWANSKIN sworn.

On the 3d of July I had occasion to send my girl a few doors down, and looking after her, I saw the prisoner and two more women, and a man, running along, and crying stop thief; the prosecutor ran a few yards till he came to my house; I directed him to Mr. Fletcher.

JOHN

JOHN FLETCHER ſworn.

On the 3d of July I was in bed, I heard the cry of ſtop thief, I enquired the cauſe, and broke open the door, and took them all three to the watch-houſe, I found nothing upon them.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I know nothing of the watch, I never ſaw the gentleman.

GUILTY.

To be confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

860. JOHN MYERS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 19th day of Auguſt laſt, one ſilver table ſpoon, value 9s. the property of James Shakeſhaft.

Mrs. SHAKESHAFT ſworn.

I live in Bethnal-green road, I am wife to James Shakeſhaft; I loſt a ſilver table ſpoon the 19th of Auguſt, it was marked R. I. R. and it had a mildew in the bowl, it lay on the dreſſer about two; I ſaw it there in the kitchen, I miſſed it by four, I went into the yard to take ſome ſtockings off the line, and it was gone.

JAMES SHAKESHAFT ſworn.

On Friday the 19th of Auguſt, about a quarter paſt five, I was coming down Shoreditch, and a perſon ſtopped me, and told me there is a young man that has a large feeder about him, ſays he, if you make haſte you will overtake him; accordingly I went on, and I ſaw him coming back towards me, I looked at him, and he was rather ſhy of me, and he went into a ſhop, and bought a brick or a roll, and began to eat it, I went up to him, ſays I, Myers, you have ſomething about you; he denied it, I took him to a public houſe, and as ſoon as he came in he chucked a handkerchief upon the table among five or ſix more, and I heard the ſpoon fall out of the handkerchief, the bowl fell on the table, and this part went on the ſettle, I took the priſoner into a back room, and I ſearched him, and found nothing elſe upon him; I ſaid, you muſt go with me, no, ſays he, do not take me, you may as well, well it; he ſtruggled, and I threw him acroſs a chair, he ſaid, I had broke his back, I took him to the Juſtice, and produced the ſpoon, I thought it was like mine, but I adverti ſed it, and I came home about two in the morning, ſays I to my wife, do you know this ſpoon, ſays ſhe, I have loſt a ſpoon, and would not tell you, but I have been crying my eyes out about it; ſays ſhe, let me look at the bowl, I can tell by that, and ſhe looked, and there was the mildew.

(The ſpoon produced, having ſome mildew on the bowl, and marked, depoſed to.)

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Council, to Priſoner. Do you chuſe to have John Latham called? —Yes.

JOHN LATHAM ſworn.

I was in the ſame public houſe where the ſpoon was brought in, I ſaw a man bring it in, and ſell it to one Iſaac Hagwine for four ſhillings; it was on a Friday, I cannot recollect the day of the month, it was a little above dining time; it was after twelve, I ſaw it ſold, and when it was ſold, this young man, the priſoner, came in afterwards, and he being a ſilverſmith, a ſilver buckle-maker, the young man thought he was a better judge of ſilver than him, and he gave it him to ſell for him, and he went out to ſell it, and then was brought back again by Shakeſhaft; I was in the public houſe when the priſoner and Shakeſhaft came in; they came in together.

The priſoner called five more witneſſes to his character.

Court to Proſecutor. What are you? — I am a headborough; I know the priſoner very well.

Where did you know him, and how? — My Lord, I have had him in cuſtody.

Jury. Had you any intimation that was your ſpoon? —— I did not know it was any property then, for I did not know that I had loſt one.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

861. GEORGE SPOONLEY and JOHN LEWIS were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 6th day of July laſt, 17 live tame pigeons, value 10s. the property of James Duncan, Eſquire.

JAMES DUNCAN, Eſq; ſworn.

Between the 5th and 6th of July laſt, my ſtable was unrooſed; I was there in the evening, a little before eleven, I kept my pigeons in the hay loft for my own amuſement, and in the morning, between four and five, I was informed the door was open, and that I had been robbed.

JOHN TYE ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoners in the morning, about half after two, in a field juſt by my houſe, coming down the road from Captain Duncan's, I ſaw theſe two boys with two bags, they went to a brick lump, and one of them got upon it, and the other was below with the bag in his hands; the one that got up began to make a great hole, by laying the bricks round the ſide, then he reached down to the others and came and took the bag from him, then a man came by, and they pretended to play, and throw at the crows; when he was gone they got up again, and the one that was not up before, handed him ſome long dung to ſhake it over the hole that they had made in the brick lump, the dung lay very near the ſpot, and they came down after they had covered it; I then waited a good while expecting my man to come, during which time the priſoners were walking round the lump, and kept about the field; they were not out of my ſight only once, when they were on the ſide of the brick lump; I waited near an hour and half, expecting he would come, but I called to a man who went by, and he went and took hold of one, I ſaid, what have you been doing in that brick lump; and he ſaid, me, Sir, I do not know what you mean, I am but juſt come into the field; I then ſaid to the other, take out what you have been putting there; he began to cry, and ſaid it was only ſome pigeons, and he found them in the field, and then he ſaid he found them in Mr. Alſop's yard; I took them to the watch-houſe, and the proſecutor came and claimed them.

Priſoner. I ſaw the pigeons laying in a bag, and I brought them to this place, and put them there, as I wanted to go to work.

Court to Proſecutor. Who are theſe boys? —They are two boys, whoſe mothers live, I believe, in the pariſh, and are waſherwomen, they have been frequently with me begging, I would do all I could for favour to be ſhewn them; there is a well known gang of them, the eldeſt of whom is not twenty, who are frequently ſtealing chickens: I ſuppoſe they lifted one another up atop of the wall, and then unroofed the hay loft.

BOTH GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

862. THOMAS TIPPING was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 25th day of Auguſt laſt, 30lb. weight of old pipe, value 2s. belonging to George Graham, and then and there fixed to his dwelling-houſe, againſt the ſtatute.

GEORGE GRAHAM ſworn.

My pipe and pump-handle were cut.

THOMAS READY ſworn.

About five, or before, in the morning, the 25th of Auguſt, I was alarmed by the noiſe noise of thieves in the cellar, I ran down the stairs, we looked about, I thought the thief was gone up the chimney, and they brought a light, and there he was.

JOHN WEBSTER sworn.

I stood below at the bottom of the chimney, and I saw the prisoner come down.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

A boy knocked me down, and my hat flew off into the cellar, and I went down for it, and while I was down, they cried thieves, and I went to hide myself.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

863. WILLIAM HARBOUR was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 19th day of July last, one pair of men's leather shoes, value 4s. the property of Serjeant Smith.

SERJEANT SMITH sworn.

I am a shoemaker in St. Giles's, I lost a pair of shoes from the window, on the 19th day of July last, they hung there, I missed them soon after, and was informed the prisoner had taken them, I pursued him to the bottom of Newtoner's-lane, which is a very little distance, he had one shoe in each pocket, he took these shoes out of his pockets himself in my presence.

(Deposed to.)

ANDREW JOHNSON sworn.

I saw the prisoner take one or two shoes, I could not tell which; I told the prosecutor, and we pursued and took him, he delivered up the shoes; he behaved exceedingly civil, and did not hesitate in the least.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I met a person who owed me a trifle, and he gave me these shoes for 4s. 6d. and I put them into my pocket.

The prisoner called three witnesses who gave him a very good character.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

867. FRANCIS DIXON was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 15th day of August last, one cloth great coat, value 6s. the property of Edward Rhodes.

EDWARD RHODES sworn.

I am a hackney coachman, I lost my great coat, it was on my box when I got off to let out my fare, and I turned to follow them into the house for my money, and I was told my coat was taken by that man, I followed and took the prisoner with my coat on his shoulder, I lost sight of the other two. (The coat deposed to.) This is the third coat I have lost this summer, and I have never another coat but this.

Prisoner. I picked up the coat from the ground.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

865. THOMAS PROBERT was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 14th day of September last, twelve pair of shoe buckles, value 6s. and four pair of stuff shoes, value 4s. the property of Samuel Simkins, SAMUEL SIMKINS sworn.

I am a shoemaker, in little Warner-street, Coldbath-fields, I lost sixteen pair of shoes, the the 14th of September, from my ſhop, which was broke open in the night; it was ſafe at nine o'clock, the top part of the door was broke open, and my ſhoes gone; I found nine pair of them on Thurſday afternoon, they were ſtopped in Field-lane; I know the priſoner by ſight, he lived in the ſame ſtreet, he rented a lower apartment, he is a child's pump maker.

ISRAEL LEVY ſworn.

I was walking along, crying cloathes, and I bought five pair of ſhoes of the priſoner, on Thurſday laſt, between two and three, I gave 3s. for the whole, they were very bad ſhoes, one pair was all bad in the upper leather.

(Depoſed to.)

SIMON MARK ſworn.

I bought four pair of ſtuff ſhoes of the priſoner laſt Thurſday between three and four, for four ſhillings and ſix-pence.

(Depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I am a ſhoemaker by trade, and getting up in the morning, I went to a leather-cutters, and I ſaw a man offer to ſell theſe ſhoes to a Jew; I had a trifle of money in my pocket; the Jew and he could not agree, and I bought them of him; I ſold them out in the ſtreet, and never went within doors to ſell them; I bought them at ſeven on Thurſday morning; all my friends are at Kingſton upon Thames.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

845. EDWARD DAVIS was indicted for burglariouſly and felonioufly breaking and entering the dwelling-houſe of John Scandret, on the 15th of September, about the hour of eight in the night, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein two iron vices, weight 58lb. value 21s. the property of Francis Lawley.

FRANCIS LAWLEY ſworn.

I am a ſteel worker; I work in the Black-raven-paſſage, Fetter-lane, I work in a ſhop that joins the proſecutor's houſe, there is a houſe of each ſide of it, it joins both theſe houſes; it is a private paſſage.

Court. Are there any rooms over your work-ſhop?——None at all, nor any communication to the houſe: on Thurſday morning I went out, and I locked up the ſhop, the inner door, with a padlock, haſp and ſtaple, and the outſide door upon the ſpring lock; I came home about twenty minutes after eight, as near as poſſible, in the evening, and I found the box ſtaple wrenched back, I went in and felt in the dark, and I miſſed my vice, and then another; I got a candle out of Mr. Scandret's houſe, and the priſoner came out of the houſe, and came into the ſhop to me, and he ſays, God d——n you, this is the third time your ſhop has been robbed; I ſaid, I know it has; he ſaid, why did not you take your vices and lock them at Mr. Scandret's, as you did the ſecond time you was robbed; then I came into the public houſe, and he brought me a pot of beer, and ſays, God d——n you, here, drink, you will find it out in time; I went down into the vine vaults, and I received information that the priſoner was the man that robbed me, I went to the neighbouring pawnbroker's, and I found the vice at Mr. Ferris's; I am ſure of the vice; I found it within ten minutes, and I found the other that is here at an old iron ſhop in Shoe-lane, at one Mr. Kent's; one vice is broke in the ſpring belonging to the flower, and the other is broke in the ſecond turning in the worm in the box; there are not, I ſuppoſe, two ſuch vices in the kingdom; I came back again to Mr. Scandret's houſe, and there the priſoner ſat drinking; I took him out of the houſe, and got aſſiſtance; I took him to the the corner of Stone Cutters-ſtreet, and there he began to cry, and begged for mercy, and acknowledged he had robbed me; he ſaid he would give me my property again.

Did you make him any promiſe?—— None at all; he wanted to go into a public houſe, and I took him out of the ſame houſe, and there he ſaid he had not made away with much of the money; he ſaid he had pawned one for five ſhillings and ſix-pence.

Priſoner. I beg to aſk the witneſs whether he was not tried capitally at this bar; another thing, I have it not in my power to employ a council, and I hope you will look over that bit of paper before my trial goes on; I hope your Lordſhip will have the kindneſs to do me juſtice.

Court. Has the witneſs been ever convicted ſo as to diſqualify him?—— I was tried in this court, doubtleſs, but it is many years back; I was not called on my defence, I was honourably acquitted.

LAWRENCE PEARSON ſworn.

I am ſhopman to Mr. Ferris, this vice was pledged at our ſhop on this day evening, a little after eight, by the priſoner; I am ſure of his perſon; I never ſaw him before; he has the ſame dreſs on now that he had then; the proſecutor was with me about ten minutes after; I gave him the deſcription of the man; I ſaw the man two days following; I have no doubt at all of him.

(The vice depoſed to, being broken in the flower.)

JOHN DAVIS ſworn.

I was coming through the Blackraven-paſſage, and I went in to have a pint of beer, the priſoner came in to me, and preſently news came in that the ſhop was robbed, and he ſaid to the proſecutor, d——n your fooliſh ſoul, this is the third time your ſhop has been broken open, and ſaid, if you had carried the vices to Mr. Scandret's houſe you would not have loſt them, I went with the proſecutor to Mr. Pearſon's ſhop, where the vice was found, then when we came back the proſecutor charged him with the robbery, and he took him down to Stonecutter-ſtreet, and then he acknowledged it in my hearing, and we brought him back to the public houſe, and the priſoner ſaid, name the things you loſt in the firſt robbery, and you ſhall have them, ſo he named one thing or two, and the priſoner ſaid, I cannot, they are gone.

(The following defence in writing was delivered in by the priſoner, and read by the Clerk of the Arraigns.)

To the Right Honourable Lord Judge.

Moſt honoured Sir,

I moſt humbly beg that your goodneſs will be pleaſed to excuſe the way of proceeding which I have taken, and moſt humbly beg that you will be pleaſed to take my hard caſe into conſideration, and extend your Lordſhip's goodneſs and mercy on me, as far as you may think me worthy of it, when you hear my hard caſe, and the primonary that I drawed into innocently; the particulars of which is as follows:

On the fifteenth inſtant, about ſeven o'clock, I was drinking with Mr. Davis, who is one of the witneſſes againſt me, and I having occaſion to go to the door, when I was at the door I was accoſt by a man who came up to me, and telling me that he was a ſtranger, he would take it as a favour if I would inform him where there was a pawnbroker, and I not thinking of the conſequence that might attend a thing of the kind, I took the things which he had, and went and pawn'd them for him, and brought him the money; and by obliging, he aſked me to drink, but I return'd him thanks, and told him that I was engag'd at the houſe he ſaw me come out of, therefore I wiſhed him good night, and return'd back, and in the ſpace of about half an hour the proſecutor came in and ſaid his ſhop had been robbed, and on his mentioning theſe words he went out, when the witneſs Davis went out after him, and they both both returned in the space of fifteen minutes, and said they had a suspicion that I had robb'd the prosecutor's shop, as they had found the things was pawn'd by me, I told them I knew nothing of it, but was willing to go any where with them, and accordingly they took me to the Compter, and I was taken the next day before the alderman, who committed me for trial, and as I am entirely innocent of what is laid to my charge, I hope your Lordship will extend your goodness so far as to inspect into my prosecutor's character, as he has been tried in this court twice for his life, and I am well convinced this is done out of spite, because I worked for him some time ago, and not liking his proceedings, I left him; and he keeps an infamous house in George Yard, Field-lane; therefore your Lordship may judge what sort of a person he is, and as I have an undeniable character, and was never before in a primeary of the kind, I hope your Lordship will inspect into my unhappy case, and I, as in duty bound, shall ever pray;

And I am your Lordship's most devoted, and most humble servant,

EDWARD DAVIS.

The prisoner called three witnesses to his Character.

GUILTY

Of stealing, but not of the burglary.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the second London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

867. PHILIP RUSLET was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 5th day of July last, twenty-three guineas, value 24l. 3s. and one half guinea, value 10s. 6d. and four pieces of foreign gold, called royers, value 4l. 14s. the property of Henry Levi, in his dwelling house.

Henry Harris called on his recognizance, and not appearing, the prisoner was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the first London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

868. JOHN AUGUST was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 16th of August last, six pewter plates, value 3s. the property of David Wilton.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the first London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

869. RICHARD MARNEY and JEREMIAH MURPHY were indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 16th day of September, forty pounds weight of lead, value 2s. belonging to Henry Capel, and then and there fixed to a certain building of the said Henry against the statute.

A second count, for feloniously stealing, on the same day, forty pounds weight of lead, value 2s. belonging to James Haywood affixed to his dwelling house, against the statute.

HENRY CAPEL sworn.

On Friday evening last, about ten minutes before seven, a gentleman that lives opposite alarmed me, and I went out, and saw two men, as I thought, in the very act of cutting lead upon the top of my house: the noise of the people alarming them, they desisted and went to the parapet wall of my neighbour, and laid all along in the gutter: I went up stairs with my neighbour, who said, he had had a bricklayer and labourer at work all day, and had sent to them to know why they did not leave off, I went up stairs and met the prisoner Murphy the labourer; I took him in custody, I went into the garret, and just as I got into the the garret, the prisoner Murphy stood by a basket and some tools, just by the parapet wall, where I saw him lay down under the window; I charged him with stealing lead, he denied it; the lead weighed about twenty-six pounds, it was twenty feet, it was very narrow, it is only the edging of a gutter: the house is mine.

Prisoner Marney, Did not you say you had been robbed a great many times, and I should pay for all?——I did say to the same purport, I have been robbed a great many times.

ABRAHAM DRY sworn.

In the course of last Friday, I observed these two men working on Mr. Palmer's house and one on another house, I watched them and saw Murphy lift something out of the gutter of Mr. Palmer's house, which lays higher than the other, and he afterwards got into the gutter of Mr. Palmer's house, I informed him; when I returned the prisoner Marney was at work on the house.

Thomas Palmer and William Herring confirmed the evidence of Capel.

PRISONER MARNEY's DEFENCE.

We were at work at the next door, and the parapet wall is two inches higher than the prosecutor's house, and in cutting the chips fell down, and I went on the parapet wall, and swept it away; we never were charged with a half penny worth of roguery before in our lives.

The prisoner Murphey called five witnesses who gave him a good character.

The prisoner Marney called one witness to his character.

BOTH GUILTY.

Each Transported for seven years.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

870. JANE FLEMING wife of John Fleming was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 9th day of August last, two linen sheets, value 6s. two check linen curtains, value 8s. one copper tea-kettle, value 3s. one bolster, value 3s. one blanket, value 2s. one fender, value 2s. one pair of tongs, value 12d. one copper saucepan, value 12d. one stew-pan, value 12d. the property of Andrew Wilson, being in a certain lodging room let by him to the said John Fleming to be used by the [illegible] John and Jane, in the lodging room aforesaid, against the statute.

The Prosecutor not being able to depose to a tea-kettle and saucepan which were pledged by the prisoner, she was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

871. CHARLES CLARK was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 18th day of March last, one pair of thickset breeches, value 2s. the property of Joseph Lough.

The Prosecutor not appearing the prisoner was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

872. JOSEPH DYER was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 21st day of July, one enamelled metal watch, value 20s. two silver table spoons, value 20s. one pair of silver tea-tongs, value 10s. the property of James Thomas.

The Prosecutor not appearing, the prisoner was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

873. GEORGE

873. GEORGE BAILLIE was indicted for that he, having been convicted of being a rogue and vagabond, for being found on a certain incloſed ground of one William Scavin, and committed for ſix months to hard labour, was found at large having broke out of priſon, and was thereupon convicted of being an incorrigible rogue, and delivered, and ordered to be detained for two years; he was afterwards at large, on the 14th day of May laſt, having in his poſſeſſion a certain inſtrument called an iron crow, and a piſtol, and two leaden bullets, with intent to aſſault ſome perſon or perſons againſt the peace.

WILLIAM BOWYER ſworn.

(Produced the records of the convictions of the priſoner, which he brought from the Clerk of the Peace, and examined by him.) It is a true copy.

(Read and examined by Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Counſel.)

Court. Do you know the perſon of the priſoner?——There is a perſon in Court does, I do not.

Did you apprehend the priſoner at any time?—Yes, upon the night of the 14th, of May, between one and two in the morning of the 15th, coming along Great Queen-ſtreet, from the fields, I met the priſoner in company with three others, he was laſt and had an apron on, and this iron crow was tucked underneath the inſide of his apron, I then told the reſt of the men, to purſue the other two, and one of them was taken; then I took the priſoner by the arm, I ſearched him further, and I found this piſtol loaded upon him: he was committed as a rogue and vagabond, we knew nothing, at leaſt I did not, that this man had been committed before.

Mr. Garrow, What account did he give of having that piſtol?—Would you wiſh me to tell you.

I am inſtructed to aſk it?——He told me that he and ſeven others of them, were going to break open a houſe in the fields.

THOMAS MUMFORD ſworn.

I belong to the gaol, I was preſent when he was convicted for ſix months, and when he was convicted for two years.

Mr. Garrow. When was the firſt conviction?—I cannot tell.

What was the firſt offence?——I believe ſome keys, I will not be ſure.

Did you let him out on purpoſe to indict him?—No.

Was he let out at laſt?—I believe not.

He did get his pardon?——He did I believe, he was diſcharged in about fifteen months.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

As I was coming down Queen-ſtreet, there were three or four men before me, and as they went paſt me I heard ſomething drop, it was a piſtol, I ſtooped and picked it up, I put it in my pocket, and I picked up the crow, and was going to put it in my apron, and he came up and took me, and they got away; Mr. Bowyer aſked me what houſe I was going to break open.

GUILTY.

The caſe reſerved for the opinions of the Judges, on the Act of Parliament.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

The next Part will be publiſhed in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON:

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 14th of SEPTEMBER, 1785, and the following Days;

Being the SEVENTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER VII. PART X.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

874. HENRY FOSKETT otherwiſe FOXETT was indicted for that he, on the 25th of July laſt, did feloniouſly and falſely, make, forge, and counterfeit, and did willingly aid and aſſiſt, in the falſe making, forging, and counterfeiting, a certain deed, partly printed and partly written, called a bill of ſale, purporting to be ſigned by one William Maſon, and to be ſealed and delivered by him, dated the 18th of July, 1785, with intent to defraud Francis Butler.

A ſecond count, For uttering the ſame with the like intention.

A third count, For forging the ſame, with intention to defraud William Millan.

A fourth count, For uttering the ſame with the like intention.

FRANCIS BUTLER ſworn.

I ſummoned one Mr. Millan, a cooper, for forty-eight ſhillings, in Whitechapel Court, and got an execution againſt him, and me and the officer went to ſeize the goods under this execution; there was a bill of ſale, ſaid to be ſigned by Mr. Millan, and the officer aſked me, if I thought this bill of ſale was Mr. Millan's hand-writing, and I ſaid I did not know, but I would enquire, and we enquired, and finding it was not, the priſoner was committed.

Mr. Parke, Priſoner's Council. Did you ever ſee Mr. Millan write his name?—Yes, many a time.

JOHN SIMPSON ſworn.

I was the officer that went to levy the execution, and this bill of ſale was produced, purporting to be the bill of ſale of Mr. Millan, given by Mr. Foſkett, and I went to Mr. Stevenſon's houſe; I know nothing of the forgery, here is the bill of ſale, and the receipt.

——— STEVENSON ſworn.

Whoſe hand-writing do you take that to be?—It appears to me to be the priſoner's.

Have you ever ſeen him write?—Several times.

What do you ſay to his hand-writing?—I could not ſwear to it, without I ſaw him write it, I would not for the world.

Court. The comparing of hand-writing would not be evidence.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

875. JOHN

875. JOHN SIMPSON was indicted for that he, on the 7th of July laſt, at the pariſh of St. Mary Matſelon, otherwiſe Whitechapel, did marry one Hannah Turner widow, and her had for his lawful wife; and afterwards on the 16th day of December laſt, at St. George's, Middleſex, feloniouſly did marry, and take to wife, Mary Ann Harwood, and to her was married, the ſaid Hannah, his former wife, being then alive.

Priſoner. My Lord, I was tried for this very ſame thing at the laſt ſeſſions, and honourably acquitted.

Court. Get the record of acquittal.

(Read.)

Court to Priſoner. Have you any body here, to prove that you are the perſon that was tried laſt ſeſſions?—Mr. Newman.

MARY ANN SIMPSON ſworn.

Was this priſoner tried at the laſt ſeſſions for this offence?—Yes.

Court to Jury. Then Gentlemen his acquittal being recorded, and that being read over, he cannot be tried again for the ſame offence.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

876. ANN the wife of WILLIAM ABURROW was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 9th day of Auguſt laſt, eight yards and an half of printed cotton, val e 21s. the property of William Gaſkell.

The witneſſes being called and not appearing, the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

877. SUSANNAH WOODELL was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 1ſt day of Auguſt laſt, two table ſpoons, value 20s. one ſilver tea ſpoon, value 1s. five table cloths, value 5s. four pair of linen ſheets, value 12s. the property of Chriſtopher Plunkett.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

878. SARAH BLACKBURN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 30th day of Auguſt laſt, one linen ſheet, value 3s. one pillow, value 2s. one copper ſaucepan, value 12d. one copper coverlid, value 6d. two flat irons, value 12d. one pair of tongs, value 12d. one poker, value 6d. the property of John Terry, in a lodging room, againſt the ſtatute.

Mrs. TERRY ſworn.

I let the priſoner a ready furniſhed lodging about ſix weeks ago, we let it by the week; ſhe was in it a month, a man lived with her, that ſhe ſaid was her huſband.

Was he there conſtantly; I cannot juſtly ſay, I believe ſome nights he was there, and ſome nights he was not, I ſaw the things at the pawnbroker's.

JOHN TYLER ſworn.

I produce a pair of flat irons, and a copper ſaucepan, I lent her 6d. on each.

Priſoner. I took theſe things in the greateſt diſtreſs, I buried my huſband, and I buried my two children in the ſmall pox.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

879. ELIZABETH BLAND was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 10th day of Auguſt laſt, one ſilk jacket, value 10s. one ſtriped linen waiſtcoat, value 5s. one pair of breeches, value 10s. one hat, value 1s. one pair of ſhoes, value 2s. one pair of buckles, value 3s. one pair of knee knee buckles, value 18d. one ſtock, value 12d. one ſtock buckle, value 6d. and one guinea, value 21. 1s. the property of John Studley, in the dwelling houſe of a perſon unknown.

The proſecutor called on his recognizance, and not appearing the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

880. STEPHEN THOMAS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 15th day of July laſt, forty pounds weight of cheeſe, value 16s. the property of John Tatham.

The proſecutor ſaw the priſoner take the cheeſe out of his cart, and took him directly with the cheeſe.

GUILTY.

To be whipped, and confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

881. ROGER WHITE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 5th day of September, one ſheet, value 4s. one pillow caſe, value 8d. one ſhirt, value 2s. one coverlid, value 5s. the property of Ann Norberty, being in a lodging room, againſt the ſtatute.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

882. THOMAS CLARKE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 16th day of July laſt, three hempen coal ſacks, value 5s. the property of Thomas Goddall.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

883. ROGER SWEETMAN was indicted for that he not having the fear of God before his eyes, but being moved and ſeduced by the inſtigation of the devil, with force and arms, upon the 5th day of September laſt, feloniouſly did make an aſſault upon one Henry Sanſum, in the peace of God and our Lord the King then and there being, and then and there maliciouſly, wickedly, and diabolically, and againſt the order of nature had a venereal affair with the ſaid Henry Sanſum, and then and there feloniouſly, wilfully, and againſt the order of nature, carnally knew him, and with him did then and there commit, and perpetrate that abominable and deteſtable crime (not to be mentioned by Chriſtians) called buggery, to the great diſpleaſure of Almighty God, againſt the form of the ſtatute in ſuch caſe made and provided, and againſt his Majeſty's peace.

* NOT GUILTY.

* This priſoner being acquitted on this indictment, the Court ordered the evidence to be ſuppreſſed, as too indecent for publication.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

884. The ſaid ROGER SWEETMAN was again indicted for unlawfully aſſaulting Richard Read, on the 10th day of July laſt, with intent that moſt horrid, abominable, and deteſtable crime (not to be named among Chriſtians) called buggery with him to commit and do, againſt the ſtatute, and againſt the peace.

A ſecond counts, For a common aſſault only.

RICHARD READ ſworn.

Court. What are you?—I work at ſawing ſometimes.

How long have you been out of employ?—A fortnight very near.

Where do you live?—In Lad-lane, at the Crown.

Have you any father or mother living?—Yes, in the country.

Do you know the priſoner?—Yes, I have known him by ſight above two years.

Are you much acquainted with him?—No, only I have drank with him.

Did he behave in any improper manner at any time, and when?—On the 20th of July, my landlady ſent a young man to ſleep with me, and ſhe and I quarrelled, I lodged at the George at that time, I told her I would not ſleep in the houſe, and the priſoner was there, and he ſaid, go home along with me Dick, ſo I will ſays I, Sweetman.

What time of night was this?—Between twelve and one, when we went to the priſoner's we went up ſtairs, and went to bed juſt after the clock ſtruck one, I went to ſleep before the priſoner got into bed, I do not know that I heard him, and about two o'clock I awaked, and his arms were clenched round me, and he had turned me on my face, and he had got his inſtrument between my thighs, and I twiſted myſelf and made him break his hold, I got my breaſt on the bedſtead, and I took hold of him with my left hand, and gave him two or three good pelts over the head, I laid hold of him by his breaſt, the fleſhy part; then I aſked what he thought of himſelf, and what he deſerved, he ſaid, do not tell, do not tell, my dear, do not tell, ſeveral times over; then I ſaid, what do you deſerve, ſays I, you take care for the future, never offer any ſuch thing any more to any man, if you do you will get into a hobble: I laid till morning, and he laid on the other ſide, and never offered anything more.

Why did not you leave him directly?—I was diſpoſed to go to ſleep, and he ſaid very kind afterwards, after I gave him a knock or two.

How ſoon did you tell this to any body?—I cannot tell exactly to the day, I told it to a porter that I knew, that I went home with him, and he wanted to ſerve me ſo and ſo, and he ſaid it was a naſty affair, I never made any complaint to any juſtice till he was taken up.

How was you found out?—A man, an acquaintance of the proſecutor on the laſt trial, ſtopped me, and told me the priſoner was taken up for a crime I was talking of.

Priſoner. The proſecutor and me were both very much in liquor, that is all that I can ſay.

SAMUEL SINGLETON ſworn.

I know nothing but apprehending the priſoner.

Priſoner. The landlady's houſe was terrible full, and I ſaid, Dick, go home with me, and we went to bed, and we ſlept together all night, and three weeks or a month after, I heard what he ſhould ſay about me.

GUILTY, on the firſt Count.

Court to Priſoner. You have been convicted on very clear evidence, which appears perfectly to have ſatisfied a very cautious and attentive Jury, of a crime only ſhort of that which would have affected your life; a crime which all mankind juſtly hold in the utmoſt deteſtation, and which where the diabolical tendency is obſerved in any perſon, it is neceſſary for thoſe concerned in the adminiſtration of juſtice, to repreſs with the utmoſt ſeverity of puniſhment: under thoſe circumſtances, therefore the Court orders, that you be impriſoned in his Majeſty's gaol of Newgate for the term of three years, and during that time twice publickly whipp'd; and it is recommended to the Sheriff, to execute that ſentence with proper ſeverity.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

885. MICHAEL DRUITT was indicted for that he, on the 20th day of April laſt, feloniouſly and falſely did make, forge, and counterfeit, and cauſe and procure to be falſely made, forged, and counterfeited, and willingly aid, and aſſiſt in the falſe making, forging, and counterfeiting a certain order for payment of money, dated 18th April, 1785, with the name J. Wood thereto ſubſcribed, purporting to be ſigned by Joſeph Wood, directed to Thomas Hankey, Joſeph Chaplin Hankey, Stephen Hall, Robert Hankey, and Richard Hankey, Eſquires, by the name and deſcription of Meſſrs. Hankey and Co. for the payment of 17l. 12s. 6d. and which ſaid falſe, forged, and counterfeited order for the payment of money, was in the words and figures following, that is to ſay, "Meſſers. Hankey and Co. pay Mr. Barnes or bearer 17l. 12s. 6d. J. Wood, April 18th 1785," with intention to defraud the ſaid Thomas Hankey, Joſeph Chaplin Hankey, Stephen Hall, Robert Hankey, and Richard Hankey.

A ſecond Count, for uttering the ſame, with the like intention.

A third and fourth Counts, The ſame as the firſt and the ſecond, with intention to defraud Joſeph Wood.

(The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of Mr. Garrow and Mr. James, Priſoner's Counſel.

(The Caſe was opened by Mr. Fielding as follows:)

Gentlemen of the Jury, your attention is now to be directed to the inveſtigation of a charge, which as it may be of the laſt conſequence to the unhappy young man at the bar, ſo is the puniſhment of the crime imputed to him, of the utmoſt importance to this town: I ſhall firſt ſuggeſt to you, the parties in this tranſaction, and the manner in which the priſoner was apprehended. Mr. Joſeph Wood, whoſe draught has been forged, was in habits of intimacy with the brother of the priſoner, during their intercourſe Mr. Wood had frequently ſupplied him with ſums of money, and thoſe ſupplies were by way of draught, whether the priſoner took opportunity from theſe draughts to commit the crime in queſtion, I know not: although there are ſeveral more indictments here remaining againſt the priſoner, I do not think myſelf at liberty to go into any of the facts concerning them at preſent, but I ſhall confine myſelf to the preſent tranſaction. On the 20th of April laſt, a Mr. Tait, who is a clerk of Mr. Hankey's, was in the office for the purpoſe of paying the draughts that were brought, and then it was that the draught, the object of the preſent enquiry, was brought by the priſoner; Mr. Tait, upon looking at the draught, had ſome ſuſpicion, he thought there was an evident diſſimilarity in the writing, he went to a drawer where there were two other draughts which we ſay are forgeries, and which had been preſented a little time before, but on comparing this note with thoſe, and their appearing alike, he was induced to pay it; however, the circumſtance itſelf cauſed him to ſuſpect the priſoner, and made him take a more than ordinary notice of him: Gentlemen, undoubtedly the evidence of identity will be always received with conſiderable caution: probable it is, very probable, that perſons may be deceived with reſpect to likeneſs, and with reſpect to recollection; but where there are circumſtances that aid the memory, and induce at the moment particular obſervation, people in caſes like this, may be enabled to ſpeak with as much certainty as any human creature can do from memory; and you well know, many of the tranſactions in life require we ſhould rely on memory, for ſeldom do we come to demonſtration; if Mr. Tait therefore ſpeaks certainly to the man, there will remain nothing but for you to go into the other circumſtances of the forgery, which I ſhall then proceed to lay before you, and if they are proved to your ſatisfaction, it will then become your duty to find the priſoner guilty of the charge.

WIL-

WILLIAM TAIT sworn.

You are clerk to Mr. Hankey?—Yes.

What is the firm of your house?—Thomas Hankey, Joseph Chaplin Hankey, Stephen Hall, Robert Hankey, and Richard Hankey. I speak of the partnership in April last.

Look at the prisoner, have you a recollection of him?—Yes, Sir, I think I have a very strong one.

Did you see him in April last, and where?—On the 26th of July, at Hoxton.

Did you see him on the 20th of April?—It struck me very forcibly that he was the same I saw on the 20th of April.

On the 20th of April a man came to your house?—Yes.

At what time of the day?——About ten in the morning, as far as I can gather from my own book, this is the draught I have in my hand; I looked at the writing, and I saw a sensible difference to Mr. Wood's usual way of writing; I took the opinion of my fellow tellers at the counter, and they told me it certainly must be his writing, they thought it was; I was not perfectly satisfied, but referred to a drawer, in which Mr. Wood's draughts lay, I looked at the draught, and found it the same hand-writing, I paid sixteen guineas and a half, and six shillings, and the gentleman returned me two shillings as bad.

Mr. Garrow, one of the prisoner's counsel. In what shape did you pay the draught?—Sixteen guineas and a half, and six shillings in silver.

Have you a memory of the person that so presented the draught to whom you paid the money?——I had a very strong recollection then, I had rather speak to the time that I saw him on the 26th of July.

Court. Did you ask the person who presented the draught any questions?—None.

Mr. Fielding. Did you take any observation of the person?—Yes, I looked at his person, and I apprehended in myself he was a relation of Mr. Wood's, because I thought there was a kind of family likeness in the fullness of his eyes to Mr. Wood's son, but I found it was quite different.

On what occasion was it that you saw him at Hoxton?—He was taken into custody by a constable.

Look again at the prisoner at the bar, is he or is he not the person that presented the note; what is your opinion of him now, that you can warrantably say upon your oath?—I believe him to be the same, on recollecting that it struck me so forcibly then.

Mr. Fielding. Does your memory serve you to say whether that was the man or not?——I will not say, but upon that recollection.

Do you believe him to be the man?——I believe him to be the man that presented the notes, but I only believe it upon the strength of that recollection.

Court. That is a very fair and candid evidence.

Mr. Fielding. Do you know Mr. Wood?—Yes.

Mr. Garrow. Now, Mr. Tait, I am disposed to hope, as the court does, that you mean to give a very fair and candid account; it is that hope that induces me to give you a caution, because I have here your information before a Magistrate; now, you have told my friend, with some difficulty, (which certainly is in favour of your testimony) that after all the corroborating circumstances that you have put together, you do believe that the person at the bar is the person that presented the note.

Court. He says he does not speak from his knowledge now, from his recollection.

Mr. Garrow. Now I ask you, abstracted from all you have heard, from all you have done at the bank, and all that has been told you on the subject, I ask you, without these corroborating circumstances, will you swear the prisoner is the person that presented the note?——I hesitated, as you remember before, about that question, nor can I answer it now; I say I am uncertain.

That is a very fair answer; and just such an one as I expected you to give; you have told us very fairly that you are uncertain, I believed that you was, because I observe that that in the catalogue of reasons you gave before the Magistrate, your recollection of the person is not to be found; you was examined, I believe, by the Magistrate on the 29th of July?—On the 26th in the evening.

Then your examination was reduced into writing, and signed by you?——Yes.

In that examination I see you enumerated several reasons which induced you to suspect, (for it goes no further than that you had great reason to suspect) upon several accounts, that one Michael Davis was concerned in this forgery; now, amongst those several reasons, though so close on the time, there is not one single mention of the person of the man that tendered you the note; the person, whoever he was, who received the payment, appears by your books to have taken it in cash?——Yes.

No notes composed that payment at all?——None at all.

You was some time examining the draughts, and comparing?——Perhaps a minute.

And there was nothing in the conduct of the prisoner or the draught, that induced you to stop the draught?——No.

The person who received the money returned two of the shillings as bad?——Yes.

Did not you before the Magistrate say you did not recollect him, and could not swear to him?——I might say I could not swear to him.

That was in July; now, in September, having clapped together a variety of circumstances, you believe he is the man; the draught was tendered in April, and you did not see him till July, and then he was in custody for forgery?—He was in custody then.

Did you go to the house of the prisoner on the 25th of July?——No.

Do you know, however, that there was an application made to him on this subject on the 25th?——I have heard so.

And you have reason to believe it, it was made by your house?—Yes.

He was found in his own house the 26th?——Yes.

At what time do you begin paying in a morning?—Nine.

What is your high time?—Between one and five; we have but little to do of a morning.

Mr. Fielding. Mr. Wood keeps money in your house?—Yes.

Do you know any thing of the account between Mr. Wood and Hankey?—Yes.

Mr. Garrow. Is the book here?—Yes.

Court. Is the book in your hand-writing?—I have signed it.

Mr. Garrow. It is only an attested copy of better evidence; you may as well hear my friend's brief.

Mr. Fielding. Your Lordship very well knows my friend would object to Mr. Wood, and I shall not call him without a release; I shall call others who know his hand-writing perfectly well.

Joseph Wood, junior, called, but did not appear.

EDWARD BULLINGER sworn.

Do you know Mr. Joseph Wood the elder?——Yes.

Do you know his hand-writing?—Yes.

Have you seen him write often?—Yes.

Are you able to say, when you see a piece of writing, whether it is his hand-writing?—Yes.

Look at that?—I am positive sure that is not his hand-writing; I have seen him write so often.

Mr. James. Why, Mr. Bullinger, your manner of swearing appears pretty confident?—I am sure it is not his hand-writing.

In short, you are just as sure as you are of your own hand-writing?—More so.

Who may you be?—I have lived with Mr. Wood these seven years; I am a carpenter and joiner.

Court. Have you ever seen Mr. Joseph Wood the younger write?—Yes, often.

Is that like his hand-writing?—I do not believe it is, I do not think it is.

You are not quite so sure of that as the other?——I am quite sure, I could almost swear it.

But not quite?—I think I could.

Look at it, and make yourself sure?—I never saw him write like it.

Court. I observe, however, that you do not speak with the same certainty to that as to the other?—I am quite positive it is not the elder's hand-writing.

Mr. Fielding. Is the younger Wood here?

Prosecutor. He was obliged to step home; I told him I believed he might be spared for a few minutes.

Mr. Fielding. Then do once more enquire at the door if he is there?

Mr. Garrow. He says he is gone home; do not let us lose time.

Wood. He cannot be gone above five or six minutes.

Mr. Fielding. I have done, my Lord.

Court. If young Wood was here, I should think it incumbent on Mr. Fielding to call him, especially after the manner of the last witness giving his evidence.

Mr. Fielding. I have no further evidence in this case.

Court. Gentlemen of the Jury, it is impossible to call on the prisoner for a defence in this case; it stands merely that a person brought a draught to Hankey's and Co. which one witness swears is not the hand-writing of the person whose writing it purports to be, for payment; no questions were asked that person, payment was made; and now one witness swears, that he believes the prisoner to be the man, but is not sure of it: in the first place there is no reason to believe that that person, whoever he was, knew it to be forged, his conduct in returning two bad shillings is reverse to that, and if the mere taking money for a draught would make a man guilty of forgery, a man would never take a draught; at the same time it is but justice to the prosecution to say, that though the recollection of Mr. Tait is very uncertain, and that uncertainty is greatly increased nearer the time of presenting the draught, yet such recollection is a proper reason for commencing this enquiry.

NOT GUILTY.

(The moment the verdict was given, Wood, junior, came into Court.

Mr. Garrow moved the Court to have the prisoner's property returned to him, which was opposed by Mr. Fielding, the Court made no order, but observed, that there was but a very slight ground to justify the detention of the prisoner's person, and no ground at all to justify the detention of his property.

---

886. The said MICHAEL DRUIT was again indicted for uttering and publishing as true, on the 18th of April last, a certain forged order for payment of money, with the name J. Wood thereto subscribed, directed to Messrs. Hankey and Co. for 49l. dated 15th April last.

NOT GUILTY.

---

887. The said MICHAEL DRUIT was again indicted for uttering and publishing as true, on the 4th of May last, a certain forged order for payment of money, with the name J. Wood thereto subscribed, directed to Messrs. Hankey and Co. for 35l. payable to self or bearer, dated 3d May 1785.

NOT GUILTY.

---

888. The said MICHAEL DRUIT was again indicted for uttering and publishing as true, on the 26th of April last, a certain forged order for payment of money, with the name J. Wood thereto subscribed, directed to Messrs. Hankey and Co. for 40l. dated 26th April 1785, payable to self or bearer.

NOT GUILTY.

---

889. The said MICHAEL DRUIT was again indicted for uttering and publishing as true, on the 19th of April last, a certain forged order for payment of money, with the name J. Wood thereto subscribed, directed to Messrs. Hankey and Co. for 12l. dated 18th April, 1785, payable to Mr. Watts or bearer.

890. The said MICHAEL DRUTT was again indicted for uttering and publishing as true, on the 2d of May last, a certain forged order for payment of money, with the name J. Wood thereto subscribed, directed to Messrs. Hankey and Co. for 45l. payable to Mr. Warren or bearer.

NOT GUILTY.

Mr. Tait. I wish to speak a word before the prisoner goes from the bar relative to my conduct.

Court. With respect to your conduct, I must say, I have not met with a fairer witness.

All these six indictments were tried by the first London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

891. SARAH BLACKBURN was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 2d day of September, 1783, one black silk gown, value 21s. four shifts, value 10s. one handkerchief, value 10d. and one shift, value 12d. the property of ——— Montcrief.

CATHERINE MONTCRIEF sworn.

The prisoner lodged in the same house with me, I had not seen her for a year and an half, I lost the things in the indictment the 2d of September, 1783; the shirts belonged to a gentleman's servant, I had them to wash; I found the prisoner out, and went up to her lodging; I found nothing but one handkerchief that was on her neck, which I can swear to by an iron-mould; I asked her what she had done with my clothes; and she fell down on her knees, and said she had sold my clothes the corner of John street, to some Jews; I said I should be happy to get my things again; I made her no other promise; she said she was drunk or mad when she sold them, and sold them for nine shillings.

CHARLES CHINNERY sworn.

I apprehended the prisoner in her room, I went with the prosecutor, I asked her which was the prisoner, as there was another person in the room, the prisoner said I am the unfortunate person; I made her no offer or promise, and I asked her what she had done with the clothes of Mrs. Montcrief's; and she instantly replied, she had sold them in the street to a Jew or Jews; she begged very hard not to go to the watch-house; and Mrs. Montcrief said, if she would promise to be found on Monday she would not take her; I saw her afterwards before the Justice.

Mrs. Montcrief. She promised to walk with me, and she did, and I gave her a breakfast, and kept her till Monday.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I am innocent, the prosecutrix came to me and asked me to breakfast, and she brought a common girl, a lodger of hers, a prostitute, and she told me of her loss: I had not seen her since the 7th of May: as for handkerchiefs, I have no more than this that I borrowed of a young woman.

Court to Constable. Did anything pass about a handkerchief?—I do not recollect, I was a very little while in the room.

Prisoner. She is a very bad kind of woman, she has been laying in the Old Bailey yard now, that all she wished was to take away my life.

Court to Prosecutrix. Do you live with your husband?—I have lived with him ten years.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped and confined to hard labour twelve months in the House of Correction.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

892. WILLIAM STITT was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 2d day of of August last, two quart pewter pots, value 2s. the property of William Bourle.

GUILTY.

To be imprisoned three months in Newgate.

Tried by the second London Jury before Mr. ROSE.

---

893. MARY POOLE was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 22d day of July last, two white linen aprons, value 1s. four checque aprons, value 1s. one pair of sheets, value 2s. two shifts, value 2s. the property of Bernard Bell and John Sells.

A second count, For stealing the same, the property of the inhabitants of the parish of St. Giles's without Cripplegate.

A third count, Charging them to be the property of persons unknown.

GUILTY.

Privately whipped.

Tried by the second London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

894. WILLIAM GOLDSMITH was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 6th day of July last, one cloth great coat, called a box coat, value 4s. the property of Richard Gee.

RICHARD GEE sworn.

I am a coachman, I drive my own coach, on the 6th of August last I put my coach on the stand, between one and two, at the May-pole, in East Smithfield; I gave my horses some corn, and went into the Black Horse public-house, to get my dinner; I returned in three quarters of an hour, and miss'd my coat; I was informed by a poor woman standing with a child, that she saw a man take it off the box; I went to Rosemary lane, and the prisoner was pointed out to me, and I took him into a public-house; the person that bought the coat came in instantly, and said in the hearing of the prisoner, that he had bought a coat of him; a constable was fetched, and the coat produced, which was mine; the prisoner denied selling the coat to the man.

HARWOOD sworn.

Here is the coat.

(Deposed to.)

ISAAC CELLINDER sworn.

On the 6th of August last I bought this great coat of the prisoner, between one and two, I live in Rosemary-lane; this is the coat; he said he was out of place, and had lived with a gentleman in the Minories, and that was the reason of selling it: I gave four shillings for it.

GUILTY.

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the second London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

895. WILLIAM CUNNINGHAM was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 17th of August last, one linen and woollen bed quilt, value 17s. the property of Richard Miles and John Miles.

The prisoner was taken with the quilt tied round him.

The prisoner called five witnesses who gave him a very good character.

GUILTY.

Recommended by the Jury.

Fined one shilling, and confined six months in the House of Correction.

Tried by the second London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

896. JOHN

896. JOHN CASS was indicted for feloniously ſtealing, on the 26th of July laſt, one linen handkerchief, value 1s. the property of Thomas White.

The priſoner was detected in picking the proſecutor's pocket by Gabriel Johnſon.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

897. WILLIAM JACKSON and THOMAS GROVES were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 15th of Auguſt laſt, one ſilver watch, value 40s. a ſtone ſeal ſet in ſilver, value 12d. a ſteel chain, value 6d. a key, value 1d. a hook, value 1d. the property of Benjamin Wright; ſix ſhirts, value 12s. the property of John Solden; a gown, value 12s. a cloak, value 20s. a worked lawn apron, value 2s. a handkerchief, value 12d. a pair of ſilver ſhoe buckles, value 5s. the property of Mary Weldon, in the dwelling houſe of the ſaid John Solden.

There being no evidence to affect the priſoners, they were

BOTH ACQUITTED.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

898. ELIZABETH CONWAY and MARY CONWAY were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 5th of July laſt, five yards of black ſilk mode, value 10s. the property of Henry Lucas, Eſq.

ELIZABETH ELLIS ſworn.

I live with Mr. Lucas, my miſtreſs ſent me to buy five yards of black mode, and a quart of peas as I returned, which I did of the priſoners, and I laid down the ſilk where I bought the peas, and in five minutes it was gone; I went about ten yards, as near as I can recollect.

Was the market full of people?—It was on Monday, there was a good many people about, I came back and aſked the priſoner if ſhe had got it, and ſhe ſaid no; I told her ſhe muſt have it, and ſhe ſaid to ſatisfy me ſhe would go to the Juſtice and take her oath that ſhe did not know any thing of it, I went to Bow-ſtreet and got a conſtable, and he took her to Bow-ſtreet; I heard her confeſs that ſhe took it, before Juſtice Addington; ſhe came to me about two minutes before I went before the Juſtice, and ſaid ſhe hoped I would not be ſevere with her, for it was her miſconduct, and ſhe took the ſilk, for ſhe wanted money to buy ſtrawberries; I had ſaid nothing before, and I gave her no anſwer.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Council. You had not carried home the ſilk at all?—No, Sir.

Where had you purchaſed it?—In Swallow-ſtreet.

You laid it down while you tied up the peas and went away forgetting it?—Yes.

Was the old woman at the ſtand when you came firſt back?—Yes.

Did not ſhe ſay that ſhe found the ſilk laying on her ſtand, and that ſhe had pawned it, and if you would ſwear it was your property, ſo that ſhe might be ſatisfied, ſhe would reſtore it?—No, Sir, I ſaid if ſhe would reſtore my property I would pay the expences.

Was that before ſhe had told you ſhe had taken it?—Yes.

THOMAS CROSBY ſworn.

On the 5th of July laſt this ſame girl came down to me, I went with Mrs. Ellis, and I took the woman into cuſtody, and ſhe denied every thing; I told her it was better to own it, and give it up, ſhe would not; they told me where it was pawned, and I found it at the corner of Bedford-ſtreet, in the Strand.

Court to Ellis. Was her daughter at the ſtand?——She keeps another ſtand.

JOHN

JOHN BOND sworn.

I live with Mrs. Bates, the corner of Bedford-street, on the 9th of July the two prisoners brought three yards of silk to pledge, they only wanted five shillings; I would have lent them twice the money upon it; I asked them what it cost a yard, she told me it cost her four shillings; I have known the prisoners four years, and taken in things of five times the value of these; I always took them to be honest people before this.

Mr. Gurtow. Is there any mark upon it?—No, common black mode.

Court to Ellis. Look at that mode, can you swear to it?—I can swear to the quantity, but I cannot swear to the silk.

Jury. Was the quantity of silk in two pieces?—Yes, Sir.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron HOTHAM.

---

899. JOHN BERROW was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 12th day of September, one silver watch, value 3l. one steel chain, value 2s. and one stone seal set in silver, value 1d. and one key, value 1d. the property of George Price.

GEORGE PRICE sworn.

I and two more were returning home, and were joking and sparring with each other, and the prisoner and another came up, and pretended to be friends; my acquaintance Plumpton wanted to make a blow at me, and the prisoner jumped in between us, and desired no foul play might be shewn, I told him no; upon which I unbuttoned my waistcoat, and that instant I found my watch go from me; then the prisoner turned to go from me, and I caught hold of him, and he tumbled down, I charged him with stealing my watch, and he denied knowing anything of it; and two strangers came by, and they asked if he felt anywhere, and the watchman went with Plumpton, and looked, and Plumpton picked up the case in one place, and the watch in another, and the glass broke all to pieces.

Mr. Knowles, Prisoner's Counsel. Can you take upon you to say that you did not drop your own watch?—I think I can.

Are you positive of it?—Yes.

Why did you hesitate so much in the answer to that question?——Because I was recollecting.

Then you have some doubt?—No, I have no doubt, but as you put the question to me, it being a serious one, I was endeavouring to recollect.

Was you sober?——Rather merry.

Rather in liquor?——Yes.

You had been out spending the evening with some companions?—Yes.

You had been drinking a little?—Yes.

This was about one?—Yes.

All of you pretty merry?—We were rather merry.

Are you sure you were not drunk?——I own I was rather merry.

SAMUEL PLUMPTON sworn.

I had been spending the evening with this young man in St. Paul's Church yard.

Where do you live?—We live in Black Friars.

You went to Covent-Garden for a frolick?—No, Sir, we came round Ludgate-hill with a young man that was going to Bride-lane, and there was an engine, and we pursued it as far as Maiden-lane, and then one said to another, we will take a walk round Covent-Garden; we stopped at the corner of the Piazza, next James-street, and had some saloop, and he caught hold of my hair behind, and pulled me back, which rather vexed me; upon which I turned round and made a blow at him, and he began sparring at me, and the prisoner and another person came up, under pretence of being my second; I then went to strike at Price, and the prisoner quitted me and ran in between, and called out no foul play; immediately I heard Price halloo out to me, Sam, I have loſt my watch; and two ſtrange gentlemen came up but juſt before, he obſerved to him, if you will return me my watch, I will let you go; we went with the watchman, and picked up the caſe and the watch, the glaſs was broken; I think Price had his waiſtcoat unbuttoned when I came up.

Was Price drunk or ſober?——He was rather mellow, but far from drunk.

Mr. Knowles. Then I am to underſtand that you had been drinking, and had been wandering out of your way, and had ſtruck out a fooliſh quarrel?——Yes, we thought we would go round the garden.

HENRY BAMBRIDGE ſworn.

I am only the conſtable; they told me much the ſame ſtory that they told your Lordſhip; Mr. Plumpton gave me the watch.

(The watch produced, having a very remarkable watch-paper of the year 1784.)

(Depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was coming by, and one of the gentlemen ſaid, will you take my part, I ſaid with all my heart; he ſaid he had loſt his watch, I ſaid I was very willing to be ſearched; they ſearched me, but found no watch.

The priſoner called four witneſſes, who gave him a very good character, and ſaid he was the ſon of very reputable parents, and clerk to an attorney, and Mr. Knowles aſſured the Court he had fourteen more witneſſes to call to his character, if neceſſary.

NOT GUILTY.

Court to Priſoner. You have had ſeveral witneſſes, who have given you a good character, and the Jury have acquitted you; I do not think this trial will be any imputation on your character; but yet it will be a means of cautioning you againſt the dangerous conſequences of bad company, and bad hours.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

900. MARY MOON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 26th day of July laſt, one muſlin apron, value 3s. the property of Thomas Ham.

THOMAS MIDDLETON ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner the 16th of July, between twelve and one, ſtanding at the window of Mr. Ham, a linen draper at Temple-bar, and I ſaw her put her hand under her cloak, and take hold of the corner of this apron; ſhe put her hand round the door-poſt; it is a narrow door-poſt, I came up to her, and put her into the ſhop, ſhe left the apron, at the outſide of the window.

Had ſhe got it out of the window?—No, Sir, ſhe took hold of the corner, and pulled at it, but I prevented her before ſhe got it out of the place.

Court to Jury. Gentlemen, I need not give you any further trouble, this young man prevented her from committing the felony.

NOT GUILTY.

Court to Priſoner. Be careful in future.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

901. JOHN HENRY AIKLES was indicted for feloniouſly returning from tranſportation, and being found at large on the 26th day of May laſt, without any lawful cauſe, before the expiration of the term of ſeven years, for which he was ſentenced to be tranſported, againſt the ſtatute.

The record of the priſoner's conviction read by Mr. Shelton, Clerk of the Arraigns, and examined by Mr. Garrow, priſoner's counſel.

JOHN OWEN ſworn.

Examined by Mr. Knowles, counſel for the Proſecution.

I am ſervant to Mr. Akerman, keeper of Newgate.

Do you remember ſeeing the priſoner at the bar?—— Yes, in January ſeſſions, 1784.

Do you know what he was tried for?—For

For ſtealing a bill, value one hundred pounds, the property of Samuel Edwards.

What was the verdict?—It was left ſpecial, till the July ſeſſions following.

Did you ſee him again in July Seſſions?—I brought him up from Newgate to receive ſentence.

Do you know whether he did receive ſentence?——He received ſentence to be tranſported to America for ſeven years.

In your hearing?——I was preſent, and brought him up.

Mr. Garrow. Owen, when was he diſcharged out of your cuſtody?——I believe the beginning of this year.

In conſequence of his Majeſty's pardon, upon condition that he would tranſport himſelf within fourteen days?—Yes.

In conſequence of Mr. Recorder's warrant to the gaoler of Newgate?—Yes.

CHARLES JEALOUS ſworn.

I apprehended the priſoner the 26th of laſt May, at Iſlington, he was at large: Mr. Clarke and me were going by the Angel, at Iſlington, and he ſaw us, and ran away among the ſheep pens, and we took him, he was in the front room next the road in the widow, he was ſtopped and taken.

(The warrant read on condition of tranſporting himſelf in fourteen days.)

Mr. Garrow to Owen. Can you fix the time when the man was diſcharged?—No, I cannot fix it to a certain day, it was in the beginning of this year.

Mr. Garrow, My Lord, if you look to the King's pardon, it is fourteen days from the day in which he ſhall be diſcharged out of cuſtody; there were a number of civil detainers againſt him, and he had of courſe taken no pains to ſuperſede them till he got the King's pardon: I mean to ſubmit to the Court, that it is incumbent on the proſecutor to ſhew the preciſe day of his diſcharge out of cuſtody, I contend that that caſe may well be preſumed in favour of the priſoner to have happened, which in point of fact has happened in the preſent inſtance, and that the onus probandi is on them; ſuppoſing a man to be detained on civil actions till the whole fourteen days were elapſed, the purpoſe of the King's gracious pardon would be defeated, and the keeper would ſay you have broke the King's pardon, and according to the argument of to day (ſtrange as that argument is) you have committed a capital felony by remaining here.

JOHN NEWMAN ſworn.

I am clerk of the papers, this is my writing, I copied it from the Sheriff's warrant.

Mr. Garrow. Have you the warrants there?——No, I have them at home, here is an entry of the day on which he was diſcharged, I know nothing of it of my own knowledge; Pitt diſcharges.

What is that book?——This is a daily book that I keep of thoſe that go in, and come out, this is a book for the entry of debtors, he diſcharged his debt the 25th of February, and it appears here, he was diſcharged in the month of March.

Is that book kept ſolely for entering the diſcharges?—Diſcharges and commitments of debtors, as well as criminals of the maſter's ſide, and he appears to be of the maſter's ſide.

Mr. Garrow. You know nothing perſonally of your own knowledge concerning the diſcharge of this man, but what you heard from the turnkey?—No.

So that if the turnkey neglected his duty, or impoſed upon you there might be a falſe date on your book; for if there is no day marked, you conclude it is that day, but if it is the day after you copy that which is ſo marked on the warrant?—Yes.

Who writes that on the warrant?—The turnkey.

What do you do with the warrants?—I file them, and keep them regularly.

Court (looking at the warrant.) Here is nothing written on this warrant, how came he to be detained till the 9th of March.

Mr. Garrow. I know Mr. Akerman excuſed him his fees as he very often does; for the man had not a farthing in the world.

Mr. Garrow. My Lords, I muſt beg leave to trouble your Lordſhips, I think the objections to this proof, from all the queſtions that have been addreſſed to Mr. Newman, he has freely confeſſed he does not know; that is not the original entry, it is the firſt book on the ſubject, but not the original minutes; they have evidence perfectly good in its nature, but Mr. Newman, knows nothing perſonally on the ſubject; ſays he, it is the duty of the turnkey to apprize me of it as ſoon as he can; but if a riot ſhould happen in the gaol, if the turnkey ſhould fall aſleep, or anything elſe ſhould prevent him, poſſibly (which is enough for my argument) he may not apprize him of it at the time, and to cover ſuch neglect may impoſe upon him a wrong day: my Lords, I may aſk what hinders them from producing that turnkey, what hinders them from producing the memorandum of the turnkey, that would be the beſt evidence, but this is the ſecond beſt, this is but a copy of that memorandum. Now, ſuppoſe, my Lords, the caſe of a brewer, who wants to prove a delivery of a certain number of caſks, and his ſervant who delivered them is dead: we know that there are authorities which ſay, that the entry in the hand writing of that ſervant will be evidence of the delivery: but was it ever contended that the ledger of the brewer copied from the day book, will be evidence? no ſuch thing. I ſubmit this is not the beſt evidence, and therefore ought not to be received.

Mr. Juſtice Gould. I own, for my part, I am inclined to think this is evidence to be received; it is not like a book of a private tradeſmen, it is not like a ledger, but it is a long eſtabliſhed practice, people put a confidence in public officers, and their evidence is to be received with due caution. I think prima facie there is evidence that this man was ſet at liberty on the 9th of March, then he is not taken till the 26th of May, therefore that is more than fourteen days after the diſcharge.

Mr. Baron Hotham. I am inclined very much to concur with my learned brother Gould, for it does not ſeem that Mr. Newman has any intereſt in this book whatever, he is the officer who records this tranſactions, without doubt any party may falſify the book if they can, this being ſuch a kind of book in which he has no intereſt whatever, but faithfully recording the tranſactions, unleſs it is impeached ſome way or other it ought to be received.

Mr. Garrow. The evidence on the part of the proſecution being cloſed, I muſt now, my Lords, take the liberty of troubling the Court with ſome objections in point of law on this caſe. The offence charged againſt the priſoner at the bar, is that he having been convicted of a felony, for which he was liable to be tranſported for ſeven years, did receive ſuch ſentence, and was afterwards found at large in this kingdom, before the expiration of that term, without any lawful cauſe. Your Lordſhip have it in evidence, that he was diſcharged in conſequence of his Majeſty's pardon, granted on condition of tranſporting himſelf, and by virtue of a warrant under the hand and ſeal of the Recorder of London. By the common law of this country, every man is entitled to the full and uninterrupted enjoyment of his perſonal freedom, and he can only forfeit his liberty by the commiſſion of ſome crime, therefore one is obliged to reſort to the ſtatute law, to ſee what that crime is; and I cannot find any one ſtatute that makes this man guilty: the indictment has not charged that the ſentence of the Court, which was originally paſſed upon him, had been altered by his Majeſty's pardon, and I underſtand that the reaſon was, that it is to be argued that the condition of that pardon not being complied with, it is to be taken like the condition of a grant, as if no pardon had been granted at all: now, my Lords, to a certain extent, I am perfectly ready to admit that argument, if it be only contended that Mr. Aikles has forfeited his claim to his Majeſty's mercy, and therefore ought to be remanded to his former ſentence: But if it is to be contended, that he has committed a felony, then I am to find ſome ſtatute law in this country, in which that offence offence is described. By the act of the 16th of George II. chap. 15, it is made a felony for any person ordered to be transported, or who had agreed to transport himself to America, to be found at large in this kingdom without any lawful cause. Mr. Aikles has not agreed to transport himself to America, and therefore he is not indicted on that act of parliament; but I submit that by a subsequent act of parliament, all that is done away by the act of parliament of the 19th of Geo. III. c. 74. The words of the 16th of Geo. II. are these, "that if any felon ordered, or hereafter to "be ordered to be transported, or who had "agreed to transport himself to any of his "Majesty's Colonies and Plantations in "America, be found at large in this king-"dom, without any lawful cause, he shall "suffer death." Now I say, my Lords, that Mr. Aikles is not in the list of cases described in that act of parliament; he has not agreed to transport himself to any of his Majesty's colonies and plantations in America, therefore he has not been indicted under that clause, as he could have been, and the pardon set out: Your Lordships see the condition of this pardon, is generally to depart the realm, not to transport himself specifically to any of his Majesty's colonies and plantations in America; then comes the act of the 8th of Geo. III. which I mention, only because it is one of the acts that is found in the code of transportation laws; it relates only to persons recommended by the Judge of assize to his Majesty's mercy, and who by that mercy are ordered to be transported to America. Your Lordships know, that you no longer have the power to transport to America, or at least you no longer exercise it: Then I say that the legislature, by the act of the 19th of the present King, c. 74, has made an entire new code of transportation laws, in which the case of Mr. Aikles is entirely omitted: and when I say that, my Lords, it becomes me to state what I take to be his case; I take it he is not now an offender, under sentence of transportation to America; but in a case analogous to those mentioned in the statute of the late King, who had agreed to transport themselves; with this difference, that act extended to America; his case is an agreement to transport himself generally, and not to those colonies and plantations: The act says, persons convicted of crimes, punishable by transportation to America, may be ordered to be transported to any parts beyond the seas; then comes the other clause, "or if his "Majesty, his heirs, or successors, shall "extend his royal mercy to any felon, "upon condition of transportation beyond "the seas," then all the laws relative to transportation were to take effect; but your Lordships see, that those who penned this act of parliament, have confined it to such as are attainted, or convicted of crimes without benefit of clergy, whereas Mr. Aikles's case was not an offence for which he was excluded the benefit of clergy. My Lords, I come next to enquire whether he stands on his old sentence, and whether the King's pardon having been granted to him upon a condition, and that condition not being complied with, he has committed a felony? I contend he has not, as he is at large within the realm, with a lawful excuse; that lawful excuse is Mr. Recorder's warrant, and that warrant granted on his Majesty's pardon: if I shew your Lordships that at any one moment he was at liberty, with lawful cause, I should wish to know when that ceased? In the present case, your Lordships cannot extend the law beyond the letter of it, under the several statutes under which your authority arises; then I say there is no statute law which says, that if the condition of his Majesty's pardon is broken, that the person breaking it shall be guilty of a felony; and I am entitled to presume that the legislature in the act of the 19th of the present King, meant purposely to exclude such cases as the present, and thought it enough to tell a man in the situation of Mr. Aikles, you have trifled with the King's pardon, and shall therefore return to that situation in which that pardon found you; but, that they thought it a great deal too much to

I ſay to him, you ſhall be therefore guilty of a felony: I aſk again, where is the ſtatute law, that makes the not complying with that pardon a felony? and I aſk, why was not the condition of the King's pardon ſtated in the indictment? My Lords, there is a caſe which appears to me to be previouſly in point, the caſe of Maxamillian Miller, referred to the conſideration of all the Judges; it was in the year 1770, from this place; he was indicted for being found at large, after having accepted the King's pardon, on condition of being tranſported; but when he came to be tried, a doubt occurred to the Judges who preſided at that time on his caſe, and the Judges have never, I believe, communicated any judicial determination of that caſe, but they did that which was tantamount to it, for they remitted him to his former ſentence: I know that in that day, very abſurdly as it ſeems, the condition of the King's pardon was, that he ſhould give ſecurity, to the ſatisfaction of the Recorder, to depart the country within a limited time: I know that the form of the King's pardon has been altered by the preſent learned Recorder; the condition now is not, that he ſhould give ſecurity to depart, but that he ſhould depart the kingdom, and not return or be found at large, without ſufficient cauſe: but it goes on to ſay, that the King, who by law had a right to ſay he ſhall be releaſed from all his offences; that competent authority has ſaid, that upon giving ſufficient ſecurity he ſhall be diſcharged: now it is in evidence, that he gave ſuch ſecurity, that he was releaſed out of cuſtody, then he was once at large, with a legal excuſe. In Miller's caſe, the condition of giving ſecurity to the Recorder, preceded his departure from the kingdom, and the court held that he could not be convicted of a felony, he having the King's pardon to diſcharge him, on doing a certain thing. My Lords, it does not occur to me, that I can ſtate the argument more clearly than I have done; and to ſum up my objection, it is this, that if the offence is that he has not performed the condition of the King's pardon, then there is no ſtatute law exiſting which calls it an offence, but there is a late act of parliament, in which that offence is not revived; and I contend that, though it may vacate a pardon, yet, as of courſe it cannot be an offence at common law, and there is no ſtatute deſcribing the offence, your Lordſhips, upon the authority of Maximilian Miller's caſe, will direct the Jury to acquit the priſoner.

Mr. Knowles. I have to lament my Lords, that in a caſe of ſo much conſequence to publick juſtice, the ſupport of it ſhould be left to my feeble abilities, in the abſence of a gentleman much more verſed in the criminal law of this country than myſelf, from him I have received this brief, without any idea of an anſwer being neceſſary to ſuch an objection as the preſent, however, I will endeavour to ſuggeſt to the Court what ariſes to me, caught up in a moment upon what has dropped from my learned friend: I take it, my Lords, that there are two clauſes in the act of parliament which attack ſtrongly on this priſoner, the firſt is, that if any perſon ſhall be at large within the time for which he is ordered to be tranſported, that he by that act becomes a capital offender; there is another clauſe of it, which ſays, that likewiſe the perſon who is ſentenced to be tranſported, and ſhall agree to tranſport himſelf, and return into the kingdom within a limited time, ſhall be a capital offender: I take the offence certainly to be within the firſt of theſe clauſes, becauſe he has had ſentence of tranſportation paſſed upon him by a Court competent to pronounce that ſentence; this defence is ſet up, his Majeſty has been pleaſed to grant him a pardon, which pardon is ſaid to give him lawful cauſe for being found at large: this pardon was, as former pardons were on condition (only) that this perſon ſhould give ſecurity to the Recorder of London to depart the nation; I hold his having given that ſecurity is all that can be required of him, and though the ſecurity is forfeited of courſe, yet, he is at large with lawful cauſe, and there would be no poſſiſibility of his being indicted for a capital offence; but the pardon now granted to him, is upon condition "that he the priſoner depart this kingdom within fourteen days." the words are "And our will and pleaſure further is (which certainly is a diſtinct proposition from what has gone before) that upon giving due ſecurity to the Record to ſo to do, he then ſhould be diſcharged out of cuſtody—If he be found at large within the fourteen days after his diſcharge, he then is at large with lawful cauſe. But though he gives this ſecurity, that does not take away the precedent condition of that pardon, for it is perfectly ſeparate, and diſtinct from it: it is contended this act of parliament is repealed by the 19th of Geo. III, the reaſon of paſſing that act was that in conſequence of the unhappy rebellion which took place in our colonies in America; they could not ſend the felons there; then another act of parliament was neceſſary as to the tranſportation of thoſe offenders, and it ſays, not that they ſhall be hereafter tranſported to any other place, but that it may be lawful to his Majeſty in ſuch caſes, to tranſport them elſewhere if his Majeſty ſo pleaſes; I hold that the two acts run together, and the one only extends the powers of the other, but does not repeal it in any ſhape whatever: now when a pardon is granted on certain conditions, and they are broken, that pardon is as if it never had had exiſtence; the priſoner has a pardon granted him, and ſhall either accept it to comply with the conditions of it, or refuſe it, and remain under his former ſentence: he knows the conditions, and his ability or inability to perform them, and if after having accepted it, he finds himſelf unable to perform them, he might have ſurrendered to any Magiſtrate, he might have been in legal cuſtody. If this pardon never did take place, being upon condition which had not been performed, it certainly can be of no avail to the priſoner; as to Miller's caſe, I never ſaw it, I think it muſt turn upon the different mode of wording the pardon from that now adopted.

Mr. Juſtice Gould. I think it is neceſſary to make a final deciſion in this point; we perfectly well know that by the common law, the King may grant his pardon upon condition; Lord Coke ſays in the firſt inſtitute 274b, if a villain is manumitted, every condition on that manumiſſion is utterly void; but, ſays Lord Coke, the King may grant his pardon on condition: the ſenſe and meaning of that muſt neceſſarily be, that if the King's condition of the pardon is broken, it makes it a nullity: as for the argument upon theſe acts of parliament it was extremely well enforced by Mr. Garrow, that it is not in the power of the Judges to make a felony if the law has not made one: therefore now according to the old law, where felonies were capital, where the benefit of clergy did not interpoſe to ſave them; if the party had undertaken to depart the realm with all poſſible ſpeed, if he did not uſe all due diligence to depart, I know perfectly well, as in Stamper's caſe, he was remitted to his former ſentence, he was to be executed, ſuppoſing the ſentence was capital, according to that former ſentence, and the reaſon they gave for it was, that there could not be two attainders for one crime; ſo ſtood the antient law: then when this ſyſtem of tranſportation took effect, the act of parliament made the returning before the term a felony, and then the ſubſequent act of parliament that Mr. Garrow has mentioned, putting it more at large, and to facilitate the conviction, ſaying, that if he ſhall be found at large within the realm, before that term of tranſportation expired, it ſhall be a new felony; that put it upon a different plan, from the common law, therefore, ſuppoſe the party came into a new deſcription of the act of parliament, you are under the neceſſity of indicting him for a new made felonony: this man is convicted of a clergyable felony, and receives ſentence of tranſportation, his Majeſty is graciouſly pleaſed to interpoſe on his part, and to pardon the crime; theſe are the terms of the King's pardon, upon condition that he ſhould depart part the realm within fourteen days after he should be discharged; but it is proved, and does appear to us in evidence, that he was discharged according to the true spirit and meaning of his Majesty's gracious act, and that he did not comply with that condition, but was taken at large after the expiration of fourteen days: it is very true, that this act of the nineteenth of his present Majesty seems to have perplexed the matter a little, because it takes up felonies not excluded from the benefit of clergy where the sentence is transportation pronounced by the court; and then it says nothing at all upon the King's pardon on condition of transporting themselves, but only makes provision with respect to those capitally convicted; but this act has not repealed the former statutes, so far from it, that it provides in the clause that I would have been glad to have referred to, that all the clauses in the fourth of George the Second, and in the sixteenth of George the Second particularly should be applied, and put in force with respect to all persons that were sentenced to be transported under this act of parliament, or something of that kind: now, what was the sense and meaning of that act of parliament? By that act of parliament courts of justice were restrained, and obliged to order their transports to America; nay, and it has been determined to my knowledge by all the Judges upon a question arising on the fishing act, referred by Mr. Justice Bathurst, that when the act says a man shall be transported for seven years without saying where, it should be to America; that was the opinion of all the Judges, I remember that case well. In the sixteenth of George the Second this man's case is; he was sentenced to be transported to America, and, as Mr. Garrow states faithfully, no doubt, that act of parliament speaks of the condition that he should transport himself to America: the King does not model his pardon in that way, but he says he should depart the realm, but the party does not do this; the consequence is, that not having complied with the terms of that pardon, as it strikes me at present (I do not give my final opinion upon it) that he was then at large within that statute of the 16th of Geo. II. he then, the instant the fourteenth day expired, was at large without any lawful authority: with respect to the objection, that this is not stated in the indictment, I shall not give any final opinion upon that neither, but the indictment is perfectly regular, and in due form, and it states it, and it is incumbent on the prisoner to shew on the one hand the lawful cause why he was at large; he has entirely broke his Majesty's pardon, and the pardon is at an end. These are my present sentiments; if there is any doubt with my brother Hotham, or the Recorder, I will reserve the case for the opinion of the twelve Judges.

Mr. Baron Hotham. In this case the argument, as Mr. Garrow put it, was unquestionably strong, and the prisoner cannot fall within that part of the clause of the sixteenth of the late King, because he has not agreed to transport himself to America, and he cannot fall within the act of the nineteenth of the present King, because that respects pardon granted to people who had been capitally convicted; but the doubtful part of the case is, whether the pardon is not absolutely and entirely done away, and the case now to be considered as if no pardon had been granted; if it be, then, see how it stands on these two acts of parliament: if the King's pardon is actually done away, may it not be extremely questionable, whether this man having been sentenced to be transported beyond the the seas, by the operation of the act of the present King, is not now subject to the pains and penalties of that act; I think it is so doubtful, that without giving an opinion, I think fit to join with my brother Gould, in reserving it for the consideration of the Judges.

The remainder of this Trial in the next Part, which will be published in a few days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 14th of SEPTEMBER, 1785, and the following Days;

Being the SEVENTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER VII. PART XI.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of Henry Aikles.

Mr. Recorder. I muſt confeſs, notwithſtanding the diffidence with which I wiſh to expreſs myſelf in the preſence of the two learned Judges on ſuch a ſubject, that it does appear to me, that this caſe requires a ſolemn determination, more from importance than the difficulty of it; it ſeems very clear it does not come within either the clauſe of the 16th of Geo. II. which reſpects perſons who have agreed to tranſport themſelves; nor within that clauſe of the 19th of the preſent King, which relates to pardons granted by the King: Mr. Aikles has not agreed to tranſport himſelf to America, and the clauſe not being repeated, I think we cannot extend it: it does not come, I think, within that clauſe; and it does not come within the clauſe of the 19th of the preſent King, becauſe it is not a pardon for a capital offence, and capital offences are ſpoken of by that ſtatute: it ſeems to me at preſent that the indictment is perfectly ſupported under the clauſe of the 16th of Geo. II. which make it a capital felony to be found at large, within the term for which a perſon has been ſentenced to be tranſported to America. The priſoner was ſo ſentenced, that ſentence has been proved, and that the priſoner was at large, after the time of that ſentence, and before the expiration of the term; ſo far therefore upon that evidence there is the ſimple caſe made out under the ſtatute, but it appears alſo that he was at large under a warrant from the Recorder, founded upon a conditional pardon granted by his Majeſty, and it is contended that having been once at large, by lawful cauſe, he cannot be guilty of felony in being at large, under a ſentence of tranſportation, and that if he has broken the condition of his Majeſty's pardon, by means of which he became at large, the utmoſt conſequence muſt be that it ſhall not be in force. From the reaſons which Mr. Juſtice Gould has laid down, I am perfectly ſatisfied, and I always did think the pardon being broke, becomes totally void: it is not ſo only from the common law, but it is laid down in more modern books, and ſuch care is taken that pardons ſhould not be abuſed, that it has been held that upon an allegation that the King was deceived in the circumſtances on which he granted that pardon, the pardon ſhould be void: and it has been held neceſſary, that they ſhould recite the crime fo for which the pardon was granted; upon every authority and principle it ſeems to be eſtabliſhed, that where the condition of the King's pardon is broken, it becomes a nullity. In the caſe of Patrick Madan, which happened in all our remembrance, the Court acted upon that principle, though there was no adjudication of it; he had been capitally convicted, and was pardoned on condition of tranſportation; he was afterwards found at large; he was not indicted for a new felony, in being ſo found at large, but he was brought up, and the court being ſatisfied from his own admiſſion, that he was the ſame perſon, he was called upon to aſſign a lawful excuſe for being ſo at large, and the Court remanded him to priſon under his former ſentence, on this principle, that the condition of the King's pardon being broken, the pardon was gone, and the party remained preciſely in the ſame ſituation that he was the day before the pardon was granted. Now, what was Mr. Aikles's ſituation before his Majeſty's pardon iſſued? We find him then in the ſituation of a felon under ſentence of tranſportation; the pardon being gone he remained, and remains ſtill under that ſentence; he therefore was in a ſituation in which, if he was found at large, he committed a felony; he had no lawful cauſe under the King's warrant for being at large beyond the term of fourteen days, therefore on the 20th of May he remained in the ſituation of a man under ſentence of tranſportation, and without any lawful cauſe, for the lawful cauſe does not extend beyond the fourteen days, and therefore on the 26th of May he was at large in the kingdom, without any lawful cauſe; the pardon therefore being void, it ſeems to me that the indictment itſelf is good, and is fully ſupported by evidence: and the inclination of my opinion at preſent goes one ſtep further, that if the indictment had ſtated the pardon, and that he had broken the condition of the King's pardon, and that therefore he would have been guilty of a felony, it would have been bad; for it is not a felony to break the King's pardon, except in the two caſes, in the 16th and 19th of the preſent King; the 16th of Geo. makes it felony, firſt, in perſons who are ſentenced to be tranſported to return; next in perſons that have agreed to tranſport themſelves to return; in the firſt caſe, it is a diſtinct felony being at large under the ſentence of tranſportation; in the next caſe, where the perſons have agreed to tranſport themſelves: in the 19th of the preſent King, it alſo makes it a felony for capital convicts to be at large after they have been ordered or received pardon, on condition of being tranſported, becauſe they then become under a new ſentence, the ſentence of death is done away, and they would not have been guilty of a capital offence without that clauſe; therefore it was neceſſary to put them in the ſame ſituation, in the caſe of a capital felon who agrees to tranſport himſelf; and it was not neceſſary for the 19th of Geo. III. to take up that, in the caſe of a capital felony, becauſe it was needleſs to make that a new felony, where the party was liable under his former ſentence; therefore the legiſlature in the 19th of the preſent King, ſeems to have omitted both thoſe caſes, upon this very principle; I think therefore that the indictment is ſupported. I have ſeen a correct ſtate of Maximilian Miller's caſe; there it was on condition of giving ſecurity to depart the kingdom, and the Judges never made any ſolemn adjudication, but in point of fact the priſoner was remanded to his former ſentence.

Mr. Garrow to Jealous. When you took the priſoner, what money had he?—Nine ſhillings, and one out of them bad.

I believe he was in a miſerable ſtate of indigence?——He looked a deal better than he does now; he was in blue, but he looked a deal more decent.

Do you know what the ſtate of his health was?——I believe he was not very well.

BENJAMIN APPLEYARD ſworn.

I am a ſtationer, I have ſeen the priſoner before.

In what ſtate was his health after he was diſcharged from Newgate?——He came to my houſe to aſk me to apply to Mr. Dunkennan

Kennan who lodges with me to aſſiſt him with a little money to carry him out of England, as he was very much diſtreſſed.

In what ſtate was his health then?—He had a thick ſtick in his hand, and he reſted himſelf much upon it; and he aſk'd me to let him ſit down in the ſhop a little; he ſeemed very lame, and he ſaid he was bad in health, and the irons, while he was in Newgate, had hurt his legs, he did not know how to walk; this was the day after he was diſcharged out of Newgate; he ſeemed to be very much diſtreſſed, and in very bad health.

Do you believe that theſe cauſes prevented him from going abroad?——I believe they did, for he wrote a letter to me, and ſent by his wife, praying for a trifle, ever ſo ſmall, ſaying that his time was almoſt out, and that if he had not a trifle to get him to the water-ſide, he muſt fall under the law.

He did not get any large aſſiſtance?—He got nothing at all.

THOMAS BREADALL ſworn.

I ſaw Mr. Aikles after he was diſcharged out of Newgate, his health was very indifferent, he had ſymptoms of a fever, and his legs were ſwelled, and very bad; and a week after he came out of Newgate, he fell very ill, and was confined to his bed, he had an ugly malignant fever.

Did he appear to you to be very indigent?——Very much ſo, and his wife and a gentlewoman, Mrs. Brookes, came to me, and undertook to pay me; he was not in a ſituation to pay me at that time.

Do you believe that the miſerable ſtate of his health, and his want of money, prevented his getting abroad?——I really believe it did.

Mr. Garrow. Mrs. Brooks is not here?

Priſoner. Mrs. Brooks was taken very ill on Saturday, ſhe was here till Saturday, and all laſt ſeſſions; Mr. Holloway can teſtify the truth of it.

Court to Jury. All laws muſt be conſidered with liberality, and a ſort of equity, in order to put a due conſtruction on the meaning of them; and I confeſs, gentlemen, if you are ſatisfied, that thro' ill health, and this diſtreſs that you have heard that the priſoner was in, he was prevented from performing the conditions that the pardon required, that it would be too ſtrong to impute to him, that he was feloniouſly at large in defiance of this pardon; the act ſays, lawful excuſe; certainly illneſs, and ſickneſs, the viſitation of God will operate as a lawful excuſe, and if you ſhould be ſatisfied that there was no fiction in this caſe, but that in reality and truth this was what prevented the man from going abroad, and that he meant and intended to go abroad; I own, in that caſe I think you ſhould acquit the priſoner; on the other hand, if you think this is an artifice, not founded in reality, then you will find him guilty.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice GOULD.

---

902. GEORGE THORPE was indicted for feloniouſly returning from tranſportation, and being found at large on the 9th day of Auguſt laſt, without any lawful cauſe.

CHARLES JEALOUS ſworn.

I apprehended the priſoner the 9th day of Auguſt, in the morning, about ſeven; I took him out of bed, upon an information of his being at large.

JOHN OWEN ſworn.

In January ſeſſions, 1785, upon the proſecution of Mr. Hobert the priſoner was convicted of ſtealing a ſide of bacon, in Fleet-market, he was ſentenced to be tranſported.

The priſoner delivered in a written defence, which was read by the Clerk of the Arraigns; the purport of which was, that though he was at large, yet it was not without a lawful cauſe, for he was diſcharged charged from Newgate by virtue of his Majesty's pardon, and he endeavoured to obtain a passage out of the kingdom; but through poverty was not able to effect it, and therefore was at large without his own inclination and consent, and had committed no new offence, but had conducted himself industriously.

The warrant read; signed James Adair, Esq; Recorder, dated 9th April, which was a warrant for his discharge, upon his giving security to depart the kingdom. The pardon read; signed G. R. countersigned Sydney, dated 25th March.

For the PRISONER.

JOHN THORPE sworn.

I am a plumber and glazier; I am brother to the prisoner, he went from Newgate to my house, I believe it was in the month of April. I came into this court, and paid his fees, and took him with me.

Mr. Keys, prisoner's counsel. How long did he remain at your house at that time?—Only that night; he went immediately with his mother to her house at Hamondsworth, near Langford, I was down there, and saw him there; he remained there in a place, he was at work till he came to London to my house; I made frequent applications while he was with his mother for a ship to get him to sea.

He had no money at all of his own I believe?———None at all.

Would his father-in-law assist him at all?—Not at all; I offered to pay five pounds towards the passage, his father-in-law would not give him any; it was five or six weeks after before I heard of the ship going to America; ten guineas was the least sum I could get him to go for; I know he was employed, but I never saw him at work; I have seen his father-in-law at work, he was to have gone from his mother to Portsmouth, he was wholly unable to have gone for want of money; it was his desire to have gone; he was kept a close prisoner; he was at his mother's, and was very ill; he had a rash, and the irons made his leg bad; he got employed in emptying a mill-pond; his father-in-law said he would give ten pounds to have him apprehended.

Court. Has your mother any property, or your father-in-law?———Yes, I believe they have upwards of one hundred pounds a year.

What sort of property is it?—Leasehold houses.

CHARLES COOKE sworn.

I am a day labouring man, I know the prisoner, he worked with me by Salt-hill in dragging of mud from a mill-pond, he worked seven weeks with me, I believe he first came out about April or May.

Can you recollect the day he quitted work?———No.

Mr. Knyr. I believe he had no money at this time?———None, but what he gained from his daily labour; there was a man after him to take him, that was the cause of his leaving it; he behaved exceedingly well, and would have wished to have staid if he could.

WILLIAM MORRIS sworn.

I am a painter in Clerkenwell; I was employed by Mr. Thorne's directions to look for a ship for the prisoner; I went several times to the Carolina Coffee-house; I first heard of a ship in about a fortnight; we could not get a ship for less than ten guineas, and they would not take him unless the whole money was paid down; the lad was very desirous of going abroad in any way; I applied to a gentleman to recommend him on board to work his passage.

Court to Jury. Gentlemen, if I were now obliged to decide the law upon this case, I should find it my duty to tell you, that I think the prisoner's defence well warranted, and that in point of law he ought to be acquitted of this offence imputed to him by the indictment, because the condition of the pardon being, that he should give a security to the satisfaction of the Recorder, and having done so, I think that by that he has literally fulfilled the condition of his Majesty's pardon, and that the consequence of his not departing the kingdom, pursuant to the King's intention, is the forfeiture of that recognizance in himself, and in his bail: but there has been a former case exactly similar, in which from what fell from the Court, though there was no solemn opinion given, yet the Court then appeared to have an opinion different to mine; if therefore the case turns out to rest entirely on this point, the safest way will be for you not to rely on my opinion, but to find the prisoner guilty of the fact, with assurance that he will have the benefit of the law: the prisoner says, that he not only was discharged by lawful warrant, and by that means had, as he thought, literally fulfilled the condition of his pardon, but, says he, I did all I could literally and substantially to follow his Majesty's intention; I did all that lay in my power to quit the kingdom; now it is my duty to state to you my opinion in point of law on the nature of that defence: intention is necessary in all cases to constitute criminality, and that is a maxim of criminal law I hope will never be forgotten either by Judges or Juries; but a culpable neglect is a breach of the law certainly: there is another maxim of the law, which is, that the law does not expect or command things impossible, it would be perfectly absurd if it did; now, see how far these two maxims apply, which are clear and undoubted law, the first, that intention is necessary to make a man guilty of any criminal act, the next, that the law does not require impossibilities: first, the prisoner says, it was not with his own will that he was at large at all; next he contends, that it was not in his power to quit the kingdom, and that therefore the law could not require him to do what is impossible; now, although the prisoner has made out an extremely favourable defence, yet, I have doubts how far it does or does not amount to a strict legal justification; for although the law will not impute crime without intention, and he must be wilfully at large without probable cause, yet, a palpable neglect is within the intent and meaning of the law, and the question is, whether you think the prisoner did every thing in his power to complete the condition of his pardon, and could not have done more? he appears really to have endeavoured to obtain a passage to America, and actually offered to work his passage over, which seemed to be all he could do in that respect; he states that is the only place where he could get a livelihood, therefore he did not try to obtain a passage at any other place; he might, without difficulty, have got leave to have gone to some of the near parts on the coast of France or Holland, but then he would be a stranger in a foreign land: you are to judge whether the difficulty he found in departing from the kingdom, in the manner I have stated to you, amounted to all due diligence; it is my duty to tell you, if you are satisfied that he was not wilfully and intentionally at large, you ought to acquit him: you are to consider whether he was wilfully and intentionally at large, and whether there was that sort of impossibility to excuse him in point of fact; if you believe that he was not wilfully at large, but did all that in him lay to obtain a passage out of this kingdom, in that case I think that in law as well as in justice you will do right to find him generally not guilty of this indictment; if on the other hand you think that though it may be a favourable case, so as to set the prisoner in a situation deserving of future mercy from his sovereign, yet, that he might possibly have done something more than he did to facilitate his departure from this kingdom, and to shew his willingness for such departure; in that case it will be resolved into the first point of law, and if you think it comes to that point, you will find him guilty, and that point will be reserved to be hereafter determined by the Judges.

NOT GUILTY.

Court to Prisoner. The case that you have made out in evidence before the Court is so favourable, that I think there would be a hardship in detaining you in prison against my own opinion, especially when the learned assistance that I have now the advantage of, both the learned Judges and my friend Mr. Rose, are of my opinion, and and as there is no judicial authority to detain you in prison; but I would recommend it to you to take an opportunity of leaving this country, and I think I can recommend to you a way of carrying that into execution, you have entered into a recognizance in one hundred pounds and two other persons in fifty pounds each, to perform that condition, you and they have most clearly forfeited that recognizance, and therefore the only means your securities have left to avoid the payment of those sums, which I will take care they shall otherwise pay, will be to supply you with money for the purpose of your getting out of the kingdom; therefore, you will apply to the two persons who are your bail, and inform them that unless they supply you with money for that purpose, I will take care that they shall be served with process. Let the prisoner be discharged out of custody.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

MISDEMEANORS.

905. JUDITH BARRUCH wife of Uzziel Barruch was indicted for feloniously receiving, on the 6th day of March last, divers articles of plate and goods, the property of Robert Snow, Esq; well knowing the same to have been stolen.

John Waddington and Jacob Aarons called on their recognizance, and not appearing there was no evidence, and the prisoner was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the second London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

On the Eleventh Day of this Session, at the Adjournment at Guildhall, the following Third London Jury were sworn.

John Hoppe
Job Orton
James Carden
Matthew East
Thomas Duncombe
John Wallis
Adam Alsop
John Willoughby
James Atkinson
Robert Keene
John Newton
Robert Sugden.

906. JOHN BROOKLEBANK was indicted for obtaining the sum of 10s. 6d. by a false certificate, that George Wilson, preferable waterman, was on duty, with intent to defraud the King.

A second count, with intent to defraud John Frank.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the third London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

907. MARY

907. MARY GRAHAM was indicted for wilful and corrupt perjury at the laſt ſeſſions at the Old Bailey, on the trial of William Goſling.

The record of the conviction of William Goſling read.

FRANCIS ROWLEY ſworn.

I know the priſoner, ſhe appeared as a witneſs on the trial of William Goſling, I was preſent when ſhe was ſworn.

Did you ſee her ſworn?—I did.

Are you able to ſtate with certainty what evidence ſhe gave?—No, I cannot.

EDMUND HODGSON ſworn.

Court. Do you know the perſon of the priſoner?—No, my Lord, I only know that a perſon of the name of Mary Graham gave the following evidence on the trial of William Goſling, which I took down in ſhort-hand.

The Short-hand writer here read the evidence of Mary Graham, from his original ſhort-hand notes, taken on the trial, as follows, viz.

"MARY GRAHAM ſworn.—I live in "Sun Tavern-fields, Shadwell, in Mr. "Biſhop's houſe; on Wedneſday in the "Whitſun-week, the priſoner's mother "and me were together, and the two gen- "tlemen were together, the proſecutor and "Mr. Rowley, it was in Guildhall-yard; "they were diſcourſing together about the "young man, and Mr. Rowley ſaid he "would make forty pounds on him, and "his mother ſaid ſhe hoped he would not "make five farthings on him; when they "came into the hall, there was a man "named Hart, who told theſe two gentle- "men to ſwear plump againſt him, or elſe "he would not be fully committed; and "there was another gentlewoman, named "Mary Newmarſh; and Hart ſaid if ever "a one of us offered to ſwear in his behalf, "he would perjure us all three, and they "would not ſuffer ever a one of us to "ſpeak a word; then Hart told Rowley "and the proſecutor, to ſwear plump "againſt him, or elſe he would not be fully "committed: Mary Newmarſh was alſo "preſent; Mrs. Hart is a conſtable, and "wears brown clothes; his mother ſaid, "gentlemen, do not ſwear my child's life "away wrongfully, and Mr. Rowley ſaid, "I will make forty pounds of him, I only "want the reward."

Court to Rowley. Are you ſure that the perſon now on trial, was the ſame perſon that was ſworn under the name of Mary Graham?——Yes.

You have heard Mr. Hodgſon, the ſhort-hand writer, repeat now, what ſhe ſwore on the trial, is it true that this converſation paſſed at Guildhall, in the hearing of the priſoner, or of any other perſon?—No my Lord.

Did you ever ſay you would make forty pounds of the priſoner?——Never in my life.

Nor to that effect?——No.

Do you know Hart?——Yes.

Did Hart ever tell you, or Mr. Ambler the proſecutor in your preſence, to ſwear plump againſt Goſling, or elſe he would not be fully committed?——No, never any ſuch thing, nor any thing to the ſame purport, nor I did not know Mr. Hart at this time.

Did any perſon tell you then, to ſwear plump againſt Goſling?—No perſon whatever.

Had you any converſation with the priſoner's mother?——No, I never ſpoke to her.

You do not remember her begging you not to ſwear her child's life away?——No, my Lord, I do not remember any ſuch thing.

Did you anſwer her, that you would make forty pounds of him, and that you only wanted the reward?—Never in my life.

JOHN HART ſworn.

Had you any converſation with this priſoner, and the mother of William Goſling, that was to be carried before a magiſtrate?——Never, I was in Guildhall-yard when he was brought into the compter; I ſaid to ſome some of my brother officers, that is the man that ran away with a coach and horses; I knew the prosecutor again, because I had him in custody.

Did you ever tell Rowley and Ambler, to swear plump against him, or else he would not be fully comitted?——Never, I did not know the gentlemen, till they came to find the bill last Friday week.

Did you ever tell any body, to swear plump against him, or any thing to that purpose?——Never, nor any thing to that purpose.

Prisoner. Do not you remember lifting up your hand in our three faces, and saying that if ever a one of us spoke a word for him, he would perjure us all three?——No, never, I saw none but the mother.

BENJAMIN AMBLER sworn.

Do you know the last witness John Hart?——I know him now.

Do you remember any converfation between Hart and you?——I remember him, telling the words to the man just behind me, that he has just told you, about the prisoner being the man that stole the coach and horses.

Did Hart ever tell you and Rowley to swear plump against him, or he would not be fully committed?——No, Sir.

Nor anything to that purpose?——Nothing to that purpose.

Did anybody tell you so at that time?——No, Sir, nobody.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

What I said is certainly true, concerning what them people said, but when Mrs. Gosling found her son was cast to be transported, she has owed me ill-will ever since; and she would not come herself, nor get Mrs. Newmarsh, but she said, I must subpœna her, she said her son was transported on my account; I have nobody belonging to me, but a poor mother, and she is obliged to work for her bread, I have nobody to my character; I get my bread either by the silk business or weaving, I hope you will take it into consideration, I am young with child, and I never was guilty of any such thing before.

GUILTY.

Court to Prisoner. The perjured defences set up on behalf of prisoners, has long been the disgrace of the criminal courts of this country; I have thought it my duty, ever since I have sat in a criminal court of justice, to pay great attention to that circumstance, and to do all that lay in my power to prevent the continuance of so wicked and so dangerous a practice; for the mischief of such perjured defences by no means terminates in an unjust acquittal, if believed; for that, though a failure of justice, and consequently a great mischief, is but a very small one to the mischief that follows from the frequency of this kind of perjuries, because they induce a court and jury to look with a suspicious eye on the defences of prisoners even when true; they require to be more strongly proved than any other kind of defence, in order to gain credit with the jury, so that the innocent may as often be hurt as the guilty: this is therefore the worst of all offences, except that most horrid of all offences, of which it falls very little short, the crime of murder; and no perjury can be more mischievous than that which frequently occurs in the defence of prisoners. I have therefore made it a point, where there appears strong and cogent grounds before the court on the trial of prisoners, to induce them to suspect, or rather to believe, that a witness is perjured, to put the matter into a way of trial, and to pursue to justice and condign punishment the offenders, if on a full and impartial hearing of a second jury they should be found guilty; and it appears to me that no trial can afford the party accused a better chance of justification, because, before a party can be found guilty, there must be the concurrent testimony of two juries; therefore, it would be idle and nugatory in me, and in the court, to direct a prosecution of that sort, and where it was afterwards supported by clear and satisfactory evidence, to pass a slight sentence on the offenoffenders; for such sentence would be a mockery of justice: however, considering the situation of the prisoner, the court will remember at the same time a degree of mercy with justice, and will not pass so severe a sentence as might be passed on this prisoner, supposing that she might be ignorant in some degree of the full enormity of her guilt; sentence, however, somewhat severe, it is the duty of the Court to pass, and it is the sentence of the Court, that you, Mary Graham, be privately whipped, and imprisoned for two years in Newgate.

Tried by the third London Jury before
Mr. RECORDER.

---

908. RICHARD CUSTINS was indicted for obtaining, by false pretences, one pound of sewing silk, value 10s. the property of Henry Winstanley.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the third Middlesex Jury before
Mr. RECORDER.

---

909. HENRY HARVEY was indicted for wilful and corrupt perjury on the trial of Peter Newberry and William Iverson for a highway robbery, at the Sessions house in the Old Bailey in February Sessions, 1785*.

(The indictment opened by Mr. Garrow.)

Mr. Fielding, of counsel for the defendant. My Lord, I am sure you will not be surprized, in a case of this kind, that I should wish all the witnesses to retire before Mr. Morgan opens.

Court. Let lists of witnesses, except to character, or those that are to prove what passed in Court, be given to each party, and let them all go out of Court; there can hardly be a subject that requires a more serious and solemn investigation for the security of the subject on the one hand, and the safety of the defendant on the other.

Mr. Morgan, of counsel for the Prosecution, then opened the case as follows:

May it please you, Mr. Recorder, and gentlemen of the jury, to favour me in support of this prosecution, you are already informed, this indictment is for perjury, committed on the trial of Peter Newberry and William Iverson upon that trial, which was for a highway robbery, where was not any witness to the fact of the robbery, but the prosecutor himself; there was no other material evidence obtained on the trial but that which was given by Harvey, and that that was material, you will in a few moments, I think, be properly convinced: fear and flight are in general pretty certain signs of guilt; and supposing what the defendant swore on that trial is false, he knew the consequences of his evidence by charging Newberry with having exhibited those two signs of guilt, after saying that he had been to the place, and came back, being asked if he had found either of the prisoners, he answered thus: "No; I "went back to Limehouse-corner between "fifty and sixty yards, where the affair "happened, and went into a public house, "and I looked round the taproom, and "there was the prisoner Peter; but I not "knowing him, he passed me as I was "drinking a glass at the bar, and he went "into the street, and the prosecutor was "leaning over the post at the corner of "the street, facing the public house, and "he called out constable, constable, there "is Peter, there he runs; I ran after him "directly, and he ran through a narrow "passage out of Fore-street into Rope-"makers-field; he kept running on, but "I lost sight of him; then he went into "a little alley, but I took him about ten "yards from his lodgings, where I had "been to search for him; the prosecutor "and the man who called me to his assist-"ance were leaning on the nose of a "pump; the prosecutor was bleeding; I "brought the prisoner Peter to him, and "said, is this the man you want? he said, "this is Peter, and this is the man that

* See No. III, Part I. of this Mayoralty.

" took me by the throat; and I took him " away immediately, and put him in the " cage." After reading the evidence, I need not repeat the observation, " that it " was very material." I shall only observe, that no other evidence respecting Newberry was given but by the prosecutor that any ways affected him. Gentlemen, upon the evidence, I may say of these two men, the prosecutor and the defendant, both the prisoners were convicted: it being afterwards heard by a variety of people, who knew the prisoners, what evidence had been given at the Old Bailey, they insisted upon it that the evidence of both the prosecutor and Harvey in the most material parts were false; an investigation took place, I believe some affidavits were procured, and, if I am not misinstructed, laid before the Recorder, he inquired into the circumstances, and his humanity induced him to procure a respite for these two convicts the day before the day appointed for their execution; the matter afterwards underwent an investigation before the King in Council, and in a fortnight a pardon was issued for the two men. Gentlemen, as this is a prosecution instituted merely for public justice, I shall not make any observations to inflame your passions, or to mislead your judgments, I shall content myself in submitting to you simply, and in as plain a manner as I can, the evidence I mean to produce to you on this occasion. I understand the defendant means to call witnesses, if he does, and I think it necessary and proper, I may trouble you with a few observations on that evidence. Gentlemen, I have no wish on this occasion but that justice should take place; this poor man, Peter Newberry, is a hard working labouring man, that lived by cutting wood, and lodged in the house of one Peter Goodman; Goodman got his living that way; he had been at work all day, and just before the present defendant, and the old soldier, who alledged he had been robbed were in search of Newberry, Newberry had been out, and was returning home, and a person met him, that I shall call as a witness, and told him there were the old soldier and the defendant Harvey, whom they knew to be a kind of constable, pretty active in taking thieves, and they advised him not to go home; his answer was, I have done no harm, I am not afraid of any one, I certainly will go home; the witness went with him to his lodgings, and saw him go in, and when the prisoner entered the lodgings, the old soldier and Harvey were up stairs searching for Newberry; on his coming in, a woman called to him, and told him here is Newberry; Newberry is come in; upon which the old soldier and Harvey came down stairs, and in the lodgings within the house took Newberry into custody. I am instructed, and shall call another witness, who advised the man not to go home, and his answer will be proved by four or five, if not more, witnesses, who were all present at the time of the caption of Newberry, and they will, upon their oaths, tell you, that Newberry had been taken in the lodgings, and consequently had never been guilty of these two great signs of guilt, fear and flight. Gentlemen, if upon the evidence you should be satisfied, that what the defendant has sworn is false; if you should be convinced that what my witnesses say is true, it will then become your duty to convict the defendant of the crime imputed to him; but if you have any doubt, in that case you will acquit him: I shall press it in no manner, I shall make no observations without I find it absolutely necessary.

JAMES BATTISCOMBE sworn.

I produce a copy of the record of the conviction of Newberry and Iverson, from the Clerk of the Arraigns.

(Read, and examined by Mr. Fielding.)

Mr. Fielding objected that it was incumbent on the prosecution to state the designation of the persons, and that not being done, it was not sufficiently accurate in the indictment.

The Council for the prosecution contended, that they had not taken upon themselves to ſtate the indictment that was tried at the Old Bailey?

to

The objection was over ruled by the Court.

EDMUND HODGSON ſworn.

Court. Do you remember the priſoner giving this evidence?——No, my Lord, I remember the trial, and I remember the proſecutor being ill, but I do not remember the perſon of the defendant.

Court. Then it is a diſtinct fact, you muſt prove by ſomebody elſe.

PETER GOODMAN ſworn.

Do you remember the trial of Newberry and Iverſon, at the Old Bailey?—I was preſent there.

Was you there at the time that Harvey was examined?—No, we were not let in till the ſoldier and Harvey were examined, then we were called.

JOHN OWEN ſworn.

I am one of the keepers of Newgate.

Was you preſent at the trial of Iverſon and Newberry?——I was.

Do you remember Harvey's being examined as a witneſs?—I do.

Was that the perſon that was examined? The ſame.

Do you remember his being ſworn?——I ſaw him ſworn in Court.

Mr. Fielding. Do you take upon yourſelf to ſay that you remember that particular man being ſworn upon this trial?—I do, I knew Mr. Harvey before.

Court to Hodgſon. Read the whole of the evidence of Harvey from your notes.

The Short-hand writer then read the whole of the evidence of Harvey as in the Seſſions Paper, No. III. Part I. folio 342.

Court. Are theſe the original notes?—They are the original notes my Lord, that I took in ſhort-hand, on the trial of Peter Newberry and William Iverſon, they have been unaltered ever ſince.

CHRISTIAN GOODMAN ſworn.

I was eighteen the eighth of March.

Are you the ſon of Peter Goodman?——Yes.

Court to Peter Goodman. What age is this boy?——He is eighteen.

Where do you live?——I have lived in Lime-houſe more than a year, I came over from Germany from the army, I brought my wife with me, the boy was born here, I belong to the Engliſh army, and I came over here upon the peace; my ſon was born about a year after the peace in Germany.

Was this boy born in Lime-houſe pariſh?——Yes.

Was he chriſtened there?——No, he was chriſtened in the Daniſh chapel, for I am a Dane born.

Have you any other children?——No more alive than that.

CHRISTIAN GOODMAN ſworn.

Mr. Garrow. Did you know Peter Newberry?—Yes.

Do you remember the time he was taken up for robbing John Lockell?—Yes.

Do you know this man Harvey?—Yes, Sir, I know him by the ſight, but I did not know him before he came with the ſoldier and knocked at the door firſt.

When was this?—I cannot tell directly what time.

How long before Peter was taken up?——About a quarter of an hour, I believe it was about ſix or ſeven, it was dark, it was the ſame evening, the old ſoldier came and knocked and aſked for Peter, I mean Lockell, he lodged at our houſe, ſays my mother who is there, ſays he, I want young Peter, what Peter ſays my mother, ſays he I wants Peter, ſo my mother ran down ſtairs with a candle in her hand and opened the door, ſo then they went away to the public houſe.

Who do you mean by they who were with Lockell?——Why, Mr. Harvey, Sir, he ſtood up againſt the wall.

How came they to go away?——They went to the public houſe to look for him, my

my mother ſaid, Peter Newberry was not at home; he was not at home, he was gone to the ſawyers, in Rope-makers-fields; I went directly down Rope-makers-fields, to look for Peter Newberry, and as I went along, I met him coming in the ſtreet.

What was he doing in Rope-makers fields?—He went to the ſawyers, and I met him coming from the ſawyers.

What did you go for?——To tell him there was John Lockell and Harvey to take him up, and I told him to go away.

Had they when they were at your houſe, told you what they came for?——No, Sir, but I knew they were come to take him up, becauſe I ſaw Harvey.

How did that lead you to it?—Becauſe he was headborough, and I had ſeen him take ſo many people up, I deſired him to go back to the place from which he came, but he would not, and I came home alongſide of him to my father's houſe.

How ſoon after you came home, did you ſee Harvey again?—He was in our houſe when me and Newberry came home together.

Was Harvey in the houſe then?—Yes.

What paſſed then?—We ſaw nobody at all, and then when we came back, Peter ſaid, there they are, and ſo I ſaid, yes, there they are, we went back to our own houſe, there were ſeveral people ſtanding on the outſide of the houſe, and they ſaid, Peter, go away, there is Harvey, and he will take you up.

Did you ſee Harvey in the ſtreet, as you was returning with Newberry?——No, when I came along with Peter Newberry, Harvey was in the houſe.

Did Newberry run when he came back with you?—No.

Did he run through a narrow paſſage into Fore-ſtreet?—No.

Out of Fore-ſtreet, into Rope-makers-fields?—No.

When you came to the houſe if I underſtand you right, you found Harvey there?——Yes.

Was Lockell there too?——Yes, they were coming down ſtairs.

Did Newbery go in with you?—Yes, he went in firſt, and I went in afterwards, upon his going in Mr. Harvey took hold of him by the collar, and ſaid, you are the gentleman I was looking for, and he carried him away to the cage; I went to the cage, and Harvey aſked for the keys of the cage to open the door, he continued to hold him all the way.

Did he eſcape from him at all?—No, he never moved at all.

Mr. Fielding. Little man, do you know a perſon by the name of Smallwood?——Yes.

Is he in Court?——I believe he is down there.

Have you had any converſation with Mr. Smallwood, little boy?——No, Sir, no further than he ſaid he would ſubpœnea me to go.

Did not he aſk you the ſtory, and tell you what you was to come for?——Yes, he told me I was to come about Peter Newberry, becauſe I was with him.

Have not you talked over this affair?—A little, not much, I was at the trial of Newberry, my father was there, I was not called for at that time.

Notwithſtanding you was the boy that kept company with Peter in the manner you have related, you was not called at the Old Bailey?——No.

Who told you it would be neceſſary to ſpeak ſo preciſely to Newberry's getting within the houſe?—Nobody, I was playing in the ſtreet, when Lockell and Harvey came to the door, I was up ſtairs, my mother looked out of the window, ſhe opened the door, and Harvey went up ſtairs.

Who did he find up ſtairs?—My father, ſitting by the fire-ſide chopping of wood, and nobody elſe was in our houſe.

Not another man and woman?—There was nobody elſe but my father and mother, and another young man.

When Mr. Harvey and Lockell were there did you ſee them or talk to them?—No, not at all.

When was it that you ſtole out to tell Newberry that they were after him?——I did did not ſteal out, I was determined they ſhould not meet him that night.

You was determined that they ſhould not meet him that night?—Yes.

Did you aſk Lockell what he wanted?—No.

He lodged in your houſe?——Yes.

In what condition was this poor man that night?—He ſeemed as if he had been ſcratched by ſome woman in the face.

Was that all that ſtruck you?—Yes.

Why might he not be ſcratched by men?——Men never ſcratch, they were on his cheek: he was ſtanding at the door, I obſerved it by my mother's candle.

What made you believe if Lockell had been ſcratched in the face by women, he ſhould want Peter Newberry?——He was drunk when he came to the door, he only aſked for Peter, and I concluded that they wanted him, and I went out to find him, I found him in Rope-makers-fields, he was coming home then, he went to no other place with me from that in which I met him, till Harvey came and took him into cuſtody, it was about twenty minutes before he was taken, the diſtance was about the length of the court.

You came from thence home?—Yes.

You apprized him that Harvey was in purſuit of him?—Yes.

Did not you ſee Harvey behind you?——He was withinſide the houſe, there were ſeveral people at the door at the ſame time.

How came Newberry into the houſe?—The door was open, and Newberry went in firſt.

How came he to get in at the door?——Becauſe our door always ſtands open.

How many people came up to Harvey's aſſiſtance?—I cannot ſay indeed, the only people that were in our houſe, were my father and mother, and another young man who is gone over to Germany.

You left your father and mother up ſtairs when Lockell firſt came?——Yes.

Did your father and mother come down ſtairs?——Yes, before I went out, and when I came back I ſaw Harvey coming down ſtairs, and the ſoldier before him, I did not ſee either my father or mother, my father and mother were up ſtairs, they could not ſee Newberry come in.

Mr. Garrow. Did I underſtand you right, that when Newberry came back ſeveral people were about the door?—Yes.

Name ſome of them?——There was William Stones, and Elizabeth Mullett gave a candle, there was Mrs. Brooks ſhook hands with Harvey at the door, Mrs. Milledge was looking out of her window, Mrs. Brooks was preſent both firſt and laſt time, that Harvey and Lockell came to the houſe.

Mr. Fielding. Why did not you tell me of theſe people being about the door?

Court. He ſaid ſeveral people, but you did not deſire him to name them?—Mrs. Brooks was there and big with child then, when I returned to the ſame houſe with Newberry, ſhe was in the mob, ſhe ſhook hands with Harvey a little before.

What the firſt time that Harvey came to the houſe?—Yes, he was twice at the houſe, ſhe ſhook hands with him the firſt time.

Did you ſee anything of Harvey in the ſtreet the firſt time of his coming?——He did not come into the room, he ſtood up againſt the wall, I was ſtanding at the door with my mother.

Where were you when Harvey came firſt to the houſe with Lockell to enquire for Peter?—I was up ſtairs, and my mother too, and I came running down ſtairs with my mother.

Where did you firſt ſee Harvey then?—I ſaw Lockell firſt, and then I ſaw Harvey ſtanding againſt the wall.

Your father was up ſtairs then?—Yes, he did not come down with me then.

Did he come down before you went to Peter?—No, Sir.

Pray how came you to judge what they wanted with Peter?—Becauſe I ſaw Harvey, I thought they would put him in the watch-houſe.

What for?—I did not know.

How

How came you to think they would?—Becauſe I ſaw Harvey there.

How came you to judge that they would put Peter in the watch-houſe if he had done nothing?——Becauſe I thought he had been wrangling with him.

Had you heard that before now?—My mother ſaid, ſhe would have Lockell beat for going to her cuſtomers to ſell wood to them.

Had you ſet Peter to beat him then?—No.

How came you to think at this time that Peter had been doing anything to Lockell?——I did not know anything of it, only that he ſaid he would have young Peter, if he found him anywhere, let him find him where he would he would have him, he ſaid ſo at the door, when he came firſt with Harvey.

How came you not to tell this gentleman ſo juſt now, when he aſked you very particularly?——Becauſe I did not think of it then.

Then your mother had quarrelled with Lockell before this, and wanted him beat? Yes, Sir, that was before he went away, then he took it into his head, and my father was bad a-bed, and he went away.

Had Newberry taken any part with your mother in that quarrel?——No.

Had Peter and Lockell quarrelled at all?—No, Sir, never, they laid together.

What did you and your mother come down for, when Lockell and Harvey came firſt to aſk for Peter?——To open the door for him.

You told this gentleman a little while ago, that the door always ſtood open?—Yes.

Then what occaſion to come down to open it?—It is open, not locked or latched, but it is ſhut too cloſe, it goes too of itſelf; it is open always, only not locked or latched.

Peter had lodged there before?——Yes, ſo had Lockell.

Then he knew that your door ſtood always open, without being locked or latched?—Yes, but he knocked at the door, he did not puſh it open.

Though he knew that your houſe was never locked or latched, he did not attempt to come in?—No, Sir.

But knocked as though he wanted to take up a perſon in the houſe?—Yes.

When you came back with Newberry, how long was that after Harvey had been the firſt time to the houſe?—I cannot tell, indeed, how long.

Do you know what public houſe they went to?——Yes, they went to the Pink.

Did you ſee them go into the Pink?——Yes, Sir, and my father went with him; I did not ſee my father and them go into the Pink.

How far is the Pink from your houſe?—It goes down a turning cloſe by our houſe.

How far altogether may it be from your houſe?—I believe it may be twenty or thirty yards.

Then I think you ſay you met Peter about the length of this court from your own door?——Yes, Sir, in Ropemakers fields.

You met him and told him that theſe people had been looking after him?—Yes, and he ſaid he had done no harm, and he would come home; I was out of ſight of my own door; our door does not look towards Ropemakers fields, becauſe the ruins are broad; I went back directly with Peter, I was only gone the time I ſhould be walking the length of this court and back again, after that we came home again.

Then though your father and mother and Lockell had gone to the Pink public houſe, yet they had made ſuch haſte that they had got back again, and had got up ſtairs?—Yes.

Was your father up ſtairs then?—Yes, they were coming down and they met Peter in the lower room, and took hold of him, there is no paſſage, we go through the lower room to the ſtairs; we all knew he was gone to the ſawyers.

Then your father took them to the Pink on purpoſe to take them out of the way?—Not that I know of.

Do you know William Iverſon?—Yes.

Did you ſee him that night?—No, not before he was taken to the cage.

How

How far did Iverſon lodge from you?—I cannot ſay, it was in Shadwell pariſh.

Court. Let that little boy go out at that door, and wait till he is wanted.

WILLIAM STONES ſworn.

Examined by Mr. Morgan.

Do you know Peter Newberry?—I cannot ſay that I know him any farther than I heard his name the night he was taken.

Do you know Mr. Harvey?——Yes, I know Peter Goodman that keeps a ſmall houſe there.

Was you there the night that Newberry was taken up?——I was cloſe to the door.

Did you ſee the old ſoldier and Harvey?——I ſaw them in the houſe.

Once or twice?—I ſaw them there once, I ſaw the man go into the houſe, and he was taken in the houſe, I am upon my oath.

Did you ſpeak to him going into the houſe?—I ſaw him come home, and as he came up to the door, I ſaid Peter do not go in, there is Mr. Harvey looking after you, the man made anſwer, and ſaid I have done nothing, I will go in; the man went in, I ſaw him go in.

Where was Harvey at the time that Newberry went into the houſe?—I cannot tell, I was ſtanding at the door, but I ſaw Harvey come out, and the ſoldier with Peter Newberry; I ſaw the three come together out of the houſe.

Did you go with them?——I went to the watch-houſe, and I ſaw Mr. Harvey put him in the watch-houſe.

Did he eſcape from him at the time whilſt he was going?——No Sir, he went along with him to the watch-houſe.

Was that after Peter went in, when you had ſpoke to him?——Yes.

Mr. Fielding. Now my friend Stones, was you at the trial at the Old Bailey?——No, I was not.

What are you?—I am a labouring man.

What ſort of labour do you follow?—Sometimes I work in the deal yards, ſometimes rope-making.

Or anything I take it for granted; how came you here to-day, account for that; I ſuppoſe you was ſubpœned you will tell me?——Yes.

How came they to find you out?——I do not know, I ſuppoſe ſome of the neighbours told that I was preſent.

When was Mr. Smallwood lucky enough to find you out?—I have ſeen him ſeveral times, I lived at the bottom of Vine-ſtreet, it is about the middle of the ſtreet where this Peter Newberry lodged.

Was you an acquaintance of Peter Newberry's?——No Sir, no further than ſeeing him in the ſtreet? I know as much of Iverſon as I know of the other.

Who was it that told you that Harvey was after Peter?——I heard people ſay there were people after Peter Newberry, but who they were I could not ſee, it was dark, I could not take particular notice who they were, I heard that Harvey was after Peter Newberry, that was the converſation thereabouts.

Did you ſee Harvey and Lockell when they firſt gained admiſſion into Goodman's houſe?——I ſaw Harvey in the houſe.

When was it, the firſt time?—They all three came out together.

Was that the firſt time that you ever ſaw Harvey in the houſe?—I ſaw the door open, and I ſaw Harvey and the old ſoldier looking into the houſe for Peter Newberry.

The door was open then?——Yes, Sir, the door was open then, when Peter Newberry went in.

Was that the firſt time that you ſaw Harvey or Lockell in the houſe of Goodman?——No, it was the ſecond time, becauſe I ſaw him in the houſe looking for Newberry.

How long might it be between the two times?—I cannot tell juſtly the time, it was but a ſhort time, becauſe directly as he went in Mr. Harvey took him directly, I ſpoke to Newberry at the door, ſays I, Peter, do not go in, there is Harvey looking after you; to the beſt of my knowledge I did not ſee anybody with him but himſelf; ſelf; he ſaid, ſays he, I ſhall go in, I have hurted nobody, I have done nothing that I am afraid of, I ſhall go in; he went in directly, and ſhoved the door open with his left hand, and went in, and Harvey took him.

Had you and Newberry any converſation?—It was not half a minute, there were people that heard the words ſaid, but they could not tell who the perſon was that ſaid the words.

I take it for granted that there was nobody there but yourſelf and Newberry?—Yes, there were people looking round the door to ſee what was the matter, and I ſtopped at the door, as another might, and I ſuppoſe I had not ſtopped there five minutes before this Peter Newberry came down the ſtreet to go home, and the people ſaid Harvey was after Peter Newberry; to the beſt of my knowledge Newberry came home by himſelf, I ſaw nobody with him, I had not been about this houſe, take it all together, more than five minutes, I took no notice of the condition of the old ſoldier; what I have ſaid is truth, I can ſay no more.

Court. Do you know William Iverſon?—I know one as much as I know the other.

Did you ſee Iverſon that evening?—No, Sir, I did not ſee him at all that evening, only Peter Newberry.

You ſaid at firſt when you was was aſked if you knew Peter Newberry, that you could not ſay you knew him?—I never was acquainted with him otherways than ſaying how do you do, of a Sunday.

Did not you know the man very well?—No farther than hearing his name that night, ſomebody ſaid there is Peter Newberry.

You had never heard his name till that night?—No, Sir.

How many people were about the door when Peter came home?——To the beſt of my knowledge there might be five or ſix, but I cannot tell who they were, it was dark.

Was you the firſt that ſpoke to him when he firſt came home?——Yes, Sir, directly after he came home I ſpoke to him, and told him not to go in there for Harvey was after him; ſays he I have done no hurt to anybody, and I ſhall go in.

Are you ſure you ſaid to him what you have told us?—Yes.

And you was the firſt that ſpoke to him?——Yes.

Did the people ſay any thing to you, when he was coming home?—No, Sir, they ſaid there was Harvey after Peter Newberry.

But when you ſaw Peter coming home, did the people then ſay anything to you?——No, Sir.

Are you ſure of that, now recollect yourſelf?—Yes, nobody ſaid anything to me, becauſe directly as I came home I ſpoke to him, and ſaid, do not go in, for there is Harvey coming after you.

The people had been ſaying before that Harvey had been after Newberry?——Yes, I never heard his name till that night.

Did the people tell you where he lodged?——I knew he lodged in that houſe where he was taken.

How did you know that that man was Peter Newberry?——I knew that was the man that lodged there.

How, as you never heard his name till that night?——The people round the door ſaid here is Peter Newberry coming down the ſtreet.

They ſaid ſo?——Yes.

Why have not you twice in anſwer to my queſtion ſaid that the people had not ſaid anything to him or to you, and twice you anſwered me they did not?—He came up to the door, I told him not to go in.

Did the people ſpeak to you, or did they not?——They did not ſpeak to me, I heard them ſay that Harvey was after Peter Newberry; I heard the word mentioned that here was Peter Newberry oming, but I cannot ſay who they were that ſaid ſo.

If you had never been in company with Newberry, nor never knew his name till this night, how came you to be the firſt man that ſaid ſo very familiarly to him Peter, do not go home, here is Harvey?—

I knew him to lodge there in the ſame ſtreet; I live at the bottom of the ſtreet, and I look upon it that the houſe was in the middle of the ſtreet where he lodged, I did not know what they had been looking after him for, the reaſon I bid him go away was, I thought he had been getting drunk, and quarrelling with ſomebody, and that Harvey had a warrant againſt him; I know Peter Goodman, and the little boy his ſon, by ſight.

How long have you known them?—Living in the ſame ſtreet.

How long?——I have lived there in the ſtreet about eight or nine months to the beſt of my knowledge.

Did you ſee either of them that night?——Yes, I ſaw the father.

Where did you ſee him?——In the ſtreet.

Whereabouts?—It was after Peter was taken and gone to the watch-houſe.

Did you ſee Harvey and Lockell come to Goodman's houſe before Newberry came?—No, Sir, I did not.

Did you ſee the little boy at all?—No.

The door I think you ſay was not open when Newberry came home?——No, he ſhoved it open with his left hand to go in, and it was not open then.

Then when was it that you ſaw Harvey and Lockell about the houſe, and up ſtairs for Peter?—To the beſt of my knowledge it was between ſeven and eight, or eight.

How long was it before Peter came home?——It might be about three or four minutes.

Who ſhut the door after that?——Peter Newberry ſhoved the door open with his left hand, and I ſaw Harvey in the houſe.

Did you ſee Harvey and Lockell, the old ſoldier at all before Peter came home?—When Peter Newberry ſhoved the door open——

Anſwer the queſtion direct, did you ſee Harvey and Lockell at all, before Peter came home anywhere?——I did not ſee them till I ſaw Newberry ſhove the door open.

Was there anybody in the paſſage when Newberry ſhoved the door open?——I did not ſee anybody but Harvey and the old ſoldier.

Where were they?——Juſt at the foot of the ſtairs.

Were they below the ſtairs, or upon the ſtairs?—Below the ſtairs.

Not on the ſtairs?—No.

That was the firſt you ſaw of them?—Yes; then as ſoon as Peter ſhoved the door open they laid hold of him directly.

Did any body elſe go in after Peter when they laid hold of him?—No; I did not ſee any body elſe go in but Peter.

Did they come out with him directly?—Yes.

If any body elſe had gone in but Peter you muſt have ſeen them I ſuppoſe?—Yes.

You did not ſee Harvey and Lockell go in?—No Sir.

Then they muſt be there before you came there?—Yes.

You told that gentleman here when he aſked you, that you ſaw the door of the houſe open and Harvey and the ſoldier in the houſe looking for Peter, how came you to ſay that?—When Peter went in he ſhoved the door open and then I ſaw Harvey.

Then it was not true that you ſaw the door open before, and Harvey and Lockwell in the houſe?—No Sir.

Court. Let this witneſs ſtep out and the little boy come again.

Court to little Boy. You ſaw Stones and Elizabeth Mullet in the paſſage, and Mullet gave a candle, and Mrs. Brookes was there?—Yes.

Now, was that the firſt time that Harvey and Lockell came to the houſe, or the ſecond time?—The ſecond time.

Becauſe you know you ſaid that Mrs. Brookes ſhook hands with Harvey at the door?—Yes, ſhe ſhook hands with him at the firſt time.

Was Stones there then?——No ſir, he came there afterwards.

Was Elizabeth Mullet there then?——She was, but Stones was not; I did not ſee him come; when I come back with Newberry he was ſtanding in Vine-ſtreet, facing our door.

I think you ſaid, that when you came back, there were several people in the paſſage?---Not in the houſe.

When

What do you mean by the paſſage?---In Vine-ſtreet, facing the door.

Then what you call the paſſage is the ſtreet?---Yes.

When you came back with Peter was the door of your houſe open or ſhut then?---It was open; ſomebody had put a bit of wood under the bottom of the door, and it was left open; when I came back with Peter the door was quite open.

Then you could ſee into the houſe as ſoon as you came back?---Yes.

Before Peter went in?---No ſir, I was behind Peter; he went in before me; I could ſee the door was open, becauſe I was behind him all the way.

Whereabouts did you firſt ſee Harvey and Lockel?---He was coming down the ſtairs and Harvey had like to have tumbled over the old ſoldier to get firſt; they were both on the ſtairs when I ſaw them; I am ſure of that; Newberry ſtopped at the door the value of a minute, then he went in at the door; I went in after him.

Did you ſpeak to Stones at all?---No ſir.

How near was you to the door when he went in?---I cannot tell.

You ſaw him very well?---I cannot ſay I ſaw him, becauſe he was ſtanding among the people; I ſaw his coat but I could not ſee his face; I know the colour of his coat; there were a great many people together; I am ſure he was there.

Quite ſure?---I am quite ſure he was there; when Peter came home I heard ſomebody ſay, Peter go back; he ſaid, I have done no harm; I believe it was Stones and Elizabeth Mullet too, I cannot ſay it was him, but I heard ſomebody beſides Mullet ſay ſo.

Did you know Stones before?---Yes; he lived juſt by, and had ſome time.

Did he know Peter Newberry?---I cannot tell; I have ſeen them talk together ſometime in the ſtreet.

PETER GOODMAN ſworn.

Mr. Garrow. You know Newberry?---Yes.

You remember the time he was taken up?---Yes.

Where was you on the evening of that day?---In my own houſe.

Was you there when Harvey and Lockell came the firſt time?---Yes; they came and Lockell knocked at the door, and my wife looked out of the window and ſaid, what do you want; then ſhe went down and opened the door.

You continued up ſtairs?---Yes.

Did you hear what converſation paſſed between Lockell and your wife?---Yes; my wife ſaid what is the matter with you, Harvey ſaid, I do not want old Peter, that was me, but I want young Peter, and my wife ſaid young Peter was gone to the Sawyer's, then ſhe called me down ſtairs, and I came down to the door, and then I ſaw young Lockell ſtand facing the door, and Mr. Harvey on the ſide by the wall, ſo then Lockell aſked me if I knew where young Peter was gone, and I ſaid I believed he was gone to the ſawyer, at the public-houſe; he aſked me what public houſe, I then told him I did not know the houſe, but I knew the ſign, ſo then I went to the public houſe to ſhew it him; the ſawyer was gone home to his own houſe, it is ſome diſtance from our houſe, the ſign of the Pink.

How long did you ſtay at the public-houſe?---No longer than I could aſk for him; they ſaid Peter was gone home; then I went to my own houſe again, Harvey and Lockell went with me; I went up ſtairs and began to ſplit wood; Harvey and Lockell went down the ſtreet to the water ſide; they did not go along with me, but in a little while they came back again and came up ſtairs; Lockell and Harvey both together came up into the one pair of ſtairs where I was ſplitting of wood; I ſuppoſe I had been at home almoſt a quarter of an hour to my knowledge.

Was Newberry with them at that time? No Sir.

How ſoon after Harvey and Lockell came back the ſecond time did you ſee Newberry?---When they came up ſtairs again I told

Lockell

Lockell to go up ſtairs, to ſee that he was not come home.

How ſoon after this did you ſee Newberry?---About ſome few minutes after he had been up ſtairs and came down, Newberry came into the lower room, ſomebody called Harvey here is Peter, me and Harvey and Lockell were then up ſtairs.

What became of Harvey then?---Then Harvey went down the ſtairs and took hold of Peter, and ſaid you are the man I want.

Where was Peter then?---He was in the lower room, in the middle of the room, where he had been ſawing wood all day.

Do you know William Stones?---Yes; he lives juſt by; I ſaw him in the ſtreet.

Mr. Fielding. Newberry, I underſtand is a countryman of yours?---No; he is a Swede.

How long has he been on this ſide the water?---He has lodged with me about half a year.

Your wife and Lockell had had ſome quarrel before?---Yes, they had.

Did you ever hear her ſay ſhe would have Lockell licked?---No, I never heard her ſay ſo.

What time do you go to bed?---When we leave off work we all go to bed together, ſometimes at eight, ſometimes ſeven; I was at the trial at the Old Bailey.

What time did you ſay Newberry went from home?---It was paſt ſix o'clock; Iverſon is my countryman, I knew him before; I knew the time he came laſt from Greenland; I had not ſeen him in my houſe in the courſe of that day.

Did there exiſt to your knowledge, any intimacy between them?---No.

You did not ſend your little boy of an errand then?---No.

Do you ever ſuffer him to be out in the ſtreet of a night?---No.

I take it he cannot walk very faſt?---No, he cannot.

Where was this boy when Harvey and Lockell firſt knocked at your door?---He was up ſtairs binding of wood; the boy was up ſtairs from that time to the ſecond time that Mr. Harvey came; my wife called me down when they came; I went with them to the Pink, when I came back again I found my boy in the ſame room.

Thoſe people who came back with you the ſecond time, Harvey and Lockell, they went out of the houſe again?---Yes.

What became of the boy?---The boy was in doors.

All the time?---Yes, all the time.

From the firſt to the laſt time they came to the houſe, was your ſon ever out of the houſe?---At the time they came laſt to the houſe I believe he went down ſtairs.

But did he go out of doors?---To be ſure he did.

But how far did he go?---I do not know.

Now how long was this before ſomebody ſaid, here is Peter?---It was a little before that time that the boy went down ſtairs.

Court. Then the boy did not go down ſtairs till after the people called out here is Peter?---Oh yes, he was down before.

How long did the boy go down before the people called out, here is Peter?---I cannot tell.

Where was the boy when Peter came in?---He was along with Peter; I ſtood upon the ſtairs and ſaw him.

Any perſon ſtanding on the outſide of the ſtreet-door might have ſeen all the people in the paſſage?---Yes.

Then, that perſon might have ſeen your ſon as well as Newberry?---Yes.

How long before that moment had you ſeen him?---Five or ſix minutes; I cannot ſay to a minute.

Then your ſon was loſt to your ſight for about five minutes?---Yes.

Court. I think you ſay that you went firſt with Harvey and Lockell to the public houſe to look for Peter?---Yes, I left him there, and I came back again, and he was there.

Then he ſtaid till Harvey and Lockell came again?---Yes.

Then

The remainder of this Trial in the next Part, which will be publiſhed in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 14th of SEPTEMBER, 1785, and the following Days;

Being the SEVENTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER VII. PART XII.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of Henry Harvey.

Court. Then he went down ſtairs; he had not been down before?—No.

Did Harvey and Lockell go out at all before Newberry came in?—No.

Are you ſure of that?——Yes.

Did not you know that the ſawyer was not at the public houſe but in Ropemakers-fields?——No, I did not, I thought he was there.

Did not you know that Peter was gone to Ropemakers-fields after the ſawyer?——I knew that a little girl belonging to the ſawyer came to fetch him to the ſawyer; I did not aſk where the ſawyer was.

Then how came you to ſend the little boy to Ropemakers-fields to Peter, to tell Peter that theſe men were come for him?—I never did ſend for him; it is not true.

Then you did not tell him to go to tell Peter theſe people were after him while you took them to the public houſe?——I never did, I cannot tell how the boy came to go of his own head; I did not know what they wanted with Peter; I aſked the ſoldier what he wanted, he ſaid he wanted to ſee Peter, that was all.

Mr. Fielding. Old fellow, have you had any converſation ſince you have been here with that gentleman below you?——No, I have not ſpoke at all ſince I have been in Court.

Not ſince you have been firſt in Court?—No, indeed I have not.

ELIZABETH MULLETT ſworn.

(Examined by Mr. Morgan.)

Where did you live in January laſt?—In Vine-ſtreet.

Did you know Peter Goodman?—Yes.

Did you live any where near him?——Yes, almoſt facing him.

Do you remember the night that Peter Newberry was taken up?——Yes.

Where did you ſee Peter before he was taken up?——I did not ſee him any where.

Do you know any thing of his being taken up?—No, Sir, I do not.

Do you know Mr. Harvey?——Yes.

Do you know the old ſoldier Lockell?—No, Sir.

Do you remember ſeeing Harvey go to Peter Goodman's houſe?—No.

Court. My girl, you know that Peter Newberry was taken up for a robbery?——Yes.

Did you know it the ſame night that he was was taken up? —— No, not till afterwards.

Mr. Fielding. Have you ſeen Mr. Smallwood this morning?—Yes.

Court. Now, my good girl, tell me the truth, how came you here as a witne ? — Sir, becauſe they came to me.

What were you to come here to prove? ——I can tell you, if you pleaſe.

Certainly, it is your duty, you are bound by the oath you have taken to tell the truth without fear of any perſon whatever; you are under the protection of the Court, and you will do yourſelf honour by telling the truth; you need fear no perſon whatever? ——Sir, I came to my own door, and Mr. Harvey ſaw me, and he ſaid, my dear, will you lend me the candle, and he took the candle out of my hand, and he went to look for this Peter Newberry, and then Peter Newberry came down the ſtreet.

Court. Take care what you ſay; you told me juſt now you was not preſent when Newberry was taken up, and did not know of his being taken up till afterwards, now, recollect yourſelf?——I d d tell you ſo.

Is that true?——Yes, Sir, it is true.

Then, if that be true, then how came you to be here as a witneſs; what do you know of Mr. Harvey about this buſineſs; did you know that night that Newberry was taken up afterwards? — I do not know nothing about what Harvey did that night, I was agoing to tell you that Mr. Harvey ſaid to me lend me the candle.

When was that?—The night the robbery was committed.

Who told you ſo?—Only I heard people ſay ſo; I opened the door, and he came to me, and ſaid, will you pleaſe to lend me the candle, and I lent him the candle, and the mean while he went up ſtairs to look for this Peter Newberry; Peter came down the ſtreet, and ſomebody ſaid, go back, for there is Harvey after you, and I heard him, and I ſaid to him, Peter, there is Mr. Harvey after you; ſays he, I have done nothing wrong, I ſhall not go, and he went into the houſe, and Harvey ſaid, you are the man I want.

Who deſired you to ſay this now?— Nobody, Sir.

Who told you this ſtory? — I ſaw Newberry taken up at Mr. Goodman's houſe.

Who ſpoke to you ſince you have been out of Court the firſt time?—Nobody.

How came you, then, when you was firſt called up as a witneſs, to tell me that you did not ſee Peter that evening, that you knew nothing about his being taken up, and did not know that he was taken up till afterwards, how came you to ſay ſo? —I do not know, indeed.

Did not you know you was upon your oath?—No, Sir, I did not.

Which am I to believe, what you firſt ſwore, or what you ſwear now, which is the truth? —I cannot ſay no more than I have ſaid about the candle.

How came you to ſwear you did not know of it till afterwards?—I made a miſtake.

Has either ſide ſpoke to you reſpecting the evidence you was to give or not to give, either of the parties; in the firſt place, do you know Mr. Smallwood? —— Yes, Sir, very well.

Well, has he ſpoke to you relative to the evidence you were to give?— No, Sir, nor Harvey.

You attended once before the Grand Jury to find the bill?—Yes, I did.

Then, how came you to ſay you did not know it till afterwards; did any body deſire you to ſay ſo?—No.

You do not ſeem to know at all the obligation of an oath, or that you are bound to anſwer with truth the queſtions that are aſked you; I cannot take your evidence, and you may go; you ſhould think yourſelf well off you are permitted to go.

TERENCE REYNOLDS ſworn.

(Examined by Mr. Garrow.)

In January laſt I lived in Vine-ſtreet, Limehouſe; I know Newberry and Goodman.

Do you remember the night that Newberry berry was taken up for a highway robbery? —I do, I ſaw him taken up.

Where was he taken up? — In the houſe of Goodman; Harvey and Lockell took him together; they all three came out of the houſe together; I cannot ſay preciſely which took him; after I came in the ſtreet I heard an uproar; I lifted up the ſaſh, and I ſaw Harvey on the oppoſite ſide of the way, and a man ſaying he wanted this man; then in a little while after he got a candle and candleſtick to go acroſs the way into this ſaid houſe, to ſee for Peter Newberry, and in a ſpace of time he came down the ſtreet, and ſome perſon in the croud ſaid, Newberry, go back, for there is Harvey looking for you; in the next place he ſaid, he did not mind Harvey nor anybody elſe, he had done no offence to anybody, nor was he afraid of anybody; then from that he came down the ſtreet, and clapped his head to the jam of the door, as if liſtening, and he ſtood with ſomebody talking but I could not obſerve what he was doing, and then he went into the houſe.

Was the door ſhut or open?—I was up a pair of ſtairs, I cannot be poſitive as to that, he clapped his hand to the jam of the door, and ſtood a trifle of time, a minute or a minute and a half, and then he went into the houſe, and as I underſtood the ſoldier and Harvey, they endeavoured to take him to the Compter, but they all three came out together in a little ſpace of time.

Mr. Fielding. Where did they pick you up?——Sir!

When was it that the attorney or anybody in his buſineſs applied to you to come here?——I will tell you Sir, I was in bed, when I was ſent to firſt, and I was called out to a job as I thought, when I went to the houſe where this attorney was, as I underſtood to be his attorney, and Mr. I do not know his name, who keeps the public-houſe, ſerved me with a ſubpœnea, and gave me a ſhilling.

Any thing to drink?——Yes, there was three pots of beer, this is three weeks ago, to the beſt of my knowledge.

Was three weeks ago the firſt time that was you ſpoke to?—I never was ſpoke to, nor never had any imitation about this buſineſs.

Do you commonly wear a white frock?——In general.

You ſaw Newberry in the cuſtody of Harvey in the ſtreets?——I ſaw him in the ſtreet before he was in cuſtody, and afterwards.

What ſhould have led you to the window then?—There was more noiſe before than there was after, he was in cuſtody, there was an uproar about a robbery, that led me to the window, the man ſaid he wanted his money.

Court. That was publickly made a noiſe of about the ſtreet?——Yes.

Did Newberry come home alone, or did anybody come home along with him?——I ſaw nobody come home along with him, but I ſaw him, I know him perfectly well, the ſtreet was wide to one perſon as well as to another.

Did you ſee anybody go into the houſe along with Newberry?——No, Sir, he went in voluntarily of his own accord, as I could obſerve, I ſaw him plainly go in.

Did any body go in with him or not?—I did not ſee any perſon, I did not ſee any perſon, I did not know the confidence of the affair, I never expected to come into any behalf till I was ſubpœnaed.

SUSANAH MILLEDGE ſworn.

I know Goodman and Newberry, I was going to bed, I was very big with child, I lived the third door from Goodman's, I heard a noiſe, I lifted up the ſaſh, I heard Mr. Harvey's name mentioned which made me more anxious to look out of the window, then I ſaw the ſoldier, and the people flocking into the houſe, to ſee what was the matter, and the man came after they got into the houſe, I heard Mr. Harvey ſay to this German woman or Dutch woman, you have conveyed this man away over the pales, and ſhe ſaid, if I am to be believed upon the word of a woman, I have not ſeen Peter ſince ſix to night; in the mean mean while Mr. Harvey was in the house, Peter Newberry and this lame boy came up to the door, and they went into the house, I saw no more.

Mr. Morgan. Where was Harvey when Peter Newberry came into the house?——He was in the house, I did not see them come out.

Mr. Fielding. Mrs. Milledge, you was going to bed?——Yes, I was sitting on the side of the bed when the affair happened I continued at the window from first to last about ten minutes.

Not above?——No.

Did you go to bed?——No, I did not, I stood at the window, but I saw no more of them at all.

When was you applied to, to be a witness on this occasion?—Applied to!

Aye, when did anybody wait upon you or come to you, did Mr. Smallwood come to you?——Yes, that was the time the men were in Newgate.

When was you ordered to come here?—I had a subpœna to go to the Old Bailey, upon this trial, I never saw Mr. Smallwood only coming down once or twice or three times, I know Stones, I cannot say whether he was in the street or not, I was not so very particular.

Do you know Reynolds?——Yes, my door is before you come to his, he was at his window the same as I was, I saw Harvey and the soldier go in, but I did not see Harvey come out.

Not at all?—Not at all, I saw the soldier come out dancing with a broom-stick in his hand, I saw them go in between seven and eight.

Court. Mrs. Milledge, your attention was first caught by the noise in the street?—Yes.

You saw the soldier and the people flocking into Goodman's house?——Yes.

After they got in you heard Hervey questioning the woman about letting the man over the pales, and while they were in the house Peter Newberry came up the street with the little boy, and went in?—Yes.

Now before that time you knew it was Peter Newberry they were after?——Yes. but I could not tell upon what footing.

When you saw Newberry come, and go into the house where they had gone in before, had you no curiosity to see what became of them afterwards?——I saw Peter Newberry go into the house, then I quitted the window directly, I went and set myself down, my husband said I should catch cold, and I left the window being very big with child.

How came you to see the soldier come out?—I saw him come out before ever I quitted the window, that was before any of the rest came out of the house, it was after Peter went out of the house.

How long after?——I cannot say, I saw him come out as soon as Peter went in, the soldier came out with a broomstick in his hand, I quitted the window directly.

You were at the window in the whole about nine or ten minutes?—It might be ten minutes.

Then you were attending to what passed till you quitted the window?——Yes, I was.

Did you hear anything said to Peter?——Yes, I heard a person say, Peter, here is Harvey after you, and he said I have done nothing to Mr. Harvey, and he went in, I cannot tell who spoke to him.

Which way did the boy and Newberry come, up the street?——They came right down the street.

Do you know Rope-makers-fields?——Yes, very well.

Did they come from those fields or the other way?——That I cannot say, it is a great wide place before you come to our passage.

Did they come from Rope-makers-fields or the other way?—Sir, it is a long wide place; as I looked out of my window, he came to my right hand; Rope-makers-fields are to the left hand.

Then they came from the opposite way?——Yes.

ELIZABETH BROOKES sworn.

I live right opposite to Peter Goodman's,

I knew Peter Newberry, I remember the night he was taken up, I saw him that afternoon at work, I did not see him afterwards till he was taken; I saw him at the time he was taken, which was at Peter Goodman's house, I heard a noise, and I heard the name of Mr. Harvey mentioned, then I went out, and Mr. Harvey shook hands with me, and said how do you do Mrs. Brooks; says I, how do you do; says I, what is the matter; says he, I do not know, here has been a robbery committed, I do not know what to make of it either head or tail, for they are foreigners; Goodman's door was open, Harvey asked Millett to lend him a candle, then we all went into the house, and the soldier had a broomstick in the house, and a man standing at the door; says he, Peter go back again, here is Harvey after you; says he, I have done nothing to Harvey, I shall go in; I was in Goodman's house at that time, and Harvey and the soldier went up stairs to see for him, Harvey and the soldier continued at Goodman's house till Peter came in; they did not come down at all.

Who opened the door?——Mrs. Goodman, they did not come down stairs till Peter came in, the boy was on the outside of the door; a man spoke to Newberry at the door, and said go back again, here is Harvey after you; says he, I have done nothing I am afraid of, and he pushed his hand against the jam of the door, and pushed the door open and went in, and the soldier and Harvey came down stairs, I was the only one that was in the house besides them; as soon as ever the soldier saw Peter he laid hold of him directly, and said, you must know where William is, he has got my money; when Newberry came in, Harvey and the soldier were up stairs, and were not in sight; just as he came in they came down stairs, and the soldier first seized Peter by the collar, and Harvey caught hold of Peter's arm before he went out of the house, and said he must go with him.

You was not at the trial at the Old-Bailey?——No, I was not.

Court. You saw Harvey and the soldier go into Goodman's house but once?—No, only once.

Did Mrs. Goodman look out of the window before she opened the door?—Yes, and asked who it was, and the soldier I believe it was, said, he wanted Peter.

Then they never went away after that till Newberry came home?—No, Sir, Newberry came in, in the mean time.

Do you know Goodman's little boy?—Yes, Sir, he is a lame boy, walks with a crutch.

Where was he at this time?—He came along the street, not far from the door, I did not see him in the house, I went in with Mr. Harvey and the soldier, and the boy was not in the house to my knowledge, any other than I saw him at the door; if he had been in the house then, I must have seen him, nobody went out of the house.

Was the door open when you came back? The door stood a-jar, anybody might see into the house from the door to the stairs.

HENRY MILLER sworn.

I know Peter Goodman, I live almost facing of him, I was looking out of the window on the night that Newberry was taken up; I saw the officer and the soldier in the house searching for Peter Newberry.

What part of the house did you see them search?—By what I could see out of the window, they were up in the garret, and in the chamber, and were coming down stairs when Peter Newberry came in? I saw him go in, and he stopped at the door about a minute or two, and then he went in; before he went in I heard somebody say Harvey was after him, but who it was I cannot say; and he said he had done no harm, and he should go to his lodgings; I saw him go to his lodgings, I saw nobody with him to my knowledge.

Mr. Fielding. What might have led you to the window?——Because I heard a bit of a noise atth door.

How many houses are there opposite to this house of Goodman's?—I live at the first house on the right-hand side; I was first first appriſed between ſeven and eight, I kept my place at the window.

How ſhould you know that Harvey and the ſoldier were ſearching for Newberry?—Becauſe I heard the ſoldier call out he wanted Peter; ſomebody came down and opened the door, but who it was I cannot ſay, then they went in and had a candle of ſome of the neighbours, but who it was I cannot ſay; then they went up ſtairs and ſearched the garret, and all this while my eyes were upon the houſe, and coming down the ſtairs again Peter Newberry came into the houſe.

Court. Was the door of the houſe open or ſhut?—It was open, to my appearance.

Did you ſee them come out again?——Yes, they came out all together, after Peter went in, and went up the ſtreet; I believe they came out in two or three minutes, I cannot ſay for a minute or two.

Do you recollect who came out firſt?—No, Sir, I cannot recollect, but I ſaw Mr. Harvey the officer have Peter by the ſhoulder.

Where was Lockell then?—He came out of the door along with them, they all came as near as could be together: I kept my eye on the door till they did come out.

Did Lockell come out dancing, with a broomſtick in his hand?—He had a broomſtick in his hand when they came all out together.

Was Peter Anderſon there at the time?——No, he was not.

PETER ANDERSON ſworn.

Do you know anything about Newberry's being taken up?——I was not there at the taking of him, I was there at the firſt ſearching for him.

Mr. Fielding. You remember the night that Lockell was robbed?——Very well I do.

Do you remember the calling out to Harvey, conſtable, conſtable?—No, Sir.

Mr. Fielding. Gentlemen, I am now to ſolicit your attention at this late time of the day, to the caſe of the defendant that ſtands before you, and I am ſure if it were to ſtrike me as neceſſary to offer any apology to you for the time I muſt neceſſarily take, you would think that apology would be impertinent; for I am ſure you will be heartily inclined to give a fair inveſtigation to this caſe. Gentlemen, although I ſtand here an advocate for Harvey, and he has a right to expect the exertion of my feeble abilities; yet I go with the learned Judge who tried this cauſe, in all the obſervations I have heard him make on the crime of perjury: I perfectly agree that there is not a crime more deſerving puniſhment; that if committed in the extent ſuggeſted here, puniſhment ſhould fall on the wretch without the accompanying commiſeration of any one ſoul; for if it be true that the man ſtanding before you has committed a wilful and corrupt perjury, on the trial of two men for their lives, my deſire is that he ſhould be puniſhed with the utmoſt ſeverity; at the ſame time you will be cautious of letting that indignation ſet aſide the weight of the evidence neceſſary to criminate the perſon that you have before you: Gentlemen, I cannot ſay I feel the taſk upon me to-day of vindicating the defendant an arduous one; becauſe added to the conſciouſneſs that I perſuaded myſelf of before I came into the Court, of Mr. Harvey's innocence, I now am more and more confirmed of the propriety of that perſuaſion from the evidence that has been laid before you: Gentlemen, you know very well that to conſtitute the crime of perjury, the will muſt go with the action, and there muſt be a corrupt motive all through; and wherever therefore that crime is imputed to a man, you will neceſſarily enquire into the motive: Now what can be the motive of Mr. Harvey for the commiſſion of this crime? Gentlemen, it is neceſſary for me to ſtate to you a little more at large the nature of this trial, and the reaſon of Mr. Harvey's being now proſecuted for this as a perjury at the Old Bailey: two men, foreigners, Newberry and Iverſon, were tried for a ſuppoſed robbery, committed on a man of the name of Lockell; Lockell, at that that trial was the profecutor, and the man before you was the other witneſs; and my learned friend, with ſome little ingenuity I muſt ſay, introduced that circumſtance to you, pointing where the evidence of Mr. Harvey became material, for he ſeems to ſuppoſe that you will be perſuaded of Mr. Harvey's being conſcious of ſuch materiality of his evidence, when he told you that the materiality of the evidence depended on the circumſtance of flight; if he could have eſtabliſhed in proof a fabricated lye or falſehood, that would have been a different matter from what you have now to conſider; but let not the guilt of the profecutor Lockell lay at the door of Mr. Harvey; if Lockell was brought to juſtice, then every man would be ſatisfied and pleaſed with the verdict, but there is not the leaſt idea, it is not inſinuated that there is any privity at all between Harvey and Lockell, or that Harvey ſpoke to any other circumſtance than merely the apprehenſion of theſe two men. Then, gentlemen, permit me to aſk you, what could have induced Harvey to go a little beyond the truth in his evidence on this profecution? I will tell you, becauſe it is the only evidence that can be ſuggeſted, in hopes of gaining a part of the reward on their conviction; now, this is the circumſtance they are to make out, that he, being appriſed of the effect of a flight being given in evidence, had confined his perjury to that idea; truſting to that idea having the effect of convicting the two men at the bar. Gentlemen, that you may clearly underſtand the nature of this caſe, let me tell you the ſtory of Mr. Harvey; he was the conſtable of Limehouſe, and the evening, when this robbery was committed, about ſeven in the month of January, it was dark, he was at that time at home in his houſe, he was called out by the alarm of a robbery that had been committed; the perſon ſuppoſed to be robbed was very near at hand, and he ſaw him inſtantly: upon his coming up to him he told him that he knew the men that had perpetrated the crime, that one was Peter, and the other was Will; that he knew where Peter lodged, and in conſequence of this information Harvey went to the houſe of Peter; now, part of this evidence, that you have heard in ſupport of this proſecution is true, for it hardly ever will be the caſe, that witneſſes will come before a court with a ſtory that will be falſe throughout; Harvey went with this man to the houſe of Peter, he knocked; he was anſwered by a woman from above, and he got into the houſe; Peter was not to be found there; then Harvey went away; he went to a public houſe; he had not an idea of miſſing in this public houſe the perſon he went to look for; but as he was drinking a glaſs of liquor at the bar, Lockell, the profecutor, from without, called out to him, conſtable, conſtable, there goes Peter; there had been a man that left the houſe merely on the arrival of Harvey, whether it was or was not Peter, I am not able to produce to you, more than the aſſertion of Harvey; Harvey thinks that man was the perſon; Lockell calling out to him, he neceſſarily followed; a chace took place; ſome times he had him in view, and ſome times he loſt ſight of him, but as the man was going towards the houſe of Goodman, Harvey took hold of him; Harvey's evidence ſay this, that he took the priſoner Newberry within ten yards of his door, but the evidence of the witneſſes in oppoſition to this ſay, that Mr. Harvey did not take Newberry within ten yards of the door, but in the very houſe; now, how could it have entered into the mind of the man before you, that ſuppoſing there was a difference, ſuppoſing the fact to be, (which I deny) that he was taken in the houſe, and that Harvey had ſaid he took him within ten yards of the door, could it have ſuggeſted itſelf to a mind like his, that any materiality would have depended on that part of his teſtimony? Does it ſtrike you ſo? Here are two or three perſons committing a robbery, and immediately one of them is purſued, not the leaſt doubt of the perſon, the profecutor ſwearing poſitively to his having committed the crime, and by the bye, ſuppoſe I ſay one word, as it is fair here, upon the ſuppoſed guilt of theſe (w) men

men that are now luckily pardoned; if the evidence of Lockell or his ſtory had gone to complain of one man only as taking this property, I ſhould have thought it fabricated, but when Lockell ſpeaks of two men doing it, either of whom might have proved himſelf at a different place, I ſhould preſume there is a ſtrong reaſon to ſuppoſe Lockell is not haſty in his opinion of theſe two men; his property was not much that he loſt; he was extremely ill uſed; he was bleeding; they call you evidence to that, and that little boy ſaid his face ſeemed as if it had been ſcratched by women; that circumſtance convinced me that I had very little to expect from the ingenuouſneſs of a boy ſo young; he ſays he is eighteen, perhaps he may, I am ſure he poſſeſſes the craft of eighteen; but, however, now to return to the ſituation of Mr. Harvey: in taking this man within ten doors, what could have induced Harvey to have ſaid more to the Court than that he took the man in cuſtody; could it have appeared to him to be a material diſtinction, whether he had taken him within ten yards or ten feet, or in the houſe? But I am to call witneſſes to you in ſupport of that ſtory that Mr. Harvey has told, and as to the witneſſes on the part of the proſecution, I would recount their contradictions, if it was not that the extreme ingenuity of the learned Recorder will, I am ſure, amply ſupply that defect; certain I am, however, that the boy is materially contradicted by the father; certain I am that the boy is materially contradicted by Mrs. Milledge, and it ſeems to me as if the only evidence I had to apprehend the leaſt poſſibility of danger from was the evidence of Mrs. Brookes; for, I rely entirely, as to the other witneſſes, on the obſervations which I am ſure will be made by the learned Recorder. Mrs. Brookes ſtanding up here, ſeeing her called on their part, I thought her a decent looking woman, coming with a child in her arms, I thought there would be more regard to truth; and altho' I obſerved confuſion, I thought it did not ſignify: but, gentlemen, when I call your attention to the circumſtance of the caſe, I am bold to ſay that her evidence cannot be true, if much of that evidence which has preceded it be true; therefore, wherever there are contradictions as they cannot be both true, the ſafer way I take it, is to reject ſuch evidence entirely; if the evidence of Goodman be true, the evidence of Brookes is not true; if Brookes's is true, Goodman's is not true; the ſafer way, and that which has always been taken, as I conceive, by every Jury, is, to reject that teſtimony entirely; and therefore when I recur to this, that Harvey acted merely in his duty, and if he is here proſecuted without great foundation, deſerves the compaſſion of every man in Court; when I ſay he has interfered only in his duty, and there cannot be any poſitive motive aſſigned to him, except that one of the reward; and when you take into your conſideration the probability which yet remains of this robbery's being committed in fact; I ſay you will attend carefully to the evidence; I ſay you will diſpaſſionately attend, never preſuming guilt, always intending innocence, careſull to give weight to the evidence laid before you, but not to let it haſtily involve a man in guilt. On the other ſide, the evidence I ſhall lay before you on the part of Harvey will be extremely ſatisfactory as to the beginning of this buſineſs; afterwards I ſhall lay before you in evidence, a character, which I am ſure ought to have, in a caſe like this, the firſt weight; not that it will be neceſſary as I think for your verdict, but that he may return with honour and credit to his neighbourhood. I have the ſatisfaction of ſeeing a proſecution like this fairly contradicted and reprobated. The Recorder has with great liberality and ingenuity inveſtigated this buſineſs, and he is ſtill to lay before you the reſult of that teſtimony; I perſuade myſelf that an equal attention will be paid to our witneſſes, and I wiſh it ſhould; if any of my witneſſes ſhould deſerve a ſeverity of treatment in croſs examination, or if there is any ſuſpicion of their veracity, I wiſh they may go under every poſſible trial; but if you think ſo, the acquittal of Mr. Harvey may perhaps lead to ſome inveſtigation of the author of this buſineſs.

WILLIAM MEREDITH ſworn.

I live at Limehouſe corner, at the King's-Arms, the Pink is higher up; I do not know Peter Goodman; I know Vine-ſtreet; my houſe is about a quarter of a mile, or not quite ſo much; I know Mr. Harvey; I remember the evening that Lockell complained of a robbery, it was about eight, Mr. Harvey came into my houſe and called for a glaſs at the bar, I went into the bar to ſerve him, he came in by himſelf, I filled the glaſs for him, and he walked into the tap-room, and in came the old Penſioner, and he told me he had been robbed, and had like to have been murdered, and he had a handkercief or a rag to his head, and that was all bloody, but where it came from I cannot ſay; Lockell aſked me if I would give him a glaſs, I gave him a glaſs and he went out, then Harvey came up and drank his glaſs, and went out after Lockell, and he was leaning on a poſt, and he called out Conſtable, Conſtable, Officer, Officer, there goes Pedro the rogue who robbed me, and tried to murder me, there he goes; Pedro he called him.

What did Mr. Harvey do upon that?—He went up the ſtreet out of my ſight, it was dark; he went directly after him, he run towards Fore-ſtreet, that leads up Fore-ſtreet; Ropemakers-fields is on the right, there is a paſſage that leads up Fore-ſtreet into Ropemakers-fields; I heard nothing more.

What condition was this poor wretch in?—His handkerchief or whatever he held to his mouth, was all bloody, and he ſaid there had been ſome blood taken from him.

Mr. Morgan. He was on the other ſide of the ſtreet when you ſaw him?——Yes.

Then the man called out Conſtable, Conſtable?——While the man was going up the other ſide of the ſtreet, Harvey and me came to the door together.

Court. You ſay that after the old ſoldier went out he called out as you told us, and was leaning againſt a poſt?——I went with Harvey to the door, I ſaw a man on the other ſide of the way, I did not know Newberry then.

Was there any man in your houſe that went out after Harvey and Lockell came in?——I cannot ſay.

Were there other people in the houſe?—There were ſeveral people in the houſe; twenty people may go in and out while I am in the bar.

ANN HOLT ſworn.

Do you remember the evening of the robbery?——Yes; I live in Fore-ſtreet, Limehouſe, I cannot recollect the day, I remember an alarm, I ſaw Mr. Harvey take a man in Vine-ſtreet, but whether that was the man or no I do not know, it was the evening that I heard the noiſe, I cannot ſay what noiſe it was.

Court. Give an exact account of all you heard and ſaw?—I know nothing at all of it, but that I ſaw him take a man in Vine-ſtreet; I recollect nothing that I heard beſides.

Where were you?—I cannot ſay whereabouts I was, I ſaw Harvey take hold of a man.

Was it near the houſe?---No, it was near a pump.

Did not your curioſity carry you a little further than that?——No Sir, my buſineſs called me away.

Were there many people about in the ſtreet?—There might, I cannot ſay.

Do you know Newberry?——No.

Do you know his perſon?——It was dark, he came to our houſe three days after.

Mr. Garrow. Once in your lifetime you ſaw Mr. Harvey take up a man in Vine-ſtreet?——Yes.

Let me pay you the ſame compliment my learned friend has paid moſt of our witneſſes; where did they pick you up for a witneſs, you are a notable one?——I was ſubpœned.

When?——The 20th of September.

Who firſt applied to you?——The ſubpœnea was brought to me, I was ſurpriſed.

I rather ſupect that, you know that is no anſwer.

anſwer to my queſtion; who firſt applied to you to be a witneſs for Mr. Harvey;——I know nothing at all about it.

I aſk you upon that oath that you have taken, who firſt applied to you to be a witneſs for Harvey?—No body at all.

Who ſubpœnaed you?—A boy brought it to me.

Do you mean to ſay that before that you had not talked to anybody on this ſubject?——No, Sir, nobody at all had adviſed me on the ſubject.

Did I aſk you about advice?—Nobody at all talked to me, I did not tell any body at all, I was not applied to at all to be a witneſs.

You have ſenſe enough to anſwer the queſtion, do you mean to ſtate to the Jury, that without anybody having applied to you, and without your having applied to any body, you are come to be a witneſs for Harvey?——I told no ſtory, that is the true ſtate of the caſe.

Court. Do attend a little to the nature of the queſtion, it is not whether anybody made any improper application to you to be a witneſs, but the meaning of the gentleman's queſtion is this, how came Harvey or anybody concerned for Harvey to know that you could ſay anything upon this ſubject?——I do not know, I very likely may have ſaid ſo, upon my honour I cannot tell you, I never troubled my head about the buſineſs, Mr, Harvey might have ſeen me there.

Mr. Fielding. Did not you ſee him there?——I ſaw him, but I do not know whether he ſaw me or not.

Court. Cannot you fix the time when you ſaw this?—I cannot ſay.

What month was it in?—I cannot ſay.

Is it a twelve-month ago, or is it two years ago?—I am ſure I cannot tell you, I dare ſay it is not two years ago, but I cannot ſay how long ago it is.

Cannot you tell no nearer than that, can you tell whether it is ſeven years or a week?——I cannot ſay, there was a piece of work or a noiſe in the ſtreet on that night.

Court. Then your evidence goes for nothing at all.

What was the noiſe about?—I cannot ſay.

Did you hear anything about it?——It was not ſo long ago as ſeven years, but I cannot ſay when it was.

Mr. Fielding. Where do you live, young woman?—In Fore-ſtreet, Limehouſe.

Who with?—With my father and mother.

What countryman is your father?—He is a Dane.

Was your father willing you ſhould come here to day?—Yes, if he had not I ſuppoſe I ſhould not have come.

Did not you tell Mr. Harvey that very evening, that the very man he afterwards took hold off, was Peter?—Me! no, Sir. I did not.

Will you call God to witneſs, girl?—I did not, no, I did not, I would not wiſh to tell a ſtory for any man living.

Court. You have heard the oath, it is to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; now if you anſwer to any queſtion, and ſay you do not know it when you do, it is perjury?—I ſay, I do not know what that gentleman aſked me.

Was this that you ſaw three days ago, or three years?——I am very ſenſible it is more than three days.

Was it ſo much as three years?——I do not think it was.

Was it two years?—Upon my honour I cannot ſay.

Upon your oath are not you ſure it was leſs than two years ago?—I do not take my oath at all about it.

But you muſt take your oath upon it, are not you ſure that it was within theſe two years?—I do not know.

If you do know, I only tell you that you are perjured, and liable to be puniſhed?——But I do not know.

Court. Go about your buſineſs.

Mr. Fielding. Ah! go about your buſineſs.

WILLIAM GOODWIN ſworn.

I live at Limehouſe, No. 90.

Do you live with you father?—No.

With

With who?—With Mr. Wilſon, a hair-dreſſer.

Do you remember the night when there was an alarm of an old man being robbed?—Yes, there was in January.

Do you know Harvey?—I ſaw him at the Black-horſe, in the middle of Fore-ſtreet, he was running along, I follow-ed him into Vine-ſtreet, I cannot tell how far.

What did you ſee him do there?—I ſaw him take a man whom I believe to be Peter Newberry, I did not know him, but the laſt witneſs Ann Holt ſhewed Newberry to Harvey, then Harvey took him.

At this time had Newberry got into a houſe?——No, Sir.

It was in the ſtreet then where Harvey laid hold of him?——Yes, Mr. Harvey took him by the collar, and led him to a man that was leaning upon the noſil of the pump, which was the proſecutor, he aſked him if that was the man he wanted, he ſaid that was Pedro.

What did Harvey do with the man after this?——He took him to Mr. Wetton the conſtable.

Now little man, if you are not poſitive ſpeak it, are you ſure that Harvey, when Miſs Holt ſaid that perſon was Peter, took hold of him in the ſtreet before he got into a houſe?—Yes.

Did you go down with him to the con-ſtable?——Yes.

Did he ever eſcape from him again?—No, not till he put him in the watch-houſe.

Mr. Morgan. How long have you known Peter Newberry?—I did not know him, I have never ſeen him ſince, this was towards the latter end of January.

How came you to take ſuch particu-lar notice of it?—Becauſe it was on Wed-neſday night, and my maſter was at his lodge, a freemaſon's lodge, they meet once a month.

You cannot ſay the day of the month?—The young woman told Mr. Harvey that was Pedro.

How came ſhe to tell him that?——I do not know.

Where was the man?——Leaning on the noſil of the pump in Vine-ſtreet.

How far was this young woman from the man?——She was cloſe to him, cloſe to Newberry.

How far from the old man that was lean-ing on the noſil of the pump?——I can-not tell.

Had ſhe any converſation with the old man?——Not that I have heard.

Newberry was ſtanding ſtill when the young woman pointed him out?——He was ſtanding ſtill, and Harvey came directly and took him.

She and the young man were cloſe toge-ther, ſhe and Peter, and ſhe told Harvey that was Peter, and he took him directly?——Yes.

Had they been talking together, the old man and her?—No.

Now tell me how this young woman came to know that Harvey wanted Peter?—I do not know.

Court. Had there not been an alarm that the old man had been robbed?—I had not heard it.

Court to Ann Holt. Together with this boy, now madam, will you tell me now whether this was not in the month of January, now your memory is refreſhed?—It may be, I cannot ſay.

Do you know who the man was?—No, Sir.

Did not you upon your oath tell Harvey that was the man?——I did not tell him, that was the man upon my oath, I would not take a falſe oath.

Nor you never ſpoke to him at all?—No, I did not indeed, I only ſaw Mr. Harvey.

Court to Boy. Is this the young woman that told you?——Yes.

Are you ſure of that?—She ſaid to Mr. Harvey, that is Peter.

Ann Holt. I really did not indeed, up-on my oath I did not, I did not, indeed I did not ſpeak a word.

Mr.

Mr. Garrow. I underſtood you that you did not know Newberry at all?——I really did not know him, indeed.

Nor you did not know his name was Peter?——No, Sir, I never ſaw the man in my life, nor did not know his name.

Did hot you ſay that you had ſeen a man ſince, who you was told was Peter Newberry?——I ſaw him after he came clear, but never before.

Did you know the man before he was taken up?——No, Sir, I did not, indeed.

Mrs Fielding. Young woman, did you hear anybody ſay any thing about this being Peter?—I do not recollect any thing about it, I did not ſay a word about it.

Witneſſes to the Priſoner's character.

ARMON HILL ſworn.

I believe you are a ſhip-builder?—Yes, I live in Limehouſe, I have known Harvey, the man who ſits there, eight or nine years.

Be ſo good as to inform the Court, and the gentlemen of the Jury, what your opinion is of his character?—I look upon him to be a very fair character; a very honeſt ſafe man of a night, and a very diligent ſober man, and the only ſafeguard of the pariſh of St. Ann, Limehouſe, of a night.

Mr. Garrow. The uſual queſtion is, what his general reputation is?——A very good one, I never heard any thing againſt him.

——— LYNEY ſworn.

I know Harvey very well.

What is his general reputation and character?——An honeſt juſt man, I never heard any thing to the contrary.

Mr. WOTTON ſworn.

I live at Limehouſe, I have known him ſeveral years, but about a year and half more intimately; his reputation is a very induſtrious, honeſt, ſober man; and I look upon him a very uſeful man.

Mr. WARREN ſworn.

I have known him theſe ten years, a very good character, a very ſteady, honeſt, ſober man.

Is his general character that of an honeſt man?—Yes.

The Rev. Mr. YOUNG ſworn.

I have known Harvey ever ſince the ſummer of the year 1777, I never heard his character impeached in the ſmalleſt degree: I myſelf have always entertained a good opinion of him, I have employed him upon many emergencies; I ſpeak to his general character; he has always been eſteemed to my knowledge an honeſt man.

JOHN STAPLES, Eſq; ſworn.

What is the eſtimate of Mr. Harvey's honeſty?—A very good one.

Harvey. I have a great many more witneſſes.

Court. Certainly, as far as evidence has weight, we are to take this man's character to be a very good one.

Mr. Morgan. Gentleman, I ſhall only take up two minutes of your time; on behalf of the proſecution ſeven witneſſes have been called, who have ſworn poſitively to the man's being taken within the houſe, and that into that houſe he went a volunteer; ſome contradictions have ariſen, not very neceſſary for me to repeat, as the Recorder will make his obſervations very attentively and accurately, as he always does, which will (as they ought) have much more weight with him than any obſervations that can be made by me; only one obſervation ſtrikes me, which is, that though ſeveral contradictions relative to trifling circumſtances have ariſen in the courſe of the evidence, they might be the effect of want of memory, not of deſign: after having ſaid that, let me advert to the evidence that has been called by the defendant, his character is as good as can be; however there are times when a man forfeits a good character; and, permit me to obſerve, that the evidence which he has called by way of defence amounts to nothing; recollect in the first place, the evidence that he gave on the trial; now the evidence of the master of the publichouse is this, that he and Harvey walked to the door together, and I take it that had Peter been there, it was impossible but he must have seen him pass by him; whereas the master tells you, that he saw this man, who he says Harvey took on the other side of the way; and his other witnesses flatly contradict each other: Gentlemen, this is the case requiring a great deal of your cool deliberation which I am sure you will give it, if you are satisfied that the prisoner is not guilty, you will acquit him; if you are clearly convinced of his guilt, you must be under a necessity of convicting him.

Court. Gentlemen of the Jury, this trial has taken up a great deal of your time and and attention; but not one moment longer than justice requires; for you have been called upon this indictment to decide upon as important an enquiry as can well come before a Jury and Court of Justice: the prisoner is indicted for perjury; a crime in itself, and under all the circumstances, where it is wilfully and intentionally committed, with a corrupt intention, of very great magnitude; a crime that cuts up by the roots the only bond of confidence that can subsist between man and man; and the only security that we can have for the due administration of justice both between party and party, and between the public and those that are accused of the crimes; but if a perjury of itself, is a crime of such magnitude, when we consider the circumstances under which the present defendant stands charged with that crime it raises it to a height still greater; for the perjury that is charged against the defendant, is stated to have been by him committed upon the trial of two men for a capital felony, and the evidence given against these men, is charged to be false, and to have been knowingly and corruptly given; and therefore if that is true, the whole catalogue of crimes does not contain one of greater enormity, for though in the denomination of law, such an evidence, if the event of it should be to take away the life of an innocent person, does not come under the legal description of murder; yet, in point of malignity, it seems to be a murder of the foulest die. The question therefore for you to decide this day is, whether the defendant has in defiance of the laws of God and man, committed in the face of his country, knowingly and corruptly, a perjury, with a view to take away the lives of two innocent persons; or whether an innocent man having appeared for the sake of public justice on a former occasion, stands charged with a crime of so much enormity; you therefore will not grudge your time and attention in this enquiry; it has been stated to you in the opening of this business, that from persuasion of the falsehood of the evidence given on the trial of two men, Newberry and Iverson, they have since, upon great deliberation, and with the intervention of those concerned in a judicial capacity, obtained the King's pardon for the offence: the first part of my duty therefore is to tell you that you ought to lay that out of the question; and not to let it make the smallest impression on your minds, for there might be just and wise reasons for that pardon, without the smallest imputation on the truth perhaps of all the witnesses, but certainly of Harvey's testimony; for though his evidence was necessary, yet the truth of that evidence is perfectly consistent with the innocence of both the prisoners; and that that circumstance may be wholly erased from your minds, I think it right to let you know that a conviction of truth or falsehood of Harvey's evidence never came under consideration, when that pardon was the subject of deliberation, but it arises from circumstances in which the account given by Lockell, with respect to himself and his own situation at the time, threw such a suspicion on his testimony, that it was thought unsafe to run the risque of executing two men on the evidence of a single witness, who stood impeached and concontradicted: you, gentlemen, are called here to decide, whether the defendant has ſworn falſely in the evidence he gave on the trial, and if he did, whether it was done with a corrupt intention: the latter queſtion, which is always the material one to conſtitute the crime of perjury, will depend on your attention to the nature of the cauſe, and of the evidence given, and I will therefore ſtate to you, from the indictment, the evidence which Harvey has now been proved to have given on the trial of Newberry and Iverſon.

(Here the learned Judge repeated the evidence as read by the Short-hand Writer.)

Now, it is manifeſt, that the effect of this evidence at the time was to ſhew a conſciouſneſs of guilt in Newberry, and to confirm the teſtimony of Lockell, for the ſum of the evidence of Harvey was, that when he went in queſt of Newberry, Newberry ſlipt out of the public houſe when he ſaw the proſecutor come in, and that he actually ran away from him, and eſcaped, and that he actually took him at ſome ſmall diſtance from his lodgings; the effect of that evidence was to ſhew, that Newberry fled from juſtice, which is always conſidered as a circumſtance of guilt; then the indictment charges that the evidence was falſe; that he did not run after him at all, nor did he run away; that he did not keep running, or go into a little alley; and that he did not take Peter about ten yards from his lodgings, but, in fact, he did take him in cuſtody immediately on his coming into his lodgings; now, the evidence given by Harvey on the trial being material in the light I have ſtated to you, if you believe it to be falſe, it is difficult to ſuppoſe that he could have been miſtaken, for it was a fact within his own knowledge, and which it was his particular duty as a conſtable to attend to, therefore if it was falſe, and if, inſtead of purſuing him, and taking him in the ſtreet, he never, in fact, purſued him, but took him in his lodgings; Harvey muſt have known it was falſe, and if he did, I believe you will not find much difficulty in concluding, that a perſon, who knowingly gives falſe evidence againſt a priſoner, muſt neceſſarily do it with an evil and corrupt intention: the principal queſtion therefore for you to decide in this caſe ſeems to be, whether the evidence given by Harvey upon this trial was true or falſe; for if falſe, the nature of it ſeems to leave very little room to doubt that Harvey muſt know it, and give it with a corrupt intention; but if it was true, he is an innocent man: the principal queſtion is therefore this, and that upon which the preſent trial turns, whether you believe, on the whole of the evidence, that he took him in the ſtreet, or that he took him in his lodgings? for the ſtory told on the part of the preſent proſecution certainly does, inſtead of ſhewing the conſciouſneſs of guilt in Newberry, ſhew the direct contrary; that Harvey being ſearching for him at his lodgings, he went home to thoſe lodgings voluntarily, into the very hands of the people that were in queſt of him; and that, in that very houſe, Harvey being in queſt of him, took him; a great number of witneſſes has been called, moſt of whom have poſitively ſwore to the fact, that Harvey did take Newberry in his lodgings, and not elſewhere; but in ſwearing to that fact, they have been called upon to ſtate the circumſtances; and it is one of the principal advantages in the mode of adminiſtering juſtice in this country, that the examinations of the witneſſes are publicly conducted in the preſence of the parties themſelves, their counſel and agents, as well as the courts of juſtice, ſo than an opportunity is given of not reſting ſatisfied with ſwearing merely to a fact, which, if the depoſitions were taken in writing, he might do, but there is an opportunity of enquiring into all the caſes attending that fact, in order both to judge of the probability and conſiſtency, and to compare that teſtimony with thoſe circumſtances, and with the evidence of other witneſſes examined to the ſame fact; and it is not becauſe one or two, or ten witneſſes, poſitively ſwear to a particular fact, that a Jury are bound to rely on that evidence, on the contrary, they are called upon to exercise their own underſtanding, and apply it, and ſift out the truth by the compariſon of the teſtimony of the different witneſſes, and by an attentive conſideration of the evidence that has been related; you will therefore judge for yourſelves upon the whole, which of the two facts you believe, to wit, that this man, Newberry, was taken in his lodgings or in the ſtreet. The firſt witneſs called is Chriſtian Goodman, a young looking lad, and his evidence is, that Lockell and Harvey came to the door of his father's houſe, and knocked at the door; that his mother opened the window, and aſked what was the matter; and upon their telling her they wanted Peter, but not what for, ſhe came down, and opened the door for them, and that after going into the houſe, they went away again; and that when they did go away he himſelf knowing where Peter was gone to, went to tell him that theſe people had been after him to take him up, and to adviſe him to keep out of the way, that he met Newberry a ſhort way from the houſe and he gave him that advice, but he truſting in his own innocence would go home; the witneſs went home with him, Lockell and Harvey were returned to the houſe, and took Newberry as ſoon as he came into the houſe, ſo that by his account they were twice in the houſe, and had gone away in the intermediate time, and he had taken the opportunity to go and apprize Newberry that they were in purſuit of him; in order to ſift the matter more fully, he was much further croſs examined, and the firſt enquiry will be how far the account he gave on his firſt examination is confirmed or rendered probable by his own teſtimony on croſs-examination; the next enquiry will be how far it is conſiſtent with or contradictory to the evidence of the other witneſſes, on the part of the proſecution, he ſaid the door of the houſe was quite open, and added, their door always ſtood always open; he deſcribes himſelf as going out to look for Peter, and his meeting him within not more than the length of this Court off his own door, they not ſtopping or going anywhere elſe, but returning directly back, but he ſays that Harvey and Lockell came twice, and that they went after the firſt ſearch to a public houſe, and were come down again and near the bottom of the ſtairs when he came back with Peter Newbery; now it is ſcarcely poſſible that this account can in all theſe circumſtances be correctly true, for if they came twice, and went up ſtairs with a view of ſearching for them; and his father went with them to the public houſe their enquiries there, their return, their going up ſtairs again to make a ſecond ſearch, and coming down again, all muſt have paſſed according to his account, within the time that the witneſs would be walking the length of this Court: when he firſt ſaid the door ſtood always open, I dare ſay it would not ſuggeſt to your minds that it was latched, and if it ſtood always open Lockell muſt have known it, and therefore would not knock at a door which he knew was always open. The evidence of Stones does not very materially differ from the account given by the boy, he ſpeaks only to the laſt time of Lockell and Harvey going into the houſe, he rather increaſes the time, he ſays on his croſs-examination that Peter came home by himſelf, and ſhoved the door open with his left hand; Goodman the father ſwears that the boy was up ſtairs till he came back from the Pink, and then he went down ſtairs, and was abſent a few minutes; it is very remarkable that the evidence of the father, whoſe knowledge if they were relating a true fact, would be more likely to coincide with the ſon than other witneſſes, is more directly contrary to him than any other witneſs, he deſcribes the time between the firſt and ſecond ſearch very conſiderable, he makes it from a quarter of an hour to twenty minutes between the firſt time of their coming and the time of their apprehending Newberry; but he directly contradicts the evidence of the boy. The ſtory therefore of the father and the boy cannot both be true: by the account of Reynolds, nolds inſtead of their coming and enquiring for Peter without alarming the houſe, there was an uproar about a robbery, the man talked about his money, ſo that the idea ſuggeſted by his evidence, and that of the father and the ſon, who ſwore he only gueſſed they wanted Peter, is extremely different. The boy mentioned nothing of Peter's ſtopping at the ſide of the door to liſten; Brookes alſo contradicts the boy; the boy ſays they were upon the ſtairs near the bottom of the ſtairs, when he and Newberry went in, and that he ſaw them the moment he came to the door; the other witneſs, Mr. Stones, ſays, they were in the lower room, and this Mrs. Brooks ſays they were quite upſtairs out of ſight when Peter came, and that they did not come down ſtairs til. Harvey was called down; another important contradiction is, that if theſe men came but once, the whole ſtory told by the boy and the father, which is ſo contradictory in every other reſpect, muſt be a fabrication as to the twice coming; here are ſeven witneſſes on the part of the proſecution, who all poſitively ſwear, that the man was taken in the houſe, but in relating the circumſtances under which he was taken, it is hardly poſſible to conceive greater variety in the examination of witneſſes, or in the different parts of the examination of the ſame witneſſes. You are to judge whether you think theſe contradictions could occur in a ſtory hat was abſolutely true, whether they ariſe from witneſſes ſpeaking to different facts, or whether they ariſe from witneſſes coming to ſpeak one fact, and not being prepared for queſtions that they have been forced to anſwer, you will judge. The general obſervation is with reſpect to the propriety of the whole ſtory, whether it is likely that this man Lockell, in ſearch of a man, truly or falſely, that he ſaid had robbed him, ſhould go and knock at a door he knew was open. No obſervation can ariſe againſt the defendant from the evidence of Ann Holt, but if it did make any impreſſion, it muſt be the other way; there are witneſſes who are called to confirm the evidence originally given by Harvey at the Old Bailey; you are to judge whether you think it likely that a man of that character, for the mere hope of ſharing in the reward of blood, ſhould have been wilfully guilty of ſuch a crime; you will take the whole into your conſideration; you will take the poſitive evidence and the contradiction, and whether that is to be imputed to the defect of memory or to fabrication; if you are ſatisfied that this is not a ſtory againſt the defendant, but that in point of fact the man was really taken in the houſe notwithſtanding all the contradictions of their evidence; in that caſe it is a crime of an enormous magnitude, and loudly calls for puniſhment. If on the other hand, you think that the circumſtances of the caſe, together with the evidence that has been called in ſupport of the teſtimony of the defendant, though not ſo numerous as the witneſſes for the proſecution, yet tell a ſtory more probable and conſiſtent in itſelf, and without thoſe contradictions which occur in the evidence for the proſecution, in that caſe you will find a ſatisfaction in acquitting the defendant, and reſtoring him to that credit which he has formerly enjoyed, and it is to be ſure a moſt painful conſideration, on the one hand, that a man of an extraordinary character ſhould have been for a very ſmall temptation, guilty of a crime of the blackeſt die; or that on the other hand, a moſt wicked conſpiracy has been framed falſely to accuſe him of that offence.

ticular

The Jury retired for about ten minutes and returned with a verdict.

NOT GUILTY.

Court. Gentlemen of the Jury, I am to thank you for the very great attention you have paid in the courſe of a long and intricate inquiry, and I moſt entirely concur with the verdict you have given, as it is perfectly conſiſtent with my opinion.

Tried by the third London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

The Seſſions being ended, the Court proceeded to give Judgment as follows:

Received ſentence of Death. 25. viz.

John Hayes, George Reynolds, Joſeph Banning, James Connell, William Lawes, James Duncan, James Rowe, George Nugent, William Burke, William Barnes, Richard Silveſter, otherwiſe called Jack the Gardener, Amos Rowſell, James Moſdell, James Lewis, William Hayward, John Clayton, otherwiſe called Paddy Oyſter, William Moore, Thomas Browning, Thomas Winderbank, John Aſhborne, Joſeph Wood, Benjamin Howell, Patrick Coffel, William Beer, John Lloyd, otherwiſe Jones.

Tranſported for ſeven years. 57. viz.

Alexander Elder, Thomas Smith, (to Africa) Thomas Mead, Francis Greome, Elizabeth Dalton, John Bloomberg, William Fox, William Hughes, Cornelius Collins, Joſeph Newland, Joſeph Jackſon, Francis Sanders, William Richardſon, Charles Clark, (Africa), Jane Creek, Joſeph Merchant, John Thompſon, James Laurence, Thomas Broome, John Harris, William Deadroſs, (Africa), John Brown, John Goddard, Martin Stephens, Thomas Brownett, John Brentwood, Robert Chambers, John Dixon, James Horton, Samuel Poole, John Farmer, Thomas Blackhall, William Gray, John Brown, John Myers, George Spoonley, John Lewis, Thomas Tipping, William Harborne, John Dixon, Thomas Probart, Edward Davis, James Randall, alias Richardſon, Jane Langley, Mary Finn, John Wilſon, George Sando, John Hicks, James Lynch, Robert Spencer, George Davis, Abraham Dawſon, Thomas Underwood, John Marſhall, Robert Cane, William Goldſmith, John Caſs.

To be confined to hard labour twelve months in the Houſe of Correction. 6.

Lydia Kenneley, Harriet Miller, Iſabella Hall, Ann Gibſon, Sarah Blackburn, Thomas Lewington.

To be confined to hard labour ſix months in the Houſe of Correction. 20.

Mary Freelove, Robert Holmes, Elizabeth Bland, William Simmons, Thomas Harriſon, John Clark, James Miller, Hannah Dart, John Neale, Martha Fiſher, Sarah Cooper, Michael Young, John Dixon, Mary Parker, Henry Shepherd, Mary Hymer, Richard Marney, Jeremiah Murphy, Stephen Thomas, William Cunningham.

To be impriſoned three years in Newgate. 1.

Roger Sweetman.

To be impriſoned ſix months in Newgate. 1.

John Fray.

To be impriſoned three months in Newgate. 1.

William Stitt.

To be Whipped. 18.

John Harris, (twice) Charles Cooper, (twice) William Maſon, William Hands, Thomas Froſt, John Beeſton, John Mills, (twice) Alexander Bell, James Miller, Terence Tiney alias Terry, Walter Kelly, John Auguſt, Richard Marney, Jeremiah Murphy, Stephen Thomas, Thomas Lewington, Roger Sweetman, (twice) Michael Bradley.

Fined

Fined 1s. 6.

John Fray, Timothy Brian, John Richardſon alias Richmond, Eleanor Armſtrong, William Stitt, William Cunningham.

Fined 6d. 1.

Iſabella Hall.

William Hill, otherwiſe Michael Nowland, James Grimes, otherwiſe James Macauley, and Michael Andrews, otherwiſe Michael Mac Nally, brought into cuſtody of the keeper of Newgate by habeas corpus from Shepton Mallett, charged with felony on the high ſeas, remain till the next Admiralty Seſſion.

John Myles, a capital convict in February Seſſions received his Majeſty's pardon, on condition of being tranſported for life.

William Mitchell, for high treaſon, remains till next Seſſions, being ſick.

Sentence reſerved on George Baillie.

 The next Seſſions will begin on Wedneſday the 19th day of October, at the Old Bailey.

Trials at Law, Arguments of Counſel, &c.

Accurately taken in SHORT-HAND, and expeditiouſly tranſcribed, on reaſonable Terms,

By E. HODGSON,

WRITER of theſe PROCEEDINGS,

At No. 35, CHANCERY-LANE.

SHORT-HAND taught as uſual.

THIS DAY IS PUBLISHED,

SHORT-HAND CONTRACTIONS and SYMBOLICAL MARKS,

For the Benefit of SHORT-HAND WRITERS.

With an Extract from Lord Coke, and another from a Speech of the Honourable Mr. Erſkine, by way of Specimens, and adapted to every Syſtem. Alſo two handſome Copper Plates; one containing the Characters and Specimens; and the other a comparative Table of Short-Hand Alphabets, by

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR of that ART, and

SHORT-HAND WRITER to the OLD-BAILEY.

Sold by J. Wamſley, Chancery-lane; S. Bladon, Paternoſter-row; J. Matthews, Strand; T. and J. Egerton, Whitehall; Almon, in Fleet-ſtreet; and all the Bookſellers.

HODGSON's SHORT-HAND TREATISE on an improved Plan, price 2s. 6d. to be had as above; alſo all the Seſſions Papers, and ſeveral ſcarce Trials, that have been lately reprinted.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex;

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 19th of OCTOBER, 1785, and the following Days;

Being the EIGHTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER VIII. PART I.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor)

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE PROCEEDINGS UPON THE KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

BEFORE the Right Honourable RICHARD CLARK, LORD MAYOR of the City of London; the Honourable Sir GEORGE NARES Knt. one of the Juſtices of his Majeſty's Court of Common Pleas; the Honourable Sir JAMES EYRE, Knt. one of the Barons of his Majeſty's Court of Exchequer; the Honourable JAMES ADAIR, Recorder of the ſaid City; and others his Majeſty's Juſtices of Oyer and Terminer of the City of London, and Juſtices of Gaol Delivery of Newgate, holden for the ſaid City and County of Middleſex.

London Jury.	First Middleſex Jury.	Second Middleſex Jury.
Jonathan Key	Samuel Hall	William Arnold
Edmund Woods	Thomas Kindleſide	Jacob Dinning
Robert Ballinger	James Mann	Lacey Punderſon
John Treacher	John Davis	Thomas Hodgſon
Thomas Moore	William Green	Thomas Godſall
Charles Heath	John Young	Edward Kitchin
Edward Quiddington	Thomas Brooks	Thomas Lacon
William Paſhley	Richard Aſheldie	William Fox
John Hadfield	David Whitaker	Stephen Beck
George Gibſon	James Rutherford	Richard Baker
Henry Jones	Anthony Strother	John Giles
Joſeph Beardmore.	Peter Clunn.	Phillip Belton.

910 RICHARD PAYNE, CHARLESON MOLLOY, and SARAH JOHNSON were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 29th day of September laſt, two jars, value 2s. three gallons of copal varniſh, value 3l. and five gallons of gold ſize, value 4l. the property of Allen Wall.

ALLEN

ALLEN WALL sworn.

I am a varnish maker.

Did you know the prisoners at the bar?—I saw them at the Rotation Office.

They were not employed under you?—No; I was sent for last Friday evening to the Rotation Office, in Litchfield-street, there I found two bottles, which with the contents, I believe to be my property.

JOHN MEADOWS sworn.

I work with Mr. Wall; on the 28th of last month I filled a pot of japan gold size, on the 29th I bottled it off, I locked the door on the 29th day, about six, or a little after, I shut it up for the night, and when I returned the next morning, the 30th, I found the lock picked and the door open, and two bottles gone, and a copper pot, I missed two jars, one with five gallons, with gold size, and one with three gallons of gold varnish; I am sure as to the quantity that was put in; on the 29th I made this bottle, and one Philip Gunter made the other, and he is ill.

Prosecutor. I can swear to that myself, it was made by Philip Gunter, a man that has been in my employ for many years; he is at present ill, and has been for some time; I can swear positively to that, it has been made within a year and half, but I cannot swear positively to the contents of it at that time; I have a manufactory where I make varnishes and gold-size, which are sent to town in carts as they are wanted, this was a part of my stock, it never came down to Long Acre; I never saw it till I saw it at the Rotation Office; the other bottle was in my melting house at Marybone, they were both stolen from there; I know this to be copal varnish, I saw it within two months.

DENNIS M'DONALD sworn.

I went to search a house in Cros-lane, Saint Giles's, where the three prisoners were in a room, one of them, the prisoner Payne was blowing the fire, the other man came in and said the room was his, and the woman came in and said she found these two bottles, I asked her how they came there, she said she found them in the house, at the bottom of the stairs. Molloy said he knew nothing of them, but they were in the cupboard in the room, which he said was his room, I spoke to Payne and he made me no answer.

WILLIAM PICKERING sworn.

I went with M'Donald to search this house, and I was in the upper part of this house, and he called to me to come down to him, and I went into the room to M'Donald and there were these two bottles; the prisoner Payne was blowing the fire, and the woman came into the room, and M'Donald asked her where she got them, and she said that was going out early one morning to go to market, and she found these two bottles concealed under the stairs, when the man that goes for her husband, that is the prisoner Molloy, came in.

Prisoner Molloy. I habits with her my Lord.

Pickering. He said he knew nothing of the bottles, nor never saw them till the day that he found them. She did not say when she found them.

What day was this that you searched?—On Friday last the 14th of October, they were both full as they are now; I heard Payne say nothing.

What sort of a house was this?—I believe it is all in different tenements.

Was there one bed or two in the room?—One bed.

Court to Mac Donald. Who was in the room when you took them out of the cupboard?—Payne only.

(The Bottles deposed to)

What was the value of them?——Seven pounds.

CHARLES YOUNG sworn.

I was with the two last witnesses on Friday the 14th: I had been searching the two-pair of stairs room at this house, and I met Molloy coming out as I went into the house first; then I came down to the door, and M'Donald called me to come into Molloy's room, and I went up and saw these two bottles stand in the room; I did not see them taken out of the cupboard.

PRI-

PRISONER PAYNE's DEFENCE.

The prisoner Molloy was telling me of a job, and I came to see after it: I only just came up in the room about 5 minutes before, and this woman asked me to blow the fire for dinner.

Court to M'Donald. What time of day was this?——About 12.

PRISONER MOLLOY's DEFENCE.

I know nothing more of it, but on the Thursday that the good woman found it she told me of it on the Friday morning, and I told her to take it away, for it was nasty stinking stuff, and she said she would see if she could clear the jars out to keep water in: I told her nobody could drink out of them.

Court to M'Donald. Was you ever at these lodgings before?——It is a bad house, where all the thieves go to.

PRISONER JOHNSON's DEFENCE.

Last Wednesday morning, about four, I went out to go to Billingsgate; this is an open-house all night, the street-door is never shut, and I looked in the cupboard which I put my basket in; my basket was put out of the cupboard, and these two bottles were in. Sometimes boys get into the cupboard and sleep; I thought I would take them up stairs and see if any body enquired after them. When I came from market, I mentioned them to the woman in the next room; nobody enquired after them till Mr. M'Donald came.

Court. Is that woman here?—No, I said I would throw this stuff away, it was of no use to me, and I will try and clear the bottles: I said, perhaps, it was some painters stuff or other.

Prisoner Molloy. I have worked for my master eleven years; he came to the office.

Prosecutor. His master did give him a very excellent character, and said he had worked with him eleven years, and said he was a sober, honest young man.

JOHN ROWSON sworn.

I have seen the prisoner Molloy at the Play-house very often: I live with my brother, and we serve the houses with gold and silver laces, and I am at the play-house every evening, and have seen him there every evening; I never saw any harm of him; I always looked upon him as a very honest man; I have known him five or six years.

ALL THREE NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Justice NARES.

911. ROBERT SIMPSON was indicted for that he being in the dwelling house of one Gowen Crone, about the hour of one in the night, on the 27th day of September last, did feloniously steal therein, one waistcoat, value 5s. one shirt, value 3s. and 7l. 19s. 6d. in monies numbered, the property of Richard Beattie, and afterwards burglariously and feloniously did break out of the said house, in order to get out of the same, against the statute.

RICHARD BEATTIE sworn.

I live in Gold-street, near King-street, Wapping; I live in the house of one Gowen Crone, he is the landlord; I have a room there.

Does he live in the house himself?——Yes.

Are there any other lodgers in the house besides you?——Yes, two women live up stairs in the garret. I have the chamber.

When was you robbed?——The 28th of September last, I met with a man in Ratcliff-highway, in a cook's-shop, that was the prisoner, I went in to get my dinner, and he came in just after me and sat down and got his dinner, and I came out again, and just at the cook's-shop door, I saw two of my countrymen, and we went into a public-house to drink, the prisoner followed us to the public-house, and he called for either one or two pints of beer, my company and and me were sitting together, and he was like to breed a quarrel with us, and he wanted to fight, and I said I would sooner drink with you than fight with you any time, so would I too, says he; we sat there till near the evening duse, then he would see us home, he was very good company, and he saw us home to our own apartment, there were two and himself were three, and I and my wife were five, and we drank, and were pretty merry, and he was very good company till I got a little groggy; then knowing the man, and he being in the house, and it drawing late, I laid down to get a sleep, then the prisoner begged to stay under the roof of the house, because he was locked out of his lodgings; I let him stay as he was a poor sailor like myself, to harbour him for fear any harm should come to him; when I awaked it was between three and four in the morning, and the man was gone, and the money, and my property, and my wearing apparel.

Where was the man when you went to sleep?—I will tell you, I had not a bed to put him in, but he said, never mind a bed, I can plank it, I have planked it many a time; I left him laying upon the floor.

Was any body else left in the room besides him?—Yes, one of the men that was along with him, that man fleet in the bed with me, my wife awaked me, the strange man was laying on the backside of the bed, I was laying in the middle, my wife was laying with her clothes on upon the bed, she put her hand under the pillow where she put her pockets, and they were gone, and the man was gone, and the money was gone; through the alarm I waked the man, and run up stairs to get a light, this other man that was in the bed put his hand in his pocket, and he said to me, Dick, all my money is gone; says I, it is fallen out in the bed, and I put my hand into my pocket; why, says I, all my money is gone too, so she came down, says I, what is the matter; Oh dear! says she, matter enough, the man is gone, and the money is gone; I missed thirteen shillings and sixpence out of my right hand breeches pocket, and I had only three shillings and six-pence in this breeches pocket that I was laying on, he could not get at that.

After you missed the money, did you look for the man?—I never had any thoughts to look for the man, what should I look for a man for that I never saw with my eyes before, my wife locked the door, bolted the door, and latched it; that is, it was latched first.

Did you examine the door, when you first waked, to see whether it was open or shut?—My wife did.

Did you lose any thing else besides your money?—Yes, a waistcoat, a flannel jacket that I had under my coat, and I have not another in the world, and a shirt, and when I took him he had my shirt on, the shirt and jacket were laid for him to lay on to keep him as warm as I could.

Where did you take the man?—In the Half-way-house at Stepney, I had intelligence on Thursday night about ten; I directly got up, and took him, and I took my garters off my legs and tied him, and I found my own shirt upon his back, with a name my wife clapped in with her own hands, the waistcoat was not to be found, nor the money.

Had you ever seen the man before?—Never with my eyes till I saw him in the cook's-shop.

Are you sure the man that you found at the Half-way-house was the same man that you saw at the cook's-shop?—Oh, I am sensible, would I go to fly or swear a false thing, my Lord, no, I would sooner die first.

You are quite sure?—I am sensible of it.

Court to Prisoner. Would you ask the witness any question?—If it is proper, when I am put on my defence I will.

MARY BEATTIE sworn.

I am wife of the last witness, I remember his coming home on the Tuesday night.

Was your husband in liquor or sober when he came home?——In liquor.

Who came home with him?——Two men and the prisoner besides my husband, they came home between eight and nine.

Had they any drink when they came home?——Half a gallon of beer the prisoner sent for, and half a gallon I sent for; the prisoner said there he only begged to be under shelter, he said he was locked out of his lodgings, and thought as he was a sailor he might get into harm; I went to bed about twelve.

Where was the prisoner?——He was fast in sleep, you might have heard him snore down at the bottom of the stairs, he was laying on on the board.

Where was your husband?——He was in bed; one was in bed, one man went away, and the other staid.

Do you recollect whether your door was fast when you went to bed?——I locked it, bolted it and latched it, that was the outer door.

What did you do with the key?——I left it within the lock on the inside.

What time did you wake?——Between three and four in the morning.

Did you find that you had lost any thing?——I put my hand under my pillow, where I laid, and I missed my pocket, which I had put under my pillow, I laid with all my clothes on but my pocket, stays and shoes; as soon as I missed my pocket, I said, Oh lass a day, and I waked my husband, I was afraid he would ill-use me, and I struck a light; my husband said, what, are you not well? what is the matter? Oh! matter enough says I, the money is gone, and the man is gone; I had six guineas and a half and nine and six pence in my pocket; I told it over before I went to bed, and the prisoner was snoring fast asleep.

What state did you find your room door in?——The door has a padlock on the outside, and locks on the outside; I fastened it on the inside with a case knife, and the case knife was taken away, I never saw it since, any body could open it on the inside, but not without, unless they broke the case knife in two.

When you went down stairs, how did you find the street door?——On the latch.

Was there any thing missed besides your money?——There was the shirt, and the waistcoat, and a jacket as they call it.

Had not you been drinking?——No sir.

When did you see the man again?——On Thursday night between eleven and twelve, at the Half-way House at Stepney; the people that were in the house knew him again, and came down and told us he was there; I saw my husband's shirt on his back, it is here, it has the mark which I put in myself.

WILLIAM ELBY sworn.

I took this shirt off the prisoner's back, at the lock-up-room at Shadwell, on the 28th of September, on a Thursday.

Mr. Buttin. We found two guineas, eight shillings and half a crown piece and a penny, we cannot swear to money; Mr. Clone would not come without he was subpœnaed, and we could not get any money to subpœna him; we are very poor people, and he stripped us of every penny but fourpence halfpenny.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

Yesterday was three weeks I went to the cook's shop in Ratcliff-high way to get my dinner, and there was a man in liquor, I went in, I never minded the man, and the prosecutor and the woman was sitting at dinner; in three or four minutes the man that was abusing the man at the cook's shop, was hauled in, having broke the windows, the man that was in liquor that broke the windows, asked the prosecutor to pay for the windows; I said this man and woman have said nothing amiss, they sat at table at dinner, they were charged with a constable, at last the prosecutor agreed to pay the man for the windows, but before that, says the woman, you have seen we have done nothing, and we will go before the Justice, and we will pay you for your trouble; says I, good woman I have nothing to do with your affairs, the man that broke the windows proved to be the prosecutor's landlord, tho' he said he did not know him. I often dine at this cook's shop, and the young man he son said to me, will you go over the way and have have a pint of beer? and we went, and there was the profecutor and his wife and three more men, ſeamen, they had, I ſuppoſe, five or ſix pots of beer; I paid for a pint of beer, and we had another, they would inſiſt on my drinking, I refuſed, however, they got pretty ſtill, and one of the men that went home along with us began ſinging a ſong, then they inſiſted upon my joining their company, we continued there all the afternoon drinking and ſinging, and I put down a ſhilling and ſaid let us ſee what that will do, one of theſe ſeamen put down another, the other men ſaid they would not pay any thing, they were aſked in; ſo one being a ſtout man, ſays to the profecutor, you was my total ruin you know by falſe ſwearing before, and you have an undoubted right to pay my reckoning, and the woman ſaid, do not have any words, I will pay the next of the reckoning, and ſhe paid it, and we all went to their houſe together; I was for leaving them, no, no, ſays the profecutor and his wife, let us go home and have a bit of ſupper, and a ſong or two at home, we went there and ſhe put ſome victuals upon the table, and fetched half a gallon of beer, that was ſoon out, and I paid for another half gallon; there were two others, a man and woman came up, we had three half gallons of beer, and at ten I ſaid I ſhould be locked out; never mind that ſays the woman, and one of the men ſaid we ſhall all pigg here to-night; I inſiſted upon going home, they inſiſted I ſhould not; about eleven we had three half gallons more, and being in liquor, I ſaid I cannot ſit up, let me lay down to ſleep; I laid down and one of the men pulled his jacket off and put it over me; the woman came up ſtairs and ſaid ſays ſhe there is a woman lays there, you may lay down with her, they ſaw before I had money, and I ſaid I want no woman; the other two men were up and down ſtairs ſeveral and ſeveral times; I fell aſleep, and the woman wake me ſays ſhe you muſt get up becauſe my huſband will be very angry, he does not remember your being here in the room, and theſe other three are his country people, he will not be vexed with them, but he will with you, for he will not remember you, as he was in liquor, and ſhe went down with me and let me out; I went and ſet with the watchman till day-light, and gave him threepence; on the Thurſday evening I went to the Half-way Houſe at Stepney. and we had ſome beer there, and in came this man and his wife, and another man, and took and tied my hands; ſays he, He has piſtols about him, I was ſearched, I had neither knife nor piſtol; well, they took me down to Shadwell, there they ſtripped me of every thing, the ſhirt was taken off my back, and ſhe made oath before the Juſtice that it was her ſhirt; ſhe then ſaid it was marked with I. L. I bought the ſhirt of Mrs. Winnes who ſells cloths near the New Road, and a pair of ſtockings and a black handkerchief; I received this money at Chatham.

Court. Is Mrs. Winnes here?---No, I had no money to ſubpœna her, all my money and things were taken from me.

What way of life have you been in?---I am a carpenter, I have been down at Liverpool theſe two years, I have nobody living here at all.

Where did you lodge?---At Mr. Caſtow's, in Plow-ſtreet, Whitechapel, a chandler's ſhop.

Is he here?---No, I ſent a letter, but whether it went, or how, of which way, I cannot tell.

Court. Let that ſhirt be handed over to the Jury with that mark.

Court to Mrs. Beattie. You ſay you put in that mark yourſelf?--Yes.

How came you to put in J. L.?——It was my ſiſter's huſband's ſhirt, and I bought it of her, he entered on board the Druid man of war, and this ſhirt was pawned, here is a letter from the Druid man of war, it was his ſhirt at the time I marked it, therefore I marked it with his name.

Jury. What was your brother'snam?---John Lundy.

Court. The letter is no evidence.

Where does your ſiſter live?——She is on board the Druid man of war at this time.

Where

Where did ſhe live before we went on board?--In King-ſtreet.

When was it this letter came?——I do not know, they were letters that my ſiſter left behind her, I only brought them on purpoſe to let you know they were the ſame name; it was ſince my nephew was drowned.

Court to Elby. When did you firſt ſee any thing of this matter?——The priſoner was brought up to the public-houſe where I was drinking, with his hands tied, and charged with robbing them of ſome money, and this ſhirt, ſeven guineas I think it was, the ſhirt was then on his back.

Whereabout is the mark of the ſhirt?—In the boſom; I ſearched him and found two guineas upon him.

Court to Jury. With reſpect to the breaking out, the evidence falls ſhort, for there were ſeveral other people in this houſe, none of which are here, they might have opened the door.

GUILTY.

Of ſtealing, but not of the burglary.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury, before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

912. JAMES NESBIT was indicted for burglariouſly and felonioufly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Cornelius Callahan, about the hour of one in the night, on the 20th day of September laſt, with intent his goods and chattles there being burglariouſly and felonioufly to ſteal.

CORNELIUS CALLAHAN ſworn.

I live in the pariſh of Saint John, Wapping, on the 20th of laſt month my houſe was broke open; I went to bed about eight, before I went to bed I went into my work-ſhop, which joins my dwelling houſe, there is only a partition between them, and I examined the places, and it was all faſt, I was not up laſt, my wife was up laſt.

Is your wife here?——No, ſhe went to bed an hour after, about nine; there was no ſervant; I heard the watchman cry twelve, and about five minutes after, I heard a noiſe alongſide my bed, there is a little trap-door and a ſhutter, and I looked acroſs it and ſaw a great light in the work-ſhop, and I ſaw a great part of the ſhop untiled, and the moon ſhone in through it, and I could ſee nobody; in about fifteen or twenty minutes after, I heard a great noiſe, it came from the head of the bed to the foot, and I ſaw a man come right through the tiling, which was the priſoner, there were two men more on the tiling when he came down, the croſs pieces that go from the rafters were cut away, and this chiſſel was found on the tiles in the morning; he was ſtanding on my bellows, I went back and got a ſhort gun, which I always keep loaded, and I preſented it to him through a hole, and it miſſed fire, I fired again, it miſſed fire a ſecond time, then I awoke my wife and told her, then ſhe got up and the priſoner hid himſelf, he was an hour and a quarter in the ſhop; I made my wife come down, I was afraid they would murder me, and my wife waited for the watchman coming full an hour, then a woman came by, my wife called her, and ſhe got aſſiſtance, and I told them to break the door open; the door was faſtened.

Has he been in cuſtody ever ſince?--Yes.

Did he take any thing?--I cannot ſay.

——— HITCHCOCK ſworn.

I am one of the conſtables of the night, I remember coming to the aſſiſtance of the proſecutor; I was called between twelve and one; I came to his ſhop in conſequence of being ſent for, it was the 20th of laſt month; I know the priſoner, we found him hid behind the water-tub in the ſhop, he has been in cuſtody ever ſince; we tried to break the door open but could not, and the proſecutor ſent his little boy to undo the door, and I took him to the watch-houſe, and he was committed; we ſearched but there was nothing about him.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I went into an old houſe for ſhelter, and in

in the night the rain came upon me, and I found a hole, and I went in there; I have no friends at all; that gentleman ſent me to priſon before for an aſſault, and I had only come out of priſon that day, and I had no where to go that night.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury, before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

913. MARIA HAMILTON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 20th day of September laſt, one linen gown, value 21s. nine yards and a half of linen trimming value 2s. 3d. one ſilk and cotton gown, value 6s. one black ſtuff flounced petticoat, value 6s. one apron, value 12d. one black ſilk bonnet, value 12d. and 9s. 6d. in monies numbered, the property of James Groves, in the dwelling houſe of Thomas Shaw.

JANE GROVES ſworn.

I am wife of James Groves, the priſoner lodged in a houſe where I lived, in the houſe of Thomas Shaw; I loſt a new linen gown and a ſilk and cotton gown, this is the cuff of it, a black flounced petticoat, a new one, it coſt me nine and ſix-pence, I had wore it about three hours, and four yards and a half of new trimming to trim the gown, it was linen trimming, and a black ſilk bonnet, the Manchester gown is ſilk and cotton; there was a white cloth apron with nine and ſix-pence tied up in the corner of it.

What was the value of theſe things?—The linen gown coſt me thirty-ſix ſhillings, I never wore it but once, I paid four ſhillings for making it; the other gown is pawned for five or ſix ſhillings, the week before laſt; the trimming coſt two ſhillings, the bonnet two ſhillings, and nine and ſix-pence in money; I never found any of the things again, any further than the priſoner ſaid ſhe had loſt the bonnet.

How came that?—She told the conſtable ſhe had loſt it.

What is the name of the conſtable?—Edward Treadway; I met the priſoner in Broad St. Giles's on the 20th of September, and I aſked her how ſhe did, ſhe ſaid, indeed Mrs. Groves I am very bad, I am juſt come out of gaol, I am in great diſtreſs; I aſked her to drink ſomething, ſhe ſaid, if you pleaſe; I had known her three months before, I took her into a publick houſe and bid her chuſe her own liquor, and ſhe choſe a quartern of rum, I paid a great for it, I I gave her ſix-pence to get her ſome meat, and I called for a pot of porter, and when ſhe came back, I ſaid, Mary here is ſix-pence, I am ſorry for your diſtreſs; ſhe ſaid, indeed I am, for this old bed-gown is my ſhift; then I gave her a ſhilling and took the ſix-pence, then I got up to come away and it began to rain, I ſaid Mary if you have a mind to come home with me and have a good diſh of tea it may refreſh you after your trouble; ſhe came home with me and ſat on the foot of the bed, and I took and tied the nine and ſix-pence in the corner of my apron in a hard knot, ſhe ſaw me do it; I went and unlocked my box where my clothes were, and I put my apron and my money in the box, and I ſhewed her the trimming; I ſaid I had bought it for that gown, and pointed to the box; ſhe ſaid it would look very neat; after a little while I ſaid I was very poorly with a pain in my ſide, I would lay down if ſhe would make the tea, ſhe ſaid do my dear, ſhe covered me up, and I believe I fell aſleep, and I miſſed her and there was no fire, and I went to light a candle, and I was locked in.

What time was this?—About one in the day-time, I thought ſhe was gone to buy an old gown, I was not ſurpriſed, I made my bed and ſwept my room out afterwards; I found my box ſtripped of every thing, I miſſed my bonnet, I opened my window and called out, and a neighbour made anſwer, if any body has robbed you it is that woman in the white wrapper, for I ſaw her come down in your bonnet and a great bulk under her petticoats, ſhe ſtood under the gateway and preſſed it down; then I begged that ſomebody would go to my landlady and ſee if they could open the door, and they got the door open, and I purſued where ſhe ſaid the priſoner was gone, I looked every where for her, and about ſeven or eight I met her; ſays I, Mary what an ungenerous creature you are, to treat me in the manner you have done, ſhe was a minute before ſhe ſpoke, ſhe took the pipe out of her mouth, and ſaid, I was juſt going to ſend to you; ſays I, Oh! you ungenerous creature, was you a going to ſend me my clothes again, and my money, and where is the key of my room, ſhe put her hand in her pocket and ſaid d—— n you here is your key; ſays I, I will not leave you till I know where my things are; ſhe flung her pipe down in the ſtreet and ſaid, "by the Holy Ghoſt I will ſcort you like pork, if you do not looſe me," and ſhe clinched her hands as if ſhe had been going to ſtrike me, but ſhe did not: ſays I, I will forgive you the money if you will tell me where my things are, but if you do not I will fetch a conſtable; ſo then ſhe downed on her knees in all the muck, and ſaid, "bad luck and a ſudden death attend you Mother Groves, if you do not fetch a conſtable"; ſo then I did fetch a conſtable, or elſe I would not have troubled my head about her; nobody was in the room but her when I laid down.

When you found her had ſhe any of your clothes on?—No, ſhe had a very handſome gown on, which ſhe had taken out of pawn that very afternoon.

How long did you ſleep?——I cannot recollect, but it was more than an hour, it was about twelve when we came in together, and it was almoſt two when I awaked.

—— DOUGLAS ſworn.

I have a lower apartment; I was having ſome breakfaſt with the woman of the houſe with my children, and the priſoner came to the window and aſked for the proſecutrix, I told her I did not know ſuch a perſon by name, with that ſhe went away, this was about ten in the morning; ſhe was gone about an hour and a half, when ſhe and the proſecutrix returned together, and they went up ſtairs together, and ſhe might be up ſtairs for an hour and half or an hour and three quarters, I cannot ſay which, along with this ſaid Mrs. Groves; when ſhe went up ſtairs ſhe had neither hat, cloak, nor gown on, and when ſhe came down ſhe had the contents under her petticoats, a kind of bundle, and ſhe ſtood under the gateway and was ſtroking down her hips, and the proſecutrix's bonnet was on her head, which I had ſeen on the proſecutrix before, I thought the priſoner was gone out of an erand, ſhe ſeemed as if heſitating, and then ſhe turned to the right hand towards St. Giles's; I afterwards told Mrs. Groves which way ſhe went as ſoon as ſhe made the alarm; I am ſure to the priſoner.

Priſoner. Did not I come down again in two or three minutes and leave the houſe intirely?—Upon my oath ſhe went up along with this ſaid Mrs. Groves, and never came down with the contents till an hour and half, or an hour and three quarters; ſhe came down alſo with the bonnet on her head.

Priſoner. Did you ſee a bundle with me?—Yes, I ſaw a bundle under your petticoats, and a bonnet on your head.

EDWARD TREADWAY ſworn.

Mrs Groves came to Juſtice Walker's about ſeven, and told me ſhe had been robbed of the things mentioned in the indictment, and ſhe gave me the key of the room; I went with her into Diot Street, we went from one public houſe to another, at laſt I met her in the ſtreet, I ſaid to her, you muſt go along with me; what do you want? ſays ſhe, I took her into cuſtody, ſhe had a linen gown upon her, ſhe ſaid ſhe fetched it out of pawn that day, ſhe ſaid ſhe had loſt the bonnet, ſhe was very much in liquor, ſhe could hardly ſtand; I went with the key to open the woman's room, I tried it, and it opened the lock.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I did go into that gentlewoman's room, and and ſhe ſaid I will lay in bed, and do you lock the door and come up towards the afternoon and let me out; I did lock the door and put the key in my pocket, and at the time I was to come to her, I met her and that man, I ſaid I was juſt coming to let you out; the proſecutrix was very much in liquor; I have no more to ſay nor do in it, but the houſe ſhe lives in there is nine or ten houſes, one runs into another, and there is twenty bunches of keys to one houſe, I lodged in it. I have tried other keys, it is a great court, and all women of the town in it, there is not one honeſt perſon I believe in the court, I have no witneſſes, for I did not think the woman would be ſo wicked to fetch me up.

GUILTY,

Of ſtealing to the value of 39s.

To be tranſported for ſeven Years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

914. JOHN HENDERSON was indicted for feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Nathaniel Oliver, about the hour of four in the afternoon on the 10th day of October, no perſon being therein, and feloniouſly ſtealing therein, one ſilver teaſpoon, value 2s. one cloth apron, value 12d. one linen ſhift, value 12d. four children's ſhirts, value 18d. one callico bedgown, value 9d. one diaper napkin, value 8d. ten children's caps, value 2s. one muſlin cap, value 3d. one muſlin handkerchief, value 6d. two callico handkerchiefs, value 6d. half a yard of linen cloth, value 12d. a ſtone ring ſet in ſilver, value 2s. a ſtone pin ſet in baſe metal, value 1d. a necklace ſet in ſilver, and 80 glaſs beads to the ſame, value 2s. the property of the ſaid Nathaniel.

NALHANIEL OLIVER ſworn.

I am a dyer, mine is a ſmall houſe, in which myſelf, my wife and one child live; I went out in the afternoon, my wife having gone out before me, I made faſt the door when I went out, I bolted the back-door and locked the fore-door, I had the keys in my pocket, I left nobody in the houſe, I returned in about an hour after, and I found a man in the houſe and my drawers were rifled, and when I returned my door was open.

Had you delivered your key to any body while you was abſent?—No, I came back before my wife, I was at work juſt by, and I heard a noiſe, and I came to the back door, and there was the priſoner in the back room, I found him in the bed-room below ſtairs, I found nobody elſe.

What was he doing?—He was taking the things out of my drawers.

Had he in fact taken any thing out of the drawers?—Yes.

What?—Some children's ſhirts and ſhifts.

Where were they laying?—Some he had put in his bag, and ſome were laying in a chair; I aſked him what buſineſs he had or what he wanted there, and he turned and ſaid I will ſhoot you, and he put his hand into his pocket; I drew from him and he puſhed by me, and I immediately followed him till I took him in the ſtreet he got out.

How far from your houſe had he got before you took him?—Nearly half a mile.

How came you to let him go ſo far?—I did not care to go too near him for fear he ſhould ſhoot me, but more people came up then I muſtered up courage, he ran and before I took him he threw ſomething away, I followed him as cloſe as I could within fifteen or twenty yards, he was not out of my ſight in the courſe of my running.

Did you obſerve him throw ſomething away?——Yes I did obſerve him throw ſomething away, but what it was I could not tell; after I took him I went to the place where he threw ſomething away, and there we found a piſtol; when I took him he had one of my ſilver ſpoons in his pocket.

Had he any thing elſe?——Nothing elſe of my property; he had a box of gun-powder of his own.

What became of the bag you ſaw in the houſe?—It was left behind.

Who did the bag belong to?—To him.

It

It did not belong to you?—No.

After you had taken him did you examine that bag to ſee what was in it?—Yes, there were children's ſhirts, and ſhifts, and caps.

How many?——I did not count any of them, ſome things of mine were found in the bag and ſome were found in the chair.

After you had taken him did you examine the doors to ſee how he got in?—He broke open the back door, and took off the two bolts, the two bolts were laying down by the door on the inſide.

Where does that back door open to?—Into a garden, I came to the back door.

How happened that?——I was down in the field at work near to the houſe, and I heard a noiſe, and it gave me a ſuſpicion that ſomebody had broke in.

What became of the things that were in the bag, and that were in the chair?—The officer had them, his name is John Armſtrong.

JOHN ARMSTRONG ſworn.

The proſecutor gave me theſe things by order of the Magiſtrate.

EDMUND WADE ſworn.

I produce the tea-ſpoon which I found in the priſoner's pocket, and a box of gunpowder.

(The tea-ſpoon depoſed to by the proſecutor.)

Mrs. OLIVER ſworn.

Court. Look over theſe things, that linen, and tell me whether you know any of them.

(The things depoſed to.)

(The piſtol produced, which was loaded with two balls.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was in great diſtreſs; I had not had a mouthful of victuals to eat; I had travelled from Briſtol; I am a ſeafaring man; I have not a ſoul living in the world.

Court. You had better have ſold your piſtol and bought bread with that; how old are you?—About twenty-one.

GUILTY,

Of ſtealing to the value of 4*s.* 10*d.*

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

616. JOHN ISAAC was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting John Wallis on the King's high way, on the 11th of Auguſt laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon, and againſt his will, one ruſh baſket, value 6d. four live fowls, value 5s. and one guinea, value 1l. 1s. and one half guinea, value 10s. 6d. and 10s. in monies, numbered, the property of the ſaid John Wallis.

JOHN WALLIS ſworn.

I was robbed on the Edgeware road, on the eleventh of Auguſt, between ſeven and eight, it was light, I was in a ſingle horſe chaiſe, the perſon that robbed me was on foot, there were three in company, that ſtopped the chaiſe, I ſaw them about fifty yards before they met the chaiſe.

Had you any body in the chaiſe with you?—Yes, when they ſtopped me they demanded my money.

Who bid you ſtop?——I cannot ſay that, but I immediately gave my money.

Was you driving?—No.

Who was the perſon that was with you?—Edward Daniel, who is here; I loſt a guinea, a half-guinea, and ten ſhillings, that I can ſwear to, they were taken out of my pocket, but not by this priſoner, and I loſt a key and a note, I loſt a baſket of fowls; I cannot ſwear to the priſoner.

Were the other two taken?—Yes.

What became of them?—They were both convicted, I could not ſwear to any of them.

ED-

EDWARD DANIEL ſworn.

I was with Mr. Wallis about a quarter before eight, I drove the chaiſe, I can only ſay the ſame that Mr. Wallis ſaid; I perceived the men ſome diſtance, before they attacked us, I perceived the priſoner coming down the hill, he was the firſt of the three, I am ſure of the priſoner, he was the only one of the three I had the opportunity of ſeeing; at the moment when they came oppoſite to my mare's head, the priſoner ſtrove to catch hold of the reins of the chaiſe horſe, I gave the mare a couple of ſtrokes, and the priſoner gave me a ſtroke with the back part of the cutlaſs over my left arm, thinking, I ſuppoſe, I ſhould drop the reins.

He did not wound you?—No; he did not; one of them came and robbed me while the priſoner robbed my friend; I am ſure this is the man that robbed the proſecutor, Wallis, he held a piſtol to his breaſt, and a cutlaſs.

Wallis. I ſaw a piſtol and a cutlaſs, which took my attention more than the man a great deal.

Did you ſee any thing done with the cutlaſs?——No, I did not ſee him ſtrike.

Mr. Keys, priſoner's Council. Did the man that robbed you go away immediately from the chaiſe, after he had robbed you?—Yes, he bid me turn my head about, which I very readily did; after he took the baſket of fowls, I did not ſee him offer to ſtrike any perſon; this tranſaction was a minute about, or two, three or five, I cannot ſay.

To Daniel. The priſoner was a perfect ſtranger to you before this tranſaction?—Yes.

How long do you imagine it was about?—I thing it was about five minutes; he was longer in robbing my friend, than the others were in robbing me; at the time we were about the buſtle of the mare, I had as much view of him as I have of you now, and for a conſiderable way, he was coming down the hill, I had a particular view of him every way, I particularly obſerved him before he came.

Had you no terror on your mind at this time?——No, I had not, only when one of the priſoners threatened to ſhoot my dog, my attention was taken up with one more than the other; I knew all the three, and my friend knows them too, if he chuſes to ſpeak; the other two men were convicted on my evidence laſt ſeſſions.

What are you?——I am a tea-dealer.

Where do you live?——In Southampton-ſtreet, Covent Garden; I was taken into a room, where the other men were, with twelve or thirteen, and I picked them out directly.

How long was it before you ſaw theſe priſoners again?---I ſuppoſe it was a month.

Mr. Keys priſoner's Council. If the priſoner ſtruck at you, it muſt be acroſs your friend?——Yes it was.

Yet your friend could not ſee that?——I do not wonder at that, he was a good deal terrified.

Court. Where did you ſee this man after the robbery?——At Litchfield-ſtreet, at the Rotation-office, he was taken up at Litchfield-ſtreet, and I was ſent for.

Was he with other people at that time?——No, he was not.

When you gave evidence of the perſon of the priſoner, had you deſcribed the priſoner?——Yes.

How?---In black clothes.

How was he dreſſed when you ſaw him?---As he is now.

And was you ſure he is the man?--Yes, I was clear he was the man.

How long have you lived in Southampton-ſtreet?---About ſixteen years.

You have not a doubt about?---No, I have not indeed.

Mr. Keys. My Lord, the priſoner wiſhed to have poſtponed his trial, on account of the abſence of his witneſſes, and I can only ſay, that if they had been here, they would have proved, that this young man's uncle is a man of reputation, and lives at Ealing; that the priſoner has been an officer, and ſince the peace he has been ſupported by his uncle, and bears a good character.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

When I was brought to Litchfield-ſtreet, I was pointed out by Dixon and Blacketer, two men that belong to the office, to the gentleman who was robbed; I heard one man in particular, make anſwer, and ſay, that is the man; any body might have been ſworn to equally with me, I am innocent.

Court to Daniel. Was the priſoner pointed out to you as the man that robbed you, or did you yourſelf know him?---No, he was not pointed out, the priſoner was taken up on my information, and he told a long ſtory before the Juſtice, that he was down at Folkſton, from the firſt of Auguſt to the ſecond of September; I had been there for ſome time.

GUILTY, Death.

Proſecutor. The Uncles have been with me, they are both men of credit, the one is maſter of the horſe, and the other is firſt page to the Princeſs Amelia; they have given him a moſt excellent character; I wiſh the gentlemen of the Jury and my Lord to conſider, and recommend him to mercy.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

916. WILLIAM MITCHELL was indicted for that he, on the 23d day of Auguſt laſt, one piece of baſe coin reſembling the current ſilver coin of this kingdom called a ſhilling, falſely and deceitfully, feloniouſly and traiterouſly, did colour with materials producing the colour of ſilver, againſt the ſtatute.

A Second Count, For that he one round blank of baſe metal, of a fit ſize and figure to be coined into counterfeit milled money, called ſhillings, falſely did colour with materials producing the colour of ſilver, againſt the ſtatute.

(The caſe opened by Mr. REEVES.)

JOHN DIXON ſworn.

I am an officer belonging to Litchfield-ſtreet; I know the priſoner: I took him in cuſtody on the twenty-third of Auguſt in Tottenham-court-road in the ſtreet; Johnſon came to the office to me, and in conſequence of his information to me, I took up the priſoner; I ſearched him, and in his waiſtcoat pocket I found this bottle and this bit of black mittin, with theſe ſeven ſhillings, and fourteen ſixpences, all bad; they have been in my cuſtody ever ſince, and three ſhillings and ſixpence in good money, I found in his pocket.

Court. Was the money mixed or ſeparate?—No, the bad money was all in that bit of black mittin, the bottle was broke before the Grand Jury, but that is the liquor that was in it; I was obliged to find another bottle, and I took him before the Juſtice; I have ſome ſhillings to ſhew the Court that this ſtuff will turn them of that colour.

Have you made the experiment yourſelf?---I have, but I have none of them here; I believe Mr. Vines has.

Mr. Peatt, priſoner's Council. Theſe kind of blanks are uſed for other purpoſes I believe.---Very few in that ſtate, they have heads.

Is there any impreſſion on any of them?---Yes, on ſeveral, a faint impreſſion.

Jury. Some has no impreſſion, and ſome a faint impreſſion.

Are not pieces of metal of that ſize, applied to various purpoſes?---Not in that ſtate; a round blank with neither head or woman on it, you may make a button of it.

Would you have taken any one of them as a ſhilling?---In the ſtate I ſaw them in, they were finiſhed fit to paſs; I ſhould not have taken any of them, but any other perſon would.

That you cannot tell.

WILLIAM BLACKETER ſworn.

I know the priſoner, I was with Dixon, when he was taken into cuſtody, and I was preſent when the ſhillings that has been produced in Court were found upon him, and the bottle of ſtuff.

Mr. Peatt. Do you know anything of the nature of that ſtuff in the bottle?—No.

Have you at any time ſeen men ſtand at the corner of the ſtreets, with ſtuff rubbing buckles and buttons, to make them look like ſilver?——I have heard of ſuch things but I never ſaw them.

Did

Did that never fall within your notice? never.

WALTER JOHNSON ſworn.

I know the priſoner, I ſaw him with one Charles Ford, about the 18th or 19th of Auguſt the priſoner aſked me to go home with him, I went home with him.

Court. What, was he an acquaintance of yours?——Not in the leaſt, but I found by being in company with Ford, that he dealt in bale money, I went home with him, and called for a pint of beer, he took a baſon of the ſhelf, and there was ſome pieces about the ſize of half crowns or crowns, I looked upon them to be copper; after that he told me that he could caſt any of them, I immediately went to Litchfield-ſtreet, and acquainted Blacketer of what had paſſed, and he deſired me to watch the priſoner; the next day my buſineſs led me to go over London Bridge, and I met the priſoner and aſked him how he did, he pulled out a bottle out of his pocket, I thought it had been a ſample of rum, I ſmelt of it and I found it was aquafortis, beſides that he pulled out of his waiſtcoat pocket, ſomething ſimilar to paſte, ſimilar to that which is in Court, which he ſaid was for cleaning of metal, then I left them, and called at Litchfield-ſtreet and acquainted them; two or three days paſt, and I called again on the priſoner on a Tueſday morning about ſeven the 23d of Auguſt, I was going to ſee Ford, he aſked me for a bottle that ſtood on the ſhelf, which he took, he was in his own houſe, he was in bed, No. 7, White Lion-ſtreet, I took it to be ſomething of bark, then he deſired me to reach him another bottle, which I did, and when he got up he took off the ſhelf a black purſe which is in Court (looks at it) this is the very purſe, it had ſomething in it that jingled I could not tell what it was, I went with him to Ford's, and Ford was not up, I knocked at the window and Ford got up and let him in, I kept on the outſide, he aſked Ford to give him a little ſalt, I leaned and lolloped on the outſide of the window, there was no glaze to the window, only ſhutters; the priſoner aſked Ford to give him ſome ſalt, after that he pulled the bottle out of his pocket, and began to rub ſome off it with the ſalt, with ſome of the metal which he had, which were of the ſize of ſixpences and ſhillings, he rubbed ſeven pieces reſembling a ſhilling, and thirteen ſixpences, one ſixpence I did not ſee him do (which is the ſixpence which lays at the corner) after he had done them, he put him into cold water in a baſon, I went immediately to find Blacketer, I could not find him.

Did you obſerve what effect the rubbing of them had?——It appeared to make them look like ſhillings and ſixpences.

Before or after they went into the water?—Before they went into the water.

What colour were they before they were rubbed?——Something ſimilar to copper, when he waſhed them he put them into the very ſame purſe, I then went to Dixon and told him what happened, and where he might find the priſoner.

Mr. Peatt. How ſoon was it that you ſaw what you took to be the pieces that you ſay he rubbed in that manner, or ſomething ſimilar to them, again?—He rubbed them about a quarter after ſeven, I ſaw them directly after, the next day when the priſoner was examined, I went to Mr. Vernon.

Then you do not know that they were the ſame pieces that you ſaw him do?——I really believe them to be the ſame, there is one ſhilling that has got a little bit of a hole or dent, that is it to the beſt of my knowledge.

Pray, Mr. Johnſon, has it ever fell within your obſervation that people ſtand in the ſtreet with paſte reſembling the colour of this, and rub buckles or buttons?—Such things might be in the ſtreet, but I never took notice of it, I have read in the paper of theſe things for cleaning of ſilver.

Court. What way of life are you in?—I am at home with my friends, my mother is in the fan way, lives in Somerſet-ſtreet, Portland-ſquare.

Are

Are you bred to any buſineſs?—I never was.

What age?——Twenty-nine, my father once lived at No. 61. Friday-ſtreet, he is reduced.

This man was not your acquaintance?—No, he was not, Ford was my acquaintance, I was under a predicament for an aſſault in New Priſon, which was the way I got acquainted with Ford, I was a priſoner there for an aſſault.

You met this man firſt at the Hampſhire Hog, with Ford?—Yes, it is oppoſite St. Giles's church.

What was your buſineſs there?—I called to ſee Ford being a priſoner.

What buſineſs had this priſoner with Ford, could you diſcover by the converſation between them?——I found that they had been to Peckham-fair the day before, putting off bad money, and they were eating ſome ſalmon, and I eat ſome with them.

Can you explain to the Jury what led to that?—I cannot.

What is Ford?—He is a duffer.

Becauſe it ſeems a little extraordinary, that the priſoner ſhould chooſe to put his life into the hands of an abſolute ſtranger, you know Mr. Johnſon?—I never ſaw the man before that time in my life.

Did you give him any encouragement to help him with reſpect to this money to paſs it off?——No, my Lord, far be it from me.

Then, what was it that introduced you ſo far in the confidence of this man?——I thought it was my duty, or any other perſon's elſe, to have ſuch a man apprehended.

I am not blaming you for diſcovering what paſt, but what I want to know is, what it could be that induced this man to put ſo much confidence in you?——I cannot tell, my Lord.

Do explain to the Jury how it happened that this man truſted you with ſuch a ſecret as this?—I look upon it, knowing I had been in priſon with Ford.

But he had no reaſon, I imagine, to ſuppoſe you dealt in that way?—I never did in my life.

But did he ſuppoſe ſo?——Being in priſon nobody can tell what ſituation of life I had been in when I came out; I cannot tell rightly what made him repoſe ſo much confidence.

Rightly, can you at all?——No, I cannot.

Dixon. When Johnſon applied to me I deſired him to get ſome of it if he could.

Mr. Peatt. By your Lordſhip's permiſſion, I beg leave to obſerve, this evidence does not ſuſtain the indictment; as to the firſt count, it appears to me, that in the whole code of laws reſpecting the coinage of this kingdom, wherever counterfeiting of coin is mentioned, it muſt be ſo, that in the common courſe of receipts and payments of money, it might deceive a common obſerver; it is not merely the circumſtance of money reſembling in ſize, in diameter, and colour, that is ſuch a reſemblance as will reach the indictment, under the acts of parliament on this ſubject: there are various pieces of metal that are coloured for various purpoſes, that do, in ſome ſort, reſemble the current coin of the kingdom, both in ſize and colour, and yet have not that kind of reſemblance to induce any reaſonable perſon to take them. I conceive they muſt have ſome traces on the edges, or ſome traces of the inſcription, or ſomething of that kind of reſemblance, that would induce people of common experience and of common obſervation to take them by themſelves: with reſpect to the ſecond count, I think there ariſes an objection to it from the very nature of the crime, as deſcribed in the act of parliament; it ſays, in a more general way, pieces of metal that only reſembled in figure, pieces of baſe metal that are coloured for that purpoſe, ſo far as to reſemble the colour of ſhillings; the evidence does not ſtate that this money was the money that Johnſon ſaw the priſoner colour, but if it did, it is within the eye of the Court and Jury, that they do not ſo far reſemble the colour of ſhillings, ſo as to be taken by any person of common prudence or observation; I thought it my duty to submit these observations to your Lordship's consideration.

perſon

Court. They are observations that go to the matter of fact.

Mr. Peatt. In the very last Sessions there was a trial of the very same nature, where the pieces did not more resemble the current coin of the kingdom than these, and the prisoner was acquitted.

RICHARD FRANKLIN sworn.

I am one of the moniers at the Mint; this money was not made at the Tower.

Can you judge by your eye, and without an assay, what the metal is, Sir?——No, my Lord.

Can you say by your eye whether it is silver or not?——I cannot say.

Court to Prisoner. What account do you give the Jury of it?

Prisoner. I must leave it to the Jury; my wife and myself took them in trade, every one of them; my wife keeps a green shop.

What is your business?——I used to sell goods; I received five shillings and sixpence of it myself in trade.

Goods, of what sort?——Hardware.

What do you say of that bottle?—I was acquainted with this Ford; I saw him in Clerkenwell; I went to see him, and this Johnson was drawing beer at the same time, and Ford was shewing a bad shilling, I said, Sir, I have a great many of them at home, and it is a great loss to me; says he, I will give you a bottle of stuff to rub them over; and in about a couple of months I met Ford and Johnson at the Hampshire Hog; then I believe I shewed them two or three of the shillings, and some pocket pieces in another cup; I have the pocket pieces to produce, which he says are half crowns; then we were talking about notes; I said I was no scholar, and Ford had a bad note about him when he took me that Johnson had given him: Ford was to take these fourteen shillings from me, and to allow me something for them, and to make the best of them; I have a very good character in the town.

The witnesses were called, but none answered.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

917. JEREMIAH SHEPHERD and JOHN ARNOLD were indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 5th day of January last, fifty pounds weight of feathers, value 60s. a bed-tick, value 18s. a bolster-case, value 4s. a pillow-case, value 2s. a bed quilt, value 30s. a blanket, value 8s. a looking glass, value 5s. a brass fender, value 1s. four curtains, value 20s. a window curtain, value 7s. six bed valances, value 15s. a cotton head-piece, value 5s. a tea chest, value 5s. a tea board, value 4s. a feather bed, value 50s. a bolster, value 5s. a carpet, value 30s. a card table, value 20s. a tea board, value 3s. three mahogany boards, value 6s. three pieces of mahogany, value 3s. the property of Thomas Rumball.

THOMAS RUMBALL sworn.

I live in the Minories, I am a cabinet-maker and upholsterer; I lost my things, the prisoners were lately my servants, and whilst they lived with me I did not miss these things, one lived with me about two years, and the other about three; one left me about six months ago, that was Shepherd, and John Arnold about nine months ago; on receiving an information from one Atkinson, I went to the prisoner Arnold, who I found in Spitalfields, where he lived, and kept a greenstall; he lived at another place, there I saw him, and I took him to the public house, and I enquired of him how he came by some chair stuff that he gave to Edward Atkinson to make into chairs; he said he bought it of a man that had the appearance of a countryman, a chair-maker, and that he was very ill, and was advised by his doctor to go into the country, and could not ſtay to make up the chairs, in conſequence of which he offered it to him who then kept a broker's ſhop; I aſked him where this chair-maker lived; he ſaid he did not know; where is he gone to? why, to Lincolnſhire; but did not know what inn he ſet off from; I immediately came to Jeremiah Shepherd, who then lived with a diſtiller; for they had left off partnerſhip; when they left me they went into partnerſhip together in a broker's ſhop; he was not at home, he came in, in about ten minutes with Atkinſon; I aſked him how he came by this chair ſtuff, which I ſaid I knew to be mine; he ſaid he bought it of a countryman, as the other did; I aſked him where he ſold theſe chairs when made up; he ſaid to Mr. Samuel, a broker in Moorfields, for two guineas and an half, Arnold ſaid he ſold them for three guineas and an half, to a gentleman that came by promiſcuouſly, and that the gentleman had his own porter, and took them away immediately; there their evidence differed, from whence I concluded that they were both rogues, and I took them before the Juſtice; while Shepherd was going to the Juſtice, he confeſſed to the runner, that if I went to Arnold's houſe, I ſhould there find a feather bed, and ſundry articles of my property; we went there, and the officer aſked him whoſe bed it was, and I ſaid whoſe bed is this John? why, ſays he, I perceive Jeremiah Shepherd has turned my foe, and therefore I will confeſs the whole; it is yours, and that bed furniture is yours, and I hope you will pardon me, for I was drawn in: we found at Arnold's, a bed, bed tick and bolſter caſe, and pillow caſe filled with feathers, a ſuperfine quilt, a ten quarter blanket, a fender, a checque bed furniture, conſiſting of ſundry pieces, which I believe are mentioned in the indictment; a tea cheſt and a tea board, they were all that I found at Arnold's, which I took to my own houſe.

Were all theſe things acknowledged by Arnold to be yours?——All, except the tea board and the tea cheſt.

What did he ſay about them?——They eſcaped our notice at the time; when they were brought before the Juſtice, the Juſtice aſked them, if they had ſtolen any other goods; Shepherd ſaid, there was a card table, and ſome other things: the Juſtice aſked him who helped to carry away thoſe things? he ſaid, one Ford, a porter; on the ſecond hearing, this Ford was brought before Mr. Juſtice Staples, and was enquired of by the Juſtice what things he had aſſiſted in carrying away; the priſoners were there, and he mentioned that he had carried away a table, and ſundry feathers, and a feather bed, and ſome pieces of Tekoa wood, which were tied up at my warehouſe, I found the caddy that they mentioned, and I found a bolſter, two pillows, and three blankets, the carpet and table, a coffee pot and tea board, theſe were all my property, except the coffee pot.

EDWARD ATKINSON ſworn.

I am a chair-maker, I worked up ſome ſtuff for the priſoners, I believe it to be Mr. Rumball's wood, but I cannot ſwear to it, I told Mr. Rumball of it, when theſe men were taken up, I went with him to Shepherd, I heard Shepherd ſay, he took ſix of the backs of the chairs, and all the reſt of the ſtuff, and that Arnold was privy to it; I went with Mr. Rumball to Arnold's.

THOMAS STOKES ſworn.

I am an apprentice to the proſecutor; I ſaw Shepherd take two pillow caſes out of the dwelling houſe of my maſter; he ſaid he wanted them for his own uſe, and a bit of mahogany, two or three bits of Tekoa wood, and a pillow caſe with feathers in it.

All at one time?——At different times.

How old are you?——Sixteen.

When did you firſt tell your maſter of this affair?—After it was found out.

Court. It is a bad beginning, young man, you are very young, take care and do not connive at any ſuch thing again.

ANN

ANN READ sworn.

I live at No. 3, Cox's court, Aldersgate ſtreet, I lodged at Mrs. Faulkner's, No. 16, oppoſite the White Raven; a Mrs. Bolton came there, and gave me to underſtand a young man, which was Shepherd, lodged in her houſe, and had a bed and bedſtead to ſell; I went to look at it in King-ſtreet, Mile-end new town, we ſaw it, four pounds fifteen ſhillings was the price; there was a bedſtead, bolſter, two pillows, and three blankets, the tick was very old, I was no judge of the price, I bought it of Shepherd, and he brought it me over; he ſaid he had ſome more things that he was obliged to pledge, accordingly he brought me a carpet one guinea and a half, a card table, 23s. a tea tray, 4s. a coffee pot, 2s. which I alſo purchaſed on the 19th of September; I removed with my furniture, and on the 25th, my friend came to inform me there was a ſearch warrant after the things, that they were ſtolen; the proſecutor came and looked at them, and bid me not make myſelf uneaſy, for I had bought them at a fair price; they were fetched from me by order of the Juſtice; and I hope you will take it into your conſideration, and let me have them again.

PRISONER SHEPHERD's DEFENCE

Arnold and I kept a broker's ſhop, about ſix months, and we lent a man ſome money, about twenty guineas that we had ſaved, and he ran away with it, and the goods we had by us we parted; he took his, and I took mine; I was out of place a good while, and I parted with all my things, and I ſold my goods to this lady.

How came you by thoſe goods?——We were buying and ſelling goods every day, as other brokers are.

How came you to tell that ſome of Mr. Rumball's things would be found at Arnold's?——If I ſaid that, it is more than I know; I have no friend.

PRISONER ARNOLD's DEFENCE.

We were in the brokers way, we bought goods at different times?——I know nothing of theſe goods, he brought them to my houſe when we commenced partnerſhip; Mr. Rumbold came in, and ſaid, theſe goods are mine, and Jeremiah Shepherd, your friend as you think, has turned your foe, and has tried to hang you; whereas when I came to the Juſtice the priſoner told me ſecretly, that Rumball had promiſed me lenity on previouſly confeſſing theſe things which he did, I work very hard for my living, and do not live by thieving: we thought our trial would not come on till tomorrow morning, then we ſhould have had plenty of reſpectable houſekeepers to ſpeak for us, and counſel to plead for us.

JEREMIAH SHEPHERD, JOHN ARNOLD, } GUILTY.

Each tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury, before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

918. MICHAEL SMITH was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Heſter, Ann and Elizabeth Blackhall, about the hour of two in the night, on the 17th of September laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, two ſilver table ſpoons, value 14s. one quart of rum, value 2s. a quart of red wine, value 18d. and two quart bottles, value 3d. their property.

HESTER BLACKHALL ſworn.

I live at Bromley, near Bow, my ſiſter Elizabeth and Ann are all three connected in the houſe, our houſe was broke open on Saturday the 17th of September, we went to bed about eleven, the ſervant faſtened the doors, I ſaw them all faſtened, and the windows were all faſtened; we did not perceive it till the maid went down in the morning, the lock of the wine cellar door, which is in the kitchen, was broke open, they took down the door caſe from the back kitchen, and got in.

Was

Was that done in the night time?—— Yes, there was a bottle of rum gone, and ſome red-port, and a bottle of brandy, and two table ſpoons that were in the kitchen, the table ſpoons were taken on the priſoner at a pawnbroker's.

CHARLES FOX ſworn.

I produce two table ſpoons, they are in the ſtate I received them from the Juſtice (Depoſed to.) I lodge at Mr. Broughton's, I was accidentally at the door of the pawnbrokers, and the priſoner at the bar brought theſe ſpoons, I am ſure that is the man, he brought them for ſale, they ſtopped the ſpoons, and told the priſoner to go about his buſineſs, and he would not go, the proſecutor's ſervant was at the ſhop at the ſame time, he was not gone out, and we took him into cuſtody.

MARY DENT ſworn.

I am ſervant to the three ſiſters, they keep the houſe themſelves, I came down at ſix in the morning, my fellow ſervant faſtened the doors, I took off the ſhutters of the glaſs doors, I ſaw ſome bars laying in the yard, and I did not know what it was, and I went down into the kitchen; it was juſt light when I came down, I heard no noiſe in the night, I went up ſtairs to fetch my fellow ſervant down, and we went into the kitchen, and ſaw the wine cellar broke open, the table ſpoons were left in the kitchen with ſome dirty plates, I did not waſh them, and they were there at night.

Were they gone in the morning?—— Yes, Sir, there were two chairs ſtood, one was nigh the table, and the other was not, they had written ſomething on the table, they had burnt a large candle almoſt out, they ſat down ſome hours and drank the liquor, there was a candle in the back kitchen, but I am ſure it was not in the back kitchen when we went to bed.

(The ſpoons depoſed to.)

JANE JOHNSON ſworn.

I live with theſe ladies, and Mary Dent, ſhe got up firſt in the morning, and then ſhe came and called me, I ſaw the cellar door broke open, and the back door that goes into the yard; I was at the pawnbrokers, when the priſoner came in there with the ſpoons, I knew him before, he worked at our houſe, carpenter's work, I claimed them as my miſtreſs's, I aſked him how he came by them, he told me he bought them, but he could not tell where, the robbery was on the Saturday night, and this was Sunday afternoon, between five and ſix that he came to offer them.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I am not guilty, I was out on Saturday night, and got a little liquor, in coming home, I met two men, and I bought two ſpoons of them.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury, before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

The next Part will be publiſhed in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex,

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 19th of OCTOBER, 1785, and the following Days;

Being the EIGHTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER VIII. PART II.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

918. JUDITH READING was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 7th day of October, ſixteen yards of printed cotton, value 21s. the property of William Hunſdan, privily in his ſhop.

WILLIAM HUNSDAN ſworn.

I know the priſoner by coming to my ſhop; I live in Ship Alley, Well-cloſe-Square; I am a linen-draper; on the 7th of this month ſhe came to my ſhop between twelve and one, a man came in along with her, ſhe came behind him; a man came and aſked for ſome ſtockings, I was ſerving the next witneſs with ſome table cloths at the ſame time; in the interim ſhe made ſeveral ſigns to me that the priſoner had ſome of my property under her cloths; I ſaw the priſoner have ſomething under her cloak, I did not know it was my property, nor I did not underſtand what this gentlewoman meant by it; the priſoner aſked the gentlewoman to go and drink a pint of beer with her; ſhe dropt the linen down in the ſhop, and this gentlewoman picked it up.

What was it? —— Furniture cotton.

What quantity?—Sixteen yards.

MARY HALFWRIGHT ſworn.

I did not ſee the good woman take any thing, but I ſaw ſomething under her cloak.

What was it you ſaw under her cloak?—A piece of linen.

You did not ſee her take it?——No.

Did you ſee her drop it?——No; I ſaw a ſailor pick it up.

Are you ſure that which was taken up was what you ſaw under her cloak?—Yes.

Was any body on the ſame ſide of the compter ſhe was when it was dropped?—The ſailor and the man that was with her; he was on that ſide too.

Was it taken up immediately?—I cannot ſay.

What time do you think there might be between the time it was dropped and taken up?—About two or three minutes; I miſſed the piece off the counter; there were two pieces laid on the counter, and one of them was gone.

Did you ſee that piece under her cloak that was miſſing?—I believe it was.

But are you ſure?——No, it appeared under her cloak.

How came the proſecutor not to ſee it?—I do not know.

Court to Proſecutor. Did you miſs the piece off the compter?——No; I was buſy; the man ſtood at the compter.

Are you ſure that was one of the pieces that lay on your compter;——Yes; it was juſt brought in; I had juſt bought two pieces

pieces of it; I knew it immediately; this is the piece.

Court to the Woman. You cannot ſwear that that is the piece you ſaw under her cloak?—No my Lord.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I came into that place to buy a yard and three quarters for a bedgown; I ſtood by this gentleman here behind him; I had this handkerchief tied up and three quarters of a yard and the forebody of a gown and a two-penny loaf, ſo I took this ſtuff out to ſee if I could match it, and I put it ſo under my arm before this good woman; one of the ſailors came behind me and gave me a tap, and aſked me if I would give him any beer; there was a piece of cotton on the ground; this gentlewoman took it up directly, and came and challenged me with this piece of cloth; I left mine at home.

THOMAS TAYLOR ſworn.

On the 7th of October I was fetched to take charge of the priſoner; I took her up to the watch-houſe and ſearched her; ſhe had about twelve ſhillings and ſix pence in ſilver, and about ſix ſhillings in half-pence, and a piece of green ſtuff for a gown, about a yard, and they would give charge of a ſailor who was with her, and told the proſecutor that he picked it up.

Proſecutor. When the ſailor picked up this cotton, he made a great noiſe in her preſence, and ſaid ſhe ſhould be committed, he would commit her himſelf, that was ſaid in her preſence.

Priſoner. The ſailor ſaid himſelf the piece of cloth lay there before I came into the houſe.

Proſecutor. I am ſure that was not the caſe.

THOMAS CUNNINGHAM ſworn.

Court. Let me give you a little caution of what you ſwear. Remember now you are upon your oath; take care all you ſay is true.——I went to the ſhop and aſked for a pair of ſtockings of the gentlewoman of the ſhop, and ſhe told me ſhe had none, and when I went in I ſaw this piece on the ground, and this woman afterwards came in; the priſoner came in after me; I was in the ſhop before ſhe came in.

You are ſure the piece was on the ground?—Yes my Lord; there are two more witneſſes at the door now.

Was you there when the conſtable and they were altogether?—Yes, I was.

Who was there beſides the conſtable and you?—There was a gentlewoman and two ſailors.

Are the two ſailors here?—I cannot ſay, the gentlewoman of the ſhop was there alſo.

Perhaps you did not hear any thing of her being angry about the ſailor telling ſhe took the things?—No.

Did you inſiſt upon it then, and tell the conſtable and the proſecutor?——I gave charge of the ſailor to Mr. Taylor.

Was the ſailor in the ſhop before you came?—Yes; he juſt came in.

Proſecutor. The ſailor did not go to that part where the furniture was.

Court to Cunningham. You are ſure this was on the ground when you came into the ſhop?——Yes.

Court to Proſecutor. Did any other man come into the ſhop but that man for the ſtockings?——No.

MARY DONNAHO ſworn.

Court. Let me give you a caution to take care what you ſay; remember you are upon your oath.——The very ſame day I was coming along; I live on the otherſide the water; I was not in the ſhop; I was going to the ſame houſe to buy a ſhirt and the young man that is here was along with me; he aſked me to go to that ſhop to buy another ſhirt for him; I had bought one before there for him; after I came to the door he aſked me to buy as much cotton as would make a ſhirt for him; I told him there was no cotton, I had aſked for ſome once before, I was obliged to buy ready made ſhirts, I bought a ready made ſhirt for ſeven ſhillings, ſtriped linen; then we ſtood and I told them we could buy one of theſe very cheap; after we ſtood at the door, we did no go in,

I ſaw

I saw the woman do no harm; I saw the woman go in, and when she went in she had something in her handkerchief; I saw something on the floor, as I really think now, it was something red or something red and white, and she had something in her hand, which she had in her handkerchief.

You did not go into the shop, nor you did not follow her?——I cannot tell, I cannot swear I saw something on the floor red and white, but I did not see any body take any thing up; this woman went into the shop, I saw her going into the shop.

Did not you stand at the door?—I would have gone into the shop only the young man did not like to buy the cotton.

How could you see what was there, you do not know what it was you saw laying?--I cannot tell.

Court to Prosecutor. Do you remember this woman being there?——No, I never saw the woman before in the shop.

Court to Halfwright. Did the woman give you a hint to drink part of a pint of beer, after you had given a hint about the the linen?——Yes; I saw the woman come in and the two men; I am sure the linen lay on the compter at that time; it lay to the right hand.

Court to Prosecutor. Did that man buy any stockings?—No, he did not.

GUILTY

Of stealing, but not privately.

To be privately whipt, and confined to hard labour twelve months in the House of Correction.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Justice NARES.

---

919. JOHN DAVIS was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 16th day of September last, one gelding, price 10l. the property of William Mansell, Esq.

WILLIAM MANSELL, Esq. sworn.

On the 2d of September I missed my gelding from Woods-end, where there was an encampment during the summer; I suppose it was stole in the night, between the first and second; he was taken out of the stable; it was a grey gelding about ten years old; I had it about a fortnight; I found it again on Saturday morning when I was relieved from guard at Windsor; I found the gelding at Sir Sampson's Office; I do not recollect the day.

How long after the loss?—About a week.

Do you of your own knowledge know any thing of the person that stole the gelding?——No, only that I found the prisoner and the gelding at the office.

JOHN SHALLARD sworn.

On the 15th of September, I took the prisoner at a place called Hoddesdon, in Herts, and I brought him to Bow-street, and there he confessed where the gelding was left, in consequence of that I fetched it.

Where did he say the gelding was?——At Bow, in Middlesex.

At whose house?——At Mr. Webb's, the sign of the plough, he could not rightly tell me the house, but I traced it, and found it there.

——— WEBB sworn.

I keep the Plough, at Bow.

How came this gelding there?——The prisoner brought it the 4th of September, it was found at my house the 15th, I had taken out an advertisement to have it advertised, which was to be put into the paper the day after; he brought it to me with three shoes on, and ordered me to get it shod, which I did; he brought it on a Sunday, and wanted to have it shod that day, I told him I could not, he went to Bow, to get it done there, but could not? I saw him on the horse, he was alone when I saw him, he came back again and staid at my house all day on Sunday night, and Monday morning till near nine o'clock at night, and went away without saying anything to anybody belonging to the house, I got the horse shod according to his orders, ders, I ſaw no more of him till I ſaw him at the office.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I know nothing about the horſe.

What are you?——I am a hair-dreſſer, I was apprentice in King-ſtreet, St. James's, I am lately come from Paris, I have friends but moſt of them are in the country, except one Mrs. Patridge, who is here.

(Called but did not anſwer.)

Court to Mr. Manſel. Did you know anything of this man?——He is a ſoldier in the twenty ſecond regiment, which I belong to, I cannot rightly tell how long he has been in the regiment, I think about three years.

GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

920. WILLIAM POWLEY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 16th of October, one black gelding, price 5l. the property of William Otteridge.

WILLIAM OTTERIDGE ſworn.

I live in Short's Gardens, near Long Acre; on laſt Sunday evening I loſt a horſe, which was at graſs at Finchley, where I have a farm, I ſaw him about half after five in the afternoon; he was miſſed on Monday morning about ſeven; my man miſſed him; I came to town, and heard of him on the Monday morning at the Blue Anchor, in Saint John-ſtreet; I never ſaw the priſoner before; the horſe was mine; he was a black horſe, with two white feet behind, and a long tail; I am quite ſure he was my horſe; I have had him near ſeven years.

JAMES CHARLES ſworn.

I am one of the patrol; I miſtruſted the priſoner; I thought the horſe too good to be his; I aſked him where he was going with that horſe; the firſt word he anſwered me was, he was going to the horſeboiler's, I told him I thought it was too good a horſe for that, and that he did not come honeſtly by him, and then he ſaid he was going to the Bull Inn in Biſhopſgate-ſtreet; then I called one of my men to my aſſiſtance, and I walked down by the ſide of the man, and he told me where he had the horſe from, he ſaid he took him out of the field near the Green Man upon Finchley Common, and he had this ſtring on his head.

Did you make him any promiſe, if he would tell you the truth?—No, my Lord, I am ſure of that; I was preſent when the proſecutor owned the horſe; it was the ſame horſe that I found upon the priſoner.

SAMUEL COX ſworn.

I know no more than being ſtationed as a patrol, and my fellow ſervant, Charles, called me to his aſſiſtance, and when I came there was a black gelding, and this lad with him, and we went with this lad and the horſe to the Blue Anchor; I aſked the lad how he could do ſuch a thing, and he ſaid he meant to take him to his own country to ſell him, and buy him ſome clothes to get him a place; I was preſent when Otteridge ſaw the horſe; it was the ſame horſe that was taken on the priſoner.

Court to Proſecutor. Theſe men were preſent when you looked at the horſe?——Yes.

Priſoner. I have nothing to ſay.

Have you any witneſſes?—No.

GUILTY, Death.

Recommended to mercy by the Proſecutor and Jury.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

921. WILLIAM SHERGOLD and EDWARD PRESTON were indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting George Haines on the King's highway on the 18th of September laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon and againſt his will, one cloth jacket, value 4s. his property.

GEORGE HAINES ſworn.

I have been out of place about a fortnight; I went into a public houſe in Ruſſell-ſtreet to have a pint of beer, and I ſaw the priſoner Shergold; I never ſaw him before in my life, and he ſaid, Jack, how do you do, and he aſked me to lend him a ſhilling, but I told him I had only eighteen-pence, and he put his hand on the outſide of my pocket, and ſaid, here is money, and I told him I would tell him the truth, I had three ſhillings, and in half-pence I had about three ſhillings and ſix-pence then; I lent him a ſhilling, as he aſked me; and in a little time he came to me, and ſaid, I wiſh you would lend me another ſhilling, and I lent him another ſhilling, and in about ten minutes after that he came up to me, and told me he was going to take a room at three ſhillings a week; and that I ſhould not want for a lodging, or any thing elſe, and that he was going to receive five thouſand pounds in a little time, and I ſhould not want, if I would lend him another ſhilling; when he had the three ſhillings, and had drank the beer that he had, he aſked me if I would come to Mr. Lewis's with a boy's father and mother that were there, and he ſaid, we could have a pot of beer; I went with him, and we had a pot of beer; when that was drank the priſoner went away, and came again, and his acquaintance that was with him; ſoon after they came in again, and I ſtaid a little while then; I went away, and on Saturday I ſaw them again, and ſtaid a little while with them; then I went away, and ſaw no more of them till Sunday; then I met the priſoner Shergold, and he aſked me to go to Mr. Lewis's, and we went into the Long Fields; I ſaw him again about ſeven, and the other priſoner was with him then, and I told them I lived with Mr. Combes, Biſhop's Court, Lincoln's-Inn, and we went that way, and he took me to the back of Lincoln's Inn Gardens, and he bid me go to my maſter's public houſe, and order a pot of beer, and change for half a crown, and meet the boy, and ſend him for another pot; then he aſked me if I could take up any money or bacon, or beef, in my maſter's name; then, ſays he, could not you ſteal any thing of a gold watch, or any thing of that kind, I ſaid I would not; then the priſoner Preſton ſaid, you bloody b——r, if you will not, you ſhall ſtrip, or I will cut your bloody melt out; then Shergold laid hold on me, and he could not well manage me, then Preſton pulled me, but I was ſo frightened, I let them pull it off without any more; while I was pulling my jacket off, another that was with the priſoners ſnatched my hat off; I ſnatched it back, and they all three made off; I then went to Bow-ſtreet to give information.

What are you?——I was errand boy to Mr. Combes; I lived there about half a year; I left my place becauſe I could not wait at table well enough; I am about fifteen; I never ſaw Shergold before that time at the public houſe.

How came you to lend him money?—Becauſe he told me he would pay me again, and he had five thouſand coming to him, though he was in diſtreſs.

Did you think there was any likelihood that ſuch a fellow as him ſhould have five thouſand pounds?——I did not know what there was; I did not know he was a thief.

Where is this Lewis's houſe that they took you to?—In Red-lion-court, in Ruſſel-court.

What is this Mr. Lewis?—— I believe he is a very honeſt man; he blacks ſhoes; I only knew the name of one of the priſoners at that time, that was Shergold, I never ſaw the other before that Sunday night, but I am ſure he is the ſame perſon; I knew him by ſight as well as I know Shergold; I am quite ſure of both of them.

Priſoner. Is not the ſhirt he has on mine?——This is not it, for I took off the ſhirt that he lent me, and it is now waſhing; he had one of my ſhirts, which coſt me me ſix ſhillings, and he pawned it for three ſhillings, but I never had a farthing of the money; he lent me his ſhirt to put on as I had no other.

JOHN SHALLARD ſworn.

The proſecutor came to Biſhopſgate-ſtreet, and gave information that he had been robbed by one Shergold, I knew him very well, and I was after him all day, and I found him at night at Drury-lane Play houſe door; the proſecutor told me the ſame ſtory he has you; I did not take the other priſoner.

JAMES BAYES ſworn.

I am one of the patrol belonging to Saint Giles's and Bedford-ſquare, I took the priſoner Preſton at two o'clock in the morning; the proſecutor was ſtanding in his ſhirt at the door of a lodging houſe in Dyot ſtreet, and he ſaid, that the man that had robbed him of his jacket was gone up ſtairs, I went up, and took him out of bed; as we were taking Preſton to the Juſtices he ſaid, going along, if the proſecutor would but forgive him he would give him the coat off his back; I ſaid to Preſton, you had better tell us what you have done with the lad's clothes; with that perſuading him, he told us where the things were; I found the jacket in the houſe of a man named Palmer, who bought the jacket; he is here.

BENJAMIN PALMER ſworn.

I had this jacket of the priſoner Preſton; on Sunday about nine o'clock, he aſked me to lend him a little money upon it, as he was diſtreſſed, and could not pay his lodgings, I ſaid to him, I do not lend any ſuch thing, nor buy on Sunday nights, I ſaid you have ſtole it, he ſaid, no, it is my own property, but I would not lend him anything upon it, and away he went, and in two or three minutes after he came back and I told him I would give him eighteen-pence for it, and he took the eighteen pence, and went away.

Are you ſure he is the perſon?——I really believe, to the beſt of my knowledge, he was the perſon that brought it; I never ſaw him before, but he is the ſame man that came the next day.

Have you any doubt that it is him?—— I have not.

Was anybody with him when he produced the jacket?—Nobody.

What are you?—— I keep a chandler's ſhop, and a pawnbroker's, I did do, but I have laid that by; I buy and ſell old clothes in Bambridge-ſtreet, Saint Giles's.

What would you ſell that jacket for?— I offered to ſell it the next day for two ſhillings, and I was bid one ſhilling; it is worth to the wearer two ſhillings or half a crown.

Bayes. It is worth about three or four ſhillings to the wearer.

PRISONER PRESTON'S DEFENCE.

I am not the lad that ſold the jacket, and at Bow-ſtreet that man ſaid it was a man taller than I.

PRISONER SHERGOLD'S DEFENCE.

We went to Biſhop's Court, the proſecutor took us there to rob his maſter, and he ſtripped off his jacket and his hat, and gave the jacket to this lad, who went and pawned it for eighteen-pence; Preſton did not pawn it.

Court to Proſecutor. What became of your ſhirt that Shergold had?—I never ſaw it ſince.

Which was the beſt ſhirt?—Mine coſt ſix ſhillings, and his would not pawn for anything.

WILLIAM SHERGOLD, EDWARD PRESTON, } GUILTY Death.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

922. GEORGE MANNING, alias FRANCIS HILL, WILLIAM NICHOLSON, and MARGARET CADWELL, were indicted for burglariouſly and and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of William Roſe, about the hour of eight in the night, on the 28th day of September laſt, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein, four linen frocks, value 7s. a linen ſhift, value 2s. a looking glaſs, value 2s. one ſheet, value 2s. three aprons, value 8s. one linen gown, value 4s. two ſtuff petticoats, value 16s. three ſhirts, value 15s. a pair of ſtays, value 20s. a ſilk cloak, value 10s. a ſilk handkerchief, value 2s. two linen handkerchiefs, value 18d. three ſtocks, value 18d. and one linen tablecloth, value 4s. the property of the ſaid William Roſe.

William Kendrick, an accomplice, ordered out of Court by Mr. Garrow.

WILLIAM ROSE ſworn.

I am a poor labouring man, I work hard for my bread, I live in liquor-pond-ſtreet, Horn-alley, I am a houſekeeper; I loſt the things mentioned in the indictment on the 28th of September laſt, I was not at home when it happened, I know nothing about it; I came home about eight to go to bed, and I found my houſe door broke open, and my things gone, here is the lock of my parlour door that was broke, there was no mark of violence on the outſide door, only opened, I called to Mary Moore, who was locked in, I aſked her how ſhe could lay there, and let my houſe be robbed; ſhe ſaid ſhe was locked in, and then I burſt open the door, and took her out of bed by force, and ſent for Mr. Iſaacs to take her into cuſtody; then I ſent for the priſoner Margaret Cadwell, as I ſuſpected her, ſhe lodged in the houſe; then we went before the Juſtice.

What did you loſe?—The things mentioned in the indictment, I miſſed them out of the drawers in the parlour; I never found any of them, except one ſilk handkerchief, on Snow-hill, at a pawn-broker's; the priſoner Hill uſed frequently to come to the houſe; I ſuppoſe he lodged with ſome woman in the room.

MARY ROSE ſworn.

I went out and locked the door, and carried away the key, I left nobody in my room, the priſoner Cadwell was not at home above ſtairs.

Were your drawers all ſafe when you went away?——Yes.

It was hardly dark when you went out?—Juſt upon duſk, hardly dark.

I ſuppoſe your ſtreet door in the day time is open?——It goes with a ſpring lock, I pulled it to, and it was faſt.

What time did you come home?——About half paſt eight, I found my huſband at home, he brought the key with him; when I came home I found my room ſtripped of every thing; here is a liſt of what I loſt, they are the things mentioned in the indictment, they were in my drawers in the parlour; nothing has been found but one handkerchief.

What is your reaſon for charging the three priſoners?—Becauſe they confeſſed.

Did you hear them confeſs?—Yes.

Which of them did you hear confeſs?—Mary Moore and William Kendrick.

Did you hear any of theſe people at the bar confeſs any thing?——No.

MARY MOORE ſworn.

I lodge at this houſe.

How long have you lodged there?—Not quite a fortnight.

Who elſe lodges in the houſe?—Mary Welch.

Did you lodge with her?——Yes.

Were there any other lodgers in the houſe?——Mary Cadwell, all in the ſame room.

Did any of theſe men lodge there?——Francis Hill came there to Mary Welch.

Do you remember the night this room was robbed?—Three weeks ago laſt Wedneſday.

Where was you at that time?——Up ſtairs, in bed.

Tell me what you know about it?——Five weeks ago I was in Gray's-Inn-lane, between ſeven and eight, Francis Hill and Kendrick, Kendrick, and another, I do not know his name, came to the ſtreet door of the proſecutor's houſe, and he aſked if the landlord was at home; I aſked him what he wanted; he made no anſwer; nobody was upſtairs but Margaret Cadwell and I, he ſtood at the ſtairs foot, immediately I heard a great noiſe below, as if the door was breaking open.

How did he get in at the ſtreet door?——I do not know; then Francis Hill came up ſtairs, and he aſked for a light; I told him there was neither fire nor candle, and he aſked Margaret Cadwell to fetch a candle; and ſhe ſaid ſhe had no money, and ſhe went down ſtairs, and one of them gave her a halfpenny, I do not know which it was, then while ſhe was gone Francis Hill came to me and ſaid, d—n his eyes he had broke the door in, and he ſaid Bill Kendrick was in the room, and if the old b——r came while he was robbing the room, Bill Kendrick ſhould knock him down; Francis Hill ſaid, if Kendrick was knocked down, he would believe to take him up, while Bill Kendrick bruſhed; then he went down ſtairs after a candle came; Margaret Cadwell brought it, and they were in the room about ten minutes after; Margaret Cadwell came up ſtairs to me directly when they had done, they ſtood at the ſtairs foot, and one of them called to Margaret Cadwell to take one of the bundles, which ſhe refuſed, then they went about their buſineſs, and Margaret Cadwell ſeemed very much frightened, and ſaid ſhe would not ſtay in the houſe, I begged ſhe would, but ſhe went away and locked me in, and went into Holborn to give Mary Welch the key.

How many men did you ſee in all?——I only ſaw Hill.

Could you diſtinguiſh the voices of any more than one?——No.

Do you know whether there were more than one there?——No, I never ſaw any more than one, I could hear more than one ſpeak, but I did not know his voice, I heard only one voice.

Mr. Garrow. You was very well acquainted with Kendrick?——No, I never ſaw him but once before.

What way of life have you been in?—I am a ſervant, but I have been out of place for ſometime, and I have been in the hoſpital for the King's evil.

How long have you been out of place?——About twelve months.

In what way of buſineſs have you ſupported yourſelf during that twelve months?——Firſt one thing and then another, I do a bit of needle-work, and go of errands.

Is that the way you have got your living?——I cannot ſay but it is.

I will not aſk you more about it, becauſe the gentlemen I dare ſay underſtand however you are one of the three women that uſed to ſleep with this man?——Sometimes I went to bed at ten o'clock, ſometimes I laid in bed all day, when the room was robbed I was in bed all day, becauſe there was no fire, nor I had no gown to put on.

Had there been any talk about breaking into this old man's room?—I heard none.

The landlord ſuſpected you had robbed the room, did not he?——Yes, he carried me before the Juſtice.

When was it that you firſt told that ſtory?——That very night, before I went before the Juſtice, I told the conſtable of it, he is here.

You told us about bruſhing by, running away, how long have you been acquainted with that ſort of language?—I heard one of the gentlemen ſay ſo.

Which gentleman, one of the officers?——Yes.

How long have you been acquainted with Kendrick?——I never was acquainted with him in my life, I was not acquainted with him when he was tried the laſt time; I do not know how often he has been tried here.

WILLIAM KENDRICK ſworn.

Court. Relate what you know of the robbing Roſe's houſe?——Between the hour of ſeven and eight laſt Wedneſday was three weeks, I was going to my mother's houſe in Holborn, I met Nicholſon; he aſked me where I was going.

Mr. Garrow. I take the liberty of ſubmitting to your Lordſhip, that there is no evidence againſt Nicholſon.

Court. I hold, that it is regular to hear an accomplice in any ſtage of the proſecution, whether afterwards it deſerves credit will turn out upon the whole evidence, in which, to be ſure, care will be taken to ſeparate, but I cannot at preſent, cut the evidence to pieces in the courſe of the narration.

Kendrick. We went up Brook-ſtreet, and went to the Barley-mow in Gray's-Inn Lane; coming up Holborn, we met Francis Hill at the corner of Gray's-Inn Lane, and he ſays, where are you going; ſays I, nowhere in particular; ſays he, if you will go with me down to the houſe where I lodge, the landlord is out of the way, and we can break open the place and get all the property out; I aſked this Nicholſon whether he was agreeable to go, and he ſaid yes, and all three of us went as hard as we could down to the houſe; when we came there, there is a kind of a yard about three yards from the ſtreet-door that goes in with a little gate-way, and this Hill told us to ſtop there while he went to enquire whether the landlord was at home; he went upſtairs and came down again, and ſaid, no, there is nobody at home, let us go in, and immediately all three of us went up to the parlour door, the lower part, and we all three of us ſhoved the door open by the force of our hands.

Was the door only put-too, or locked?--It was faſt.

How did you get the door open?—By the force of our hands, but i could not ſee then whether the lock was broke; afterwards, ſays I, we want a candle; Hill went up immediately to Cadwell and ſays, have you got any candle, no, ſays ſhe, have you got the parlour door open; ſays he, come down ſtairs and he (meaning me) will give you a halfpenny to buy a candle; ſhe came down ſtairs and I gave her one, and ſhe felt in the dark; it was a new halfpenny by the roughneſs; ſhe ſaid it was a bad one, and I gave her another, then ſhe returned with a candle and ſhe came into the yard and ſaid, here is the candle, do you want it lighted, and Hill ſaid, what do we want with a candle if it is not lighted, and ſhe went over the way and lighted it, and came and gave it to Hill; ſhe went up ſtairs; then we all three went into the room and ſhut the ſtreet door, and the parlour-doors, then we opened the drawers and took out all the property that is mentioned in the indictment; I packed them up in three bundles; after we packed them up in three bundles, we packed one up in this, Nicholſon's apron, and another in a black petticoat; I cannot tell what the third was packed in; we each took a bundle and called Cadwell to take the candle, and I ſaid to her, put one of theſe bundles in your apron and come along with us; ſhe declined doing that, but took the candle, and told us to wait a few minutes at the bottom of the ſtairs; the other two men went out, and I waited a few minutes for her coming down, and ſhe did not come down, and I went away and pulled the ſtreet door after me, then we carried the property into Leather-lane and into Holborn, and we went to a coach that was in the rank, and put the property in, and carried it to the Windmill-inn, in St. John's-ſtreet, Smithfield, and ſold the property for thirty-ſix ſhillings to one Mrs. Carter that lives up in the gallery; after we had ſold it, I happened to put a ſilk handkerchief that belonged to ſome part of the property, in my coat pocket; coming down Snow-hill, I felt in my pocket, and ſaid, here is a ſilk handkerchief that belongs to part of the property; Nicholſon ſaid, go in and pawn it; I declined it, and he went in and pawned it at one Mr. Cordey's on Snow-hill, for eighteen pence, and he came out and brought but three ſix-pences, and he gave us ſix-pence apiece and kept ſix pence himſelf, and we went to Holborne and we met Cadwell, and we aſked her to have ſomething to drink; we told her where we were going, to the Barley-mow, and ſhe came in half an hour, and the landlord would not let her in, he gave her a glaſs of gin, and ſhe went out, and we never ſaw nothing of her till ſhe was apprehended; after that we ſat there and had ſome

ſome ſtakes and beer, and we thought it time to come away; I ſtill had the money in my pocket the things were ſold for, and going towards Drury-lane, there was a tallow-chandler's ſhop open; there was a candle in the window, and they deſired me to give each of them their ſhare, and I took out the money by the light of the candle, and gave each his ſhare; then we went down Drury Lane and had a pot of beer and ſmoked a pipe; then we all agreed to go to Nicholſon's lodgings, in Baldwin's Gardens; we all went there, and went to bed; the next morning we got up and went to a public-houſe, and had ſome purl, and ſo it paſſed for three or four days, till Sunday came, then I was apprehended in bed.

Where was your home?—No. 12, Ely-Court, Holborn.

Mr. Garrow. Mr. Kendrick, you tell this ſtory as eaſily as a man can read a chapter in the bible, as if it was to your honour; how long have you been engaged in this buſineſs?——About a twelvemonth, as far as I can recollect.

Is it not more than a twelvemonth ſince you was taken up with Berwick Mayton?——He was capitally convicted for privately ſtealing, I was neither a witneſs or anything elſe.

How often have you been in cuſtody ſince?—I cannot tell, that is an odd queſtion to aſk.

You are as often in cuſtody as out?——No, not quite, I cannot tell.

Give a random gueſs, we will not quarrel for a dozen times?——I cannot give no random gueſs, I may have been once taken up or ſo by a warrant.

Do not you know that you have been much oftener at Bow-ſtreet than once?—No.

Have you never been a witneſs againſt your accomplices?——No.

Are you ſure of that?——No.

Did not you keep that handkerchief on purpoſe for them to pawn it?—It was all a random affair, I did not like to go into that ſhop.

Why did not you like to go into Mr. Cordey's?——I declined doing it, I had no reaſon.

Was not your reaſon for not going in, that they might not be evidence againſt you?

Who propoſed going to Mrs. Carters?—We all know the place becauſe Nicholſon, I believe, had never been employed in any ſuch thing before dealt had been about ſix months.

A ready receiver for anything you carried to her?—I believe ſo, I believe ſhe does in caſe we have anything of that kind to give her, I never ſold her none.

You only deal in this ſort of way?——I do not know what ſort.

I ſuppoſe if there had been any plate in the houſe it would have been all the ſame? We ſhould not have left it behind, Mrs. Carter lives there now, if ſhe was not left behind, I did not ſqueak after I was taken, I ſtood out a week, and then I ſhould not have ſqueaked if it had not been for other people, I thought this woman would have done it, Margaret Cadwell, I know they were taken up a week after I was apprehended, I believe it was the Saturday evening after.

JOSEPH JACKSON ſworn.

I heard of the robbery before, but I took Mr. Hill and Nicholſon, they were both together in a court going down to the footman in waiting, in Charlotte-buildings, this was on the 8th of this month, between eleven and twelve.

Mr. Garrow. Your information I believe, was againſt Hill only?—Yes, it was.

Was that after the other fellow was in cuſtody?—Yes.

Was it from him you had the information?—No.

You took Nicholſon becauſe he was in company with the other?—I did.

You knew Kendrick of old?—Yes, and I knew Hill too.

I did not aſk you that.

——— JONES ſworn.

I know nothing more than the taking theſe two men, I was with Jackſon.

THOMAS ISAACS ſworn.

On the 28th of laſt month, I received information information that this gentleman's house was broke open, and I took Mrs. Moore she that was in the house, in consequence of my going in she said she thought it was very hard she should suffer for other people; and I asked her what she meant by that, and she said it was such people that did it; the next morning, she told the magistrate, and in consequence I took Kendrick.

——— HUTCHINSON sworn.

I was sent for last Saturday was a week at night, by a party belonging to our patrol, I went down stairs, I went to the Black Dog, there were Hill and Nicholson together, Jones and I went to Nicholson's lodgings, and there was found a green coat, which the prosecutor believes the same coat that Hill had on the night the robbery was committed; there was a dirty shirt and a dirty handkerchief, and two or three of them things, but I only brought the coat.

JAMES MACMANUS sworn.

I only went to the pawnbroker's.

JOHN BAXTER sworn.

I am servant to Mr. Cordy, I have the handkerchief which was taken the 28th of September in the name of Jackson, I do not know the person that brought it.

Did you take it?—I do not know.

Where is your master?—He is at home.

Is that your practice to take in things without making any memorandum who takes them; how many people are there in your shop?—Three, two of us take in the things; there are so many persons we see in a day it is impossible to know one single person.

That I grant you, but you might put in a memorandum upon it?—Sometimes I take them in, and sometimes the other man, and if we are busy, we tell the boy to write the bill.

Court. The trade must be suppressed if it is carried on in that manner, it is making the pawnbrokers shops, a nursery for thieves?——Mr. Cordy sent me voluntarily to come.

Jackson. My Lord, I went to tell them to come voluntarily, or if not, I should take out a summons.

Court. It is very easy to make the initial letter of the person's name that takes in the things, then you would always know?—We lent eighteen pence upon the handkerchief.

Prisoner Hill. I leave it to my Counsel.

The prisoner Hill called three witnesses who gave him a good character.

Prisoner Nicholson. I leave it all to my Counsel.

The prisoner Nicholson called eight witnesses who gave him a good character.

Prisoner Cadwell. I know very little about it.

The prisoner Cadwell called six witnesses who gave her a good character.

G. MARDEN alias F. HILL, } GUILTY Death.

WILLIAM NICHOLSON, MARGARET CADWELL, } NOT GUILTY.

Court to Kendrick. I discharge you without any exhortation, because it will be thrown away, I have no hopes of you, I have no doubt but you will come to the gallows.

---

923. WILL. VANDEPUT, JAMES BEAMAN, FRANCIS STORER, and DANIEL EAST, were indicted for burglariously and feloniously breaking and entering the dwelling house of Lewis Teissier, Esq. about the hour of eight in the night, on the 3d day of September last, and burglariously stealing therein one bale, containing 160lb. weight of silk, value 260l. the property of Francis Bruisset and John Nichols Boisshey, in the same dwelling house.

A second count, For burglariously breaking and entering the dwelling house of the said Lewis Teissier, and stealing a bale of silk, his property.

A third count, For stealing the said bale of silk, the property of Bruissett and Co. in the dwelling house of Lewis Teissier.

A fourth count, For stealing the same, the the property of Lewis Teiſſier, in his dwelling houſe.

A fifth count, For ſtealing the ſame, the property of Bruiſſet and Co. in a certain out-houſe belonging to the ſaid Lewis Teiſſier, and belonging to his dwelling houſe.

A ſixth count, Charging it to be the property of the ſaid Lewis Teiſſier, in ſuch out-houſe.

(The witneſſes examined apart.)

The Indictment opened by Mr. Garrow, and the Caſe by Mr. Silveſter.

JOHN CLOSE ſworn.

I am one of Mr. Teiſſier's clerks, I remember locking up the warehouſe, about twelve at noon on this Saturday, the 3d of September, I depoſited the key in the compting houſe, which joins to the houſe in Broad-ſtreet, it is the other ſide of the houſe not within the yard, I did not go to the warehouſe any more that day, as far as I know; there was no occaſion to go there again that day, I went there between eight and nine the Sunday morning; my buſineſs for the day as to that warehouſe was over at twelve: on Sunday morning between eight and nine, I found a bale of Piedmont ſilk was gone, marked B. B. C. No. 7, I cannot tell the weight of it, I ſuppoſe about one hundred and ſixty or one hundred and ſeventy pounds; it was with Mr. Teiſſier before I came to him, the value I fancy is about two hundred and ſixty pounds.

Whoſe property was it?—Francis Bruiſſet and Co. of Turin, I do not know the other partner's name, I believe it was conſigned to Mr. Teiſſier, but I do not know it.

Mr. Morgan, one of the Priſoner's Counſel. Is twelve your uſual time of locking the warehouſe?——There is no uſual time, ſometimes I go in the afternoon, I hung the key up in the compting houſe, the place where it always hung.

Did you ever ſee the key afterwards, before you miſſed the bale of goods?—I did not look for it.

The compting houſe is open to the reſt of the people belonging to it?——Yes.

There are a variety of people come into the compting houſe during the whole remainder of the day?——No.

PETER FRANCIS DESPOND ſworn.

I am butler to Mr. Teiſſier, No. 22, in Old Broad-ſtreet, the warehouſe is next to the Exciſe-office.

What is next on the otherſide?——The Old South-ſea Houſe; on Saturday the 3d of September, I ſhut up the gates between ſix and ſeven, the ware-houſe doors were pulled quite cloſe, I do not know whether it was locked or no, I ſhut the gate and double locked it, and I put the key in my pantry, and double locked the pantry, and put the key in my pocket, and went out; the key was in my pantry as I left it, when I came home between nine and ten, and the maid told me the warehouſe door was open.

Mr. James, another of the priſoners counſel. I take it for granted, there was nothing particular to induce you to look at the warehouſe door this evening more than any other?——No.

You ſaw it was ſhut?——Yes.

Whether it was locked or no you cannot tell?—No.

LEWIS TEISSIER, Eſq. ſworn.

Deſcribe the ſituation of your warehouſe, and how it is connected with your houſe?——The warehouſe is in a yard, of which the wall joins the Exciſe-office, it is the partition wall over the warehouſe and my bed-room; there is a gateway from the ſtreet, ſeparate from the door of the houſe, where the carriage part of my warehouſe buſineſs is tranſacted, my parlour is part of the old South-ſea Houſe, and the rooms that are over that parlour are not mine, they are lodgings belonging to the South Sea-houſe, my two compting-houſes run from that parlour likewiſe, making part of the South-ſea Houſe a door to the South-ſea yard, and to that door people come through a gate in the South Sea-houſe; this gate is common to me with Mr. Grindall; he has for a long ſeries of years had recourſe to that yard, and his coachman had a key; there is an acceſs to my warehouſe door through my kitchen, but that is only relative to my family, there is no communication between any part of my houſe and the warehouſe.

Court. How is this warehouſe held?—It goes with the leaſe; there is a gateway as I have told you, and over that gateway there is a dreſſing-room which joins to this bed-room where I ſleep, and all the reſt of the houſe is drawing-rooms, and ſo on, which run into one another; I was out of town when this robbery was committed, I came to town on Monday morning, I had loſt a bale of Piedmont ſilk, B. B. C. No. 7, conſigned to me from Meſſrs. Bruſſet and Co. of Turin; it was ſent to me to be diſpoſed of with eleven other bales; it came to me for 200 weight of Turin, that is always delivered in here for 160 lb.

What might be the value of it?—From 26l. to 27l. this is my own ware-houſe, nobody has any concern in it, and nobody has a right to go into it unleſs the people of my own houſe.

SOPHIA SOUTHTON ſworn.

I am ſervant to Mr. Teiſſier; I went out on the 3d of September at a little better than half after ſeven at night, and returned a little after eight; when I returned I ſaw three men, one oppoſite the gateway, and one on each ſide of the ſtreet.

What gate do you mean?——The gate that goes into the yard where the warehouſe is; the gate at that time was open; I ſaw the little door open, and I went and knocked at the door, and my fellow ſervant let me in with a light, I told her there were three men at the gate, and we looked and ſaw the warehouſe-door open; I went to the Roſe and Crown and got two porters; they looked all about and they ſaw nobody; we could not tell what was miſſing that night till Mr. Cloſe come; the next morning he came and looked over the warehouſe, and ſaid there was a bale of ſilk gone; when I went out for the porters, I did not perceive any man, I ran out in a hurry, I did not take notice; it was not ſo dark when I came home firſt but I ſaw the men.

Should you know their perſons again?—No, the two men at the gate appeared to me to be dreſſed in dark coloured cloth, and one a ſhortiſh man.

Mr. Morgan. Are you ſure as to the time you came home?——Yes Sir, I heard the clock ſtrike eight as I came up London Wall.

How far was that from your houſe?——Very near, I was at home in a very few minutes after; the clock ſtruck eight when I got home.

SARAH BULL ſworn.

I am one of the ſervants; I was at home this evening, I went out with a candle, when the laſt witneſs came in, I opened the door and ſhe told me the little door belonging to the gate was open; ſhe ſaid there were two men at the gate and one oppoſite, I went out, and as I was going out to ſhut the gate, I ſaw the ware-houſe door open, that alarmed me much; we returned into the kitchen and locked the door, we went to the front window, and could ſee nobody, ſhe went to the public-houſe and got ſome porters to ſee what was the matter; ſhe came to the back door.

Is that a uſual communication to the houſe, or do they go by Broad-ſtreet?——They come by the front door, becauſe the little gate is always locked at duſk, that ſurpriſed me and made me aſk who was there.

JOHN COLLINS ſworn.

I am one of the porters, I watched in the warehouſe all night, nothing happened that night, I examined the warehouſe, when the butler came home we ſaw plainly the marks of the place where a bale was miſſing, I ſaw no perſon on that ſpot that night but Mr. Grindall's coachman; he was not there a great while.

What do you call a great while?—Perhaps he might be there ten minutes or a quarter of an hour, he might perhaps more.

Court. What time of night was it when you examined the warehouſe with Mr. Teiſſier's butler?——I believe it was near ten.

(John

(John Edwards called.)

Mr. Morgan. He is an accomplice

Court. Have you the record of any conviction againſt him?

Mr Morgan. My objection is, that in a capital caſe like this, this man is an accomplice, and is ſo acknowledged, and has been ſtated to the Jury as an accomplice by Mr. Silveſter in the opening, thefore, I apprehend your lordſhip will not examine him.

Court. An accomplice is by law a competent witneſs, the credit of his teſtimony is to go to the Jury, that is a rule of diſcretion that always prevails with Juries upon the ground of common ſenſe, that that accomplice ſhould not have credit unleſs his teſtimony is ſupported; I hold it the moſt ſatisfactory way to receive the teſtimony of the accomplice in the firſt inſtance, in order to introduce the circumſtances that gave him credit; I can conceive thouſands of circumſtances that would not be evidence till the evidence of the accomplice is heard.

JOHN EDWARDS ſworn.

I was coachman to Mr. Grindall, his coach-houſe was in the ſame yard with Mr. Teiſſier's warehouſe.

State to his Lordſhip and Jury what converſations you have had with any of the priſoners at the bar, and what you have done in their company with reſpect to any of the property of Mr. Teiſſier?——The priſoner Storer came to me to my maſter's ſtables in Mr. Teiſſier's yard, about a month or ſix weeks before this robbery, and aſked if all the buildings there were ſtables, I told him no, pointing to, or touching the ware-houſe of Mr. Teiſſier, he ſaid, did I know what goods, I told him I thought it was ſilk and indigo, he told me then that it would be worth doing, as ſilk and indigo were very valuable articles; that was all that paſſed at that time; the priſoner James Beaman and him came to me afterwards, and told me if I would aſſiſt them in robbing Mr. Teiſſier's warehouſe I ſhould be a partaker of whatever was taken out of the ſaid warehouſe.

Which of them ſaid that?—— Francis Storer and Beaman both, they came together; in a little time after, the ſaid Francis Storer and Dan. Eaſt came into the yard and aſked me for the key of the gate, which I gave them, that might be four, five, or ſix days after, I will not be certain which; I gave them to Storer, he aſked me if I could give him a piece of clay or wax, I told him I could not, he then picked up a turnip and cut it and laid a piece of writing paper on it, and took off the impreſſion of the key upon the paper, and then ſaid Dan. let us go away.

What did he do with the key?——He gave it to me again.

What did he do with this piece of paper?—He took it with him.

When did you ſee any of the priſoners again?——Some time after, about a fortnight, I ſaw Beaman and Storer; they came to me into the ſtable, and frequently took me to the cellar, under the exciſe office, to drink, but we never ſat down there; they brought a key that opened the wicket gate; they deſired me to unlock that lock, which I did; it went very hard; they came again, and brought a key, and aſked me to draw Mr. Grindall's chariot before Mr. Teiſſier's warehouſe door, and Beaman told me to draw the chariot before the warehouſe door, that he might have an opportunity of taking the marks of the lock, that he might not be ſeen putting in the key to prevent ſuſpicion as there was ſo many windows, I told him I could not think of doing any thing of the kind, as I never uſed to put it there; they went away again, and they came again; Beaman came again, and brought a key with wax upon it, and put it into the warehouſe of Mr. Teiſſier's; he then tried it, and ſaid, it was a very good lock, the wax took the impreſſion of the wards of the lock; then he ſaid it was a very good lock, and took the key, and all away with him; a little while afterwards they came to me, and deſired to know when it would be beſt for the warehouſe to be done, I told them on Saturday, by reaſon I ſhould be out of town with my maſter, the day of the month I do not know; the warehouſe was done on on the Saturday evening, I came home about nine; when I came home the alarm was given to me that Mr. Teiſſier's warehouſe was broke open, I heard that at the Roſe and Crown, where the key of my ſtable was left.

How ſoon after the Saturday evening did you ſee any of the priſoners at the bar?——The Sunday following, between nine and ten; then I ſaw James Beaman at the crown at Smithfield Bars; he at that time kept that houſe.

Were any of the others preſent at that time?——No.

What did he ſay?—Beaman ſaid, when I went in, that he, with ſome others, had got into the warehouſe of Mr. Teiffiers, and had taken away one bale of ſilk.

Did he tell you where they went to?——No.

Did he tell you how they went?——He ſaid they took one bale of ſilk away in a coach, which they had provided for the ſame, and there were ſuch and ſuch men with them, it is not right for me to mention their names; and he ſaid there was fourteen pounds five ſhillings and ſix-pence coming to me, which he paid me all in light money, which I objected to; he then ſaid, if they did not go he would change them for me, I owed ſome of the money, and I paid ſome of it, and he changed me one of the guineas; he ſaid they had done no more than one bale; they were prevented by a woman coming in at that wicket gate, and calling the coachman, and finding no coachman, ſhe went to the back gate, and that diſturbed them; and that woman ſaw three of them, and one of them in a white apron; I ſaw Beaman afterwards, he told me I was indebted to him two ſhillings and ſix-pence for my ſhare of lumbering the ſilk, nobody was preſent but him and his wife.

What is lumbering?——I do not know, he did not ſay.

Did he tell you what ſort of ſilk it was?——No, he did not tell me where he went, he ſhewed me a double-barrelled piſtol out of one of his pockets, and ſaid, if any of the porters had come during the alarm he was ready for them.

Mr. James. What do you ſay your name is?—John Edwards.

Be ſo good as to favour me with ſome of the other names by which you have been called; what are your common nick names?—I uſed to have the name of Jubilee Jack, by wearing a little round hat; I never went by any other name but that.

Do you mean to ſwear that?—Yes, that I never went, only by that name, and the name of John Edwards, I will ſwear that.

I underſtand you ſay you have lived as coachman with Mr. Grindall?—Yes, about four months.

Where did you live before?——I drove the Shrewſbury coach before.

How long ago was it when you drove the Oxford coach?—I never drove the Oxford coach.

Do you remember driving any coach in which there was a little accident of a parcel being loſt?—No.

Do you remember being in cuſtody on charge of ſtealing a parcel?—No, never in my life; I defy all the world to ſay I ever was before a juſtice or a court; I never was in cuſtody for ſtealing a parcel from any coach of which I was the driver, or of any other coach; I came from priſon here, I cannot tell the day I went to priſon, it was on a Thurſday after the 3d of September, about a fortnight.

What is the reward which is given by act of parliament for the conviction of perſons guilty of burglary?—I do not know.

Do you mean to ſwear that upon oath?—I do.

Will you ſwear that?——I will.

What! you never perhaps heard of ſuch thing?—I never was in a court in my life, if I ſuffer along with the priſoners I will ſay nothing but what is truth.

Do you mean to ſay likewiſe that you do not know the reward that was advertiſed by Teiffier?——Yes, I know that reward, but that is not to me, it is for apprehending and taking.

How

How did you know that ſuch a reward was offered?——By ſeeing it in the Public Adverti ſer.

When was that? — Every day ſince the robbery was committed; I ſaw it the next morning after.

The reward is one hundred and fifty pounds on conviction, and two hundred pounds more if full information ſhould be given to the ſatisfaction of the Jury; is that ſo?——I do not know.

Do not you know at this moment that a greater reward is to be given if a full plump round ſtory is told than merely if you come to give evidence? — I will ſay no to that; I do not ſwear out of fee or reward; I do not ſwear to take the men's lives away for the reward.

Why did not you diſcover the robbery the next morning?—Becauſe I was in danger of my life; I was afraid of being ſhot; I put it off ſix weeks, and told them I would have nothing to do with it till they forced me to do it; I was apprehended before I made any diſcovery.

What were you taken up for?——Upon ſuſpicion of having been concerned in this robbery.

Then it was you gave the information you are reciting now?——Yes.

Upon your oath, did not you mention the commiſſion of this robbery as a thing eaſy to be done by other perſons beſides the priſoners at the bar; mind the anſwer, and mind the queſtion, if you do not anſwer that queſtion, as I think you ought, I will give you a name to put you in recollection? —No, Sir, I never did.

You ſwear that you never have had any converſation about the commiſſion of this robbery previous to the time of its being committed, except with the priſoners at the bar?——I never had.

Had you no converſation of that kind with a man of the name of Bray?——I had not.

You fixed on Saturday, as moſt convenient for effecting this robbery?—I did.

You ſay in your evidence, that one of the priſoners picked up a piece of turnip, and cut it, and put ſome writing paper upon it, and took the impreſſion off the key, and then ſaid, Dan let us go, did you ſee the impreſſion?——I gave the key, and ſaw the impreſſion taken of, I never looked at the paper.

How can you tell that any impreſſion was made?—Becauſe he looked, and ſaid this will do.

Then you ſaw a piece of paper put on the turnip; you ſay that one of the priſoners demanded ſomething for lumbering the goods?——Yes.

Do not you underſtand that term?——I do not.

You could not conceive what it meant? ——I could not.

You did not give him the half-crown? ——Yes, I did.

What, you gave him the half crown for lumbering without knowing what it was? ——Yes, I did.

Court. Where did you make your information?——Before Juſtice Blackborough five days after I was committed, about ſeventeen days after the robbery.

Mr. Garrow. You was not the apprehender of any of theſe perſons?—No.

JOHN SAY ſworn.

I am a Hackney coachman, on the 3d of September, I was at the ſtand at Cornhill, about a quarter after eight, I was hired by a man, I ſhould know him I dare ſay.

Look about?——I cannot ſay I ſee the man here.

Look about you?——No, I do not ſee the man here as I know of.

Have you ever ſeen the man ſince?—No, Sir, never.

Did you ever ſee him before?—I cannot ſay, I may have ſeen many people before.

Did you never ſee the man that called you that night?—Never before or ſince, I was hired by a man, he took me to Broad-ſtreet, he went on the coach box, nobody was in the coach at that time.

What part of Broad-ſtreet?—The corner of a court, I cannot ſay I know the name of the court, there is a fruiterer's ſhop at the corner.

How near is that to the Exciſe-office?—Cloſe to it, almoſt oppoſite to it; when I had been there about two minutes, the man came to me, and ordered me down Winchester-ſtreet, I went down about four doors on the left hand, the man on the box went over the way to ſpeak to two men that were ſtanding by the Exciſe-office rails.

Is that near the gate-way?—The Exciſe-office gate is very nigh it, I ſtopped there on the left hand, and waited there about a quarter of an hour, I was feeding my horſes and ſomebody came and put ſomething into my off door, and ſhut up the door again, and the man that was on the box before got up again, and told me to drive down London-wall, down Coleman-ſtreet, up the Old Jury, down Queen-ſtreet, down Thames-ſtreet, then to Puddle-dock, to the White Bear.

Who keeps that houſe?——One Mr. Nodes.

When you came to the White Bear, what did you do?——The man got off the box and he opened the door, and I got off the box to let the man out with ſomething that they had in the coach it ſeemed to be a bale of ſomething, but I did not know what it was, I helped to carry it in, and the other two men, we had a glaſs of brandy in the bar, it was put in, and they ordered me to turn about, then two men came out and ordered me to drive into Widegate-alley, Biſhopſgate-ſtreet, we ſtopped at the corner of Catherine Wheel-alley, and ſtaid there about half an hour, then they came back to me in company with a third, they all got into the coach, then we went back to Nodes's, and I ſtopped at the door about a quarter of an hour, I went into the houſe, and I aſked them if they were going to diſcharge me, they ſaid no, they ſhould want me again.

What were they doing in the houſe?——I cannot ſay, they were buſy among themſelves; theſe three men were by themſelves, and another man in the back room with them.

What had they with them?—They had the bale withinſide Mr. Nodes's bar, when they went in they aſked me to lend them a knife, I told them yes; they cut the ropes and things, and threw them, as I think, into Mr. Nodes's bar.

What was in the bale?—I do not know, it was ſomewhat, they ſhewed it about, I cannot tell what it was, it appeared to me to be yellow, but I could not diſtinguiſh the colour, it being dark.

Was it this colour?--I cannot ſay, they had plenty of candles, but it is hard to diſcern ſuch a colour at night-time, then they took a brown bag out of the coach, and put the contents of the bale into the bag, and put the bag into the coach again, and I carried them to Wentworth-ſtreet, Petticoat-lane.

Who went there?--Two people.

Only two?—Only two, then they took it out and went away, and told me to wait till they returned, they were gone, I ſuppoſe a quarter of an hour, when they came back they ordered me to drive to Mr. Nodes's, which I did, then they ſaid, come in and take your fare, and I had a glaſs with them, I was there the value of ten minutes, and they gave me ſix ſhillings, and diſcharged me; the ſecond time I was in the houſe ten minutes, and the firſt time when I gave them the knife to cut the package, I was ſeven or eight minutes; there were ſeven or eight people in the back room; I do not know any one of them.

Look about and ſee if you know them?--As I am upon my oath I do not know any body there.

JAMES NODES ſworn.

I keep the White Bear in Thames-ſtreet.

Do you remember any perſons coming to your houſe in a coach on the 3d of September in the evening?---Yes.

How many perſons?——Three.

Look round and tell us which they are? They are all there one after another, Mr. Beaman came firſt, Vandeput and Storer came in at the front, John Say, the coachman, and Eaſt, came in at the ſide door; they brought in a large bundle, they put it down down on the outside of the bar, in about a quarter of an hour Beaman came in and joined company with them.

Did they take their bundle into the parlour with them?—No Sir, they left it at the outside of the bar, it was a large bundle as big as a sack, the package was a kind of package such as they pack cloth in, of coarse cloth, it was tied with a rope, they staid after Beaman came in some time, but Vandeput and Storer went away in the same coach; they were gone about half an hour; they came back and brought a person with them whose name is Farmer, and they went into the parlour; Beaman and the other continued there after the others came back, there was a skain of silk produced in that parlour which I heard them say was taken out of that bundle.

Court. Who said it came out of that bundle?—The four prisoners; it was of a yellowish colour to the best of my knowledge; it was candle-light, but something of that colour; I heard some conversation that Mr. Farmer had agreed to give half a guinea a pound for it.

What did they do after that?—Then they returned and cut the cords on the outside of the package, and put it in a large bag which they had in the coach, some of the cord they took away and some they left behind, and that they desired me to burn; there were three of them went away in the coach, Mr. Farmer followed the coach, and East went home a little in liquor; he did not go in the coach.

Have you any doubt in point of certainty that these are the men? —— These are the men that were in my parlour, all four of them.

You, I believe, did not observe the marks on the package? — I did not, I afterwards saw some of the prisoners at Bridewell, that was Storer and East; they asked me if any thing had transpired, I said nothing that I knew of; they asked me who told me they were there, I said Mrs. Beaman, then came in a person that whispered them, and they told me the subject of that whisper was, that nothing could affect them.

Had you at any subsequent time any conversation with Beaman after this robbery was committed?—Yes,

What was that?——He shewed me two picklock keys that he said did the business; they were large keys, as big as street-door keys.

Mr. Morgan. Where did you come from just now?——Out of the room just by.

That will not answer my question; where have you resided now, for a few days before you came here to-day?——In New Prison; I have been there almost a month.

Perhaps on this account?—Yes, I fancy so.

Where is your home that you have now?——At Puddle Dock; I lived there about two months; I kept the Gentleman and Porter in Ball-lane, Spital-fields.

There are no thieves thereabouts?——That was the reason I left it.

What! because it was an honest neighbourhood?——Because it was not; I lived there about a year and three months.

You had not the good luck to be prosecuted during the time you lived there for harbouring thieves?——I never had a word said to me; I always kept the house quite clear before that; I kept the Little Lion in the Borough; I never was inside this place before in my lifetime.

I am very sorry you was not here a long time ago; when they brought this bale and put it down, did you know them before that time?—Yes.

Was either of them in the silk way?—I knew but very few in the silk way.

Did any of the prisoners deal in silk?——Not that I know of; I have seen them all before, but not often.

Did not you know that not one of them had anything to do with silk?——Not before it was brought to my house; I did not know anything of any of their businesses.

Now, you have been telling us about the ropes, and the outward case being cut, who cut them?——I did not cut them.

Who did?—The prisoners.

All four?—No, not all four.

What

What did they desire you to do with the case and the ropes?—To burn them.

What was done with them?—They were burnt.

Did you see them burnt?—I saw them while they were burning.

Who put them on the fire?—My wife, I was backwards and forwards.

Why did you suppose they desired the case and the ropes to be burnt?—Because I did not believe they were come honestly by.

Court. How many times before this had you seen these men?——I had seen them three or four times at this house to drink a pint of beer, and I had seen them at the other house, but not lately; I had been out of the other house three months. I know all their persons, I am not mistaken, I know them all particularly well.

ANN NODES sworn.

I am wife of the last witness, on the 3d of September, the prisoner, the man on the right hand, and one that stands there, came in first, and the tall one Beaman came in afterwards, they came in with the coachman John Say, they brought in a bundle, and put it on the outside of the bar, it was marked B. B. C. in a round ring, two B's at the top, and a C. at bottom.

Was it in that form?—Yes, they called for some brandy and water, and went into the parlour, and Mr. Beaman came after and joined company with them, then they unpacked it, and put the contents of it into a brown bag, I was in the bar and saw them do it, and they took it away in a coach.

Are you sure these are the men?——I am sure as to their persons.

Mr. James. I suppose you have a perfect recollection of all that passed?—No, Sir, I did not hear all that passed, I was in the bar, they did cut the ropes the outside of the bar, and put it into a brown bag.

Did you see anything likewise of the burning of the bands?——They left them behind, I burnt them, they were of no use, I could not cut off the knots.

Was that the only reason why you burnt them?---Yes.

Now, pause a little, recollect, if you mean to say so seriously upon your oath?---Yes.

You mean to swear that?---Yes.

Did you do it of your own accord, or had you any directions for doing it?---They said they were good for nothing.

Did they say any thing else?---They did not desire they should be burnt; as I recollect.

Had you any conversation with your husband on the subject?---None at all.

Did he happen to see the burning of the bands?---Yes, after they were flung on the fire; he did not say any thing to it, he did not think they were of any consequence.

Therefore you burnt them as you would do any other cords?—Yes.

No other reason upon the face of the earth?---Certainly not.

RACHEL POULTNEY sworn.

I am servant to Mr. and Mrs. Nodes at the White Bear; I remember some persons came there on Saturday the 3d of September in a coach, one was Frank Storer, and the coachman Say came in with them, and two more came in at the fore door, and the coachman and Storer at the other; they brought a parcel like a package.

Was it tied with any thing?---Yes.

How was it tied?---With a cord across and across.

Where did they put it?---The backside of my Mistress's bar.

Did any body else come afterwards?——James Beaman came afterwards and another came in.

The Remainder of this Trial in the next Part, which will be published in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex,

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 19th of OCTOBER, 1785, and the following Days;

Being the EIGHTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER VIII. PART III.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of W. Vandeput, J. Beaman, F. Storer, & D. Eaſt.

What part of the houſe were they in?—The parlour; my maſter and miſtreſs ſerved them, I did not; I ſaw a kind of ſkain of ſilk like orange colour, that came out of that package.

Was it like this?—Yes.

What did they do with this package as you call it?——They cut off the outſide package and the ropes.

What became of them?——I do not know.

What became of the inſide?—They took a brown bag out of the coach and put the bundle into it, then they put it into the coach, and the coachman went away.

Mr. Morgan. Did you go to the coach with them?——No.

You ſtaid in the tap-room?——Yes, to wait on the cuſtomers, I did not go out with the men when they took the bag, nor when they fetched the bag.

Then how came you to ſay that they took it out of a coach?---Becauſe the tap-room door ſtood open and I ſaw them take it out.

What covering was it in?--Straw colour.

A piece of cloth?---Yes, pretty large.

Was it matting or cloth?—It was like a mat.

It would not do to put down at your ſtreet-door to wipe your feet on?—It was not ſuch as that, my miſtreſs ſaid ſhe burnt it.

Did you hear any thing ſaid about burning?——No, my miſtreſs told me ſhe burnt the large outward wrapper as well as the bands; I do not know the names of all the priſoners, I know the name that one is called by, but I do not know that it is his name, his name is Frank Storer, I know all their perſons if I ſee them.

But you do not know their names?—No.

Mr. Garrow. Look round and ſee if the men are here?——They are the four men that ſtand there.

Are you ſure of it?——Yes Sir, upon my ſacrament oath; I lived with my maſter and miſtreſs before he came there; I lived above half a year at the Gentleman and Porter, I ſaw theſe men three or four times before.

Where?——Two of them two or three times at this houſe, and two or three at the other; at this houſe I ſaw Eaſt and Vandeput.

Have you ſeen them often enough to know their faces?—Yes, my Lord, I have.

JOHN

JOHN LUCY ſworn.

I am the conſtable of Clerkenwell, I apprehended, the 15th of September laſt, Daniel Eaſt and Francis Storer, at Clerkenwell Cloſe, they were together in the ſtreet on the 24th of the ſame month, I went to Mr. Beaman's houſe, I ſearched for him, and I found he was not at home, and on his bed's head I found this piſtol loaded, double barrelled, it was loaded with theſe balls, it was upon a ledge behind the bed's head.

In what room?—In the bed-chamber one pair of ſtairs, front room; on the 26th of the ſame month, on information, I went with four other officers to Narrow ſtreet, Limehouſe, on information that Beaman and Vandeput were there, we waited there about two hours, and we ſecured Beaman, Vandeput made his eſcape, I ſaw him coming up to the door, but as ſoon as he ſaw us he made his eſcape, the other officers purſued him and brought him back to the public houſe, that is all I know; there was ſome converſation in the coach about the piſtol that I found, Mr. Beaman begged that I would not produce it in evidence againſt him before the Magiſtrate, he thought it would aggravate the offence, and he and Vandeput ſaid they had ſhipped themſelves on board to go to America, and were to go off that night.

Mr. Silveſter. We have done.

Court. William Vandeput, you have heard the charge againſt you, and what the witneſſes have ſworn, this is the proper time for you to make your defence.

Priſoner Vandeput. I know nothing at all about the matter, I am totally innocent, and it is for the ſake of the very great reward they want to take away my life; I am a ſeafaring man; I belonged to a ſhip at the time.

Do you mean to ſay that you was not at Nodes's houſe?——I was not at Nodes's houſe, nor know any thing at all about it, nor know not where his home is.

Have you any witneſſes?—No, my Lord, I have no witneſſes; I have nobody in England belonging to me.

You muſt have ſome place where you lodge; you muſt have ſome connections?—I lodge in Wapping; all the witneſſes I can give is to myſelf; I have no witneſſes; I am a ſeafaring man; I can bring nobody to my abilities at all.

You muſt have been employed in the ſhip?——I belonged to the Fair American that then lay in Limehouſe Hole when I was taken, and the ſhip wore down the ſame day I was taken; and to bring a parcel of people out of the houſe where nobody but ſailors and girls live, would be of no uſe.

Court to Priſoner. Daniel Eaſt, what do you ſay of yourſelf?—I have a perſon here that knows Mr. Nodes very well, and knows I was on board the General Carter, and caſt away; I have been three times to Gibraltar; I worked at my buſineſs ſince.

JAMES BEAMAN'S DEFENCE.

I am intirely innocent; at the time he apprehended me he told me he had taken this piſtol; I am a gunſmith; I told him he might produce it, for it was brought to me to have a key made to it to ſcrew and unſcrew the barrels, but I have nobody to prove it, nor can I find that perſon that brought it; he has been once at my houſe, but my not being there he went away; I was not at Nodes's that night, being the firſt night of Bartholomew Fair, I was at home, I want to call Mr. Pitt, Mr. Akerman's ſervant, who knows this coachman.

Mr. Morgan. I wiſh you would be eaſy, and leave it to your counſel.

Court. Your counſel do not think that witneſs will be of any ſervice to you, but if you wiſh to have him called I will not hinder you, but as you have put yourſelf into the hands of counſel you will judge whether you ſhould follow his advice or not?——To be ſure I muſt.

PRISONER STORER'S DEFENCE.

I am intirely innocent; I know nothing about it.

Have you any witneſs to call?—No, my Lord.

ALL FOUR GUILTY, Death.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

924. RO-

924. ROBERT RICHARDSON was indicted for feloniously ſtealing, on the 4th of October, one pair of aſh oars, value 10s. the property of Richard Roberts.

(The caſe opened by Mr. Litchfield)

JACOB SELBY ſworn.

I am a waterman belonging to the Cuſtom-houſe, to the inſpectors on that day, on Saturday evening I locked the door, and made it faſt, it was laſt Saturday was four weeks, it might be the 17th of September; it was about eight when I left the ſkiff, on the Monday following I found that ſome oars had been loſt between ten and eleven.

What oars were miſſing?—Oars marked one and two; on Monday morning I miſſed the oars, and I enquired at ſeveral pair of ſtairs for them; they were faſtened to the boat by a chain, and I pulled at the lock to ſee if it was faſt.

Whoſe boat was this?—Mr. Roberts's.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner's Counſel. And if you loſe any, you are anſwerable to Mr. Roberts for his oars?—Not that I know of.

Do you know the young man?—I do not.

WILLIAM WALL ſworn.

I came from Blackwall on Saturday evening about ſeven or eight o'clock, on the Monday morning I was told they were loſt, I wrote a paper to Mr. Cole, and they were found.

WILLIAM COLE ſworn.

I am a conſtable; about three weeks ago I went to the priſoner's, there I found a pair of oars.

Did you go to ſearch for theſe oars?—Not particularly for them.

How came you to take them?—I had them deſcribed; I found them in the priſoner's yard; (there is a ſort of pent-houſe goes over them; the houſe is in a place called Brewer's Yard, Shadwell, about forty yards off the river; theſe are the oars that I found there; they were at the top of the pent-houſe; they were put over the neceſſary, the broad arrow is plain upon them; they laid as all watermen lay their oars; not covered at all; I found them on the 4th of October; but I had information from Mr. Wall three or four days before.

You went there and he was ſent for?—Yes.

Was he ſent for or not?—I cannot ſay.

Who came back with him?—I cannot ſay.

Did not you ſee the little girl that aſſiſts in the family come back with him?—I do not recollect it.

Mr. Roberts's name I ſee now is upon theſe oars, burnt in?—Yes.

He is one of the greateſt boat builders in town?—I believe he is.

To Selby. Are theſe the oars that you left in the houſe that night?—Yes.

Jury. Were they in the ſame ſtate when they were loſt as they now are?—There was none of this plaining then.

Is the plaining over the name?—Yes.

(The oars depoſed to by Mr. Roberts.)

Mr. Garrow. Now as to that mark at the further end of the oars may it not have been worked out?—No Sir, it is plained out.

Cole. He ſaid he found theſe oars in the river, and brought them home.

Did he not ſay he expected them to be advertiſed?—No.

Did not the priſoner ſay at the Juſtice's that he had a witneſs that ſaw him pick them up?—I did not hear that, I heard the Juſtice ſay, if he had any witneſſes for his defence they were to come for that to another court, but I did not ſee any witneſs there.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I had a fare about five at King James's Stairs up to Billingſgate, I went over to Horſleydown, and between Wapping Old Stairs and Union-ſtairs, a man called ſculler, and theſe oars lay, I picked them up and carried them home; at my third hearing I found this man who was then juſt going to the Weſt Indies, and I told the Juſtice ſo.

What is the man's name that ſaw you pick them up?—He is a foreigner and belongs to Norway, I do not know his name, it was a very odd name, he is gone to the Weſt Indies in a ſhip named the Hope; when when the girl came and fetched me, she said that four runners wanted me, I came home directly, they asked me whose these oars were, I told them they were mine till I got an owner, says he, I have got an owner, and I will send you away for this.

The prisoner called one witness, who gave him a good character.

GUILTY.

To be confined six months in the House of Correction.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

926. JOSEPH BOLOUS was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 24th of September last, two mens cloth coats, value 30s. one silk waistcoat, value 8s. one cotton waistcoat, value 4s. one pair of black silk breeches, value 4s. one pair of casimere breeches, value 7s. four linen shirts, value 15s. three pair of silk stockings, value 20s. three pair of woollen blankets, value 20s. one silver watch, value 40s. one pair of stone knee buckles, one gold enamelled ring, value 15s. one gold enamelled shirt buckle, value 8s. one deal box, value 18d. the property of John Adams.

JOHN ADAMS sworn.

I came to town on the 24th of September, in the Norwich coach, to the Swan with Two Necks in Lad-lane; the first time I saw the prisoner was in the yard, plying as porter; I had a box and a parcel, which I took from the coach, and the prisoner and another man wanted to carry it to the Castle and Falcon in Dowgate-street; they began to hand it, I desired them to let it alone; I immediately took it to the gate of the inn, there stood a hackney coach, he said he was hired, I asked him to take care, and look at my box while I went and called another coach, and he said he would, and I went away to call another coach, and I had not gone a hundred yards till I saw another coach, which came, and when I returned back the box was gone; the prisoner was upon the spot when I left the box, within three yards, I called a hackney coach, and came back, the box was not two minutes out of my sight; I asked the hackney coachman where the box was, he said it was gone; two fellows had run away with it; I was rather flurried, and I was directed by a milk woman to go to Aldermanbury; a man said the box and the man were in custody; I went within a quarter of an hour and found the box and the prisoner in Queen's Court, Basinghall-street.

Prisoner. Whereabouts did you see me and the other man in the yard?—Opposite the Compting-house door, the office-door, where they transact the business for the coaches.

ELIZABETH FREELAND sworn.

I keep the White Bear Tap in Queen's Court; the prisoner came in, and called for a pint of beer, he had the box and parcel in his arm, and put it down upon a chest in the yard, nobody was with him, and my husband came in, and he asked him to drink, he gave the pint of beer into his hand, and set off without paying for the beer, or taking any care of the parcel, he looking down the court, saw a few people gathered together at the bottom of the court, a young man came up, and enquired after him, and he was taken; this is the same man that brought the box and parcel in, I saw him pitch it down, it was in less than ten minutes.

Prisoner. I was in the house, I do not remember seeing the gentlewoman.

WILLIAM FREELAND sworn.

I saw the box in the yard, and the prisoner by it; I saw him come into the tap, and he asked me to drink, and he went directly down the court, and he went into Fore-street, and in less than a minute a young gentleman that is here now came running in, and told me, and we pursued him, and took him; when we took him I said, young man, you have not paid for your pint of beer, and he said he had had no here there; I am quite sure it is the same man.

JOSEPH HUNT sworn.

I was coming down Aldermanbury, and asked what was the matter, and I pursued too, and in Basinghall-street I took him.

JAMES PRIOR sworn.

I saw a concourse of people assembled together, and asked them what was the matter, and they told me that was the man that had stolen a box and parcel from the Swan with Two Necks; I took the prisoner into custody, and the moment the owner came he said, that is the man that stole my box and parcel; says I, should you know your box and parcel again if you saw it, he said yes; he told me the contents.

Prosecutor. This watch was in the box; here is the gold ring, I know it by the maker's name, I do not know the number; I know the knee buckles, and I know my clothes and every thing perfectly well; my linen and stockings were all marked; I know the box and the things.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

If you will believe the word of a man, I never was at the gateway at all, I was going towards Moorfields, and a man asked me to carry this box to Basinghall-street, and he would give me a pint of beer and six-pence, he bid me go into the public house, and he would go and fetch a coach, I went there, and nobody came; I had no money to pay for the beer; I went and left the box, and they came after me, and took me.

GUILTY.

To be transported for seven years.

Tried by the first London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

927. JOHN ALLISON was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 28th day of September last, one double reined bridle, with two bits, plated with silver, value 10s. the property of Vincent Newton, Esq. privily in the stable of John Fidler.

HENRY WHEELER sworn.

I sent Thomas Smith up to Mr. Calvert's with the horse, the saddle and bridle were in the stable of Mr. Fidler, they were the property of Mr. Newton, it hung in the stable, facing the gate, I saw it in the stable in the afternoon about two o'clock, it was missed about half an hour after, I believe.

How long was it before it was found?——About an hour, it was found at Justice Walker's, I was sent for and saw the bridle there.

EDWARD TREDWAY sworn.

I saw the prisoner running across Red-lyon-square as fast as he could, with the bridle in his hand; Mr. Hector was with me, and we both ran after him and overtook him in King's-gate-street, Holborn; I asked him where he got that; I saw a crest upon it; he said he had bought it of a man that goes to the Haymarket, and sometimes to Smithfield; I said, can you shew me the man; he hesitated a little, then says I, you must go with me to the roundhouse; he said, you know me, take my word and I will appear at night; I told him I would not: and we went and enquired for the owner, and Mr. Wheeler came up to Mr. Walker's and brought the bridle.

What became of the bridle at the time?——I took it from the prisoner, I gave it to Mr. Hector.

JAMES HECTOR sworn.

I was with the last witness when this happened; I have nothing more to say than what he has said; I overtook the prisoner with the bridle, I have had it in my possession ever since.

THOMAS SMITH sworn.

I saw the prisoner go down the yard and come up again, and never spoke to anybody, it was in the middle of the day, but I cannot rightly tell the hour, as near as I can tell it was between one and two; I did not see the prisoner go into any stable, I did not not perceive he had anything in his hand, the bridle was miſſed ſoon after; I went up and I happened to hear of this; the priſoner went directly as if he was going to the ſtable to ſpeak to ſomebody, I never ſaw him before, but by his thickneſs and his coat, and everything he is the ſame man; there were fourteen or fifteen ſaddles in that ſtable, nobody was in the ſtable.

Court to Wheeler. What day was this?——Wedneſday.

You went up to Mr. Walker's—Yes.

You did not ſee anything of this man before?—No.

Where was you when this bridle was loſt?——Gone up to Mr. Lechmere's with his horſe and chaiſe, there was nobody in the ſtable, I live over the ſtable myſelf.

(The bridle depoſed to having the creſt.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

As I was coming up Hog-lane, Shoreditch, I met a young man who dealt in bridles, and I bought this of him, his name is Jack Williams: my witneſſes are gone home.

GUILTY,

To the value of 4s. 10d.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

928. WILLIAM HICKS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 5th day of October, one ſilk handkerchief, value 2s. the property of James Croft, Eſq.

JAMES CROFT, Eſq; ſworn.

On the 5th of October, going along Tower-ſtreet, I felt a man at my pocket, I ſaw my handkerchief fall, and my coachman picked it up.

PETER MARSHAL ſworn.

My maſter miſſed his handkerchief on the 5th of October, I took the priſoner, and the handkerchief dropped from his apron, as my maſter was getting into his coach.

(The handkerchief produced.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I picked up the handkerchief at the coach wheel.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

929. JONATHAN HOPKINSON, was indicted for that he not having the fear of God before his eyes, but being moved and ſeduced by the inſtigation of the devil, on the 9th day of Auguſt laſt, with force and arms violently and feloniouſly did make an aſſault in and upon one Ann Chambers, ſpinſter; and then and there violently and feloniouſly againſt the will of the ſaid Ann, her the ſaid Ann did feloniouſly raviſh, and carnally know, againſt the ſtatute.

Ann Chambers, Iſabell Chambers, and Mary Chambers, were called on their recognizances, and not appearing, the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

930. SAMUEL SEYMOUR was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 8th day of October, half a pound weight of looſe tobacco, value 8d. the property of James Strachan, James Mackenzie, and John Alſo.

ALEXANDER GLENNE ſworn.

I was landing tobacco of the proſecutors on the 8th of October, and I ſaw him take ſome tobacco from one of the hogſheads, while he was ſupporting it as a porter

ver, I found about half a pound upon him, he ſaid it was the firſt offence, and hoped they would excuſe him.

Priſoner. I found it upon the ground.

Court. Can you ſpeak with certainty to the priſoner's taking it?——I think I ſaw him take it, it was a ſmall quantity.

The priſoner called two witneſſes who gave him a good character.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

931. MARGARET THOMPSON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 27th day of September laſt, three quart pewter pots, value 4s. one pint pewter pot, value 1s. the property of John Hoſkins.

The parties called upon their recognizance and not appearing the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

932. JOHN BARLOW was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 10th day of October, twenty-eight yards of baize flannel, value 20s. the property of William Bennett.

The priſoner was taken with the flannel upon him, it ſtood on the ſteps at the door, there were two pieces on the other ſide of the door.

Priſoner. I found it on the ground.

The priſoner called eight witneſſes, who all gave him a good character.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

933. JAMES GRAHAM was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 24th day of September laſt, two cloth coats, value 6s. one cloth ſurtout coat, value 4s. one pair of breeches, value 10d. one pair of nankeen ditto, value 12d. one pair of leather ſhoes, value 12d. one other leather ſhoe, value 3d. a leather pocket book, value 12d. the property of John M'Dougle.

JOHN M'DOUGLE ſworn.

I live in Eaſt Smithfield, I know the priſoner, I did not know him before the robbery, I deal in ſecond hand clothes, I was coming home the 24th of September, I had a pint of beer, and I met with the priſoner, I ſaid to my wife we will go home and go to bed, that was between nine and ten; ſays the priſoner, God help me, I have no where to go to, I have travelled from Liverpool, I have not a halfpenny to pay for a bed; ſays my wife, let him go home and lay with us; mine is a private houſe, he went home with us and we put ſome clothes over him, he ſeemed to be aſleep, I locked the door, and put the key on my bureau-bedſtead, and there it was in the morning, my wife went to bed; in the middle of the night he drew the ſtaple and got the bolt undone, when I waked he was gone, and he took the things mentioned in the indictment, I found the things at a woman's houſe who dealt in ſuch things, and ſhe returned part of the things, but I have not got the ſurtout nor the ſhoes, I am ſure they are mine, I took the priſoner in Ragfair, my wife was here laſt night, but going home ſhe had a little diſpute with a woman, and they were both put into Wood-ſtreet Compter.

Court. Make an order for her to be brought.

Mrs. M'DOUGLE ſworn.

The proſecutor's wife confirmed his evidence.

(The things depoſed to.)

Ann Chambers called, and not appearing, her recognizance was ordered to be eſtreated.

PRI-

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

The profecuter ſaw me in a public houſe, and I told him I was caſt away in Liverpool and he took me to his houſe, whilſt ſitting in the box, this woman ſaid, I think I know your face, I ſaid, you may have ſeen me in many parts of the world, ſhe ſaid ſhe had been a bomboat woman at Portſmouth, and I recollected her, I told her I was to receive ſome prize-money on Friday, and ſhe ſaid, I will help you as far as I can, and ſhe gave me theſe clothes, and charged me on the peril of my life not to tell her huſband.

Court to Profecuter. Did he tell this ſtory before the Juſtice?——At the ſecond hearing he did.

Is this ſtory true?——It is all falſe.

GUILTY.

To be whipped and confined twelve months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

934. THOMAS BRADFORD was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 21ſt day of September laſt, one ſmall horn cup, value 1d. three ſixpences, value 18d. the property of John Richardſon.

ESTER STEWARD ſworn.

I live at Mr. Richardſon's at Iſlington, he keeps a chandler's ſhop, on Wedneſday the 21ſt of September the priſoner came into our ſhop between nine and ten in the morning for change for a ſhilling, I ſaid, I believed I could give him change, I went to the till and I miſſed ſome ſilver, and I told him he had it, and he ſaid he had not, and I told him nobody elſe had been there and he muſt have it; he ſaid there was a young man at the door who ſaw him come in, and he went to the door to ſpeak to the young man as I thought, and he threw away a horn cup out of the ſtreet-door, I ſaw him throw it away, a horn cup what the companies drink wine out of on the Lord Mayor's day, this cup ſtood in the till, I went and picked up the cup, he ſtopped about, and ſaid he would not go away unleſs I would give him the ſhilling again, he went a little way but he was not out of my ſight a minute, I told him I would not give him the ſhilling becauſe I knew he had eighteen pence of mine, a gentleman coming by enquired what was the matter, and he gave charge of the priſoner and the other man, and he was taken to Mr. Cogan's at Iſlington, and three ſixpences were found upon him, one of the ſixpences was a very particular one and I could ſwear to it, when the priſoner came firſt I was gone down ſtairs, and when I came up again I found him in the ſhop with his left hand in his breeches pocket, and I could ſee the print of the horn through his breeches pocket, the till was within ſide the counter, and he was on the outſide when I ſaw him, I can ſwear to the horn cup.

JAMES BROWN ſworn.

I ſearched the priſoner before Juſtice Cogan, I found one ſixpence, which fell out of the knot of his handkerchief on his neck, it laid there, I immediately ſearched his breeches before the Magiſtrate and found thirteen pence three farthings in copper, and one ſixpence in one pocket, in the other pocket I found four or five ſhillings and another ſixpence.

(One ſixpence depoſed to, being very much battered.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was going along, I went in to get change for a ſhilling, and a little girl went in along with me, the gentleman came up and ſaid I took the cup out of the till, I ſaid I had not, and ſhe bid me go and I would not without the ſhilling, I am a weaver.

Where do your friends live?—In Old-ſtreet, they are here.

The Priſoner called three witneſſes who gave him a good character.

GUILTY

Of ſtealing the cup, value one penny.

Court. If the prisoner's friends will undertake to take care of him, order him to be privately whipped and discharged: the Jury being inclined to shew him favour, I will follow their example.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury, before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

935. MARY GOUTERY was indicted for feloniously stealing on the 8th of October, two silver tea spoons, value 4s. the property of Thomas White.

MARTHA WHITE sworn.

I am wife to Thomas White, I lost two silver tea-spoons on Saturday the 8th of this month out of the bar, my husband keeps a public-house, the prisoner used our house frequently for a pint of beer, I had not been gone out five minutes, and I turned back and heard the spoons gingle in her stays, and I took them out.

(Produced and deposed to.)

JOSEPH HALL sworn.

I have had charge of the spoons.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I picked them up.

Prosecutrix. They were in a corner cupboard.

GUILTY,

To be privately whipped, and confined six months in the House of Correction.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. Justice NARES.

---

936. ELIZABETH SHAW was indicted for feloniously stealing, on the 8th of October, one silver watch, value 10s. the property of Richard Keene.

HANNAH KEENE sworn.

I lost my husband's watch off the chimney piece, I live in Whitechapel, it was the lower part of the house, the prisoner came in about a quarter before eleven, for a couple of rabits, I told her she might have them for what I knew, but when my husband came home, I would let her know, she gave me a shilling, and insisted upon my fetching her a dram, and while I was gone, she went, and the watch was gone, she did not stay for her change; I am sure the watch was there when I went out it hung up, I looked just before to see what it was o'clock, I never got it again; the pawnbroker is here, where she went to pawn it.

Did you know the woman?——I never saw her but twice before.

Did you know her name at that time?—Not till after.

How did you find her again?——She had been wandering about, and she had pawned some things of her ready furnished lodgings, and she wanted to take them out, she was taken up about three that afternoon at the Black Horse, in Lemon-street.

WILLIAM TAYLOR sworn.

I live in Ayliff-street, Goodman's-fields, the prisoner offered a watch to pledge to the best of my knowledge, last Saturday was se'nnight a little before twelve, it was a silver watch, I took it into my hand, and gave it her back again directly, I did not examine it, I did not give her any answer I told her I would not take it in of her.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I went to buy a couple of rabbits the person I was looking after was sick, the prosecutrix was cleaning some pigs chitterlins, I gave her a shilling, I came out of her room, and she locked her room door, I went out of the alley for some whiting and some sand, going up Whitechapel, I pawned the watch with Mr. Taylor, which was my own watch, it was at nine in the morning and this woman, did not lose her's till eleven, I went with it and run back again. I was coming for my change and a kidnapping man that kidnaps soldiers, took me in the afternoon, and they used me extremely ill, I did not think I should be be tried to day, Mr. Taylor knows it was at mine.

Court to Profecutrix. Did you lock your door when you went out?——I locked my door, and left my key in.

Where was ſhe?—She was in the other room next the paſſage where the rabbits were.

Priſoner. I went out with her.

Profecutrix. She did not.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

937. JAMES WORTHY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 24th of September laſt, five ſilk handkerchiefs, value 20s. the property of Richard Richards.

BARBARA RICHARDS ſworn.

I keep a ſmall ſhop, ſome chandlery, ſome ſtockings, and ſome handkerchiefs, on the 24th of September I loſt five handkerchiefs from a ſhow board in my ſhop, I was ſitting in a back room behind the ſhop, ſomebody called ſtop thief, and the priſoner was ſtopped and brought back in two minutes with five ſilk handkerchiefs in his boſom, they were mine.

CHARLES BROWN ſworn.

I took the priſoner with the handkerchiefs.

(Produced and depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I picked up the handkerchiefs in a piece of paper, I am a ſailor, I have no friends within fifty miles.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped and confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

938. MATTHEW MAXWELL was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 30th day of December, 1783, two dimity waiſtcoats, value 7s. one ſilk waiſtcoat, value 7s. the property of Charles Rodden.

CHARLES RODDEN ſworn.

I keep the King's Head public houſe in Saint James's-ſtreet, I have known the priſoner for about two years and a half, he lodged in my houſe; he is a hair dreſſer; in December, 1783, towards the latter end of the month, I loſt the things mentioned in the indictment from a room where the priſoner lodged; they were taken out of a cheſt of drawers.

Was it locked?—I cannot be particular, I wore the ſattin waiſtcoat, which I have ſince found, on the Sunday before; the priſoner had been breeding a diſturbance, and I went to look at my clothes, and three waiſtcoats were miſſing; I did not ſee them put there; in the evening, when the two young men came from work, that is, the priſoner and another that lodged with him, my wife enquired about the waiſtcoats, he ſaid he knew nothing of them, my wife then told him that we could ſuſpect no other perſon but one of them two, and we begged them to get another lodging; the other young man went away, and ſometime in the week following the priſoner took another lodging; I forbid him the houſe, and he did not come there for ſome months, about ſix weeks after that a gentleman that is preſent wore one of my waiſtcoats in my houſe; my wife firſt ſaw it, and ſaid it was very much like my waiſtcoat, and the gentleman was very angry, and ſoon after left the houſe; it had ſome gold edging put round it after it went from me; about ſix weeks ago I ſaw the waiſtcoat again on this gentleman's back at my houſe that I now live in, in Dean-ſtreet, Fetter-lane; upon this we ſuſpected the priſoner; this gentleman's name is Egan; I met him again in Sydney's Alley; I ſaw him have the waiſtcoat on; I aſked him to drink a pint of beer; ſays I, George, you have uſed me very ill; you have worn that waiſtcoat out; that is mine, he ſaid I do not know it was yours, but but it was ſome time after I had it he ſaid that the priſoner gave him the duplicate; he went and took it out of pawn, then I thought it was not ſafe for me to mention it in the ſtreet with him, for fear he ſhould go out, and I went to Mr. Hyde's, which is juſt by, and brought an officer to take Egan up; then he ſwore Maxwell gave him the duplicate; the waiſtcoat had been ſcoured, there was a mark in it, but the mark is gone, here has been a mark put in it ſince, that is, K. J.

Priſoner. Why did not you detect this waiſtcoat when you firſt ſaw it? — Becauſe there was ſome gold lace upon it, and I was not ſure of it; ſince I have ſeen it a ſecond time I have been informed of it, there was one Conner who lodges in the garret, and Egan ſwore before the Juſtice that he aſked the priſoner how he came to let him have a waiſtcoat that he did not come honeſtly by, and the priſoner told him he had the duplicate from Conner.

How do you know that is your waiſtcoat? —There was a mark in it, but it is now out.

Jury. There is no mark in it, it is a common pattern.

Proſecutor. It was marked with an R. with common ink, with a pen.

Court. Then that would not waſh out without leaving an iron mould.

GEORGE EGAN ſworn.

I am a gentleman's ſervant, the laſt gentleman I lived with was Sir Richard King, I am now out of place, I have left him about three months about December, 1783, I was one day at dinner at the gate in Stafford-ſtreet, where the priſoner was, and the priſoner came out of doors; it was a very wet day; his foot ſlipped, he fell down, and dirtied himſelf very much, I took him home with me, and I ſent him ſome clean clothes to put on, he was ſo very dirty.

Did you live with any body then? —— I did not, he ſlept at my lodgings that night, the next morning, when he was going to put on his clothes, he told me, if I would accept a duplicate of a ſilk waiſtcoat he had in pawn he would make me a preſent of it, he gave me the duplicate; it was three months after before the waiſtcoat was taken out of pawn, then I took it out, as near as I can recollect, it came to ſeven ſhillings; it was not a new waiſtcoat; it was a very good one; there was a taylor with me when I took it out of pawn, and I happened to have ſome gold binding by me, and I had it put round to make it look ſmarter; about ſix weeks after I went to the proſecutor's houſe in Saint James's-ſtreet; Mrs. Rodden came into the parlour where I was, and ſaid, that waiſtcoat looks very much like one my huſband had ſtolen from him; I found myſelf ſomewhat confounded, and I told her ſhe behaved very rude; and the firſt time I met the priſoner afterwards I aſked where he got that waiſtcoat that he had given me the duplicate of.

What name was it pawned in?—I do not recollect.

How came you to keep the duplicate ſo long?—I was out of place, and it was not convenient to me to take it out of pawn before.

Jury. When the waiſtcoat was challenged, did they ſay there was a mark?—No, nor I never obſerved any mark upon it; the priſoner ſaid he had the duplicate of a young man that is here, whoſe name is Conner, and I will venture to ſay there never was a mark on this waiſtcoat in this world with ink; I had the waiſtcoat, and wore it, and went into the proſecutor's houſe, I dare ſay forty times, with the waiſtcoat on, and they never claimed it; after that, I may ſay with truth, I have been there an hundred times.

Was your coat open?——Yes, twenty times, an hundred times; after his wife ſaid it was like his, ſhe came afterwards and aſked my pardon, ſhe ſaid the ground of it was a lighter green than that which her huſband had loſt.

Was the huſband by at the time?—Yes, I heard nothing tranſpire concerning the waiſtcoat for a year and an half; but about five weeks ago I went into the proſecutor's houſe again, the waiſtcoat had got greaſy, and the lace was tarniſhed; I took it off and had had it ſcowered, when I went in this time the proſecutor's wife ſaid it was very much much like her husband's: I said I had the duplicate, I took it out of pawn. I met the profecutor in Sydney's alley, and I had the waiſtcoat on, and he aſked me to have a pint of porter; he ſaid George you uſe me extremely ill concerning the waiſtcoat; ſays I, I had the duplicate of the waiſtcoat of Maxwell; he wanted ſomebody to fetch a peace officer; I ſaid I would go to any Juſtice he thought proper; he left me in the houſe, and went down to Juſtice Hyde's; Juſtice Hyde gave an order for apprehending the priſoner, I went with a peace officer, and the priſoner was taking a glaſs of punch with ſome friends, where they had a dinner; I aſked the priſoner if he recollected giving me a duplicate of a waiſtcoat; he ſaid yes, he got the duplicate from Conner, and in conſequence of that he was committed.

JOHN CONNER ſworn.

I am a gentleman's ſervant, I know nothing about the waiſtcoat nor the duplicate.

How long have you known Eagan?—Between three and four years.

Long before this time?—Yes.

Court to Eagan. Had you ſeen Conner from the firſt time your waiſtcoat was claimed till it was taken from you?—Yes.

Did you aſk him about the duplicate?—I did, and he ſaid he knew nothing about it.

Conner. I wanted to go with Eagan to ſearch for the priſoner, at the ſame time, Eagan deſired I would mention nothing of it, as he thought there would be no more about it.

Eagan. I ſaid it would only bring us into trouble, and I beg you will ſay no more about it, I do not want to have any piece of work about it; there was one particular I forgot to mention concerning the pawnbroker, when the priſoner was brought before Juſtice Hyde the pawnbroker was ſent for that the waiſtcoat was pawned with, the profecutor was preſent, he was aſked by Juſtice Hyde did he know any thing of the waiſtcoat, he ſaid no he did not, for he had fifty of thoſe waiſtcoats in the courſe of a month, and it is impoſſible to tell one waiſtcoat from another.

Court to Eagan. What became of the priſoner, has he been always to be ſeen, and always in the way?—Yes, I never knew he was out of the way ever ſince I firſt knew him in London, which is between two and three years.

Profecutor. I have met him accidentally, he has been once or twice in the houſe afterwards, I never ſaid anything to him after he left the houſe.

Jury to Profecutor. Does the priſoner owe you anything?—Yes, he does, four or five ſhillings.

Eagan. You told me nine ſhillings, the other day.

Profecutor. It may be ſo; I told him if he would go out of the houſe I would never aſk him for a ſhilling.

Court. Did you ever aſk him for this money ſince?—No.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I lodged in this houſe, there was a great reſort of vagabonds, I and another young man that worked with me remained there about a fortnight or three weeks, they continually had ſpeaking clubs of chairmen and all ſorts; we did not approve of the lodging, and ſo we left it; the profecutor ſaid, what fault have you to find with your lodgings; I ſaid, we are diſturbed, we cannot get up in time to our work; his wife ſaid, ſhe was ſorry we were going: you will find my character good, I know nothing of the waiſtcoat.

Court. Did they voluntarily leave your houſe, or did you make them leave it?—I made them go.

Conner. I never knew the man more than ſeeing him at a public houſe, we had a pint of beer, I was in the hoſpital at the ſame time, and there was very little hopes of my recovery; he was told that I never ſhould come out; I afterwards went to Dover, to the Royal Hotel, and lived there about two months; I went from thence to Ireland for ſeven months, with a gentleman, and on my return to this kingdom the waiſtcoat was talked of again, and I ſaid it was a very hard caſe, Eagan came to me five days after I left the hoſpital.

Did you ever give the priſoner a duplicate?——No.

Did you ever pawn a ſilk waiſtcoat?——No; I deſired Eagan to come directly with me, to go to the priſoner to know whether he would ſay ſo before my face; no, ſays he, I will not drop it; I went to the hoſpital about a fortnight or three weeks after this affair happened, I was very bad.

MATTHEW MAHON ſworn.

I am a gentleman's ſervant, I have known him about a year and a half, a very honeſt man, I happened to be taking a pint of beer at the proſecutor's houſe when Mr. Egan came in, and Mrs. Rodden challenged the waiſtcoat, he denied it, and many words happened, and he went away, afterwards Mrs. Rodden ſaid, if I could ſwear to any thing I could ſwear to that, but I think there is ſomething different in the colour or ſpots, and if I could ſwear to any thing thing I could ſwear to Conner's taktaking it; the priſoner is a civil, good natured, ſober, honeſt man.

The priſoner called ſix other witneſſes who gave him a very good character.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

939. MATTHEW DELL was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Sarah the wife of John Peverill on the king's highway on the 1ſt day of October, and putting her in corporal fear and danger of her life, and feloniouſly taking from her perſon and againſt her will, one pair of linen ſheets, value 20s. three pillow caſes, value 3s. two linen ſhirts, value 12s. and three linen aprons, value 6s. a cotton night cap, value 6d. one linen ditto, value 4d. and one diaper towel, value 4d. one handkerchief, value 4d. two cambrick half handkerchiefs, value 8s. one muſlin half handkerchief, value 2s. the property of the ſaid John.

The witneſſes examined apart by Mr. Garrow's deſire.

SARAH PEVERILL ſworn.

I was robbed on the firſt of October, between eight and nine in the evening, in Beech-lane, I had a bundle of linen acroſs my arm, it was ſnatched from me, I was carrying it to one Mrs. Davis, I had had it to waſh, the priſoner ſnatched the bundle off my arm and another came and gave me a puſh after the man took the bundle, and they both run away, the man that took the bundle only ſnatched it, he did not do any thing elſe, I cried out ſtop thief as loud as I could, I ran after them, I followed them into Red Lion Market, I got ſight of them there, then they ran into Whitecroſs-ſtreet, I only prove the property.

Mr. Garrow. How long was the perſon that took your bundle out of your ſight before he was taken?——Half an hour, it was between eight and nine.

A pretty dark place?——Under a lamp.

Which of the thieftakers told you that?—I was preſent.

Have you never ſaid it was very dark?—I have not.

Where did you firſt ſee the priſoner after you loſt your bundle?——Where he was taken.

Where did you firſt ſee him?—In Cooper's-alley, where the bundle was found.

In the public-houſe?—Before they were taken into the public-houſe, when he was taken into the public houſe I was deſired to point him out, I did point him out.

Did not you, upon your oath, firſt point to ſomebody elſe?—No.

Was he ſitting in a box with other people when you went into the public houſe?—He was.

I aſk you upon your oath, whether you did not point to the man that ſat next to him firſt?——I did not.

How was this man dreſſed?—In a long white leather apron, a light coloured great-coat and light coloured lank hair.

All

All that you obſerved while he ſnatched your bundle?——Yes, I was flurried.

How long might he be with you ſnatching the bundle?—It might be the ſpace of a minute or two, he ſtepped by me before he ſnatched the bundle from me, and ſtopped me.

In what manner did he ſtop you?—He walked by me.

What account did you give the Juſtice about it?—A very true and juſt account.

What did you ſay?——I ſubſcribed the man.

Did not you ſay before the Juſtice that you believed he was the man, and that was all that you ſaid about it; for Heaven's ſake where do you live, where do you come from?——I know where I live.

Do then tell us, for that ſeems to be all you can tell us?——My abidance is in Bud's court, Briſtol-alley, Bunhill-row.

What are you?——I am a poor married hardworking woman.

JOHN GILBERT ſworn.

I was coming out of my lodgings, the corner of Sun-alley, the proſecutrix was crying for the loſs of her things, and I lighted her up the alley, ſome people belonging to the court were looking for the priſoner with lights, he was found in a ſhed, I ſaw the bundle lay between two caſks over a ſhed of Mr. Randal's in Cooper's-alley, and the priſoner was on the other ſide of the bundle between four beer puncheons.

How near was he to the bundle?--As near as I can gueſs about a yard and a half from the bundle, I jumped off the beam I ſtood on, then I got over and ſaw the priſoner there, I put the bundle into the woman's apron, the priſoner was brought over, and I took hold of his collar, the priſoner deſired we would not collar him, we took him to the Cherry-tree in Whitecroſs-ſtreet, and a conſtable was ſent for, nothing was found upon him, the woman went with me to the Rotation-office, there the priſoner denied any knowledge of the bundle; Hines took the bundle.

Mr. Garrow. This good woman tells us ſhe is a married woman?——Yes.

When did you give her the note of hand about the reward?—About what reward.

Who is the butcher?—He is at the door, John Hutchinſon.

Where was it that you and Hutchinſon and this woman's huſband had the converſation about the reward?——That was laſt Sunday at the Bull.

Was Hyam by?—No.

What he was to be cheated of his ſhare then?——I do not know, the butcher was not there with me, the huſband came to me on Sunday, and ſaid he would ſubpœna me, then I aſked him who was to pay me for my trouble, and he ſaid he would give me a note of hand for my trouble, if I would give him a note of hand for the ſhare of the reward, and he ſaid, if I would give him a note of my hand, he would give me a note of his hand the ſame, I did not ſay that I would do it, I did not ſay any thing at all to him.

You have ſaid he was concealed there, now I aſk you whether he was not there upon a natural occaſion?——I cannot ſay.

Did not you know by certain ſymptoms?——No, I did not.

Was he not undreſſed in part?——I did not ſee him.

Pray who are you Mr. Gilbert?——I am a ſervant in Red Lion market.

JOHN HUTCHINSON ſworn.

I took the priſoner between the butts.

Where were the butts?——In Mr. Ambler's yard, they were in his warehouſe, juſt adjoining to his yard.

Could any body go in?——Not without getting into a place ſeven feet high.

How was that ſhed ſhut up?——It was locked up, I ſaw the mark of his foot where he got over, there was room to get over the top of the door.

Did you ſee where the bundle was?—Between the butts juſt by.

Mr. Garrow. That was under the ſhed too?—Yes.

Was you with Gilbert at Peverell's laſt Sunday?—I was at the public houſe, and he came and ſpoke to me.

Was

Was Gilbert there?---Not along with me.

That was the time that Gilbert promiſed you the note of hand?---I told him I lived a hundred and ſixty miles from this place, and I had ſtopped all this while, and ſaid I ſhould be very glad to be ſatisfied, he ſaid, how can I ſatisfie you, I am but a poor man, I cannot ſatisfie you till it is over.

How much of the reward was he to give you when it was over?---He was not to give me any, he ſaid, if the priſoner was caſt he ſhould have the reward, and would give me ſo much a day, according to my earnings, and I would not agree to it.

You would not give up your part of the reward?--No Sir, I ſaid I would not have any hand in it.

You was to have your part of the reward?--If the priſoner was caſt I was to have my part as well as the reſt, and if he was not caſt then I was to have nothing, unleſs you gentlemen pleaſe to give me ſomething.

JOHN BRISCOE ſworn.

I was coming up Whitecroſs-ſtreet; the firſt of October, between eight and nine, I heard the cry of ſtop thief; I immediately ſaw the priſoner run out of Red-lion Market into Whitecroſs-ſtreet, with a bundle under his arm, he was taken in Cooper's Alley, but there were ſo many ſtood in the Alley I could not ſee him, but I remarked his white leather apron, and his white lank hair; he was taken into a public houſe, and there was a kind of an attempt to reſcue him, and he was taken to the Juſtice; I am ſure he is the ſame man.

THOMAS HYAMS ſworn.

I had this bundle at the Rotation-office, where I carried the priſoner; it has been in my poſſeſſion ever ſince.

Mr. Garrow. Why did not you go out with the reſt of the witneſſes? — I was not deſired to go out.

Court to Proſecutrix. Is that your bundle? —Yes; the ſheets are marked, the bundle contains the things mentioned in the indictment, they were delivered to me to waſh.

Do you know the perſon of the priſoner at all?——Yes.

Do you know whether he is the man that ſtopped you?——Yes.

Are you ſure of it?——Yes.

Is he the man that ſnatched the bundle, or gave you the puſh? —— The man that ſnatched the bundle.

Have you never ſaid that you did not know the perſon, that it was too dark to ſee them, and that they run away?——I never did.

Priſoner. When I was brought into the public houſe there was ſeveral ſitting in the box, and the proſecutrix was aſked who was the perſon, and ſhe pointed to another perſon, then Hyams ſaid directly no, that is the perſon, then ſhe ſaid I had a pair of white trowſers on.

Court. Can you give any account how you came into this ſhed?— Yes, my Lord, I was eaſing myſelf.

JOHN METCALF ſworn.

I live in Red-lion Market, I am a taylor, I live with my father, he is a taylor.

Do you remember the evening this good woman was robbed?——Yes, I was in the two pair of ſtairs, I heard the woman cry out below that ſomebody had robbed her, I opened the two pair of ſtair window, and I ſaw her cry out, ſomebody came to her, and aſked what ſort of chaps they were that robbed her, ſhe ſaid ſhe did not know, ſhe ſaid one of them ran down the Alley, and the other acroſs the market, ſomebody ſaid to her, ſhould you know either of them again, Oh! dear, I do not know that I ſhould, ſhe ſaid, for I am ruined; it was a ſtar light evening, and ſhe ſtood under a lamp, there is a lamp adjoining to the houſe.

The priſoner called two witneſſes to his character.

GUILTY.

Of ſtealing, but not violently.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

940. JOHN

940. JOHN HURLEY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 24th of September laſt, two men's linen ſhirts, value 4s. the property of Sarah Hall.

SARAH HALL ſworn.

I live in New James-ſtreet, Manchester-ſquare; I loſt theſe ſhirts the 24th of September, out of my kitchen, about two I found the priſoner in the kitchen, with one of them concealed under the waſhing ſtool, the ſhirt was juſt by him, I left it at the top of the great horſe in the ſame room.

Was he a ſtranger?—Yes.

Can you tell how long he had been there?—No.

Where had you been?—No where but in the fore kitchen, which is adjoining to it.

How could he get in?—He might come in through the ſaſh window which opens into the yard, he might either come in at the ſaſh window, or over the wall, I do not know which; the ſhirt is here; it is marked D. P. my ſon came in before the priſoner got from under the ſtool, I made no alarm till he came, then he made him come up.

THOMAS HALL ſworn.

On Monday the 24th of September laſt, my mother ſaid, here, here, I went into the kitchen, and pulled the priſoner from under the ſtool; the priſoner is the perſon.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was ſtanding in Oxford Market, and there was a gentlewoman came to buy ſome fiſh, and ſhe told me to take it, and ſhe would give me two-pence, and coming back a woman was looking at the window of the houſes, and I aſked her who ſhe wanted, ſhe ſaid Mrs. Smith, and aſked me to enquire for one Mrs. Smith, a waſherwoman, the ſtairs being dark, I tumbled juſt by the waſhing ſtool, I was not found under the waſhing ſtool; I work at plaiſterer's work, my mother was here yeſterday, ſhe did not think my trial would come on to-day; my father is at home; I am between twelve and thirteen.

Jury. How far was the horſe from the ſtool?——A very little way, quite cloſe.

COURT.

Recommended to mercy by the Jury.

Court. How long have you been in priſon?——Since the 23d of September.

Will your father, or any of your friends, come and ſpeak for you?——I expect my mother.

Privately whipped,

And to be ſent to his father and mother.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

941. MARY LUDLOW was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 19th day of September laſt, one cloth coat, value 10s. one waiſtcoat, value 14s. a pair of leather ſhoes, value 1s. a pair of buckles, value 6d. one ſilk handkerchief, value 3s. and two linen ditto, value 2s. the property of George Little.

GEORGE LITTLE ſworn.

I am a taylor; I have known the priſoner ſeven or eight years by ſight; ſhe lived three hundred yards from me, on the 18th of September, about eleven, this priſoner picked me up in the ſtreet, and I went home to her lodgings, and I agreed to ſleep with her all night; I gave her three ſhillings in money; about half after three ſhe waked me, and aſked me where my clothes were, I ſaid I was ſurpriſed at the queſtion; I told her I put them on the table; ſays ſhe, your coat and waiſtcoat are gone; where are your ſhoes, I told her I put them under the bed, I immediately got up, and ſhe turned up the bed, there was no ſhoes, nor buckles, and my handkerchiefs were gone, I never heard any more of them.

Was ſhe in bed with you when ſhe waked you?—No, ſhe was not.

Did any other people lodge in the ſame room?——No, it is a room by itſelf; when ſhe told me the things were gone, I aſked her, what is become of them? ſhe ſaid ſaid ſhe did not know, and if I had any ſuſpicion of her, I had better call the watch; I gave charge to the watchman, and ſhe was committed; I have never found any thing at all, ſhe declared herſelf innocent of the affair.

Do the people of the houſe let rooms to other people?——No, it is a room on the ground floor by itſelf, there is no paſſage through the room.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was going home laſt Sunday was a month very late, between eleven and twelve, I took a piece of candle to the room facing where I live, and this gentleman was drinking, I ſat myſelf down about five minutes, he bid me ſtop, he ſaid he wanted to ſpeak to me; he followed me out in the entry, and aſked me where the young body was that he lived with, I told him I did not know; but ſhe was in bed with another man; I came down to the woman along with him, ſhe told him ſhe was not at home; then he aſked her for ſomething to drink, I went out and fetched them a quartern of liquor, this gentleman drank, and went out in the yard, and ſtaid half an hour, then he came in and aſked me, as he could not find his own young woman, if I would ſleep with him; I told him no, I thought it was very ungenerous, as he had a young body of his own and a child; he chucked me on the bed, I had been drinking, I had not power to get up, I fell aſleep, I waked and the window was wide open; I called the watchman to ſearch the place; I am as innocent of the things as the child unborn; I have known him for above ten years; I have lived ſix years in the pariſh where his father and mother lived.

Does that window open directly to the ſtreet?——Yes, Sir, it is about as high as from this board from the ground; I do not know where he put the clothes, I had been drinking, I was really ſo much in liquor I could not tell; he laid acroſs the bed, with his breeches and ſtockings on.

Proſecutor. She had not been into bed to my knowledge, I locked the door before I went to ſleep, there was no window open at all when I waked; when I went to bed I faſtened the door myſelf, and locked it, and put the key in my right hand coat pocket.

Jury. Was you ſober?——I was not when I went into that place, I was much in liquor at the firſt of it.

Court to Jury. You obſerve ſhe ſtaid in the room, and went and fetched the watchman.

Court to Proſecutor. How long have you known this woman?——About eight or nine years.

Was the woman in liquor?——I cannot tell.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

942. JAMES FORD was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 25th day of September, three ſilver teaſpoons, value 7s. and one glaſs ſmelling-bottle, value 3d. the property of William Stoughton.

WILLIAM STOUGHTON ſworn.

I live in Charlotte-ſtreet, Rathbone-place, I am a tin-plate worker and brazier, the priſoner came to my houſe with one Captain Kirkland, to dine with me; Mr. Kirkland lodges in my apartments, it was about two o'clock; I underſtand that the priſoner was an intimate acquaintance of the Captain's, they went up ſtairs; Mrs. Kirkland came down to me, dinner was near ready, and aſked me if it was agreeable to aſk the Captain's friend to dine with me that day, as it was a very wet day; I never ſaw the priſoner before, Mrs. Kirkland ſometimes boards with me, I ſaid, if you think there is ſufficient for dinner, I have no objection; ſhe ſaid, I dare ſay there will, if not we will ſend for ſomething for the ſervants, in about half an hour dinner was brought up ſtairs; the priſoner ſeemed to make himſelf very agreeable with the Captain, I really thought he was a particular acquaintance of the Captain's, they were talking of being on board together, and the priſoner ſaid he was on board when Prince William Henry was on board. ſoon after this, dinner came upon table; we dined in the dining-room which Mrs. Kirkland rents of me; after talking a few words after dinner was over, we drank ſome wine together, the Captain wiſhed to go down, and the priſoner ſaid, I think myſelf rather ſleepy, and he went to ſet down on the ſopha by a child of mine; he ſeemed to be quite drowſy; I went out and ſaid I will come home to tea; when I returned in about two hours, Ford was not there; and I heard there was a ſpoon or two miſſing, and I ſaid, I dare ſay it is among the things, the priſoner never returned; when the Captain awaked he ſent for me, and told me there is ſome ſpoons miſſing, and I went to the priſoner's apartments, No. 46, in upper Mount-ſtreet, Groſvenor-ſquare; I knocked at the door, and the landlady of the houſe opened the door, I aſked if Ford was within; ſhe ſaid ſhe believed he was, but he was in bed; this was the ſame evening, about nine; ſhe called him ſeveral times; nobody anſwered, I went upſtairs, in company with Captain Kirkland, and we knocked at the door ſeveral times, and his wife ſaid who is there, ſhe got out of bed and opened the door, ſhe went into bed again; then we went into the room; ſays the Captain why did not you return to tea? ſays he, I went home; ſays the Captain, why did not you bring the three ſpoons? ſays he I have no ſpoons; the other ſaid, if you do not produce them, I will charge the watch immediately, he got up and opened the drawer out of a cheſt of drawers, and pulled out the three ſpoons, which I ſhall now produce to you; I was cloſe by at the time; they were mine, there is the cypher upon them, here is the fellow to them, I ſwear to them; I miſſed a ſmelling bottle, which the conſtable has, which I miſſed the ſame time from my apartments.

the

This man was a ſtranger to you?——I never ſaw him before in my life.

What was he?—He repreſented himſelf to be a ſeafaring man, the Captain had a direction in his pocket to know where to find him.

Where do you ſuppoſe theſe ſpoons were taken from?——I ſaw them at dinner time; my little boy generally eats with a ſpoon, and there was never a one laid for him, I goes to the cupboard where theſe ſpoons lay, and I took one from the four and left three, and the others were afterwards miſſed; the others were in the cupboard when I left the room.

Mr. Knowles, Priſoner's Counſel. How was the priſoner when he came in, did he appear in liquor at all?——I believe he had been drinking.

I believe he drank a good deal too while he was at your houſe?—They might drink in the whole company about two bottles of wine.

Who were there?——A gentleman that lodges and boards with me, my wife, Mrs. Kirkland, the Captain, and the priſoner.

The ladies did not drink much wine of courſe; do you happen to know who you left in the room?——Mrs. Kirkland left the room, and my wife was up and down ſtairs, the priſoner ſaid he was very ſleepy, and ſat upon the ſopha.

Was not your little boy by the ſide of him?——Yes.

What age is he?——Two years and an half.

Did not you obſerve the child playing with the ſpoons?——No.

You did not hear at the priſoner's lodgings whether the priſoner's wife put the ſpoons into the bureau?——No.

CAPTAIN KIRKLAND ſworn.

I know the priſoner is the man that ſtole theſe ſpoons of Mr. Stoughton.

I underſtand he came there with you?—Yes.

How long did you know him?—I never knew him before that day, I came from the Hungerford coffee-houſe, where I laid all night, I had been the night before at Oliphants phants getting this hat, I had a bill of Exchange for fifty-five pounds ſome odd ſhillings, which I wanted to deliver to my agent, and going to Lime-ſtreet, Leiceſter-fields croſſing the ſtreet over to the Haymarket, I found the priſoner going up the ſtreet, and aſked him the neareſt way to Lime-ſtreet, Leiceſter-fields, which he ſaid, he knew perfectly well it was not all out of his way, that he was going that way, and that he would conduct me; we went there, and at the corner of the ſtreet, he aſked me to have ſome wine and water, I ſaid, I had no objection, at the ſame time, I would go to my agent's, and deliver my bill, and return, which I did, and from that time I went from houſe to houſe, till ſuch time as the man endeavoured to get me intoxicated, with that we came to Mr. Stoughton's houſe, there the priſoner, at the corner of this houſe gave me his direction "No. 46. "Upper Mount-ſtreet, Groſvenor-ſquare, "James Ford;" and in giving me his direction, he told me Edward Ford, ſo I put an E. down, and in contradiction to that, he told me his name was not Edward Ford, he invited me to dine with him, and he told me he had a fillet of veal, I ſaid, I was very glad to dine with any body in the ſea line, I would; he came to Mr. Stoughton's and dined, and I told him I was obliged to go to Mr. Stoughton's at any rate, and I begged of him to conduct me down there, as he had to Lime-ſtreet, when we got there, Mr. Stoughton and a lady that I knew were ſitting at dinner, and I aſked the priſoner to take a dinner along with me, which he readily accepted of; after dinner we had ſome wine; I found myſelf fatigued, and I wiſhed to lay down, and I left him in the dining room, and did not return till I was informed by the proſecutor theſe things were gone, then the priſoner was gone out of the houſe.

Did you go with Mr. Stoughton to his lodgings?——Yes, I found him there, and I made him get out of bed, and deliver them to Mr. Stoughton, he opened the drawer, and took them out.

Mr. Knowles. You were not very ſober then, and I believe you are ſo much uſed to get drunk, that you do not know when you are ſober?——We had been drinking at two or three different houſes.

Did not you find the priſoner by that direction which he gave you?—Yes.

I believe this drinking of your's brought you acquainted?—It did not, our acquaintance proceeded from our going to the Haymarket.

The reaſon you did not dine with this man was becauſe you gave him an invitation to dine with you?—Yes.

Do not you know that the priſoner was ſo intoxicated, he knew nothing about it?——No, I do not remember anything of the circumſtance, I begged he would excuſe my laying down.

Was he denied to you at all?——Yes, he was denied inſomuch the woman of the houſe ſaid, that I could not ſee him, that he was in bed.

She did not deny his being in the houſe?——No.

JAMES PARKE ſworn.

I am a conſtable, I ſearched the priſoner in the watch-houſe, after I took him into cuſtody, and I found this ſmelling bottle in his waiſtcoat pocket, I aſked him how he came by it, he ſaid he did not know.

Proſecutor. I cannot ſwear to it, I only ſwear that one was miſſing, that is all I know.

The Remainder of this Trial in the next Part, which will be publiſhed in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex,

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 19th of OCTOBER, 1785, and the following Days;

Being the EIGHTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER VIII. PART IV.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the City of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of Janet Ford.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

On Sunday morning I was coming from the veſtry clerks, near Charing-croſs, on my return I met this gentleman, he aſked me his way to Lime-ſtreet; I ſaid, I would ſhew him, I walked with him to the end of Lime-ſtreet, then he aſked me if I knew where he could get ſomething to drink, I ſaid, there was a public houſe at the corner, he wiſhed ſome brandy and water, I condeſcended to go along with him, I told him I ſhould rather not drink, he preſſed me ſeveral times to drink; I ſaid, if I did drink any thing, it muſt be white wine and bitters, he called for a gill of wine for me, and he drank the brandy and water, he went to his agent's, and I had a ſecond gill of wine, then he produced a letter, where there was a woman's addreſs, that lived at a hair-dreſſer's, in Glanville-ſtreet, going along it rained, he went into a public houſe, and called for pen, ink and paper, wrote a letter or two, then he drank ſome white wine and water, then he went to No. 13. in George-ſtreet, where there were two or three women, I waited ſometime in the paſſage, I ſent him ſeveral meſſages, at laſt a woman opened the door to me, and the Captain was laid on the bed with his clothes on, and a woman by the ſide of him, I waited ten minutes longer, he then ſeemed to be at a loſs, where to go, I told him that I had ſome roaſt veal at home that day, and he was extremely welcome to dine with me; he called for a coach, and drove to that gentleman's houſe, in Goudge-ſtreet, then he introduced me up ſtairs, and introduced a decanter of brandy, I was quite intoxicated, prior to this I gave him my addreſs, and there he found me; the woman of the houſe I preſume is here, who can ſupport every thing I ſay reſpecting of this; I came home, and as ſoon as I came home, I was immediately put to bed: I found when they left me in the room at the proſecutor's houſe, there was a female child left in the room with me, how I came by this property, I do not know, the Captain went and deſerted me, and laid on his own bed, and how I got home I cannot tell; here are ſeveral reſpectable characters who have known me twenty years, and never knew me guilty of the ſmalleſt thing, till this unfortunate affair; when they came to charge me with this matter, theſe gentlemen had both been in the room a conſider-able

ble time before I came to my ſenſes, they drew out all my clothes, in conſequence of that I ſearched my pockets, I immediately reſigned them to that gentleman; from nine in the morning, or thereabouts, I had been drinking brandy and wine and bitters, till he was ſo drunk, he was obliged to go to bed in his boots, and it was not extraordinary that I ſhould be drunk.

Court. Do you deſire Mr. Stoughton ſhould be aſked in what manner the ſpoons were produced?——Yes.

Proſecutor. I have related it already; immediately as the Captain had told him about the ſpoons, he began to laugh, the Captain ſaid he would not be laughed at, he ſaid I have none, he immediately jumped out of bed, opened a cheſt of drawers, put in his hand, whether in a pocket or not I do not know, and produced the ſpoons; then he downed on his knees, and begged pardon, and hoped I would not proſecute him.

GRACIA JACKSON ſworn.

The priſoner lodged with me; he was ſtrongly recommended to me by a perſon that had known him a many years; he came home at night intoxicated in liquor, which I never ſaw him before, between ten and eleven the proſecutor and another gentleman came and knocked at the door, and aſked if Ford did not live there, I ſaid, yes, I ſaid, I believed they were both in bed; they deſired me to go up with Captain ſomebody's compliments, but I cannot tell his name, I went up firſt and knocked at the door, and the priſoner's wife is very hard of hearing, and I could not make either of them anſwer, I came down again and ſaid they were both of them faſt aſleep; the Captain then deſired me to go up with a light which I did, the proſecutor ſaid I will wake them, after ſometime his wife came to the door, and aſked what the gentlemen wanted, the Captain ſaid, Captain ſuch an one wanted to ſpeak with him, ſhe ſaid it muſt be a miſtake; the priſoner lay on his left ſhoulder, the Captain to the beſt of my knowledge, went and ſhook him in this manner, and ſaid Mr. Ford! awake! he opened his eyes, and could not for ſometime make out what it was, Mrs. Ford deſired me to withdraw, which I did; they came down ſtairs ſoon after, when the Captain came down ſtairs, I ſaid to him, Sir, I am affraid here is ſome eruption, what may it be; the Captain aſked me how Ford behaved, I told him he was exceedingly well recommended, he came to me on the 17th day of September, that was the 9th day.

Mr. Knowles. When he came to your houſe in the evening, do you think he had any ſenſe of what he did?——I do not think he had, I do not from my heart, he could not get up ſtairs or ſcarce go along the paſſage.

Mrs. WILLINGTON ſworn.

I have known the priſoner between two and three years, I never heard any thing of him but a very honeſt character, he has lived with Sir William Wake, and Sir Thomas Burton, I believe he was diſcharged from the ſervice of Sir Thomas Burton when Lady Burton died, and ſince that he has been in the country to ſee his friends, he bore a very good character as far as ever I heard.

Court. Had you any opportunity of hearing any thing about him?—I am a laundreſs and I waſhed his linen all the time.

Do you know whether he was ever at ſea?—No Sir, not to my knowledge, he always paid me very honeſt.

——— PALLARD ſworn.

I have known the priſoner about ſixteen months, he has lived ſervant with Sir William Wake, he has lodged at my houſe in the capacity of valet and butler, I never knew any harm of him.

——— STOBIN ſworn.

I live in Adam-ſtreet, Portman-ſquare, I have known him between three and four years, he lived with me about ſix or ſeven months, he behaved very genteel, I never ſaw him in liquor, he always paid me, I thought and found him an honeſt man.

——— FISHER

——— FISHER sworn.

I live in Saint Alban's-ſtreet, I am a fruiterer and green-grocer, I have known the priſoner nineteen years, two gentlemen lodged with me and the priſoner was ſervant to one of them, he was very honeſt and ſober, I never ſaw him fuddled, I always heard a good character of him.

Do you know whether he has ever been at ſea?——I never heard that he had.

——— MOULD sworn.

I am a hair-dreſſer in Oxford-ſtreet, I have known the priſoner eight or nine years, as good a character as ever I heard of a man in my life, according to his profeſſion as a ſervant, much reſpected by people that knew him, I have known him in ſeveral places of truſt.

——— LEWIS sworn.

I am a hair-dreſſer, I have known him about eight years, I have always underſtood he was a very honeſt man, I never heard any thing to the contrary in my life, I have known many acquaintance of his, he always bore a very good character as a very honeſt man, he was a gentleman's butler.

——— TIMBERLY sworn.

I live in Oxendon-ſtreet, I am a wax and tallow chander, during the time I have known him he has lived in families I have ſerved, and I never heard any thing to the contrary, but he was a very honeſt man.

Court to Stoughton. You ſaid ſomething in the courſe of your evidence in converſation between the captain and him, of the captain's ſaying you muſt know me?---He ſaid he was on board the Warwick, captain Elphinſtone, at the time that Prince William was on board the ſhip, the captain immediately replied, then you muſt know me, for we laid anchored off there by her, you muſt know me ſaid he, I viſited at the port frequently.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

943. JAMES ROOK and JAMES JORDAN were indicted for that they, on the 22d of September laſt, feloniouſly did aſſault one James Stewart on the King's highway, and did then and there demand his monies, with a felonious intent his monies from his perſon and againſt his will, feloniouſly to ſteal, take, and carry away.

JAMES STEWART sworn.

On the 22d of laſt September, I was coming home through Wellcloſe-ſquare, about half paſt ten or rather better, it was on a Thurſday night; the two priſoners came up to me, one laid hold of one ſide and the other of the other ſide, they ſaid, "it did not ſignify, money they wanted, and money they muſt have." They took hold of me by the lappels, they ſaid no more to me; I thought of laying hold of them, and calling out watch, but upon a ſecond reflection, I threw my arms againſt one, and extended them, and drove the other againſt the wall, and called out watch, with that one of them recovered himſelf and gave me a ſtroke under the eye, which gave me a black eye, they ran, and I after them, and by Nephine-ſtreet, one of them turned down, and two or three watchmen were gathered together, and they took Rook, and I went after Jordan.

Are you ſure the other man is the ſame perſon?——I think he is the ſame.

Can you undertake to ſwear poſitively that he is?——I certainly can now or I would not have ſworn at firſt, he was not out of my ſight five minutes before he was brought to the watch-houſe, it was a moon-light night.

Are you quite ſure of Rook's perſon?--I think it is the ſame perſon.

Thinking alone is not ſufficient, can you undertake to ſay with certainty it is the ſame perſon?—I poſitively can.

JOSHUA GRAHAM sworn.

I belong to the liberty of the Tower of London, on the night of the 22d I ſat up to look after the watchmen, I ſat the watch at ten, and I went out at the half hour with the the watchmen, not the way that he went but another way, and I was up at the further end of Grace's alley, talking with another officer; and I went into a house about five minutes, and then the man was gone from the box, I went to the watch-house and went in, and they said they had got a man, a thief, I enquired who gave charge, the profecutor faid he did; the prifoner Jordan was then in the watch-houfe, and he faid he charged him with intent to rob him and aflault him; I took him and fearched him and found nothing upon him but a fhut knife, a pocket knife, and I think I recollect nothing but two fixpences or two fhillings, I know one of them had two fhillings and the other had two fixpences and fome halfpence; before I had done fearching him Rook was brought in, the gentleman faid directly that was the other, he could pofitively fwear to him; nothing was found upon him only a common knife, and fome filver.

GEORGE TYLER fworn.

On the 22d of laft month about half after ten or better, I heard a great noife crying out watch, I went and looked down Grace's-alley, and I faw the prifoner Jordan crying ftop thief, and the profecutor was after him, and he came up and faid he was the man, and pofitively he could fwear to him.

What did he fay the prifoner did?--That he offered to rob him.

LLEWELLIN JONES fworn.

I heard a noife and I ran after the prifoner Rook, he cried ftop thief, and in Virginia-ftreet a man came out, one of the watchmen hit him over the leg, and I came up and took him, he faid do not ufe me ill for I have hurt nobody, I faid, what did you run for, he faid there were a good many run as well as me; I took him to Wellclofe-fquare and put him in the watch-houfe, there was the profecutor, who faid directly, that is one of the men that ftopped me.

Mr. Garrow, Prifoner's Counfel. My Lord, I beg leave to trouble the Court with a few obfervations on the indictment; I have forbore to ask a fingle queftion of any of the witneffes, becaufe it feems to me to be the fhorteft way to take your Lordfhip's opinion at this ftage of the bufinefs: this offence, or rather the offence intending to be described in the indictment, arifes on an act of parliament made in the 7th and 8th years of the late King: and from the preamble of that act coupled with the enacting clauſe of it, it feems to me to be clearly decifive that this indictment cannot be fuftained; it recites, that many of the King's fubjects have been put in great fear and danger, and that the punifhment of fuch offenders, (that is, of offenders who aſſaulted the King's fubjects with intent to rob, and put them in fear and danger of their lives) was not fufficient. My Lord, I am perfectly confcious that I am addreffing myfelf to a Court that know perfectly well what is meant by aſſaulting and putting in fear, and that it conftitutes a highway robbery; now this preamble fays, this is with intention to rob; thofe acts of parliament therefore were not intended to protect perfons from bare larcenies from the perfon, but were intended to meet a new fpecies of offence, where perfons with arms, or by violent menaces, or by force, which might on perfons of a firm and found mind produce fuch terror as to cauſe them to part with their property, did aſſault the King's fubjects with intent to rob; and the legiſlature thought that this was an offence fit to be puniſhed in fome feverer fort; therefore they inflicted the fentence of tranſportation: then the entering clauſe goes on to fay, that this penalty fhould apply to perfons who fhould either with offenfive weapons, or by menaces demand any money or goods, with felonious intent to rob, or commit robbery upon fuch perfon or perfons to whom fuch menaces fhould be applied. My Lord, my objection is firſt, that there is no menace of the fort defcribed by this act of parliament in this indictment.

Court. You have dropped one part of the act of parliament, which adds "or ſhall by any forcible or violent manner demand" theſe are the words upon which the preſent indictment is framed.

Mr. Garrow. Then, my Lord, in the firſt place I take the liberty of ſaying, upon this evidence it is entirely impoſſible for the Jury to find that there has been an aſſault in a forcible or violent manner; the evidence of the proſecutor was this, that he was either met or overtaken, or found himſelf in the way of the priſoners, and one of them made uſe of this expreſſion, "money we want, money we muſt have." Now I need not ſtate to the Jury that that expreſſion is perfectly equivocal, it is the language of threat, of menace, or the language of ſupplication, of indigence in the mouth of a beggar; there is no ſort of pretence that this was accompanied by any force, or by any indication on the part of the perſon aſking, that he intended to diſtinguiſh his application from that of a beggar; a man earneſt for a bit of bread, might addreſs the perſon of whom he ſought relief by laying his hand on any part of the body, and moſt naturally on the ſhoulder of ſuch perſon; But ſtill, my Lord, I have a clear and palpable objection, becauſe the indictment ſtates this, and this only, becauſe it ſtates that it was with a felonious intent his monies from his perſon and againſt his will feloniouſly to ſteal, take and carry away; that is the deſcription of a ſimple larceny. I take the liberty of obſerving that it was not to protect perſons from ſimple larceny, but from that higher offence, and in order to the conſtitution of which, there muſt be a threat applied to the perſon from whom the money is demanded: this indictment does not ſtate in the words of the act of parliament, that this was with intent to rob or to commit robbery; and it ſeems not to have been enough for the legiſlature to have contented itſelf with one expreſſion; but leſt any man of leſs ſenſe than all thoſe who conſtitute this Court are bleſſed with, ſhould miſtake; the legiſlature ſeems to have been anxious to have pinned down the ſenſe, and to have marked its meaning ſo, that no man could poſſibly miſtake it, for it goes on to ſay, "with intent to rob, or with intent to commit robbery," marking it as contra-diſtinguiſhed from an attempt to commit ſimple larceny. My Lord, I contend on the part of the priſoners, that it is incumbent on the proſecutor to purſue this act of parliament in its very letter; he has not done ſo, he has not charged that they did it with a felonious intent to commit a robbery, or that he meant to take his goods forcibly or violently: I do not mean that the indictment ſhould neceſſarily have found in it, the words with a felonious intent to rob him, or to commit robbery; but this I contend, it is clearly and indiſpenſably neceſſary, that upon the indictment there ſhould be a clear and unequivocal deſcription of an intent to commit an highway robbery: now here is a clear deſcription of an intent to commit larceny, but I defy any man with legal notions about him to ſay, here is the deſcription of a highway robbery: your Lordſhip knows there muſt be fear, or at leaſt there ſhould be ſuch a perſonal attack upon a man that a firm man might be put in fear, and part with his property, or have it taken from him; and this indictment deſcribes it to be with a felonious intent, feloniouſly to ſteal, take and carry away his goods; that is a clear deſcription of larceny. My Lord, I am aſhamed to have taken up the time of the Court ſo long, I conclude with ſubmitting to the Court, there muſt be a clear deſignation of an intent to commit a robbery.

Court. I will firſt leave it to the Jury, and if any doubt is entertained, I will mention it to the learned Judges, and if they entertain anydoubt, the caſe ſhall be reſerved. I think it would be more correct if the words by force or violence were added: as to the other point, if the Jury are of opinion the priſoners meant to beg and not to rob, I ſhall direct an acquittal.

Mr. Garrow. My Lord, I have no objection to your Lordſhip's purpoſe, and I am ſure, that after what I have experienced ſo often of indulgence, I ſhall be forgiven if I make

I make this obſervation: I obſerve that the mode in which it might be attempted to reconcile the indictment to the ſtatute is this, by taking in the whole deſcription that might be collected out of the indictment; but I ſhall take the liberty of ſubmitting to this Court, that you cannot look further back than beyond the word intent, I take it that the other is a diſtinct part of the offence, that is, the aſſault, in a forcible and violent manner, of demanding money: the other part the Jury are bound to find, namely, that it was with a felonious intent to rob, that feloniouſly, and againſt his will, and by force, they took the goods: therefore, it ſeems to me as if it was impoſſible to couple the two parts of the indictment, ſo as to make up one perfect whole to ſatisfy the act of parliament.

The priſoner Rooke called two witneſſes, who gave him a very good character, and ſaid he was a midſhipman on board the Bellamont Eaſt Indiaman.

The priſoner Jordan called one witneſs, who gave him a very good character.

JAMES ROOKE, JAMES JORDAN, } GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

944. JOHN CLEVERLEY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 14th day of October, fifty-ſix pounds weight of French plumbs, value 27s. and one deal box, value 6d. the property of Morris Thomas.

MORRIS THOMAS ſworn.

I am one of the watchmen of the quays, I take care of the merchants property; laſt Friday morning the priſoner came down Smart's Quay, next Billingſgate, I told him it was not a proper place, therefore he muſt depart, he went away rather unwillingly, it was about half after three; he had a box of plumbs; I am anſwerable for all ſorts of goods that are loſt, I have paid above a hundred pounds for deficiencies.

Jury. Do you know the marks?—— F. M. with F. P. at the bottom.

Court. Do you know what the cargo is that you are watching always, whether they are plumbs, currants, or raiſins?—— Yes.

How are you paid?——Half a crown for every twenty-four hours, which is but five farthings an hour.

GEORGE THOMAS ſworn.

I am employed by my father to look after this fruit, and laſt Saturday was a week, between ſeven and eight, the priſoner came down and got in where theſe French plumbs were, I got a lanthorn, and got him down, on Sunday morning he came the ſecond time, and attempted to go up there, and I again drove him away, I ſaw no more of him till I ſaw him at the Juſtices; I knew him to be the ſame man that I had ſeen loitering about the quays before.

EDWARD DOUBLEDAY ſworn.

I took the priſoner with this box; he was put into the priſon which joins to the watch-houſe, and he broke into the watch-houſe, and made himſelf a fire by himſelf, and locked the people out; when we went to take him to the Juſtice's, he boated for an hour; the box was owned by Thomas; this is the box; he would not go to the watch-houſe, he ſaid he was going to his lodgings.

Priſoner. I do not know what they ſay about it, I am ſure.

What countryman are you?— An American.

What did you do with that box?—I was going to take it home to my lodgings.

Where did you get it?——I got it down pretty nigh down the Cuſtom-houſe Quays ſomewhere, where he ſays, I believe.

How came you to think you might take a box from that place and carry it to your lodgings?

lodgings?——I was walking about ſeveral times, and ſaw the watchmen all aſleep, and I thought they were not fit to take care of things. I had loſt a half-penny worth of bread, and I thought I would try what I could do with the watchmen, ſuch watchmen as go to ſleep; I did not mean to rob any further than to take the box, I did not mean to ſell it, nor to make a property of it, only to ſee if I could frighten the watchmen a bit; I ſhipped in Captain Califf's ſhip, he was the owner of the ſhip; I was kicked out of doors, and taken up by the watchmen, by half a dozen of them, armed with cutlaſſes, they told me I was mad; I walked myſelf about, and ſaw what was going on, and I thought it was better to walk about than to ſerve Cæſar, or any of his works; I have been to ſea ſeven years this laſt ſummer, the beginning of September I came here in the Friendſhip, Captain Samuel Milford.

Where is that ſhip now?——I believe ſhe is in the river, if I do not miſtake.

How long have you been on ſhore?——Almoſt a twelvemonth, I was on board a vaſt many ſhips working them out, lumping; I always paid my way, I lodged in one place for ten months, they told me I was mad, and ſent thouſands of people after me to murder me.

Court to Morris Thomas. Did you know this man before?——I do not know that I ſaw him before that morning, but he is well known to be upon the quays before.

George Thomas. I have ſeen him frequently there, I never ſaw him work nor ever ſaw him go to work when they called to work.

Watchman. He got into the watch-houſe and there he faſtened himſelf in, and made himſelf maſter of the watch-houſe, and made a great fire.

Jury. Are they all the ſame numbers?——No, various numbers, but the ſame marks.

Court to Thomas. Was you on duty that night?——I was, the whole night, I turned him off the quay that morning.

GUILTY.

Recommended to mercy by the Jury.

To be fined 1s. and impriſoned one month in Newgate.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

945. JOSEPH OSBORN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 20th of September laſt, ſix razors mounted with ſilver, value 21s. ſix horn box combs, value 1s. three other combs, value 6d. ſix pair of curling irons, value 2d. one caſe for a razor and ſtrap, value 6d. one tooth pick caſe, value 1d. a powder box, value 3d. a ſmall inlaid box, value 6d. a ſhaving box, value 3d. one other box, value 6d. one pincuſhion box, value 3d. a rouge box, value 3d. four bundles of long hair, value 5s. one German ſteel razor, value 4d. two pair of ſciſſars, value 4d. one tortoiſeſhell caſe, value 5d. one pot of orange pomatum, value 3d. one pot of ſoap, value 2d. one ſheet of court plaiſter, value 3d. fifteen pair of rollers, value 12d. a ſilk roſe for the hair, value 2d. one pair of ſtockings, value 6d. one waſh-ball, value 2d. two powder machines, value 6d. ſix tortoiſeſhell combs, value 5s. ſix tortoiſeſhell combs, value 5s. and ſix tortoiſeſhell buckling combs, value 5s. the property of Charles Sharpe.

CHARLES SHARPE ſworn.

I live in Fleet-ſtreet, I am a perfumer, at the time of the robbery I was at Cambridge, I can only prove ſome part of the property.

THOMAS BISH ſworn.

About the 20th of September laſt, I was at breakfaſt at Mr. Wright's in Fleet-ſtreet, and their bar-maid came in, and ſaid, a man man had been enquiring for Mr. Sharpe, knowing him I went out, and he deſcribed the young lad, and I went to Mr. Thompſon, the conſtable, and took him up to Mr. Sharpe's houſe, I took the priſoner who was Mr. Sharpe's boy, and we went and ſearched his box, and we found the things mentioned in the indictment, the priſoner then told us of a lad named Riley, we went and found ſome more goods in his box, in a court in Leadenhall-ſtreet, the priſoner's box was in a garret in Mr. Sharpe's houſe, locked, he had the key in his pocket; here is a liſt of the things found in his box which was written at the time, they were delivered to the conſtable.

EDWARD PARMINTER ſworn.

A man came into our ſhop, and brought in ſome combs, which he ſaid he had of our boys, I took the combs, and the man's direction, he lives in Biſhopſgate-ſtreet, I have not his name, I took Riley's direction, I ſaw theſe things found in the priſoner's box, the box was locked, the priſoner had the key.

JOSEPH THOMPSON ſworn.

I was ſent for on the 20th of September, to Mr. Sharpe's by Mr. Biſh, and ſearched the priſoner, and in one of his pockets I found this new machine; I then found the key of his box in his pocket, and I found the things which I produce, in his box, and likewiſe this bunch of keys, one of theſe keys opened a many of Mr. Sharpe's drawers.

Mr. Sharpe. In January laſt, I had an accident of fire in my houſe, and a coat was loſt, in the pocket of which were theſe keys, I apprehended they were deſtroyed, the boy was only with me five weeks, conſequently he muſt have had them from ſome other ſervant.

WILLIAM RALEY ſworn.

I have known the priſoner about nine months, the things that were in my box were given me by the priſoner at the bar.

Where did you live?—I live with Mr. Cotton, in Fenchurch-ſtreet, a picture-frame maker.

What was you to do with theſe things?—I was to ſell one dozen and an half for the priſoner, and the reſt he gave me to keep for myſelf.

Court to Sharpe. Can you ſwear to any of theſe things?——I can ſwear to ſome of the things that were found in the boy's box, theſe razors have my name upon them, but I cannot poſitively ſwear to them, here is a powder box, marked by one of my clerks, and a pair of ſtockings marked, I know them perfectly, all the things that are here are the common run of ſtock.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

A great many of theſe things were given me by a porter that lived at Mr. Sharpe's, not all of them, he perſuaded me to it.

Mr. Sharpe. The porter has abſconded, the priſoner came to me an errand-boy and general ſervant, I had an exceeding good character of him from Mr. Lloyd, an attorney, in Chancery-lane; and indeed I am induced to believe that what the boy has told you is true; I do not doubt but the keys were given him by this porter, and he induced him to take the things.

GUILTY.

Mr. Raley. My Lord, I am the father of the witneſs Raley, a lad whom I have brought up with the greateſt tenderneſs, I have done all I can for him, I am very ſorry to ſee him in that ſituation; I wiſh him now to receive that reproof that may penetrate his mind, I am father of a large family, eight in number; I cannot admit him into my houſe, but I will put him into a place of ſafety up at Hoxton; I have adviſed him to go to ſea, I will get him a birth.

Court to young Raley. I am very ſorry, young man, to hear this account of you from your father, you muſt have behaved very ill indeed; you have had great good fortune in not being yourſelf proſecuted, you ought to have been proſecuted, and if you had, the evidence that came out to day, would have involved you in the same guilt, and the same disgrace with this unhappy young man; and I hope if you have any feelings, that his fate, and my public exhortation to you, will have some effect upon you, and that you will not go on in practices, which in all probability must bring your unhappy father with sorrow to the grave, as well as draw down certain destruction upon yourself; you will be delivered into his care, submit to that restraint that he imposes upon you, and to that course of life which he thinks fit to mark out to you, and endeavour by your future conduct to deserve that he may forget what is past, and that you may become an useful member of society.

Mr. Raley the elder. I return your Lordship many thanks.

Mr. Keys, foreman of the Jury. My Lord, it is the wish of the Jury to recommend the prisoner to mercy, as supposing he may have been drawn in by the porter, and as that witness, young Raley, appears to have been a partaker in the guilt.

Court. Gentlemen, the thing that alarms me, is the example; because put it to your own breasts, you all carry on trades in the city of London, and you are all obliged to entrust your property to your servants: I have therefore always held a very strict hand over this particular crime, because it seems to me, as if men's property depended intirely upon never relaxing the punishment due to servants that rob their masters; now having said this to you publickly, if you still wish this boy should find favour, I for one will not oppose it, though I cannot heartily approve of it.

(The Jury did not repeat their application.)

Transported for seven years.

Tried by the first Middlesex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

945. THOMAS ENGLAND and MARY DAVIS were indicted for feloniously stealing on the 8th of October, one silver watch, value 40s. a steel chain, value 6d. a seal, value 6d. a key, value 1d. the property of Samuel Christie.

SAMUEL CHRISTIE sworn.

I live No. 24, Piccadilly, I lost my watch, I was going up the Haymarket, soon after ten, I saw the prisoner Davis assaulting a man that keeps a stall of different things on the left-hand side going up the market, it was on Saturday week, I crossed the way and she took a look at me, she had hold of the man by the collar of the shirt, and shaking him about, and she broke a lamp that shewed the light over his goods, he was calling out for the watchman, and she let go of him, she looked at me and was using the most infamous language that ever proceeded out of any body's mouth; she caught hold of me by the collar of my shirt, she said at that time, you took the Jew's part and you struck me, she pulled me by my breast and the collar of my shirt, and I endeavoured to undo her hand from my shirt, and I found I could not without tearing my shirt all to pieces; if you would only allow me to speak on I will tell you more particularly, and when I found that I thought I felt somebody touching me over the waistband of my breeches; she pulled me almost to the ground, and drove my hat off, then I suspected the robbery, because she pulled in so desperate a manner, I called out, Oh my watch! before I had put my hand down; there were a great many people gathering at the time, the man (prisoner) was before the woman, I saw him before it happened, I called out all along, my watch is gone that very minute.

How came you to think of your watch?—Why I suspected from this, from her hands being at my neck, to my knowledge the man never put a hand to me.

Did you feel her hand at your watch, or any thing of that sort?——No, I cannot say I did, when she was dragging me down I certainly felt something move.

You say the man did nothing?—Not to my knowledge, but I was so busy with the woman woman that I do not know, but however the woman had hold of me while I was robbed of my watch.

Then you cannot tell whether she took it or who took it?—No, I cannot, but I am sure it was taken while she held me, and was dragging me down to the ground.

What became of your friend the Jew that you had released from her?—He was standing by.

Did not he help you as well as you helped him?—He was minding his goods I believe, the woman endeavoured to make her escape, and by the assistance of the man prisoner and some others, was out of the hands of the watchman, I believe twice, if not more, I caught hold of her twice, she wanted to get away, she got my thumb in her mouth, (Ah you need not laugh, the marks are here yet,) I secured her till two or three watchmen came up, I never got my watch again, it was a silver watch.

Do you deal in watches?—No.

What business are you?—I am a taylor to business; I do not know the maker's name of my watch, nor the number, it was to be brought to me by a person that knew it, but they have not, then the woman was searched for the watch at the watch-house, nothing was found, I am sure this Mary Davis held me while I was robbed of the watch.

What was she doing to your friend when you came up?—He was shoving her off desiring her to go from his goods; they have a stall against the side of the house, with buckles, watch-chains, and keys, and different things.

Court. Why did not you get out of her way?—I did not suspect I should be catched hold of and robbed, I was not afraid of my watch at first, till she almost dragged me down on the ground, she pulled me down with such despair, that caused me to suspect a robbery.

Was you there by yourself without any assistance?——Not one that I knew was there; the prisoner England obstructed the watchman taking her to the watch-house, he told the people not to meddle with the woman, but to let her take her own part, while she had hold of me.

Mr. Garrow, prisoner's counsel. They did not know you was a taylor?—No.

The people had a mind to see a battle between you?—I do not know, but it was no battle, at least it was a disadvantageous one to me when I lost my watch; I am free before God and my own conscience to declare that I was held by her when I lost my watch.

The fact is, that you like a fool entered into a squabble with this woman, in defence of poor Mordecai, and got a good beating, and your thumb bit, and lost your watch?—His name was not Mordecai, you are mistaken there, his name is Solomon.

So you came up in the God-speed, let the Jew loose, and engaged with this Christian female; did not the people think it was good fun to see the taylor and the woman engaged together?——I am not to be brow beat, though you may suppose yourself a very wise man.

——— KENDRICK sworn.

Saturday sevennight I was coming down the Haymarket, I was standing with Mr. Solomons the Jew, asking the price of a pair of buckles, nobody was nigh us, she came up to me and behaved very indecent, and went to the Jew and behaved so to him, and the Jew pushed her away, and told her to go away about her business; then she came the second time to him, and she ran to break his glass, and he caught her hand before it came down on the glass, it was a shew glass which stands with things in at the side of the public-house; then she broke his lamp, then he asked her what she meant, and she said what are you going to kill me, rob me or murder me, she made very bad oaths, and raised a mob, and called me very bad names, then Solomon sent for the watch and charged her, then the prisoner England came up and said, gentlemen consider it is a woman, do not ill use her, that was all the words I heard him say, and the prosecutor came across over the way, then she caught hold of him, and said, you bl——y thief, you have knocked me down twice, she caught

caught hold of him by the frill of the ſhirt, and ſhook him till the watchman was ringing his rattle, and I went down to ſeek for aſſiſtance, and I heard the proſecutor call out, I have loſt my watch, I never ſaw the proſecutor before, when I heard the proſecutor call out I have loſt my watch, I directly turned round and ſaw the man priſoner ſtand pretty cloſe to the woman, but I did not ſee him do any thing to the proſecutor, nor did I hear the proſecutor charge him with doing any thing to him.

JAMES BARBER ſworn.

I am a watchman, I heard a noiſe, I went there, and when I came the priſoner Mary Davis was ſtriking Solomon who keeps a hard-ware ſtall, I went to puſh her away, and told her to go about her buſineſs and not make a diſturbance there; ſhe charged Mr. Solomon for uſing her ill, and Mr. Solomon ſaid watchman I charge you with that woman; the priſoner England came between us and ſaid, let the woman go, I ſaid, do not you interrupt me in my duty, ſtand off, and I pulled the priſoner Davis towards me; all of a ſudden ſhe ſeized the proſecutor by the breaſt in this manner, then in a very ſmall ſpace of time after, ſhe ſeized him by the collar, and he cried out, I have loſt my watch, then a croud came and ſeparated us, when ſhe was in the croud ſhe cried out England, England, take my part, do not ſee me hurt; after the woman was in my cuſtody he ſaid, do not uſe the woman ill, take her to the Juſtice, or to the watch-houſe, or ſomething of that ſort; ſhe was ſearched by the watch-houſe keeper's wife, and nothing was found upon her; the very inſtant ſhe ſeized him the watch was taken away, I do not know by whom, I did not ſee the man at the time it was done.

Mr. Garrow. How long has this poor fellow been in cuſtody?——On Saturday night the 8th of October.

FRANCIS HILSLEY ſworn.

I am a carpenter, I heard the watchman's rattle and heard it again, and heard murder cried, the woman had the man by the collar, and ſhe cried out murder, and ſhe charged the watch with him, at the time ſhe had hold of him ſhe called out, England do not ſee me hurt; all this was before the watch was loſt.

How long was it after that, before the man ſaid he had loſt his watch?—She quitted his pocket and took him by the hair of the head, and ſhe got his head almoſt between her legs.

Jury. I think it is a pity to go any further.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

947. JARVIS BRADBURY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 20th day of September laſt, ſix pair of iron hinges, value 3s. the property of William Corvan.

WILLIAM CORVAN ſworn.

I live in Biſhopſgate-ſtreet, I am an ironmonger, I loſt theſe things the 20th of September, I found the priſoner in my ſhop by my counter, I aſked him what he wanted, he ſaid a pennyworth of bell-ſtaples, I put them into a paper, and gave them to him; he was going away, my ſervant ſeeing him going away, went and took the parcel from between his legs as he was going out, there were ſix pair of hinges in the parcel.

MARGARET STORY ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner put his hand, and take ſomething, and took it from between his knees.

Priſoner. I know nothing of it.

The priſoner called four witneſſes, who gave him a good character.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

948. THOMAS BAND was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 18th day of October

October, ten pounds weight of old braſs, value 5s. the property of Edward Piſtor and John Piſtor.

EDWARD PISTOR ſworn.

I am in partnerſhip with John Piſtor in an organ manufactory, I cannot aſcertain the time when we loſt this braſs, it was found in the houſe of Mrs. Hobſon laſt week; I know it to be our property; the priſoner was a workman of ours; we employed him frequently.

MARGARET HOBSON ſworn.

I live in Petticoat-lane, I keep a ſmith and brokers ſhop, I bought the braſs of the priſoner at the bar at different times, I do not remember the weight.

John Perrot produced ſome braſs he bought of the priſoner.

Priſoner. I know nothing of it.

The priſoner called three witneſſes to his character.

Court to Mrs. Hobſon. Did he ever deal with you before? — Yes, about half a year before; I told Mr. Piſtor what ſort of a man he was.

GUILTY.

To be tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

949. JOHN ADAMSON and BURGESS TRANTER were indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Michael Dalley on the King's highway, on the 24th of September laſt, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly ſtealing from his perſon, and againſt his will, ſix ſhirts, value 20s. thirteen ſtocks, value 10s. the property of David Carr, Eſq; four men's ſhirts, value 10s. four neck handkerchiefs, value 2s. one pair of worſted ſtockings, value 6d. the property of Allen Robinſon.

MICHAEL DALLEY ſworn.

I am thirteen.

Do you know the nature of an oath?— My mother told me if I ſhould tell an untruth I ſhould go to the bad place.

And do you know that you are liable to be puniſhed by law, and be ſent to gaol?— Yes.——I was ſent out with a baſket of things on a Saturday night, a good while ago.

How long ago?——A good bit ago.

Was it three weeks or a month, or how long? —— I believe it was, my mother is a waſherwoman, I was going to carry ſome things to Mr. Carr, No. 33, Norfolk-ſtreet in the Strand, and ſome things belonging to his footman; I was ſent about half after ſix, I had knocked at the door, and ſomebody came and ſnatched the baſket out of my hand; my mother gave me a particular caution before I went out, and I held them very faſt all the way, but when they ſnatched it I was obliged to let it go; I do not know rightly the perſon, he was dreſſed in blue, I took hold of him, and held him, he had the baſket, ſo he fell down off the curb-ſtone, and I fell down too, ſo he got up again, and took hold of the baſket, and ran round the corner, and gave it to a man that ſtood there; they ran different ways, and I followed him that had the clothes, I cried ſtop thief, and a footman ſtopped him, ſo he threw down the baſket and ran away; I picked up the baſket and the clothes; he was not taken at that time, I took the clothes home to Norfolk-ſtreet, and by that time they had taken the man.

Do you know whether the men they took were the ſame men?——No, Sir, I did not ſee his face.

WILLIAM WOODWARD ſworn.

I heard the little boy cry ſtop thief, and I purſued the priſoner Tranter out of Norfolk-ſtreet; he had the baſket of linen before him, he ran down Howard-ſtreet; I ſtruck him, and he dropped the baſket, by his ſtopping I miſſed him; I turned round, I cried ſtop thief; he was never out of my ſight two yards all the time, I am ſure he was the man that ran with the baſket.

Where did you firſt ſee him?—In Norfolk-folk-ſtreet; I ſaw him run from the gentleman's door with the baſket in his hand, I think it was near the gentleman's door, and the ſame man had the baſket all the time.

Did you ſee any other man?—No.

THOMAS WALLDEN ſworn.

I took the priſoner Tranter; I was in the Swan in Arundell-ſtreet with a few friends in the tap-room, I heard a great noiſe, and I ſaw the priſoner fall down under the gate-way, he jumped up again immediately, and ran towards an alley which goes into Eſſex-ſtreet, I ran after him and caught him round the waiſt, I ſaw him have nothing at all; I did not ſee Woodward, he came up in three minutes after; when I took the priſoner he might be about one hundred yards off.

JOHN ATKINS ſworn.

I apprehended Adamſon; I apprehended Williams firſt on ſuſpicion of this robbery, through the information, I believe, that Sears received, Williams was admitted an evidence as an accomplice, he acknowledged he was concerned in it himſelf at three different times.

Court to M. Dalley. Was the man in light coloured clothes in ſight of the door when the man ſnatched the baſket?—I ſhould think he could not, the firſt man that took the baſket got away.

JOHN WILLIAMS ſworn.

Do you know any thing of this priſoner Tranter?——No, I do not.

What do you come here for? —— I was taken up upon ſuſpicion of this robbery.

Who do you come to give evidence about? — Nobody; I was greatly terrified, the man that took me told me to make a confeſſion, and they told me if I did not I ſhould be hanged, and if I did I ſhould go to gaol for a few days, and be admitted as an evidence, and have good victuals and drink, and a bed, and a ſhilling each day, and part of a great reward; after I made this confeſſion they deſired me to ſign it, which I did.

Who was it told you this?——The man that took me, Sears I believe his name is.

Was Atkins preſent?——Not at the time this man told me this.

How came you to confeſs you had been a party in the robbery?——I did not confeſs any further than they told me to ſay, they told me that if I did not I ſhould be hanged, if I did I ſhould receive victuals and drink, a bed, and a ſhilling a day, and part of a great reward; Atkins told me that this Adamſon was taken, and if I did not ſwear to him I ſhould be hanged; the next time they aſked me if I had any money, and Atkins gave me eighteen-pence, and told me to ſtick to what I had ſaid; my friends told me to tell truth, and ſaid what a ſad thing it was to tell lies, this is the truth I tell now upon oath.

Court. You know you have taken an oath, you know the conſequence if you ſpeak falſly?——This is the truth, I poſitively ſwear it.

Court. Let Williams be remanded to Newgate, till this matter is further enquired into.

Atkins. My Lord, the other man that attended is here on purpoſe to explain this matter, we were not bound over.

Court. I ſhall deſire Mr. Hodgſon, the ſhort-hand writer, to make out a copy of this evidence, and give it to Mr. Shelton, that it may be ſent to Sir Sampſon Wright.

Court to M. Dalley. I think you ſay that Tranter was not the man that took the baſket from you?——No, it was another man.

And that the man that received the baſket was round the corner?——Yes.

Court to Jury. In ſtrictneſs of law in this caſe, I think both the priſoners ought to be acquitted on this indictment, without putting them on their defence, there is no evidence whatever againſt Adamſon, and Tranter appears to be the receiver; a man man muſt be actually preſent, aiding and abetting to conſtitute him a principal.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

950. MARIA CRAWFORD was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 24th day of September laſt, one ſilver watch, value 20s. one chain, value 6d. one ſeal, value 6d. another ſeal, value 2d. a pair of jean breeches, value 2s. a pair of ſtockings, value 12d. a pair of ſhoes, value 12d. a pair of buckles, value 18d. and ſeven ſhillings in monies numbered, the property of William Thomas.

And STEPHEN GOULD was indicted for feloniouſly receiving, on the ſame day, the ſame watch, chain, and ſeals, knowing them to have been ſtolen.

WILLIAM THOMAS ſworn.

On the 24th of September in the morning; I awaked in my own lodging, and I miſſed my watch, which hung over my head, and my breeches, ſhoes and ſtockings and buckles were gone, and ſeven ſhillings.

What time did you go to bed?—About two.

Drunk or ſober?——In liquor; I cannot be ſure the priſoner is the woman that ſlept with me.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

951. JOHN DAVIS was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Nicholas Bond, about the hour of one in the night, on the 15th of October, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein 40lb. weight of mutton, value 12s. his property.

The proſecutor not being able to ſwear to the mutton, and there being no evidence but the priſoner's own confeſſion, and which was obtained from him under promiſe of favour, he was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury, before Mr. RECORDER.

---

952. SARAH HARRIS was indicted for feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Thomas Batley on the 7th of October, between the hours of ſix and ſeven in the forenoon, Prudence, the wife of the ſaid Thomas, then being therein, and feloniouſly ſtealing therein one man's hat, value 10s. one ſhirt, value 12d, two aprons, value 2s. o e pair of ſhoes, value 3s. two pair of ſtuff ſhoes, value 8s. one woman's bed-gown, value 6d. the property of the ſaid Thomas.

THOMAS BATLEY ſworn.

I went out between ſix and ſeven to my work, to my ſhop oppoſite, on the 7th of October, and I obſerved that the latch catched; in a few minutes after there was an alarm of this robbery, and my ſon ran after the priſoner, and brought her back with the things in her apron.

(The things depoſed to.)

THOMAS BATLEY, jun. ſworn.

The apprentice gave the alarm, and I purſued and took the priſoner about two hundred yards off, with the things in her apron.

—— WESTON ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner open the door, and go in and come out again, I am ſure of her for ſhe had but one ſtocking on.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was coming by that man's houſe, and a woman

a woman was ſtanding at the door, and ſhe aſked me to carry theſe things.

GUILTY.

Of ſtealing the things, but not of breaking the houſe.

Privately whipped, and confined twelve months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

953. ANN TAYLOR was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 14th day of October, two cotton gowns, value 30s. a ſtuff petticoat, value 6s. one cotton petticoat, value 3s. five pair of cotton ſtockings, value 5s. five linen aprons, value 5s. four muſlin handkerchiefs, value 1s. one muſlin cap, value 1s. a black ſilk cloak, value 5s. a pair of woman's ſtuff ſhoes, value 2s. a pair of metal ſhoe buckles, value 1s. four muſlin handkerchiefs, value 2s. one linen ditto, value 6d. ſeven linen clouts, value 2s. two ſhifts, value 4s. one dimity bed-gown, value 2s. two yards of thread lace, value 6d. one linen night-cap, value 6d. the property of Lewis Cracknell, in the dwelling houſe of John Nightingale.

ELIZABETH CRACKNELL ſworn.

I am wife to Lewis Cracknell, I live in Broad-ſtreet, Groſvenor-place, my huſband is abroad, I am a lodger in the houſe of John Nightingale, on Friday laſt I loſt the things mentioned in the indictment, I miſſed them about half paſt ten, out of the three pair of ſtairs back garret, I went out about ſeven, and I came in about half paſt ten; the priſoner had ſlept with me from the Wedneſday night, when I came home ſhe was gone, and the key was in the door, I had part of my goods again at her lodgings, at Mr. Green's a cheeſemonger, in Henrietta-ſtreet, on Saturday morning; this was Friday; I found out where ſhe lodged by an acquaintance of her's; I found there, a black cloak, a ſtuff petticoat, and a cotton gown, a linen gown, nother cotton gown, four aprons, four pair of ſtockings, one bed-gown, ſeven clouts, one pair of ſhoes, one pair of buckles, four handkerchiefs, one nightcap, one cap not made up, four handkerchiefs, and one ſmall box.

Was any body with her in the room?—No; Mrs. Nightingale went with me:

(The things depoſed to.)

I loſt nothing more beſides what is in the indictment; I have not found the reſt of my things.

Mr. Garrow, priſoner's counſel. Be ſo good as to tell me what had paſſed between this young woman and you before ſhe produced the things?—She produced them to Mrs. Nightingale, I was not preſent.

Had you made her any promiſe that ſhe ſhould not be hurt?——No.

Did you make her any promiſe yourſelf?—No.

How long has your huſband been abroad?—Five months.

How long have you been married?—A year and half.

Where was you married?—At Acton.

RUTH NIGHTINGALE ſworn.

The proſecutrix lodges in my houſe, the priſoner came in about ſeven, and made an excuſe to comb her head, and we never ſaw any more of her till the next day, when we found the property on her; I gave her the key to let herſelf in about ſeven.

Mr. Garrow. What paſſed between you before ſhe produced theſe things?——Nothing at all.

Had you no converſation?—None in the leaſt, I went into the room and aſked her how ſhe came to take the property away, ſhe made me no anſwer; I ſaid, what have you done with the things, deliver them up, ſhe ſaid ſhe would.

Did you tell her it would be better for her?——I never did; I aſked her where the remainder of the things were, and ſhe ſaid ſhe did not know.

SAMUEL PACE ſworn.

I apprehended the priſoner, and ſaw theſe things things in the room, as we went in the coach I aſked her where the reſt of the the things were, and ſhe gave me two duplicates of two ſmall parcels, one for a ſhilling and another for eighteen pence; there is a pair of ſtockings, a handkerchief, and two aprons, they are among theſe things.

Priſoner. I leave it to my councel.

Court. What way of life have you been in?—I have been brought up by an aunt.

How old are you?—Nineteen.

——— EXTON ſworn.

I live at Knightſbridge, I am a butcher, I have known the priſoner from a child, I take her to be eighteen or nineteen, I paid for her ſchooling at Uppingham in Rutlandſhire, about ſix or ſeven years, ſhe has been in London five or ſix years, I never heard any thing againſt the character of the child till this time, her aunt has kept her very genteel.

Mrs. TAYLOR ſworn.

This unfortunate young woman is my niece, I have ſupported her and paid for her ſchooling, ſhe has been in London to the beſt of my knowledge four years come March, ſhe has been in one ſervice, ſhe has been almoſt chiefly ſupported by me, ſhe has left that place above a year, I have had her to keep theſe ſeven months, ſhe has not left me above two months, I never had any complaints of her conduct as to honeſty.

Court. Do you know how ſhe happened to fall in with this Mrs. Cracknell?——I do not know.

Had ſhe got into any bad connections?—I am not clear as to that.

The priſoner called two more witneſſes to her character.

GUILTY, 39*s.*

To be privately whipped and confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

954. JAMES SCOTT, THOMAS PICKERING, and SUSANNAH JOHNSON were indicted for feloniouſly coining a farthing, againſt the ſtatute, October 7th.

(The caſe opened by Mr. Silveſter.)

WILLIAM BOWYER ſworn.

On the 7th inſtant, between five and ſix in the afternoon, I went on an information to Widegate-alley, Biſhopſgate-ſtreet, to Scott's houſe, I went in at a window from a back-yard, and then down ſtairs into a back kitchen, and there I found a door faſt that went into a front kitchen, Morant who was with me, knocked at the door, they aſked who was there, he ſaid, a friend; I opened the door, and the three priſoners were cloſe to the preſs, the two men were without coats or hats, the woman without a bonnet or cloak, but in her uſual dreſs, there were a large quantity of blanks on one ſide the preſs, with a die ſet, and ſeveral farthings on the other ſide; theſe I took from under the preſs; the men were dirty, the woman had on a white apron, I heard Clarke ſay when he looked at her hands, I am very ſorry for you.

Mr. Garrow, priſoner's councel. There was ſome brandy?——Yes.

Had you any of the brandy?—No; the woman ſaid ſhe came to give them ſome brandy.

SAMUEL MAYNARD ſworn.

On the 7th of October, I went to this houſe with Mr. Clark and ſome other officers; Bowyer and Morant and me went down through Scott's houſe, through the ſhop into his kitchen; Morant knocked at the door, they aſked who was there, he ſaid, a friend, Bowyer laid hold of the door and ſtrove to wrench it open, I ſtood exactly in the middle of the door, and as it ſplit down I ſaw the woman (Mrs. Johnſon ſhe called herſelf,) get up by the preſs, the men were on each ſide of the preſs; ſhe then ſtooped right before Pickering, I laid hold of him, there were a great many blanks ſtruck on one ſide and the other.

Mr. Garrow. Did you drink any of the brandy?—Morant had a little, and I had a drop.

It was very good I hope?—There was a bottle of brandy there, and there it was left.

Where was this?——In London.

Where did you carry the priſoners to?—To Bow-ſtreet.

So you gave Guildhall and the Manſion-houſe the go-by?——I went according to orders.

JOHN CLARKE ſworn.

I went to Widegate-alley, on an information which was given to Bow-ſtreet, that there was coining in a houſe adjoining to the priſoner Scott's, and that the way of going into that houſe, was through the ſhop, through the kitchen, and to throw up the window, and go into the adjoining cellar at the yard door, and we ſhould find the people at work; being lame I was not ſo nimble as I formerly have been, and the other officers went in firſt, I left the priſoner in cuſtody, and went and ſearched, I ſaw the three priſoners, the two men were without clothes, the woman without a cloak or bonnet; there were dies fixed in the preſs, and a quantity of blanks: I was then curious to look at the woman, and I ſaid then, and I ſay now, I was ſorry to ſee any woman in that ſituation, I examined the woman, and I have not a doubt——

Mr. Garrow. I muſt ſtop you, you are the laſt man I ſhould ſtop; but I ſhould object the ſame if my Lord Mayor was a witneſs?——I have not a doubt, Sir, but you would object to my Lord Mayor: I am ſure the woman had been handling of copper.

Did you examine her hands?——I did indeed, and I repeated the words to her, good woman, I am ſorry for you!

Were her hands dirty?—They were.

Court. Were her hands black as if ſhe had been handling copper?——There is no doubt, it is certainly a fact, there was a mark where the blanks and things had been handled.

Deſcribe in what manner this buſineſs is done?——There were three people in the cellar, they were locked up, when thoſe ſprings are in, and the preſs runs up to the ſcrew, it comes to its purchaſe, and theſe ſprings raiſe it up again, therefore it muſt require more ſtrength than if they were in the preſs; here are the two dies that were fixed in the preſs at the time, and a quantity of blanks: there is a hole ſunk in the earth, in order that the preſs might not come over their head, therefore they are covered in the earth, that the fly of the preſs might have more effect.

How many people are employed at this buſineſs of coining?——The only practice that has been proved in this Court, is three, one each end of the fly, and another to feed the preſs.

Mr. Garrow, Priſoner Johnſon's Council. Do you know anything of the practice of coiners in making farthings, but by hearſay?——I do not.

Then you do not mean to ſwear that farthings are not ſometimes made by coiners without the aſſiſtance of a third perſon?—It is impoſſible for me to ſwear that.

How were the woman's hands, dirty?—Her left hand was dirty in the palm, and all the way up.

Do you remember her ſhewing her hands to the Magiſtrate, and ſaying they were clean?—I do.

And ſhe ſaid that, therefore, ſhe could not be employed in coining?—She did.

Then did you ſay to her, your hands were dirty, but you have wiped them on your apron?—No, I did not.

Had ſhe any opportunity of waſhing her hands?—No.

Priſoners Pickering and Scott. My Lord, we are both guilty, we would not wiſh to give the Court any trouble, but the woman is innocent.

The priſoner Suſannah Johnſon called one witneſs to her character.

JAMES SCOTT, THOMAS PICKERING, } GUILTY.

SUSANNAH JOHNSON, NOT GUILTY.

The

The two priſoners, Scott and Pickering, having been once before convicted for a ſimilar offence, and had the benefit of the clergy, the Counſel for the proſecution prayed that judgment of Death might be paſſed upon them purſuant to the ſtatute.

(The record of the former conviction of James Scott, read by the Clerk of the Arraigns.)

Court to Scott. You hear this plea, on the part of the Crown, which ſtates, that you have before been convicted of felony, and prayed the benefit of the ſtatute, which has been allowed to you; the law is, that no perſon can twice claim that benefit; therefore, it avers that you are the ſame perſon to whom the benefit of clergy was allowed on a former occaſion; you have a right to deny that fact.

Mr. Garrow. I recommend it to you to deny that there is any ſuch record, and that if there is, you are not the perſon.

Priſoner Scott. I eny thoſe facts, I am not the man.

Court to Priſoner. When the Jury are called over, you have a right to object to any of them, if you will.

The Jury called over, and not being objected to, they were ſworn as follows.

" You ſhall well and truly try the iſſue " joined between our Lord the King, and " the priſoner; whether the priſoner at the " bar, James Scott, was convicted of felony " at the Old Bailey, on Wedneſday the " 16th of October, in the twenty-ſecond " year of his preſent Majeſty's reign, and " whether he is the ſame perſon that was " tried and convicted, and received the " benefit of his clergy."

Mr. Garrow examined the counter plea, and obſerved a variance, the record of conviction ſaying, the priſoner was tried before Sir George Nares, Knt. and the counter plea ſtating only Sir George Nares, and it went on to ſtate that he was tried upon an indictment, for that one William Voteer, late of the liberty, &c. without giving the Court that tried that Voteer, any juriſdiction to make that enquiry.

Mr. Garrow. My Lord, the plea varies from the record, but that is not all, it does not ſtate by force and arms, there is a difference in the eſſential part of the record; the conviction ſet out in this plea, may be a conviction had at York.

Mr. Silveſter. The counter plea does not profeſs to ſtate the indictment.

Mr. Garrow. It ſays upon an indictment for that, &c.

Mr. Silveſter. The counter plea has nothing to do with the juriſdiction in this record, it does not profeſs to ſet forth the whole record of this man's conviction, but ſtates the fact, that the priſoner has had his clergy once.

The Court reſerved the objection.

JOHN TOWNSEND ſworn.

Do you know Scott?—Yes, perfectly well.

Was you preſent in Court here when he was tried?—I was, it was in January Seſſions, 1782, I put him to the bar myſelf, he was tried with Iſaac Voteer and Dean.

Is that the ſame man?——Yes.

Mr. Garrow. Do you know whether he was acquitted?—I heard the Court paſs ſentence immediately, of a fine of one ſhilling, and twelve months impriſonment; the Court paſſed ſentence immediately, on account of the lameneſs of Iſaac Voteer.

Court to Jury. This is a novel proſecution, the general law of the kingdom moſt undoubtedly is that what is called the benefit of clergy, ſhall not be allowed to any man twice: in all caſes of felony, excepting where it is expreſsly taken away by act of parliament, by the common law of the kingdom the benefit of clergy was allowed; the reaſon and origin of which began in times very different from the preſent, and when the church enjoyed very peculiar privileges as diſtinguiſhed from the laity; the privilege in queſtion, was in fact the benefit of clergy, for it was a privilege peculiar to thoſe in holy orders; diſtinguiſhed from others, that though

though the punishment of the law was death to men in general, yet they had the privilege of not suffering death, in those cases where another man would: in process of time the humanity of the government, and the liberal principles of the law, extended that privilege, by fiction and implication, to all those who could read, for that was considered as a sort of test, and the question whether the culprit was a clerk or not was extended to the enquiry, whether he could read or no; so much of the original of it was retained down to the very modern period; but women were not entitled to this very valuable privilege, for it could not be presumed that they could be clerks in holy orders, and therefore women were allowed to be executed: but by acts of parliament in more modern times, the benefit of clergy, which is and ought to be, if allowed at all, allowed without distinction, and without any reference to the cause of it, was allowed to all persons who committed simple felonies, and taken away from particular offences; and the law holds it shall not be taken away by any act of parliament, even where the law says he shall suffer death, unless the words are added without benefit of clergy; so that, as the law now stands, every man found guilty of any crime from which the benefit of clergy is not taken away, shall, upon praying it have it: but the law says, that though this indulgence shall be once allowed to a man that commits a lesser felony, he shall not be repeatedly intitled to it, and that he shall not be entitled to it a second time: the prisoner Scott has been convicted by your former verdict of an offence for which he is intitled of right to demand the benefit of his clergy, and he has so demanded it by praying the benefit of the statute, to which, say they, on the part of the crown, he is in a situation that does not entitle him to that privilege, for he has received that benefit once, therefore we object to its being allowed to him another time; and they have put into court a plea, which states, that he was tried for felony, and convicted, and prayed the benefit of the statute, which was allowed him, and they say that the said James Scott now at the bar, whom you have convicted, is the same, and by conclusion of law cannot be entitled to it again: James Scott denies that, he denies all the facts in the plea, he says further, if there was any such conviction, he is not the same person: the record is now produced and read of the conviction of a James Scott, upon which some questions of law arise, about which it is unnecessary to trouble you, because your verdict will not affect those questions one way or the other: Townsend swears the prisoner is the same James Scott, you are therefore to decide whether the evidence of this witness is sufficient to satisfy you that the James Scott at the bar, is the same man that was before tried, which is the only question for you to decide; if you find that he is the same man, and if the proceedings are sufficient against him, he will receive judgment of death; if you have any doubt he is not the same man, you will say so, and in that case he will receive a sentence, such as the offence may deserve upon the indictment, on which he was before convicted.

Mr. Shelton, Clerk of the Arraigns. Gentlemen of the Jury, do you find for the Crown or the prisoner?

Jury. For the Crown.

Mr. Garrow. If your Lordship pleases, that the sentence may be respited.

Court. Certainly.

GUILTY, Death.

Sentence respited.

The Remainder of this Trial in the next Part, which will be published in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex,

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 19th of OCTOBER, 1785, and the following Days;

Being the EIGHTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER VIII. PART V.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of J. Scott and T. Pickering.

Mr. Shelton to Thomas Pickering. Hold up your hand, you ſtand convicted of felony, what have you to ſay for yourſelf why this Court ſhould not give you judgment to die according to law.

The counter plea read and examined with the record by Mr. Garrow.

Mr. Garrow. My Lord, I ſubmit that after this is filed, and read to the priſoner, the Court will not ſuffer the Crown to correct it.

Court to Priſoner Pickering. Do you deny the truth of this counter plea or admit it?——I deny it.

The Sheriff returned the ſame Jury.

(The Jury ſworn.)

——— FRYER ſworn.

(Produced a copy of the Record.)

This is a true copy.

Mr. Garrow. My Lord, here is an objection in this caſe, which ſeems to me to be fatal, it is ſaid that it was preſented in manner and form following, it is eſſential to that, that it ſhould be after the twentieth day.

Mr. Silveſter. The whole of it is ſurpluſage.

Court. Gentlemen of the Jury, in this caſe you will not be troubled with the trial of the iſſue, for the plea put in is clearly wrong in point of law; therefore I am to direct you to find the verdict for the priſoner.

Verdict for the priſoner.

Court to Priſoner. You have had the good fortune to eſcape the danger under which your companion ſtill labours, by a mere miſtake in point of law, which I am bound to allow you, but with an admonition, that you will avoid the danger in future, which you have ſubjected yourſelf to, and which it might have been expected you would have avoided after your firſt conviction; but unhappily for you it has proved otherwiſe, and you have brought yourſelf into a ſituation by which you would have forfeited your life, and that with great juſtice; but under the circumſtances that have occurred, your your ſentence is to be fined 1s. and impriſoned twelve months in Newgate.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

955. WILLIAM WOODWARD and WILLIAM HARDING were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 8th day of September laſt, one box, value 6d. one ſilk gown, value 3l. a printed cotton gown, value 20s. a petticoat, value 20s. a muſlin apron, value 0s. four handkerchiefs, value 15s. one ſilk handkerchief, value 5s. one guinea, value 1l. 1s. and one ſhilling, the property of Jane Morris, ſpinſter, in the dwelling houſe of Sarah Lunn.

The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of Mr. Peatt, priſoners Counſel.

JANE MORRIS ſworn.

I loſt a box of clothes on the 8th of September, at No. 59, in Jewin-ſtreet; I lodged there, it was in the parlour; I was out, I returned between eight and nine, the box was gone; I left the perſon I lodge with, Sarah London, at home; my room door was not locked.

Mr. Peatt. What is your landlady's name?——Sarah London.

Mr. Peatt. My Lord, I beg leave to obſerve it is Lunn in the indictment.

Court. That objection goes to the capital part of the indictment beyond all doubt.

Proſecutrix. I found one gown at Mr. Berry's in Alderſgate-ſtreet; I never found the box; and at Mr. Cordy's, I found two yards of ſilk belonging to the gown; I took up the woman that pawned theſe things; the priſoner Harding was taken up that night, and the other the next day.

JOHN CORDY BAXTER ſworn.

Produced a ſilk gown pledged for 18s. in the name of Mary Harding, on the 9th of September, in the forenoon.

Proſecutrix. I know the ſilk, I am ſure of it, becauſe of the colour, and there are juſt two yards of it.

PHILIP CROCKFORD ſworn.

Produced a chintz gown, pledged in the name of Mary Richardſon.

RUTH RICHARDSON ſworn.

I live with the priſoner Harding, I pledged this gown at Mr. Berry's; I received it of the priſoners in my own room, they came in together, I ſaw nothing elſe brought, there were two gowns, a piece of ſilk, and an apron; I pledged the apron at Mr. Cordy's, and the ſilk gown and the piece of ſilk; I returned the money to Woodward; I aſked where they got them, they bid me aſk no queſtions; I pledged them becauſe I knew Harding would beat me if I refuſed to pledge them.

GEORGE PRETTY ſworn.

Produced a gown pledged by Ruth Richardſon.

(Depoſed to.)

Priſoner Woodward. I leave my defence to my counſel.

PRISONER HARDING'S DEFENCE.

I know nothing of the things, they were delivered to me by a friend, and I came to aſk that young woman to pledge them.

The priſoner Woodward called three witneſſes to his character.

The priſoner Harding called three witneſſes to his character.

BOTH GUILTY

Of ſtealing. Fined 1s.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

956. The ſaid GEORGE WOODWARD and WILLIAM HARDING were were again indicted for feloniously ſtealing, on the 10th of September, four pair of woman's ſtuff ſhoes, value 10s. two pair of leather ſhoes, value 7s. 6d. the property of Jarvis Adams.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

0576. JOHN BREWER and JOHN BURMAN were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 22d day of September laſt, eight buſhels of malt, value 30s. the property of William Clarke.

WILLIAM CLARKE ſworn.

I am a ſeafaring man, I have loſt ſome malt out of the Endeavour ſloop, of which I was maſter, ſhe laid at Lady Parſons's ſtairs, Wapping, on the 22d of September; I was on ſhore about half after ſeven at night, and at about eight I went to bed, and after I was in bed about half an hour, I thought I heard ſome noiſe upon deck, I immediately came up and looked forward, and ſaw two of my own lads with one man and two watermen, in a boat along-ſide, robbing the veſſel; they had been letting down three ſacks of malt in this boat, I ſaw them let down one ſack, what was in the ſack I cannot ſwear to; I heard one of my men, which is the priſoner Burman, ſay to another, go into the boat and receive the ſack, for fear he ſhould row away and not pay us; then the man at the bar and another waterman had the boat-hook faſtened on to my ſhroud; I wrung it out of his hand and I ſtruck it in between his ſhoulders, and I held him faſt ſome time; then the man I had ſtruck took up a ſcull and ſtruck at me which made me looſe my hold, I had nothing but my ſhirt on, and he got away by main ſtrength; the two watermen, one of which is the priſoner Brewer, ran away with the corn in the boat; I took my own ſervants on ſhore, and the young one told me who had the corn; I took my own man Burman, and another on his evidence: I know the man at the bar, I am ſure he was the other waterman; they had three ſacks when they rowed away: I found two ſacks of malt, and ſome more in a baſket, at a baker's in the Borough; he ſaid he bought it, I aſked him of whom; I told him I ſhould take both him and the malt, for it was mine; there was no mark on the ſacks, but I loſt a quantity of malt; found Brewer, and aſked him what he had done with the malt he robbed me of the night before; he ſaid he had ſold it to a baker.

WILLIAM WHITEWAY ſworn.

I took the priſoner Brewer, I went to a baker's, in the cellar, there we ſaw ſome malt, which the baker ſaid he had bought of the priſoner Brewer; I took the priſoner juſt before, and brought him to the baker's, and he confeſſed there he had ſold it to this baker; he ſaid he had bought it of the lads, he would not acknowledge to the ſtealing of it.

JONATHAN WARREN ſworn.

I belong to the ſloop, ſo did the priſoner Burman; I was concerned in handing this malt over into this boat; it was a waterman's boat, I do not know the waterman, Burman had been perſuading this lad to get it; I handed over eight buſhels and a half, which was the three ſacks; the priſoner Burman was in the boat, the priſoner Brewer was the purlman; my maſter caught us handing over the third ſack; I am certain ſure this is the man, he has been on board us before.

Why did you let this bad man perſuade you to rob your maſter, is not this the high road to the gallows?——This lad ſaid, if I would be ruled by him, I ſhould always have a ſhilling in my pocket.

If you are ruled by him, you will come to be hanged: how old are you?——Fourteen.

Proſecutor. Burman is about twenty-two, he has been a very bad lad.

PRI-

PRISONER BREWER's DEFENCE.

The accomplice called me, and I thought he wanted purl, and he told me he wanted to ſpeak to me; ſomebody happened to come out of the cabin, and he ſays call by and by, ſo I ſhoved off; he came there after dinner, and took this opportunity and called me along-ſide again, he ſaid there will be a couple of ſacks for you if you come along-ſide at eight; ſays I, what muſt I give you? ſays he, eight ſhillings a ſack; it was agreed on; he ſays mind and do not diſappoint me; there were eight buſhels and a half, ſo I hired a waterman that came up from Deptford, and he would not go for leſs than five ſhillings; after I came along-ſide, the boy was upon deck, he ſaid, come put the boat under the bows, you ſhall have it directly, he jumped in the boat, and I gave him eleven ſhillings that night, I was to give him five ſhillings more the next morning; I am from Dantzic; ſo the maſter came upon deck, and he could not ſee how many ſacks there were, for I put my great coat over them; the maſter came and held the boat with the boat-hook; I rowed away with the grain, and landed and got it carried to——

Court. Are you aware that you are confeſſing that you ſtole this malt?——No, I never was on board the ſhip.

Do you think that that ſubterfuge will be of any uſe to you; you go and deal with boys, do you think you are not a thief?—I never was on board a ſhip.

You may be a thief and never be on board, ſo the Jury will preſently tell you.

PRISONER BURMAN's DEFENCE.

I never got the corn, it was the evidence.

The priſoner Brewer called two witneſſes to his character.

BOTH GUILTY.

Each tranſported for ſeven years.

Court to Proſecutor. What have you done with the man that bought the malt?——He was committed to Newgate, and Mr. Clarke was bound over to proſecute.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

958. SUSANNAH MARTIN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 24th of September laſt, three cotton valens of a bed, value 2s. two curtains, value 7s. a pair of linen ſheets, value 12s. a blanket, value 3s. a tea-kettle, value 2s. a candleſtick, value 1s. a looking-glaſs, value 3s. one pair of tongs, value 6d. two flat irons, value 1s. 6d. the property of Thomas Godfrey, being in a certain lodging room let by him to the ſaid Suſannah, and to be uſed by her with the ſaid lodging, againſt the ſtatute.

JANE GODFREY ſworn.

I am wife to the proſecutor, the priſoner lodged a week at our houſe, I miſſed nothing till ſhe was gone away, then I miſſed the things in the indictment; theſe things were in her lodgings when I delivered the key to her; ſhe went away and took the key; I found part of the things at the pawnbroker's.

JOHN MASON ſworn.

Here is a pair of ſheets, a tea-kettle, a candleſtick, and looking-glaſs, pawned by a woman that frequently came with the priſoner, for the priſoner, I knew her for five months.

(The ſheets depoſed to.)

—— TAMSTONE ſworn.

I am a broker, I had theſe things of the priſoner, I knew her, I bought things of her which I knew to be her own ſome years back; here are two curtains, and the valens.

Priſoner. The proſecutrix promiſed upon the word of a woman to take out the things for me, and I was to pay her a ſhilling a week; I only left the curtains and valens with the broker for a little money; I did

I did not ſell them, he promiſed to return me the curtains if I would let him have connections with me for the ſeven ſhillings; I ſaid no, I would not, he ſwore an oath, and ſaid, I had better think of it; I ſaid you have a wife and family.

Thompſon. I was out in the morning when theſe curtains were brought to my houſe, I came to my door, the priſoner was in my ſhop, and another with her, there was a neighbour's daughter at the door who heard every word, and would have bought them if I had not; I did not know the priſoner at firſt; I agreed to give her 7s. for the curtains and valens; however, when ſhe went out one of the neighbours obſerved ſomething, ſhe ſaid, and the two women whiſpered together, I heard nothing, I was going to a ſale, I went to the ſtable-yard, and ſtood at the door of an old acquaintance, and ſaw the two women come together; my wife ſaid, this woman uſe to come part our door ſometime ago in a miſerable condition.

Is the account ſhe gives true or not? — It is not true, not a word of it.

GUILTY.

Privately whipped, and impriſoned twelve months in the houſe of correction.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

959. ELIZABETH WEST and MARY CONOLLY were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 13th day of October, one ſtuff ſhoe, value 6d. and one ſilver ſhoe-buckle, value 8s. the property of Sophia Stokes, ſpinſter.

SOPHIA STOKES ſworn.

I work at my needle; I loſt my ſhoe and buckle, I got my ſhoe again, but not my buckle; it was brought me by a watchman, who is not here, I was at the Waterman's Arms, drinking with a friend in Wapping-ſtreet, between eight and nine, I cannot poſitively ſay, that this woman took my ſhoe and buckle; I was ſitting on the bench, I ſlipt my ſhoe down at heel, and theſe two women were juſt by, and I immediately miſſed my ſhoe and buckle, a ſeafaring man ſaid he ſaw them take it, but he is not here.

JOHN HARRIS ſworn.

Laſt Friday was a week I bought a buckle of the priſoner Conolly; I am a watch-maker and ſilverſmith, I am ſure it was the priſoner, I did not know her before.

What buckle is it? — A ſilver buckle; on the Thurſday night, I bought it on the 13th.

Court to Harris. What time did you buy it? — About ſeven.

Recollect the time as well as you can? — It was ſome where about ſeven o'clock.

Stokes. I miſſed my buckle between ſeven and eight, I miſſed it inſtantly.

What was you drinking? — Part of a pot of ale.

Harris. The priſoner Conolly came to me to know if I could make a fellow to that buckle by Saturday night, I told her it was impoſſible; I live a quarter of a mile off; I told her it would come to thirteen ſhillings; the priſoners wer both in company, I would not buy it the firſt time they came, and they came again, and a young man with them, and ſaid, I had no occaſion to fear, for he gave them the buckle.

(The buckle produced, and the fellow of it by the proſecutrix.)

PRISONER CONOLLY'S DEFENCE.

I was coming out of the houſe, and I kicked the buckle and ſhoe before me, and this young woman followed me, and we went and ſold it about half an hour after, I aſked twice whoſe buckle it was, and nobody owned it, ſo then I went out of the houſe.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

960. THO-

960. THOMAS KING and WILLIAM JACKSON were indicted for feloniously ſtealing on the 9th day of October, ſix live geeſe, value 30s. two live ducks, value 2s. the property of William Saffield.

WILLIAM SAFFIELD ſworn.

I live at Hillingdon, I loſt ſix geeſe and two ducks, the geeſe and ducks were all killed, I ſaid how they were marked before ever I ſaw them, I ſaw them at Mr. Whitehead's houſe.

JAMES WHITEHEAD ſworn.

I live at Acton, I am a publican; on Monday morning the 10th of October, I ſaw the two priſoners paſſing the road for London, King had a little ſmall baſket, and Jackſon had a large bag on his back with ſix geeſe and two ducks in it, they were dead, I made the priſoner put down the bags and there were the geeſe and the ducks, we took the priſoner Jackſon and the things, King threw down his baſket and ran off, and I ſent a young man and a horſe after him, and I ſent another man or two on foot, and he was taken at Turnham-green, the proſecutor ſaw them and ſwore to them, he ſpoke of the marks before he ſaw them; he had ſome quinces in the baſket.

PRISONER KING.

I had been at Becclesfield and the other priſoner, and we found the bag with the geeſe and ducks.

BOTH GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

961. JOHN WOOD was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 20th day of September, one ſow pig, price 28s. the property of John Thornton.

JOHN THORNTON ſworn.

I loſt a ſow pig on the 20th of September laſt, I ſaw it the ſame day about eleven before my door, on the outſide with another, I did not miſs it till night, I found the pig in Wingfield-ſtreet at the priſoner's, in the houſe on the further end, on the ſide of the bed, it was alive; I deſcribed it as a white ſow, I aſked him if he had ſuch a one, he ſaid he loſt one but it was a black and white one, and had found it again, I aſked him to let me look at that pig which he had, he ſaid he would give me his word that was not the pig, I aſked him to let me look at it, it was penned up in a little cloſe place, he opened the door about half way, he ſaid, you ſee the pig is not yours, immediately my white ſow ruſhed out from behind the black and white one; it was a place parted off with ſome kind of laths, I did not take particular notice, it was cloſed off from the reſt of the room, I called him a d——nd raſcal, he then ſaid it was a woman's ſow, and ſoon after that, he ſaid it was his own, he ſaid he bought it of a man in a green coat, I ſaid it was mine, and to convince him ſhe would run home to my houſe, he ſaid that was no proof, for a ſtrange ſow would run into any body's houſe, there was a mark in the ſide as if it was intended for Smithfield, he lived from me above half a mile, or three quarters; he deſired me to let it reſt a few days while he got the dealer he bought it of, I immediately went to the Rotation-office in Whitechapel, and brought back an officer to his houſe, I then offered to let it looſe, and he ſaid I ſhould have it without that, on Monday he brought ſeveral people out of Petticoat-lane to ſwear to the ſow, that they ſold it him, ſtrangers that I never ſaw in my life, I let them all look at it, and none of them would have any thing at all to do with it, but left him; I am perfectly convinced it is my ſow, I have no mark, but I know it by the ring, I knew it immediately as I ſaw it, the ſow is now at my houſe.

By what marks do you know it?—It is all over white, except a little black over the eye, I cut the ſtring looſe, it was home five minutes minutes before me, I am ſure the priſoner ſaid he had but one pig at home, and that was black and white.

WILLIAM WASTE ſworn.

I live at Mr. Grant's in Whitechapel-road,——

(The other two witneſſes deſired to go out by the Court.)

Waſte. I was in my maſter's ſhop, and I ſaw the priſoner driving this ſow along between eleven and twelve in the forenoon, on the 20th of September, it was about a dozen doors from the proſecutor's houſe, I heard my maſter aſk him what he was going to do with the ſow, he ſaid he was going to catch it and take it home, a woman ſaid I will give any man a pot of beer that will catch it, my maſter ſaid he could catch it in five minutes, but he ſaid it was not his.

Did your maſter know it?—I do not know that he did.

JOHN BUD ſworn.

I know this ſow, he had had it three months, I ſaw it after it was loſt, it was the ſame ſow, I live next door to the proſecutor, I ſaw it every day.

——— ANDREWS ſworn.

I apprehended the priſoner, I knew him, the ſtye was a place made up by the ſide of the room, I did not know that he kept pigs, he ſaid, he bought the pig at Smithfield, on the Friday before, this was Friday the 23d; on Monday the priſoner appeared, and brought a young man that he bought it off, and that man gave ſuch a ſlight account of the matter, that he was detained till ſix in the evening, and in going over the way the young man ſaid, he would fetch his father, when the evening came no body came to ſpeak for him, neither father or ſon, upon that he was committed.

Did the man ſay he ſold Wood the pig?——He ſaid he did.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I have the man that ſold the pig to me.

Court. Let the priſoner's witneſſes be examined ſeparately.

JOSEPH INGRAM ſworn.

I live in Old-ſtreet-road.

What are you?——A dealer in hogs.

Did you ever ſell a pig to this man?——Never in my life, I ſold his wife a pig, it may be a month or five weeks ago from this time, I know his wife by ſight, I ſell ſome thouſands in a year.

Did you ever ſee that pig ſince?——Never.

You was not ſhewn this pig of the proſecutor's?——No.

What ſort of pig was it?——I really forget, it was eighteen ſhillings, or eighteen ſhillings and ſixpence, I believe it was a white one, as near as I can gueſs.

Was it black and white?——I cannot certainly ſay, but I believe it was a white one, there might be ſome black ſpots.

Where did you ſell it to her?——In Smithfield market; I was ſubpœned this day by an old woman.

ELIZABETH MUNDAY ſworn.

I live in Three-tun-alley.

What are you?——I deal in the ſtreets, fiſh or any thing for an honeſt living; I ſaw the pig that John Wood bought on Friday the 16th of September; he loſt it, I went with his wife to look for it, we could not find it, when we came home the old ſow had come home before the new one; I was not with him when he found it, I ſaw him afterwards bringing it down the alley, between eleven and twelve, I live cloſe by him.

Who deſired you to come here as a witneſs?——The priſoner, I have been ſeveral days.

When did he deſire you to come?——I cannot particularly ſay the day.

Where did you ſee him when he deſired you to ſay ſo?—I had been to ſee him in the priſon, I went along with his wife, as we were neighbours together.

THOMAS COLLING ſworn.

I live in Dorſet-ſtreet, I am a butcher

I bought a pig and gave eighteen ſhillings and ſixpence for it, I cannot juſtly ſay the day, it was on a Friday, it was loſt on a Saturday, I bought it at Smithfield, it was a white pig, as they informed me, I never ſaw the pig.

Court. What is the priſoner?——He ſells things in the ſtreet.

Priſoner. I have a gentleman to give me a character, but his wife lays in, and he cannot leave her.

GUILTY.

Court. Under the particular circumſtances that attend your caſe, the ſentence of the law is, that you be fined one ſhilling and diſcharged.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

962. ROBERT ROBERTS and GEORGE RANKIN were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 18th day of October, one hundred pounds weight of butter, value 3l. the property of Thomas Wilcox, and Robert Wilcox.

THOMAS WILCOX ſworn.

Who is your partner?—Robert Wilcox, I only ſpeak as to the property.

GABRIEL JOHNSON ſworn.

Laſt Tueſday evening, I ſaw the two priſoners, I ſaw Rankin with a caſk of butter on his ſhoulder, in Newgate-ſtreet, going from Cheapſide; Rankin had the butter, I turned round and followed them; Rankin pitched it down by the Horſe-ſhoe paſſage, Roberts helped him down with it, Rankin ſat upon it, and wrapped his coat round it, the other went away towards Cheapſide; I went over to Mr. Clement's, and Mr. Holmes came with me, I aſked Rankin to get up that I might look at the marks, Rankin ſaid he did not know what it was, he was left in charge; and as I was ſtanding, Rankin ſtruck me over the the head, and ran off, I called out ſtop thief! Mr. Holmes ran after him, and he was ſtopped and brought back, I am ſure he is the ſame man, the other was gone; a coach came to the Horſe-ſhoe paſſage to take up the butter, and the coachman aſked what he was to take up, Roberts afterwards d——d his eyes, and ſaid if ever he got clear of this, he would do for me.

——— HOLMES ſworn.

I found the priſoner Rankin at the end of the Horſe-ſhoe-paſſage, waiting while Roberts was gone for a coach; and I followed him and ſaw him ſtopped in St. Paul's Church-yard, I am poſitive to the man.

What became of the butter?——It was left in Newgate-ſtreet till the next day, he never was quite out out of my ſight, he was then taken to Guildhall, I obſerved the marks.

(The caſk produced and depoſed to.)

Court to Wilcox. Do you know the caſk?——I do, it is marked T. R. No. 155, it was ſent by our carman between two and three o'clock on Tueſday.

JOHN EVANS ſworn.

I am the carman, I was bringing two caſks of butter from Marybone, from a gentleman who did not approve of it, I was bringing it back to Mr. Wilcox, I loſt it between St. Paul's chain, and Watling-ſtreet, I firſt miſſed it in Watling-ſtreet, near the corner of Friday-ſtreet.

THOMAS WARREN ſworn.

I heard the cry of ſtop thief! I went to St. Paul's Church-yard, and there I took charge of the priſoner Rankin, the proſecutor ſaid he ſhould know the other man if he ſaw him.

PRISONER RANKIN's DEFENCE.

I was coming down Newgate-ſtreet, and I met a potter who aſked me to help him down with his load, I am not able to ſtand under ſuch a load myſelf, he ſaid he would call a coach, and I ſat down upon the caſk by his deſire, that was my defence before.

PRISONER ROBERTS's DEFENCE.

I know nothing about it, on the day that this happened I was at a public house waiting for a young man that was bringing me home a pair of shoes, I never was out of his company till between eleven and twelve that night.

JOHN WEST sworn.

I live in Water-lane, Black-friars, I am a shoe-maker, the prisoner gave me a pair of shoes to mend last Saturday, I was to have brought them home on Monday night, but did not; I took them to the Crown, at Smithfield-bars, on Tuesday afternoon, rather before five; the prisoner Roberts was there, and we staid there till eleven, I never parted company, I was with him all the time, I never was out of his company.

Who else was in company besides the prisoner and you?—One William Marsh.

Did he come with you, or was he with the prisoner?—He went with me to carry home the shoes.

Did you find the prisoner Roberts there or did he come in after you?——He was there when I went in.

How came you to stay so long?——I do not know, I was in company, I went home at eleven my usual hour, there might be five or six in company with the prisoner.

Men or women?—No women at all, all men.

Did you sup there?——Yes.

What had you for supper?—I had a slice of bread and cheese.

What had the prisoner for supper?——I do not recollect.

What had Marsh?—I do not recollect there was anything else but bread and cheese for supper.

What had you to drink, beer or spirits?—Beer, I do not recollect I had anything but beer.

Was there any spirits called for by the company?—Not to my knowledge.

Who went away first?—We all went away together, I saw no more of them.

Was the landlord at home?—He was not at home all the time.

How do you know he was not at home?——Because he was in a different place, he was in Newgate, if I must speak plain.

What was he there for?——That I do not know, I did not understand that he was there till that night I went there.

What is the landlord's name?—James Beaman.

WILLIAM MARSH sworn.

What are you?——I am a smith.

Where do you live?——In Baldwin's gardens.

Do you know the prisoner Roberts?—Yes, very well.

Do you know the Crown at Smithfield-bars?——Yes.

Was you ever there?—Yes.

When?——Every night this week, and most part of the day, it is a house I frequently use.

Do you know the landlord?——Yes.

What he that keeps it now?——One Crabb has kept it within this day or two.

Who was the landlord when you used to frequent it?——James Beaman.

Where is he?——I believe he is in trouble.

What trouble?——I cannot say, I believe he is in Newgate about some silk, I think I have heard say.

Did you ever see the prisoner Roberts at that house?—Yes, on Tuesday night.

How came he there?—He was drinking there in the same box that I was.

Who did he come in with?—He came in by himself, I saw nobody with him.

Did you see him come in?—Yes, I did, and I asked him to drink.

How long had you been there before him?—I was there all day from about ten in the morning.

Did he join company with you when he came in?—Yes.

What time did he come in?—Between four and five.

How long did he and you stay there?—

We

We ſtopped there till eleven I ſuppoſe, or it might be ſomething more.

Were any body elſe in company?——Yes, there were three or four more.

Who were there?——There was one Joſeph Dean, he is at the door now, and one William Jenks, there were ſeveral in the tap-room, but nobody elſe that I knew in company with me and the priſoner, there were about four of us in company, there was a man that went by the name of John the footman, I did not know what his other name was, (this is the man.

(Pointing to John Weſt.)

How long did he come in before the priſoner?——The priſoner came in a good while before Weſt.

When did Weſt come in?——About ſix o'clock I believe it might be; I cannot rightly ſay, I believe it to be between five and ſix.

Did anybody come in with him?—No.

How many women were there in company?——I do not recollect ever a one.

What, not the whole evening?——No, they might come in backwards and forwards, but never to ſet down.

What had you for ſupper?——Nothing.

Had anybody anything?——Not that I ſaw, nobody had anything to eat while I was there.

Who went away firſt?——We all came away together; I was acquainted with Weſt before, he came there about ſome ſhoes.

How long was the priſoner out during that time?——I never knew him out, not at all, only to make water, and in again.

You were there a conſiderable time before the priſoner?——Yes, I was there at ten in the morning, I was not out till I came out for good at eleven, I came in between four and five, and the priſoner between five and ſix.

Then it is not true that you went with Weſt to help him to carry the ſhoes home?——I did not.

You did not come in with Weſt?——No.

That is not true?——No.

What did you drink, beer or ſpirits?——Beer, and ſeveral three-penny worths of gin and water.

The priſoner Rankin called two witneſſes who gave him a good character.

BOTH GUILTY.

Court. In the firſt place let theſe two witneſſes Weſt and Marſh be committed to Newgate.

Court to Priſoners. You have both of you been convicted upon very ſatisfactory evidence which has perfectly convinced my mind, as well as that of the Jury, of your guilt; and from the circumſtances of this caſe, you appear to be extremely improper and dangerous men to be ſuffered to go at large in this country, to have an opportunity of plundering your innocent fellow-citizens; it is therefore neceſſary for juſtice, and the public ſafety, that I ſhould ſend both of you out of the country; but I think it neceſſary to make a diſtinction in your caſes now, though there was none before, for I conſider the guilt of Roberts as greatly aggravated by the perjured defence he has ſet up in a Court of juſtice; I have always kept a very ſtrict watch over perjured defences ſet up by witneſſes, and I have thought it my duty to put theſe witneſſes into a mode of receiving the puniſhment they have deſerved; but I have alſo thought it right in all caſes to increaſe as much as the law will permit me, the puniſhment of thoſe offenders who have dared to ſet up ſuch a perjured defence; for the miſchief of the perjury does not merely ſtop in the perverſion of juſtice in that ſingle trial in which it is produced, but it has a tendency to deprive innocent men of the benefit of that ſort of teſtimony, and to render it ſuſpected even if true; theſe ſort of defences have been ſo frequent, that the moment they are mentioned they are looked upon with a jealous eye, both by the Court and Jury, and the conſequence of which may ſometimes be to pervert the truth on the other ſide, and to render it not worthy of that attention it might deſerve. The ſentence

ſentence of the Court therefore is, that you Robert Roberts be tranſported to Africa for the term of ſeven years, and that you George Rankin be tranſported for the term of ſeven years to ſuch place or places as his Majeſty with the advice of his privy council ſhall think fit to declare and appoint.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

963. WILLIAM CASELEY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 6th day of October, one woollen box, value 1s. five teaſpoons, value 12s. 6d. a tableſpoon, value 8s. a ſilver punch ladle, value 6s. a pair of ſtays, value 14s. a cap, value 2s. an apron, value 1s. nine children's linen caps, value 2s. four ſhirts, value 1s. two clouts, value 1s. one child's dimity robe, value 2s. the property of John Holman Deverell, in his dwelling houſe.

And JAMES SCOTT was indicted for feloniouſly receiving the ſame goods, on the ſame day, knowing them to be ſtolen.

JOHN HOLMAN DEVERELL ſworn.

I live in Whalebone-court, Bell-alley, on Thurſday the 6th of October I went to take a walk about five in the evening to the Shepherd and Shepherdeſs, and on my return I heard that I had been robbed during my abſence, and I ſuſpected the priſoner Caſeley.

How came you to ſuſpect him?—Knowing his indifferent principle; he was about my houſe frequently, not employed by me, but he had free acceſs to my houſe to eat and drink; I took him up with one Hillman, and in Hillman's pocket was a piece of flannel found, that was locked in the box that was ſtolen from my premiſes: I got a ſearch warrant to ſearch Scott's houſe; when we went there, the property was firſt denied by Mrs. Scott, but Mrs. Scott ſaid that Mr. Caſeley and Mr. Hillman were in the cellar with her huſband, and we found in the houſe all the things mentioned in the indictment, the ſtays and cap were thrown out of the window into a gutter, and a child's bedgown and other things were thrown out of the window into the gutter.

JAMES MILNER ſworn.

I ſearched Scott's houſe and found theſe things.

What is Scott?——He is a cheeſemonger in Widegate-alley, Biſhopſgate-ſtreet.

(The ſpoons and punch-ladle depoſed to, marked I. D.)

Proſecutor. There were two Stock receipts for 3 per cent. conſolidated Bank Annuities in my houſe when I went out.

WILLIAM WILLIAMS ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner Caſeley come in about half after ſeven, at one Knap's in Angel-alley, at the George, and Hillman was with him, he brought in a box and ſtrove to open it with his hands to lift it, he pulled out a key and tried to unlock it, but the key would not go in; in about three or four minutes they went out together and took the box with them; they were gone an hour and a half, and the proſecutor was waiting for them, as ſoon as he ſaw them he pitched them both into a box and charged the watch with them; about two or three in the afternoon I went to Scott's with a ſearch warrant, and the officer went up ſtairs and brought down this bundle.

Hannah Horne, the priſoner Scott's ſervant, ſaw Caſley and the other man come in with the box and go down in the cellar with Scott.

The two watchmen confirmed the finding the things at the houſe.

Priſoner Caſley. My Lord, my wife lives with the proſecutor, ſhe and him went out.

Court. What, is ſhe his ſervant?—No; he took her from me, ſhe is my lawful wife, I have ſix or ſeven children by her, I have three children living now, it was unknown to me ſome time where they were, and yeſterday terday was fortnight ſhe contrived to go out with him that I ſhould take his property, and ſhe would follow me with the reſt as ſoon as ſhe conveniently could; this is a fact, this man took my wife, and her property was in this box, which was the ſtays and cap and other materials; as to the ſpoons, that this man ſays were his, before ever I knew that ſhe cohabited with this man, ſhe brought them to the houſe, ſix months before, and ſaid they were her property; I diſpoſed of them to Mr. Scott as ſuch.

Court to proſecutor. What do you ſay to this?——What he ſays concerning his wife, is doing his wife a deal of injuſtice, he is ruining his children, I took two of them out of Shoreditch work-houſe, and teach them the fear of man and the fear of God.

Court. But what do you keep the wife too?—Yes; do not think that I want to diſtreſs the man of a wife; no! I took that woman as a proſtituted being from the ſtreet.

So you took her to keep her from proſtitution?——I do my Lord.

Have you any children?—No; but I keep three of this man's, as they ſay; ſuppoſing I do live with his wife, they ought not to rob me, if I have done wrong there is a court of juſtice for me; theſe things were always in my poſſeſſion, the box was mine, the punch-ladle was given me by my uncle, the linen was for the children of my firſt wife.

What age is this woman that lives with you?—I ſuppoſe ſhe is about thirty.

She may have more children and it may be uſeful to keep the linen?—It will be ſo.

How long has this woman been with you?——About two years; this man has had free acceſs of my houſe, they were always as intimate as could be, as far as the cupboard, but nothing further.

And ſo you keep theſe things to ſupply the children this woman may bring you?—Yes.

I ſuppoſe you know, if you convict this poor fellow of this offence he will be hanged, and you will have no more trouble?—No, my Lord.

Court. Let us hear no more of ſuch a ſtory as this; your time is too precious Gentlemen to be waſted upon ſuch a tale as this.

Jury. My Lord, we are perfectly ſatisfied.

BOTH NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

964. JOHN FARROL was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Jane Morgan, ſpinſter, about the hour of three in the night, on the 1ſt of October, and burglariouſly ſtealing therein one woollen jacket, value 5s. one linen jacket, value 2s. a pair of ſtuff ſhoes, value 12d. a pair of buckles, value 6d. a pack of cards, value 2d. her property.

There being no evidence, the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

965. MARY BURCH was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 12th of October, one cotton gown, value 8s. one petticoat, value 8s. one bed-gown, value 12d. a pair of ſtays, value 2s. a cloak, value 5s. a cap, value 4s. a hat, value 2s. the property of Charlotte Brand, widow.

CHARLOTTE BRAND ſworn.

The priſoner robbed me and ſtripped me of my clothes, on the 12th of this month I was coming home and accidentally I met the priſoner ſomewhere in Oxford-road, I cannot tell where ſhe met me, I went home with her, but I cannot tell what part ſhe met me in no more than the court.

You are a ſtranger in town?——I came from Spain but I have been in England going on theſe two years, I was born in Spain, my father is Engliſh, my mother is Spaniſh, I was brought up among Engliſh people, I live at preſent in Great Saint Andrew's-ſtreet.

Where had you been?——I went to ſee an acquaintance of mine that lived in Bird-ſtreet, I went home with the priſoner and I could not ſleep all night, the priſoner ſpoke to me by my name, I ſaw her once before, ſhe aſked me to go home with her and lodge with her till morning, I was glad of it to go out of the rain, for I was all wet, and I went home with her and ſtaid all night, in the morning I got up and I was not very well, and ſhe ſaid ſtrip off all your clothes and lay down and get a ſleep, you are in an honeſt houſe, I ſtripped ſome of my clothes off and kept ſome on, I was afraid to ſtrip them all off, though I was not afraid of robbing me, but I thought it was not proper that I ſhould ſtrip.

Was any body there but her and her child?——No, but I do not like a woman to ſtrip; in the morning I did ſtrip off my clothes, and when I fell in ſleep, ſhe left me naked all but my ſhift, I waked, I looked all about, I was locked in, I made myſelf eaſy, I could not keep my eyes open, I was quite heavy, and ſomehow I was not very well, and ſo at night ſhe came home and ſhe told me to go about my buſineſs, and turned me out in my ſhift, and I cried out murder, and they got blankets to cover me.

Are you ſure you was ſober that night when you went to ſleep?——I was ſober enough; the conſtable found the clothes where they were pawned, they were found on the Tueſday, the priſoner was taken up the ſame night.

——— FREEMAN ſworn.

I took the priſoner to the watch-houſe, and found the things at different pawnbrokers; the priſoner ſaid ſhe pawned them to get a breakfaſt; no promiſe was made her.

The different pawnbrokers produced the things which they took in, ſome of the priſoner, and ſome of her daughter.

(Depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

On Sunday night, at one o'clock, I met the proſecutrix, and a man with her, they aſked me to recommend them a lodging, I ſaid I did not know I could; they aſked me where I lived, and went home with me, and the man that was with her ſent for two pots of beer and a quartern of gin, they deſired to have my bed, and the man ſtaid till about ſix, then he went away, and ſhe ſent me for a pot of hot, which coſt eight-pence, and half a pint of gin, which coſt four-pence; after that ſhe ſent her cap and her ſtays by my child; I did not know ſhe ſent them.

GUILTY.

Privately whipped, and impriſoned ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

966. CHARLOTTE SPRINGMORE and MARY HARRISON were indicted, for that they, on the 30th of September laſt, in the King's highway, in a certain public ſtreet called Catherine-wheel-alley, unlawfully, wilfully, maliciouſly, and felonioufly, did make an aſſault upon Suſannah Edhouſe, with intent to burn, ſpoil, and deſtroy her clothes, and did ſpoil, burn, and deface, a certain garment of her the ſaid Suſannah, being one cloth cotton gown, value 10s. her property, being part of the apparel which ſhe had on her perſon, and then wore.

A ſecond count, for making an aſſault on her, with intent to ſpoil and deface the garments and clothes of the ſaid Suſannah, and then and there ſpoiling and defacing the ſame.

(The caſe opened by Mr. Silveſter.)

SUSANNAH EDHOUSE ſworn.

I live in Wingfield-ſtreet, oppoſite Catherine-wheel-alley, at the ſign of the Black Swan, a gin ſhop, and public houſe, at nine o'clock on Friday the 30th of September, I was croſſing the way, the two priſoners priſoners were ſtanding together at the uſual place, and Mary Harriſon and Charlotte Springmore ſaid to one another, there are ſo many fly whores now it is impoſſible for a public whore to get her living; they ſaid ſo becauſe I live with two ſingle men, and they ſaid a great many words which are ſcandalous to mention, and they immediately followed me down the Alley; the priſoner Springmore had chucked ſomething at me before on that evening, and therefore I turned my head over my ſhoulder, and kept looking behind me; juſt as I got to the corner I ſaw Mary Harriſon throw ſomething upon me, and out of a cup or ſmall ſlop baſon on the right ſide of my clothes, and I clapped my gown together; I ſhewed it to my maſter, and the gown was burnt very much, my maſter threw cold water upon it directly; the conſtable has the gown.

(The gown produced, burned through and through.)

Mr. Garrow, priſoner's counſel. Are theſe holes in conſequence of that ſtuff being thrown on?——Yes.

What are you?——I am only ſervant, I am not miſtreſs.

A little bit of jealouſy, I ſuppoſe?——I never had any words with them.

Who was it that told you that you could not do any thing to them for burning your clothes in the houſe? — One of the clerks at Hicks's Hall.

At that time had you made any complaint of any thing being thrown upon you in the ſtreet?——No.

This is a gin ſhop?——Yes.

I am afraid theſe women conſume a great deal of their money there?—— What they wanted they had.

Do you remember their coming in on the evening when this happened? — Yes, they followed me in directly.

What did they do with this cup or baſon?—Springmore had it in her hand when I came in.

Was Mr. Wawill there? — Yes, he is a tallow-chandler.

Did not you ſay your gown was burnt, but did not know by whom?——No, I did not, I went to the Juſtice, and made my complaint, and the women were diſcharged.

Then Mr. Wawill went to the Juſtice after?——Yes.

And Mr. Wawill was very angry with the Juſtice for diſcharging them?—Yes.

Court. What complaint did you make at firſt to the Juſtice?— About this burning my handkerchief on the Monday night before, and on the Friday night following, that was the complaint I made to the Juſtice.

You went there by the advice of Mr. Wawill?——Yes.

How came you then not to tell the Juſtice of what they had done in Catherine-wheel-alley, this had happened in Catherine-wheel-alley before you went to the Juſtice's?—Yes.

And did you tell the Juſtice of this that had been done in the Alley when you went?—Yes.

Are you ſure of that?——Yes.

Recollect yourſelf; was not the gown that you have produced burnt in the manner it is by what they did in the houſe?— No, there were theſe ſmall holes burnt in the houſe, but not thoſe large ones; I am clear in that; I had the gown on when I went to the Juſtice, I told him that ſome part was burnt in the houſe, and the remainder in the ſtreet at nine in the evening.

Mr. Silveſter. Who was the Juſtice?——Juſtice Staples in Whitechapel.

ABRAHAM WAWILL ſworn.

I am a tallowchandler in Wentworth-ſtreet, Spital-fields; as I was returning home from Whitechapel through Catherine-wheel-alley, about nine, I met Suſannah Edhouſe with ſome beer in her hand, and the two priſoners at the bar behind her, I then paſſed them, and went to the public houſe where this girl lives, the Black Swan in Roſe-lane, which is three doors from my houſe, and my houſe is oppoſite Catherine-wheel-alley, acroſs the road, I went into the bar,

bar, and ſet down with the landlord, and had a pint of beer, and before I drank any of the beer I ſaw theſe two girls go out of the tap-room, and in five or ſix minutes the proſecutrix came in and ſaid the two priſoners had burnt her again, upon which I ſaid, then they burnt you when I paſſed you, for one of them had a ſmall cup in her hand, the girl came into the bar where I was, and the maſter took up the gown, and it burnt his fingers, and turned them quite yellow, and I took it up, and it burnt my fingers; I ſays to the maſter, ſure there is ſome law for this, or elſe we ſhall all be burnt; ſo I went to Mr. Quarril's, and he ſays, go and take them. and keep them as felons; there is no occaſion for a warrant, for I have no warrants, or elſe I would make out one, ſo an officer came back, and the priſoners were ſitting in the Swan tap-room, and they were taken to the watch-houſe; and the next day at twelve, I went to the Exciſe-office to pay my duty, and when I returned I ſaw them at large in the ſtreets, which rather ſurpriſed me, and I went up to Mr. Staples and enquired into it, and they were taken up again, and they were committed; when the girl came in and ſaid ſhe was burnt, it ſhot into my head directly.

Mr. Garrow. You did not ſee them do anything with the cup?——No.

I have your examination here, in which you poſitively ſwore that you ſaw them throw it?——Upon a ſecond recollection, I ſaid I ſaw a movement of the hand, which you will ſee in the ſecond examination.

(Reads his examination.)

" I ſaw either the ſaid Charlotte or Mary " throw ſome liquid out of a cup or earth- " en veſſel upon the clothes of the ſaid Su- " ſannah Edhouſe."

How long have you uſed this gin-ſhop? ——I have uſed it for beer theſe four years; the two priſoners ſtood over there.

They were unfortunate proſtitutes, that were great nuiſances to you?——Yes.

You wiſhed to get rid of them?—Yes, they have a right to be got rid of.

Certainly, by legal means, but not by bringing proſecutions, which they do not deſerve.

Court to Proſecutrix. I think you told me that your head was turned round, and that you ſaw Mary Harriſon throw ſomething upon you?——Yes.

How long ſince have you recollected that?——The very moment it was done.

But you had forgot it the next morning at the Juſtice's?——I ſaid the ſame words there.

(Reads.) " The ſaid Charlotte and " Mary followed her into the ſaid alley, " and there one of them, which I cannot " ſay, as they were walking arm in arm, " having a teacup in her hand, threw " ſomething upon her clothes, which ſhe " felt."

Mr. Garrow to Wavil. This proſecution is carried on by a company of linen-drapers?——It is.

Court. This ſtory is viſibly mended, is anybody here that was preſent at the Juſtices the firſt evening?——Andrews was.

——— ANDREWS ſworn.

I am a conſtable, I went with the young woman to Mr. Quarril's, ſhe told her ſituation, and ſhewed her gown; he ſaid, there was no occaſion for a warrant; ſhe ſaid that theſe two women ſhe ſaw in the alley, and that they threw ſome ſtuff upon her out of the cup; ſhe firſt complained that ſomething had been thrown in the houſe, and burnt ſeveral holes, and then ſhe ſaid in the alley afterwards, they threw ſome ſtuff upon her.

Did ſhe ſay that upon your oath?—— Yes.

Are you ſure of that?——Yes, I was preſent before Mr. Staples, when they were diſcharged.

What did ſhe tell Mr. Staples the firſt time ſhe was examined before him?—Mr. Staples diſcharged them on account of there being no evidence.

What ſtory did ſhe tell him?——She told him the ſame as now, ſhe told him before in the houſe and in the ſtreet.

Mr.

Mr. Garrow. Wawill was not examined then?—No; this was about twelve o'clock on the Saturday, then they were discharged, then they were taken up again and Mr. Wawill attended.

Jury. Did ſhe ſay that either of theſe parties threw it upon her?——She mentioned Mary Harriſon, and ſaid they were arm in arm together.

BOTH GUILTY.

Court to Priſoners. Priſoners, you have been convicted of an offence which is of great malignity and evil conſequence to the public, and this being the firſt inſtance of a trial of this kind in my remembrance here, and the court having before them perſons who ſtand in that ſituation you do, for we are now at liberty (though I wiſhed not for it to make any impreſſion on the minds of the Jury before,) to take notice of your very abandoned character and conduct; I therefore think I ſhall do juſtice to the public to enforce this law in its ſeverity, and therefore the ſentence of the Court is, that you and each of you be tranſported for ſeven years to ſuch place as his Majeſty by the advice of his Privy Councel ſhall think fit to declare and appoint.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

967. JOHN SIMMONS was indicted for that he, on the 22d of September laſt, 30lb. weight of lead, value 2s. belonging to Samuel Spooner, affixed to a certain dwelling-houſe of his, feloniouſly did rip, cut, and break, with intent to ſteal.

The WATCHMAN ſworn.

Between the hours of three and four in the morning the proſecutor called watch, watch, three or four times, the proſecutor called me and the priſoner was there with ſome lead, and the priſoner ſaid he did it for want.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was coming home, and ſomebody chucked up my hat there, and I went for it; what I ſaid to the watchman was, becauſe I was frightened.

Jury. My Lord, ſome of the Jury are not ſatisfied, unleſs the proſecutor was here.

Court. You hear, Gentlemen, he was taken in the fact, and owned it directly.

GUILTY.

To be whipped and impriſoned ſix months.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury, before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

968. THOMAS BRETT was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 19th of January laſt, nine dead fowls, value 19s. the property of John King.

The proſecutor and witneſſes called on their recognizances, and not appearing, the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

---

969. WILLIAM SMITH, otherwiſe NEWMAN, was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 26th of September laſt, twelve paſte ſhoe-buckles ſet in ſilver, value 10l. the property of John Tirbett, in his dwelling houſe.

JOHN TIRBETT ſworn.

I am a jeweller in St. Martin's-court, I loſt ſeveral paſte buckles ſet in ſilver, value 10l. they were in my ſhew-glaſs, in my ſhop, which is a part of my dwelling houſe, I never ſaw the priſoner before, my wife found twelve of them again in my preſence, they were found under the ſhew-glaſs; I ſaw the priſoner with his hand in the glaſs caſe take the buckles out, I faſtened him, and he dropped the property immediately, that was about eight in the evening.

evening, they were dropped on the ground in the ſtreet.

Was his hand out of the ſhew-glaſs, or in the ſhew-glaſs, when you caught him?——Out of the ſhew-glaſs; a bullock was drove through the court, and he was one of the followers; my wife only took them up, I ſaw her take them up.

Did he break the glaſs, or did he open it any way?——I cannot ſay whether he opened it or no, there were three ſhew-glaſſes broke at that time, they were whole before.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I had been up in Holborn, the bullock was coming along, and run after us, and going through this alley the bullock broke the windows, and knocked down this gentleman's ſhew-glaſs, I was eating an apple at the time, and the gentleman came and ſaid I had been having my hand in at his ſhew-glaſs; he immediately took me into his ſhop, and the butcher that was ſtanding by ſaid I did not touch anything.

Court to Proſecutor. Did the bullock break the ſhew-glaſs?—I believe he might part, but not the whole.

ROBERT LAMB ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner drop the buckles out of his hand; the bullock was not then come ſo far as the ſhew-glaſs.

Proſecutor. I believe that I miſtook, I believe the bullock was gone paſt.

Lamb. I believe it was gone paſt, but I ſaw the priſoner drop the property, I am ſure of that.

Proſecutor. Lamb came up the inſtant that I collared him.

ROBERT MALER ſworn.

I live with Mr. Tirbett, I ſaw the priſoner's hand in the ſhew-glaſs, taking the things out; I believe it was broke before.

Jury. Where was you when you ſaw his hand in the glaſs?——At the ſhop door.

Court to Priſoner. What are you?—A cooper.

Jury. Was the ſhew-glaſs thrown down by the ox?——No.

Jury to Proſecutor. Was your ſtall board out according to act of parliament?—Yes. Then this glaſs was beyond that?—Yes.

GUILTY.

Of ſtealing, but not in the dwelling houſe.

To be impriſoned twelve months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

976. ESTHER DAVIS was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 6th day of October, one linen handkerchief, value 3s. one gold watch, value 20l. one gold chain, value 8l. two keys, value 4s. four ſtone ſeals ſet in gold, value 3l. the property of George Snowdon, privily from his perſon.

The Proſecutor not appearing, the priſoner was

ACQUITTED.

---

971. CHARLES KINROSS was indicted for burglariouſly and feloniouſly breaking and entering the dwelling houſe of Eſther Caſſon, about the hour of eleven in the night, on the 19th day of October, with intent her goods and chattles in the ſame dwelling houſe then being, burglariouſly to ſteal.

(The caſe opened by Mr. James.)

ESTHER CASSON ſworn.

I live at No. 17, Nightingale-Lane, I have never been well ſince my huſband was killed, he is the officer that was killed at Covent Garden; we were all ſitting at the kitchen fire, there was James Steward, James Barlow, and Elizabeth Wood, it was about half after eleven on the night of the 19th of November, we have a half door before the ſtreet door, a hatch that was ſhut, I am poſitive it was ſhut, and the door on this ſide the hatch was ſhut, and locked; and ſuddenly as we were ſit-ting by the fire, I obſerved both the doors, with a great ruſh come againſt the wall of the paſſage, the ſtreet door is about eight yards from the place where I was ſitting, I had an opportunity of ſeeing the door burſt open, I jumped up immediately, and the priſoner was at the kitchen door in the houſe, and I ſeized him by the collar, I diſcovered the priſoner immediately after the door was broke open, I ſaid to him, you villain, are you come to rob me, what brought you into my houſe, and my gown being long my lodger could not get out behind me to take them, becauſe the place is but narrow, the other men were outſide of the door coming to ruſh in upon me, my lodger went out into the ſtreet, as I thought to take ſome more of them, but he returned, and the priſoner was trying to get from me, and he forced the priſoner into the kitchen, and called watch, and he was taken into cuſtody, I keep lodgers, ſeafaring men, I had two at that time, but they were both in bed.

Did you know the priſoner before?—All the knowledge I had of him, was by his paſſing the door, we have two bad houſes near.

Jury. Pleaſe to put that queſtion very cloſe to the proſecutrix, whether ſhe does not know the priſoner before?

Mr. Knowles, priſoner's counſel. I was going to aſk that queſtion?—I have ſeen him paſs before in bad company, but I never ſaid a word to him.

I believe at this time you was in high converſation with ſeveral of your lodgers?—We were in converſation.

Were not you ſpeaking rather loud?—No, Sir.

Could not any body going by hear you? No, Sir, they could not.

The lights were not out?——No, Sir, thank God.

You have ſeen this man before?—Yes.

Do not you know what he is?—I do not look upon him to be good.

That is no anſwer, do you know what he is?—I do not.

Has not he frequently played a tune to you?—Never in his life.

Will you ſwear that?—Yes.

Do not you know this man is frequently playing oppoſite to you on the clarinet?—Yes, but that is not to me.

Court. Do you know that this man plays upon a muſical inſtrument, near your houſe?—He never played to me, I have ſeen him playing in the open ſtreet.

As you knew him as playing about, are not you convinced by his being in your neighbourhood, that he knew you too?—Yes, he knew me to be a woman of property.

Was not he very well acquainted with your perſon?—No, Sir, he was not, why ſhould I make him acquainted with my perſon.

I did not aſk you as to any improper acquaintance; did not he know you in the ſtreet, when he met you?—I am a perſon that have lived near twenty years in that pariſh, and have always lived in credit.

Do you think that he has had an opportunity of ſeeing you often in the ſtreet, as well as you ſaw him?—Yes, Sir, I ſay ſo.

At the time this matter happened, did not a great many of your neighbours tell you who he was, that he was there upon a frolick?—No, Sir, never.

Has not this gentleman told you ſo?—Upon my oath no ſuch thing, not Mr. Dick, never opened his mouth upon the ſubject.

He did not make any demand of your money at that time?——No.

JAMES STEWART ſworn.

I was in this kitchen on the 19th of October, I went down into Sun-yard for a pot of beer, on my return home I ſhut the half door to, and the whole ſtreet door goes to with a kind of latch, and I ſhut it on the half lock, it was about half after eleven, we were ſitting talking by the fire ſide, and in a minute both the doors came ſlap in, Mrs. Caſſon being neareſt to the door, ſhe flew up and caught the priſoner by the collar, I thought to get paſt her, and apprehend ſome of the reſt; but I could not, I got entangled in her gown, and did not ſee the priſoner ſoner till ſhe had him by the collar, I puſhed him into the kitchen.

Mr. Knowles. You lodge there?—Yes.

Do not you know that ſhe and her neighbours are frequently quarrelling together?——I do not know that, I am at home but a little while, I do not know what is between her and anybody, I know there are people in that neighbourhood that do not wiſh her well.

Do not you know that there is great enmities between her and her neighbours?—Yes, there are, through that gentleman that ſtands alongſide of you; John Davis, and Jack Homan by name, now lodges there.

What! has he changed his name; what was his name formerly?—There is nobody elſe there now, there was me and James Barlow were ſitting in the room, and the proſecutor and the ſervant.

How many men lodged in the houſe?—Three; we were ſitting by the fire, talking, when he came in, all of a ſudden the door burſt open; they burſt in all at once.

Jury. Was there any violence made uſe of; was the ſtaple attempted, or lock?——No, Sir, not that I ſaw, but on the wood work, oppoſite the lock, ſome of the paint is rubbed off, as if ſome inſtrument had been uſed to pick the lock.

Who did that, you cannot tell?——No.

Court. Did you obſerve the lock before?——Yes.

Was the paint off before?——No.

When did you ſee it before the man came in?——The paint was not off before the door was burſt open; not at any time that I ſaw.

Court to Proſecutrix. How did he come in?——He forced in when the door was forced open.

What anſwer did he give you?——He ſhook and I ſhook.

Priſoner. Did not I come with my inſtrument in my hand, and aſk you if you wanted a tune?——Nothing of the kind, upon my oath; I never ſaw any inſtrument till the next morning at the Juſtices.

(N. B. The priſoner had his clarinet in his hand upon his trial.)

ELIZABETH WOOD ſworn.

The laſt witneſs went out for a pot of beer about eleven, and Mrs. Caſſon ſaid, have you faſtened the door, and he ſaid yes; nobody was out at the door after till that man was catched in the entry, all of a ſudden the door made a great noiſe, as if it had been the hatch, ſhe jumped up, and catched him faſt by the collar, and ſaid, you rogue, are you come to rob me; Stewart went to jump over her, and catched his foot in her gown; there were ſeveral at the door, but I do not know who they were; I never ſaw the priſoner till my miſtreſs got hold of him, I did not obſerve the manner in which the doors were burſt open.

Mr. Knowles. Your miſtreſs and her neighbours are not upon very good terms?——I do not know.

You do know?——I know there is a bit of a quarrel between Mr. Dick and my miſtreſs, but not the priſoner; I have ſeen the priſoner very often, he is conſtantly in the neighbourhood, playing in the ſtreet, or in that gentleman's houſe, or at the Crown, we were all talking together; our light was not out, we never burnt but one candle.

You know that your miſtreſs knew that young man?——She has ſeen him very often, it is impoſſible to be otherways, he is ſo often there, I have ſeen him playing in the ſtreets.

Were not the public houſes open in the ſtreets at that time?——I do not know.

The Remainder of this Trial in the next Part, which will be publiſhed in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middleſex,

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wedneſday the 19th of OCTOBER, 1785, and the following Days;

Being the EIGHTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Publiſhed by Authority.

NUMBER VIII. PART VI.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noſter Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE SIX-PENCE.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of Charles Kinroſs.

Court. Attend to my queſtion, does your door ſhut ſo very faſt that you cannot ſee whether there is any light in the houſe or not?—Not except there was a glimmer, it ſcarcely did, according to where the candle ſtands, but I never looked to ſee.

Court. It was a very moon ſhine night that night?——I cannot ſay.

Proſecutrix. It was light, for you could ſee acroſs the place, for there is not a glimmer of light could be ſeen through my door.

James Barlow called, but did not anſwer.

Court. Gentlemen, I do not know whether I need trouble the priſoner to make any defence.

Jury. My Lord, we are very well ſatisfied.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury, before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

972. JOSEPH FARRINGTON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 3d of October, one ſilver watch, value 10s. and one ſteel key, value 1d. the property of James King.

JAMES KING ſworn.

I loſt my watch in Halfmoon-alley, Biſhopſgate-ſtreet, but who took it I cannot ſay.

Did you ſee your watch ſnatched?—Yes, but it was done ſo ſuddenly that I could not tell who it was, it was one ſingle ſnatch; I think the perſon muſt follow me, and come abroad ſide of me, and then turn back and run, there was only one perſon, I turned and ran, and two men were taken, and ſomebody went and fetched the priſoner, he was fetched in three quarters of an hour, or an hour, I cannot ſay, they were all ſearched, and the watch was found on the priſoner; I was preſent when it was found, I am not ſure whether it was in his breeches or in his pocket, I could not ſwear to the watch; I have had it ſeventeen or eighteen years, and it had a very remarkable ſtring, and the perſon that cleaned it laſt there is his direction where he lives, I would not ſwear to the watch, nor did not, I have not the leaſt doubt in the world but it is my watch, becauſe of the man's name that cleaned it laſt; the ſtring is very remarkable, it was a bit of waſte ſtuff which I had, and I plaited it; the perſon that cleaned cleaned it his name is Richardſon, watch and clock-maker, Fore-ſtreet.

Had your ever noticed the maker's name or number?——No.

Had you often opened the watch ſo as to take notice of anything?—Not very often, it was a watch that I put into my pocket when I go into the country a fiſhing, and ſometimes I have it not in my pocket for ſix months together, the glaſs and hour-hand have been broke ſince I loſt it.

Do you think you can be ſure of the ſtring?—It is made of a bit of ſcarlet braid, ſuch as is uſed for ſtays, I ſuppoſe there never was ſuch another ſtring, from the glimpſe I had of the priſoner I do not think it was him that took it, I think it was a taller man, and one of the men that were taken firſt was a taller man.

I think you ſaid alſo you did not obſerve more than one perſon in ſight at the time?——No, only one perſon, I turned immediately.

In following that perſon did you get any glimpſe of him again?—Not at all, it is a long alley, I believe he was ſtopped in the alley, but there was not light enough to ſee at any diſtance.

Mr. Peatt, priſoner's council. Is the man that cleaned your watch a journeyman?—A maſter.

I ſuppoſe he does a good deal of buſineſs?—Yes.

I ſuppoſe it is uſual to put the name and directions in the caſes of all watches?——I believe it is.

With reſpect to that ſtring, you know ſtrings are various, like people's fancies, and ſuch a ſtring might, for what you know to the contrary, be put to fifty watches?——I did not ſay there never was ſuch a ſtring.

No, clearly not, though it is not uſual, yet it is poſſible that fifty other perſons have put ſuch a ſtring to their watch?——I will not ſay they would not.

You have already ſaid that whoſoever it was that ſnatched your watch you had juſt a glimpſe of him, and thought him rather taller than the priſoner?——Yes.

——SPENCER ſworn.

I was ſitting at my own door about half paſt nine on Monday night the third of October, and there was an alarm of ſtop thief, I ran directly, two men ran by and I ſtopped them, I took one, and one Brown took the other; Mr. King came up in two minutes, or leſs, and ſaid he was robbed, I took the two men to Biſhopſgate-ſtreet watch-houſe, and ſearched them; they ſaid they knew nothing of the watch, and Mr. King ſaid he thought one of them was the perſon, but he could not ſwear to one of them; he gave charge of them; I took them to the Poultry Compter, and being informed of the priſoner, I found him at the Ship Ale-houſe, Shoreditch; I aſked him if he had the property, he ſaid nothing; I brought him to Mr. King; Mr. King ſaid he did not know whether it was him or no; ſaid Mr. King, have you got any watch, and when he came into the public-houſe he ſaid, d——n my eyes, Mr. King, if I had known it was you I would have robbed one hundred before I would have done you; ſays Mr. King, have you got the watch, ſays he, I do not know; come with me and I will take you where it is; ſays I, you muſt not go out of my cuſtody, he deſired to go into a private room, for he wanted to ſpeak to Mr. King; we went up into a room, and he ſaid, ſhut the door, I was going to order ſomewhat, and I ſaw him clap his hand to his breeches, as if he was going to draw ſomething, he would not be ſearched, I took him up in my arms and laid him on the table, and took the watch out of his fob on the right hand ſide, Mr. King ſaid he thought he ſhould know his watch again; he deſcribed it as a ſmall ſized ſilver watch; ſays I, is that your watch, yes, ſays he, it is the ſtring I made myſelf.

Mr. Peatt. I ſuppoſe there was a good many people in the alley when you took theſe two people?—Yes.

You only ſuſpected them from their running, I ſuppoſe?—Yes.

JOHN DENT ſworn.

On Monday the 3d of October, I went into this public houſe. about half after nine, and I ſaw three young men drinking together till half patt nine, then they went on together, and in about five minutes there was the cry of ſtop thief; I ran out, and juſt as I got there ſome people were running, and I went up and ſaw two of theſe young men who had been drinking, I knew them again; I went and told the people of the public houſe, and the maid knowing them, we found out who was the third, and we took him to the watch-houſe; when he came to the public houſe, he ſaw Mr. King, and he ſaid is it you, d——n my eyes I have robbed an hundred people, and I would rob an hundred more before I would rob you.

Mr. Peatt. You do not know what the priſoner did after he left the public houſe? ——No.

STEPHEN JONES ſworn.

I was ſitting at the Marquis of Granby's door, and I heard the cry of ſtop thief; I met Spencer, and aſſiſted in taking the two men, and having information of the priſoner, we took him, and found the watch upon him.

Do you know the proſecutor, Mr. King? ——Yes, ſo far as this, I had carried ſilk to his houſe; he lives in Horſe-ſhoe-alley, at the ſign of the Crown, he is a ſilk weaver, I have carrried many bales of ſilk to him.

Court to Mr. King. Did you know the priſoner perſonally before?——I never ſaw him but once before, he might know me, my Lord, becauſe his father lives in a houſe that I have.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

As I was going down Biſhopſgate-ſtreet, a young lad came up to me, and asked me to buy this watch, and two men came acroſs the way, and I ſaid, I do not think you came honeſtly by this, he immediately run away, and I was ſo confuſed I did not know what to do; I went to the Black dog in Shoreditch, and told all the people how I came by it, and ſhewed it in the tap-room, and many people might hear of it in the neighbourhood; I ſaid a chap wanted me to buy this watch, and the people at the public houſe told me my beſt way was to take it up to ſome officer or other to advertize the watch, and I had not been out of the houſe two minutes before I was taken.

Have you anybody to prove this?——I think I have people here.

The priſoner called one witneſs to his character.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

973. JEFFERY CALLEN and CALEB WARREN were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 18th day of October, thirty-ſeven pounds weight of lead, value 3s. belonging to James Davis, and affixed to his houſe.

JAMES DAVIS ſworn.

I received information that the two men were getting lead from my houſe, I went to the houſe where I had the information, that the lead was carried to, and I ſaw the maſter of the ſhop, which employed the man, and deſcribed the men, and told him the matter, he ſeemed at firſt to take little notice of it, but I being a ward beadle, I ſaid he ſhould abide the conſequence, then he ſaid there were a bricklayer and a labourer at work at the top of the houſe, they were called down; they firſt denied the fact, but afterwards they owned that they had taken the lead, they were at work at an empty houſe that was lately Mr. Bell's, the houſe was next door but one to mine.

Did you make any threatening that you would ſend them to the Compter if they would not confeſs?——Nothing of that ſort, they offered to replace it, but I would not let them.

There were no promiſes or threats?—— None

None at all; I went up to the top of the houſe, I did not chuſe to venture out, but one of the workmen went, he is not here.

WILLIAM HAGGETT ſworn.

On Tueſday evening laſt a little after five, I was ſitting at the window at work, at the upper part of the houſe, and looking through the window, I ſaw two men on the roof of the houſe; next to that which was repairing; I looked at them, I ſaw one of them get on the proſecutor's houſe, and the roof being ſo narrow he could not walk on it, he got aſtride on the roof, and hitched himſelf on, when he came cloſe to the chimney he ſlid himſelf down, and there was a large ſheet of lead, which lay between the roof of the houſe, and the chimney, he began to pull that off, then I watched him, and he had like to have been down in the ſtreet, he ſlid down half a yard till his foot catched at an arch of the chimney, then he recovered himſelf and went to it again, and got it quite off, then he folded it up, and handed it to the other priſoner, and he put it into the garret window.

Had you an opportunity of ſeeing theſe men?——Yes, I looked through the window, and to be more particular, I opened the door of the leads of our houſe, and then I could ſee them more perfectly, they are the two priſoners, I am ſure of it.

How wide is the ſtreet acroſs that you ſaw them?——It is Fiſh-ſtreet hill, it is not a broad ſtreet.

Court to Davis. What quantity of lead was taken?——Thirty-ſeven pounds, I ſaw it weighed, I ſaw the lead in the houſe down ſtairs, I did not compare it.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was ordered by my maſter to repair this firſt old houſe, to make that tyling good, and ſo I was going along the gutter and I ſaw this bit of lead lay ſo I took it up, and put it into the garret window for ſafety till my maſter came.

The priſoner Warren called five witneſſes, who gave him a good character.

The priſoner Callen called one witneſs to his character.

BOTH GUILTY.

Each to be confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

974. FREDERICK BELK was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 14th day of October, one yard and a quarter of ſerge, value 18d. the property of the united company of merchants trading to the Eaſt-Indies.

A ſecond count, laying it to be the property of George Archdale Lowe.

GEORGE ARCHDALE LOWE ſworn.

On Friday the 14th inſtant, I was called down from dinner, I am a packer, this ſerge was intruſted to my charge by the company, I ſaw the priſoner in cuſtody.

JAMES MILLS ſworn.

About two on Friday, the 14th, one of the men called me out of the compting-houſe, and told me that they found a piece deficient, I ordered the priſoner to be watched.

HENRY DESSE ſworn.

At three o'clock laſt Friday was a week, Mr. Mills ordered me to ſtand behind a pile of long ells, and the firſt piece the priſoner took in hand he cut, then I acquainted Mr. Mills, and he came and found it in his breeches.

(Produced.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I am an elderly man, it is the firſt time I ever was arraigned at any bar whatever, I hope you will take compaſſion on my family, as I am troubled with an aſthma, and have been ſo ever ſince I have been confined.

GUILTY.

Mr. Lowe. I beg leave juſt to obſerve, that in conſequence of the priſoner's having cut this piece, I thought it my duty to unpack great part, and I had the misfortune to find one hundred and two pieces cut in this manner, and from many concurring circumſtances which amount to abſolute proofs, and leave it beyond a doubt, they were cut by the priſoner.

Court. You do right in telling it me now, and in not telling me before; it is a very bad offence; what age is the priſoner?—Fifty-one.

Court to Priſoner. You have been convicted on the cleareſt and moſt deciſive evidence, ſuch as excludes all poſſibility of doubt; if gentlemen employed in buſineſs of this nature cannot put a truſt in thoſe whom they muſt neceſſarily employ under them, the hazard is ſuch as would diſable any body from carrying on buſineſs; ſo that it is extremely neceſſary to the public that ſuch practices ſhould be put a ſtop to, and there is great reaſon to believe you have carried on this to a very great extent, therefore you are a very proper perſon to puniſh as an example to others; the ſentence therefore of the Court upon you is, that you be tranſported beyond the ſeas, for the term of ſeven years, to ſuch place as his Majeſty by the advice of his Privy Council ſhall declare and appoint.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

975. WILLIAM KELLY was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 16th day of October, a cloth coat, value 6d. a waiſtcoat, value 6d. a ſhirt, value 1s. a handkerchief, value 2d. a pair of ſhoes, value 6d. a pair of ſhoe buckles, value 6d. a claſp knife, value 6d. a purſe, value 1d. and one ſhilling in money, the property of Terence Egan.

TERENCE EGAN ſworn.

I laid next room to the priſoner at a lodging houſe, and he took away the things in the indictment, I purſued and took the priſoner with the things under his arm, theſe are the clothes I have on.

WILLIAM CONNER ſworn,

Confirmed the above witneſs.

Priſoner. I bought every half-penny worth that I had.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

976. MARY (the wife of Joſeph) BARKER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 29th of September laſt, five yards of printed cotton, value 17s. 6d. the property of Mary Lawſon.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

---

977. ANN SMITH was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 26th day of September laſt, five yards of printed cotton, value 5s. the property of John Mackey.

FRANCIS UMPAGE ſworn.

I am ſervant to the proſecutor, I was going round the window of the ſhop, and I ſaw the priſoner looking in at the door, when ſhe had opened the door, ſhe fnatched a piece of print, and was going away with it, I cried ſtop thief, and ſhe immediately threw it down, I ſtopped her at the door.

JOHN FRENCH ſworn,

Produced the cotton.

(Depoſed to.)

Priſoner. I only went to look at it.

GUILTY.

To be impriſoned ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Juſtice NARES.

978. ELIZA-

978. ELIZABETH FOX was indicted for feloniously ſtealing, on the 3d day of October, one ſilver watch, value 40s. one key, value 1d. one ſtone ſeal, value 1d. one muſlin neckcloth, value 6d. one pair of buckles, value 1d. one guinea, value 21s. and five ſhillings in monies numbered, the property of Joſeph Lewis.

JOSEPH LEWIS ſworn.

I am a coachman, I was robbed on the 3d day of this month, in the morning, I was aſleep; I was going down Field-lane, on the 2d of October, about eleven at night, and I met with the priſoner, and ſhe ſaid my dear to me, and ſo on, and aſked me if I would go along with ſhe, I ſaid, I did not care, ſo I went to her lodging, in Blue-court, Saffron-hill, and I aſked her what I ſhould give her, and I gave her either a ſhilling or eighteen-pence to ſleep with her, I ſays to her, now you be honeſt and call me up at four o'clock, I muſt go to my work; ſhe promiſed ſhe would, ſo I went to bed with ſhe, nobody elſe was in the room.

Was the door ſhut?—She faſtened the door after her, I went to bed between eleven and twelve, and I awaked at half after four, and ſhe was gone, the door was pulled too but not faſtened; I loſt the things mentioned in the indictment, and one bad ſhilling beſides; I loſt alſo my knee-buckles; I went out in the morning, and locked the door after me, and took the key till I found the watchman, I gave him the key, I never got my watch or my money, my knee-buckles were found upon her at the watch-houſe; ſhe had half a guinea and ſome ſilver, ſhe was found in the ſame bed the next morning.

—— CONNOR ſworn.

I am watchman on Saffron-hill, on the 3d of October, at five in the morning, the proſecutor came to me and ſhewed me the door where he had been robbed, No. 20, in Blue-court, Saffron-hill, he ſaid he had loſt his watch and money, and the next evening, we went and took her in her room, and brought her to the watch-houſe, ſhe was ſearched by me and the proſecutor, and he found a bad ſhilling upon her which he ſaid he knew, and his knee buckles were in her pocket.

(The knee buckles produced and depoſed to.)

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I was not at home from Sunday evening till about eleven on Monday morning, I was over in the Borough.

Court to Proſecutor. Where had you ſpent that afternoon?——At Acton.

Where was your own lodging?——In Thames-ſtreet.

You had been drinking I ſuppoſe?——Very little, I was no way in liquor.

Then you had not even that apology for your conduct?—I thought ſhe would have behaved better.

It would have been well, if you had behaved better; you employed your Sunday very ill, Sir; did you drink any thing with her?—Nothing at all.

Are you quite ſure ſhe is the woman?—I am quite ſure.

Court to Priſoner. Have you any perſon to prove that you was in the Borough?—No.

GUILTY.

To be impriſoned ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the ſecond Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

---

979. WILLIAM HOW was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 19th day of October, two pounds weight of American leaf tobacco, value 3s. the property of Samuel Gueſt.

THOMAS BREUDER ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner catch at ſome tobacco, and when he ſaw me he dropped it, it was looſe.

Priſoner. I had no intention of ſtealing it, it, it is a rule to hove it down by the ſide of the caſk, I was at work there.

GUILTY.

Whipped.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

280. FRANCES JACKSON was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 11th day of October, one quart pewter pot, value 12d. the property of Thomas Hitching, the elder.

The proſecutor ſaw the priſoner take the pot, purſued and took her; the proſecutor's ſon ſaw her take the pot and drop it.

GUILTY.

To be privately whipped and confined ſix months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

981. THOMAS RIDGE was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 5th day of October, one linen handkerchief, value 10d. the property of a perſon unknown.

JOHN STAPLETON ſworn.

I ſaw the priſoner take the handkerchief from a gentleman's pocket, and ſecured him; he dropped the handkerchief: the gentleman ſaid he believed it was his handkerchief, but he was going out of town, and could not ſtay to proſecute. There were two or three more with him.

GUILTY.

Tranſported for ſeven years.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

982. ELIZABETH SLACK was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 1ſt day of October, four pewter plates, value 2s. and one half pint glaſs, value 4d. the property of John Harriſon.

JOHN GIBBS ſworn.

The priſoner came into the proſecutor's houſe and had a glaſs of gin at the bar, ſhe went backwards, and ſtole four pewter plates off the ſhelf, as a gentleman told me I ran after her and took her two doors off, with the plates under her arm, ſhe dropped them on the pavement.

(Produced and depoſed to.)

Proſecutor. I took a half pint tumbler out of her pocket, I ſaw her brought back and ſhe confeſſed every thing.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I have known old John Harriſon twenty one years, and have always uſed his houſe, but not this gentleman, the proſecutor, I always behaved well, I never was accuſed before, nor ever arraigned before; I hope I am in a court of juſtice and mercy; I work honeſtly for my bread, but I have been ſick with a fever and ague, and very much diſtreſſed; I ſhall be fifty-two if I live till St. Stephen's day.

GUILTY.

Court to Priſoner. Where do you belong to?——My huſband's pariſh is in the county of Cumberland, Whitehaven.

To be privately whipped and paſſed to her pariſh.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

983. THOMAS PAINTER was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the 18th day of October, three pounds weight of moiſt moiſt ſugar, value 1s. the property of William Collier.

The witneſſes examined apart at the requeſt of Mr. Garrow, priſoner's councel.

JOHN BRADSHAW ſworn.

I am a watchman at the Cuſtom-houſe, I had charge of a lighter of ſugar, and on the 18th inſtant, a few minutes before four, this priſoner boarded the lighter, and went into the lighter, I found him in it, he ſaid he belonged to it.

Mr. Garrow. Is that true?—— Mr. Collier told me he did.

JOHN BLUNDELL ſworn.

I had charge of this ſugar two nights, and there was a little cavity in one of the head pieces of the hogſheads, when they gave the charge to me; when Mr. Bradſhaw had taken the priſoner, he called to me, and then the ſugar was not as it was, the headpiece was broke in, and a great deal of it out, he ſaid he belonged to the lighter.

Priſoner. I am a lighterman, I work for Mr. Collier, he is here.

Court. Who conducts this proſecution?——Mr. Bradſhaw was bound over to proſecute.

WILLIAM COLLIER ſworn.

The priſoner has been in my ſervice three or four months, he had the care of ſome lighters; he conducted himſelf always faithfully and honeſtly, with the greateſt care and propriety; his character is that of an honeſt well-behaved man; I had much rather have had a loſs in trade than this charge againſt this man; I would truſt him with anything I have of my own; from the time a cargo is on board the ſhip, which is three or four months, caſks get rotted, and when there are three or four tiers, the preſſure on the ground tier may force out a head, I have ſeen it frequently; ſugar is frequently ſpilt in the lighter before it is unloaded.

—— BOND ſworn.

I am a lighterman, the priſoner ſerved his time to me, he was always a very honeſt faithful ſervant to me, I have truſted him with many valuable cargoes, I never heard the leaſt complaint of him.

CHARLES GARDNER ſworn.

I am a butcher at Dock-head, I have known the priſoner twelve months, to the beſt of my knowledge he was always an honeſt induſtrious young man, he is a lodger of mine, a regular well-diſpoſed young man.

Are you able to ſay that he is a good young man?——I am.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

984. WILLIAM BYRNE was indicted for feloniouſly aſſaulting Benjamin Hatton, on the King's highway, on the 17th day of October, and putting him in corporal fear and danger of his life, and feloniouſly taking from his perſon and againſt his will, ſeven guineas, value 7l. 7s. and two ſilver watches, value 4l. his property.

BENJAMIN HATTON ſworn.

On laſt Monday night or Tueſday morning early, I was robbed about the middle of the night, at a place called Chick-lane; I am quite a ſtranger here in London, I was coming from a public-houſe at the bottom of this lane, and I was going to my lodgings in Smithfield, the Golden Lion; it was ſome time between eleven and one; I had had ſome liquor, but I was not to ſay drunk, I was in liquor, I ſuppoſe about half drunk; as I was going up this ſtreet, this priſoner takes hold of my collar, and he ſays come along; he came acroſs the ſtreet, I was on the left-hand ſide of the ſtreet he was on the right-hand and juſt croſſed and met me, there were two others after him, I had juſt the glimpſe of the two others, but I could not ſee who they were, they took me into a court, I think they called it Phœnix Court, there they tripped up my heels and threw me down on my back and ſearched my pockets.

Did the others aſſiſt him?—Yes, they put a handkerchief upon my mouth; but I was ſo frightened I could not call out, I expected to be murdered, they were not half a minute, they riffled my pockets and then ran away; I got up and went to my lodgings, I rung at the wrong door of my lodgings, and a man came and ſet me right.

How did you know the priſoner?—I was drinking with him the day before, I had been walking about and called in at this houſe, and dropped into converſation with this man.

Did you know him when he firſt laid hold of you?—Yes.

Are you ſure he was one of the men that did abſolutely rob you?—He is the man that caught hold of me.

How long had you been in company with him on the Sunday?—I ſuppoſe two or three hours.

Had you ſeen him at all on the Monday?—He ſhewed me to my lodgings on Sunday night, and I treated him with ſome beer at my lodgings, and he ſaid, if you will come down to the ſame place to-morrow evening, I will ſpend a ſhilling with you, you ſeem to be a jovial companion, and ſuch like as that.

Did you go out the next evening?—Yes, and I found him at the public houſe, with his head aſleep on the table; I did not ſee him at firſt, and I ſays to the people of the houſe where is my old friend, and they ſaid that is him laid aſleep on the table; ſo I rouſed him up.

What time of the evening was that?—I ſuppoſe it was ten, I cannot ſay to half an hour; I ſaid to him, you promiſed to treat me with a ſhilling to-night, come where is your treat; oh! ſays he, if you are that ſort of a man, I will have no concern with you, ſo he got off into another ſeat; I do not recollect anything elſe paſſing that night at the public houſe, I was not in company with anybody particularly, thoſe that were in company were ſtrangers to me; and he got up from the table we ſat at, and went to another.

Are you ſure he is the man?—I never ſaw two faces but what there was ſome difference in them, but I am ſure he is the man, it was moonlight.

Any other light than the moon-light?—There were lamps in the ſtreet, there was not much lamp-light, there were a few lamps.

Was it by the moon-light, or by the lamp-light that you ſaw him?—I ſuppoſe it was by both, there was a lamp nigh.

When you ſaw it was the man that you had been ſo well acquainted with, did not you ſay ſomething to him?——No.

How came that?——I was down ſo quick.

Why did not you aſk your old friend what he wanted with you?—The ſtreet is not further acroſs than from me to you.

What did you looſe?—Seven golden guineas and two ſilver caſed watches.

How came you to have two watches?—One was my own, and the other was one I had of a perſon that lives in Montgomeryſhire, and I lent him a little money upon it, he is a Welch drover; I keep a public-houſe, a malt-houſe, and am clerk of the pariſh; I live at Alvly, in Shropſhire, about ſix miles below Bridgenorth, on the river Severn ſide.

By the account you have given of yourſelf, you was very much in liquor?——Yes, I went by accident into this houſe in Chick-lane.

Were your watches ever found again?—No, not that I ever heard of.

Priſoner. Aſk him what dreſs or hat I wore when I made this attempt, as he ſays, on his perſon?——He was dreſſed ſhabbily as he is now, but particularly as to his clothes I cannot tell.

What hat had he on?—A little ſlouched hat on.

A round hat?——A ſlouched hat we call it.

WILLIAM CONWAY ſworn.

Between twelve and one on Monday night,

or

or early on Tueſday morning, I obſerved a noiſe at the door near Cow-lane, in Smithfield; I was at the Three-tons, talking to Mr. Roberts, the conſtable; I immediately repaired to the corner of Cow-lane, and I obſerved a man knocking at the Golden-Lion door; ſays I, my friend what are you doing there, they will not ſerve any liquor to-night; he heſitated ſome time before he would give me any account of himſelf; he ſaid he was a lodger; then ſaid I, my friend, come round to the other door, and I will get you entrance; he rang at the bell, and the maſter looked out of the window, and aſked who it was; and he came down, but before he opened the door we aſked him where he had been; he ſaid he had been robbed of ſeven guineas, and two watches; I aſked him where and when, he would not give me any intelligence where, but ſays he, it is very near; the maſter of the houſe laughed at his being robbed, and thought it was a joke for him, or ſimilar to that; the proſecutor was rather inclinable to liquor; I examined his clothes, and they were all dirty behind, as if he had fallen on his back.

Was not he drunk?—He was not to ſay drunk, he was rather intoxicated in liquor.

What are your ideas of being drunk?—He was not ſo drunk but he was capable of giving a proper anſwer, he was ſenſible drunk; if he had informed Mr. Roberts and me where he had been robbed at firſt, we might have gone and taken the people, and found the property perhaps, but he was near a quarter of an hour at the door.

JAMES WALLIS ſworn.

I was applied to on Wedneſday morning, being conſtable, by the proſecutor telling me he had been robbed; I heard where the priſoner lived, and where he worked, I went to take him, and he was not at his lodgings; I went to his maſter; I aſked if one Mr. Byrne was there, and the man ſaid yes, and the priſoner heard me, and ſaid I am the man; he came into the ſtreet, we had a little converſation, the proſecutor ſtood a few yards off, becauſe he would not be ſeen, ſays he, this is the man; ſays I, be poſitive, do not go to make a miſtake, he ſaid, I am poſitive he is the man; the ſhop-mate came up, and I ſaid to Hatton, was the ſhop-mate in company, he ſaid, no, he did not know him, but he was poſitive of Byrne; I have enquired of this priſoner, and he bears an extraordinary good character, by every body that knows him, he did work in the ſtreet where I live; I know the public houſe very well, I believe it to be a very bad one, I do not think it is much frequented by people of good character, the landlord appeared for him before Juſtice Blackbo ough, the priſoner was ſearched, and he had but one penny in his pocket, he had nothing upon him.

Were his lodgings ſearched?—No.

Why not?——The Juſtice gave no orders to ſearch them.

Why did not you?—I did not know I had any right, as it was in the county; the apartment was locked, and I did not know I ſhould break it, as it was out of the city, I am a city officer.

Why did not you aſk the man for the key of his apartments, and ſee whether he would have given it you?——I did not, I was remiſs in that.

How came you not to bring him to a city Magiſtrate?—Becauſe he was taken in the out-parts, in Gray's Inn-lane.

STEPHEN THOMAS ſworn.

On Wedneſday morning about half paſt nine, the maſter of the Golden Lion came over to me, and the proſecutor ſaid, are you a conſtable, I ſaid no, I am one of the patrol of St. Sepulchres; ſays he, I have been robbed, and I believe I ſhould know the party if I ſaw him, ſo I went with him and the officer, and took the priſoner in Gray's Inn-lane, at work in a cellar, we brought him up, the man did not ſeem in any ways confuſed, the officer told him what he was charged with.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

My Lords, and Gentlemen of the Jury, the the firſt of my acquaintance with that gentleman there, was on Sunday evening before laſt Monday, I happened to be drinking in this public houſe, another man and I, and we ſcarce ſat down to have another pint of beer, but in came another ſhopmate of his, we had ſeveral pints of beer before this man came in, he ſat on the oppoſite ſide of the box, and he called for a pint of beer, and he ſaid, does any of you know where I could find a bit of victuals, yes, ſays I, there is an eating-houſe up there, he went out and brought in fourpenny-worth of meat, he eat ſome, and put the reſt in his pocket, his pint of beer was out, we wanted to have another pint of beer between ourſelves, ſo he ſaid my good fellows, if it will be agreeable, I will be one penny, and let us have a pot; it is all agreeable, ſays one in company, he ſaid will you have any more, I ſaid no, my money grows ſhort; ſo this gentleman aſked me, ſays he, my good fellow, I am a ſtranger here, lately come to town, I wiſh you would ſee me ſafe home, I ſaid to my ſhopmate let us go, we went and conducted him ſafe to his lodgings, and at the public houſe where he lodges, we were going to part, and he ſays come in, and I will treat you with a pot of beer, ſays I, come that is good fellowſhip, and he was ſixpence to our four pence halfpenny, and we had three pots of beer, and I told him if you are ſo good as to come down to-morrow night, I will treat you with part of a ſhilling's-worth; and he came down the next night, and ſaid to me, you d—d raſcal, ſays he, are not you aſhamed to get intoxicated, ſays I, did I ever raſcal or abuſe you, and if you are ſuch a fellow as that, I will ſit no longer in your company: (Gentlemen, I hope you will excuſe me, I am rather choaked) this man called an oyſter woman, and he behaved ſomewhat impudent, and the landlord threatened to turn him out, he went out of the houſe, and we three ſat together drinking for upwards of an hour after, and my witneſſes can teſtify the ſame, and alſo the landlady's ſervant maid.

Court to Hatton. When this man went home with you on Sunday night to your lodgings, was there any body elſe with him?—Yes, there was another man with him, and another came to him.

Court. Let the priſoner's witneſſes all but one withdraw from the Court.

MARY WILSON ſworn.

I live at the corner of Holborn hill, next Chick-lane, the Crown and Anchor, a public houſe, I am the landlady.

Have you a huſband?——Yes.

Is he here?——No, he is not, becauſe he was in another room that night, and did not ſee any thing of the buſineſs.

Do you know the priſoner?——I do.

How long has he uſed your houſe?——Theſe four months occaſionally.

Do you know the proſecutor on this charge againſt the priſoner?—I do not, I never ſaw him before Monday night laſt, I ſaw him then come into the houſe, and have a pint of beer, and I gave him change, and he drank it and went out.

How long was he in your houſe?—I take it my Lord, as nigh as I can gueſs, it was between nine and ten.

What time did he go away?——Rather before eleven.

Are you ſure of that?——I am very poſitive of it.

Had he only one pint of beer while he ſtaid?—Only one pint.

Who was he in company with?——He ſat drinking with a woman that comes in with oyſters, the woman had a pennyworth and they put it into the pot.

Did you ſee him ſpeak to any body elſe, while he was there?—I did not.

Was the priſoner at your houſe that night at all?—He was, and came in about five, or rather before five in the afternoon.

How long did he ſtay?——Till half after twelve.

Who was he in company with?——Nobody, till about eleven, then two of his ſhop-mates came in, and they had two or three pints of beer, and drank together.

He

He had three pints of beer?—Yes.

Was that before or after the profecutor went away?——It was after he went away, they came in after he went out.

Did the prifoner go out at all before they came in?——No, he did not go out from five till half after twelve, I was in the bar and I could fee the tap-room; I am very fure that he did not go out.

What had he been doing from five till eleven, when his companions came in?—He had been aſleep on the table, I was in the tap-room melting ſome butter, and he was ſtanding by the fire; and I ſaid, Byrne you will fall, and he ſaid, that will not hurt you, no, ſays I, but it may you; and he went and he ſat down, and leaned his head upon the table.

What had he been doing till nine?—He had been doing nothing but ſitting, he had one pot of beer when he came in, that was all till his ſhop-mates came in; he was in liquor when he came in, and after that pot of beer, he was very much in liquor, and ſlept on the table, with his head on the table.

Do you know who the two men were, that came in with him?——They are waiting on the outſide of the Court now.

What are their names?——One's name is Hall, and the other's name is White.

Who did he drink his firſt pot of beer in company with?——I do not recollect, yes, I do, one Smith that works at a ſhop oppoſite to Jackſon's, a ſtove-grate maker, he is not here.

Had the prifoner any ſupper that night?——Nothing at all, the profecutor had a ſlice of bread, and eat ſome oyſters.

You would be likely to remember it, becauſe he would pay you for it?——He had nothing from me.

Had either of his companions anything? Nothing, then his two companions came in both together.

Who went away firſt, the prifoner or his companions?—One of his companions went away with the other, and the other, went away with him.

Which was it that went firſt?—White.

How long did Hall and the prifoner ſtay afterwards?—About a quarter of an hour, as nigh as I can recollect, they went out together.

You did not ſee the profecutor and the prifoner ſpeak together at all that night?—No, I did not.

Was that Monday night the firſt time you had ſeen the profecutor?——It was.

Where were you on the Saturday night before, was you at home?—On the Sunday night he was at our houſe, and I went out and ſtaid out to ſupper; my huſband told me on Monday morning, that the profecutor had been there on Sunday night and there had been ſome diſputes about religion between them, in the tap-room.

Had the profecutor frequented your houſe before that?—Never to our knowledge, he had never been in our houſe before the Sunday night.

Then you was not well acquainted with him?——We had no knowledge of him, any further than his coming in the ſecond time to drink his beer.

Did you know where he came from?—No, I did not know any thing of him.

Did you know his name?——I do not know it now.

Pray, how could your huſband tell you on the Monday morning, that he had been at your houſe on Sunday night?—He could not tell me by his name, any further than ſuch a ſort of man had been there on Sunday night, and they had ſome diſputes, and when he came on Monday night, the ſervants told me he was the ſame man, that is all I know about it.

Prifoner. My Lord, the profecutor has ſaid, I had a ſlouched hat on when I robbed him, now when I came in, and went away, I had no hat on.

Court to Mrs. Wilſon. Did you obſerve that?—I do not know that he had any hat on; to the beſt of my remembrance, I do not remember he had a hat on; and when he went out at half paſt twelve I let him out, and he aſked me for a penny candle, and a man in the houſe went with him to the corner where he lodges, he lodges in a court oppoſite to us, he works in Grays-inn-lane; I do not remember he had a hat on, and I do not really believe that he had any hat on.

EDWARD WHITE ſworn.

I live at the ſign of the Angel, Upper Ground, Southwark, I am a baſket-maker.

Do you know the priſoner?—Yes.

How long have you known him?——I cannot recollect particulars, I ſuppoſe I have known him for about two or three years.

Do you remember being in company with him on Sunday laſt?—I was not on Sunday, I was on Monday.

Where?—At the ſign of the Anchor and Crown, the corner of Holborn-hill, Chick-lane.

What time did the priſoner come in?—I found him there.

What time did you go in?—I went in near as I can recollect about a quarter before ten.

Where was the priſoner then?—He was ſitting in the tap room, and I and one Thomas Hall went in together, I found the priſoner and the proſecutor ſitting together, I went into an adjacent box, and never ſpoke either to one or the other.

Did Hall join them, or ſtay with you?—He joined the priſoner and the proſecutor, they were diſcourſing about religion, they were rather at variance; Hall did not ſtay long with them before he came into my company.

How long did the diſpute continue between the priſoner and the proſecutor?—It might be about a quarter of an hour; Thomas Hall went up to William Byrne the proſecutor, and told him that I was there, and in a quarter of an hour, Byrne came into my company, and left the proſecutor ſitting with an oyſter woman.

What time of night was that when the proſecutor joined your company?——According to my recollection it was about eleven when the priſoner went out.

How long was it after Byrne came to you, that the priſoner went out?—He wen out almoſt immediately.

About what time of night was it when the proſecutor went out of the houſe?—I had no watch about me, nor there was no dial in the tap-room, but as near as I can recollect it was about eleven when he went out of the houſe.

Did you go out with him?—No, Thomas Hall ſtaid behind, I left the priſoner there at the public houſe, when I went away, and I ſtaid ſo long that as I went along Fleet-market, I looked at the clock, and it was very near half paſt eleven, I could ſee by the light of the moon, then I left the priſoner William Byrne there, and Thomas Hall with him.

What had you for your ſupper?—I had nothing, I had ſupped with Thomas Hall before I came there.

Who ſupped with the priſoner then?—I do not know.

Did you ſee him ſup?—He did not ſup while I was there.

What beer had you, and he, and Hall together?—I believe, my Lord, I had a pint of beer before the priſoner came and joined me, and then we had two pints afterwards, I paid two pints and left them to pay one, and what they had afterwards I do not know.

How came you to take notice of this diſpute about religion?—My Lord, I heard that the proſecutor and the priſoner were to meet at this houſe this evening, and when I ſupped at Thomas Hall's, he ſaid, after we have ſupped, ſuppoſe we have a pint of beer together, and go down to this houſe, and ſee William Byrne, and while I was there, I heard them diſcourſing about religion, I had the newſpaper in my hand, I ſpoke to nobody, and knowing the priſoner, I heard what he ſaid, and William Byrne ſaid you called me a raſcal and rogue, and I do not know what for; I think the diſpute was about religion, I wonder that I ſhould take ſo much notice as I have, not knowing what I ſhould be brought to.

Did the proſecutor appear to be ſober or in in liquor?——When he went out, he was very much in liquor.

Was the priſoner drunk or ſober?——He was in liquor.

THOMAS HALL ſworn.

Court. Let Mrs. Wilſon and Mr. White go out of Court.

Hall. I live in Frogmore-court, Charter-houſe-lane, I am a baſket maker; I have known the priſoner to the beſt of my knowledge, about two years and a half, he is a baſket maker.

Can you remember being in company with him any particular evening lately?—Yes.

When was it?——To the beſt of my knowledge, a quarter before ten, on Monday evening laſt, at the Crown, on Saffron-hill.

Where did you meet with him on that evening?——I had not ſeen the priſoner after that morning ten o'clock, he was then going over the water; I met with him in the evening at the Anchor and Crown, he was there at the ſame time I went in.

What time was that?—To the beſt of my knowledge about a quarter before ten, Edward White was with me, an acquaintance of mine, of the ſame trade.

Was the priſoner there then before you went in?—At that time, my Lord, he was.

Who was he in company with when you went in?—He was in company with the proſecutor.

Did White and you join him directly?——I will ſpeak with your liberty, and you Gentlemen of the Jury, I went in and called for a pint of beer, and aſked Byrne how he did, he ſeemed to be ſomewhat in liquor; I then ſpoke to the proſecutor, ſeeing him there the Sunday afternoon, the proſecutor aſked me to drink out of his pint of beer, and I drank with him, Edward White was cloſe by me, he did not ſpeak to the proſecutor, becauſe he did not know him, he ſpoke to Byrne, and I hearing ſome words between the proſecutor and the priſoner, I went and called White who was in my company; and Byrne told the proſecutor, ſays he, if I had not been drinking with you, I ſhould not have taken your behaviour, you have uſed me very ſcurvily, you have called me raſcal.

Had they been drinking together then?——I did not ſee them drink, but to appearance they had, and they were in company then; upon this the priſoner left the proſecutor, and came into my company and White's.

What became of the proſecutor then?—To the beſt of my knowledge, he went out, and to the beſt of my knowledge, I ſpoke to the ſervant, and ſpeaking, that man came into the back yard, it was thought he had gone out of doors, and there was a pint of beer called for, and he refuſed paying for the pint of beer, and the ſervant told him it was neceſſary to pay for all beer that is brought in here, as it is brought in, and the maid ſervant inſiſted upon it's being paid for, ſhe took it away the firſt time, and brought it by deſire the the ſecond time, and to the beſt of my knowledge, he paid for it and had it, he did not drink with me, only once, he was not with Mr. White at all in company, and in a quarter of an hour, he went out, he was with an oyſter woman after Byrne left us, and ſhe aſked him to give her ſome beer, ſhe had a penny worth, and put it into his pot, I believe the proſecutor might be in the houſe half an hour, from the time they entered the houſe, which was about a quarter before ten, I ſpeak by computation.

Then he went out a little after ten?—Yes.

About what time as near as you can judge?—As near as I can judge it might be twenty minutes paſt ten.

Did the priſoner go out with him?——The priſoner was not out of the houſe, till I left the houſe, he was with me in company all the while to the beſt of my knowledge.

How long did you ſtay?——About two hours or upwards, I ſpeak to the beſt of my my knowl edge, when I parted with the priſoner, and when I got near home, the watch then went juſt half paſt twelve.

Then you ſtaid till after twelve?——Yes, at Mr. Wilſon's where the priſoner andthe proſecutor were.

Did the priſoner and you come away together?——Yes White went away half an hour before I went, he living over Black-fryars bridge.

Had you any ſupper at this houſe, at Wilſon's?——Edward White went with me, I work in Gray's-Inn-lane, with one John Mayton, he went with me to my apartment, and ſupped of a bit of roaſt beef.

Cold or hot?—Hot.

Was any body elſe there?——Only my wife.

Had you any thing elſe beſides the beef?——Potatoes and ſauce.

Then it was after you had ſupped, that you went to this public-houſe?—White called upon me at Mr. John Mayton's, where I work with one Robert Wiſe in company, Wiſe and White and me went to the Bell ale-houſe, then Wiſe left us, and White went home with me.

Court. Call White in again.

Court to White. I think I underſtand you, that Hall and you went together to this Anchor and Crown, at the corner of Chick-lane?—Yes.

Are you ſure you went together?—Yes.

Where did you meet with Hall that evening?——I met with him at the place where he works in Gray's-Inn-lane, at Mr. Mayton's, I met with him there firſt, it was about dark, I went from thence to his dwelling, there I ſupped.

Did you go immediately to his apartment?——No, we went from where he works, to the ſign of the Bell, which is near where he works.

Was any body elſe with you?——There was one man with us, he did not go to Hall's apartments, I ſupped there, we had a piece of beef for ſupper, and ſome potatoes, nobody in company with us but his wife.

Did you ſpeak to Byrne at all, before you ſat down in the box when you went into the Crown?——No.

You do not recollect that you did?——I did not I am ſure.

You are quite ſure?——I did not aſk him how he did, Hall only did, I never ſpoke to William Byrne till he came to me, neither did he know that I was there till he aſked Thomas Hall whether I was there or no.

How long after Byrne came into the box to you and Hall was it before the proſecutor went out?——As near as I can recollect he went out about eleven, he came once to the entrance of the door, he did not come into the tap-room, but what he ſaid I cannot recollect, he ſaid ſomething to the ſervant, to nobody elſe that I know of; he went out into the paſſage, whether he went out of doors I cannot tell, he went out of the tap-room, I obſerved him at the door, but what he ſaid I do not know; he went out and never came in again that evening.

Court to Mrs. Wilſon. Was you at the bar and the tap-room the whole of that evening?—I was not the whole evening, I was backwards and forwards about my buſineſs.

I think you ſaid you did not ſee the proſecutor and priſoner ſpeak together all that evening?—No, I did not.

Do you remember whether the proſecutor came back again after he went out at all?——I do not, he went to the door and called Peggy, as I obſerved before, and I told him there was no Peggy there, and he was rather troubleſome, and I deſired him to go about his buſineſs.

Did he pay for all the beer he had?——He had one pint, and he ſcrupled to pay for the beer before he had it, and I ordered my ſervant to take it away, and he paid for it, and I changed him a ſhilling.

Had he been out before that, do you recollect?—I do not know that he had.

Court. Let White ſtep out a moment.

Court to Hall. You and the priſoner went away together?--Yes.

Did you go home with him?—He and I parted at the end of his court, I bid him good good night, and he wiſhed me the ſame; and he ſaid he ſhould be up the next morning early.

What ſort of hat had the priſoner on?—I cannot tell that.

Can you recollect whether it was a cocked hat or a ſlouch hat?——I cannot charge my memory really.

What ſort of hat did he uſually wear?—Sometimes a cocked hat, and ſometimes a round one, I cannot tell which he had on that night.

Do you remember anything particular about his hat at all?——I do not.

Do you remember his hat having been blown in the dirt?—No.

Do you remember whether he had a hat or no?—Yes, he had a hat, to the beſt of my knowledge, but I cannot tell whether it was a cocked hat or a round one.

Are you ſure he had a hat?—To the beſt of my knowledge.

Court. (Call in White again.) Do you remember anything particular happening about the priſoner's hat that evening, whether he had a hat, do you remember any thing ſaid about it?——He had never a hat while I was there, I did not obſerve a hat, I did not ſee him with a hat at all.

ELIZABETH SMITH ſworn.

I live at Mrs. Wilſon's, and have done ſo five months.

Did the priſoner uſe to come to your houſe often?——Yes, ſeveral times ſince I was there.

Do you remember his being there laſt Sunday evening?——Yes, he was in company with ſeveral in the tap-room, but I cannot ſay with who particularly, on the Sunday evening.

Do you recollect how long he ſtaid there, or when he went away on Sunday evening?—I cannot ſay particularly to the time.

Who did he go away with?——I cannot ſay particularly.

Do you recollect his being there at all on the Monday evening?—On Monday evening he was there from five till half paſt twelve.

How came you to recollect ſo particularly the whole of the time he was there on the Monday evening, and not be able to tell the time he was there on the Sunday evening?——May be I might not be there.

Yes, you ſay you was, but when he came, who he was in company with, and when he went away you cannot ſay; then how came you to charge your memory ſo particularly with the Monday evening?—Very likely I might be buſier on the Sunday.

Were you ſo, I do not aſk you what you might be?——I remember on the Monday, Mr. Byrne went out at half paſt twelve, that I am very ſure of.

He came in about five you ſay?—Yes.

Who came in with him?——I cannot rightly ſay who was with him, any further than he was drinking with Mr. Hall, or Mr. White to the beſt of my knowledge.

Which of them did he come in with at five o'clock, recollect yourſelf now?——I cannot tell particularly, I know I ſaw them drinking together.

What all three?——Yes, I think ſo.

How ſoon after the priſoner came in did you ſee them drinking together?—I cannot tell to a minute.

I do not want you to tell to a minute, but how ſoon?—To the beſt of my knowledge they all three came in together.

Did you ſerve them with beer?—I drew one or two pots for them.

For them?—Yes.

How long did White and Hall ſtay there?—I think to the beſt of my knowledge Mr. White went away about eleven, or a little before, and Mr. Hall went home with the priſoner.

Who elſe was in company with them in the courſe of the evening?——I cannot recollect any particular perſon; there was a gentleman drinking, but whether he drank with them or not I cannot particularly ſay; I remember one perſon having a pint of beer, my fellow ſervant drew it, and a ſlice of bread.

Who was that perſon?——I think to the beſt of my remembrance it was the proſecutor, but Byrne I do not remember this drinking with him, or eating anything with him on the Monday night.

What time did the man come in, do you recollect?——I believe it to be about ten, or near upon ten, I cannot rightly say.

Where was Byrne when the profecutor came in?——I think, to the beft of my remembrance, he was aſleep, with his head on the table, when the profecutor came in.

Where were Hall and White then?—I think Hall ſat at a table by himſelf aſleep at the time; I think he was aſleep too.

Where was White?——Mr. White, I think, was gone, and Byrne and Hall were both aſleep; I think ſo, to the beſt of my knowledge they ſat at different tables; there was a woman came in with ſome oyſters at the ſame time, and this gentleman bought ſome oyſters, but how many I cannot ſay, and he eat ſome, and gave ſome to my fellow-ſervant to take into the kitchen, and in a few minutes he called for the oyſters, and he went to the door after the oyſter-woman, and called Peggy, and he went out after her, but whether he knew her I cannot ſay; I cannot ſay whether I ſaw him and the priſoner ſpeak together, but to the beſt of my knowledge he did not.

How ſoon did Byrne awake again after the profecutor went away?—I believe he ſlept very near upon the time, he went home, and Mr. Hall too, and Mr. Hall went home with Mr. Byrne, and I ſaw him to the end of the court where he lives, I cannot ſay how far he ſaw him; I did not go with him, he ſaid he would go to ſee him home.

Then you do not remember White, Hall, and Byrne drinking together, after the profecutor came in?——No.

What they had was before?——Yes, to the beſt of my remembrance, I think ſo.

Who deſired you to come here as a witneſs, my girl?——Come here as a witneſs! I only came here to ſpeak what is the truth.

But who deſired you to come to ſpeak the truth?——My miſtreſs got me to come.

When was you firſt told it would be neceſſary for you to come here, and ſpeak about this?——I come to ſpeak no otherway than the truth.

No, no, I am not queſtioning that, but when was you firſt told?——On Saturday laſt.

Who told it you then?——My miſtreſs told it me.

Who was in company then?—My miſtreſs, maſter, and me.

Were not the other witneſſes Hall and White there?—No.

Upon your oath were not they at your maſter's houſe on Saturday night laſt?—Laſt Saturday.

Upon the oath you have taken were they or were they not?——Mr. Hall, I think was.

And Mr. White both?—I cannot rightly tell you, I am ſure Mr. Hall was.

Now upon your oath was not Hall and White, and your miſtreſs, and your fellow ſervant, and you all together at your maſter's houſe on Saturday laſt, enquiring what each of you was to ſay, and telling what each of you knew of this buſineſs?—No, Sir, upon my oath there was no ſuch thing.

You ſwear that?—I will ſwear that, I can ſwear it.

Who told you that you muſt fix the time from five till half paſt twelve?—I ſpoke as near as I could.

Who have you talked with on this buſineſs?—Nobody, but my miſtreſs and maſter thought it would be proper for me to come on this buſineſs.

Who is the priſoner's attorney?—I cannot tell, I have never ſeen him, I will be upon my oath to it.

How came it then that you ſo particularly recollect the time that the priſoner came and went away that particular day and no other?—May be I might be minding my buſineſs more one day than another.

Had you ever ſeen the profecutor before Monday night?—I never ſaw him before the Sunday night, then the priſoner and profecutor were drinking together.

How

How long were they together as you recollect that evening?—I cannot say particularly.

Do you know which of them went away first?——I cannot take upon myself to say not positively, nor whether they went out together I cannot tell, not positively.

Do you remember how much beer the prosecutor had on Monday night?——One pint, and a slice of bread, to the best of my remembrance that was all.

Then he did not stay long?—He was not above an hour, he might or might not be more, I cannot tell you.

Did he pay for that pint of beer when he had it?—No, he did not, for there was a dispute about his paying for it, he would nor pay for it before he drank it; my fellow servant drew it, and he went to the bar and paid for it himself.

What is your fellow servant's name?—Her name is Amey Garlick.

AMEY GARLICK sworn.

I have lived at Mrs. Wilson's five months.

Do you know the prisoner Byrne?——Yes.

How long has he used the house?——I cannot be positive to say how long he has used it.

Do you remember his being at your house the Sunday before last?—Yesterday was a week I remember very well, and on the Monday.

Who was he in company with on Sunday?—Along with that gentleman on Sunday evening, the prosecutor.

Which of them went away first?—I cannot take upon me to say which went away first on Sunday night, I cannot be positive to say which went out of our house first on the Sunday.

Did they come in together?——I believe it was about the dusk of the evening when they came in.

Did they come in together?——As far as I know.

Did you see them come in?—I will not be positive, but I saw them there together about the dusk of the evening.

How long did they stay?——It might be an hour or more, I will not take upon me to say.

Did you see them go away?—No, I do not remember.

Now we will see if you remember any better on the Monday?—Why, I take it, he was at our house about five o'clock on the Monday evening.

Do you know Mr. Hall and White?—By coming to the house, nothing further, I know them by sight.

Were they with the prisoner when he came in, on the Monday afternoon?——No, Sir.

What, neither of them?—No, I know that Mr. Byrne was there on Monday evening.

But did either Hall or White come in with him?——Not that I know of.

Did you see them there at all, on Monday evening?—Yes, both of them, Mr. Hall and White.

What time did you see Hall and White on the Monday evening?——I cannot be positive what time it was.

As near as you can recollect?—I cannot be positive to say, it might be about nine.

Do you mean to say that the prisoner was alone by himself, from five till nine?—I cannot be positive, he was very much in liquor when he was in our house, and slept on the table a good while.

Can you recollect when he first joined company with Hall and White?——He left the prosecutor's company to go into Mr. Hall's and White's company, the prisoner sat down by the prosecutor, the prosecutor came in about ten, as I look upon it.

Was either White or Hall there at that time, when the prosecutor came in?—As far as I know they were.

How long do you think they had been there?——It might be half an hour, or an hour before the prosecutor came in.

Had you served them with any beer-before fore the profecutor came in?——I really cannot fay.

Recollect yourfelf?——I ſerved Mr. Hall and Mr. White with ſome beer.

Did you ever ſerve them with any beer before the profecutor came in?——Not to my knowledge.

Can you tell me upon recollection, whether you ſaw them there before the profecutor came in or not?——I cannot take upon me to ſay.

Did you ſee White and Hall come in?——I cannot ſay I did, the profecutor came in nigh upon ten, he called for a pint of beer, and I drew it him, and upon calling for a pint of beer, there was an oyſter-woman came in, and he had ſome oyſters.

Who did he ſet down with?——By the ſide of the oyſter-woman, and the priſoner was on the other ſide of him, in the ſame box, laying his head on the table, now and then.

Did they ſpeak together at all?—Yes, but what they ſaid I cannot ſay.

Was the priſoner aſleep or awake when they came in?—He was aſleep, I did not hear what paſſed between them.

How long did the priſoner ſtay in that box by the profecutor?——Why, I look upon it when the gentleman went out of our houſe, that it was about eleven.

Did the priſoner ſtay in the box where he was ſitting with the profecutor, till the profecutor went away?—I think the profecutor awaked Mr. Byrne.

Now, after Byrne awaked, did he continue to ſit with the profecutor till the profecutor went away?—I cannot ſay whether he did or not.

Where was Byrne when the profecutor did go away?—In our houſe, in the tap-room.

When the profecutor went away, was Byrne the priſoner in the ſame box, or was he in another?—No, I think he remained in the ſame box till the profecutor went away.

Did Byrne remain in the ſame box, when the profecutor went away?——I cannot take upon me to ſay.

Why cannot you remember that, as well as that he went away exactly at half paſt twelve?—Becauſe there was nobody in the houſe, but this Mr. White, and Hall, and the priſoner.

When did the priſoner firſt join company with Hall and White?—That I cannot tell.

Was he in company with them at all?—Yes.

How do you know he was?—He took part of three pints of beer.

How do you know that the priſoner, and White, and Hall were together?—So far as this by Mr. Hall's going home.

Do you know whether Hall and White and the priſoner were at all together in company at your houſe?—I cannot take upon myſelf to ſay.

Can you ſay whether Hall and White were in company with each other at all or not?—Yes, they were together.

What, can you ſay that?——Yes, I think they were to the beſt of my knowledge.

Did you ſee them, together or did you not?——Yes, Sir, I really think I did.

I aſk you poſitively, whether you ſaw them there at all that night?—I tell you I ſaw them there, but I cannot ſay whether they were altogether.

Were theſe two together?—Mr. White and Mr. Hall were together in our tap-room.

The Remainder of this Trial in the next Part, which will be publiſhed in a few Days.

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

ON THE

KING's Commission of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the CITY of LONDON;

AND ALSO

The Gaol Delivery for the County of Middlesex,

HELD AT

JUSTICE HALL in the OLD BAILEY,

On Wednesday the 19th of OCTOBER, 1785, and the following Days;

Being the EIGHTH SESSION in the Mayoralty of

The Right Hon. RICHARD CLARK,

LORD MAYOR OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

TAKEN IN SHORT-HAND BY

E. HODGSON,

PROFESSOR OF SHORT-HAND;

And Published by Authority.

NUMBER VIII. PART VII.

LONDON:

Printed for E. HODGSON (the Proprietor

And Sold by J. WALMSLAY, No. 35, Chancery Lane, and

S. BLADON, No. 13, Pater-noster Row.

M DCC LXXXV.

[PRICE ONE SHILLING.]

THE WHOLE

PROCEEDINGS

UPON THE

KING's Commiſſion of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery for the City of LONDON, &c.

Continuation of the Trial of William Byrne.

Then you cannot venture to ſay whether the priſoner was with them or not?—I cannot take upon me to ſay, I will not take upon me to ſay, when Mr. White went away, Mr. Hall went out at the ſame time that Mr. Byrne did, I ſaw them both go together, and Mr. Byrne had a candle at the bar, I can take upon me ſo far as that.

How long before that had you ſeen them together?—I cannot ſay how long.

Then the ſum of your evidence is this that you can ſwear poſitively, that the priſoner came there at five o'clock, and went away at half paſt twelve, and that Hall and he went away together?—Yes.

But nothing elſe you will venture to ſay?—No, I will not.

Now, who told you to ſay that?——Nobody.

Can you ſwear that?——I can be clear in that as day-light, that nobody at all told me to ſay ſo, indeed.

Do you know when the proſecutor went away?——I think he went away a little before we put our ſhutters up.

What time is that?—We put our ſhutters up at eleven, or a little after.

Did you ſee the priſoner there after the proſecutor went away?—Yes, Sir, I did.

You are ſure of that too?—Quite poſitive of that.

Did you ſee Mr. White there after the proſecutor went away?—No, Sir, I did not.

Then you cannot ſay, whether White or the proſecutor went away firſt?—I cannot take upon me to ſay that.

Did you ſee Hall there after the proſecutor went away?—Yes, I did not ſee Mr. White after the proſecutor went away, to beſt of my knowledge.

What beer had the proſecutor while he was there?—I think to the beſt of my knowledge, he had a pint of beer, and a ſlice of bread.

Had he any more do you think than that?—Not to the beſt of my knowledge, and he had a penny-worth of beer that he pour into his pint, but that he had with the oyſter-woman; I ſerved him with his penny-worth of beer, and his ſlice of bread.

Did he pay for it directly?—Yes.

How, with half-pence?—I think, Sir, to the beſt of my knowledge, it was a ſhilling he gave me.

Did

Did he pay for it before he had it or after?—No, after he had it.

Do not you uſually aſk for the payment before?——Yes, but he ſcrupled paying for it when I aſked him for it.

Court to Priſoner. Have you any more witneſſes except to your character?—No, my Lord.

Court to Proſecutor. Have you any knowledge at all of the two people that were with the priſoner when they ſtopped you in Chick-lane?—No, I have not.

None at all?——No, Sir, I ſhould not know them if I were to ſee them ever ſo, becauſe they came like behind me.

Should you know the young man that went home with you and the priſoner on Sunday night?——Yes, that was Hall I think.

Had you any converſation or diſpute with the priſoner on the Monday night, except about the ſhilling that you wanted him to treat you with?—No, Sir, he got up directly, and went to another box, I do not know who he went to.

Do you remember Hall and White being there?—I cannot ſay.

You cannot ſpeak yourſelf, with any certainty to the time that you left the houſe?——No, Sir, I cannot, it was between eleven and one; it was between twelve and one, as they tell me, when I got home to my lodgings.

WILLIAM CRUTCHWELL ſworn.

I live at Shadwell, I am a baſket-maker, a maſter and houſe-keeper, I have known the priſoner about four years, the man worked for me near a year and half, and he always bore the character of an honeſt man, I never knew nor heard any thing to the contrary of him.

Do you know any thing of Hall and White?——Yes, I know the men, they have neither of them worked for me.

Do you happen at all to know what character they bear?—I never knew any bad character, I only knew them in the trade, I never heard amiſs of them, I have knewn Hall many years perſonally, I never heard any thing amiſs of them in my life any further than drinking at times.

JOHN MAYTON ſworn.

I live in Gray's-Inn-lane, a baſket-maker, the priſoner has worked for me two years, I am a houſekeeper, he is a very honeſt man, and a very careful ſervant; Hall is a ſervant of mine, and has been four or five years, he is a very honeſt man; I know White, he never worked for me, but I have heard his character as a very honeſt young fellow.

RICHARD BURDY ſworn.

I am a baſket-maker in Surry, I am a houſe-keeper, the priſoner worked for me, about four months about two years ago, he is a very honeſt man as far as I know, I never ſaw any otherways by him; I have heard talk of Hall; I know White, he ſerved his time in Water-lane, he is a very honeſt man, he ſerved his time with one Mr. Banniſter.

ELIZABETH DONALDSON ſworn.

I live in great Hind-court, Chick-lane, the priſoner lodged with me, and has done ſo for two years the 1ſt of Auguſt laſt, I never heard anything but he was honeſt.

Ann Foſter. I am a houſe-keeper, the priſoner worked for me in my huſband's time, I carry on the baſket-making buſineſs, he was a very honeſt man while he worked for me.

SARAH AVELYN ſworn.

I live on Saffron-hill, I am a lodger, my huſband and this Mr. Byrne were drinking together this Monday night from ten, and I was there, and the priſoner was very much in liquor when we went away, it was at Mr. Wilſon's, the corner of Chick-lane.

Do you know the proſecutor?——I ſaw him ſitting with a gentleman in mourning, but I did not take notice who it was.

Do you know whether it was that gentleman?——Yes, I believe it was, but I cannot take upon myſelf to ſay, he was ſitting with an oyſter-woman.

Do

Do you know Hall and White?—No.

Did that gentleman ſpeak to him at all?——Not while I was there, they were not at the ſame table.

Then he did not go up and ſpeak to Byrne, when he came in and awakened him?——No, not while I was there, Byrne was awake when I was there, he was not aſleep.

You went away about ten?——Yes.

Is your huſband here?——No.

ELIZABETH PAPPS ſworn.

What are you?——A publican; I live in Chick-lane, I have known the priſoner three years, and the other two, they are all three very upright, very honeſt, very juſt, and paid me every farthing, and that farthing too.

Who do you ſpeak of?——The three baſket-makers, I mean Mr. Byrne, Mr. Hall, and the other gentleman, I forgot his name; Mr. White I have known for three years, they have a club at my houſe.

Which of the three that you have been giving a character to is the priſoner?——Mr. Byrne; they never uſe my houſe much only when they have a club, which is once a fortnight.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the firſt London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

985. THOMAS OWEN was indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing on the the 1ſt of October laſt, a feather bed, value 18s. a flock bolſter, value 2s. two pillows, value 3s. one pair of pillow caſes, value 3s. a pair of linen ſheets, value 8s. a blanket, value 1s. a coverlid, value 9s. the property of James Cockill.

MARGARET HOSKINS ſworn.

I live in Green Bank, by Wapping-church, the priſoner took the key of my room out of my hand at a public houſe, and when I went home between ten and eleven, I found the door open, and the padlock open hanging on the ſtaple, and the things gone; I am ſure my goods were all in the room when I locked it, and that this man took the key; the goods were as mentioned in the indictment; the priſoner was a ſlight acquaintance of mine.

You meant he ſhould go to your room, and ſtay there for you?—No, I did not.

He did not take the key againſt your will?——He did, I did not like to make any noiſe or diſturbance; I did not lodge there above two or three days; the goods were the property of the proſecutor.

Mr. Knowles, Priſoner's Counſel. What may your employment be?——I am a poor unfortunate girl, driven to it by diſtreſs; I am willing to do anything in an honeſt way.

You firſt found the young man in the paſſage of the public houſe?——Yes, I had no quarrel with him.

Did not you break his pipe?——No.

Will you ſay you did not give him the key into his hand?——No, I never did, he took it out of my hand, I ſaid I wanted no diſturbance, I wanted the key.

Did not you give him the key, that he might ſleep with you?——No, I gave myſelf up till the matter was found out, I told them they might do as they liked.

Did not they put you into the watch-houſe?——Yes, this man never appeared with the key.

In the morning did not this man after having made enquiries for you, come to the watch-houſe?——It was paſt two in the afternoon, he came to ſee me, he came into the watch-houſe, and I ſtopped him.

Did not you tell him Mr. Cockill would make it up for three guineas?——I never did.

JAMES COCKILL ſworn.

I live at No. 1, in Black Horſe-yard, the girl had been my lodger about three or four days before this affair happened.

What room had ſhe?——It is only a room on the ground floor, the things in the indictment were a part of the furniture of that room, this witneſs came a little before before eleven on that night, to let me know that the things were gone; I went in, and the room was ſtripped, this is the padlock, which was unlocked; I know nothing of the priſoner but what ſhe told me, I never got any of my goods again.

Mr. Knowles. I believe you know that padlock may be opened with a ruſty nail?—I do not know.

Is that a common padlock?——No, it is not.

JANE COCKILL ſworn.

I let the room on the Thurſday to this woman, on Friday ſhe came, I never ſaw her, on Saturday I came there, and the door was locked, about half after ten ſhe came clapping her hands, and ſaid ſhe was robbed, and had given the priſoner the key.

Court. Did ſhe mention the name of Owen that night?—Yes, twenty times.

Did you go after Owen that night?—We took him on the Sunday, he came to ſee her, I was ſent to the priſoner, and he gave me the key, then he was charged on the Monday, he offered to pay for the half of the things, if ſhe would pay the other half; I never found any of the goods; he ſaid to this woman, that ſuch and ſuch people had ſold the bed for fourteen ſhillings.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

I leave it all to my councel.

Court. But will not you give the Jury ſome ſatisfaction with reſpect to this key, whether you did take it, or how you came to take it?——I was rather diſguiſed in liquor when ſhe offered the key to me, ſhe wanted me to take it, but I would not.

JAMES PRITCHARD ſworn.

He came into this houſe, and the woman came in, and ſtruck the man and broke his pipe, and ſhe threatened him with a warrant, ſhe did not ſee him for three or four days, then they made it up over a quartern of gin, that was the 23d or 24th of laſt month, I will not be ſure which.

Was that the day before he was taken up?——No, it was two evenings before, the man and her agreed to go home together, and in the preſence of me ſhe gave him the key of her room, ſhe ſaid ſhe was going out, and ſhould be back in a ſhort time, and if he wanted to go home there was the key; I never ſaw her give him the key afterwards, on the Saturday following, ſhe came into the tap-room again, wanting the man to go home with her, which he would not, he was in this houſe from the hour of eight, till within a quarter to eleven, when he went home with another woman that he has lodged with me theſe two years paſt; being in liquor, the woman ſays he ſtaid there till very nigh eleven on the Sunday, and on the Sunday after we had dined he came and aſked me to go to ſee this woman here, I do not know her name, and as we were going down to her houſe a woman aſked him if he was going to ſee Peggy; ſays the woman ſhe is in the watch-houſe, and he and I went there, and as we went to the watch-houſe ſhe detained him.

What is the priſoner's character?——As far as ever I ſaw he behaved extremely well, he is a ſeaman.

THOMAS BRASSETT ſworn.

The priſoner was a lodger with me in my houſe, after he came home from Greenland, I have always ſeen him behave with ſobriety, and I have let him have money at different times.

Where was he that Saturday night?——I do not know.

JAMES READ ſworn.

I ſaw this woman give him the key on Saturday night, between eight and nine, I am ſure ſhe gave him the key in the tap-room.

Court. What did ſhe give it him for?——I cannot ſay, ſhe gave him the key, and ſaid he might go home if he liked; the priſoner is a ſeaman, and has a very good character for what I know.

MARTIN SMITH ſworn.

On Saturday I was with the priſoner,

he was then in the tap-room, I had been to draw ſome beer, coming up I found the priſoner with his arms round the woman, deſiring her not to ſtrike him; I deſired peace, and after he let her looſe he flew at her again; I deſired her ſeveral times to be quiet, but ſhe would not, and ſhe ſaid ſhe would have a warrant againſt him, and about one or two afterwards I ſaw one of the officers come in with her, he ſaid he wanted Thomas Owens, but the reſt of the lodgers told him to keep out of the way; I believe on the Monday ſhe came down, and one perſuaded another, and ſhe ſaid ſhe would make it up, and they made it up, and had a quartern of gin; but ſhe came in again and ſaw him with a woman, that was, I believe on the day before he was taken up, and ſhe ſeemed to be jealous, and ſhe ſaid ſhe would fix him one way or the other; at that time ſhe had not the warrant againſt him, becauſe he had ſettled the warrant; about a quarter before eleven, or half after ten, he went out, and ſhe ſaid are you coming home, and I ſaw them both go away together from the door; I never ſaw anything of him to bear a bad character.

ALICE POTTINGER ſworn.

I know the priſoner, I remember the time when he was taken up, he aſked me in to drink, and he detained me till almoſt eleven o'clock; I aſked him to go home and ſleep at my houſe, and I would make him up a bed, being in liquor; and he went out about eleven in the morning; I cannot ſay I ſaw this woman there, I was in his company from ſix till I believe a quarter before eleven, and he went home with me.

NOT GUILTY.

---

986. THOMAS HOPKINS and HENRY DICKSON were indicted for feloniouſly ſtealing, on the 7th of October, five yards of hempen cordage, value 5s. the property of Robert Martin, and John Wiltſhire.

ROBERT MARTIN ſworn.

I am in partnerſhip with Mr. John Wiltſhire, I loſt the cordage mentioned in the indictment; it is about ten yards long, I know nothing of the priſoner, Gray the officer came to me, hearing we had loſt ſome.

JOSHUA GRAY ſworn.

I am headborough belonging to the liberty of the Tower; I ſat up this night, and going home in the morning at five o'clock, I perceived two men with a burden, it was rope they each had on their ſhoulders, I aſked them how they came by it, they directly made a ſtruggle, and flung it off their ſhoulders, and ran away, and a watchman brought one of them back, I am poſitive the priſoner he brought back was one of the two, he was admitted King's evidence, and upon his information the priſoners were taken and committed, the priſoner Dixon and the evidence had the property on them, the other man was not one.

(The cordage produced.)

Proſecutor. I believe it to be mine, I cannot ſay poſitively.

(Depoſed to by Robert Chiſolm who whipped it.)

JAMES WRIGHT ſworn.

I am a watchman, I took the evidence.

HENRY SHAFTOE ſworn.

On the 6th of this month in the evening I got in company with the priſoner Dixon and another that is not taken, at the Blakeney's Head, in Back-lane, we ſtaid there till paſt ten at night, and he ſaid to me, will you go with me, I told him yes, and we went from there down to Tower-ſtairs, there we got a boat, and went down to New Crane, and cut one headfaſt away from a barge, we came up again to Billinſgate, and had a pot of beer and ſome bread and cheeſe, and came down again above the Hermitage, and cut two headfaſts more away; and in the tier of craft below we cut another, we got on ſhore, and walking up

up Shorter's-ſtreet, this gentleman ſtopped me and Dixon, with the property on our ſhoulders, we had each of us two; I knew Dixon before, I knew Hopkins, but did not know his name; this is the firſt time I ever was confined in my life; Hopkins had the ſcull on his ſhoulder, when he was ſtopped.

PRISONER HOPKINS's DEFENCE.

I went into this public-houſe to get a glaſs of peppermint, as I have generally in the morning before I go to work, I met two of my ſhipmates, I met with them as the officer took me.

PRISONER DIXON's DEFENCE.

I am lately come from Greenland.

The priſoner Dixon called one witneſs to his character.

THOMAS HOPKINS, NOT GUILTY.

HENRY DIXON, GUILTY.

To be privately whipped and confined to hard labour twelve months in the Houſe of Correction.

Tried by the firſt Middleſex Jury before Mr. Baron EYRE.

MISDEMEANORS.

On the Sixth Day of this Seſſion, a Second London Jury were ſworn.

John Whinn
John Kay
Henry Smith
Stephen Wolfe
Thomas Wheeler
Robert Savage
John Chamberlain
William Nicholſon
William Brounger
Joſeph Read
Martin Wilſon
Silveſter Lowden.

987. ELIZABETH WATSON was indicted, for obtaining one piece of Iriſh cloth, value 50s. the property of John Wiltſhire, upon falſe pretences, with intent to cheat and defraud him thereof.

JOHN WILTSHIRE ſworn.

About the latter end of July, the priſoner came into my ſhop on Tower-hill, but I do not recollect the day, ſhe came to purchaſe ſome goods in the linen way, ſhe ſaid my name is Watſon, you recollect me, I immediately ſhewed her ſome low Iriſh cloths, then ſome finer of the ſame widths, ſhe ſaid ſhe was recommended to me as being in the retail way, ſuppoſing ſhe could do better than going to a wholeſale houſe, though ſhe was recommended by her friends to go to the wholeſale houſe; and ſhe aſked me if I would allow her diſcompt, I told her it made no difference, if I put on the diſcompt I muſt charge her rather more, and ſhe agreed to buy them at a ready money price, ſhe looked up various other articles after of Iriſh cloths, I ſhewed her ſome table clothes, ſhe begged to have a proper aſſortment, for ſhe had taken a ſhop about three months, and ſhe mentioned ſeveral people, one or two in particular; I aſked her where ſhe had taken a ſhop, ſhe ſaid, in Paradiſe-ſtreet; I aſked her how long it was a ſhop, whether it was a ſhop before, ſhe then ſaid, ſhe reſided there; I aſked her how long, ſhe ſaid ſaid, about three months; I aſked her wh ſhe dealt in particularly, ſhe ſaid in the millinery way, and in the linen drapery way in a ſmall degree, but ſhe had friends, and hoped ſhe ſhould do very well; after the table cloths ſhe aſked for ſome handkerchiefs, and indeed a regular aſſortment all the way through, ſhe looked out I ſuppoſe to the amount of fifty or ſixty pounds; ſhe then wiſhed to ſee a remnant of fine Iriſh, I ſhewed her two or three cut quantities of fine Iriſh, ſhe ſaid it was for a particular cuſtomer, and begged I would be very particular in that, for ſhe wanted to ſhew it that afternoon, I at length found a bit that pleaſed her, and which I thought was very good, I told her I would ſend it in with the other goods, ſhe ſaid her children wanted to go to ſchool, and begged I would let her take it with her, and make a bill out, and ſend them altogether; can you ſend them, ſays ſhe, this afternoon, and ſhe would pay for that Iriſh, when the other goods were delivered to Paradiſe-ſtreet, Rotherhithe, in the morning; I rather heſitated letting her take it, out of a degree of complaiſance, I told I would rather ſend it; no, ſays ſhe, I ſhall take a boat, it is no trouble, I will take it, if it is agreeable to you; ſhe behaved in ſuch a manner that I would not offend her, I rather run the hazard of letting her have ſuch a quantity of Iriſh, I did not ſuſpect ſhe was ſuch a kind of a woman; and ſhe went out of the ſhop with it; I ſent the goods the next morning, ſhe deſcribed the houſe to me within two or three doors of the lane, where in fact ſhe lived; I went down myſelf into Paradiſe-ſtreet, up and down, and looked at every houſe, and went likewiſe to Paradiſe-row, and I ſaw no ſuch thing as ſhe deſcribed, there was no ſuch ſhop of the kind that ſhe mentioned; I made ſome few enquiries there, and there was no ſuch perſon, only one perſon ſhook his head when I enquired after her.

Did you enquire whether ſhe had any houſe or ſhop in Paradiſe-ſtreet?—I did, but I could find no houſe or ſhop in that name, nor there was no ſuch perſon lived there.

Did you enquire of anybody that was likely to know, ſuch as the pariſh officers?——No, I enquired of two poor inhabitants, then I aſked this linen-draper, ſuppoſing him to be moſt acquainted; here is one of the inhabitants here.

When was this woman taken up?——I accidentally met her myſelf the Saturday before the ſeſſions before laſt, in Roſemary-lane, I knew her again perfectly well, it was about ſix weeks before that ſhe had been at my ſhop.

Did you ſtop her then?——I did, in the ſtreet; ſhe begged I would not expoſe her; a few people began to collect in conſequence of what I ſaid; I took her into a houſe, and I began to aſk her how ſhe could, a woman of her appearance, deceive me in that manner; ſhe ſaid ſhe was drawn to it by a bad huſband, ſhe had lived extremely well, but was plunged into diſtreſs by very unhappily placing her affections on a very bad man, who had left her with two children; ſhe appeared very ſorry and had never done the like before but to me, in conſequence of what I had heard, I enquired about it, and had it been diſtreſs, I would have acted otherwiſe; I afterwards went for an officer, and had her committed.

FRANCIS HOLDSWORTH ſworn.

I live at the end of Paradiſe-ſtreet, and have lived there ſix months, I know the neighbourhood well.

Do you know any woman of the name of Watſon that keeps a linen-draper's ſhop there?—No.

Has there been any ſuch within the laſt ſix months?—No, I was born there.

Can you undertake to ſay with certainty that there never was a perſon of the name of Watſon kept a ſhop there?—There never was any ſhop in that ſtreet.

Are you clear of that?—Yes.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

My Lord, I met with Mr. Wiltſhire, and went with him, I ſtaid for ſome time, I ſtaid till paſt four o'clock then I went volunvoluntarily to his houſe, he promiſed me favour; I have a very large family, and am now ready to lay-in, and my diſtreſs is very great.

Have you any defence to make as to the charge itſelf?——None at all, I certainly had the cloth.

Have you any witneſſes to attend to your character?——They attended at the Old-Bailey, but I do not ſuppoſe they are here.

GUILTY.

Court to Priſoner. How many children have you?——I have eight children.

(The priſoner had one child with her about four years old, and ſaid ſhe had another, a twin.)

How long has this woman been in cuſtody?——About ſix weeks in the Poultry Compter, till laſt week, ſhe is now in Newgate.

Court to Priſoner. Elizabeth Watſon, you have been convicted upon very clear evidence of an offence of a very dangerous tendency, and the Court, the Lord-Mayor, and myſelf feel a very conſiderable difficulty from the ſituation in which you ſtand, you appear perſonally to be by no means an object of favour, becauſe not only this offence has been very clearly proved, but there is too great reaſon to ſuſpect it does not ſtand ſingly, but that you have made a practice to defraud honeſt and induſtrious tradeſmen and houſekeepers, who are to gain their livelihoods, of their property under a falſe and groundleſs pretence; it is an offence againſt the public, and we feel ourſelves bound in point of juſtice not to let ſuch an offence paſs unpuniſhed, we dread the effects as an example; at the ſame time your preſent ſituation, being far advanced in pregnancy, render impriſonment to you of unuſual ſeverity; we are therefore inclined to take that circumſtance into our conſideration, as far as conſiſtent with public juſtice we can, and on that ground, and on that ground alone it is; that we have determined greatly to mitigate the ſeverity of that ſentence, which in juſtice we ſhould otherwiſe be bound to pronounce againſt you, it would not have appeared to me, nor I believe to his Lordſhip, by any means proper to have diſmiſſed you with a ſentence of leſs puniſhment than twelve months; but that ſentence might be attended with conſequences even dangerous to your life; and that of the unborn infant; therefore we ſhall in this particular inſtance, in compaſſion to that ſituation, and regard to the riſque of your own life and your infant, mitigate that ſentence, and content ourſelves with ſentencing you to ſuch a term as with what you have ſuffered will make out three months, that is, that you be impriſoned in the Poultry Compter ſix weeks, and we hope that compaſſion which has been ſhewn to your ſituation, will be an additional motive to you not to return to your evil courſes, for you are now very well known, you are known to this court, and if brought here again, no ſituation will be ſufficient to excuſe you from exemplary puniſhment.

The ſaid ELIZABETH WATSON was again indicted for obtaining goods, value 42s. the property of William Lane, by falſe pretences.

Court. The proſecutor on account of her ſituation does not appear to give evidence.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

788. THOMAS CONNER was indicted for obtaining, on the 8th day of May, 1784, one hat, value 16s. the property of Richard Donn, upon falſe pretences, with intent to cheat and defraud him thereof.

WILLIAM BUCK ſworn.

I am an apprentice to Mr. Donn, the priſoner priſoner came to me, I cannot tell the day of the month, nor the month, he ſaid he came from my maſter's houſe, and ſaid he came for a hat that was delivered by miſtake, and he would bring another hat directly, and I gave him the hat; Mr. Morſet is a hatter and hoſier, and he had ſent a hat home by his ſervant, my maſter deals with him, and had a hat of him that day between five and ſix, and this man came in about a quarter of an hour after it was brought home.

How was the priſoner dreſſed?——I cannot tell, only his hair was tied behind, and he was a pock-freckled young man.

How long was it before he was taken?——About a year and a half, and better.

Did you never ſee the lad before?——No.

How can you poſſibly undertake to ſwear to a ſtranger at a year and half diſtance?——By his hair I can ſwear poſitively to him.

You can?—Yes.

RICHARD DONN ſworn.

I live in Coleman-ſtreet, I know nothing further than I had a hat ſent home which was loſt; Robert Morſet is not in town.

Is there no witneſs from his houſe?——None at all.

Court. Independent of the length of time which alone would have been ſufficient proof to induce you to doubt the boy's recollection, here is no evidence at all to the material part of the charge againſt him, for there is no proof Mr. Morſet did not ſend him.

NOT GUILTY.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

989. THOMAS ROBINSON was indicted for that he, on the 1ſt day of October, having in his cuſtody and poſſeſſion a certain falſe and fictitious paper writing, purporting to be directed to Meſſ. Harris, Preſcott, and Howard, Bow Church Yard, and to be a letter and memorandum requeſting them to give the bearer four pieces of Iriſh linen at about 4s. per yard, did obtain the ſame by falſe pretences.

JOHN GROOMHERD ſworn.

I know the priſoner, and I am very ſorry it has fallen to my lot to appear againſt him, but if he had not, in all probability I muſt have taken a trial in his ſtead; I have ſeen the priſoner eight or nine times, I do not know what he is, I am a ticket porter; on Monday, the 30th of laſt September, about twelve at noon, the priſoner came to the Temple-gate, and he ſays, porter, will you go and do a job for me this afternoon about four o'clock? I ſaid if I was in the way I would; he ſaid, he would call at that time as he was going away, but he turned round, and ſays, porter, I have recollected myſelf, it will ſuit better for you to go at three; I did not ſee him that day, at all, on the next day, on the firſt of October, he came about half after twelve, I was looking down the Inner Temple lane, and about half way down I ſaw the priſoner, he put his fingers up and I came to him, ſays he, now can you do the job you was to do yeſterday? I ſaid, if you pleaſe; he took me down through the Temple in Temple-ſtreet, Whitefriars, then he pulled out this note, and gave it to me; I am ſure this is the note, I had it from the priſoner; now ſays he, go according to the directions of this note, and you will receive a parcel, and bring it to me, at the Pied Horſe, in Chiſwell-ſtreet, and if you ſhould be there before me, wait, but if I am there before you, I will wait till you come; I looked at the note, and I ſaw it was directed to Meſſ. Harris, Preſcott, and Howard, linen drapers, in Bow Church yard; the note was wafered; I told him I would go immediately, I was going, and he ſaid, porter, I want to ſpeak to you, if they ſhould aſk you where you come from, ſay you came from No. 5, Moor-place, Moorfields, I went with the note, and gave it, as I found afterwards, afterwards, to Mr. Preſcott, I believe he went into the compting-houſe to read it; in about five minutes he came out, and ſaid, porter, did the gentleman mention what price he would give? I ſaid, I do not know, he told me to come for a parcel, and bring it to him at the Pied Horſe in Chiſwell-ſtreet; he ſaid very well, he would go and look them out immediately, and I muſt give that juſtice to Mr. Preſcott to ſay, that there is not a tradeſman in the city of London could look out a parcel quicker than Mr. Preſcott did, but it was not the ſame ſort that the priſoner ſent for, Mr. Preſcott went to look out the parcel, he did produce ſome linen to be ſure, but it was a great deal ſmaller than the priſoner ſent for, and of a different quality, for inſtead of looking out the four pieces of linen, he looked out a white night cap, which was on the head of a conſtable, who took me into cuſtody; now ſays he, my friend, I ſhall take care of you, till you find out the perſon that ſent you, I was defrauded out of ſeveral dozens of handkerchiefs by a note ſimilar to this hand-writing; I cannot ſay, my Lord, but what I was a little aſhamed, but when I recollected myſelf I ſaid, I know nothing of it, I am innocent, I came in my profeſſion as a ticket porter; ſays he, I do not know that; ſays I, I belong to a ſociety, which the preſent worthy Lord Mayor is preſident of, it is called the Guardians; and if I had ever been concerned with any ſwindler, I muſt never look them in the face any more; he aſked me who I knew belonging to the ſociety, I mentioned many reſpectable characters about Cheapſide; Alderman Plomer is our governor; we give two ſecurities of fifty pounds each; ſays I, if you detain me here, it will not be the way to find out the perſon, you had better let the conſtable go with me to the Pied Horſe in Chiſwell-ſtreet; then Mr. Preſcott had a conſultation whether he ſhould ſend any linen, but it was agreed, that it ſhould be a parcel of waſte paper, tied up in the form of a roll, for me to carry under my arm, that if the priſoner ſaw me he ſhould not think any thing was amiſs; then it was agreed for me to go, and the conſtable and his aſſiſtants, I was to walk firſt, and they were to walk behind me, Mr. Preſcott was to come behind at ſome diſtance, and the conſtable and his aſſiſtants were to go into the tap-room, and take no notice of me, and I was to go in, and go to the bar, and enquire for the gentleman; accordingly we went, and I went in firſt into the tap-room, I called for a pint of beer, and aſked the gentlewoman at the bar, if there was a gentleman there waiting for a porter that had been into the city about ſome Iriſh linens; ſhe deſired me to ſit down; ſays I, I had rather not, I will go to the door, and may be I may ſee the gentleman one way or the other, I went to the door, and I had no ſooner come there, than on caſting my eyes acroſs the road, I ſaw the priſoner ſtanding in Moorfields, he ſaw me and held up his hands, I held up my hand, and held up the parcel, he ſeemed to be very well pleaſed, then he came forwards out of Moorfields into the middle of the road, and I advanced and met him at the right hand corner of Chiſwell-ſtreet, where there was a penthouſe, and we went down there; ſays he, well! (and ſmiled) you have got it; yes, ſays I, you villain! and I have got you; and I took him by the collar, and I turned round, and ſaw the conſtable about ten or twelve yards off, I held him faſt, and gave them a beckon, they came up, he trembled, and ſaid, what is the matter? then I delivered him to their charge.

What did he ſay for himſelf?—He ſaid very little, he ſaid what was the matter; we went into the Pied Horſe, and Mr. Preſcott came in, then it was agreed to take him to Meſſ. Rogers and Co. at No. 5, Moor-place, whoſe names he had preſented; we all went in together, Mr. Rogers came firſt, he ſaid he knew nothing of the hand-writing; the priſoner was preſent; Mr. Rogers ſaid he knew the defendant, that he was formerly a clerk in their compting-houſe: I am ſure this is the note.

(The note read, directed to Meſſ. Harris, Preſcott, and Howard, in Bow Church-yard.)

" Meſſ. Rogers and Bromfield preſent

" com-

" compliments to Meſſ. Harris and Co. " requeſting they will give the bearer four " pieces of Iriſh linen, value about 4s. and " incloſe bill of parcels, as they are going " on board immediately."

" Moor Place."

Mr. Peatt, Priſoner's Councel. You are a porter at the Temple gate?—Yes.

You are a city porter then?—Yes, I had ſeen the priſoner about a twelvemonth ago, but never above eight or nine times in my life, I had not a great deal of converſation with him.

Did not the perſon explain the nature of the buſineſs?—No, Sir.

You was under ſome apprehenſion for yourſelf if you had not found out ſome perſon to fix this upon?——I was detained.

When you came to Chiſwell-ſtreet, I believe your fears would have been realiſed if you had not found ſome perſon to fix this upon?——I fixed on the right.

The party was not at the Pied-horſe?—No, I know the man again.

Pray, Sir, as you have been extremely tenacious concerning your character, has it ever been your misfortune to be ſuſpected of any little depredations yourſelf?——Yes.

What was the reſult of that ſuſpicion?—Not felony, I never was tried in my life, I was in cuſtody for an aſſault, and it was ordered up by a general releaſe.

WILLIAM PRESCOTT ſworn.

I remember the laſt witneſs coming to me with a note, I have had the note in my poſſeſſion the greateſt part of the time, and I have put the initials of the houſe upon it, this is the note that was brought by the porter which has juſt been examined; I ſuſpected it, becauſe we received a ſimilar note in July, and delivered goods in conſequence; when I received this note, I went into the compting houſe, to compare it with the note I had received before, and it appeared to be the ſame hand writing; upon that I immediately ſent for a conſtable.

Upon your detaining him, what ſtory did he tell you?——He ſaid, he knew nothing of the contents of the note, he totally denied it; he ſaid, he knew the man that gave it him, and could bring ſeveral reputable people to appear for him, and convinced me thoroughly that he was not concerned, and he told me where the man was to be found.

Mr. Peatt. You know nothing of the hand-writing, but that it bears a reſemblance to one you formerly received?——That is all.

DANIEL DENSON ROGERS ſworn.

Is that your hand writing?—No.

Is it your partner's?—No.

Do you know the hand writing at all?—I think it reſembles the priſoner's hand writing, he was once a clerk in our houſe, I have frequently ſeen him write.

Do you believe it to be his hand writing?——It has a very ſtrong reſemblance, it is not the hand writing of any body now in the houſe.

Did you ever ſend for theſe goods?—No.

Mr. Peatt. How long is it ſince the priſoner ſerved you in quality of clerk?—About two years.

Did he ſeem converſant in the management of buſineſs?—He was very clever at buſineſs.

You conſidered him as rather an intelligent young man?—Certainly.

How did he behave in that capacity when he was with you?—He was very clever in buſineſs.

Do you recollect giving any verbal order reſpecting theſe things?—No.

SIMON COOKE ſworn.

I am a conſtable, I went with the porter; the firſt time I knew the priſoner, to take notice of him, was underneath the farriers ſhop, the porter had ſtopped him.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

The note that was carried, was not my hand writing, nor was it received for me, the man that has given this evidence to day is in the habit of giving evidence: my education at ſchool gave me an opportunity of forming forming many connections, which disappointment in my family have rendered me unable to support. I have known the Duke of Richmond better than three years, I was introduced to his Grace by the Honourable Mr. Lenox, on my returning from Gibraltar, where I was all the siege, I was recommended by the Duke of Queensborough, I went out as clerk.

Jury to Groombrd. You took a note from a stranger, and undertook to deliver a lie, and to say that it came from No. 5, Moor-place?—In my profession, I tell more than a hundred lies in a week, gentlemen frequently give me a letter, and, say, porter, you must say you came from the Change, when I came from Covent Garden.

The Jury desired to withdrew and returned with a verdict,

GUILTY.

Court to Prisoner. You have been convicted by the verdict, by a very attentive Jury of this fraud; and I am now at liberty to say that I entertain no doubt in my own mind, that the Jury have selected the truth of this case from the evidence; the offence is of a very dangerous nature, a person who has lived in a situation of credit as a clerk to a house of character, making use of the name of that house to obtain credit, and defraud them of their property, is an offence the most difficult of all others to guard against, and which therefore ought to be watched more particularly, and punished with more severity; for few kinds of fraud are more dangerous, and more prejudicial to trade, and it seems to me that there is very little distinction as to your guilt, between the attempt you made by the note you wrote and sent by the porter, and the completion of that guilt, which depended upon the credit that note might obtain with Mr. Prescott, for the delivery of the goods; the Court therefore think they should not discharge their duty to the public, and afford the protection which they owe to the trade of this great City, without sentencing you, which they now do, to be imprisoned for the space of twelve-months, in his Majesty's gaol of Newgate,

Court to Groombrd. You have cleared your character from all imputation.

Tried by the second Middlesex Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

990. JOSEPH JEFFERY SMITH was indicted for wilful and corrupt perjury at the last Session, at the Old Bailey, on the trial of Jane Langley and Mary Finn.

The record of the conviction read and examined by the Court.

EDMUND HODGSON sworn.

Court. Read the whole of the prisoner's evidence from your short hand-notes.

The Short-hand Writer here read the evidence, as in the seventh part of the Sessions Paper of the last Session, page 1071.

Court. Was Smith sworn?—I do not remember the man.

ROBERT ROBINSON sworn.

I remember Smith being sworn as a witness upon the trial of these two women.

Did you hear him give that evidence that was stated by Mr. Hodgson?—Yes.

Did he ever make you any such offer of making it up for four guineas, as is therein mentioned?—Yes.

Where was it?——At the Brown Bear, East Smithfield, I think it was the first of August.

What did he offer to you?——Four guineas.

What to do?—To make it up, and not appear against the prisoner.

Who was present?—Mr. Burton, and one Brown that was along with me.

Prisoner. Ask the man whether it was the first of August or no; I think I heard in the indictment, it was on the first of August, I was not in London on that day,

I was in Chelſea, I went out on a day's pleaſure, my wife, and me, and my maſter's daughter, from the morning till nine o'clock at night.

Court to Robinſon. Recollect what time of the day it was?——It was in the afternoon about two or three.

What day of the week was it?—It was on Thurſday, I believe.

Endeavour to fix the time as well as you can, what day was you robbed?——On Friday evening, the 29th of July; on Monday the 1ſt of Auguſt I took the priſoner, this converſation was the Thurſday following.

——— BURTON ſworn.

I was preſent with Robinſon, after the Juſtice committed the priſoners; we went to the Brown Bear, and had ſixpenny-worth, and the priſoner and another man came in, and the priſoner and the other man, both ſaid, they would give four guineas to make it up.

Which of them ſaid ſo?——They both ſaid ſo ſeveral times.

Not both together?——One after the other.

Did the priſoner ever ſay ſo?——Yes, I am clear in that.

What did he offer Robinſon the four guineas for?——Not to appear againſt them, and I went to the Juſtice myſelf and aſked him.

Do you recollect where this was?——I cannot really ſay, it was on Thurſday.

Are you ſure of that?—I am.

Priſoner. Did you ſee me offer any money?——No, I did not ſee any money at all.

Did not Brown ſay to Robinſon, if the girls and I could make up four guineas, will you be agreeable to make it up?—He aſked me if I ſhould take it.

Was that after the offer by Smith?—Yes.

Court to Robinſon. How came you to think that it was the third day after the robbery that this converſation paſſed?—It was the day they were fully committed, was on a Thurſday.

PRISONER's DEFENCE.

My Lord, I do declare, I never offered him any ſuch money, I had no ſuch money about me, this Brown and I went over to the Brown Bear, where that man and Burton were together, we fell into diſcourſe; Brown was gone to the Juſtice's a long while, and Mr. Burton wanted to go home, I ſaid, I will give a ſtep to ſee them; but it is very falſe that I offered them the four guineas.

Where is Brown?——I ſent after him but he could not be found, he lives in Wapping, I have ſome friends here to give me a character, I never was in a priſon, and it was the firſt oath I ever took, and I hope it will be the laſt.

CORNELIUS CALLAGAN ſworn.

I know the priſoner, he has worked for me thirteen months, I have known him about fifteen years, I never knew any thing bad by him.

JOHN SMITH SHEPHERD ſworn.

I have known the priſoner fourteen months, all I have ſeen by him was his going to his maſter's houſe, and I always ſaw him induſtrious and at work, he lives in my neighbourhood.

Priſoner. I did not come for the ſake of reward, nor was I hired to come; I loſt four or five days beſides my impriſonment, I have been five weeks in Newgate, I never was before any Magiſtrate before, ſince I have known what life was; this is ſuch a diſgrace to me, that if my maſter will not take me again, I muſt go and leave my native country.

GUILTY.

Court to Priſoner. You have been convicted of a crime which is one of the moſt dangerous to ſociety of any that can be committed: perjury, in all caſes, is a very heinous, and a very dangerous offence, it takes takes away the only ſecurity that the law can provide for the due adminiſtration of juſtice, which is the civil power in criminal proſecutions; and it appears to me that a perjury in criminal caſes, is more criminal than in a civil trial, where property alone is concerned: this offence of perjury, in behalf of a priſoner, is ſomewhat leſs than that againſt a priſoner; for where that produces conviction in a capital caſe, it appears to me to fall little, if anything, ſhort of the guilt of murder: but ſtill this is a very high and dangerous offence, for the conſequence of it is to endeavour to interrupt the courſe of Juſtice, and to ſcreen the guilty from puniſhment; and it has this further tendency, to render all teſtimony on the part of the priſoners ſuſpected: you have in the courſe of your defence, made one obſervation which appears to be a juſt one, and which points out to the Court very diſtinctly the line of their duty in the preſent caſe, and that is, that by this tranſaction your character has been taken away, ſo that you will not have an opportunity of obtaining your living in this country, and muſt be obliged to go abroad; that marks out the line of conduct for the Court to purſue; and, therefore, the ſentence of the Court is, that you be impriſoned for one week in Newgate, and then tranſported beyond the ſeas for the term of ſeven years, to ſuch place as his Majeſty with the advice of his Privy Council ſhall think proper to declare and appoint.

Tried by the ſecond London Jury before Mr. RECORDER.

---

991. RICHARD DREW was indicted for wilful and corrupt perjury.

The witneſſes called, and not appearing, the defendant was

ACQUITTED.

---

992. JOHN JOHNSON was indicted for uttering a counterfeit ſhilling to one Elizabeth Shaw as a good one, knowing it to be falſe and counterfeit.

There being no evidence the defendant was

ACQUITTED.

The Seſſions being ended, the Court proceded to give Sentence as follows:

Received ſentence of death 12. viz.

William Vandeput, Daniel Eaſt, James Beaman, Francis Storer, James Neſbitt, John Iſaacs, John Davis, William Shergold, Edward Preſton, George Manning, otherwiſe Francis Hill, Michael Smith, and William Powley.

James Scott did not receive ſentence of death, his caſe being referred to the opinion of the twelve judges.

To be tranſported for ſeven years, 27.

Robert Simpſon, Maria Hamilton, John Henderſon, William Hicks, Joſeph Bolus, Jeremiah Shepherd, John Arnold, John Alliſon, James Rooke, James Jordan, John Ford, Jarvis Bradbury, Thomas Band, Joſeph Oſborne, Matthew Dell, John Brewer, John Burman, Thomas King, William Jackſon, Robert Roberts (Africa), George Rankin, Charlotte Springmore, Mary Harriſon, William Kelly, Joſeph seph Fattington, Frederick Bell, Thomas Ridge.

To be imprisoned one year in the House of Correction. 6.

Judith Reading, James Graham, Sarah Harris, Susannah Martin, William Smith, alias Newman, Henry Dickson.

To be imprisoned six months in the House of Correction. 14.

Robert Richardson, Mary Goutrie, James Worthy, Ann Taylor, Mary Burch, John Simmons, Ann Smith, Elizabeth Fox, Jeffery Callen, Caleb Warren, Frances Jackson.

To be imprisoned one month in Newgate. 1.

John Cleverly.

To be whipped. 3.

John Barlow, James Graham, James Worthy, John Simmons, William How.

Fined 1s. 4.

John Wood, John Cleverly, George Woodward, William Harding, William Morrow, alias Murray, a capital convict, received his Majesty's pardon, on condition of being transported for life to the British settlement in the Bay of Honduras.

The trial of Messrs. Goodrige's and Evans, for forgery, was postponed till next sessions, the validity of the will of Mr. Sawtell being still depending in the Commons.

The trial of Zachariah Bevan for forgery was postponed, on the ground of a will being also in litigation.

 The next Sessions will begin on Wednesday the 14th day of December next, at the Old Bailey.

Mr. HODGSON

RESPECTFULLY returns his most grateful Thanks to his Employers and Pupils, for the preference they have thought proper to give to his Mode of teaching and writing SHORT-HAND, which he flatters himself is at once as concise and correct as any other System; he continues teaching in four hours, by four lessons, the whole necessary Instructions in this much approved Art. He also takes Trials and Arguments with the utmost Care, which are copied so expeditiously as to be sent home the same Evening, if required.

Mr. HODGSON (without the smallest Imputation on the Systems of his Cotemporaries, whose Merits he chearfully acknowledge) pledges himself to take nothing for his Transcripts, if any Gentleman who solicits a Cause, or the Council whose Arguments he professes to take, are not compleatly satisfied with his Performances.

No. 35, Chancery-lane.

N. B. HODGSON'S IMPROVED TREATISE ON SHORT-HAND, price only 2s. 6d. being a sufficient Instructor of itself: and also his new Publication, entitled, "SHORT-"HAND CONTRACTIONS, adapted to every System of Short-Hand; to which are added, "a Comparative Table of Short-Hand Alphabets, and two Extracts by way of Speci-"men; with two Copper-plates annexed," are sold by J. Walmsley, Chancery-lane, and also by Bladon, Matthews, Egerton, Almon, and all the Booksellers.

Letters (post paid) from Purchasers of either of his Books, directed to Mr. Hodgson, No. 35, Chancery-Lane, will receive immediate Answers.

INDEX

OF

PERSONS tried at the OLD BAILEY in the Mayoralty of the Right Honourable RICHARD CLARKE.

N. B. The Figures refer to the Number of the Trials, and the different Sentences each Priſoner received is marked before the Names, viz. thoſe marked D. received Sentence of Death. T. 14. tranſported for fourteen Years. T. tranſported for ſeven Years. N. ſentenced to hard labour on the River Thames to improve the Navigation. B. Branded. W. Whipped. Im. Impriſoned. Fi. Fined. Sp. Special. E. I. Eaſt Indies. And thoſe without any Mark, were acquitted.

And the Reader will alſo obſerve that the Capital Crimes for which the ſeveral Priſoners were tried and received ſentence of Death, are marked after the Names, as follows.

A. Arſon.
B. Burglary.
B. S. Beaſt Stealing.
C. Coining.
F. Forgery.
H. Highway Robbery.
Ho. Houſebreaking.
H. S. Horſe-ſtealing.
M. Murder.
P. S. Privately ſtealing.
R. Rape.
R. D. Robbery in a Dwelling-houſe.
R. M. Robbing the Mail.
R. P. Robbing Poſt-Office.
Ri. Rioters.
R. T. Returned Tranſport.
S. D. Stealing in a Dwelling-houſe.
S. L. Shop-lifting.
Sh. S. Sheep-ſtealing.
St. Ship. Stealing on board a Ship or Barge.
T. Treaſon.

A.

D ABBOTT, William F 28
Abburrow, Ann 876
W Aberdeen, Sarah 215
Aberg, Robert 584
Abrahams, Joel 153
Fi ——, Jonas 213
Adamſon, John 949
Fi.Im. Agus, Ann 355
Aikles, Hen. John 709, 901

W Allen, Margaret 105
——— Harriot } 174
——— Mary }
——— Tamſin 194
W&I——— Mary 599
B ——— Jane 694
T Alliſon, John 927
Allſo, John 645
W&I Anderſon, Wm. 37, 465
———, Frances 621
Appleton, Margaret 52
Fi. Armſtrong, Eleanor 837
Arnett, Thomas 727
T Arnold, John 917
D Aſhbourn, John RD 788
Fi Aſhman, Jeffry 209
D Aſtill, William B 12
——, John, alias Auſtin alias Brown 844
Aſquith, John, alias Gillett 470
Atkinſon, John 584
W Auguſt, John 868

B.

T Babbitt, John 333
T Bacot, William 146
D Bailey, Thomas B 612
———, George 707, 873
W&I Baker, William 476
W&I Baldwin, Elizabeth 328
D Balding, James, alias William RD 252
Bambridge, Tho. 479
W Bandebus, John 469
T Band, Thomas 948
Banfield, Cornelius 493
Baniſter, William 129
D Banning, Joſeph F 750
Baptiſt, George 549, 550
Barber, Robert 683
D Barnes, William H 737
W Barker, Ann 108
—— Mary 976
Barlow, Elizabeth 299
F&I———, John 514, 532
T 14 Barrah, Uziel 500
W&I Barret, Ann 623
Barrington, Geo. 427
Barrah, Judith 903
Barry, Elizabeth 450
D Bateman, Thomas, alias Parker H 475
D Beaman, James B 923
Batty, David 456
D Bear, Wm. St Ship. 801
Beach, Jane 408
Im Beck, Mary 646
T Bellett, Jacob 228
Bellis, Thomas, alias Theophilus 296
Bell, Alexander 770
Belton, James 738
Beeſton, John 774
T Belk, Frederick 974
D. Benton, Wm. St Ship 31
W Benatto, Abraham 810
Berrow, John 899
Berry, John 654
Bethell, Samuel 281
Bingham, William 147
W&I Birch, Mary 134
W Bird, William 319
W&I Blackburn, Sarah, 878, 891
T Blackhall, Thomas 800
T Blackmore, Samuel 502
W&I Bland, Eliz. 761, 879
———, Cornelius } 855
———, Thomas }
D Blann, William B 313
T Blomberg, John 753
T Bolous, Joſeph 926
Im Bolton, Thomas 9
W&I———, Wm alias Richard —— 470
Bond, Edward 154
Bone, Jane 321
Boſton, James 483
T Boſſey, Joſeph 630
Botham, Henry 136
W Bowlas, Joſeph 466
Brádbury, Jervis 724
W Bradford, Thomas 934
Im Brady, Robert 56
———, John 580
T Bradley, William 297
T ———, James 689
W Bradbury, Michael 827
T ———, Jarvis 947
T Braham, Mary 158
Braithwaite, David 269
W&I Brand, Lucy, al. Wood 549
W&I Brandon, David 638
T Breeze, Thomas 369, 644
T Brentwood, John 789
T Brett, Edward 103
T ——, John 396
——, Thomas 968
T Brewer, John 145, 957
W Briant, John 64
W Brigham, Mary 80
Brooks, William 45, 46, 47
W ———, Mary 418
Im ———, Ann 629
Brooklebank, John 906
T Broome, Thomas 778
F&I Brotherton, James 102
Brotherhead, Joſ. 422
T Brownett, Thomas 796
Brown, George 41
———, Thomas 73
W ———, Eliz. 78, 79
W&T———, John 116, 354
———, Robert 216
D ———, Thomas H 219
Im ———, Catherine 418
W ———, William 472
D ———, Tho. RT 497
D ———, Joſeph SD 524
T ———, John 626
W ———, Chute Thomas 634
———, John, alias Auſtin, alias Aſtil 636
T ———, John 782, 814
D Browning, Tho. H 787

D Bruce, John B. 218
F Bryan, Timothy 754
Buckle, Tho. 703
Bull, William 371
T Bundy, Edward 54, 234, 283
W&I Burch, Mary 965
Burgeſs, Patrick alias Edw. Wheeler 511
D Burke, Patrick T. 669
D ——, Wm. H. 729
W&I Burley, Eliz. 188
T Burman 957
D Burn, John H. 675
W Burne, John 128
W ——, Wm. 586
Im Buſhnell, James 388
Butler, Mary alias Perk 65
W ——, John 265, 273
W&I ——, Mary 441
——, Eleanor 557
D Buttledoze, Th. H. 27
Byrne, Wm. 984

C.

Cadwell, Margaret 922
Cain, Richard 107
D Cale, Tho. B. S. 36
Im Callen, Jeffery 973
W&I Callaghan, Ann 562
T Cane, Robert 829
F&I Carroll, Richard 290
Cauſley, Wm. 963
T Caſhon, John 74
Caſſody, Conelius 114
T Caſs, John 896
W Caſtle, Elizabeth 314
Chaddick, Diana 700
Chambers, Benj. 129
T ——, Rob. 789
——, John 201
——, Mary 523
D Champneſs. Sam. Ho.
W&I Chandler, Geo. 453
Channing, Wm. 412
Chapman, Thomas 6
D Chapman, Eliz. S. L. 374
Chenery, Eliz. 73
F&I Cheſhire. Wm. 674
Cheſſer, Margaret alias Hamilton 2, 3
Clark, Paul 66
T ——, Tho. 169, 882
D ——, Richard B. 315, 439
——, Wm. 383
——, Mary 433
T ——, Jas. alias Hoſier 496
——, Elizabeth 652
W&I ——, John 692, 790
T ——, Chas. 771, 871
T Claridge, Rich. 381
W Clayton, Geo. 220
——, John 344
D ——, John alias Paddy Oyſter, H. 785
Cleaver, Tho. 714
W&I Cleverley, John 944
W Coates, James 162
D Coffield, Pat. H. 813
T14 Colley, Eliz. 30
——, Wm. 331
Coleman, Cath. 658
——, Tho. 848
Collins, Amy 61
——, James 167
——, Marg. 455
T ——, Cornelius 757
Coney, Wm. 830
D Connell, James R. D. 792
Connelly, Mary 959
D Conner, Tho. 211, 474
——, Thomas 988
Conway, Eliz. } 898
——, Mary }
W Cook, James 165
——, Mary 210
——, Francis 452
——, Wm. 610, 846
W Cooper, Eliz. 112
W ——, William 135
W&I ——, Cha. 736
Cooper, Sarah 815
D Cotta, Jas. S. D. 676
T Couſins, Thomas 377
——, Geo. 492, 600
D Cowan, Jas. B. 307
T Cox, William 20
T ——, James alias Stephen 175
W&I ——, John 404, 438, 469
D ——, John H. 679
D Coyle, Jas. H. 304
Cotton, Martha 336
Crabb, Frances 196
T Crawford, Maria 950
T Creeke, Jane 772
Croft, Thomas 587
W Croker, Edward 67
W Croſs, Samuel 556
Crowder, Edward 666
D Cruſe, Wm. S. D. 677
T Cullen Bryan, Jas. 449
F&I Cunningham, Wil. 895
W&I Curfey, Jane 60, 642
Curtis, Cath. 566, 567
Cuſtins, Richard 908

D.

D Daley, Patrick St. Ship 442
——, Matthew 596
T Dalton, Eliz. 748
W&I Dart, Hannah 799
T Davis, Joſeph 19
T ——, James 51
——, Nathaniel 167
D ——, Samuel H. 250
——, Mary 285, 946
——, Elizabeth 413
W&I ——, Sarah 419
——, Ann 543
T ——, James 649
——, Eſther 659
——, Wm. 801, 802
T ——, Geo. 820
T ——, Edward 866
D ——, John H. S. 919

Davis, John 951
——, Luther 970
W Dawson, Wm. 593
T ——, Abm. 821
W Deadman, Wm. 125
T Deadross, William 573, 574, 780
Dell, John 625
T ——, Matthew 939
Denman, Wm. 505
Dias, Solomon 607
——, Richard 607
W&I Dickson, Henry 986
Dillyon, Alex. 637
Dixon, Elizabeth 160
T ——, John 803, 856
T ——, Francis 864
T Donovan, James 350
T Dorrington, John 565
T Douty, Thomas 347
D Dowland, Ferd. H.S. 38
W Doyle, Peter 507
Drew, Richard 991
W&I Drudge, Abel 309
Druit, Mich. 885, 886, 887, 888, 889, 890
T Dukes, Isaac 156
W Dunbar, Samuel 471
D Duncan, Jas. B. 727
Dunlop, James 720
D Dunn, James 22
W Dupre, Isaac 149
Duroure Scipio Henry Lewis 203
W&I Dyers, Jas. (opinion) 602
Dyer, Joseph 872

E.

Im Eades, John 686
D Eagan, Patrick, alias M'Grath F. 478
D East, Daniel B. 923
Edmunds, Geo. 338
Edwards, Wm. 488
T ——, John 665
——, Ann 680
Edwards, Thomas 684
T Elder, Alexander 740
T Elliott, Wm. alias Ellard 275
T Ellis, John 12, 329, 579
T ——, James 258
Ellison, James 84
——, John 711
England, Tho. 946
T English, Nicholas 173
——, John Stafford 288
D ——, David S. L. 672
Entwistle, Rich. 315
T Etherton, John 468
Euchel, Lyon 836
D Evans, John S. D. 41
W ——, John 181
T ——, John 229

F.

Farmer, Ann 11
T ——, John 367, 806
T Farrington, Jos. 972
Farrol, John 964
Faude, Conrad 841
Fenley Terry Wm. 224
Fenn, Eleanor 405
B&I Fennel, John 536, 599
——, Joseph 592
Field, Tho. 597
D Finder, Wm. B. 35
T Finn, Mary 816
Finney, Peter 152
——, Margaret 276, 277
T Fisher, Alex. 260, 387
Im ——, Martin 812
Fitzgerald, John 141
D Fitzpatrick, Joseph B. 217
D ——, Rose B. 312
T ——, James 551
Fleming, David 763
——, Jane 870
W Flinder, James 262
Flinn, Marg. 323
——, Cath. 702
Flint, Wm. 37
Fogery, Elizabeth 134
Ford, Thomas 205
——, Elizabeth 591
T ——, James 942
Fosgate, Tho. 176
Foskett alias Foxett, Henry 874
Foster, George 403
F&I ——, John 417, 515
T Fowles, Ann 421
T Fox, William 773
Im ——, Elizabeth 978
T Francisco, Geo. 101
Im Franklin, Robert 388, 687
F&I Fray, John 751
Im Freelove, Mary 762
T Freeman, Robt. 185
——, Tho. 224
Frizen, Alice 752
W Frost, Thomas 775
W Fulman, John 95

G.

D Gardener, Marg. S. L. 463
D Garth, Edw. B. S. 32
Gearish, Eliz. 131
W Gee, Mary 752
George, Worrall 115
T ——, Ann 552
W Gerrold, James 257
Gibbons, William 514
W&I Gibson, Ann 811
T Gilbert, William 97
——, Samuel 195
D Giles, William H. 16
——, John 828
T Gilling, George 457
Girton, Sophia 843
T Gloster, William 693
Glover, Thomas 139
Glyde, Edw. 742
Goad, Francis 781
Im Goddard, Sus. 278

Goddard, Benj. 632
——, John 784
Godfrey, John 691
T14 Godin, Abraham alias Gordon 521
T14 Goldfinch, Tho. 521
D Goldſmith, George B. 33
——, Solo. 342
T ——, Wm. 894
T Gooden, John 222
Goodwin, John 83
T Going, Simon 385
T Gosling, Wm. 704
Gooley, Frances 43
W&I Goutery, Mary 935
Gower, Elizabeth 760
Gould, Stephen 950
Graham, Mary 907
W&I ——, James 933
T Grainger, John 661
D Gray, James R. S. 293
T ——, Thomas 391
T ——, William 800
——, Mary 825
Green, George 31
W&I ——, Mary 73, 662
——, Ann 369
Greenow, Samuel 651
T Greenwell, Nicholas 185
Greenwood, Edw. 107
D ——, Mary H. 519
Fi Gretton, John 106
Griffin, Simon 809
Griffiths, Sarah 235
——, Edw. 727
Grindley, Wm. 386
Griſwell, Edw. 607
T Groome, Francis 746
Groves, Walter 392
D ——, Tho. S. D. 671, 897
D Guthrie, Jas. H. 667
Gwynn, Joſeph 632
Gynne, Grace 401

H.

Hadd, Suſannah 189
Hale, John 509
Hales, Wm. 840
D Hall, Lawrence B 33
T ——, William 81
——, Tho. 126, 127
F&I ——, Iſabella 783
Hallard, Edw. 126, 127
W Holway, John 180
D Hamilton, James otherwiſe Smith H. B. 2, 3
T ——, Tho. 385
T ——, Maria 913
Hancock, Tho. 558
W Hands, William 745
Hanks, Stephen 14
Hanvy, Thomas 716
T Harbour, Wm. 863
D Harding, Wm. B. 430
F ——, Wm. 955, 956
Hardy, Philip Jacques 306
Harford, John 150, 513
T Harley, Abraham 633
D Harris, George, H. 27
W&I ——, Sarah 657, 952
——, Thomas 680
W1&T ——, John 732, 779
Harriſon, Martin 546
——, Thomas 779
T ——, Mary 966
T Hart, Catherine 124
T ——, John 248
Harvey, James 121
——, Henry 909
Haſkins Wm. 624
Hawkins Matthew alias Cornwall 271
T Hayes, Dennis 68, 187
D ——, John S. L. 733
D Hayward, Jas. B. 428
W ——, Wm. 582, 627
D ——, Wm. S. L. 749
Hazle, John 576
Hefford, Tho. 808
Henley, Eliz. 791
T Henderſon, John 914
Hewitt, Ann 118
T Hiam, John 383
T Hicks, John 383
T ——, William 928
W&I Hickman, Jona. (opinion) 602
D Higſon, Wm. M. 415
W Hill, John 435
Hilliard, Benj. 45, 46
Hinde, Edmund 247
T Hippeſley, Eliz. 352
D Hitchcock, Joſeph alias Church, R. S. 293
Hitley, Wm. 583
Hoare, Robert 55
T Hobbs, James 119
D Hobſon, Rich. B. 34
Holmes, Sarah alias Brookley 37
W ——, Wm. 493
Im ——, Robert 759
T14 Holt, Samuel 477
Holton, Peter 397
D Honey, John H. 522
Hooker, George 575
D Hopkins Baker, Tho. R. T. 526
Hopper, William 735
Horne, John 282
Hopkinſon, Jona. 929
Hopkins, Tho. 986
W&I Horton, Mary 58
——, Wm. 98
T ——, James 804
Hoſier, Peter 247
Houlton, Peter 681
Houſeham, Edw. 89
W How, Wm. 979
W Howard, Charles 133
T ——, Tho. 208
W Howe, John 148, 164
W ——, Wm. 177
D Howell, Benj. B. 793
Hughes, Wm. 18
——, John 195

Im Hughes, Richard 363
D ——, John H. 497
D ——, Mary S. L. 678
W&I ——, Edw. 701
T ——, Wm. 755
W&I Huggins, Daniel 160, 460, 461
T Humphreys, Edw. 100
D ——, Henry B 375
D ——, Robert F 533
T ——, Jane 702
T ——, Joseph 766
T ——, Mary 807
W Harley, John 940
D Hurt, Wm. H. 255, 256
Im Hymer, Mary 859
Hyndes, Eliz. 130

I.

W T Jackson, Wm. 63, 698, 897, 960
W&I——, Frances 280
Jacknell, William 388
D Jacobs, Richard B 608
W&I James, Henry 459
——, William 516
Jameson, Arthur 216
Icorn, Ann 700
T Jeff, John 8
Jeffcries, John 556
W&I Jefferson, Edward 703
D Jeffs, Joseph B 249
W&I Jennings, John 559
Inch, alias Inches, W. 320
T I raham, Benjamin 85
W I am, Joseph 458
T ——, Humphry 539
Inwood, Philip 383
T Jocelyn, Thomas 695
D Johnson, Edward S D 39, 40
——, William 224
T ——, John 227
D Johnson, John, alias Bandy — H 308
F&I——, Elizabeth 356
D ——, Michael, alias M'Mahon F 368
T ——, Edward 535
——, Mary, alias Shergold 572
W&I——, Ann 717
——, Sarah 910
——, Susannah 954
——, John 992
D Jones, John B 33
Fi T ——, Robert 62, 159, 191
D ——, Ann F 254
T ——, David 295
T —— Thomas 325, 334, 406
W ——, James 378
W&I——, Elizabeth 423
W&I——, John 424
D ——, James B 431
——, Ann 454
D ——, Mary F 498
T ——, James 613
W&I——, Benjamin 690
T Jordan, James 943
T Irvin, Robert 561
W&I Isley, Rich. (opinion) 246, 602
D Isaac, John H 915
D Ivemay, John H 522
D Iverson, Wm. H 292
D Ives, Thomas H S 311

K.

T Kayne, Richard 713
Keates, James 166
W Kelly, James 178
W ——, Walter 857
T ——, William 975
D Kelsey, John B 30
Kennedy, Lawrence 646
——, James 827
W&I Kenneily, Lydia 764
Kenton, William 255, 256
D Key, Joseph 446
Keywood, Sarah 853
King, Thomas 960
Kinross, Charles 971
Kirby, Harriot 628
Kirbyn, Samuel 117
W Kirkham, Sarah 601
Kitchin, George 839
Kite, John 243
W Knapthorp, Marg. 723
Knock, Catherine 705
T Kyberd, William 327

L.

Ladlove, Sarah 109
W&I Lair, Ezral 86
Lambe, Samuel 682
Lambert, John, alias Weldon 680
Fi Lane, Samuel 77
D Langdon, Stephen 432
Langford, J. al. Harris 59
W&I——, Mary 485
T Langley, Jane 816
Langrish, John 287
D Lapier, James B 367
W Latham, James 92
W Lavender Samuel 317
D Lawes, Wm. H 726
T Lawler, William 568
Lawrence, Carter 200
T ——, James 778
Fi I Leach, Solomon 467
Leaf, John 512
W Leaper, John 140
W Lee, James 93
Im ——, Timothy 326
W&I——, John 351
T ——, Joseph 404
W Leonard, Jeremiah 437
W Lesby, John 491
Lester, Thomas 851

Levi, Ferry 602
T Lewis, John 861
D ——, James S D 747
W&I Lewington, Tho. 834
Ley, Vernon 533
T Lichfield, William 395
Lillie, Joſeph 296
T Linch, James 818
T Lloyd, John 603
D ——, John, alias Jones H S 822, 823
D Lockart, James S D 668
Long, Thomas 855
Lovel, Samuel 756
Lovejoy, John 784
Loveridge, Wm. 848
Lowther, Thomas 618
Lucas, Thomas 192
D ——, John B 369
Ludlow, Mary 941
W Lundman, Charles 552
Lyon, Samuel 454

M.

W Mackaney, Daniel 712
Macaway, Daniel 151
T M'Cabe, Eleanor 552
W M'Can, Thomas 142
W&I M'Dermot, Mary 489
Macdonald, Alex. 10
W ——, James 364
D Mackenzie, Kenith M 1
——, Kenith 322
T Macginnis, Wm. 520
Macgowan, John 20
T Macguire, Roger 622
D Mackintoſh, James S D 673
T Macguire, Mich. 15
W Maly, John 382
T Manevil, Michael 542
W&I Manning, Joſeph 434
D ——, Geo. alias Hill Francis B 922
T Marks, Matthew 372
W Marney, Cornelius 640 696
T Marney, Richard 869
T Marriot, John 267
T Marſhall, John 826
Im Martin, Philip 566, 567
D ——, Catherine S L 678
W&I ——, Suſannah 958
W Marquis, Joſeph 178
Maſon, Sarah 122
T ——, John 261
W ——, William 268, 331
T Maſſias, John 210
W Matthews, James 182
W ——, Anthony 710
Maxey, John 49
Maxwell, Matthew 938
W Maxfield, Robert 490
D Mayton, Berwick S L 527
T May, George 564
D Meads, Joſeph Sh S 340
T ——, Thomas 744
T Medley, Charles 120
T Merchant, Joſeph 793
Meſſenger, Jonath. 400
T Metcalf, Francis 534
Middleton, Mary 189
D Miles, John R S 252, 293
W Miller, William 172
——, Harriet 776
W&I ——, James 795
D Mills, John R P 233
W&I Mills, John 765
Mitchell, Robert 190
——, William 916
Milne, John 193
Mitton, Joſeph 407
Molloy, Charleſon 910
D Moody, John H 27
——, John 730
T Moffat, James 641
Molley Catherine 620
W&I Mooney, John 486
Moon, Mary 900
T Moore, Humph. (judgment) 88
Moore, William, alias Ranſmore 206
——, Benjamin 354
——, John 576
D ——, Benjamin S D 671
D ——, Wm. R D 786
Moran, Cornelius 725
W Morgan, John 137
——, William 208
T Morland, John 614
D Morley, Geo. R T 495
Morris, Thomas 123
W&I ——, Mary 161, 547
W&I ——, Eliz. 226
D ——, John 324, 667
D ——, George, alias Roberts B 670
T Morton, Mary 353
T Moſeley, William 382
D Moſdell, James H 743
D Mott, Robert R T 348
D ——, Ann S L 390
T Mountain, William 118,
W&I ——, Robert 710
T Mullen, Lawrence 280 387
Mulineaux, Rich. 503
T Mumford, Peter 542
Munday, James 727
W&I Murphy, Marg. 96
W ——, Daniel 155
D ——, Henry B 310
W ——, Wm. 588
T ——, Jerem. 869
Murray, John 198
T Myer, Richard 631
T Myers, John 860

N.

Nangle, Hugh 619
T Naſh, Henry 256
Im Neale, John 803
D Neſbit, James B 912
D Newbury, Peter H 292
T Newland, Joſeph 758
T Newton, George 157

Nicholls, Frances 210
Nicholſon, Wm. 922
Noah, Rebecca 653
Im Nobes, William 53
T Noble, William 610
Norris, George 224
Im Northam, Elizabeth 594
D Nugent, George H 729

O.

T Oakes, James 302
Oates, James 618
T O'Beirge, Peter 443
D Olive, George A 609
D Oliver, John H 308
Onſlow, George 107
W Oſborne, John 183
T ——, Joſeph 945
T Oſlan, Francis, alias Colſon 631
Owen, Thomas 985
W Oxen, alias Oxden, Michael 699

P.

Painter, Thomas 983
D Palmer, Holland, alias Palmer F 26
Palmer, Benjamin 235
——, Elizabeth 278
D ——, Hen. J. F 498
Paris, William 392
Parker, Joſeph 708
Parker, Wm. 843
Im ——, Mary 858
Parrott, Wm. 370
T Partridge, Joſeph 360
D ——, George H 519
D Patch, Philip H 13
T Patterſon, George 350
Paul, John 550
T Payne, Jonathan 188
D ——, Ed. St Ship 216
W Payne, Rich. 266, 852, 910
T ——, Joſeph 344, 349
W Pennell, James 494
T Penny, James 395
Fi Petre, Ann 48
D Peyton, Charles R T 366
T Phillips, Thomas 577
Pickering, Samuel 72
Fi&I ——, Thomas 954
D Pidgeon, George H S 467
Fi Pierſon, Mary 571
T Pitt, Mary 481
——, James 854
T Poland, John 701
B Poulters, William 537
T Price, William 393
W&I ——, James 420
W ——, Ann 578
D Primroſe, Francis B 648
Pring, John, jun. 286
D Preſton, Edward H 921
T Poole, Samuel 805
W ——, Mary 893
D Powley, Wm. H S 920
W&I Pritchard, Eliz. 144
——, Thomas 413
T Probert, Thomas 865
Proſſer, Thomas 384
——, Abraham 838
W Pyke, William 588

R.

Ramſhaw, John 595
T Randall, James alias Richardſon 824
T Rankin, George 962
Rawbone, Tho. 289
W Rawlins, Joſeph 309
Im Rawſton, Ann 263
T Raymond, Geo. 230
D Read, Ann H. 231
W&I Reading, Judith 918
D Reboult, John alias Preſcott H. 611
T Reger alias Racher, Michael 715
T Remnant, Joſeph 261
D Reynolds, Geo. S. L. 512, 688, 734
——, Samuel 606
Rice, Charles 845
Richards, Wm. 503
Richardſon, Dan. 651
——, Mary 664
T ——, Wm. 769
Fi ——, John alias Richmond 835
——, Rob. 924
T Ridge, Thomas 981
Ridley, George 410
W Riley, James 341, 797
T ——, Nicholas 555
——, John 589
D Roberts, Rob. B. 313
T ——, Edward 331, 337
W ——, William alias Thomas 484
——, James 504
T14 ——, Samuel 521
T ——, Robert 962
D Robins, Jaſper B. 373
D Robinſon, Geo. S. D. 42
T ——, Wm. 489
Im ——, Tho. 989
W Rochford, Michel 616
D Roe, James S. S. 728
T Rogers, Luke 25, 446
Romain, James 943
T Rooke, James 943
W Roper, John 721
Roſſon, Elizabeth 768
D Rowſel, Amos B. 739
Royſton, Sarah 850
Ruſſel, Philip 867
Ruſſel, William 145
D ——, James H. 294
Rutledge, Cuthb. 167
D Rutter, Henry H. 13

S.

W Sams, Thomas 465
Satcher, Sam. 113
T Saunders, Francis 767
Savill, Tho. 300, 331
Im Sawyer, Tho. 330, 615
W Scott, Thomas 259
T ——, Francis 343
D ——, Tho. H 440
W&I ——, Eliz. 541
W ——, John 697
D ——, Jas. C 954, 963
Sealy, John 138
Seddon, William 536, 639
Sewell, James 549
Seymour, Samuel 930
T Shandaw, George 832
Sharp, Wm. 316
T ——, Joseph 335
D Shaw, John H 26, 27
D ——, Peter S D 581
——, Elizabeth 936
W&I Sheely, Sarah 590
Im Sheldon, Ann 650
Im Shepherd, Hen. 842
T ——, Jeremiah 917
Shergold, John 572
D ——, Wm. H 921
Shirley, Elizabeth alias Savill 300, 301
Shirley, George 831
W Silby, Elizabeth 545
T Silcock, Israel B 109
——, Ann 369
D Silvester, Richard alias Jack the Gardener H 737
T Simms, Andrew 7
——, John 132
T ——, Thomas 464
W&I ——, Mary 487
D Simmonds, Melvin B 37
Im ——, Wm. 794
W&I ——, John 967
W&T Simpson, Robert 410, 911
Simpson, John 685
—— 875
W&I Skiddle, Mary 361
W Slack, Elizabeth 982
W&T Slater, Abraham 44, 452
W&I Sloper, Simon } 251
——, Marg. }
F&I Small, Margaret 204
T Smart, William 17
——, John 33
D Smith, Richard H S 23, 24
D ——, James H S 38
Im ——, William 82
——, Eliz. alias Clark, Cath. 91
W ——, James 244
W&I ——, Mary 279
T ——, Thomas 379
T ——, Wm. 411
T ——, Charles 542
W&I ——, Eliz. 570
——, John 605
——, Charles 607
——, Thomas 619
T ——, Thomas 655
T ——, Thomas 741
——, Mary 854
D ——, Mich. B 918
Im ——, William alias Newman 969
Im ——, Ann 977
T ——, Jeffery Joseph 990
Snelling, Henry 426
W&I Sparkes, Sarah 362
——, Wm. 617
Speedy, Catherine 73
W&I Spencer, Solomon 298
——, Sus. 647
T ——, Thomas 819
T Spoonley, George 861
T Springmore, Charlotte 966
T Squires, Thomas 656
Im Stacey, Eliz. 389
D Staples, Wm. H 679
W&I Stanley, Eliz. 444
T Stephens, Wm. 660
——, Geo. 706
T ——, Martin 797
Stevenson, Ann alias Leach 467
D Stewart, Wm. B 11,
——, Wm. 195
Steward, Sarah 198
Im Stitt, William 892
D Stokes, Benj. B S 376
T Stone, Charles 5
Storer, Joseph 482
D ——, Francis B 923
W Stroud, Stans 220
Stubbs, Eliz. 436
Sturley, John 847
Sturmey, Joseph 525
T Strutt, Thomas 506
Suffering, George 233
D Summers, Rich. alias Smith B 369
T Sugnall, alias Strugnell William 232
T Sullivan, Michael 87
Im ——, Tim. 265, 332
T ——, Dennis 274
T Sutton, Rich. 242
W&I Sweetman 883, 884

T.

D Tabbs, Thomas H 27
Im Tapley, Robert 581
B Tatum, Wm. 538, 539
W Taylor, John 184
W ——, William 207
——, Hannah 463
D ——, Martin } B 674
D ——, Eliz. }
W&I ——, Ann 953
W Tebay, William 225
T Tester, William 212
Tether, Elizabeth, alias Buckle 703
Thacker, Jane, alias Schooley 238
W&I ——, Sarah, alias Cooley 272

T Thomas, James 57
——, William 110
T ——, William 163
W ——, James 380
——, James 580
W&I ——, Stephen 880
T Thompſon, Alex. 214
T ——, John 240
D ——, John, alias Wrinkle B 445
——, Joſeph 522
T ——, John 777
——, Tho. 852
——, Marg. 931
Thornley, William 510
T Thorpe, Geo 239, 902
D Till, Thomas 252
Timerth, Eliz. 644
W Timey, Terence, alias Terry 796
Timmeng, John 273
T Tipping, Thomas 862
T Tifford, John, ——, Mary } 699
Tonks, Sarah 522
W Toome, Samuel 451
Tranter, Burgeſs 949
Im Trayner, John 448
W&I Trotter, Hannah 99
W&I Truman, Richard 501
Turley, James 49
W&I Turner, John 560

V.

W&I Vanderbank, Geo. 309
D Vandeput, Wm. B 923
W Varlo, George 128
Im Veach, Charlotte 409
T Underwood, Tho. 826

W.

Wadmore, Martha 109
Wang, Thomas 199
T Wales, Thomas 90
Walker, Nesby 236
T ——, Edward, alias Fines 339
W ——, Richard 346
W&I ——, Robert 702
B Walmſla., Worley 544
T Ward, Thomas 394
D ——, George H 474
T ——, Ambroſe 585
T ——, Richard 643
D Warner, Samuel S D 39, 40
T Warren, Iſaac 69
Im ——, Caleb 973
W&I Warwick, Wm. 635
D Waters, John B 369
W Watkins, John 237, 447
T Watſon, Thomas 107
T ——, John 221
Im ——, Elizabeth 987
W Webb, Thomas 358
T ——, Chr. 402
——, John 511
Welch, Robert 392
——, Eleanor 449
——, John 711
Weldon, Joſeph 508
Wells, William 50
——, Thomas 211
——, Edward 245
——, Elizabeth 264
D Welton, William H 303
T Weſt, Benjamin 171
D ——, Thomas 305
——, Elizabeth 959
White, James 59
W&I ——, John 309
——, Richard 615
W&I ——Elizabeth 689
T ——, Thomas 719
——, Roger 881
D Whitehead, Sar. SL 463
Whitworth, Sarah 340
D Wigan, James, ——, Joſ., ——, Th. } H 294
Wigley, Jonathan 416
W&T Wild, W. 176, 242
Wild, Thomas 392
Wilkie, Dorothy 705
Williamſon, George 462
——, Alex. 425
——, Tho. J. 513
Wilks, Joſeph 170
D Williams, Allen H 14
T ——, John 94, 273
——, William 214
——, Thomas 270
——, Hugh 398
T ——, James 563
F&I ——, Tho. J. 604
Im ——, Mary 650
D ——, John S D 671
W ——, Thomas 722
Wilmot, William 569
W&I Wills, William 75
W&I Wilſon, Sarah 598
T ——, John 817
D Winderbank, Thomas H 787
Winſhall, John 839
Wood, Thomas 4
——, Mary 76
D ——, Henry H 446
——, Mary 554
Im ——, Margaret 718
D ——, Joſeph R D 788
Fi ——, John 961
Woodall, Suſan. 877
Fi Woodward, William, 955, 956
W Worland, Chriſt. 357
W&I Worthy, James 937
Wray, William 384
W Wright, Ed. 179, 575

Y.

D Yeldham, Samuel, H 522
T Young, William 429
Im ——, Michael 849

Z.

W Zachary, Charles 345

Total of Trials this Mayoralty,	992
Ditto, 1784, Robert Peckham, Eſq;	1037
Ditto, 1783, Nathaniel Newnham, Eſq;	818
Ditto, 1782, Sir William Plomer,	668

Decreaſe of Trials this Mayoralty — 45

Capital Convicts this Mayoralty,	171
Ditto, 1784, Robert Peckham, Eſq;	149
Ditto, 1783, Nathaniel Newnham, Eſq;	170
Ditto, 1782, Sir William Plomer,	98

Increaſe of Capital Convicts this Mayoralty, 22

MVSEVM
BRITAN
NICVM

9